There are places where syluer is molte, a where golde is tryed: b where yron is dyugged out of the grounde, c stones resolued to metall. The darknes shal once come to an ende, he can seke out the grounde of all things: the stones, the darke, c the horrible shadowe, with the ryuer of water parteth he a sunder the straungeth people, y knoweth no good neighbourheade: such as are rude, vnmanerly c boysteous. He bryngeth foode out of the earth, c y which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are clene Saphirs, and where y clottes of the earth are golde. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vulnus eye hath sene: wherein y proude c hye mynded walke not, c where no lyon commeth. There puttheth he his honde vpon the stony rockes, c ouerthroweth the mountaines. Ryners flowe out of the rockes, c loke what is pleasing, his eye seyth it. Out of drappers bryngeth he greate floudes together, c the thinges that is hyd bryngeth he to light. How commeth a man then by wyssdoome? d Where is the place that men fynde vnderstondinge? Verely no man can tell how worthy a thinge she is, nether is she fouide in the lode of the liuyngne. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The see sayeth: she is not with me. She can not be gotten for the most fyne golde, nether maye the prye of her be bought with any moneye. No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphirs maye be compared vnto her. No, nether golde ner Christall, nether sweate odours ner golden plate. There is nothinge so worthye, or so excellët, as once to be named vnto her: for parfecte wyssdome goeth farre beyonde the all. The Topas that cometh out of Inde, maye in no wyse be lickened vnto her: yee no maner of apparell how pleasing and fayre so euer it be.

From whiche then commeth wyssdome? e Where is the place of vnderstondinge? She is hyd from the eyes of all men, yee f ro the foules of the ayre. Destruccion g death saie: we haue herde tell of her with oure eares. But God seyth hir waie, g knoweth hir place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and loketh vpon all that is vnder the heau. When he wyed the wyndes, g measured y waters: when he set the rayne in ordre, and gawe the mightie floudes a lawe: Then dyd
he se her, the declared he her, prepared her and knewe her. And vnto man he sayde:
"Beholde, to feare the LORDE, is wyszdome:
& to forsake euell, is vnderstandinge.

The xxxr. Chapter.

SO Iob proceeded and wete forth in his communicacion, sayenge: O I was as I was in the monethes by past, a in the dayes
whé God preserued me: when his light shyned vpon my heade: whé I wente after the same light a shyne eué thorow the darcknesse. As it stode with me, whé I was welthy a had ynough: whé God prospered my house: when the allmightie was with me: when my hous-holde folkes stode aboute me: whé my wayes ranne ouer with butter, a when the stony rockes gawe me ruyers of oyile: when I wente thorow the cite vnto the gate, a whé they set me a chayre in y strete: whé the yonge me (as soone as they sawe me) hyd the selues, a when the aged arose, a stode vp vnto me:
whé the princes left of their talkinge, a laied
their hade to their mouth: whé the mightie keptle still their voyce, and whé their tonges cleued to the rose of their mouths. When all they y herde me, called me happie: a when all they y sawe me, wysshed me good.
For I deluyered y poore whé he cried, a the fatherlesse y wanted helpe. He y shulde haue bene lost, gawe me a good worde, a y widowes hert praised me. And why? I put vpon me rigrightounes, which couered me as a garmé, a equite was my crowne. I was an eyne vnto the blynde, a a fote to the lame.
I was a father vnto the poore, a who I knew not their cause, I sought it out diligently.
I brake the chaftes of y vnrighteous, a plucete
the spoyle out of their teth.

Therfore, I thought verely, y I shulde haue dyed in my nest: y my dayes shulde haue bene as many as the sondes of the see. For my rote was spred out by the waters syde, a dew laye vpó my corne. My honoure ecreased more a more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande. Vnto me men guae eare, me they regarded, a with sylence they taried for my couiell. Yf I had spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes,
my wordes were so well taken amonige thē.

They wayted for me, as the earth doth for the rayne: a gaped vpon me, as the groûde doth to receaue the latter shower. When I laughed, they knew well it was not earnest: a this testimony of my sayenge pleased the nothing at all. * When I agreed vnto their waye, I was the chefe, a sat as a kyng amonige his seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth such as be in heuynesse.

The xxxr. Chapter.

BUT now they that are my inferiors a a yonger then I, haue me in derision: yee eué they, whose fathers I wolde haue thought scorne to haue set with the dogges of my catell.
The power a strēgh of their hâdes might do me no good, a as for their age, it is spê a past awaye without eyn profit. For very misery a honger, they wente aboute in the wildernesse like wretches a beggers, pluckyng vp herbes from amonge the buszhes, a the junipers rote was their meate. And when they were dryuen forth, men cried after them, as it had bene after a thefe. Their dwellinge was beside foule brokes, yee in the caues a dennes of the earth. Vpó the drye heeth wete they aboute cuienge, a in the brome hilles they gathered them together. They were the children of fooles a vylanes, which are deed awaye fró the worlde. * Now am I their songe, a am become their iestinge stocke. they abhorre me, they fle farre fro me a stayne my face with spetle. For y LORDE hath opened his quyner, he hath hytt me, a put a byrdle in my mouth. Vpon my right hâde they rose together agaynst me, they haue hurte my fete,
make a waye to destroye me, a my path haue
they clene marred. It was so easy for them to do me harme, that they needed no man to helpe thē. They fell vpon me, as it had bene y breakyng in of waters, a came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulness is turned agaynst me. Myne honoure vanishe was more swiftly then wynde, a my prosperite departeth hece like as it were a cloude.
Therfore is my mynde poured full of heuyn-nesse, a y dayes of trouble haue takē holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorow in y night season, a my synewes take no rest.
With all their power haue they chaunged my garmē, a gyrded me therwith, as it were with a coate. I am eué as it were claye, a am

* Psal. 110. b. Pro. 1. a. 9. b. Eccl. 1. c.
become like asashes a dust. Whē I crie vnto the, thou dost not heare me: a though I stonde before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemie, a with thy violent hāde thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou didest set me vp an hye, as it were abone ý wynde, but now hast thou geue me a very sore fall. Sure I am, ý thou wilt deleyuer me vnto death: where as a lodging is prepared for all mē lyungi. Now vse not mē to do violēce vnto thē, ý are destroyed allready: but where hurte is done, there vse thei to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in ý tyme of trouble? Had not my soule cópassion vpó ý poore? Yet nevertheless where as I loked for good, euell happened vnto me: and where as I waited for light, there came darknese. My bowels seeth with in ý take no rest, for ý days of my trouble are come vpó me. Mekely a lowly came I in, yee ý without eny displeasure: I stode vp in ý cógregacion, ý commooned with thē. But now I am a cópanyon of dragons, a a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpó me is turned to black, ý my bones are breít with heate: my harpe is turned to sorow, ý my pipe to wepinge.

The 111. Chapter.

I MADE a couenaunt with myne eyes, ý I wolde not "lake vpó a dæsell. For how greate a porciō shal I haue of God frō aboue? a what enheritancē frō ý Almightye on lyfe? As for the vngodly ý he ý ioynych himself to ý cópani of wicked doers shall not destruction ý misery come vpon hym? "Doth not he se my wayes, ý tell all my goinges? Yf I haue cloeaed vnto vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to discawe: lete me be weyed in an euens balauce, that God maye se my innocency. Yf so be that I haue ouerleade my fete oue of the right waye, yf my hert hath folowed myne eye sight, yf I have stayned or defyled my hōdes: O then is it reason that I sowe, and another eate: yee that my generacion and posterite be clene rote out. Yf my hert hath lawsted after my neighbours wife, or ýf I haue layed wayte at his dore: O then let my wife be another mans harlot, and let other lye with her. For "this is a wickednesse and synne, that is worthy to be punyshed, yee a fyre that utterly shulde consume, a rote out all my substaunce. Dyd I euer thynke scorne to do right vnto my seruaites and maydens, when they had eny matter agaynst me? "But seynge that God wil sytt in judgument, what shal I do? And for so moch as he wil nedes vyste me, what answere shal I geue him? He that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also? were we not both shappen aluye in oure mothers bodies? When the pōre desyred eny thinge at me, haue I denyed it them? Haue I caused ý wyddowe stonde waytinge for me in vayne? Haue I eaten my porcion alone, that the fatherles hath had no parte with me? (for mercy grewe vp with me frō my youth, a compassion frō my mothers wombe.) Haue I sene eny man perish thorrow nakedenes a want of clothinge? Or, eny pōre man for lack of rayment, whose sydes thanked me not, because he was warmed with ý woll of my shepē?

Dyd I euer lyft vp my honde to hurte the fatherlesse? Yee in the gate where I sawe my self to be in auctorite: Thē let myne arme fall frō my Sheldon, a myne arme hōles be broken from the ioyntes. For I haue enuer feared ý vengeaunce a punnishmet of God, ý knew very well, ý I was not able to beare his burthē. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or, haue I sayde to the fynes golde of all: thou art my confidence? Haue I reioysed because my substaunce was greate, and because my honde gat so moc? "Dyd I euer greatly regarde the risyng of the Šonne? Or, had I the goinge downe of ý Moone in greate reputacion? Hath my hert medled pruely with eny discawe? Or, dyd I euer kyssye myne owne honde (that were a wickednesse worthy to be punyshed, for then shulde I haue denied the God that is aboue.) Haue I euer reioysed at the hurte of myne enemy? "Or, was I euer glad, ý eny harme happened vnto hym? Oh no, I neuer suffred my mouth to do soch a sinne, as to wysh him euell. Yet they of myne owne housholde saye: who shall let vs, to haue oure bely ful of his flesh? I haue not suffred a strauenger to lye with out, but opened my dores vnto hym. Haue I euer done eny wicked dede where thourow I shamed my self before men: Or eny abhominacion, ý I was fayne to hyde it? For ýf I I had feared eny greate multitude of people: Or ýf I had bene dispysed of y symple, Oh then shulde I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quyely spent my lyfe, and not gone out at y dore. O that I had one which wolde heare me. Lo, this is my cause. Let y Allmightie geue me answere: y let him that is my contray party, sue me with a lybell. Then shall I take it vpon my shulder, y as a garlade aboute my head. I haue tolde the nombre of my goinges, and deluyed them vnto him as to a prynce. But yf case be that my londe crie agaynst me, or y the forowes therof make eny complaynte: yf I have eaten the frutes therof vnpayed for, yee yf I haue greued eny of the plow men: Than, let thistles growe in stead of my wheate, y thornes for my barlye.

The rxiij. Chapter.

SO these three men wolde strenue nomore with Iob, because he helde himself a righteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite "of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Iob, that he called himself just before God. And with Iobs thre fredes he was angrie also, because they had founde no reasonable answere to overcomme him. Now taried Eliu till they had ended their communicacion with Iob, for why? they were elder then he. So when Eliu y sonne of Barachel y Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Iob answere, he was myscontent: so that he gaue answere himself, and sayde: "Consideringe y I am yonge, y ye be men of age, I was afrayed, y durst not shew forth my mynde, for I thought thus within my self: "It becometh olde men to speake, y the aged to teach wyszdome. Euerie ma" (no doubt) hath a mynde, but it is the inspiracion of the Allmightie that geneth vnderstondinge. All men are not wyse, neither doth euery aged man vnderstonde the things that is lauffull. Therfore wil I speake also (in so farre as I maye be herde) y wil shewe yow myne opinyon. "For whé I had wavyld till ye made an ende of youre talkyng, y herde youre wyszdome, what argumètes ye made in youre communicacion: yee when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made eny good argument agaynst Iob, or that directly coude make answere vnto his wordes: lest ye shulde praye youre selues, to haue founde out wyszdome: because it is God that hath cast hym out, y no man. Neuerthelesse, seyenge he hath not spoken vnto me, therfore will not I answere him as ye haue done (for they were so absasshed, that they coude not make answere, ner speake one worde) but in so much as ye wil not speake, stondinge still like dome men y makinge no answere: I haue a good hope for my parte to shappe hym answere y to shewe hym my meanyng. For I am full of wordes, y the sprete that is within me, cópellethe me. Beholde, I am as the new wyne which hath no vnte, y bursteth the new vessels in sunder. Therfore wil I speake, that I maye haue vête: I wil open my lyppes, and make answere. I will regard no maner of personne, no man wil I sparse. For yf I wolde go aboute to please mē, y knowe not how soone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The rxiij. Chapter.

WHEREFORE, heare my wordes (O Iob) y herken vnto all, that I will saye: Beholde, I wil open my mouth, y my tonge shal speake out of my chawes. My hert shall ordre my wordes a right, y my lyppes shal talke of pure wyszdome. The sprete of God hath made me, y the breth of the Allmightie hath geue me my life. Yf thou cast, then geue me answere: prepare thy self to stode before me face to face. Beholde, before God am I euyn as thou, for I am fashioned and made eué of the same mould. Therfore, thou nedest not be afrayed of me, nether nedest thou to feare, that my auctorite shal be to heuy for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne eares, y I haue herde y voyce of thy wordes: I am clene without eny fawte, y I am innocent, y there is no wickednesse in me. But lo, he hath pyked a quarell agaynst me, y taketh me for his enemy: he hath put my fote in the stockes, y loketh narowyly vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these unreasonables wordes of thynke wil I make answere.

Shulde God be reproued of man? Why doest thou then strenue agaynst hym, because he geueth the no accomptes of all his doinges? For whé God doth once commaunde a thinge, there shulde no man be curious, to search whether it be right. *In dreames and visions of the night season (when slombryng e cōmeth vp6 mē, t̄ that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he rounmeth them in thee, he informeth them, g sheweth the planely, that it is he, which withdraweth man from euell, deluyereth him from pryde, kepeth his soule from destruction, g his life from y swarde, he chasteneth him with sickenesse, g bringeth him to his bed: he laieth sore punyshmēt vpō his bones, so that his life maye awaye with no bred, g his soule abhorrēth to eate any dayntie meate: In so moch, that his body is cleene consumed awaye, g his bones appeare no more. His soule draweth on to destruction, g his life to death. Now yf there be an angel (one amongst a thousande) sent for to speake vnto mā, and to shewe him the right waye: the the LORDE is mercifull vnto him, g sayeth: He shalbe deluyed, yf he fall not downe to destruction, for I am sufficiently recōciled. Than his flesh (which hath bene in misery g trouble) shalbe, as it was in his youth. For yf he submitte himself vnto God, he is gracious, g sheweth him his countenance joyfully, g rewardeth man for his rightouesnes. Such a respecte hath he vnto mē. Therfore let a man cōfesse, (as saye:) I offended, but he hath chastened g reformed me: I dyd vnrightuously, neuertheless he hath not recōpēned me therafter. Yee he hath deluyed my soule from destruction, g my life, that it seth yf light. Lo, thus worketh God all waie with mā, that he kepeth his soule from perishing, g laeteth him enjoye the light of y lynginge. Marke well (O Job) y saye: heare me: holde the still, vntill I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thinge to saye, then answere me and speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. Yf thou hast nothinge, then heare me, and holde thy tonge, so shal I teach the wyszdome.

The rvxriu. Chapter.

E LIU proceeded forth in his communica- tion, g saye: Heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me, ye y haue vn- rightuously. For like as the mouth tasteth the meates, so the eare proueth g discerneth the wordes. *As for the iudgment, let vs secte it out amonge our selues, ywe maye knowe what is right. And why? * Job hath sayde: I am righteous, but God doth me wronge. I must nedes be a lyar, though my cause be right: g violently am I plagued, where as I made no fawte. where is there soch one as Job, y drinketh yp scornewulnes like water? which goeth in y company of wicked doers, g walketh with vngodly mē? For he saith: Though a mā be good, yet is he naught before God. Therfore herkē vnto me, ye y haue vn- rightously.

Farre be it from God, that he shulde medle with wickednesse: and farre be it from the Allmightie, y he shulde medle with vnrightuous dealynges: but he rewardeth the workes of man, d and causeth every man to fynde accordinge to his waies. For sure it is, that God cōdemneth no man wrongeously, and the iudgment of the Allmightie is not vnrigh¬ tuous. Who ruleth the earth in his stead? Or, whom hath he set to governe the whole worlde? To whom hath he geuen his herte, for to drawe his spryte and breth vnto him? y All flesh shall come together vnto naught, g all mē shall turne agayne vnto earth. Yf thou now haue vnrighto¬ dinge, heare what I saye and herken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no right? Yf thou were a very innocent man, shuldest thou then be punyshed? For he is euene the same, y knoweth the rebellious kynges, g sayeth to princes: Vngodly men are ye. He hath no respecte vnto the personnes of y lordly, g regardeth not the rich more then the poore. For they be all the worke of his hondes. In the twinkelinge off an eye shall they be slayne: and at myndnight, when the people g the tyrants rage, then shall they perish, and be taken awaye without hondes. *And why? his eyes loke vpon the waies of man, and he seth all his goinges. There is no dareknes ner thicke shadowe, y can hyde the wicked doers from him. For no mā shallbe suffred to go in to iudgment with God.

Many one, yee innumerable doth he punysehe and setteth other in their steades. For he knoweth their euell g darke workes, therfore shal they be destroyed. They that were in y steade of Seers, dealt like vn¬ godly mē. Therfore turned they back traytorously and unfaithfully frō hi, g wolde not receaue his waies. In so moch that they haue caused
God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the Allmightie accepte his crye? Wha thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yff thou open thy self before him, and put thy trust in him? Then vseth he no violence in his wrath nether hath he pleasure in curious and depe iniquisitions. Therefore hath Ioeb opened his mouth but in vsayne, ad fulisly hath he made so many wordes.

The 1776. Chapter.

E LIU proceeded forth in his talkinge, sayde: holde the still a little, and I shal shewe the, what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wil open vnto you yet more of myne understandinge, and proue my maker rightuously. True are my wordes, q no lye: and the knowlege wherwithall I argue againste, is perfecte. Beholde, God casteth not awaye you sightie, for he himself is mightie in power and wisdome.

As for the vn godly, he preserueth the not but helpeth the poore to their right. He turneth not his eyes awaye from the rightuous he setteth vp kynges in their Trone, and correcteth them, so that they alwaye syt therin. But yff they be layed in preson and chyne, or bounde with the bondes of pouertie: then sheweth he them their worke ad dedes and the synnes wherwith they haue vsed cruel violence.

He with punishinge and nurturinge off them, rounneth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from their wickednesse, and to amend. Yf they now will take hede and be obedient, they shall weere out their dayes in prosperite, and their yeares in pleasure ad ioye. But yff they will not obeye, they shall go thorow the swarde, q perish or euer they be aware. As for soch as be fayned, dyssemblers and yporcrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, though they be his presoners. Thus their soule perisheth in foolishnesse, and their lyfe with vnderstandinge. The poore delyuereth he out of his straynesse, and comforteth soch as be in necessite and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe the (yf thou wilt be content) from the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: ad yf thou wilt holde the quyte, he shall fyll thy table with plenteousnesse.

Neuertheless, thou hast condemned the Cf the 13th. Chapter.

At this my hert is astonnied, and mowed out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse y goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, and his light reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaringe voyce foloweth him: for his glorious majesty geueth soch a thundre clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceauie it afterwaides. It geueth an horrible sownde, when God sendeth out his voyce: great things doth he, which we can not cōprehende. 4 When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, Immediatly the showers haue their strengthe and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they might knowe their owne workes. The beastes crepe in to their dennes, and take their rest. Out of the south commeth the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the breth of God, the frost commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes do their laboure in geuynge moystnesse, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. Herken vnto this (o Iob) stonde still, and considere the wondrouser worke of God. Art thou of coicel with God, when he doth these thinges? When he causeth the light to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his coucell, when he spredeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knoweledge of his wonders? and how thy clothes are warme, whē the lōde is still thorow the south wynde? For euery ma seith not the light, vpē he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he cleneth when he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the north, but the praye and honoure off Gods feare commeth frō God himself. It is not we that can fynde out the allmichtie: for in power, equite and righteousnesse he is hyer then can be expressed. when all the angels of God reioysed? *Who shutt the see with dores, when it brake forth as a childle out off his mothers wombe? When I made the cloues to be a coueringe for it, and sweeld it with ý darcke? a when I gaue it my comyaumente, makynge dores & barres for it, sayenge: Hither to shalst thou come, but no further, and here shalt thou laye downe thy proude and lye wawes. Hast thou geuen the monynge his charge (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the dayspringe his place, ý it might take holde of the corners of the earth, ý ý the vngodly might be shake out? Their toké & weape haast thou turned like claye, ý set the vp agayne as the chaung-inge of a garment. Yee thou hast spoyled the vngodly off their light, ý broke the arme of the proude. Camest thou euer in to the grounde of the see, Or, hast thou walked in ý lowe corners of ý depe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the or haast thou sene the doore of euerlastinge treasse? Hast thou also perceaued, how brode ý earth is? Now ýf thou hast knowledge of all, thé shew me where light dwelleth, and where darcknes is: ý thou mayest bringe vs vnto their quarters, ýf thou cast tell the waye to their houses. Knewest thou (when thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldst be?

Wentest thou euer in to the treasures off the snowe, or hast thou sene ý ý secrete places of the hale: which I have prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of batell ý warre? By what waye is the light parted, ý the heate dealt out vpon earth? Who deuydeth the abundance of waters in to ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the stormy wether, ý it watereth ý moystureth ý drye ý baren grounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, ý in the wildernes where no mä remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or, who hath begotten the droppes of dew? Out of whose wobe came the yse? who hath gendred the coldnes of ý ayre? ý the waters are as harde as stones, ý lye congeeld aboue the depe. Hast thou brought ý vij, starres together? Or, art thou able to breake the Circle of heaué? Cást thou bringe forth the monynge starre or the euynynge starre at coudenient tyme, ý coueye thé home agayne? Knowest thou the course off heaué, ý thou mayest set vp the ordinace therof vpô earth? Moroner, cást thou lift vp thy voyce to ý cloudes, ý they maye poure downe a greate rayne vpô the? Canst thou thôdre also ý they maye go their waye, ý be obediënt vnto the, sayenge: Io, here are we? Who geueth sure wisdome, or stedfast unnder-stödinge? who nombreth the cloues in wis- dome? who stilleth ý vehement waters of the heaué? who turneth the clottes to dust, ý the to be clottes agayne? Hunteth thou the praye fro the Lyon, or fedest thou his whelps lyége in their dënes ý lurkinge in their couches? who prouydeth meate for the rauen, whé his yonge ones crie vnto God, ýd fle aboute for want of meate?

K NOWEST thou the tyne when the wilde gotes brige forth their yóge amóge the stony rockes? Or layest thou wayte when the hindes vse to fawne? Rekenest thou the monethes after they ingendre, ý thou knowest the tyne of their bearinge? Or when they lye downe, when they cast their yonge ones, ý when they are delyuered off their trauayle ý payne? How their yóge ones growe vp ý waxe greate thorow good fedinge? who leteth the wilde asse go fre, or who lówseth the bodes of the Móole? Vnto whó I haue geuen the wyldernes to be their house, ý the vntilled londe to be their dwellinge place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude off people in the cities, nether to regarde the crienge of the dryuer: but to seke their pas- ture aboute the mouáynes, ý to folowe vpon the grene grasse. Wyll the vicorne be so tame as to do ý seruyce, or to abyde still by thy cribbe? Cást thou bynde ý yok aboute him in thy forowes, to make him ploewe after the in ý valleis? Mayest thou trust hi (because he is stróge) or cómitte thy laboure vnto hi? Mayest thou beleue hi, ý he wil brige home thy corne, or to cary eny thinge vnto thy barne? The Estrich (whose fethers are fayrer the ý wynges of the sparow hauke) whé he hath layed his egges vpon the grounde, he bredeht them in the dust, and forgetteth them: so that they might be troden with fete, or broken with somme wilde beast.

So harde is he vnto his yong ones, as though they were not his, and laboureth in vayne without eny feare. And that because God hath taken wisdome from him, and hath not geuen him vnderstandinge. When his tyme is, he flyeth vp an hye, and careth nether for horse nor man.

Hast thou geuen the horse is strength, or lerned him to bowe downe his necke with feare: that he letteth his selue be dryuen forth like a greshopper, where as the stoutte nynge that he maketh, is fearfull? he breaketh thy grounde with the hoffes of his fete cheerfully in his strength, and runneth to mete the hardest men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomack is not abated, nether starteth he a backe for euery swerde. Though the quyueres rattle vpon him, though the speare and shilde glister: yet russhe he in fearesly, and beateth vp on the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmnes blowe, tush (sayeth he) for he smellethe the batell a farre of, thy noyse, the captaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the goshabit flyeth towarde the south? Doth the Aeagle mounte vp and make his nest on hye at thy commandement? He abydeth in the stony rockes, and vpon the huye toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence maye he beholde his praye, and loke farre aboute with his eyes. *His yonge ones are fed with bloude, and where euery deed bodie lyeth, there is he immediately.

Morouer, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Can he that stryueth with the Almightie, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, gene him an answere? Job answered the LORDE, sayenge: Beholde, I am to vyle a persone, to answere the, therefore will I laye my haunde vpon my mouth. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I will saye nomore.

The 11. Chapter.

THEN spake the LORDE vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: *gyrde vp thy louynes like a man, and tell me the thinge that I will axe the. Wilt thou disanule my judgement? Or, wilt thou condemne me, thy selue mayest be made righteous? Is thine arme then like the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce soche a soilde as his doth? Then arme thy selue with thine owne power, vp, decke the in thy ioly araye, pour out the indignation of thy wrath: se that thou cast downe all thy proude, loke well, that thou makest all soch as be stubborne, to obeye: treade all the vngodly vnder thy fete, cast the dowe in to the myre, and couer their faces with darknesse: Then will I confesse also, that thynge owne right honde hath saued the.

Beholde, the cruell beaste (whom I made with the) which eateth haye as an oxe: lo, how stronge he is in his louynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He spreeth out his tale like a Cedre tre, all his vayne are stiff. His shynnes are like pipes off brass, his rygge bones are like staves of yrô. First when God made him, he ordened the wyldernesse for him, thy mountaynes shulde gene him grasse, where all the beastes off the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth amôge the redes in the Mosses, the fennes hyde him with their shadowe, and the wyloses of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo, without euery laboure might he drynke out the whole floude, and suppe off Iordan without euery trauelle. Who darre laye honde vpon him openly, and vndertake to catch him? Or, who darre put an hoke thorow his nose, ad laye a snare for him?

Darrest thou drawe out *Leuiaathan with an angle, or bynde his tonge with a snare? Canst thou put a rynge in the nose of him, or bore his chaftes thorow with an aule? Wyll he make many fayre wordes with the (thynkest thou) or flatre the? Wyll he make a covenante with the? Or, art thou able for to compell him to do the contynuall servyce? Wilt thou take thy pastyme with him as with a byrde, or gene him vpto thy maydens, that thy companyons maye hew him in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canst thou fyll the nett with his skynne, or thy fysh pânyer with his heade? Darrest thou laye honde vpon him? It is better for the to considere what harme might happen the there thorow and not to touch him. For when thou thynkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall begyle the: Every man also that seyth him, shall goe backe. And why? there darre none be so bolde, as to rayse him vp.

The 12. Chapter.

WHO is able to stonde before me? Or, who hath geuen me eny thynges afore hande, that I am bounde to rewardre him
The boke of Job.

The 111. Chapter.

A THE Job answered the LORDE, and sayde: "I knowe that thou hast power of all things, and that there is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shall be knowne? Therfore haue I spoken unwysely, seynge these things are so hye, and passe myne understondinge. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: answere me vnto the thinges that I will axe the. I haue geuen diligent eare vnto the, and now I se with myne eyes. Wherfore I geue myne owne self y blame, and take repentaunce in the dust and ashes.

Now whē the LORDE had spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphas \( \gamma \) Themanite: I am displeased with the \( \varpi \) thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken the thing \( \gamma \) is right before me, like as my seruant Job hath done. Therfore take vij. oxen and seuen rammes, and go to my seruant Job,\(^{1a} \) ofre vp also for youre selues brenofferynge, and let my seruant Job praye for you. Him will I accepte, and not deale with you after youre foolishnes: in that ye haue not spokē \( \gamma \) thinges which is right, like as my seruant Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad \( \gamma \) Sophar and Sophar the Naamathite wete their waye, and did acordynge as the LORDE commaundde them. The LORDE also \( \varpi \) accepted the persone off Job, and the LORDE turned him vnto Job, whē he prayed for his frendes: "Yee the LORDE gaue Job twayne as moch as he had afore.

And thē camē there vnto him all his brethren, all his sisters with all them that had bene off his acqūatauce afore, and ate bred with him in his house, wondringe at him, ad comfortinge him over all the trouble, that the LORDE had brought vpon him. "Every mā gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of golde.

And the LORDE made Job richer then he was before: for he had xiiij. M. shepe, vi. M. camels, a M. yock oxē, and a M. asses. He had children also: vij. sonnes and iij. daughters.

The first he called Daye, the seconde, po-uerē: the thirde, All plenteousses. In all the londe were none founde so fayre, as the daughters of Job, \( \xi \) their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethren. After this lyued Job xλ. yeares, so that he sawe his children, \( \xi \) his children children vnto the fourth generacion.\(^{11} \) And so he dyed, beinge olde \( \omega \) of a perfecte age.

The Psalter.

The first psalm.

O BLESSED is y man, y goeth not in the councell of y vugodly: y abydeth not in the waye off synners, x ytteth not in y seate of the scornefull. But delyeth in the lawe of y LORDE, y exeryseth himself in his lawe both daye and night. Soch a mā is like a tre plaited by y water syde, y brigeth forth his frute in due season.

His leuces shall not fall off, ad loke what socuer he doth, it shal prosper. As for the vngodly, it is not so with them: but they are like the dust, which y wynde seatereth awaye from of the grounde. Therefore the vngodly shall not be able to stonde in the judgmet, nether the synners in the congregacion off the rightuous. For the LORDE sloweth y wave of the rightuous, but the wave of the vngodly shal perishe.

The iij. A psalme of Dauid.

WHY do the Heithen grudge? why do the people ymagyn vayne things? The kynges of the earth stōde vp, and the rulers are come together, agaynst the LORDE ad agaynst his anoynted. Let vs breake their bondes a sunder, and cast a wave their yocke from vs. Neuertheless, he that dwelleth in heauen, shall laugh the to scorne: yee euen the LORDE himself shall haue them in desrion. Then shal he speake vnto them in his wrath, and vexe them in his sore displeasure.

Yet haue I set my kyng vp in my holy hill of Sion. As for me I will preache the lawe, wherof the LORDE hath sayde vnto me: Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the. Desyre off me, and I shall geue the the Heithen for thine enheritaunce, Yee the vttmost partes of the worlde for thy possession.

Thou shalt rule them with a rodde of yron, and breake the in peces like an erthen vessell.

Be wyse now therfore (o ye kynges) be warned, ye that are judges of the earth. Serue the LORDE with feare, and reioyse before him with reuerence. Kyss ye sonne, lest the LORDE be angrie, and so ye perish from the right wave. For his wrath shalbe kindled shortly: blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

The iij. A psalme of Dauid.

WHY are they so many (o LORDE) y trouble me? a greate multitude are they, that ryse agaynst me. Yee many one there be that saye off my sonle: there is no helpe for him in God. Sela. But thou (o LORDE) art my defender, my worship, ad the lifter vp of my heade. I call vpon the LORDE with my voyce, and he heareth me out of his holy hill. Sela. I layed me downe and slepte, but I rose vp agayne, for the LORDE susteyned me. I am not afrayed for thousandes of the people, that copasse me rounde aboute. Vp LORDE, and helpe me, o my God: for thou smytest all myne enimies vpon the cheke bones, and breakest the teth of the vngodly. Helpe belongeth vnto the LORDE, therfore let thy blessyng be vpon thy people.

The iijj. A psalme of Dauid.

HEARE me whē I cal, o God of my rightuousnes, thou that comfortest me in my trouble: haue mercy vpon me, and herken vnto my prayer. O ye sonnes of men: how longe will ye blasphe myne honoure? why haue ye soch pleasure in vanyte, q seke after lyes? Sela. Knowe this, that the LORDE dealeth maruelously with his saynte: and when I call vpon the LORDE, he heareth me. Be angrie, but synne not: comô with youre owne herties vpô youre beddes, q remembroure selues. Sela. Offre y sacri-

Psalme vii.

The Psalter.

Bauce of righteousnes, & put youre trust in LORDE. There be many y saye: who will do vs eny good? where as thou (o LORDE) hast shewed vs the light of thy countenaunce. Thou reioyset myne herte, though their en crease be greate both in corne & wyne. Therefore wil I laye me downe in peace, & take my rest: for thou LORDE only settest me in a sure dwellynge.

The b. A psalme of Davuid.

A H EARE my wordes (o LORDE) considere my callyng. O marke the voynce of my peticion, my kyng & my God: for vnto the wil I make my prayer. Hearre my voyce by tymes (o LORDE) for early in the morning wil I gett me vnto the, yee & with diligent. For thou art not the God y hath pleasure in wickednesse, there maye no vn godly personne dwel with the. Such as be cruell maye not stonde in thy sight, thou art an enemie vnto all wicked doers.

Thou destroyest the lyers: the LORDE abhorreth the bloute thurstie and deceitfull. But as for me, I wil come in to thy house, euen vpon the multitude of thy mercy: ad in thy feare wyll I worshippe towarde thy holy temple. Lede me (o LORDE) in thy right uousnesse, because of myne enemie, & make thy waye playne before me. For there is no faithfullnesse in their mouthes: they dissem ible in their hertes: their throte is an open sepulchre: with their tongues they deceave. Punysh them (o God) that they maye perish in their owne ymaginacions: cast them out because of the multitude of their vn godlinessse, for they rebell agaynst the. Agayne, let all them that put their trust in the, reioyse: yee let them euer be geuynge of thankes, because thou defendest them: that they which lone thy name, maye be ijofull in the. For thou LORDE geuest thy blessinge vnto the right ous: and with thy favoruable kyndnes thou defendest him, as with a shylde.

The b. A psalme of Davuid.

A O H LORDE, rebuke me not in thine anger: * Oh chasté me not in thy heuy displeasure. Haue mercy vpon me (o LORDE) for I am weake: o LORDE heale me, for all my bones are vexed. My soul also is in greate trouble, but LORDE how longe? Turne the (o LORDE) dyuel thy soule: Oh saue me, for thy mercies sake. For in death no man remembreth the: Oh who will geue the thankes in the hell? I am weery of grynyng: Euer night washe I my bedde, * water my couche with my teares. My countenaunce is changed for very inwarde grefe, I consume awaye, I have so many enemies. *Aways fr thee all ye wicked doers, for the LORDE hath herde the voyce off my wepinge. The LORDE hath herde myyne humble peticio, the LORDE hath receauned my prayre. All myn enemies shalbe coended & sore vexed: yee they shalbe turned backe and put to shame, and that right soone.

The b. A psalme of Davuid.

O LORDE my God, in y do I trust: A saue me fr all the y persecute me, & dyuel me. Lest he hantch vp my soule like a lyon, teare it in peces, whyle there is none to helpe. O LORDE my God, yf I have done eny soch thinge: yf there be eny vn rightuousnesse in my haides: * Yf I have re warded euell vnto the y dealt friendly with me or hurte th y without eny cause are myne enemies: Then let myne enemie persecute my soule, * take me: yee let hí treade my life downe in the earth, laye myne honour in the dust. Sela. Stode vp (o LORDE) in thy wrath, lift vp thyself over the furious indignació of myne enemies: aryse vp (for me) in the vengeaunce that thou hast pro mysed. *That the congregation of the peo ples maye come aboute the, for their sakes thensore lift vp thyself agayne. The LORDE is iudge over the people: Auenge me then (o LORDE) accordinge to my rightuousnes & innocency. Oh let the wickednesse of the vn godly come to an ende: but manteyne the iust, thou rightuous God, y triest the very hertes & the reynes. My helpe cometh of God, * which preserueth them y are true of herte. God is a rightous iudge, & God is euer threateninge. Yf men wil not turne, he hath whet his swearde: he hath bent his bowe & made it ready. He hath prepayred him the weapons of death, & ordered his arowes to destroye. *Beholde, he traunyleth with mys chefe, he hath coecaued vnhappynes, and brought forth a lye. He hath grauated and dyged vp a pytte, but he shall fall himselfe in to y pytte y he hath made. For his vnhappyynes shall come vpon his owne heade, & his wickednes shall fall vpon his owne pate. As for me, I will geue thankes vnto the LORDE for his rightoune. And praye the name of the LORDE the most hyest.

The bii. A psalme of Dauid.

LORDEoure gouernoure: how wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde? how excellent is thy glory aboue the haueuens? Out of the mouth of the very babes & sucklinges thou hast ordened praye, because of thine enemys, thou mightest destroye the enemie and the auenger. For I condider thy haueuens, euene the workes off thy fyngers: the Moone and the starrs which thou hast made. Oh what is man, that thou art so myndfull of him? that thou visitest him? After thou hast for a season made him lower the the angels, thou crownest him with honoure & glory. Thou hast set him aboue the workes off thy handes: thou hast put all things in subieccion vnder his fete. All shape and oxen, yee and the beastes of the feld. The foules of the ayre: the fysh of the see, and what so walketh thorow the wayes of the see. O LORDEoure gouernoure, how wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde?

The ir. A psalme of Dauid.

WIL geue thakes vnto the (o LORDE) with my whole herte. I wil speake of all my marvelous workes. I wil be glad & reioyse in the, yee my songs wil I make of thy name, o thou most hyest. Because thou hast dryue myne enemies abacce, they were discorft, and perished at thy presence. For thou hast manteyned my right and my cause: thou sutttest in the Throne that ar the true judge. Thou rebukest the Heithen, and destroyest the vngodly, thou puttest out their name for euer and euer. The enemies swerdes are come to an ende, thou hast ouerthrown their cities, their memoriall is perished with th. But y LORDE endureth for euer, he hath prepared his seate vnto iudgmët. He governeth y worlde with rightouneynes & ministreth true iudgmët vnto the people. The LORDE is a defence for the poore, a defence in the tyme of trouble. Therfore they y knowe thy name, put their trust in th: for thou (LORDE) neuer faylest the, that seke the. O praye the LORDE, which dwelleth in Sion, shewe y people of his doinges. And why? he makest inquysicion for their bloude, and remembreth them: he forgetteth not the complaynte of the poore. Haue mercy vpo me (o LORDE) consider the trouble that I am in amoge myne enemies, thou that lifttest me vp from y gates of death. That I maye shewe all thy prayses within the portes off the daughter Sion, and reioyse in thy saynynge health. As for the Heithen, they are suncke downe in the pytte that they made: in the same nette, which they spred out priuely, is their owne fote také. Thus y LORDE is knowne to execute true judgment, whë the vngodly is trapped in the workes of his owne handes. Sela. The wicked must be turned vnto hell, and all the Heithen y forget God. But the poore shal not allwayes be out of remembrance, he that is trouble shall not perish for euer. Vp LORDE, let not man haue the vpper häde, let the Heithë be condemned before the. O LORDE, set a scolemaster ouer the, that the Heithë maye knowe them selues to be but me. Sela.

Here the Hebrues beginne the x. psalme.

WHY art thou gone so farre of, o LORDE? wilt thou hyde thyself in tyme of trouble? Whyle vngodly hath the ouer hande, the poore must suffere persecucion: O that they were taken in the ymaginacioons which they go aboute. For the vngodly maketh boost of his owne hertes desyre, the cuvetous blesseth him self, and blasphemeth the LORDE. The vngodly is so proud and full of indignacio, that he careth not: nether is God before his eyes. His wayes are allwayes full of sinne, he destroyeth all his enemies. For he saith in his herte: Tush, I shall neuer be cast downe, there shall no harme happen vnto me. His mouth is full of cursynge, fraude and disceate: vnder his toge is trouaile & sorow. He sitteth lurkygne in the gardens, that he maye pryuely murthur the innocent, his eyes are set vpō the poore. He lyeth waryntinge secretly, as it were a lyon in his denne. He lurketh that he maye rauysh the poore, yee to ruauysh the poore, when he hath gotten him to his nett. Then smytteth he, then oppressteth he casteth downe the poore with his auctorite. For he sayeth in his herte: Tush, God hath forgotten, he hath turned a waye his face, so he will never se it. Aryste o LORDE God, lift vp thine honde, and forget not the poore. Werherof shulde the wicked blaspheme God, and saye in his herte: Tush, he careth not for it? This thou seist, for thou considerst the sordour and sorrowe: The poore genueth himself' ouer in to thy hande, and committeth hym vnto the, for thou art the helper of the frowndlesse. Breake thou y arme off the vngodly and malacious, search out the wickednesse which he hath done, that he maye perish. The LORDE is kyng for euere, ye Haithen shall perish out of his londe. LORDE, thou hearest the desyrous longinge off the poore: their herte is sure, that thine eare herkeneth therto. Helpe the fatherlesse and poore vnto their right, that the vngodly be nomore exalted vpō earth.

The rij. A psalme of Dauid.

IN the LORDE put I my trust: how will ye then saye to my soule: that she shulde be a byrdé vpon youre hill? For lo, the vngodly haue bēt their bowe, and made redy their arowes in the quyuer: that they maye priuely shute at them, which are true of herte. The very foundacion haue they cast downe, what cā the rightousshū the do withall? But the LORDE is in his holy temple, the LORDES seate is in heauen: He considereth it with his eyes, his eye lyddes beholde the children of men. The LORDE seith both the rightoussh and vngodly, but who so de- leth in wickednes, him his soule abhorreth. Vpon the vngodly he shal rayne suare, fyre, brymostone, storme and tempest: this rewarde shal they haue to drinke. For the LORDE is rightoussh, ad he loueth rightousshnes, his countenaunce beholde thy righte y is iust.

The ri. A psalme of Dauid.

HELPE LORDE, for there is not one saynte more: very fewe faithfull are there amonge the children off men. Every man tellet hys to his neighbour, they do but flater with their lippes and dissemble in their herte. O that the LORDE wolde rote out all discaftfull lippes, ad the tongue that speaketh proude thinges. Which saye: Oure tōge shulde preuayle: we are they that ought to speake, who is lorde ouer vs? Now for the troubles sacke off the oppressed, ç because of the complayne of the poore, I wil vp (sayeth the LORDE) I wil helpe thē, and set thē at rest. The wordes of the LORDE are pure wordes: (euē as) sylyuer, which from earth is tried and purified vij. tymes in the fyre. Kepe thē therfore (o LORDE) and preserue vs frō this generacion for euere. And why? when vanite and ydylnes getteth the ouer hande amongethe children of men, all are full of y vngodly.

The rij. A psalme of Dauid.

HOW longe wilt thou forget me, o LORDE? for euere? how longe wilt thou hyde thy face fro me? Oh how longe shall I seke counsell in my soule? how longe shall I be so vexed in my herte? how longe shall myne enemie triumphe ouer me? Considre, ad heare me, o LORDE my God: lightyne myne eyes, that I slepe not in death. Lest myne enemie saye: I haue preuayled agaynst hī, for yf I be cast doun, they that trouble me will reioyse at it.

But my trust is in thy merci, and my hert is ioyfull in thy sauynghe health. I wil synge of the LORDE, that dealeth so lonyingly with me. (Yee I wil praye the name of the LORDE the most hyest.)

The rijj. A psalme of Dauid.

THE foolish bodies saye in their hertes: Tush, ther is no God. They are corrupte, ad become abominate in their doynges, there is not one y doth good. T The LORDE loked doun frō heauē vpō the children of men, to se yf there were any, that wolde vnderstondē y seke after God. But they are all gone out of the waye, they are alltogether become vnprouitable: there is none that doth good, no not one. Their throte is an open sepulcre, with their tonges they haue diseauned, the poysyn of Aspes is LORDE, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle? who shall rest vpó thy holy hill? Even he ý ledeth an vncorrupte life: that doth the thing which is right,  at that speaketh the truth from his herte. He ý vseth no disceat in his tounge: he that doth no euell to his neigbour, ý slamadreth not his neigbours. He ý setteth not by the vngodly but maketh mouch of the that feare the LORDE: he ý sweareth vnto his neigbour ý dispointeth him not. He that geneth not his money vpon vsury, and taketh no rewarde against the innocet. Who so doth these thinges, shall neuer be removed.

The rii. A psalme of Dauid.

PRESERUE me (o God) for in the do I trust. I haue sayde vnto ý LORDE: thou art my God, my goodes are nothing vnto the. All my delyte is vpó the sancetes that are in the earth, and vpon soch like. But they ý runne after another, shall haue greate trouble. Their drynковerynges of bloude wil not I offre, nether make mencion of their name in my mouth. The LORDE himself is my good and my porcion, thou manteynest my enheritance. The lott is fallen vnto me in a fyare grounde, yee I haue a goodly heretage. I wil thanke the LORDE for genyng me warnyngke: my reynes also haue chastened me in the night season. Afore honde sawe I God alwayes before me, for he is on my right honde, that I shulde not be moued.

The ri. A psalme of Dauid.

H

EARE ý right (O LORDE) cosidre A my cploynte: herken vnto my prayer, that goeth not out of a fayned mouth. Let my sentence come forth fro thy presence, and loke vpon the thinges that is equal. Thou hast proued ý visited myne herte in the night season: thou hast tried me in the fyre, ý hast founde no wickednes in me: for I vverterly purposed, that my mouth shulde not offende. Because of the wordes of thy lippes, I haue kepe me fro the workes of men, in ý waye off the murthurer. Oh ordre thou my gonynges in thy pathes, that my fote steppes slippe not. For vnto the I crye, heare me o God: enclyne thine eares to me, and herké vnto my wordes. Shewe thy marvelous louinge kindnesse, thou that sauest them which put their trust in the, from soch as resist thy right honde. Kepe me as the apple of an eye, defende me vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. From the vngodly that trouble me, fro myne enemies which compasse my soule rounde aboute.

Which manteyne their owne welthynes with oppression, ý their mouth speakeith proude thinges. They lye waytinge in oure waye on enery syde, turnynge their eyes downe to the grounde. Like as a lyon that is greyd of his pray, ý as it were a lyons welpe furckynge in his denne. Vp LORDE, dispointe him ý cast him downe: deluyer my soule with thy swerde from the vngodly. Fro the men of thy honde (o LORDE) from the men off the worlde, which haue their porcion in this life: whose belies thou fyllest with thy treaure.

They haue children at their desyre, and leaue the reste of their substanç for their babes.

But as for me, I will behold thy presence in rightousnes: and when thy glory appear-eth, I shall be satisfied.

The rūṣ. A psalme of Daviud when he was deluyered from the honde off Saul.

I WIL love the (o LORDE) my stræght. The LORDE is my succoure, my refuge, my Saniume: my God, my helper i whò I trust: my buckler, ý horne of my health, ý my proteccion. I will praye ý LORDE ý call vpon him, "so shal I be safe fro myne enemies. The sorowes of death ñòpased me, ý the brokes of vngodlynes made me afayed. The paynes of hell came aboute me, the shares of death toke holde vpö me. Yet in my trouble I called vpo the LORDE, ý còplaynt vnto my God. So he herde my voyce out of his holy têple, ý my còplaynte came before hi, yee euë in to his eares. Thë the earth trembled ý quaked, the very fofidaciões of the hilles shoke ý were remoued, because he was wrothe. There wëte a smoke out of his nos-trels, ñd a cósumyng fyre out of his mouth, so ý coales were kyndled at it. He bowed the heauës ý came downe, ý it was dårcke vnnder his fete. He rode vpö the Cherubins ý dyd ñle: he came fylyng with the wynges of the wynde. He made dårcknes heis pàuyloun rounde aboute hi, with dårcke water ý thicke clouds to couer him. At the brightnes off his presence the cloudes remoued, with hale stones ý coales of fyre. The LORDE also thondred out of ý heauë, ý the heyth gaue his thondre with hale stones ý coales of fyre. He sent out his arowes ý scatred thë, he cast sore lighteninges ý destroyed thë. The springes of waters were sone, ý the foundaciouns of the roïde worlde were discouered at thy chiding (o LORDE) at the blastinga ý breth of thy displeasure. He sent downe fò the heyth to fetch me, ý toke me out of greate waters. He deluyered me fro my stronge enemies, and fro my foes which were to mightie for me. They prevneted me in the tyme of my trouble, but ý LORDE was my defence. He brought me forth also in to lyboure: ý deluyered me, because he had a favoure vnto me. The LORDE shall rewarde me after my rightuous dealyng, ý acordinge to the clenesse of my hòdes shal he reçòpense me. For I haue kepe the wayes of the LORDE, ý haue not behaued myself wickedly agaynst my God. I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, ý cast not out his commandemëtës fro me. Vncorrupte will I be before hi, ý wil escue myne owne wickednes. Therfore shal ý LORDE rewarde me after my rightuous dealinge, ý acordinge vnto ý clenesse of my hòdes in his eye sight. With the holy thou shalt be holy, ý with ý innocët thou shalt be innocët. With the clene thou shalt be clene ý with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde. For thou shalt saue the poore oppresed, ý bringe downe the hye lokës of the proude. Thou lightest my cáde, o LORDE my God: thou makest my darknesse to be light. For in the I can disçòfet an hoost of mé: yee in my God I çi leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfecte waye: the wordes of the LORDE are tried in the fyre: he is a shylde of defence, for all them that trust in him. ý For who is God, but the LORDE? ý Or, who hath eny strength, but oure God? It is God that hath gyrded me with stræght and made my waye vncorrupte. He hath made my fete like hartes fete, and set me vp an hye. ý He teacheth myne hondes to fight, and maketh myne armes to breake euën a bowe off stele. Thou hast geû me the defence of thy health, thy right hande vpholdeth me, and thy louynge correccion maketh me greate. Thou hast made rowme ynoongh vnder me for to go, that my fote steppes shulde not styde. I will folowe vpon myne enemies, and take them: I will not turne till they be discomfitted. I will smyte them, they shall not be able to stonde, but fall vnder my fete. Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto ý batell, thou hast throwe them all downe vnder me, that rose vp agaynst me. Thou hast made myne enemies to turne their backes vpon me, thou hast destroyed thë ý hated me. They cried, but there was none to helpe thë: ý yee euën vnto the LORDE, but he herde thë not. I will beate them as small as the dust before the wynde, I will cast them out as ý claye in the stretes. Thou shalt deluyer me from the stryuinges of the people, thou shalt make me the head of the Heithë. A people whom I haue not knowne, shall serue me.

The 115. A psalme of Dauid.

A My God, my God: why hast thou forsaken me? a thy wordes of my cØplaynute are farre fro my health. O my God, I cri in the daye tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the night season also I take no rest. Yet dwellest thou in the Sanctuary, o thou worshippe of Israel. Oure fathers hoped in the, they trusted in the, ad thou dydest deluyer them. They called vpon the, and were helped: they put their trust in the, and were not cofounded. But as for me, I am a worme and no man: a very scorne of men & the outcast of the people. All they se me, laugh me to scorne: they shute out their lippes, & shake their heades. He trusted in God, let him deluyer him: let him helpe hi, yf he wil haue him.

But thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wobre: thou wast my hope, when I hanged yet vpon my mothers breastes. I haue bene left vnto the euer sence I was borne, thou art my God, euë fro my mothers wombe. O go not fro me the, for trouble is harde at honde, and here is none to helpe me. Greate bulles are come aboute me, fatt oxen close me in on euerie syde. They gape vpon me with their mouthes, as it were a rampinge and roaringe lyn.

I am poured out like water, all my bones are out of joynt: my hert in the mydiest off my body is euë like meltinge waxe. My strength is dried vp like a potsherde, my tunge cleueth to my goones, and thou hast brought me in to the dust of death. For dogges are come aboute me, the coucell of wicked hath layed sege against me. They pearsed my hondes and my fete, I might haue tolde all my bones: as for them, they stode staringes and lokinge vpon me. They haue parted my garmentes amongst them, ad cast lottes vpon my vesture.

But be not thou farre fro me, o LORDE: thou art my succoure, haist the to helpe me. Deluyer my soule from the swearde, my dearlinge from the power of the dogge. Saue me from the lyons mouth, and heare me fro amongethe horns off the vnicornes. So wil I declare thy name vnto my brethren, in the mydiest off the congregation will I praysye the. O praysye the LORDE ye that feare him: Magnifie him all ye sede of Iacob, ad let all y sede of Israel feare hi. For he hath not despysed nor abhorred the myserable estate of the poore: he hath not hyd his face fro me, but whë I called vnto him, he herde me. I wil praysye the in the greate congregation, and perfourme my vowes in the sight off all the that feare the. The poore shal eate ad be satisfied: they y seke after y LORDE shal praysye him: youre herte shal lyue for euer.

All the endes of the worlde shal remembre them selues, ad be turned vnto the LORDE: and all the generaciones of the Heithen shal worshippe before him. For the kyndgome is the LORDES, and he shal be the gouernoure of y Heithen. All soch as be fat vp© earth, shal eate also and worshippe: All they that lye in the dust, and lyue so hardly, shall fall downe before him. The sede shall serve him, and preach of the LORDE for euer. They shal come, ad declare his rughtuousnes: vnto a people that shal be borne, whò the LORDE hath made.

The 116. A psalme of Dauid.

The LORDE is my shepherde, ad I can a wante nothinge. He fedeth me in a grene pasture, ad ledeth me to a fresh water. He quickennoth my soule, ad bringeth me forth in the waye of rughtuousnes for his names sake. Though I shulde walke now in the valley of the shadowe of death, yet I feare no euell, for thou art with me: thy staffe ad thy shephecote me. Thou preparrest a table before me against mine enemies: thou anoynest my heade with oyle, ad fyllest my cuppe full. Oh let thy lonyge kyndnes ad mercy folowe me all the dayes off my life, that I maye dwell in the house off the LORDE for euer.

The 111. A psalme of Dauid.

VNTO the (o LORDE) I lift vp my soule. My God, I trust in y: Oh let me not be confounded, lest myne enemies triupe ouer me. For all they y hope in y shall not be ashamed: but soch as be scornewfull despyssers with out a cause, they shall be put to cöfucio. Shewe me thy wayes (o LORDE) y teach me thy pathes. Lede me in thy trueth and lerne me, for thou art the God off my health, and in the is my hope all the dave longe.

Call to remembrance, O LORDE, thy tender mercyes y thy lounyng kyndnesse, which haue bene euuer of olde. Oh remeber not y synnes y offences of my youth, but acordinge vnto thy mercy thynke vpon me (O LORDE) for thy goodnesse. O how fredly y rightuous is the LORDE, therfore wil he teach synners in the waye. He ledeth the symple a right, and soch as be meke the lerneth he his wayes. All the wayes of the LORDE are very mercy y faithfulness, vnto soch as kepe his testament and couenaunt. For thy names sake, O LORDE, be mercifull vnto my synne, for it is greate. What so euere he be that feareth the LORDE, he shal sheweth him the waye that he hath chosen.

His soule shall dwell at ease, and his sede shall possesse the londe. The secrete of the LORDE is amonge them that feareth him, and he sheweth them his couenaunt. Myne eyes are euer lokynge vnto the LORDE, for he shal plucke my fete out of y nett. Turne the vnto me and haue mercy vpon me, for I am desolate and in misery. The sorrowes of my herte are greate, O brynge me out of my troubles.

Loke vpon my aduersite and misery, and forewe me al my synnes. Consider how myne enemies are many, and beare a malicious hate agaynst me. O kepe my soule, and deluyer me: let me not be confounded, for I haue put my trust in the. Let innocency and rightuous dealinge wayte vpon me, for my hope is in the. Deluyer Israel (O God) out of all his trouble.

The 116. A psalme of Dauid.

BE thou my judge (O LORDE) for I a walke innocently: my trust is in the LORDE, therfore shall I not fall.

Examen me O LORDE, and prowe me: trie out my reynes and my hert. For thy lounyng kyndnesse is before myne eyes, and I walke in thy trueth. I syt not amõge vayne personnes, and bane no fellisheipe with the deceatfull. I hate the congregacion of the wicked, and I will not syt amonge the vngoodly.

I waszhe my sondes with innocency O LORDE, and so go I to thine aultcr. That I maye shewe the voyce of thy prayse, and tell of all thy wonderous worke. LORDE, I loue the habitacion of thy house, and y place where thy honoure dwelleth. O destroeye not my soule with the synners, ner my life with the bloudthurstie. In whose sondes is wickednesse, and their right sonde is full of giftes. But as for me I will walke innocently: O deluyer me, and be mercifull vnto me. My fot stondeth right: I wil prayse the (O LORDE) in the congregacions.

For in the tyme of trouble he hath hyd me in his tabernacle, yee in the secrete place of his dwellinge hath he kepeth and set me vp vpon a rocke of stone. And now hath he lift vp my heade aboue myne enemies, that copassad me rounde aboute. Therfore wil I offre in his dwellinge, the oblation of thaksgivinge: I wil both syng α speake prayers vpnto the LORDE. Herke vnto my voyce (O LORDE) when I cri vnto the: haue mercy vpon me α heare me. My hert spekeath vnto the, my face seketh thee, yee LORDE, thy face wil I seke. O hyde not thou thy face fro me, cast not thy seruanout of displeasure. Thou art my succoure, leaue me not, nether forsake me, O God my Sauioure. For my father and my mother haue forsaken me vp. Shewe me thy waye O LORDE, and lede me in the right path, because of myne enemies. Delyuer me not in to the wylles of myne aduersaries, for there are false wyntesses rysen vp against me, and they ymagyn myschefe. Nueertheless, I beleue verelye to se the goodnesse of the LORDE in the londe of the lyuyng. Psalm CXXII.

A psalm of David.

In the, O LORDE, is my trust: let me never be put to confucion, but delyuer me in thy righteousnesse. Bowe downe thine ear to me, make haist to delyuer me: be thou my stronge rocke and a house of defence, that thou mayest saue me. For thou art my stronge holde: O be thou my gyde, lede me for thy names sake. Drawe me out of the nett that they have layed pruely for me, for thou art my streth.

In to thy bondes I commend mine sprete: thou hast delyuered me O LORDE thou God of treuth. I hate them that holde of vanities, and my trust is in the LORDE. I will be glad and rejoyce in thy mercy: for thou hast considred my trouble, thou hast knowne my soule in aduersite. Thou hast not delyuered me ouer in to the hodes of the enemie, but hast set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O LORDE, for I am in trouble, myne eye is consumed for very heuynesse, yee my soule and my body. My life is waxen olde with heuynesse, and my yeaeres with mornynge. My streth fayleth me because of my aduersite, and my bones are corrupte. I am become a very reprofe amonge all myne enemies, myne neighbours they of myne owne accouantenance are afraied of me: they se me in the strete, couere them selues fro me. I am clene forgotten and out of mynde, as a deed man: I am become like a broken vessell.

For I haue herde the blasphemy of the multitude: every man abhorreth me: they haue gathered a council together against me, and are purposed to take a waye my life.

But my hope is in O LORDE, I saye: thou art my God. My tyme is in thy honde: delyuer me from the honde of myne enemies, from them persecute me. Shewe thy servaunt the light of thy countenaunce, helpe me for thy mercies sake. Let me not be confounded (O LORDE) for I call vpon the: let the vngodly rather be put to confusion, and brought vnto the hell. Let the lyenge lippes be put to sylence, which cruelly, disdainedely despitefuly speake against the righteous. O how greate and manifolde is thy good, which thou haist hyd for them that feare thy? O what thinges bringest thou to passe for them, that put their trust in the, even before the sounes of men?

Thou hydest them priuely by thine owne presence from the proude men, thou kepest them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tonges. Thanks be to the LORDE, for he hath shewed me maruelous greate kyndnesse in a stronge cite. For when the sodane feare came vpon me, I saye: I am cast out of thy sight. Neuerthelesse, thou herdest myne humble prayer, when I cried vnto the. O loue the LORDE (all ye his sayntes) for the LORDE preserueth the faithfull, and plentuously rewardeth he the proude doer. Be strome therfore take a good herte vnto you, all ye that put your trust in the LORDE.

Psalm CXXIII.

A psalm of David.

BLESSED are they, whose vnrighteousnesse is foruen, and whose synnes are couered. Blessed is the man, vnto whom the LORDE imputeth no synne, in whose spryte there is no gyle. For whyle I helde my tongue, my bones consumed awaye thowre my daylie complaynynges. And because thy hande was so heuy vpon me both daye and night, my moysture was like the drouth in Sommer. Sela.

Therefore I confessed my synne vnto the, and hyd not myne vnrightuousnesse. c I saide: I will knowlege myne offence, and accuse my self vnto the LORDE, and so thou forgannest me the wickenednesse of my synne.

Sela. d For this shal every saynte make his prayer vnto the in due season, therefore shall not the greate water floudes come nye him. Thou art my defence in the trouble that is come aboute me, O còpasse thou me aboute also with the ioye of delyuerauence.

Sela. e I wil enforce the, and shewe the the waye wherin thou shalt go: I will fasten myne eyes vpon the. f Be not ye now like horses g mooles, which haue no understanding: Whose mouthes thou must holde with bytt g brydle, ye they will not obie the.

Greate plages shall ye vngodly haue, but who so putteth his trust in the LORDE, mercy shall compass him euery syde. Be glad (o ye righteous) and reioyse in the LORDE, bejoyfull all ye that are true of herte.

The 119. A psalme of Dauid.

REIOYSE in ye LORDE (o ye righteous) for it becommeth well the iust to be thanfullk. Praye the LORDE with harpe: h synge psalmes vnto him with the lute and instrument of ten strynges. Singe him a new songe, yee synge lustely vnto him g with a good corage. For the worde of ye LORDE is true, and all his workes are fauithfull. He loueth mercy a judgment, g earth is full of the gredinesse of the LORDE. k By the worde of the LORDE were the heauens made, g all the hoostes of them by ye breth of his mouth. He gathereth ye waters together as it were in a bottel, k laieth vp the depe in secrete. Let all the earth feare the LORDE, and let all them that dwell in the worlde, stode in awe of him. For loke what he sayeth, it is done: aand loke what he comaineth, it stondeth fast. k The LORDE bryngeth the councell of the Heithen to naught, and turneth the deuyces of the people.

But the councell of the LORDE endureth, and the thoughts of his hert from generacion to generacion. "Blessed are the people that holde the LORDE for their God, g blessed are the folke whom he hath chosen to be his heretage. "The LORDE loketh downe from heauen, g beholdeth all the children of men: from his stronge seate he considreth all them y dwell in the worlde. h He only hath fashioned all the hertes of them, g knoweth all their works. A kynde is not helped by his owne greate boost, nether is a giaunte saued thorow the might of his owne stréght.

A horse is but a vayne thynge to saue a man, it is not the power of his stréght that can delyuer him. i Beholde, the eye of the LORDE loketh vnto them that feare him, a put their trust in his mercy. That he maye delyuer their soules from death, and to fede them in the deare tynme. Let oure soule paciently abyde the LORDE, for he is oure helpe and shilde. So shal oure herte reioyse in him,because we haue hoped in his holy name. Let thy mercifull kyndnesse (o LORDE) be vpon vs, like as we put oure trust in the.

WIL allwayne geue thankes vnto the LORDE, his prayshe shal euere be in my mouth. My soule shall make his boaste in the LORDE: the poore oppresed shal heare thereof, and be glad. O prays ye LORDE with me, and let vs magnifie his name together. k I sought the LORDE, and he herde me, yee he delyuered me out of all my feare. They that haue an eye vnto him, shalbe lightened, g their faces shall not be ashamed. This poore man cried vnto the LORDE, and he herde him, yee and delyuered him out of all his troubles. "The angell of the LORDE pitcheth his tente rounde aboute them that feare him, and delyuere them.

O taist and se how freundly the LORDE is, 'blessed is the man ye trueth in him. O feare the LORDE, ye ye be his sayntes: "for they that feare him, lacke nothing. The rich shal want and suffre hunger, but they which seeke the LORDE, shal wat no maner of thinge, that is good. Come hither (o ye children) herken vnto me, I wil teach you the feare of the LORDE. l Who so listeth to lye, & wolde flaye se good dayes. Let him refrayne his tongue from euell, and his lippes that they speake no gyle. Let him eschue euell, and do good: Let him seke peace σ ensue it. For the eyes of the LORDE are over the righteous, and his cares are open vnto their prayers. But the face of the LORDE beholdeth them that do euel, to destroye the remembrance of them out of the earth.

When the righteous crie, the LORDE heareth them, and deluyereth the out of all their troubles. The LORDE is vnte to them y are contrite in hert, σ wil helpe soch as be of an hũle sprete. "Greate are τ troubles of the righteous, but the LORDE deluyereth them out of all. He kepeth all their bones, so τ not one of them is broken. But misfortune shal slaye the vnsgodly, and they that hate τ righteous shall be gilte. The LORDE deluyereth the soules of his seruautes, and all they that put their trust in him, shal not offende.

The 333. A psalme of Dauid.

STRYUE thou with them (ο LORDE) that stryue with me, fight thou agaynst them that fight agaynst me. Laye honde vpon the skylde and speare, and stonde vp τ to helpe me. Drawe out thy swarde, and stoppe the waye agaynst them that persecute me, saye vnto my soule: I am thy helpe. Let them be cofounded and put to shame, that seke after my soule: let the be turned back and brought to confusion, that ymagin myscchefe for me. "Let the be as τ dust before the wynde, and the angell of the LORDE scaterynge the. Let their waye be darcke and slippery, and the angell of the LORDE to persecute them. For they haue pruely laied their nett to destorye me without a cause, yee and made a pitte for my soule, which I neuer deserued. Let a sodane destruccion come vpon him vnawarres, τ and τ nett that he hath layed pruely, catch him selfe, that he maye fall in to his owne myschefe.

But let my soule be joyfull in the LORDE, and reioyse in his helpe. All my bones shall saie: LORDE, who is like vnto the? which deluyerest τ poore from those that are to stronge for him, yee the poore and the nedy from his robbers.

False witnesses are ryse τ vp, τ laye to my charge things that I knowe not. "They rewarde me euell for good, to the greate discomforth of my soule. Neuertheles, when they were sick, I put on a sack cloth: I humbled my soule with fastinge, and my prayer turned in to myne owne bosome. I behaued my self as though it had bene my frende or my brother, I wete heuely, as one τ mourneth for his mother. "But in my aduersite they reioyse, and gather them together: yee τ very lame come together agaynst me vna warres, makyng mowes at me, σ caesse not.

With τ greedye τ scornefull ypocrites, they gnaszshed vpon me with their teth. LORDE, whan wilt thou loke vp τ this? O restore my soule from τ wicked rumoure of the, τ my dearlinge from the lyons. "So wil I geue τ thanks in the greate congregacion, τ praye the amonge many people. O let the not triuphe over me, that are myne enemies for naught: O let them not wyncke with their eyes, that hate me without a cause. "And why? their comonynge is not for peace, but they ymagin false wordes agaynst τ outcastes of the londe. They gape vpon me with their mouthes, sayenge: there there: we se it with oure eyes. This thou seist, o LORDE: holde not thy tongue the: go not farre fro me, o LORDE. Awake (LORDE) and stonde vp τ: auenge thou my cause, my God, and my LORDE. Judge me (ο LORDE) my God) acordinge to thy righteousnesse, τ they triuphe not ouer me. O let the not saie in their hertes: there there, so wolde we haue it. O let them not saie: we haue overcome him.

Let them be put to confusion and shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let the be clothed with rebuke and dishonoure, that boost the selues agaynst me. Let them also be glad and reioyse, that fauoure my righteous dealings: yee let them saye allwaye: blessed be τ LORDE, which hath pleasure in the prosperite of his seruaunt. And as for my touge, it shall be talkyng of thy righteousnes and of thy praye, all the daye longe.

The 376. A psalme of Dauid.

MY hert sheweth me the wickednesse of the vnsgodly, that there is no feare of God before his eyes. For he dyssemblith before his face, so longe till his abominable synne be founde out. The wordes of his mouth are vnrighteousnesse and disceate, he wil not be lerned to do good.

He ymagineth myschief vpon his bedde, he will come in no good waye, nor refuse the thinges that is euell. *Thy mercy (O LORDE) reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faithfulnesse vnto the cloudes. Thy righteousnesse stondeth like the stronge mountaynes, *thy judgment like the greate depe. Thou LORDE preseruest both me *and beastes. *How precious is thy mercy (O God) that the children of men maye put their trust vnder *thy shadowe of thy wynges? They shalbe satisfied with the pieteoussenesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them drynke of the ryuer of thy pleasures. *For by the is *thy well of life, *in thy light, shall we se light. O spede forth thy lounge kyndnesse vnto them that knowe thee, *thy righteousnesse vnto the that are true of hert. O let not the fote of pryde overtakke me, O let not the hande of *thy vnghodly cast me downe. As for wicked doers, they fall, they are cast downe, *they are not able to stode.

The 170th. A psalme of Dauid. Frett not thy self at the vnghodly, be not thou envious against the euell doers. For they shall soone be cut downe like *thy grasse, *thy wythered euens as *thy greene herbe. Put thou thy trust in *LORDE, *be doinge good: so shalt thou dwell in the londe, *verely it shal fede the. Delyte thou in the LORDE, *he shal geue the thy hertes desire. *Comitte thy waye vnto *LORDE, set thy hope in him, and he shal brynge it to passe. Yee he shal make thy righteousnesse as cleare as the light, *thy iust dealinge as the noone daye. Holde the still in *LORDE, and abyde paciety vpon him: but greue not thy self at one that hath prosperite, and lyneth in abominacion. Leaue of from wrath, let go displeasure, let not thy gelousy moue the also to do euell. For wicked doers shal be roted out, but they that paciety abyde the LORDE, shal enheret the londe.

Suffre yet a little whyle, *thou vnghodly shal be cleene gone: thou shalt loke after his place, *he shal be awaye. *But the meke spreted shal possesse the earth, *hauie pleasure in moch rest. The vnghodly layeth wayte for the iust, *gnazsheth vpon him with his teth. But *LORDE laugheth him to scorn, *for he seeth *his dayes is comminge. The vnghodly draweth out the swerde *and bendeth their bowe, to cast downe *they symple *poore, and to slaye soch as go *righte waye. Neuertheles, their swerde shal go thorow their owne hert, and their bowe shalbe brokè. *A small thinge *the righteous hath, is better then greate riches of the vnghodly. For the armes of *vnghodly shalbe broken, but the LORDE vpholdeth the righteous. The LORDE knoweth the dayes of the godly, *theh their enhertiace shal endure for euere. *They shal not be cofounded in *thy perous tyne, *in *thy dayes of derth they shal haue ynowh. As for *vnghodly, they shal perise: *whiche *enemies of *LORDE are in their floures, they shal cosine, yee euens as the smoke shal they cosine awaye. The vnghodly *boroweth and piaieth not agayne, but the righteous is mercifull, *he lode *gently, therfore shal his sede be blessed. Fle fro euell, *do *thiinge that is good, so shal thou dwell for euere.

For *LORDE loueth *thiinge *is right, he forsketh not his sayntes, but they shal be preserued for euermore: as for the sede of the vnghodly, it shalbe roted out. Yee the righteous shal possess *lode, *dwell therin for euere. *The mouth of the righteous is exercised in wyszdome, *his tège talketh of judgment. The lawe of his God is in his hert, therfore shal not his fote steppes slyde. The vnghodly setteth the righteous, *goeth aboute to slaye him. But the LORDE wil not leave him in his hodes, nor cödemne him when he is iudged. Hope thou in the LORDE, *he kepe his waye: *he shal so promtne the, that thou shal haue the lode by enhertiace,

The 119. A psalm of David.

I

SAYDE: I wil kepe my waies, that I a offended not in my tounge. And so I shut my mouth, while the vngodly layed wayte for me. I helde my tounge, I was domme, I keppe sylence, yee eue from good wordes, but it was payne and grefe to me. My hert was hote within me, a whyle I was thus musynge, the fyre kyndled: so that I spake with my tounge. "LORDE, let me knowe myne ende, and the nombre of my dayes: that I maye be certified what I wante. "Beholde, thou hast made my dayes a spanne longe, and my life is as it were nothinge before the. O howayne are all men lyuyng? Sela. Yee euer man walketh as it were a shadowe, and disquieteth himself in vayne: he heapeth vp riches/ and can not tell to whom he gathereth them. And now LORDE, wherin shall I conforte me? my hope is in the. Delyuer me from all myne offences, and make me not a scorne vnto the foolish. I kepe sylce, and open not my mouth, for thou hast done it. Turne thy plages awaye fro me, for I am consumed thorow the feare of thy hōde. When thou punyshest man for symne, thou chastenest him: so that his beutie consumeth awaye, like as it were a mothe. O howayne are all men?

Sela. Heare my prayer o LORDE, and considire my callinge: shewe not thy self as though thou sawest not my teares. For I am a straunger and pilgrymme with the, as all my forefathers were. Oh spare me a little, that I maye refreshe my selfe, before I go hence, and be n子more sene.

_Bolesed_ is he, y considereth y poor: *y LORDE shall deliver him in the time of trouble. The LORDE shall preserve him, and kepe him aliyne: he shall make him to prosper vpon earth, and shall not deluyer him in to y wil of his enemies. The LORDE shall refresh him, when he lyeth sick vpon his bed, yee thou makest his bed in all his sicknesse. I sayde: LORDE be mercifull vnto me, heale my soule, for I haue synned against the. Myne enemies speake euell vpo me: when shall he dye, and his name perishe? Though he came in to se, yet meane he falsely in his hert, heapinge myschefe vpon himself. All they that hate me, runne together against me, and ymagin euell against me. They haue genen a wicked sentence vpon me: when he lyeth, he shall ryse vpon no more. Yee euell myne owne famillier frende, whom I trusted, which dyd eate my bred, hath lift vp his hele agaynst me. But be thou mercifull vnto me (o LORDE) rayse thou me vp, and I shall revearde them. By this I knowe thou fauourest me, that my enemie shall not triumphe over me. Thou hast vpheolden me because of my innocencie, and set me before thy face for euere. O blessed be y LORDE God of Israel, from hec forth and for euermore. Amen, Amen.

The rii. A psalme of the childre of Corah.

LIKE as the hert desyreth the water brokes, so longeth my soule after the, o God. My soule is a thurstre for God, yee euell for the lyuyngne God: who shall I come, o beholde the face of God? My teares are my meate daye and night, whyle it is daylie sayde vnto me: where is now thy God? Now when I thinke there vp6, I pour out my hert by my self: for I wolde fayne go hence with the multitude, and passe ouer with them vnto the house of God, in ye voyce of prayse, o thankesgeyng, amonge such as kepe holy dayes. Why art thou so ful of heuynes (o my soule) why art thou so vnquieten within me? O put thy trust in God, for I wil yet geue him thanks, for the helpe of his countenaunc. My God, my soule is vexed within me: therfore I remembre the londe of Iordane, o the little hill of Hermonim.

The Psalter.

Psalme 56.

One depe calleth another with the voyce of thy whistles, "all thy wavies water floudes are gone ouer me. The LORDE hath promised his louynge kyndnesse daylie, therfore wil I prasse him in the night season, and make my prayere vnto y God of my life. I will saye vnto God my stony rocke: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heenely, whyle the enemie oppresseth me? Whyl my bones are broken, y whyle myne enemies cast me in the thethe, daylie savenge vnto me: where is now thy God? Why art thou so heuy (o my soule) y why art thou so disquieted within me? O put thy trust in God, for I wil yet thanke him for the helpe of his countenaunce, and because he is my God.

The rlii. Psalme.

A GUE sentence vpon me (o God) a defende my cause agaynst the vnholie people: Oh deluyer me from the disceatfull wicked man. For thou (o God) art my strength: why hast thou shot me from the? Why go I then so heenely, whyle the enemie oppresseth me? Onde sende out thy light y thy trueth, y they maye lede me a brynge me vnto thy holy hill and to thy dwellings.

That I maye go in to the aulter of God, euen vnto the God which is my ioye a pleasure, y vpon the harpe to geue theikes vnto y, o God, my God. Why art thou so heuy (o my soule) y why art thou so disquieted within me? O put thy trust in God, for I wil yet geue him theikes for y helpe of his countenaunce, and because he is my God.

W Haue herde with oure eares (o God) ooure fathers haue tolde vs, what thou hast done in their tyme, of olde.

How thou hast droyned out the Heithen with they honde, a plaide the in: how thou hast destroyed the nacionis a cast the out. For they y gat not the londe in possession thorrow their owne swerde, nether was it their owne arme that helped them. But thy right hyde, thynne arme a the light of thy countenaunce, because thou haddest a favoure vnto them.

'Thou art y kinge a my God, thou sendest helpe vnto Iacob. Thowor y, wil we overthowe oure enemies: a in thy name wil we treade them vnder, that ryse vp agaynst vs.

For I will not trust in my bowe, it is not my swerde y shall helpe me. But it is thou that sauest vs frō oure enemies, and puttest them to confucion that hate vs. We will allwaye make oure boast of God, and prasse thy name for euer. Sela. But now thou forsaketh vs, a puttest vs to confucion, and goest not forth with oure hoostes. 'Thou makest vs to turne oure backes vpon oure enemies, so that they which hate vs, spoile oure goodes. aThou lettest vs be eaten vp like shepe, a searest vs amONGe the Heithen.

Thou sellest thy people for naught, a taketh no moneye for them. Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neibouris, to be laughed to scorne and had in derision, of them that are rounde aboute vs. aThou hast made vs a very byword amonge the Heithen, a that the people shake their heads at vs. My cōfucion is daylie before me, a the shame of my face couereth me. For the voyce of the slanderer a blaspheemer, for the enemie and auenger. All this is come vpon vs, a yet haue we not forgotten the, ner behaued oure selues vnfaithfully in thy covenaut. Oure hert is not turned backe, nether oure steppes gone out of thy waye. That thou smytest vs so in the place of the serpēt, a couerest vs with y shadowe of death. Yf we had forgotten the name of oure God, a holdē vp oure hondes to eny straughe God: Shulde not God fynde it out? for he knoweth the very secretes of the hert. But for thy sake we are ykilled all the daie longe, 'and are counted as shepe apoynted to be slayne. Vp LORDE, why slepest thou? Awake, and cast vs not of for euer. 'Wherfore hydest thou thy face? wilt thou clene forget oure misery and oppressio? For oure sole is brought lowe euen vnto the dust, and oure bely cleueth vnto the grounde. Arise o LORDE, helpe vs, and deluyer vs for thy mercie sake.

My hert is dytinge of a good matter, I a speake of that, which I haue maide of the kynges: My tongue is y penne of a ready wryter. Thou art the fayrest amonge the children of mc, full of grace are thy lippes, therfore God blesseth the for euer.

Gyrde the with thy swerde vpon thy thee
(o thou mightie) with worshippe and renowne.
Good lucke haue thou with thine honour, ryde on with the treuth, meneasses right-ousnes: thy right hode shal teach woderfull things. Thy arowes are sharpe, the people shalbe subdued vnto the, even in the myddest amonge the kynges enemies.

The thee (o God) endureth for euer: the cepter of thy kyngdome is a right cesper.
Thou hast loued righteousnesse, hated iniquitie: wherfore God (which is thy God) hath anoynted the with the oyle of gladnes aboute thy felowe. All thy garments are like myrre, Aloes & Cassia, when thou comest out of thine yuerie palaces in thy beutifull glory. Kynges daughters go in thy goodly array, vpon thy right honde stondeth the quene in a vesture of the most fyne golde.
Herken (o daughter) consider, enlyne thine
eare: forget thine owne people, thy fathers house. So shal the kyngle haue pleasure in thy beutie, for he is thy Lorde, thou shalt worshippe him. The daughters of Tyre shal be there with gifts: the riche amonoge the people shal make their supplication before the.
The kynges daughter is all glorious within,
hir clothinge is of wrought golde. She shalbe brought vnto the kyngle in rayment of nedle worke, and maydens after her: such as be next her shalbe brought vnto the. With ioye and gladnesse shal they be brought, and go in to the kynges palace. In stead of thy fathers thou hast gotten children, whom thou shalt make prynces in all londes. I wil remembere thy name from one generacion to another:
therfore shal the people greue thankes vnto
the, worlde without ende.

The r6. A psalme of the children of Corah.

IN oure troubles and aduersite, we haue founde, that God is oure refuge, oure strength and helpe. Therfore wil we not fear, though the earth fell, and though the hilles were caried in to the myddest of the see.

Though the waters of the see raged were neuer so troublous, though the mountaynes shoke at the teps of the same. Sela.

For there is a floude, which with his ryuers reioyseth thy cite of God, the holy dwellynge of the most hyest. God is in myddest of her, therefore shal she not be renoumed: for God helpeth her, y right early. The Heithen are madd, the kyngdomes make much adoo: but whè he sheweth his voyce, earth melteth awaye. The LORDE of hoostes is with vs, the God of Iacob is oure defence.

Sela. O come hither, beholde thy workes of the LORDE, what destructions he hath brought vpon thy earth. He hath made warres to cease in all the worlde: he hath broken the bowe, he hath knapped the speare in sonder, he brèt the charrettes in the fyre. Be still the I confess I am God: I wil be exalted amonge the Heithé, I wil be exalted vpon earth. The LORDE of hoostes is with vs, the God of Iacob is oure defence. Sela.

The rbi. A psalme of the children of Corah.

CLAPPE your hodes together (all ye people) O syng vnto God with the voyce of thakesgenyeunge. For the LORDE the most hyest is to be feared, he is the greate kyngle vpon all thy earth. He shal subdue the people vnder vs the Heithé vnder oure fete. He choseth vs for an heretage, the beutie of Iacob whom he loued. Sela. God is gone vp with a mery noyse, the LORDE with the sounde of the tröpet. O syng pryses, syng syng syng vnto God: O syng pryses, syng pryses vnto oure kyngle.

For God is kyngle of all the earth, O syng pryses vnto him with vnderstandinge.

God is kinge ouer the Heithé, God sitteth in his holy seate. The prynces of the people are gathered together vnto the God of Abraham: for God is farre farre hyer exalted, then the mightie lordes of the earth

The rbi. A psalme of the children of Corah.

GREATE is thy LORDE thy hylie to be prayed, in thy cite of oure God, euè vpon his holy hill. The hill of Sion is like a fayre plate, whereof all the londe reioyseth: vpon
the north syde lyeth the cite of the greate kyngle.

God is well knowne in hir palaces, he is the defence of the same. For lo, kynges are gathered, and gone by together. They marveled, to se soch thinges: they were astonnied, sodely cast downe. Feare came there vpon
the, soare as vpò a woman in hir trauyle.
Thou shalt breake thy shippes of the see, thorow
the east wynde. Like as we haue herde, so we in the cite of the LORDE of hoostes, in the cite of oure God: God vpholdeth the same for ever. Sela. We wayte for thy louyng kyndness (o God) in the myisdost of thy temple. O God, acordinge vnto thy name, so is thy pryse vnto the worldes ende: thy right hode is full of rightousnes.

*Oh let the moût Sion reioyse, τι daughter of Iuda he glad because of thy iudgmetes. Walke aboute Sion, go rounde aboute her, and tell hir towres. Marke well hir walles, set vp hir houses: that it maye be tolde them ṭ come after. For this God is oure God for euer τι euer, and he shal alwaie be oure gyde.

A

HEARE this, all ye people: pondre it well, all ye that dwell vpó the earth.

Hye τι lowe, riche τι poore, one with another.

My mouth shal speake of wyszdome, and my hert shal muse of vnderstandinge. I wil encline myne eare to the parable, τι shewe my dareke speach vpon the harpe. Wherfore shulde I feare the euell days, whě the wickednesse of my heles copaseth me rounde aboute? They that put their trust in their good, τι boost them selues in the multitude of their riches. No man maye deliuer his brother, ner make agrement for him vnto God.

*For it costeth more to redeeme their soules, so that he must let that alone for euer. Yee though he lyne lôge, τι se not ṭ graue. *For it shal be sene, ṭ soch wyse mē shal dye τι perishe together, as well as the iignoraunt and foolish, τι feaue their goodes for other. Loke what is in their houses, it cotinueth still: their dwellinge places endure from one generacion to another, τι are called after their owne names vpon the earth. *Neuerthelesse mā abydeth not in soch honoure, but is copared vnto ṭ brute beastes, τι becommeth like vnto thē.

This waie of theirs is very foolishnesse, τι yet their posterite praye it with their mouth.

Sela. They lye in the hell like shepe, death shal gnaue vpon them, τι the righteous shal haue dominacion of them in the morinyng by tymes: their střegh shal consume, τι hell shalbe their dwellinge. But God shal deliuer my soule from the power of hell, when he receaue me. Sela. O be not thou afrayed, whan one is made riche, τι the glory of his house increased.

*For he shal cary nothinge awaie with him when he dyeth, nether shal his pompe folowe him. Whyle he lyueth, he is counted an happie man: τι so lôge as he is in prosperite, mē speake good of him. But whě he foloweth his fathers generacion, he shal neuer se light eny more.

When a man is in honour and hath no vnderstōdinge, he is compared vnto the brute beastes, and becommeth like vnto them.

Thy rür. A psalme of Asaph.

THE LORDE euyn the mightie God hath spokē, τι called the worlde from the rysinge vp of the sonne vnto the goinge downe of the same. Out of Sion apeareth the glorious beutie of God. *Oure God shal come, and not kepē sylence: there goeth before him a consūmyng fyre, and a mightie tempest rounde aboute him. He shal call the heauens from abone, and the earth, that he maye iudge his people. Gather my sayntes together vnto me, those ṭ set more by the couenaunt then by eny offeringe. And the heauens shal declare his rightousnesse, for God is iudge himself.

Sela. Heare, o my people: let me speake, let me testifie amony you, o Israel: I am God, euyn thy God. I reproue the not because of thy sacrifis, thy burntofferinges are allwaye before me. *I wil take no bullocks out of thy house, ner gotes out of thy foldes. For all the beastes of the felde are myne, and thousandes of catell vpon the hilles.

I knowe all the foules vpon the mountaynes, and the wilde beastes of the felde are in my sight. *If I be hongrie, I wil not tell the: for ṭ whole worlde is myne, and all that therin is. *Thynkest thou, that I wil eate the flesh of oxen, or drykke the bloude of goates? OFFRE vnto God pryse and thanksgeuynge, and paye thy voyes vnto the most hyest. *And call vpō me in the tyme of trouble, so wil I heare the, that thou shalt thanke me. But vnto the vngodly sayeth God: Why doest thou preach my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth? Where as thou hatest to be re-formed, and castest my wordes behynde the? Yf thou seist a thefe, thou runnest with him, and art partaker with the adouterers. Thou lettest thy mouth speake wickdesse, τι thy tonge paynteth disceate. Thou syttest and speakest agaynst thy brother, yee and slaundrdest thine owne mothers sonne. *This thou doest,
Psalm 119

The Psalter.

WHY boastest thou thy self (thou Tyrant) that thou canst do myscche? Where as the goodnesse of God endureth yet daylie. Thy tongue ymagineth wickednesse, and with ylyes it cutthe like a sharpe rasoure. Thou lonest vngraciousness more the good, to talke of ylyes more then righteousnesse. Sela. Thou lonest to speake all wordes ÿ maye do hurte, O thou false tóge. Therfore shal God cleane destroye the, smyte the in peces, plucke the out of thy dwellinge, and rote the out of the londe of the lyninge. Sela.
The righteous shal se this, ÿ feare, and laugh him to scorne. ÿ Lo, this is the mà, ÿ toke not God for his stréth, but trusted vnto the multitude of his riches, ÿ was mightie in his wickednesse. As for me, I am like a grene olyue tre in ÿ house of God: my trust is in the tender mercy of God for ever ÿ eruer.
I will allwaye gene thanks vnto the, for that thou hast done: and wil hope in thy name, for thy sayntes like it well.

The lii. A psalme of David.

THE foolish bodies saye in their hertes:
Tush, there is no God. Corrupte are they, and become abominable in their wicked-esses: there is not one, that doth good. God loket downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to se ÿ there were eny that wolde vnderstonde, or seke after God. But they are all gone out of ÿ waye, they are all become vnproufitable: there is none ÿ doth good, no not one. How ca they have vnderstandinge, that are the workers of wickednes, catinge vpon my people as it were bred, ÿ call not vpon God? They are afrayed, where no feare is: for God breaketh the bones of them that besège the: thou puttest them to confusion, for God desipeth them. Oh ÿ the saunyge health were geuen vnto Israel out of Sion: Oh that the LORDE wolde deluyer his people out of captuyte. Then shulde Jacob reioyse, ÿ Israel shulde be right glad.

1. A psalme of David.

HAUE mercy vpon me (o God) after thy goodnes, ÿ acordinge vnto thy greate mercies, do awaye myne offences.
Wash me well fro my wickednesse, ÿ cleanse me fro my synne. For I knowelege my fautes, and my synne is euere before me.
AGAINST the only, agaynst the haue I synned, and done euell in thy sight: that thou mightest be justifie in thy sayynes, and shuldest ouer come when thou art judged.
Beholde, I was borne in wickednesse, and in synne hath my mother conceauned me.
But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the truthe, and hast shewed me secrete wyssdome. O reconcline me with Isope, and I shal be clene: wash thou me, and I shalbe whyter then nowe. Oh let me heare of ioye and glad-nesse, that the bones which thou hast broken, maye reioyse. Turne thy face fro my synnes, and put out all my myszdedes. Make me a clene hert (o God) and renue a right sprete within me. Cast me not awaie from thy presence, and take not thy holy sprete fro me. O gene me the comforte of thy helpe agayne, and stabish me with thy fre sprete. Then shal
I teach thy wayes vnto the wicked, that synners maye be convertte vnto the. Deluyer me from bloudeglytynesse o God, thou that art the God of my health, that my tonge maye praye thy righteousnesse. Open my lippes (O LORDE) that my mouth maye shewe thy sprete.
For ÿ thou hastdest pleasure in sacrifice, I wolde geue it the: but thou delyst not in

He shall reward euell vnto myne enemies, * and in thy treuth shalt thou destroye them. A frewil offering wil I geue the, and praye thy name o LORDE, because it is so comfortable. For thou hast deluyered me out of all my trouble, so that myne eye seyth his desyre vp myne enemies.

The liii. A psalme of David.

A HEARE my prayer (o God) and hyde not thy self fro my peticion. Take hede vnto me and heare me, how piteously I moune a compayne. The enemie crieth so, the vnrighteous commeth on so fast: for they are mynded to do me some myschefe, so maliciously are they set agaynst me. My herte is heuy within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfullnesse and tremblinge are come vpon me, and an horrible drede hath overwelmed me. And I syde: O that I had wynges like a doue, that I might flie somewhere, and be at rest. Lo, then wolde I get me awaye farre of, and remayne in the wildernesse. Sela. I wolde, make haist to escape, from the stormy wynde and tempest. Destroie their tongues (o LORDE) and deuyde them, for I see vnrighteousnes a stryfe in y cite. This goeth daie and night aboute the walles, myschefe and yce are in the mynddest of it. Wickednesse is therin, disaste and gyle go not out of hir stretes. Yf it were myne enemie that reuyled me, I coude beare it: or yf one that ought me euell will dyd threaten me, I wolde hyde myselfe from him. But it is thou my companyon, * my gyde and myne owne familier fréde. We had sweete and secrete communicacion together, and louungly walked we together in y house of God.

B Let death come hastely vpon them, and let them go downe quick in to hell, for wickednes is amonge them in their dwellinges. As for me, I will call vnto God, and the LORDE shall helpe me. In the euening, mornyng and at noone daie wil I moune and compayne: and he shall heare my voyce.

It is he that delyuereth my soule in peace, from them that laye waite for me: for they are many agaynst me. Yee euens God that endureth for euer, shal heare me, and brynge them downe. Sela.

For they wil not turne: and why? they feare not God. Yee they laye hondes vpon such as be at peace with him, and so thei breake his coynaut. Their mouthes are softer then butter, * yet hauie they batell in their mynde: their wordes are smoothere then oyle, and yet be they very swerdres. * O cast thy burthen (or care) vpon the LORDE, he shal norish the, and not leaue the righteous in vnquietnesse. But as for them, thou (o God) shal cast them downe in to the pitte of destrucccon. The bloudthrustre and diseatfull shal not lyue out half their daies. Neuerthelesse my trust is in the.

Be mercifull vnto me (o God) for men wil treade me downe: they are daylie fightinge a troublinge me. Myne enemies treade me daylie vnder their fete, for they be many, y proudly fight agaynst me. Neuerthelesse, whil I am afrayed, I put my trust in the. I wil comforte my self in Gods worde, yee I wil hope in God, and not feare: What can felsh then do vnto me?

They vexe me daylie in my wordes: all y they ymagin, is to do me euell. They holde alltogether, a kepe them selues close: they marck my steppes, how they maye catch my soule. But in vayne, for it shal escape the: and why? thou (o God) in thy displeasure shal cast downe soch people. Thou tellest my flittinges, thou puttest my teares in thy botell, and nombrest them. When so euers I call vpon the, myne enemies are put to flight: whereby I knowe, that thou art my God. In Gods worde wil I reioyse, in the LORDES worde wil I comforte me. Yee in God do I trust, a am not afrayed: what ca man ther doe vnto me? Vnto the (o God) wil I paye my vowes, vnto y wil I gene thakes a praye. For thou hast delyuered my soule fro death, a my fete fro fallinge, y I maye walke before God in y light of y lyyunge.

The lvi. A psalm of David.

Be mercifull vnto me (o God) be mercifull vnto me, for my soule trutheth in y: "ç vnder the shadowe of thy wynge shall be my refuge, vntill wickednesse be ouerpast.

I call vnto God ÿ most hyest, euë ÿ God ÿ shall helpe me vp agayne. He shal sende fro heauen, ç saue me fro the reprome of that wolde swalowe me vp. Sela.

This shal God sende, for his mercy and faithfulnesse sake. I lye with my soule amonge the cruell lyons: euen amonge the children of men, whose tethe are speares and arowes, and their tonge a sharpe swerde.

Set vp thy self (o God) aboue the heauës, and thy glory above all the earth. They haue layed a nett for my fete, ç pressed downe my soule: they haue dydgy a pyt before me, and are fallen in to it them selues.

Sela. 4 My hert is ready (o God) my hert is ready, to syngne and geue prayse. Awake (o my glory) awake lute and harpe, I my self wil awake right early. I wil geue thekes vnto the (o LORDE) amonge the people, I wil syngne prayses vnto the amonge the Heithë. 5 For ÿ greatnesse of thy mercy reacheth vnto the heauëns, and thy faithfulnesse vnto the cloudes. Set vp thy self (o God) aboue the heauës, ÿ thy glory above all ÿ earth.

The lvii. A psalm of David.

Ye youre myndes be vpon righteousnesse in dede, then iudge the thinge that is right, o ye sonnes of men. But ye ymagin myschefe in youre hertes, and youre bondes deal with wickednesse. The vnngodly are frowarde, euë from their mothers woube: as soone as they be borne, they go astray ç speake lyes. They are as furious as the serpent, 4 euen like the deafe Adder that stoppeth hir cares. That she shulde not heare the voyce of the charmer, charme he neuer so wysely. Breake their teth (o God) in their mouthes, smyte the chaft bones of the lyons whelpes in sonder, o LORDE.

That they maye fall awaye, like water ÿ runneth a pace: and that when they shote their arowes, they maye be brokë. Let ÿ cósumne awaye like a snaile, ç like the vn-tymely frute of a woman, and let them not se

Or euer youre thornes be sharpe, the wrath shall take them awaye quycke, like a stormy wynde. 4 The righteous shal rejoyse when he seyth the vengeaunce, and shal wash his fete in the bloude of the vnngodly. So that men shal saye: verely, there is a wararde for ÿ righteous: doubtles, there is a God that iudgeth the earth.

The lviii. A psalm of David.

Delyuer me fro myne enemies (o my ÿ God) ç defende me frõ ÿ ryse vp agaynst me. O delyuer me frõ the wicked doers, ç saue me frõ the bloudthurstie më. For lo, they lye waytinge for my soule: ÿ mightie me are gathered together against me, with out eny offence or faute of me, o LORDE. They rûne ç prepare the selues, with out my faute: Arise, come thou helpe me, ç beholde. Stódë vp o LORDE God of hoostes, thou God of Israel, to vyset all Heithen: be not mercifull vnto the ÿ offende of malicious wickednesse. Sela. 4 Let the go to ç fro, ç runne aboute the cite youlling like dogges. Beholde, they speake (agaynst me) with their mouth, swerdes are vnder their lipses, for who reprooueth the? 6 But thou (o LORDE) shalt haue them in derision, thou shalt laugh all Heithë to scorne. My strëgh do I ascrybe vnto the, for thou (o God) art my defender. God sheweth me his goodnesse plenteously, God letteth me se my desyre vpò myne enemies. Slaye the not, lest my people forget it: but scatre the abrode with thy power ç put the downe, o LORDE our defence. For ÿ synne of their mouth, for the wordes of their lipses, ç because of their pryde, let the be taken: ç why? their preachinge is of cursyng ç lyes. Còsumne them in thy wrath, còsumne ÿ they maye perish, ç knowe ÿ it is God, which ruleth in Iacob and in all the worlde. Sela. 4 Let the go to ç fro, ç rûne aboute the cite, youlling like dogges. Let the runne here ç there for meate, and grudge when they haue not ynoough. As for me, I wil synge of thy power, ad praye thy mercy betynes in the mornynge: for thou art my defence and refuge in the tyme of my trouble.

Vnto the (o my strength) wil I syngfe, for thou (o God) art my defence, and my mercifull God.

Thou hast shewed thy people heny thinges, thou hast geuen vs a drynke off wyne, ye we slobre withal. Yet hast thou geuen a toké soe as feare the, ye they maye cast it vp in ye treuth. Sela. That thy beloued might be deluyered, helpe them with ye right hande, and heare me. God hath spokyn in his Sacuary (which thinge re-joyseth me) I wil deuyde Siché, a mete out the valley of Suchoth. Galaad is myne, Massases is myne, Ephraim is the strength of mye heade, Juda is my captayne. Moab is my washpotte, ouer Edom wil I stretch out my shue, Philistea shall be gla of me. Who will lede me in to the stronge cite? Who will bringe me in to Edom? Shalt not thou do it, o God, thou hast cast vs out: thou God, ye weent not out with oure hoostes? O be thou oure helpe in trouble, for yeayne is the helpe of man. Thorow God we shal do greate actes, for it is he that shal tradc downe oure enemies.

A psalm of David.

H AYRE my crieng (o God) geue hede vnto my prayer. From the endes of ye earth wil I call vnto the, whene my herte is in trouble: Oh set me vp vp an hye rocke. For thou art my hope, a stronge tower for me agaynst the enemie. I will dwell in thy tabernacle for euere, that I maye be safe vnder the couerynge of thy wynges. Sela. For thou (o LORDE) hast herde my desyres, thou hast geuen an heretage vnto those that feare thy name. Thou shalt grante the kyngge a lode, that his yeares maye endure thorow out all generacions. That he maye dwell before God for euere: Oh let thy louynge merci faithfulness preserve him. So will I allwaye syng prayses vnto thy name, y I maye daylie perfourme my vowes.

A psalm of David.

MY soule waytheth only vpon God, for of him commeth my helpe. He only is my stréght, my saluacion, my defence, so y I shal not greatly fall. How longe wil ye ymagin myschefe agaynst euery man? ye shal be slayne all y sorte of you: yee as a totrinenge wall shal ye be, a like a broken hedge. Their deuyce is only how to put him out, their delyte is i lyes: they geue good wordes with their mouth but curse with their herte. Sela. Neuer-theles, my soule abydeth only vpon God, for he is my God. He only is my stréght, my saluacion, my defence: so y I shal not fall. In God is my health, my glory, my might, in God is my trust. O put youre trust in him allwaye (ye people) pour out youre hertes before him, for God is oure hope. Sela. As for men, they are but yeayne, me are disceato-ful: vp the weightes they are al together lightener then vanite it self. O trust not in wronge robbery, geue not youre selues vnto vanite: yf riches increase, set not youre herte vpon them. God spake once a worde, twysye haue I herde the same: that power belongeth vnto God. That thou LORDE art mercifull, a that thou rewardes euery man accordyng to his works.

Psalm 125

A psalm of David.

O GOD, thou art my God: early wil I a seke the. My soule thursteth for the, my flesh longeth after the in a bäre a drie lode, where no water is. The 143. Psalm.

In the, o LORDE, is my trust, a neuer be put to cufcio, but rydde me a deliuyer me thorrow thy rightouynes: encline thine eare vnto me, a helpe me. Be thou my stronge holde (where vnto I maye allwaye fie) thou that hast promised to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence a my castell. Deliuyer me (o my God) out of a hede of the vngodly, out of the hande of the vnrightouges a cruell man. For thou (o LORDE God)

A psalm of Salomon.

G EUE the kinge thy judgmēt (o God) and thy rightuounesse vnto the kynges soune. That he maye gouerne thy people accordinge vnto right, and defende thy poore. That the mountaynes maye bryngye peace, and the little hilles rightuounes vnto the people. He shall kepe the symple folke by their right, defende the childre of the poore, and punysh the wrongeouse doer.

"Thou shalt be feared as longe as þ Sonne and the Moone endureth, from one generacion to another. He shall come downe like the rayne in to a flle of woll, and like the dropsse that water þ earth. In his tyme shall rightuounes florishe, yee and abundance of peace, so longe as the Moone endureth.

"His dominion shalbe from the one see to the other, and from the flonde vnto the worldes ende. They that dwell in the wildernes, shal knele before him, þ his enemies shal lick the dust. "The kynges of the see and of the Iles shal bryngye presents, þ kynges of Araby þ Saba shal offer giffes. All kynges shal worshiphe him, þ all Heithē shal doe him seruyce. For he shal deliuere the poore whē he crieth, þ the nedē þ hath no helpe. He shall be favorable to the symple þ poore, he shal preserue the soules of sooch as be in adversite. He shall deliuere their soules from extortion þ wronge, þ deare shal their bloude be in his sight. He shal lyue, þ vnto him shalbe genē of þ golde of Arabia: Prayer shal be made euer vnto him, þ daylie shal he be prayed. There shalbe an heape of corne in the earth hye vpon the hilles, his frute shal shake like Libanus, þ shal be grene in the cite, like grassse vpō the earth. His name shal endure for euer, his name shal remayne vnder the sonne amonge the posterites, which shal be blessed thorow him, þ all the Heithēn shal prayse him. Blessed be the LORDE God, euyn the God of Israel, which only doth wōderous things. And blessed be the name of his majesty for euer, and all londes be fulfilled with his glory. Amen, Amen.

Psalm 119.

A psalm of Asaph

GOD, wherfore doest thou cast vs so cleane awaye? why is thy wrath so hote agaynst thy shepe of thy pasture? O thyke vpon thy congregacion, whom thou hast purchased fro the begynyng: the staffe of thine inheritance, whom thou hast redeemed, even this hill of Sion wherein thou dwellest. Treade vpon them with thy fete, & cast them downe to the grounde, for the enemie hath destroyed alltogether in the Sactuary. Thy aduersaries roare in thy houses, & set vp their banners for tokens. Men maye se the axes glister above, like as those that heue in the wod. They cutt downe all the sylinge worke of thy Sactuary with bylles & axes. They haue set fyre vpon thy Sactuary, they haue defiled dwellynge place of thy name, euë vnto the groiide. Yee they saye in their herets: Let vs spoyle this all together, thus haue they bent vp all the houses of God in the londe. We seoure tokens nomore, there is not one prophet more, no not one that understondeth enymore. Oh God, how loye shal the aduersary do this dishonoure? how loye shal the enemie blaspheme thy name? for euer? Why withdrawest thou thine honde? why pluckest thou not thy right hode out of thy bosome, to consume thine enemies? But God is my kyngge of olde, the helpe that is done vpon earth he doth it himself. Thou deuydest, see thorow thy power, thou breakest the heads of the dragos in the waters.

Thou smyteth the heads of Leuiathan in peeces, genest him to be meate for the people in the wildernes. Thou dygest vp welles & brokes, thou dryest vp mightie waters. The daye is thyne, the night is thine: thou hast prepared the lightes & the Sonne. Thou hast set all borders of the earth, thou hast made both Sommer & wynter. Remembre this (o LORDE) how the enemie rebuketh, how the foolish people blaspheme thy name. O deluyer not the soule of thy turtell done vnto the beestes, & forget not the congregation of the poore for euer. Loke vpon the couenaut, for the daceke houses of the earth.

my trust in the LORDE God, and to speake of all thy workes.

are full of wickedness. O let not the symple go awaye ashamed, for the poore and nedy geue prayses vnto thy name. Arse (o God) seyne thy name is so nye, we will tell of thy wonderous works. When I maye get a convenient tyme, I shall judge accordinge vnto right. The earth is weake all that is therin, but I beare vp hir pilers. Sela.

I sayde vnto the maddle people: deale not so madly, to the vngodly: set not vp youre horses. Set not vp youre horses an hye, speake not with a stiff necke. For promoci commeth nether from the east ner from the west, ner yet fro the wyldermesse. And why? God is the judge: he putteth downe one and setteth vp another. For in the honde of the LORDE there is a cuppe full of stronge wyne, he poureth out of the same: As for the dregges therof, all vngodly of the earth shall drinke them, sucke them out. But I will talke of the God of Iacob, prayse him for euer. All the hones of the vngodly will I breake, ye horns of the righteous shalbe exalted.

The 1yrbi. A psalme of Asaph.

IN Iuda is God knowne, his name is greate in Israel. At Salem is his tabernacle, his dwellinge in Sion. There breaketh he the arowes of the bowe, y shyle, the swerde and the whole battayll.

Sela. Thou art of more honour might the hilles of robbers. The proude shalbe robed slepe their slepe, mightie shalbe able to do nothinge with their hodes. Whch thou rebukest them (o God of Iacob) both the charrettes horsmen shal fall on sleepe. Thou art feareful, for who maye abyde in thy sight, when thou art angrie? When thou lattest thy judgment be herde from heaven, the ethr trembleth is still. Yee when God arayseth to geue judgment, to helpe all them that be in aduersite vpon earth.

When thou punyshest one man, he must knowlege, that thou art redy to punysh other. Loke what ye promyse vnto the LORDE your God, se that ye kepe it, all ye that be roudde aboute him: brynge presentes vnto him ought to be feared. Which taketh awaye the breath of prynces, is wonderfull amoue the kynges of the earth.

The 1yrbi. A psalme of Asaph.

I CRIED vnto God with my voyce, yee even vnto God cried I with my voyce, he herde me. In the tyme of my troubles I sought the LORDE, I helde vp my hondes vnto him in the night season, for my soule refused all other comforte. When I was in heuynesse, I thought vp God: whch my hert was vexed, then dyd I speake.

Sela. Thou heldest myne eyes wakynge, I was so feble, that I coude not speake. Then remembre I the tymes of olde, the yeaeres that were past. I called to remembraunce my songe in the night, I commoned with myne owne herte, and sought out my sprete. Wil the LORDE cast out for euer?

Wil he be nomore intreated? Is his mercy cleane gone? Is his promyse come vitterly to an ende for euermore? Hath the LORDE forgotten to be gracious? Or, hath he shut vp his louynge kyndnesse in displeasure?

Sela. At the last I came to this poynpte, that I thought: O why art thou so foolish? the right honde of the most hyest can chaungne all. Therfore wil I remembre the workes of the LORDE, and call to mynnde thy wonders of olde tymes. I wil speake of all thy workes, and my talkynge shalbe of thy doinges.

Thy waye (o God) is holy, who is so greate mightie as God? Thou art the God, that doth wonders, thou hast declared thy power amonge the people. Thou with thine arme hast deluyered thy people, euen the sonsne of Iacob and Ioseph. Sela. The waters sawe (o God) waters sawe, were afraied: depths were mowed. The thicke cloudes poure out water, cloudes thodelered, and thy arowes wente abrode. Thy thonder was herde rounde aboute, the lighteninges shone vpon the grounde, the earth was mowed and shoke withall. Thy waye was in the see, and thy pathes in the greate waters, yet coude no man knowe thy fotesteppes. Thou leddest thy people like a flocke of shepe, by the honde of Moses and Aaron.

HEARE my lawe (o my people) encline your earnes vnto y wordes of my mouth.

"I wil open my mouth in parables, and speake of thinges of olde. Which we haue herde and knowe, and soch as oure fathers haue tolde vs. That we shulde not hyde them from the children of the generacions to come: but to shewe the honoure of the LORDE, his might and wonderfull workes that he hath done. He made a covenaut with Iacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he comauended oure forefathers to teach their children. That their posterite might knowe it, and the children which were yet vnborne.

To the intent y when they came vp, they might shewe their children the same. That they also might put their trust in God, not to forget what he had done, but to kepe his comauendementes. And not to be as their forefathers, a frowarde and ouertharte generacion, a generacion that set not their herte a right, and whose sprete was not true towarde God. Like as the children of Ephraim, which byynge harnessed and carienge bowes, turned them selues backe in the tyme of battayll. They kepe not the covenaut of God, that wolde not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he had done, and the wonderfull workes that he had shewed for them. Maruells thinges dyd he in the sight of their fathers in the londe of Egipte, euen in the selde of Zaan. He deuoyd the see and let them go thorow it, and made the waters to stonde like a wall. In the daye tyme he led them with a cloude, and all the night thorow with a light of fyre. He cloude the hard rockes in the wildernesse, and gaue them dryuke therof, as it had bene out of the greate deapth. He brought waters out of the stony rocke, so that they gusshed out like the ryuers. Yet for all this they synned agaynst him, and prowoked the most hyest in the wildernesse. They tempted God in their hertes, and requered meate for their lust. For they spake agaynst God and sayde: Yee yee, God shal prepare a table in the wyldernesse, shall he? Lo, he smote the stony rocke, that the watery streames gusshed out, and the streames flowed withall: but howe can he geue bred and prowde fleshe for his people? When the LORDE herde this, he was wroth: so the fyre was kyndled in Iacob, and heuy displeasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their trust in his helpe. So he commanded the cloudes aboue, and opened the dores of heauen. He rayned downe Manna vpou them for to eate, and gaue them bred from heauen. Then ate they angels fode, for he sent them maceate yonge. He cause the east wynde to blowe vnder the heauen, and thowre his power he brought in the south wynde. He made fleshe to rayne vpon them as thicke as dust, and fethered foules like the sonde of y see. He let it fall amoge their têtes rode aboute their habitacios. So they ate were fylded, for he gaue them owne desire. They were not dispoyned of their lust. But whye meate was yet in theyr mouthes: The heuy wrath of God came vpou the, slewe the weltest of the, smote downe the chosen men of Israel. But for all this they synned yet more, and beleued not his woderous worke. Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanite, and sodenly their yeares were gone. When he slewe them, they sought him, and turnd them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their socoure, and that the hye God was their redeemer. Neuerthelesse, they dyd but flater him in their mouthes, and dissembled with him in their tonges. For their herte was not whole with him, nether continued they in his covenaut. But he was so mercifull, that he forgau their mysedees, and destroyed them not: Yee many a tyme turned he his wrath awaye, and wolde not suffre his whole displeasure to aryse. For he considered y they were but fleshe: euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and commeth not agayne. O howe oft hau they greuied him in the wildernesse? How many a tyme hau they prowoked him in the deserte? They turned backe a tempted God, and mowed the holy one in Israel. They thought not of his hâde, in y daye when he deliuered them from the hande of y enemie. How he had wrought his miracles in Egipte, and his woders in the londe of Zoon. How he turned their waters in to bloude, so that they might not drynke of the ryuers. How he sent lyse amonge them, to eate them vp, and fрогges to destroye them. How he gaued their frutes vnto the catirpillar, and their laboure vnto the greshopper. When he bett downe their vynyards with hayle stones, and their Molbery trees with the frost. How he smote their catell with haylestones, and their flockes with hote thöder boltes. How he sent vpon them y furiousnesse of his wrath, anger and displeasure: with trouble and fallinge in of euel angels. "When he made a waye to his fearfull indignacion, and spared not their soules from death, yee and gaue their catell ouer to the pestilence. When he smote all the firstborne in Egipte, the most principall and mightiest in y dwellings of Ham.

But as for his owne people, he led them forth like shepe, and caried them in the wylderness like a flocke. He brought them out safely, that they shulde not feare, and ouerwhelmed their enemies with the see. He carried them vnto the borders of his Sanctuary: euen in to this hill, which he purchase with his right hande. "He dyed cast out the Heithen before them, caused their londe to be deuyed amonge them for an heretage, and made y tribes of Israel to dwell in their têtes. For all this they tempted and displeased the most hye God, and kepte not his covenant. But turned their backes and fell awaye like their forefathers, startinge asyle like a broken bowe. And so they greued him with their hie places, gproved him with their ymages. When God herde this, he was wroth, and toke sore displeasure at Israel. So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Silo, euen his habitacion wherein he dwelt amonge men. "He deliuered their power in to captiuyte, and their glory in to the enemies hõde. He gaue his people ouer in to the swerde, for he was wroth with his heretage.

The fyre consumed their yonge men, and their maydcês were not geuen to mariage.

Their prestes were slayne with the swerde, and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacion. So the LORDE awaked as one out of slepe, and like a giaunte refreshed with wyne. "He smote his enemies in y hynder partes, and put them to a perpetuall shame. He refused the tabernacle of Ioseph, and chose not the trybe of Ephraim. Neuertheless, he chose y trybe of Iuda, eë the hill of Sion which he loued. "And there he byulded his temple on hye, and layed y foun- dacion of it like y grounde, that it might perpetuallly endure. "He chose David also his seruàit, and toke him ayyaine from the shepe foldes. As he was followinge the yowes greate with yonge, he toke him, that he might fede Iacob his people, and Israel his heritance. So he fed them with a faithfull and true hert, and ruled them with all y diligence of his power.

O GOD, y Heithen are fallen in to thine heretage: 'thy holy temple have they defyled, and made Jerusalem an heape of stones. "The deed bodies of thy seruauntes haue they geuen vnto y foules of the ayre to be deouered, and the flesh of thy saynetes vnto y beasts of the londe. Their bloude have they shed like water on euery syde of Ieru-salem, and there was no ma to burie them. "We are become an open shame vnto oure enemies, a very scorne and derision vnto them that are rounde aboue vs.

LORDE, how longe wilt thou be angrie? shall thy gelousy burne like fyre for euer? Poure out thy indignacion vpon the Heithen that knowe the not, and vpon the kyngdomes that call not vpon thy name.

For they haue deouered Iacob, and layed waiste his dwellinge place. "O remembre not oure olde synnes, but haue mercy vpon (g that soone) for we are come to create mystery.

Helpe vs (o God oure Sauyoure) for y glory of thy name: o deliuyer vs, o forgeue vs oure synnes for thy names sake. Wherfore shall y Heithê saye: where is now their God? O let the vengeance of thy seruauntes bloude that is shed, be openly shewed vpon the Heithê in oure sight. O let the soroufull sighinge of the presoners come before the, and acordenge Psalm 89.  A psalm of Asaph.

SYNGE merely vnto God which is oure streight, make a cheerful noyse vnto y God of Iacob. Take y psalme, brynghe hither the tabret, the mery harpe y lute. Blowe vp the tröpettes in the new Moone, vpon oure solëptne feast dayes. For this is the vse in Israel, y a lawe of the God of Iacob.

This he ordered in Joseph for a testimony, when he came out of Egipte, y had herde a straunge langage. When he eased his shulder from the burtht, y when his hondes were deleyuered frö the pottes. Whö thou caldest vpon me in trouble, I helped y herde the, what tymne as the storme fell vpö the, I prouned the also at the water of strife. Sela.

Heare o my people, for I assure the o Israel, yf thou wilt herken vnto me: There shal no straunge God be in the, nether shalt thou worship euery other God. I am the LORDE thy God, which brought the out of the lode of Egipte: opö thy mouth wyde, y I shal fyll it. But my people wolde not heare my voyce, y Israel wolde not obeye me. So I gaue the vp vnto their owne hertes lust, y let the folowe their owne ymagination. O y my people wolde obeye me, for yf Israel wolde walke in my wayes, I shulde soone put downe their enemies, y turne myne hōde against their aduersaries. The hāters of y LORDE shulde mysse Israel, but their tymne shulde endure for euer. He shulde fede them with the fynest wheate floure, y satisfie them with hony out of the stony rocke.

The 89.  A psalm of Asaph.

GOD stondeth in the congregacion of the goddes, y is a judge amongst the judges. "How longe wil ye geue wröge judgment, y accepte the personnes of the vngodly? Sela. Defende the poore y fatherlesse, se that soch as be in nede y necessite hane right. Deleyuer the outcaste y poore," y saue hym from the hande of the vngodly. Neuertheless, they wil not be lerned y vnderstonde, but walke on still in darcknesse: theryfore must all the fondacions of the londe be moued. I haue sayde: ye are goddes, ye all are the childre of thy most hyst. But ye shall dye like men, fall like one of the tyrantaotes. Aryse (o God) judge thou the earth, for all Heithen are thine by enheritaunce.

The Isrij. A psalme of Asaph.

But do thou to them as vnto the Madianites, vnto Sisera and vnto Iabin by broke of Cyson. Which perished at Endor, became as the doge of thy earth. Make their prynces like Oreb and Zeeb: Yee make all their prynces like Zeeba and Salmana.

Which saye: we wil haue the houses of God in possession. O my God, make them like vnto a whelle, and as the stubble before the wynde. Like as a fyre that burneth vp the wodd, as the flame that consumeth the mountaynes. Persecute them euen so with thy tempest, make them arrayed with thy storme. Make their faces ashamed (o LORDE) they maye seke thy name. Let the be cofounded vexed euer more: Let the be put to shame perish. That they maye knowe, that thou art alone, that thy name is the LORDE, and that thou only art the most hyest over all the earth.

\[\text{HOW amiable are thy dwelliches, thou LORDE of hoostes? My soule hath a desire longinge for thy courte of thy LORDE, my hert my flesh reloyse in thy lyuynge God. For the sparowe hath founde hir an house, the swalowe a nest, where she maye laye hir} \]

Which goinge thorow the vale of mysery, vse it for a well, and the poles are fyllen with water. They goe from strength to strength and so the God of Gods appeareth vnto the in Sion. O LORDE God of hoostes, heare my prayer: herken o God of Jacob.

Beholde o God oure defence, loke vpon the face of thyne anointed. For one daye in thy courte is better then a thousande: I had rather be a dore keper in the house of my God, then to dwell in the tentes of the vn godly. For the LORDE God is a light and defence, the LORDE wil gene grace worshippe, and no good thinge shal he wilde from them, that lyue a godlye life. O LORDE God of hoostes, blessed is the man, putteth his trust in the.

The Isrij. A psalme of the children of Corah.

\[\text{LORDE, thou barest a lounge vnto thy londe, thou didest bringe agayne the captiuyte of Iacob. Thou diddest forgene the offence of thy people, and couerdest all their synnes. Sela.} \]

Thou tokest awaye all thy displeasure, turnedest thy selfe from thy wrothful indignation. Turne vs then (o Godoure Saniuore) let thine anger cease from vs. Wilt thou be displeased at vs for euer? wilt thou stretch out thy wrath from one generation to another? Wilt thou not turne agayne, quycken vs, that thy people maye reloyse in the?

I wil herken what the LORDE God wil saie, for he shall speake peace vnto his people and to his sayntes, that they turne not them selues vnto foolishnesse. For his salucion is nye them that feare him, so that glory shall dwell in our londe. Mercy and trueth are met together, rightuousnesse and peace kysses ech other. Trueth shall ryse out of thy earth, and rightuousnesse shall loke downe from heauen. And why? the LORDE shall shewe louinge kyndnesse, and oure londe shall geue hir encrease. Rightuousnesse shall goe before him, and prepare the waye for his commynge.

Owe downe thine eare (o LORDE) and heare me, for I am clothed and poore. O kepe my soule, for I am holy: my God, helpe thy servaunt that putteth his trust in thee. Be mercifull vnto me (o LORDE) for I call daylie vpon thee. Coforme the soule of thy servaunt, for vnto the (o LORDE) do I lift vp my soule. For thou LORDE art good and gracious, of greate mercy vnto all them that call vpon thee. Geue eare LORDE vnto my prayer, and pondre my humble desyre. In the tyme of my trouble I call vpon thee, for thou hearest me. Amonge the goddes there is none like the o LORDE, there is not one that ca do as thou doest. All naciones whom thou hast made, shall come and worship the o LORDE, and shal glorifie thy name. For thou art greate, thou doest wondrful thinges, thou art God alone. Lede me in thy waye (o LORDE) that I maye walke in thy truth: O let my hert delyte in fearynge thy name. I thanke the o LORDE my God, wil prayse thy name for euer. For greate is thy mercy toward me, thou hast delivered my soule from thy nethermost hell. O God the proude are rysen against me, and the cogregation of thy mightie sekeith after my soule, set not before their eyes. But thou (o LORDE God) art full of compassion and mercy, longe suffrynge, greate in goodnesse thy truth. O turne the then vnto me, haue mercy vpó me: geue thy strength vnto thy servaunt, helpe the sonne of thy handmayde. Shewe some toké vpon me for good, that they which hate me, maye se it and be ashamed: because thou LORDE hast helped me, comforted me.

The lxxviii. A psalme of the children of Corah.

Hir foundacions are vpó the holy hilles: the LORDE loueth the gates of Sion more, the all dwellinges of Iacob. Very excellent thinges are spoake of, thou cite of God. Sela. I wil thinke vpó Rahab Babili, so that they shal knowe me: Yee the Philistynes also they of Tyre with the Morians. Lo, there was he borne. And of Sion it shalbe reported, that he was borne in her, even the most hyest which hath buryled her. The LORDE shall cause it be preached written amonge the people, that he was borne there. Sela. Therefore the dwellinges of all syngers dammers is in the.

The lxxviiij. A psalme of the children of Corah.

LORDE God my Sauyoure, I crie a dasye at night before the: Oh let my prayer entre in to thy presence, encline thine eare vnto my callynge. For my soule is full of trouble, my life draweth nye vnto hell. I am counted as one of the that go downe vnto the pytte, I am euë as a mă that hath no streight. Fre amoge the deed, like vnto the y lye in the graue, which be out of remembraunce, and are cutt awaye from thy honde. Thou hast layed me in the lowest pytte, in darknesse and in the depe. Thy indignacion lieth hard vpone me, and thou vexest me with all thy floudes. Sela. Thou hast put awaye myne ac quaintance farre fro me, made me to be abhorréd of them: I am so fast in preson, that I can not get forth.

My sight fayleth for very trouble: LORDE, I call daylie vpó the, and strecht out my hondes vnto the. Doest thou shewe wonders amonge the deed? Can the physiciās rayse vpó them agayne, that they maye prayse the? Maye thy louunge kyndnes be shewed in the graue, or thy faithfulness in destruccion? Maye thy wondorous workes be knowne in the darce, or thy righteousnes in the londe where all thinges are forgote?

to the I crie (o LORDE) and early cometh my prayer before the. LORDE, why puttest thou awaye my soule? Wherfore hyest thou thy face fro me? My strength is gone for very sorrow and misery, with fearfulness do I bare thy burthenes. Thy wrothfull displeasure goeth ouer me, the feare of the oppresseth me. They come rounde aboute me daylie like water, and compase me together on euer syde. My louers and fredes hast thou put awaye fro me, and turned awaye myne acquantancce.

The lxxviiij. A psalme of Ethan the Eshrahite.

My songe shall be allwaye of the louunge kyndnesse of the LORDE, with my mouth wil I euer be shewing thy faithfulness from one generation to another. For I haue sayde: mercy shal be set vp for euer, thy faithfulness shalt thou stablish in the heauens. * I haue made a couenaunt with my chosen, I haue sworn vp to Dauid my seruaunt. Thy sede wil I stablish for euer, and set vp thy Trone from one generation to another. Sela.

O LORDE, the very heauens shall prayse thy wondrous worke, * yee a thy faithfulness in thy congregacion of the sayntes. For who is he amonge the cloudes, that maye be copared vnto the LORDE? * Yee what is he amonge the goddes, that is like vnto the LORDE? God is greatly to be feared in the counseill of the sayntes, a to be had in reuerence of all that are aboute him. O LORDE God of hoostes, who is like vnto the in power? thy truth is rounde aboute the. * Thou rulst the pryde of the se, thou stillest the wawes therof, whiche they arise. Thou breakest the proude, like one that is wounded, thou scatrest thine enemies abrode with thy mightie arme. The heauens are thine, the earth is thine: thou hast layed the foundaciō of the roūde worlde and all that therin is. Thou hast made the north and the south, Tabor and Hermon shal reioyse in thy name. Thou hast a mightie arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy right hande. Righteousnes and equite is the habitation of thy seate, mercy and trueth go before thy face. Blessed is the people (o LORDE) that can reioyse in the, and walketh in the light of thy countenaunce. Their delite is in thy name all the daye longe, and thorow thy riightousnesse they shalbe exalted. For thou art the glory of their strength, a thorow thy fauoure shalt thou lift vp our hornes. * The LORDE is our defence, and the holy one of Israel is our kyng. Thou spakest somtyme in visīō vnto thy sayntes, and saydest: I haue layed helpe vpon one that is mightie, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people. I haue founde Dauid my seruaunt, with my holy oyle haue I anoynted him. My honde shal holde him fast, and my arme shal strengthe him. The enemie shal not overcomne him, and the sonne of wickednesse shal not hurt him. I shal smyte downe his foes before his face, and plage them that hate him.

My trueth also a my mercy shalbe with him, and in my name shal his horne be exalted. I wil set his honde in the see, * and his right honde in the floudes. He shal call me: thou art my father, my God, and the strength of my saluacion. And I wil make him my firstborne, hyer then the kinges of the earth.

My mercy wil I kepe for him for euermore, and my couenaunt shall stonde fast with him. His sede wil I make to endure for euer, yee and his Trone as the dayes of heauen. * But yf his childrē forsoke my lawe, and walke not in my iudgmentes. Yf they breake myne ordinances, and kepe not my commandemente. I wil vsyet their offences with the roode, and their synnes with scourges. Neuertheless, my louynge kyndnesse wil I not ytterly take from him, nor suffre my trueth to fayle. My couenaunt wil I not breake, ner disanulle the thinge a is gone out of my lippes. I haue sworn once by my holynesse, that I wil not fayle Dauid. His sede shal endure for euer, and his seate also like as the Sonne before me. * He shal stonde fast for euermore as the Moone, and as the faithfull witnesse in heauen.

Sela. But nowe thou forsakest and abhorrest thyne anoynted, and art displeased at him. Thou hast turned backe the couenaunt of thy seruaunt, and cast his crowne to the grounde. Thou hast ouer throwne all his hedges, * and brokē downe his stronge holds. Al they that go by, spoyle him, he is become a rebuke vnto his neibours. Thou settest vp the right hande of his enemies, and makest all his aduersaries to reioyse. Thou hast taken awaye the strengthe of his swerde, and greest him not victory in the battayll. Thou hast put out his glory, and cast his Trone downe to the grounde. The dayes of his youth hast thou shortened, and couered him with dishonoure. Sela.

LORDE, how longe wilt thou hyde thy self? For euer? shal thy wrath brente like fyre? O remembre how shorte my tyme is, hast thou made all men for naught? * What man is he that lyueth, and shal not se death?

Maye a mā delaundrye his owne soule from the honde of hell? Sela.

LORDE, where are thy olde louynge kyndnesses, which thou swordest vnto Dauid in thy trueth? Remembre LORDE the renbuke that thy multituide of the people do vnto thy seruauntes, how I haue borne it in my bosome. Wherewith thine enemies blasphem the, slasher thy footesteppe of thy anointed. Thanks be to the LORDE for euermore: Amen, Amen.

The lxxixth. Psalme.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.

LORDE, thou art oure refuge from one generacion to another. Before the mountaynes were brought forth, or euere the earth the worlde were made, thou art God from euerslasting and worlde with out ende. Thou turnest man to destruccion, Agayne, thou sayest: come agayne ye children of men. For a thousande yeares in thy sight are but as yestreday that is past, and like as it were a night watch.

As soone as thou scarest them, they are euens as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly like the grasse. In the mornynge it is greene and groweth vp, but in the euenyng it is cutt downe and wythered. For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, and are afrayed at thy wrothfull indignacion. Thou settest oure miszeddes before the, and oure secrete synnes in the light of thy countenaunce. For when thou art angrie, all oure dayes are gone, we bryenge oure yeares to an ende, as it were a tayle that is tolde. The dayes of oure age are iiij. score yeares & ten: though men be so stronge that they come to iiiij. score yeares, yet is their strength then but laboure and sorowe: so soone passeth it awaye, we are gone. But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, thy fearfull terrible displeasure? O teach vs to nombre oure dayes, that we maye applie oure hertes vnto wysdom.

Turne the agayne (o LORDE) at the last, and be gracions vnto thy seruauntes. O satisfie vs with thy mercy, and that soone: so shal we reioyse and be glad all the dayes of oure life. Comforte vs agayne, now after the tyme that thou hast agayne vs, and for the yeares wherein we haue suffred adversitie.

Shewe thy seruauntes thy worke, & their children thy glory. And the glorious maiesty of the LORDE oure God be vpon vs: O prosper thou the worke of oure hondes vpon vs, O prosper thou oure hondy worke.

The rci. Psalme.

WHO so dwelleth vnder thy defence of the most hyest, & abydeth vnder thy shadowe of thy allmightie: He shall saye vnto thy LORDE: O my hope, & my stronge holde, my God, in whom I will trust. For he shal deluere the frō the snare of the hunter, & frō the noysome pestilence. He shall couer the vnder his wynges, that thou mayest be safe vnder his fethers: his faithfullnesse and trueth shall be thy shylde and buckler. So shall not thou shal be aafrayed for eny bugges by night, nor for arowe that flyeth by daye.

For the pestileence that crepeth in thy darknesse, ner for the sicknesse thy destroyeth in the noone daye. A thousande shal fall byside the, and ten thousande at thy right honde, but it shal not come nye the. Yee with thyne eyes shalt thou beholde, and se the rewarde of the vngodly. For thou LORDE art my hope, thou hast set thy house of defence very hye. There shal no euell happen vnto the, nether shal eny plage come nye thy dwellinges. For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in all thy wayes.

They shal beare the in their hondes, that thou hurte not thy fete agaynst a stone.

Thou shalt go vpō the Lyon and Adder, the yonge Lyon and the Dragon shalt thou treade vnder thy fete. Because he hath set his loue vpon me, I shal deluere him: I shal defende him, for he hath knoynye my name.

When he calleth vpon me, I shall heare him: yee I am with him in his trouble, wherout I wil deluere him, and bryenge him to honour. With lōge life wil I satisfie him, shewe him my saluacion.

The rci. Psalme.

It is a good thing to geue thanks vnto the LORDE, and to synghe prayses vnto thy name, o most hyest. To tell of thy louynge kyndnesses early in the mornynge, and of thy trueth in the night season.

Luc. 4. b. Exo. 23. c. Psal. 33. a.  Psal. 4. a.  Heb. 15. c.
Vpon an instrumët of ten strynges, vpon the lute and with a songe vpon the harpe.

For thou LORDE hast made me glad thorow thy workes, and I wil reioyse over the operacion of thy hondes. O LORDE, how glorious are thy workes, thy thoughtes are very depe. An vnwyse man wil not knowe this, a a foole wil not vnderstode it. That the vngodly are grene as the grasse, and that all the workes of wickednes do florish, to be destroyed for euer. But thou LORDE o most hyest, abysted worlde without ende.

For lo, thy enemies (o LORDE) lo, thy enemies shal perishe, and all the workers of wickednes shalbe scatred abrode. But my horse shalbe exalted like the horne of an Unicorne, shal be aonynted with fresh oyle. Myne eye also shal se his lust of myne enemies, myne eare shall heare his desyre of the wicked y ryse vp agaynst me. The rightious shall florish like a palme tre, and growe like a Cedre of Libanus. Suche as be planted in the house of the LORDE, be fructeful, plenteous grene. That they maye shewe, how true the LORDE my streth is, and that there is no vnrightuousnesse in him.

The 4. Psalme.

The LORDE is kynge, and hath put on glorious apparell, the LORDE hath put on his apparell, gyrded himself with streth: he hath made the rounde worlde so sure, that it can not be moved. From that tyme forth hath thy seate bene prepared, thou art from everlasting. The floundes aryse (o LORDE) the floundes lift vp their nousey, flowdies lift vp their wavies. The wavies of the see are mightie, rage horribly: but yet the LORDE that dwelleth on hye, is mightier. Thy testimonies (o LORDE) are very sure, holynesse becommeth thynke house for euer.

The 5. Psalme.

LORDE God, to whom vengeaunce belogeth: thou God to whom vengeaunce belongeth, shewe thy self. Arise thou judge of the worlde, rewarde the proude after their deseruynge. LORDE, how longe shal the vngodly, how longe shal the vngodly trympne? How longe shal all wicked doers speake so disdaynedly, and make soch proude boastyng? They smyte downe thy people (o LORDE) and trouble thine heretage. They murthur the widdowe and the straunger, and put the fatherlesse to death. And yet they saie: Tush, the LORDE seyth not, the God of Iacob regardeth it not. Take hede, ye vnwise amonge the people: ye fooles, when wil ye vnderstonde? He that planted the eare, shal he not heare? he that made the eye, shal not he se? He that nurtur eth the Heithen, and teacheth a man knowlege, shal not he punysh? The LORDE knoweth the thoughtes of men, that they are but vayne. Blessed is the man, whom thou lernest (o LORDE) and teachest him in thy lawe. That thou mayest gene him pacience in tyme of aduersite, vntill the pytte be dyggd vp for the vngodly.

When I saide: my fote hath slipped, thy mercy (o LORDE) helde me vp. In multitude of the sorowes that I had in my herte, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule.

Wilt thou haue eny thinge to do with the stole of wickednesse, which ymagineth myschefe in the lawe? They gather them together agaynst the soule of the rightious, condemne the innocent bloude. But the LORDE is my refuge, my God is the streth of my confidéce. He shal recom pense the their wickednesse, and destroye them in their owne malice: yee the LORDE our God shal destroye them.

The 6. Psalme.

COME, let vs prayse the LORDE, let vs hertely reioyse in the strength of oure saluacion. Let vs come before his presence with thakesgeyngue, shewe oure self glad in him with psalmes. Also. The see is his, for he made it, and his houes prepared the dre lope.

O come, let vs worshipe and bowe downe oure selues: Let vs knele before the LORDE oure maker. For he is oure God: as for vs, we are the people of his pasture, and the shepe of his hodes. To daye yf ye wil heare his voyce, hardé not youre hertes, as whc ye prouoked in tyme of temptacion in the wildernes. Whereyoure fathers tøpted me, proued me, and sawe my workes. XL. yeares longe was I grewed with that generation, y sayde: they euer erre in their hertes, they verely haue not knowne my wayes. † Therefor I ware vnto the in my wrath, that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

The reb. Psalme.

O SYNGE vnto the LORDE a new songe, synge vnto the LORDE all the whole earth. Synge vnto † LORDE, ye prayse his name, be telyngye of his saluacion from daye to daye. Declare his honoure amonge the Heithë, and his wonders amonge all people. ‡ For † LORDE is greate, and can not worthely be prayed: he is more to be feared then all goddes. As for all † goddes of the Heithë, they be bu Idols, but it is the LORDE that made the heauen.

Thankesgeuynge and worshipe are before him, power and honoure are in his Sanctuary. ‡ Ascrybe vnto the LORDE (o ye kinredes of the Heithen) ascrybe vnto the LORDE worshipe and strenght. Ascrybe vnto the LORDE the honoure of his name, brynge presentes, and come in to his courte.

O worshipe the LORDE in the beuyte of holynesse, let the whole earth stonde in awe of him. Tell it out amonge the Heithë, that the LORDE is kynge: and that it is he which hath made the rounde worlde so fast, that it cannot be moued, and how that he shall judge the people rightuously. Let the heauës reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, yee † all that therin is. Let the felde be ioyfull and all that is in it, let all the trees of the wodd leape for ioye. Before the LORDE, for he commeth: for he cometh to judge the earth: yee with rightuousnesse shall he judge the worlde, and † people with his trueth.

The reb. Psalme.

T

THE LORDE is kynge, the earth maye be glad therof: † yee the multitude of the lles male be glad therof. Cloudes and darknesse are rounde aboute him, rightuousnes and judgment are the habitacion of his seate. There goeth a fyre before him, to burne vp his enemies on every syde. His lightenynges geue shyne vnto the worlde, the earth seyth it is afraid. ‡ The billest melt like wax at the presence of † LORDE, at the presence of the LORDE of the whole earth. ‡ The very heauens declare his rightuousnes, † all people see his glory. Cofoounded be all they that worshipe yimage, and delite in their Idols: worshipe him all ye goddes. Sion hear eth of it and reioyseth: † yee all † daughters of Iuda are glad because of thy judgmentes, o LORDE. For thou LORDE art the most hyest ouer all the earth, thou art exalted farre aboue all goddes. § O ye that loue the LORDE, se that ye hate the thinge which is euell: the LORDE preserueth the soules of his sayntes, he shall deluyer the from the honde of the vngodly. There is spronge vp a light for the rightuoues, and a ioyfull gladnesse for such as be true herted.

Reioyse therefor in the LORDE, ye rightuous: and geue thankes for a remembrance of his holynesse.

The rebij. Psalme.

O SYNGE vnto the LORDE a new songe, ‡ for he hath done maruelous things. With his owne right honde and with his holy arme hath he gotten the victory. The LORDE hath declared his sauynge health, and his rightuousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the Heithë.

He hath remembred his mercy and trueth towards the house of Israel: so that all the enedes of the worlde se the sauynge health of oure God. Shewe youre selfe joyfull vnto the LORDE all ye londes, synge, reioyse and geue thankes. ‡ Prayse the LORDE vpon the harpe, synge to the harpe with a psalme of thankesgeuynge. With trompettes also ‡ shawnes: O shewe youre selues ioyfull before the LORDE the kynge. Let the see make a noyse and all † therin is, yee the whole worlde all that dwell therein. Let the floudes clappe their hondes, and let all the hilles be joyfull together. Before the LORDE, for he is come to judge the earth. Yee with rightousnes shall he judge the worlde, and the people with equite.

The 107. Psalm.

THE LORDE is kyng, be the people neuer so vnpatient: he sytteth vpon the Cherubins, be the earth neuer so vnquiete. The LORDE is greate in Sion, al hye aboue all people. O let men gene thakes vnto thy greate a wonderful name, for it is holy. The kynges power loueth iudgment, thou preparst equite, thou executest iudgment, and rightousnes in Iacob. O magnifie the LORDE oure God, fall downe before his fote stole, for he is holy. Moses a Aaron amonage his prestes, Samuel amonage soch as call vp his name: these called vpon the LORDE, a he herde thē. He spake vnto thē, out of the cloudy piler, for they kepeth his testimonies, and the lawe that he gaue them.

Thou herdest thē (o LORDE oure God) thou forgavest thē o God, a punyshedst their owne invencions. O magnifie the LORDE oure God, and worship him vp his holy hill, for the LORDE oure God is holy.

The 108. Psalm.

O BE joyfull in God (all ye lōdes) serue the LORDE with gladnes, come before his presence with ioye. Be ye sure, the LORDE he is God: It is he that hath made vs, not we oure selves: we are but his people, a the shape of his pasture. O go youre way in to his gates thē with thankeuyenke, a in to his courtes with prayse: be thākfull vnto him, a speake good of his name. For the LORDE is gracious, his mercy is everlasting, and his treuth endureth from generacion to generacion.

The e. Psalm. A thakesyenke of David.

MY songe shalbe of mercye and iudgment, yee vnto the (o LORDE) wil I syrge. O let me haue vnderstandinge in the waye of godlynesse, vntill the yme that thou come vnto me: a so shal I walke in my house with an innocent herte. I wil take no wicked things in honde, I hate the synne of vnfaithfullenes, it shal not cleue vnto me. A frowarde herte shal departe fro me, I wil not knowe a wicked persone.

Who so preuely slaundreth his neiboure, him wil I destroye: Who so hath a pride loke a an hye stomache, I maye not awaye with him. Myne eyes shal loke for soch as be faithfull in the londe, y they maye dwell with me: and who so ledeth a godly life, shal be my seruant. There shall no diseautfull persone dwell in my house, he that telleth lyes shal not tary in my sight. I shall soone destroye all the vnrgodly of the londe, that all wicked doers maye be roted out of the cite of the LORDE.

The e. Psalm.

HEARE my prayer (o LORDE) and let my crye come vnto the. Hyde not thy face fro me in the tyme of my troubl: enceyne thine caires vnto me when I call, O heare me, and that right soone. For my dayes are consumed awaye like smoke, a my bones are brent vp as it were a fyre brande.

My hert is smytē doun and wythered like grasse, so that I forget to eate my bread. For the voyce of my gronyne, my bone wil scarce cleue to my flesh. I am become like a Pellicane in the wildernes, and like an Oule in a broken wall. I wake, and am euyn as it were a sparow sitting alone vpon the house toppe. Myne enemies reuyle me all the daye longe, they laugh me to scorne, and are sworne together against me. I eate ashes with my bred, and mengle my drynke with wepynge. And that because of thy indignacion and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye. My dayes are gone like a shadowe, and I am wythered like grasse. But thou (o LORDE) endurest for euera, and thy remembrancehrough out all generacion. Arise therfore and haue mercy vpon Sion, for it is tyme to haue mercy vpon her, yee the tyme is come. And why? thy seruauntez haue a loue to hir stones, a it pitieth them to se her in the dust. The Heithen shall share thy name (o LORDE) and all the kynges of the earth thy majesty. For the LORDE shal buylde vp Sion, and shal apare in his glory. He turneth him vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, and despyseth not their desire. This shalle written for those ye come after, "that the people which shalbe borne, maye prayse the LORDE."

For He loketh downe from his Sanctuary, out of the heauens doth the LORDE behold the earth.

That he maye heare the mournynes of such as be in captiuyte, and deluyer the children of death. That they maye preach the name of the LORDE in Sion, and his worshiphe at Jerusalem. When the people are gathered together, and the kyngdomes also to serue ye LORDE. He hath brought downe my strength in my Journey, and shortened my days. Yet wil I saye: O my God, take me not awaye in y myddest of myyne age: as for thy yeares, they endure thorow all generacions. "Thou LORDE in the begynnynge hast layed y foundation of the earth, and the heauens are the workes of thy hondes. They shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall whee olde as doth a garment, & as a vesture shalt thou change the, and they shall chaunged. But thou art the same, and thy yeares shall not fayle.

The cij. A psalme of Daud.

PRAYSE the LORDE (o my soule) & all that is within me praye his holy name. Praye the LORDE o my soule, & forget not all his benefites. Which forueughte all thy synnes, and healthe all thy infrumities. "Which sauneth thy life from destruction, and crowneth the with mercy & louynes kyndnesse. Which satisfieth thy desire with good things, making the yonge & lusty as an Agle. The LORDE executeth rightousnesse and judgment, for all them y suffre wronge. He shewed his wayes vnto Moses, and his workes vnto the children of Israel. "The LORDE is full of compassion and mercy, longe sufferinge, and of greate goodness. He wil not allwaye be chydinge, neither wil he kepe his anger for euer. He hath not dealt with vs after our synnes, ner rewardeth vs according to oure wickednes. "For loke how hye the heauene is in comparison of the earth, so greate is his mercy also towardes them that feare him.

Looke how wyde the east is from the west, so farre hath he set oure synnes from vs. Yee like as a father pitieth his owne children, euen so is the LORDE mercifull vnto the that feare him. "For he knoweth wherof we be made, he remembereth that we are but dust. That a man in his tyme is but as is grass, & florisheth as a foule of the felde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and the place thereof knoweth it nomore. But the mercifull goodnesse of ye LORDE endureth for euer and euer, & prays of them y feare him, and his rightuousnesse vpon their childrens children. Soe as kepe his couenant, and thinke vpon his commandements to do them. The LORDE hath prepared his seate in heauene, and his kyngdome ruleth ouer all. O prays the LORDE ye angels of his, ye that be mightie in strength, fulfilling his commandement, that he maye heare the voyce of his wordes. O prays the LORDE all ye his hoostes, ye seruauntes of his, that do his pleasure. O speake good of the LORDE all ye workes of his, in euery place of his dominion: prays thou the LORDE, o my soule.

The cij. Psalme.

PRAYSE the LORDE o my soule: "O LORDE my God, thou art become exceedinge glorious, thou art clothed with Majesty and honoure. Thou deckest thy selfe with light, as it were with a garment, thou spredest out the heauens like a curtayne.

Thou voltset it aboue with waters, thou makset the cloudes thy charet, and goest vpon the wynges of the wynde. "Thou makset thine angels spretes, and thy ministers flames of fyre. Thou hast layed y earth vpon hir foundation, that it neuer moueth at any tyme. Thou couerest it with the depe like as with a garmet, so that the waters stonde aboue the hilles. "But at thy rebuke they fle, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayed. (Then are the hilles sene aloue, & the valleyes beneth in their place which thou hast appoynted for the.) "Thou hast set them their boundes, which they maie not passe, that they turne... not agayne to couer thy earth. Thou causest the welles to springe vp amonge the valleys, and the waters runne amouge thy hilles. That all the beastes of the felde maye have drynke, & that the wynde assis maye quench their thyrste.

Above vpon the hilles haue the foules of the ayre their habitation, and syng amouge the branches. Thou watrest the hylles from aboue, the erth is fylled with thy frutes of thy worke. Thou bryngest forth grass for the catell, and grene herbe for the seruyce of men. a Thou bryngest fode out of the earth: wyne to make glad thy herte of ma, oyle to make him a cheerfull countenaunce, & bred to strength mans herte. The trees of the LORDE are full of sappe, even the trees of Libanus which he hath planted. There make the byrdes their nestes, and the fyrre trees are a dwellinge for the storne. The hilles are a refuge for the wylde goates, and so are the stony rockes for thy conyes. Thou hast appoynted the Moone for certayne seasons, the Sonne knoweth his goinge downe. Thou makest darkenesse, that it maye be night, wherin all the beastes of the forest do moue. Yee and the yonge lyons which roare after the praye, and seke their meate at God. But when the Sonne ariseth, they get them awaie together, and lye them downe in their dennes. b Then goeth man forth to his worke, and to till his londe vntill the euerynge. O LORDE, how manifolde are thy worke, right wysefully hast thou made the all: yee the earth is full of thy riches. So is this greate and wyde see also, wherin are thinges crepinge innumerable, both small and greate beastes. There goe the shippes ouer, c and there is that Leuiathan, whom thou hast made, to take his pastyme therin.

They wayte all vpö the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season. d Whene thou geuest it them, they gather it: whiche thou openest thine honde, they are fyllen with good. But when thou hydest thy face, they are sorouful: e if thou takest awaie their breth, they dye, & are turned agayne to their dust. Agayne, when thou latest thy breth go forth, they are made, and so thou renuest the face of the earth. The glorious majesty of the LORDE endureth for euer, and the LORDE reioyseth in his worke. The earth trebleth at the loke of him; f he doth but touch thy hilles and they smoke. I will syng vnto the LORDE as longe as I lyue, I wil prayse my God whyle I haue my beinge. O that my wordes might please him, for my ioye is in the LORDE. As for synners, they shall be cosummed out of the erth, and the vngodly shal come to an ende: g but prayse thou the LORDE, o my soule. Halleluya.

O GEUE thankes vnto the LORDE, and call vpon his name: h tell the people what thinges he hath done. O let your songs be of him: prayse him, and let your talkynge be of all his wondorous worke. Geue his holy name a good reporte, let their hertes reioysse that seke the LORDE.

Seke the LORDE, and his strength, seke his face euermore. Remembre the marvelous worke that he hath done, his wonders and the judgmentes of his mouth. O ye sede of Abraham his seruaunt, ye children of Iacob his chosen. He is the LORDE oure God, whose punyshemente are thorow out all the world. He is alwaye myndfull of his couenaunt, and promyse that he made to a thousande generacions.

Yee the couenaunt that he made with Abraham, and the ooth that he swore vnto Isaac. And apoynted the same vnto Iacob for a lawe, and to Israel for an euerverlastinge testament. Sayenge: vnto the wil I geue the londe of Canaan, the lott of youre heretage. When there was yet but a fewe of them, and they straungers therin. What tyme as they wente from one nacion to another, from one kyngdome to another. He suffred no man to hurte them, h but reproud euyn kynges for their sake. Touch not myne anoynted, do my prophete no harme.

Moruer he called for a derth vpon the lode, and destroyed all the prouysion of bred. I But he had sent a man before them, euyn Joseph which was solde to be a bonde seruaunt. They hurte his fete in the stockes, the yron pearsed his herte. i Untill the tyme that his GEUE thankses vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

Who can expresse ye noble acts of the LORDE, or shewe forth all his prysse? Blessed are they that allwaye kepe judgment, and do righteousnes. Remembre vs (o LORDE) acordinge to the fauoure that thou bearest vnto thy people: o vyset vs with thy sauinge health. That we might se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we might rejoyse in the gladnesse of thy people, and gene thankes with thine enheritaunce.

We haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly. Oure fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egipte, they kepte not thyy goodnesse in remembrance: but were disobedieft at the see, eué at the reed see. Neuertheles, he helped the for his names sake, that he might make his power to be knowne. He rebuked the reed see, and it was dried vp: so he led the thorow the depe as in a wildernes. Thus he sazed them from the honde of the hater, delyuered them from the honde of the enemie.

As for those y troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed the, there was not one of the left. Then beleued they in his worde, and songe prysse vnto him. But withina whyle they forgat his worke, a wolde not abyde his counsell. A lust came vpó them in the wildernes, so that they tempted God in the deserte. Yet he gaue them their desyre, and sent the ynombre at their willles. They angred Moses in the têtes, and Aaron the saynte of the LORDE. So the earth opened a swalowed vp Dathan, and covered the congregacio of Abiram. The fyre was kyndled in their company, the flame brent vp the vngodly. They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molte ymage. Thus they turned his glory in to the similite of a calfe, y eateth haye. They forgat God their Sanioure, which had done so greate things in Egipte. Wonderous worke in the londe of Ham, and fearfull things in the reed see. So he sayde he wolde haue destroyed them, had not Moses his chosen stonde before him in y gappe: to turne aweie his wrothfull indiguation, lest he shulde destroye the.

Ye they thought scorn of ye pleasant londe, and gave no credence vnto his word.

But murmured in their tentes, and herkened not vnto the voyce of the LORDE.

Then lift he vp his bonde agaynst them, to ouerthrowe them in the wildernes. To cast out their sede amonge the naciones, and to seater them in the londes. They joyned them selues vnto Baal Peor, and ate the offeringes of the deed. Thus they provoked him vnto anger with their owne invicions, and the plage was greate amonge them.

Then stode vp Phineas and executed justice, so the plage ceased. And that was counted vnto him for righteousnesse, amonget all posterites for euermore. They angered him also at the waters of strife, so that Moses was painshed for their sakes. Because they provoked his sprete, and he tolde thee planely with his lippes. Nether destroyed they the Heithen, as the LORDE commanded them. But were mengled amonge the Heithen, and lerned their workes.

In so much that they worshipped their ymages, which turned to their owne decaye.

Yee they offered their sonnes and their daughteres vnto deuels. And shed the innocent bloud of their sonnes and of their daughteres, whom they offered vnto the ymages of Canaan, so that the londe was defyled with bloud. Thus were they stayned with their owne workes, and wente a whoringe with their owne invicions. Therfore was the wrath of the LORDE kyndled agaynst his people, in so much that he abhorred his owne inheritance. And gaue them ouer in to the bonde of the Heithen, and they that hated them, were lorde ouer them. Their enemies oppressed thee, and had them in subiecction. Many a tyme dyd he deluyer them, but they provoked him with their owne invicions, and were brought downe for their wickednesse. Neuertheless whiche he sawe their ausersite, he hedde their complayne. He thought vp his couenaunt, and pitied thee, acordinge vnto the multitude of his mercies. Yee he made all those thee had them awaye captiuie, to pitie them. Deluyer vs (o LORDE oure God) vs gather vs from amone the Heithen: that we maye gyue thanks to thy holy name, vs make ourse boast of thy prayse.

Blessed be the LORDE God of Israel from euerlastinge and worlde without ende, and let all people saye: Amen, Amen. Halleluya.

GEUE thankes vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer. Let them geue thakes whom the LORDE hath redeemed, deluyered from the hande of the enemie. And gathered thee out of the londes, fro the east, fro the west, fro the north thee from the south.

They wente astraye in the wildernes in an vntroden waye, founde no cite to dwell in. Hongrie thee thirste, thee their soule faynted in thee. So they cried vnto the LORDE in their trouble, thee he deluyered thee from their distresse. He led the forth by thee right waie, thee they might go to thee cite where they dwelt.

O that mee wolde prayse the goodness of the LORDE, thee the wonders that he doth for the childre of mee. For he satisfied the emptie soule, thee fyllde the hongrie soule with good. Soch as sat in darknesse and in the shadowe of death, beyng fast bounde in misery thee yron. Because they were not obediënt to the commaundementes of God, but lightly regarded the counsell of the most highest.

Their herte was vexed with laboure, they fell downe, thee there was none to helpe them. So they cried vnto the LORDE in their trouble, thee he deluyered them out of their distresse. He brought thee out of darknesse thee out of the shadowe of death, thee brake their bonds in sonder. O that men wolde prayse the goodness of the LORDE, thee the woders that he doth for the childre of men. For he hath broken the gates of brasse, thee smitt the barres of yron in sonder. Foolish mee were plaged for their offence, thee because of their wickednesse. Their soule abhorred all maner of meate, they were euene harde at deaths dore. So they cried vnto the LORDE in their trouble, thee he deluyered thee out of their distresse. He sent his worde thee healed thee, thee sauë thee from destrucction. O that men wolde prayse the goodness of the LORDE, thee the wonders that he doth for the children of men. That they wolde ofre vnto him the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and tell out his works with gladness. They that go downe to the sea in shippes, occupy their busynes in greater waters. These men se the works of the LORDE, his wonders in the depe. For at his wordes, the stormy wynde aryseth, and lifteth vp the wawes thereof.

They are caried vp to the heauen, downe agayne to the depe, their soule melteth awaye in the trouble. They rele to and fro, they stacker like a droncken man, and are at their wittes ende. So they crye vnto the LORDE in their trouble, he deluyereth the out of their distress. He maketh the storme to cease, so that the wawes are still.

The are they glad because they be at rest, so he bryngeth them vnsto the hauen where they wolde be. O that men wolde praye the goodnes of the LORDE, and the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

That they wolde exalte him in the coger-gacion of the people, loae him in the seate of the elders. Which turneth the floudes in to drie londe, and drieth vp the water sprynges. A frutefull londe maketh he baren, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin. Agayne, he maketh the wildernes a stondinge water, and water sprynges of a drye grounde. There he setteth the hongrie, that they maye bylde them a cite to dwell in. That they maye sawe their garde, plante vnyardes, to yelde them frutes of increase. He blesseth them, so that they multiplie exceedingly, and suffreth not their catell to decrease. Whi they are minished brought lowe thorow oppressi, thorow eny plage or trouble. Though he suffereth to be euell intreated thorow tyrantautes, or let them wandre out of the waye in the wildernes: Yet helpeth he the poore out of misery (at the last) and maketh him an housholde like a flocke of shepe. The rightuous wil coside this and reioyse, the mouth of all wickednesse shall be stopped. Who so is wyse, and pondreth these things well, shall vnderstonde the louynge kyndnesse of the LORDE.

The xlvii. A psalme of Daviid.

O GOD, my hert is ready to syng, to geue praye. Awake (o my glory) awake lute & harpe, I my selfe will awake right early. I wil geue thakes vnto the (o LORDE) amonge the people, I wil syng prayses vnto the amonge the Heithes.

For the greatnesse of thy mercy is higher then the heauen, and thy faithfullnesse reacheth vnto the cloudes. Set vp thy selfe (o God) aboue the heaues, thy glory aboue all the earth. That thy beloued maye be deluyered: helpe then with thy right hande, heare me. God bath spoken in his Sanctuary (which thinge reioyseth me.) I will deuyde Sichem, and mete out the valley of Suchoth. Galaad is myne, Manasses is myne, Ephraim is the strégh of my heade, Juda is my captaine. Moab is my wash potte, ouer Edom wil I stretch out my shue, Philistea shall be glad of me. Who wil lede me in to the stronge cite? Who wil brynge me in to Edom? Shalt not thou do it (o God) which hast cast vs out: thou God, vntil thou hast sent forth with oure hoostes? O be thou oure helpe in trouble, for vayne is the helpe of man. Thorow God we shall do greate actes, for it is he on that treade downe oure enemies.

The xlvii. A psalme of Daviid.

OLDE not thy tõge, o God of my praye. For the mouth of the vngodly, yee and the mouth of the disceatfull is opened vpon me, and speake agaynst me with false tõges. They compasse me aboute with wordes of hatred, fight agaynst me without a cause. For the loue that I had vnto them, they take now my contrary parte, but I geue my selfe vnto prayer. Thus they rewarde me enell for good, hatred for my good will. Set an vngodly man to be ruer ouer him, let Satan stonde at his right hande. When sentence is geuen vpon him, let him be cõdempned, and let his prayser be turned in to synne. Let his dayes be fewe, and his bishopricke another take. Let his children be fatherlesse, his wife a wyddowe. Let his children be vagabundes, and begg their bred: let them seke it, as they that be destroyed. Let the extorcioner cõsume all that he hath, and let straungers spoyle his labour. Let there be no man to petie, ner to haue compassion vpon his fatherlesse children. Let his ende be destruccion, and in the nexte generacion let his name be clene put out. Let the wickednesse of his fathers be had in remembrance in the sight of the LORDE, and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye.

Let them be allwaye before the LORDE, but as for the mercifull of them selues, let it perish from out of the earth. And that because his mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helplesse, and him that was vexed at the herte, to slaye him. His delite was in cursyng, and therefor shall it happen vnto him: he loued not blessyng, and that shall be farre fro him. He clothed him self with cursyng like as with a rayment: yee it wente in to his bowels like water, and like oyle in to his bones. Let it be vnto him as the cloke that he hath vpon him, and as the gyrdle that he is gyrded withall. Let it thus happen from the LORDE vnto myne enemies, and to those that speake euell against my soule. But deale thou with me (o LORDE God) acordinge vnto thy name, for swee is thy mercie. O deluyer me, for I am helplesse a poore, a my herte is wounded within me. I go hence like a shadowe that departeth, and am dryuen awaye as a gresshoppers. My knees are weake thorow fastinge, my flesh is dried vp for want of fatesse. I am become a rebuke vnto them, they loke vp[o] me" and shake their heads. Helpe me o LORDE my God, oh saue me for thy mercies sake. That they maye knowe, how that this is thy hande, and that thou hast done it. Though they curse, yet blesse thou: and let them be confounded, that rysse vp against me, but let thy seruaunt reioyse. Let myne aduersaries be clothed with their owne shame, as with a cloake.

As for me, I wil geue thankes vnto the LORDE with my mouth, and praye him amoung the multitude. "For he stondeth at the right hande of the poore, to saue him from soch as condempne his soule.

The c[r]. A psalme of Dauid.

The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: "Syt thou on my right hande, vntill I make thine enemies thy fote stole. The LORDE shall sende the rokke of thy power out of Sion, be thou ruler euin in thy myndest amoung thine enemies. In the daye of thy power shal thy people offre the frewill offerings with an holy worshipe, y dewe of thy byrth is of the wobe of the mornynge. The LORDE sware, and wil not repent; "Thou art a prest for euer after y order of Melchisedec. The LORDE vpon thy right, honde, shal Smyte euens kynges in the daye of his wrath. He shal be judge amouge the Heithen, he shal fyll them with deed bodies, and Smyte in sonder the heades ouer dyerse countres. He shal drynke of the broke in the waye, therfore shal he lift vp his heade.}

I WIL geue thankes vnto the LORDE with my whole herte: secretly amoung the faithfull, and in the congregacion. The workes of the LORDE are great, sought out of all the that haue pleasure therin. His worke is worthy to be praysed and had in honoure, and his rightuousnesse endureth for euer. The mercifull a gracious LORDE hath so done his marvulous workes, y they ought to be had in remembreance. "He geueth meate vnto the y feare him, he is euer myndfull of his covenaunt.

He sheweth his people the power of his workes, that he maye geue them the heretage of the Heithen. The workes of his hodes are verite a Judgment, all his commandementes are true. They stonde fast for euer a euer, a are done in truthe a quite. He sent redemption vnto his people, he hath commanded his covenaunt for euer, holy a reuerent is his name. "The fear of the LORDE is the begynynge of wyszdome, a good understandinge haue all they that do thereafter: the praye of it endureth for euer.

BLESSED is the man y feareth the LORDE, a 'hath great delite in his commandementes. His sede shall be mightie vpon earth, the generacion of the faithfull shalbe blessinge. Riches a plenteousnesse shalbe in his house, a his rightuousnes endureth for euer. Vnto the godly there ariseth vp light in the darknesse: he is mercifull, louynge a righteous. 'Wel is him that is mercifull, a lendeth gladly, a podreth his wordes with discretion. For he shal neuer be moued, the rightuous shal be had in an euerlastinge re-

PRAYSE the LORDE (O ye seruauntes)
O praye the name of the LORDE."
Blessed be the name of the LORDE, frō
this tym hath for euermore. The LORDES name is worthy to be praysed: frō the rysinge vp of the Sonne vnto the goinge doone of the same. The LORDE is hye aboue all Heitien, and his glory aboue the heauēs. Who is like vnto the LORDE oure God, § hath his dwellinge so hye, which humblleth himself, to beholde that is in heauen and earth? Which taketh vp the symple out of the dust, and liftheth the poore out of the myre. That he maye set him amongethe priynces, euen amongethe the priynces of his people. Which maketh the baren woman to kepe house, and to be a joyfull mother of children. Halleluya.

The criij. Psalme.

WHEN Israel came out of Egipte, § the house of Iacob: frō amongethe strange people. Iuda was his Sacracy, Israel his dominion. § The see saue that, & bled, Iordan turned backe. The mountayne skipped like rammes, § the little hilles like yonge shepe. What ayed the (o thou see) thou fleddest? and thou Iordan, that thou turnedest backe? Ye mountaynes, that ye skipped like rammes? and ye little hilles, like yonge shepe? The earth trembled at the presence of the LORDE, at the presence of the God of Iacob. § Which turned the harde rocke in to a stondinge water, § the flynt stone in to a sprynginge well.

Here the Hebrues begynne the cxv. psalme.

Not vnto vs (o LORNE) not vnto vs, but vnto thy name gone the prayse, for thy louinge mercy and faithfulnes. Wherfore shal the Heithen saye: "where is now their God?

As for oure God, he is in heauen, he doth what souer it pleaseth him. Their ymage are but syluer and golde, even the worke of mens hodes. § They haue mouthes, and speake not: eyes haue they, but they se not.
They haue eares, and heare not: noses
haue they, but they smell not. They haue handes and handle not, fete haue they, but they can not go, nether can they speake thorow their throate. They that mad them, are like vnto them, and so are all soch as put their trust in them. But let Israel trust in § LORDE, for he is their soucre § defence.
Let the house of Aaron put their trust in §&
LORDE, for he is their soucre § defence.
They that feare the LORDE, let the put their trust in the LORDE, § for he is their soucre and defence. The LORDE is myndefull of vs, § bleeseth vs: he bleeseth § house of Israel, he bleeseth § house of Aaron. Yee he bleeseth all them that feare the LORDE, both small § greate. The LORDE encreaseth you more § more: you, and youre childre. § For ye are § bleesed of the LORDE, which made heauen § earth.
All the whole heauens are the LORDES, but the earth hath he geuē vnto § childre of men. § The deed prays not the (o LORDE)
nether all they that go downe in to sylence.
But we will prays the LORDE, from this nymse forth for euermore. Halleluya.

The criij. Psalme.

I AM wel pleased, § the LORDE hath a hath enclined his ear vnto me, threfore wil

I call vpō him as longe as I lyue. § The snares of death copased me rounde aboute, the paynes of hell gat holde vpō me, I founde trouble and heuynesse. Then called I vpon § name of the LORDE: o LORDE, delyuer my soule. Gracious is § LORDE § righuownes, yee oure God is mercifull.
The LORDE preserueth § symple, I was brought downe, and he helped me. Turne agayne then vnto thy rest (o my soule) for the LORDE hath geuē the thy desyre.

And why? § thou hast delyuered my soule

Psalm 85.

This psalm doth the Hebrues ioyne vnto it that goeth before, and it is with them the exvi. psalm.

I BELEUED, a and therefore haue I spoken, but I was sore troubled. I sayde in my haist: All men are lyers.

What rewarde shal I geue vnto ¥ LORDE, for all the benefites ¥ he hath done vnto me? I wil receive the cuppe of saluacion, and call vpon the name of the LORDE.

I wil paye my vows in the presence of all his people, right deare in the sight of ¥ LORDE is the death of his sayntes. O LORDE, I am thy seruaunt, I am thy seruaunt, and the soune of thy handmayden, thou hast broken my bonds in sounder. I wil offre the ¥ the sacrifice of thankes geuyngne, and will call vpon the name of the LORDE.

I wil paye my vows vnto the LORDE in the sight of all his people, in the courtes of the LORDES house, euë in the mynddest of the, o Ierusalem. Halleluya.

O PRAYSE the LORDE all ye Gentiles, laude him all ye people. b For his mercifull kyndnes is euer more and more towarde vs, ¥ the truth of the LORDE endureth for euer. Halleluya.

O GEUE thanks vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer. c Let Israel now confesse, ¥ his mercy endureth for euer. Let the house of Aaron now confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer. Yee let the now that feare the LORDE, confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer. I called vpon the LORDE in trouble, and the LORDE herde me at large. The LORDE is my helper, d I wil not feare what man doeth vnto me. The LORDE is my helper, ¥ I shal se my desire vpon myne enemies. It is better to trust in the LORDE, then to put any confidëce in prynces. All Heithen compassed me ronde aboute, but in the name of the LORDE wil I destroye thec.

They kepe me in on euer syde, but in the name of the LORDE, I wil destroye them.

They came aboute me like bees, ¥ were as hote as the fyre in the thornes, but in the name of the LORDE I wil destroye them.

They thrust at me, that I might fall, but the LORDE was my helpe. e The LORDE is my strengthen, ¥ my songe, ¥ is become my saluacion. The voyce of ioye ¥ myth is in the dwellynges of ¥ righteous, for ¥ right hande of the LORDE hath gottë the victory.

The right hande of the LORDE hath the preeminynce, the right hande of the LORDE hath gottë the victory. I wil not dye, but lyue, and declare the workes of the LORDE. The LORDE hath chastened ¥ correcte me, but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto death.

Open me the gates of rightouenesse, ¥ I maye go in there thow, ¥ geue thakes vnto the LORDE. This is the dore of the LORDE, the rightouous shall entre in thorow it.

I thanke the, ¥ thou hast herde me, ¥ art become my saluacio. ¥ The same stone which the buyliders refused, is become the headstone in the corner. This was the LORDES doinge, ¥ it is maruellous in oure eyes. This is the daye which the LORDE hath made, let vs reioyse and be glad in it. Helpe now o LORDE, o LORDE sende vs now prosperite.

Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORDE, we wish you good lucke, ye that be of the house of the LORDE. God is the LORDE, ¥ hath shewed vs light: ¥ Garnish the solemnfeast with grene braunches, euë vnto the horns of ¥ aulter. Thou art my God, ¥ I wil thanke the: thou art my God, and I wil prayse the. ¥ geue thankes vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious, ¥ his mercy endureth for euer.

BLESSED are those ¥ be vndefiled in the waye: ¥ which walke in the lawe of ¥ LORDE. Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, ¥ seke him with their whole herte.

Which walke in his wayes, ζ do no wickednesse. ¹Thou hast geen strayte charge to kepe thy commaundementes. O that my wayes were stablished to kepe thy statutes. So shulde I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundementes. I wil thanke the with an vnfayned herte, because I am lerned in the judgmetes of thy righteousnesse. I wil kepe thy statutes, ζ forsake me not vttterly.

BETH.

Where withall shal a yonge man clense his waye? Euen by rulinge himself after thy worde. With my whole herte do I seke ὑ, O let me not go wronge out of thy cômaundemêtes. ²Thy wordes haue I hyd within my herte, ὑ I shulde not syne against the.

Prayse be thou O LORDE, O teach me thy statutes. With my lippes wil I be tellynge out all the judgmetes of thy mouth. I haue as greate delite in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of riches. I wil exercise my self in thy cômaundementes, ζ haue respecte vnto thy fotepathes. My delite shalbe in thy statutes, I will not forget thy wordes.

GIMEL.

O do well vnto thy seruaut, that I maye lyue and kepe thy wordes. Open thou myne eyes, ζ so shal I spie out wonderous thinges in thy lawe. ³I am a stranger vpon earth, O hyde not thy commaundementes fro me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desyre that I haue allwaye vnto thy judgmetes. Thou rebukest the proud, cursed are they that departe from thy commaundemêtes. O turne fro me shame ζ rebuke, for I kepe thy testimonies. Prynos also syt ζ speake against me, but thy seruaunt is occupied in thy statutes. In thy testimonies is my delite, they are my counscelers.

DALETH.

My soule cleueth to the dust, O quicken thou me accordinge to thy worde. ⁴I knowledged my wayes, ζ thou herdest me, O teach me then thy statutes. Make me to understande the waye of thy commaundemêtes, ζ so shal I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth awaye for very heuynessé, ζ set me vp accordinge vnto thy worde.

Take fro me the waye of lyenge, ζ graunte me thy lawe. I haue chosen the waye of treuth, thy judgmetes haue I layed before me. I sticke vnto thy testimonies, ζ LORDE cofounde me not. I wil rûne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast comforted my herte.

HE

Teach me O LORDE the waye of thy statutes, and I shal kepe it vnto the ende. O geue me understandinge, and I shal kepe thy lawe, yee I shal kepe it with my whole herte.

Lede me in the path of thy commaundemêtes, for that is my desyre. Enlyne mye herte vnto thy testimonies, ζ not to cuvetousnes. O turne awaye myne eyes, lest they beholde vanite, ζ quicke me in thy waie.

O stabliss thy worde in thy seruaunt, ὑ I maye feare the. Take awaye the rebuke ὑ I am afraied of, for thy judgmetes are amiable. Beholde, my delite is in thy commaundemêtes, ζ quicke me in thy righteousnesse.

VAU.

Let thy louyng mercy come vnto me (o LORDE) and thy sauynge health accordinge vnto thy worde. That I maye gene answere vnto my blaspheiners, for my trust is in thy worde. O take not ὑ worde of treuth vttterly out of my mouth, for my hope is in thy judgmetes. So shal I allwaye kepe thy lawe, yee for euer and euer. And I wil walke at liberty, for I seke thy commaundementes. I wil speake of thy testimonies euen before kynges, and wil not be ashamed.

My delite shalbe in thy commaundementes, which I loue. My hondes also will I lift vp vnto thy commaundemêtes which I loue, ζ my talkyng shalbe of thy statutes.

ZAIN.

O thynke vpon thy seruaunt as concernyng thy worde, wherin thou hast caused me to put my trust. For it is my comforte in my trouble, yee thy worde quyckenneth me.

The proude haue me greatly in derision, yet shrencke not I from thy lawe. I remembre thy everlastinge judgmetes (o LORDE) and am comforted. I am horribly afraied for thy vngodly, that forsake thy lawe.

Thy statutes are my songes in the house of my pilgrimage. I thynke vpon thy name

(O LORDE) in the night season, and kepe thy lawe. It is myne owne, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

FALSH

Thou art my porcion (O LORDE) I am purposed to kepe thy lawe. *I make myne humble petition in thy presence with my whole herte, o be mercifull vnto me acordinge vnto thy worde. I call myne owne wayes to remembrance, and turne my fete in to thy testimonies. I make haist, and prolonge not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementes. The congregacions of the vngodly have robbed me, but I forget not thy lawe. 5 At myndight stonde I vp, to guee thakes vnto the, for the judgmenes of thy righteousness.

I am a companyon of all them that feare the, and kepe thy commaundementes. The earth (O LORDE) is full of thy mercy, O teach me thy statutes.

THETH.

O LORDE, thou hast dealt frendly with thy seruaunt, acordinge vnto thy worde. O lerne my kyndnesse, nortoure z knowledge, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I wente wronge, but now I kepe thy worde. Thou art good and frendly, 6 O teach me thy statutes.

The proude ymagin lyes vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundementes with my whole herte. Their herte is as fat as brawne, but my delite is in thy lawe. It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble, that I maye lerne thy statutes. The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me, the thousands of golde z syller.

IOD.

Thy hidæs haue made me and fashioned me, O guee me vnderstandinge, that I maye lerne thy commaundementes. They that feare the, wil be glad when they se me, because I put my trust in thy worde. I knowe (O LORDE) thy judgmentes are right, and 7 thou of very faithfulness hast caused me be troubled. O let thy mercifull kyndnesse be my comforte, acordinge to the promyse that thou hast made vnto thy seruaunt. O let thy louynge mercies come vnto me, that I maye lyue, for thy lawe is my deleyte. Let the proude be confounded, which handle so falsly agaynst me. But let soch as feare the, z knowe thy testimonies, be turned vnto me. O let my herte be vndefyled in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed.

CHAP.

My soule longeth for thy sauynge health, for my trust is in thy worde. Myne eyes lóge sore for thy worde, sayégé: Oh when wilt thou coforte me? For I am become like a botell in ÿ smoke, yet do not I forget thy statutes. 7 How many are the days of thy seruaunt? Wé wilt thou be auenged of my aduersaries? 6 The proude haue dydgyt pittes for me, which are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundementes are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They haue almost made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy commaundementes. O quyckë me after thy louinge kyndnes, z so shall I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth.

LAMED.

O LORDE, thy worde endureth for euer in heauë. 6 Thy træth also remayneth from one generation to another: thou hast layed the foundation of the earth, and it abydeth.

They côteinue this daye acordinge to thy ordinaunce, for all things serue the. Yf my deleyte were not in thy lawe, I shulde perishe in my trouble. I wil neuer forget thy comauandementes, for with the thou quyckenesst me. I am thine, oh helpe me, for I seke thy commaundementes. The vngodly laye wayte for me to destroye me, but I considere thy testimonies. I se that all thinges come to an ende, but thy commaundement is exceedinge brode.

MEM.

O what a louë haue I vnto thy lawe? all the daye longe is my talkynge of it. Thou thorow thy commaundement hast made me wyser the myne enemies, for it is euer by me. 6 I have more vnderstandinge then all my teachers, for thy testimonies are my studye.

Yee I am wyser then the aged, for I kepe thy commaundementes. I refrayne my fete from every euell waye, that I maye kepe thy worde. I shrenck not from thy judgmentes, for thou teachest me. 6 How sweate are thy wordes vnto my throte? Yee more the hony vnto my mouth. Thorow thy commaundemences I get vnderstandinge, therfore I hate all false wayes.

NUN.

Thy worde is a lantern vnto my fete & a light vnto my pathes. I haue sworne & am stedfastly purposed, to kepe the iudgmetes of thy righteousnesse. I am troubled abone measure, quycken me (o LORDE) acordinge vnto thy worde. Let the frewillofferinges of my mouth please the (o LORDE) & teach me thy iudgmetes. My soule is allwaye in my hode, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodly haue laied a snare for me, but yet swarue not I frō thy cómaundemetes. Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heretage for euer: why? they are the very ioye of my herte. I applie myne herte to fulfill thy statutes allwaye, euen vnto the ende.

SAMECH.

I hate vngodly, but thy lawe do I loue. Thou art my defence & shyle, my trust is in thy worde. Awaye fro me ye wicked, I wil kepe the commaundementes of my God.

O stablish me acordinge vnto thy worde, & I maye lyue, & let me not be disapoynted of my hope. holde thou me vp, & I shall be safe: yee I shal euer be talkynge of thy statutes. Tho trestead downe all the departe from thy statutes, for they ymagin but disceate. Tho puttest awaye all the vngodly of the earth like drosse, therfore I loue thy testimonies. My flesh trebleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgmetes.

AIN.

I deale with the thynge & is lauffull & right, O geue me not ouer vnto my oppressours. Be thou suertie for thy seruaunt to do him good, that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are waysted awaye with lokynge for thy health, & for thy words of thy righteousness. O deale with thy seruaunt acordinge vnto thy louynge mercy, and teach me thy statutes. I am thy seruaunt, O graunte me vnderstödinge, that I maye knowe thy testimonies. It is tyyme for the (o LORDE) to laye to thine hode, for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy cómaundemetes aboue golde and precious stone. Therfore holde I straight all thy cómaundemetes, and all false wayes I vterly abhorre.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull, therfore doth my soule kepe them. When thy worde goeth forth, it geneth light and vnderstödinge, euē vnto babes. I opē my mouth & drawe in my breth, for I desyre thy cómaundemetes. O loke thou vpon me, and be mercifull, as thou vset do to vnto those v lone thy name. Ordre my goings after thy worde, that no wickednesse raigne in me. O deluyer me from the wrōgeous dealinges of me, and so shal I kepe thy cómaundemetes. Shewe the light of thy countenaunce vnto thy seruaunt, and lerne me thy statutes. Myne eyes gushe out with water, because men kepe not thy lawe.

ZADI.

Rightuous art thou (o LORDE) & true is thy iudgmet. The testimonies that thou hast commaunded, are excedinge rightuous and true. My zele hath euen consumed me, because myne enemies haue forgotten thy wordes. Thy worde is tried to the vttmost, & thy seruaunte loueth it. I am small and of no reputaciō, yet do not I forget thy cómaundemetes. Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastinge rightuousnes, and thy lawe is true. Trouble and heuynesse haue takē holde vpo me, yet is my delite in thy commaundementes. The rightuousnes of thy testimonies is euerlastinge, o graunte me vnderstandinge, and I shal lyue.

COPH.

I call with my whole herte, heare me (o LORDE) I wil kepe thy statutes. Yee euen vpo the do I call, helpe me, and I shal kepe thy testimonies. Early in vpon the mornynge do I crie vnto the, for in thy worde is my trust. Myne eyes preuē & night watches, I might be occupied in thy wordes. Heare my voyce (o LORDE) acordige vnto thy louynge kyndnesse, quycē me acordige as thou art wōt. They drawe nye of malice persecute me, & are farre frō thy lawe. Be thou nye at hede also (o LORDE) for thy promises are faithfull.

As concernynge thy testimonies, I haue knowne euer sens the begynynge, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

O considre my aduersite, & deluyer me, for
I do not forget thy law. Manteyne thou my cause and defende me, quycken me acordinge vnto thy worde. Health is farre fro the vugody, for they regarde not thy statutes. Greate is thy mercy (o LORDE) quycken me as thou art wont. Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet do not I swarue fro thy testimonies. It greueth me, when I se, that the transgressours kepe not thy lawe. Consider (LORDE) how I loue thy commaundementes, O quycken me with thy louinge kyndnesse. Thy worde is true from euerlastinge, all the iudgmentes of thy rightnousnesse endure for euermore.

The prynces persecute me without cause, but my herte stodyth in awe of thy worde.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one † fyndeth great spoyles. As for lyes, I hate † abhorre them, but thy lawe do I loue. Seuen tymes a daye do I prayse the, because of thy rightuous iudgmentes. Greate is the peace † they haue which loue thy lawe, † they are not offended at it. LORDE, I loke for thy sauynge health, † do after thy comaundemetes. My soule kepeth thy testimonies, † loueth the exceedingely, I kepe thy comaundemetes † testimonies, for all my wayes are before the.

THAU.
Let my co playnte come before the (o LORDE) geue me vnderstandinge, acordinge vnto thy worde. Oh let my supplicacio come before the, delyuer me acordinge to thy promyse. My lippes shall speake of thy prayse, seynge thou hast taught me thy statutes.

Yee my toge shall synge of thy worde, for all thy comaundemetes are right. Let thy haede helpe me, for I haue chosen thy comaundemetes. I longe for thy sauynge health (o LORDE) † in thy lawe is my deyle. Oh let my soule lyue † praye the, † thy iudgmentes maye helpe me. I go astraye, like a shepe that is lost: Oh seke thy seruauant, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

The cfr. Psalme.

WHEN I am in trouble, I call vpon † LORDE, † he answereth me. Delyuer my soule (o LORDE) fro lyenge lippes, † fro a discaufull toge. What rewarde shall be geuen or done vnto the, thou false tonge?

Euen mightie † sharpe arowes, with hot burnyng coales. Wo is me † my banishmet endureth so loge: I dwell in the tabernacles of the soroufull. My soule hath loge dwelte amonge them, that be enemies vnto peace. I laboure for peace, but when I speke therof, they made them to batayll.

The cfr. Psalme.

LIFT vp myne eyes vnto the hilles, † whence commeth my helpe? My helpe cometh euens from the LORDE, which hath made heauen and earth. He will not suffre thy fote to be moued, and he † kepeth the, sleepe, not. Beholde, he that kepeth Israel, doth nether slombre ner sleepe. The LORDE himself is thy keper, the LORDE is thy defence vpyn thy right honde. So that the Sonneshal not burne the by daye, nether the Moone by night. The LORDE preserueth the from all euell, yee it is the LORDE that kepeth thy soule. The LORDE preserueth thy goinge out and thy comyng in, from this tyme forth for euermore.

The cfr. Psalme.

I WAS glad, when they sayde vnto me: we will go in to the house of the LORDE. Oure fete shall stonde in thy gates, O Ierusalem. Ierusale is buylded as a cite, that is at vnite in it self. For there † trybes go vp, euens the trybes of the LORDE; to testifue vnto Israel, to gene thanckes vnto the name of the LORDE. For there is the seate of iudgement, euè the seate of the house of Dauid. O praye for the peace of Ierusale, they shall prosper that loue the. Peace be within thy walles, and plentuousnes within thy palaces. For my brethern and companynes sakes, I wil wish the prosperite. Yee because of † house of the LORDE oure God, I wil seke to do the good.

The cfr. Psalme.

VNTO the lift I vp myne eyes † thou † dwellest in the heauens. Beholde, euens as the eyes of seruautes loke vnto the handes of their masters: and as the eyes of a mayden vnto the handes of hir mastresse, euens oure eyes wayte vpon the LORDE oure God, vntill he haue mercy vpó vs. Haue mercy vpó vs (o LORDE) haue mercy vpon vs, for Psalm cxviii.  The Psalter.  Fo. 3r1rj.

we are utterly despysed. Oure soule is filled with the scornfully reprofe of the welyth, g with y despitfulness of the proude.

The cxviii. A psalme of Davi'd.

I f the LORDE had not bene of oure syde (now maye Israel saye) If the LORDE had not bene of oure syde, whē mė rose vp agaynst vs: They had swalowed vs vp quycke, when they were so wrothfully displeased at vs. Yee the waters had drowned vs, the streame had gone oure soule.

The depe waters of the proude had gone euē vnto our soule. But prayed be y LORDE, which hath not geuen vs ouer for a pray vnto their teth. Oure soule is escaped, euēn as a byrde out of the snare of y fouler: y snare is brokē, and we are delynered. Oure helpe stōdeth in the name of the LORDE, which hath made heauen and earth.

The cxviii. Psalme.

They that put their trust in y LORDE, are euē as the mount Sion, which maye not be removed, but stōdeth fast for eu er. The hilles stonde aboute Jerusalem, euēn so stondeth the LORDE rounde aboute his people, frō this tyme forth for euernore. That the rodd of the vngodly come not in to the lott of the righteous, lest the righteous put their honde vnto wickeenesse. Do wel (o LORDE) vnto those that be good and true of herte. As for soch as turne backe vnto their owne wickeenesse, the LORDE shal lede them forth with the euell doers: but peace be vpon Israel.

The cxvii. Psalme.

WHEN the LORDE turneth agayn̄ y captiuyte of Sion, then shal we be like vnto them that dreame. Thē shal oure mouth be filled with laughther, and oure tongue with ioye. Then shal it be sayed amonge the Heithen: the LORDE hath done greatthings for them. Yee the LORDE hath done great things for vs alrēdy, wherof we reioyse. Turne oure captiuyte (o LORDE) as the ryuers in the south. Y They that sowe in teeres, shal reape in ioye. He y now goeth his waye wepige y beareth forth good sēde, shal come agayn̄e with ioye, and brynge his sheaues with him.

The cxvi. A psalme of Salomon.

EXCEPTE the LORDE buylde the house, a their labour is but lost that buylde it. Excepte the LORDE kepe the cite, the watchman waketh but in vayne. It is but lost labour that ye ryse vp early, and take no rest, but eate the bred of carefullenesse: for loke to whom it pleaseth him, he geueth it in slepe. Lo, children and y frute of the wombe are an heretage and gift, that cōmeth of the LORDE. Like as the arrowes in the hōde of the giaute, euē so are the yonge childrē. Happie is the mā, y hath his quyer full of them: they shal not be ashamed, when they speake with their enemies in the gate.

The cxvii. Psalme.

BLESSED are all they that feare the LORDE, y walke in his wayes. For thou shalt eate the laboure of thine owne hondes: o well is the, happie art thou. Thy wife shalbe as a frustefull vyne vpon the walles of thy house. Thy children like the olyue braunches rōde aboute thy table. Lo, thus shal y mā be blessed, y feareth the LORDE. The LORDE shal so blesse the out of Sion, that thou shalt se Ierusale in prosperitie all thy lifelOng. Yee that thou shalt se thy childers childrē, y peace vp̄ Israel.

The cxviii. Psalme.

ANY a tyme hane they fought agaynst a me fro my youth vp̄ (māyve Israel now saie). Yee many a tyme hane they fought against me fro my youth vp, but they have not ouercome me. The plowers plowed vp̄ my backe, y made lōge forowes. But the rightous LORDE hath hewen y yocke of y vngodly in peces. Let them be confounded y turned backwarde, as many as hane euell will at Sion. y Let the be euē as the haye vpon the house toppes, which wythereth afore it be plecke vp. Wherof the mower fylleth not his hande, nether he that byndeth vp̄ the sheaues, his bowse. So that they which go by, saye not so moch as: the LORDE prosper ye, we wish you good lucke in the name of the LORDE.

O

UT of the depe call I vnto the (o LORDE) LORDE heare my voyce. Oh let thine eares considre well the voyce of my complaynt. "Yf thou (LORDE) wilt be extreme to marcke what is done anysse, Oh LORDE, who maye abye it? But there is mercy with the, that thou mayest be feared. I loke for the LORDE, my soule doth wayte for him, and in his worde is my trust. My soule doth paciently abye the LORDE, frō the one morninge to the other. Let Israel trust in the LORDE, for with the LORDE there is mercy and plenteous redemption. And he shal redeem Israel from all his synnes.

The cre. Psalme.

LORDE, I am not hye mynded, I haue no proude lokes. I do not exercise myself in greate matters, which are to hye for me. But I refrayne my soule and kepe it lowe, like as a childe is weened from his mother, yee my soule is euene as a weened childe. Let Israel trust in the LORDE, frō this tyme forth for euermore.

The cr. Psalme.

LORDE, remembre Dauid and all his trouble. "How he swore vnto LORDE, s he vowed a vowe vnto LORDE, mightie one of Iacob: I wil not come within the tabernacle of my house, ner clymme vp to my bedde. I will not suffre myne eyes to slepe, ner myne eye lyddes to slober. "Vntill I fynde out a place for the LORDE, an habitation for the mightie one of Iacob. Lo, we herde of the same at Ephrata, foode it in thy wod.

We wil go in to his tabernacle, fall downe before his fotestole. Arise (o LORDE) in to thy resting place, thou art arke of thy strenght.

Let thy prestes be clothed with righteousness, and let thy sayntes reioyse. For thy servoantes Dauids sake turne not awaye the presence of thine anoynted. The LORDE hath made a faithfull ooth vnto Dauid, he shall not shrenke from it: Of the frute of thy bodie shal I set vpon thy seate. Yf thy children wil kepe my couenaunt, g my testimony y I shal lerne the, their childre also shal set vp thy seate for euermore. For the LORDE hath chosen Sio, to be an habitation for himself hath he chosen her. This shalbe my rest, here wil I dwel, for I haue a delite therein. I will blesse hir vytales with increase, g wil satisfie hir poore with bred. I wil decke hir prestes with health, g hir sayntes shal reioyse g be glad. There shall I make the horne of Dauid to florish, I haue ordened a lanterne for myne anoynted. As for his enemies, I shal clothe the with shame, but vpon himself shal his crowne florish.

The crea. Psalme.

BEHOLDE, how good g ioyfull a thinge it is, brethre to dwell together in vnite. It is like y precious oynment vpon the head, that ranne downe vnto the beerd, euē vnto Aarons beerd, wēte downe to the skyrtes of his clothinge. Like the dewe of Hermon, which fell vpon the hill of Sion. For there the LORDE promised his blessyng, and life for euermore.

The crb. Psalme.

BEHOLDE, O praye the LORDE all ye seruantes of the LORDE, ye that by night stōde in the house of the LORDE. O lift vp youre handes in the Sanctuary, and praye the LORDE. The LORDE made heauen g earth, bless the out of Sion.

The crc. Psalme.

O PRAYSE y name of LORDE, praise it o ye seruantes of LORDE. Ye stōde in house of LORDE, in the courtes of the house of oure God. O praye the LORDE, for the LORDE is gracious: o synge prayses vnto his name, for it is louely. Wherefore, the LORDE hath chosen Iacob vnto him self, g Israel for his owne possessio. For I knowe y LORDE is gracious, y our LORDE is aboue all goddes. What so euē y LORDE pleaseth, doth he in heauen g earth, in the see g in all depe places. He bryngeth forth the clouds from the ends of the worlde, he turneth y lightenes vnto rayne, bringe

And gaue awaye their londe for an heretage, for his mercy endureth for euer. Even for an heretage vnto Israel his seruaunt, for his mercy endureth for euer. "Which remembreth vs, whë we are in trouble, for his mercy endureth for euer. "Which gaueth foode vnto all flesh, for his mercy endureth for euer.

O geue thankes vnto the God of heauen, for his mercy endureth for euer.

The vvi. Psalm.

By the waters of Babilon we sat downe and wepte, when we remembrèd Sion. As for our harpes, we hanged them vp vpon the trees, that are therin. Thë, they that led vs awaye captuye, requyred of vs a songe and melody inoure heuyynes: syng vs one of the songs of Sion. How shal we syng the LORDES songe in a strainge lode? Yf I forget the (o Jerusalem) let my right hande be forgotten. Yf I do not remembre the, let my tonge cleue to the rofe of my mouth: yee yf I preferre not Jerusalem in my myrth.

Remembre the childrë of Edom (o LORDE) in the daye of Jerusalem, how they sayde: downe with it, downe with it, euë to the grounde. O daughter Babillõ, thou shalt come to miserie thy self: yee happie shall he be, that rewardeth ë as thou hast serued vs. Blessed shal he be, that taketh thy children, and throweth them against the stones.

The 138th. A psalm of David.

WIL gene thakes vnto the (o LORDE) with my whole hert, even before the goddes wil I syngge prayses vnto the.

*I wil worshippe towarde thy holy temple, and prayse thy name because of thy louyngke kyndenesse and treuth, for thou hast magnified thy worde, acordlynge vnto thy greate name. When I call vp to the, thou hearest me, and endewest my soule with moch streth. All the kynges of the earth shal prayse the (o LORDE) when they heare the wordes of thy mouth. Yee they shal syngge in the wayes of the LORDE, that greate is the glory of the LORDE. For though the LORDE be hye, yet hath he respecte vnto thy lowly: as for thy proude, he beholdeth him afarre of. Though I walke I thy mylddest of trouble, yet shalt thou refresh me: thou shalt stretch forth thine hnde vp to the furiousnes of myne enemies, and thy right hande shal save me. The LORDE shal make good for me, yee thy mercy (o LORDE) endureth for euer: despyse not then the worke of thine owne handes.

The 139th. A psalm of David.

LORDE, thou searchest me out, and knowest me. Thou knowest my downe syttinge and vp rysynge, thou vnderstodont my thoughtes afarre of. Thou art aboute my path vp aboute my bedd, spyst out all my wayes. For I, there is not a worde in my toge, but thou (o LORDE) knowest it alltogether. Thou hast fashioned me behinde vp before vp, layed thine hnde vp vpon me. Soch knowlege is to wonderfull excellët for me, I can not ateyne vnto it. Whither shal I go then from thy sprete? Or, whither shal I flee from thy presence? If I clymme vp in to heauen, thou art there: if I go downe to hell, thou art there also. If I take the wynges of the mornyng, remayne in the vtemost parte of the see: Euen there also shal thy hondes lede me, and thy right hande shal holde me. Yf I saye: peraudure the darknesse shal cover me, then shal my night be turned to daye. Yee the darknesse is no darknesse with the, but the night is as cleare as the daye, the darknesse a light are both alike. For my reynes are thyne, thou hast covered me in my mothers wombe. I wil gene thakes vnto the, for I am woderously made: maruelous are thy workes, and that my soule knoweth right well. My bones are not hyd from the, though I be made secrely, and fashioned beneth in the earth. Thine eyes se myne vparsfitnesse, they stonde all writte i thy boke: my dayes were fashioned, when as yet there was not one of them.

How deare are thy coules vnto me o God? O how greate is the summe of them? Yf I tell them, they are no in nombre then the sonde: when I wake vp, I am present with the. Wilt thou not slaye thy wicked (oh God) that the bloudsyrstie mighte departe fro me? For they speake vnright of the, thine enemies exalte them selues presumptuously.

I hate them (o LORDE) that hate the, or I maye not awaye with those that rys vp agaynst the. Yee I hate them right sore, therfore are they myne enemies. Ify me (o God) and seke the grounde of myne hert: proue me, examen my thoughtes. Loke well, yt there be eny waye of wickednesse in me, lede me in the waye euerlastinge.

The 139th. A psalm of David.

ELYUER me (o LORDE) from the euell men, oh preserue me from the wicked men. Which ymagine myschefe in their hertes, stere vp strife all the daye longe. They sharpen their tongues like a serpent, Adders poysen is vnder their lippes. Sela. Kepe me (o LORDE) from the hande of the vngodly, preserue me from the wicked men, which are purposed to overthrow my goinges. The proude haue layed a snare for me, spred a nett abrode with coardes, yee sett trappes in my waye. Sela.

But my sayenge is vnto the LORDE: thou art my God, heare the voyce of my prayer o LORDE. O LORDE God, thou strength of my health, thou hast couered my heade in thy daye of battayll. Let not thy vngodly haue his desyre (o LORDE) let him not haue his purpose, lest they be to proude. Sela. Let the myschefe of their owne lippes fall vp vpon the head of the, coppse me aboute. The Psalter.

I cry vnto the LORDE with my voyce, yee euë vnto the LORDE do I make my supplication. I poure out my complaynte before him, and shewe him of my trouble. When my sprete is in heuynesse, for thou knowest my path: in the waye where in I walke, haue they pruely layed a snare for me. I loke vpon my right honde & se, there is no man that wil knowe me. I haue no place to fle vnto, no man careth for my soule. Therfore do I crie vnto the (o LORDE) and saye: thou art my hope and my porcion, in the londe of the lyuyng. Cośidre my complaynte, for I am brought very lowe. Oh deluere me fro my persecuters, for they are to stronge for me: Brynge my soule out of preson, that I maye geue thakes vnto thy name: which thinge yf thou wilt gratifie me, Sende forth the lightenyng a scater the, shute out thine arowes and consume them. Sende downe thine hande from aboue, deluyer me and take me out of thy great waters, from the hande of straung childe. Whose mouth talketh of vanitie, their right hande is a right hande of falsede. That I maye syng a new songe vnto the (o God) syng prayses vnto the vpon a tenstrynged lute, Thou that guesst victory vnto kynges, and hast deluyered Davide ye seruant from the parell of the swerde. Sane me and deluyer me from the honde of straung childe, whose mouth talketh of vanitie, and their right hande is a right hande of falsede. That our sonnes maye growe vp as the yoge plantes, and that our daughters maye be as the polished corners of the temple. That our garners maye be full and plenteous with all manner of stoare: that our shepe maye brynge forth thousandes and hundreth thousandes in oure villages. That our oxen maye be stronge to laboure, that there be no myschaunce, no decaye, and no complauninge in oure stretes.

Happie are the people that be in soch a case: yee blessed are the people, which haue the LORDE for their God.

A psalme of Davide.

I WIL magnifie the (o my God) kynges I will praysse thy name for euer and euer. Everie daye wil I geue thankes vnto the, and praysse thy name for euer and euer. Greate is the LORDE, maruelous worthy to be praysed, there is no ende of his greatnesse. One generacion shal praysse thy workes vnto another, and declare thy power. As for me I will be talkyge of thy worshiphe, thy glory, thy praysse and wodorous workes. So that men shal speake of the might of thy maruelous actes, and tell of thy greatnes.

The memoriall of thy sauctuant kyndnes shal be shewed, and shal syngynge of thy righteousnesse.
The LORDE is gracious and mercifull, longe sufferynge of great goodness. The LORDE is louyng vnto every man, and his mercy is ouer all his workes.

All thy worke praysse the (o LORDE) and to be thankful. The LORDE shall buylde vp Ierusale, gather together outcastes of Israel. He healeth the contrite in herte, and byndeth vp their woundes. He telleth the nombre of the starres, and callet them all by their names. Greate is our LORDE, and greate is his power, yee his wyszdome is infinite. The LORDE setteth vp meke, bryngeth vngodlye downe to groûde.

Prayse the LORDE with thanksgyenenge, syng prayses vp harpe vnto oure God. Which comereyth heauens with cloudes, prepareth rayne for earth, maketh grasse to growe vpon the mountaynes. But the LORDES delyte is in them that feare him, and put their trust in his mercy.

The criû. Psalme.

This psalme do the hebrues ioyne vpô it, that goeth before.

Prayse the LORDE o Ierusale, prays thy God o Sion. For he maketh fast barres of thy gates, blesseth thy childrene within. He maketh peace in thy borders, fyleyth with floure of wheate. He sendeth forth his commandement vpon earth, his worde rûneth swiftly. He geueth snowe like woll, scatereth horefrost like ashes. He casteth forth his yse like morsels, who is able to abyde his frost? He sendeth out his worde and melteth them, he bloweth with his wynde, the waters floue. He sheweth his worde vnto Iacob, his statutes ordinances vnto Israel. He hath not dealeth so with all the Heithen, nether have they knowlege of his lawes. Halleluya.

The criû. Psalme.

Prayse the LORDE of heauen, prays him in the heyth. Prayse him all ye anges of his, prays hi all his boost. Prayse him Sonne, Moone, prays him all ye starrs light. Prayse him all ye heauenes, ye waters be vnder the heauen. Let them prays the name of the LORDE, for

He cõmaundeth, the they were made. He hath made the fast for euer and euer, he hath geueth them a lawe which shall not be brok. Prayse the LORDE vpon earth, ye whalishes and all depes. Pryse and halde, snowe feathert, wynde and storme, suilfullye his worde. Mountaynes and all hilles, fruteful trees all Ceders. Beastes and all catell, wormes fethered foules. Kynges of the earth all people, princes all judges of world. Yonge men maydes, olden men and children.

Let them prays the name of the LORDE, for his name only is excellent, and his prays above heauen and earth. He exalteth the horne of his people, all his saynetes shall prays him, the children of Israel, euen the people that serveth him. Halleluya.

O PRAYSE the LORDE in his Sanctuary, prays him in the firmament of his power. Prayse him in his noble actes, prays him in his excellët greatnesse.

Prayse him in the sounde of the trompet, prays him vpon the hute and harpe. Prayse him in the cymbals and daunse, prays him vpon the strynges and pype. Prayse him vpon the welltuned cymbals, prays him vpon the loute cymbals. Let every thinge hast breth, prays the LORDE. Halleluya.

The ende of the Psalter.

Sela. In the psalter this worde Sela commeth very oft, and (after the mynde of the iterpreters) it is asmoch to sayse as, allwayes, continually, for euer, forsooth, verely, a lifting vp of the voyce, or to make a pause and earnestly to consider, and to ponder the sentece.
The Proverbes of Salomon.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. I.
The wysdome of God callethe vs by the mouth of Salomo, exorteth vs, and gueueth vs warnynge to eschewe the wicked: whose vngodly cõversacion in worde and worke, and punyshment also of the same, is here descrybed.

Chap. II.
How wysdome maye be gotten, and what profit commeth of it.

Chap. III.
He exorteth us to the feare of God and to pacience: he commendeth wyszdome, a re- quyreth us to cleue vnto the same.

Chap. IIII.
A fatherly exortacion vnto wisdome, with the profit therof, and how we ought to refrayne the mëbres of oure body frõ euell.

Chap. V.
He exorteth vnto wyszdœ, and to beware of harlottes: he telleth what harme maye folowe therout, whë men medle with soch: he teacheth men, louyngly to cleue vnto their maried wyues, and descrybeth the ende of the vngodly.

Chap. VI.
He warneth men to beware of suertishipe, ex- orteth the slouthfull to laboure, sheweth the wikednesse of false tongs, and requyreth men to beware of aduoutry, because it is more perlous then theft or felony.

Chap. VII.
He exorteth vnto wiszdome, sheweth the conditions of harlottes, and what hurt happeneth vnto soch as encyne to the prouocaciōs and desireys of the flesh.

Chap. VIII.
Wyszdome callethe men sweetely vnto her, and telleth them what treasure and power she hath. A cõmedacion and prayse of wiszdome, wherout euery mā is exorted to cleue vnto her.

Chap. IX.
Wyszdome crieth vpo the ignoraunt, and promiseth them greate thinges. The foolish maner of a light woman.

Chap. X.
From this chapter forth vnto the XXXI, there are described many sweete, louelly and wyse sentences, which teach men wyszdome and what profit commeth of it: Agayne, how men maye auoyde foolishnesse, and the hurte therof.

Chap. XXXI.
Wyszdome warneth vs to beware of euell women, and descrybeth the cõuersacion, maner, & behaoure of an honest maried wyfe.

These are the proverbes of Salomon the sonne of David kyng of Israel: to lerne wyszdome, nurtoure, vnderstandinge, prudence, rightuousnesse, judgment and equite. That the very babes might haue wyt, and that yonge men might haue knowlege and vnderstandinge. By hearinge, the wyse mā shal come by more wysdome: and by ex-perience, he shal be more apte to vnder- stonde a parable, and the interpretation therof: the wordes of the wyse, and the dareke speaches of the same. *The feare of the LORDE is the begynynge of wysdome. But fooles despysye wysdome and nurtoure.

The first Chapter.

My sonne, heare thy fathers doctrine, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shal bryng grace vnto thy head, & shall be a cheyne aboute thy necke. My sonne, coseunte not vnto synneres, yf they entye the, and saye: come wyth us, let us laye wayte for bloude, & lurke preuely for the innocet wythout a cause: let us swalowe the vp by f hell, let us denoure the quycke and whole, as those that goe downe in to the pytt. So shall we fynde all maner of costly riches, and fyll our houses wyth spoyles. Cast in thy lott amongeth us, we shall hane all one purse. My sonne, walke not thou with them, reffrayneth fote frō their wydes. 'For their fete rūne to enell, g are haistie to shed bloude. But in vayne is y net layed forth before the byrdes eyes. Yee they thē selues laye wayte one for anothers bloude, and one of the wolde slaye another. These are the wayes of all soch as be conetous, that one wolde raush anotheres life. Wyszdome crieth without, a putte forth hir voyce in the stretes. She calleth before y congregacion in open gates, and sheweth hir wordes thorow y cite, sayenge: O ye childrē, how lōge wil ye loue childlynesse? how longe wil y scorners delyte in scornyng, & y vnwyse be enemies vnto knowlege? O turne yu vnto my correccio: lo, I wil expresse my mynde vnto you, and make yu vnderstode my wordes. Seinge then that I hane called, and ye refused it: 'I have stretched out my honde, and no mā regarded it, but all my couēlces hane ye despysed, and set my correccēos at naught. Therfore shal I also laug in youre destrucio, and mocke you, when y thinge that ye fear cómeth vpon you: euhen whe y thinge that ye be afayed of, falleth in sodenly as a storme, and youre misery like a tempest: yee whā trouble and heynynesse cómeth vpon you. Then shal they call vpō me, but I wil not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me: And y because they hated knowlege, and receaued not y feare of y LORDE, but abhorréd my counsell, and despysed my correccio. Therfore shal they eate y frutes of their owne wyde, and be fylled with their owne counells: for y turnyng ayawe of y vnwyse shal slaye thē, y prosperite of fooles shalbe their owne destrucio. But who so harkeneth vnto me, shal dwell safely, & haue ynoogh without eny feare of euell.

The iij. Chapter.

My sonne, yf thou wilt receaue my wordes, a kepe my cómaundemētēs by the, that thine eare maye herken vnto wysdome, applie thine herte then to vnderstodinge. For yf thou criest after wyszdome, c callest for knowlege: yf thou sekest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for treasure: Thē shalt thou vnderstonde y feare of the LORDE, and fynde y knowlege of God. For it is the LORDE that geueth wyszdom, e out of his mouth commeth knowlege and vnder- stodinge. He preserueth y welfare of the righteous, and defendeth them y walke innocently: he kepeth them in y right path, and preserueth y waye of his sayntes. Then shalt thou vnderstonde rightousnesse, judgment and equite, yee and every good path. Yf wyszdome entre in to thine herte, and thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shal counsell preserue the, and vnderstodinge shal kepe the. That thou mayest be deluyered frō y euell wyde, and from the man y speaketh frowarde things. From soch as leane the hye strete, and walke i y wayes of darknesse: which rejoyse in doynge euell, and delyte i wicked things: whose wydes are croke, and their pathes slaunderous. 'That thou mayest be deluyered also from the straunge woman, and from her that is not thine owne: which geueth swee wordes, forsaketh the husbande of hir youth, and forgeth the covenauent of hir God. For hir house is enclyned vnto death, and hir pathes vnto hell. All they that go in vnto hir, come not agayne, nether take they holde of the wyde of life. That thou mayest walke in y good wyde, and kepe the pathes of the rightous. For the iust shal dwell in the londe, and the innocentes shal remayne in it: but the vngodly shalbe roted out of y londe, and the wicked doers shalbe taken out of it.

There be sixe thinges, which the LORDE hateth, a the seuenth he vterly abhorreth: a A proude loke, a dyssemblynge tonge, hādes that shed innocent bloud, an herte y goeth aboute with wicked imaginacion, b fete that be swift in reannyngte to do myschefe, a false wytnesse y bringeth vp lyes, a soch one as soweth discorde amonc brethren. My sone, kepe thy fathers cōmaundemētēs, a forsake not y lawe of thy mother. Put the vp together in thine herte, and bynde the aboute thy necke. That they maye lede the where thou goest, preserve the when thou art aslepe, a y when thou awaketh, thou mayest talke of the (For the cōmaundement is a lauterne, and the lawe a light: yee chastenitye y nurtoure is y waye of life) that they maye kepe the frō the euell woman, a y from the flaternyge tonge of the harlott: y thou lust not after her beuty in thine herte, a lest thou be takē with his fayre lokes. An harlott wil make a mā to begg his bred, but a married woman wil hunt for y prēcious life. Maye a man take fyre in his bosome, and his clothes not be brent? Or can one go vpō honre coales, and his fete not be hurte? Even so, who so euer goeth in to his neighbours wife; and toucheth her, can not be vngiltie. a Men do not vterly despyse a thefe, that stealeth to satisfie his soule, when he is hongerie: but yf he maye be gotten, he restorēth agayne seuen tymes asmoche, or els he maketh recompence with all the good of his house. But who so cōmītteth aduiorie with a womā, he is a foole, and byrnyget his life to destruccion. He getteth him self also shame a dishonoure, soch as shal neuer be put out. For the gelousy y wrath of the mā will not be iterated, no though thou woldest ofre him greate giftes to make amendes, he will not receaue them.

The biij. Chapter.

My sone, kepe my words, a laye vp my cōmaundemētēs by the. a Kepe my cōmaundemētēs a my lawe, euē as the "Psalm 17, c. Pro. 12. d. * Pro. 1. a. * Psalm 118. o. " Pro. 5. a. and 7. a. * Exo. 22. a. aple of thine eye, a thou shalt lyue. Bynde them vpon thy fyngers, a wryte the in the table of thine hert. Saye vnto wysdome: thou art my sister, and call vnderstandinge thy kyuswoman: a that she maye kepe y frō y straue womā, a frō y harlott which geueth sweete wordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I loked thorow the treffes, a behelde the simple people: a amonc other yonge folkes I spraye one yonge foole goinge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waye towarde the harlottes house in the twylight of the euennyge, when it begyne now to be nigte and darcke. And beholde, there mett him a womā in an harlottes apparel (a discēatfull, wāton a vnstedfast womā: whose fete coude not abyde in y house, now is she without, now y stretes, a lurketh i every corner) she caught y yöge mā, kyssed him a was not ashamed, sayēge: I had a vowe to paye, a this daye I perfourme it. Therfore came I forth to mete the, that I might seke thy face, and so I haue founde the. I haue dectke my bed with coueringes a clothes of Egrīte. My bed hāne I made to smell of Myrre, Aloes and Cynamom. Come, let vs lyē together, a take oure pleasure till it be daye light. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagg of moneye with him, who can tell whē he cōmeth home? a Thus with many sweete wordes she ouercame him, and with his flaternyge lippes she wanne him.

Immediatly he foloweth her, as it were an oxe led to the slaughter (and like as it were to the stockes, where fooles are punyshed) so longe till she hath wounded his lyuer with hir darte: like as yf a byrde haisted to the snare, not knowinge that the parell of his lyeth there vpō. Heare me notherfore (o my sonye) and marcke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thine herte wandre in hir wayes, a be not thou diseaue in hir pathes. For many one hath she woūed and cast downe, yee many a strenghe mā hath she slayne. Hir house is the waye vnto hell, where men go downe to the chambers of death.

The biij. Chapter.

Doth not wysdome crie? a doth not a vnderstandinge put forth hir voyce?
Stondeth she not in the hye places in the stretes & wayes? doth she not crie before the whole cite, & in the gates where men go out & in? It is you, o ye men (sayeth she) whom I call. Vnto you (o ye childre of me) liift I vp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowlege o ye ignorauit, be wyse in herte o ye fooles. Genow eare, for I wil speake of greate matters, o open my lippes to tell thinges that be right. For my throte shall be talkynge of { y } trueth, & my lippes aborre vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouth are rightuous, there is no frowardnesse nor falsede therin. They are all playne to soch as wil vnderstonde, o right to the that fynde knowlege. Receauce my doctrine therfore and not syluer, a knowlege more then fyne golde. For wysdome is more worth then precious stones, yee all the thinges that thou cast desyre, are not to be compared vnto it.

WYSDOME hath buylded herself an house, and hewen out seuen pilers: she hath slaughtred, poured out hir wyne, and prepared hir table. She hath sent forth hir maydens to crie vpō the hyest place of the cite: Who so is ignorauit, let him come hither. And to the vnwise she sayde: O come on yourae wyne, eate my bred, and drynke my wyne, which I have pured out for you. Forsake ignoraunce, and ye shall lyue: and se that ye go in the wyne of vnderstondinge.

Who so reproueth a scornewill persone, getteth him self dishonoure: and he that re-buketh the vngodly, stayneth himself. Reprone not a scorner, lest he owe the euell wil: but rebuke a wyse man, and he wil loute the. Geue a discrete man but an occasion, a he wilbe the wyser: teach a rightuous man, and he wil increase. The feare of the LORDE is the begynnynge of wysdome, a the knowlege of holy thinges is vnderstondinge. For thorow me thy dayes shalbe prolonged, and the yeares of thy life shalbe many. If thou be wyse, thy wysdome shal do thy selue good: but ye thou thynekest scornere thereof, it shalbe thine owne harme. A foolish restlesse woman, full of wordes, and she sayeth: stolen waters are sweete, y the bred that is pruely eaten, hath a good tast.

The r. Chapter.
These are proverbs of Salomon.

A WYSE some maketh a glad father, but a an vndiscreete sonne is the heuynesse of his mother. Treasures that are wickedly gotten, profit nothinge, but rightuousnesse delyuereth from death. a The LORDE wil not let the soule of the rightuous suffice höger, but he putteth y vngodly frö his desire. An ydle hande maketh poore, but a quycke laboringe hande maketh riche.

Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wyse: but he that is slogishe in havest, bringeth himself to confusion. Louynge and favorabel is the face of the rightuous, but y fore heade of the vngodly is past shame, and presumptuous.
The memoriall of the just shall haue a good reporte, but the name of the vngodly shal stynke. A wyse man wil receaue warnyng, but a foole wil sooner be smytten in the face.

B He that leadeth an innocent life, walketh
surely: d but who so goeth a wroge waye, schalbe knowne. He y wynketh with his eye, wil do some harme: but he that hath a foolish mouth, shalbe beaten. The mouth of a right-uous man is a well of life, but y mouth of the vngodly is past shame, a presumptuous. Euell will steryth vp strife, but loue couereth y multitude of synnes.

In y lippes of him y hath understödinge a ma shal fynde wysdome, but y rodde belögeth to y backe of y foolish. Wyse më laye vp knowlege, but y mouth of y foolish is nye destrucciö. The rich màs goodes are his ströge holde, but pouerte oppresseth the poore.

The rightuous laboureth to do good, but the vngodly vseth his increase vnto synne.

C To take hede vnto y chastenynge of nur-toure, is y waye of life: but that he refuseth to be reformed, goeth wroge. Disemblynge lippes kepe hatred secretly, and he that speaketh any slaughter, is a foole. Where mouch bablingë is, there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lippes, is wysest of all. An innocent tongue is a noble treasure, but the herte of the vngodly is nothinge worth. The lippes of the rightuous fede a whole multitude, but fooles shal dye in their owne folly. The blessynge of the LORDE maketh rich më,

as for carefull trauayle, it doth nothinge therto.
A foole doth wickedly a maketh but a sparte of it: neuertheles it is wysdome for a man to bewarre of soch.

The thinge that the vngodly are a{frayed of,
shal come vpon them, but the rightuous shal haue their desire. The vngodly is like a tempest that passeth ouer a is nomore sene,
but the rightuous remayneth sure for euer.
As y vyneger is to the teth, and as smoke is vnto y eyes, euë so is a slogishe personne to them that sende him forth. The feare of y LORDE maketh a lõge life, but y yeares of y vngodly shal be shortened. The pacient abydinge of the rightuous shalbe turned to gladnesse, but the hope of the vngodly shal perish. The waye of the LORDE geueth a corage vnto y godly, but it is a feare for wicked doers. The rightuous shal neuer be ouerthrowne, b but y vngodly shal not remayne in the londe. The mouth of the just wilbe talkynge of wysdome, but the tonge of the frowarde shal perish. The lippes of the right-uous are occupied in acceptable thinges, but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

The ri. Chapter.

A FALSE balaunce is an abdomenacion
vnto the LORDE, a but a true weight pleaseth him. Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusion: but where as is lowynes, there is wysdome. The innocent dealyng of the just shal lede them, but the vnfaithfulnenesse of the despysers shalbe their owne destruction. Riches helpë not in the dye of vengeauence, but rightuousnesse delyuereth frö death. The rightuousnes of y innocent ordreth his waye, but the vngodly shal fall in his owne wickednesse. The rightuousnesse of the just shal delyuer them, but the despysers shalbe taken in their owne vngodlynesse. When an but the righteous shall flourish as the green leaf.

Who so maketh disquietness in his own house, he shall have wind for his heretage, and the fool shall be seruant to the wise.

The fruit of the righteous is as the tree of life, a wise man also winneth mens souls.

Yf the righteous be recopessed vp earth, how much more thee the vngodly & y synner?

The rij. Chapter.

WHO so loueth wysdome, wil be content to be reformd: but he that hateth to be reproved, is a fool. A good man is acceptable vnto the LORDE," but y wicked wyl he condempe. A man ca not endure in vngodynesse, but y rote of y righteous shall not be moved. A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto her husbonde: but she that behaueth herself vnhonestely, is a corrupcion in his bones. The thoughtes of y righteous are right, but the ymaginacion of the vngodly are disceatfull. The talkynge of the vngodly is, how they maye laye wayte for bloude, but the mouth of y righteous wil deluer them. Or euer thou canst turne the aboute, the vngodly shall be ouerthrowne, but the house of the righteous shall stode.

A man shalbe commended for his wyssdome, but a fool be despsyed. A simple man which laboureth and worketh, is better the one that is jorgous and wanteth bred.

A righteous man regardeth the life of his catell, but the vngodly haue cruel hertes. He that filleth his lode, shall haue plenteousnesse of bred: but he y foloweth ydylhes, is a very fool. The desyre of y vngodly hunteh after myschefe, but the rote of the righteous brynheth forth frute. The wicked falleth in to the snare thorow y malycye of his owne mouth, but the just shal escape out of parell. Evry man shal enjoye good accordinge to the innocencie of his mouth, and after the workes of his holdes shal he be rewarded. Loke what a foolo taketh in honde, he thinketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyl be couecele. A foolo vttereth his wrath in all the haist, but a discrete man forgueuth wronge. A just man will tell the truthe, he shewe the thinge y is right: but a false wytnesse diseaeth. A

There shal no mysfortune happen vnto the lust, but the vngodly shall be fylled with misery. The LORDE abhorreth disceatfull lippes, but they that laboure for treuth, please him. He that hath vnderstodinge, can hyde his wysdom: but an vndiscrete herte telleth out his foolishnesse. A dilig^t^ hande shall beare rule, but the ydle shall be vnder tribute. In the waye of righteousnesse there is life, as for any other waye, it is the path vnto death.

The riiij. Chapter.

A WYSE somme wyll receaue his fathers warnynge, but he * is scornfull, wyll not heare when he is reproued. A good m^a^ shall enjoye the frute of his mouth, but he that hath a frowarde mynde, shalbe spoylede. He that kepeth his mouth, kepeth his life: but who so speaketh vnaduyse, fyndeth harme. The slogarde woldeayne haue, and can not get his desire: but the soule of the diligent shal haue plenty. A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodly shameth both other and himself. Righteousnesse kepeth the innocet in the waye, but vngodlynesse shal ouerthrowe the synner.

Some men are riche, though they haue no-thing: agayne, some m^e^ are poore hauynge greate riches. With goods euery man de-lyuereth his life, and the poore wyl not be reproued. An vngodly messenger bryngeth myschefe, but a faithful embassiotoure is wholsome. He that thinketh scorn to be reformd, commeth to pouerte and shame: but who so receaueth correction, shal come to honour. The vngodly is afraied of every parell, but the righteous hath a good hope euen in death. Wysdome resteth in the herte of him that hath vnderstondeinge, and he wyll teach them that are vnlerned. 4 Rightoussenes setteh vp the people, but wyckednesse bryngeth folke to destruction. A discrete seruamit is a pleasure vnto y kynge, but one y is not honest, prouoketh him vnto wrath.

SOFTE aswerec putteth downe displeasure, but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto anger. A wyse tongue commendeth knowlege, a foolish mouth blabbeth out nothinge but foolishnesse. The eyes of the LORDE loke in every place, both vpon y good and badd. A wholesome tonge is a tre of life, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A fole despsyseth his fathers correccion, but he y taketh hede whan he is reproved, shal hau e more vnderstondinge.

In the house of the rightouss are greate riches, but in the increase of the vngodly there is mysorder. A wyse mouth poureth out knowlege, but y herte of the foolish doth not so. 4 The LORDE abhorreth y sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the rightouss is acceptable vnto him. The wyne of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto y LORDE, but who so foloweth rightoussenes, him he loueth. He that forsaketh y right strete, shalbe sore punyshed: a who so hateth correccion, falleth in to death. The hell with hir payne is knowne vnto the LORDE, how much more then the hertes of men?

A scornewulf body loueth not one y rebuketh him, nether wil he come amonge y wyse. A mery herte maketh a chearfull countenaunce, but an vnquyet mynde maketh it heuy. A wyse herte wil seke after knowlege, but y mouth of fooles medleth with foolishnesse. All the days of the poore are miserable, but a quyete herte is as a cotynuall feast. 4 Better is a little with the feare of the LORDE then greate treasure, for they are not without sorowe. Better is a meace of potage with loue, then a fat oxe with euell will.

4 An angrie man stereth vp strife, but he y is pacient stillthe discorde. The wyne of y

The houses of the vngodly shalbe overthrownne, but the tabernacles of y rightouss shal florische. 4 There is a waye, which some men thinke to be right, but the ende therof ledeth vnto death. The herte is soronfull even in laughter, and the ende of myrth is heuyynesse. An ufaithfull personne shal be fyled with his owne wayes, but a good made wyll beware of soch. An ignoraunt body beleueth all thinges, but who so hath vnderstondeinge, loketh well to his goynge. A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euell, but a fole goeth on presumptuously. An vnpatient man handeleth foolishly, but he that is well advyed, doth other wayes.

The ignoraunt haue foolishnes in possessio, but the wyse are crouned with knowlege.

The euell shal bowe them selues before y good, and the vngodly shal wayte at the dores of the rightouss. The poore is hated euell of his owne neigbours, but the riche hath many frendes. Who so despsyseth his neigbour, doth anysse: 4 but blessed is he that hath pyt of the poore. They that ymagin wickednes, shalbe disappoynted: but they that muse vp good thinges, vnto soo chal happen mercy and faithfulnesse. Diliget laboure bryngeth riches, but where many vayne wordes are, truly there is scarcenesse.

Riches are an ornament vnto the wyse, but the ignouance of fooles is very foolishnesse. A faithfull wytnesse deluyereth soules, but a lyar dyseceanthem. The feare of the LORDE is a struge holde, for vnto his he wyll be a sure defence. The feare of the LORDE is a well of life, to auoyde the snares of death. The increase and prosperite of the comons is the kynges honoure, but the decaye of the people is the confucio of the prynce. Pacience is a token of wisdome, but wrath and haistie displeasure is a token of foolishnesse. A mery herte is the life of the body, but rancour consumeth awaye the bones. 4 He that doth a poore man wringe, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pitie of the poore, doth honoure vnto God.
slouthfull is full of thornes, but \( \ddot{y} \) strete of the righteous is well closed. A wyse sonne maketh a glad father, \( \ddot{a} \) but an vndiscreete body shameth his mother. A foole reioyseth in foolish thinges, but a wyse man loketh well to his owne goynges. Unaduyed thoughtes shall come to naught, but where as are men \( y \) can genue counsell, there is stedfastnesse. O how joyfull a thinge is it, a man to genue a conuenient answer? O how pleasant is a wordo spoken in due season? The wyay of life ledeth vnto heauyne, \( y \) a man shulde beware of hell beneth.

The LORDE wyl breake doonne \( y \) house of \( \ddot{y} \) proude, but he shal make fast \( y \) borders of \( \ddot{y} \) wyddowe. The LORDE abhoreth \( \ddot{y} \) ynaimacions of \( \ddot{y} \) wicked, but pure wordes are pleaunt vnto hym. The couetous man wruteth \( \upsilon \) his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shall lyue. A rightuous \( \ddot{a} \) m"useth in his mynde how to do good, \( \ddot{y} \) mynde of the vngodly ymagineth, how he maye do harme. The LORDE is farre from the vgodly, but he heareth \( \ddot{y} \) prayer of the righteous. Like \( \ddot{y} \) clearnesse of \( \ddot{y} \) eyes reioyseth \( \ddot{y} \) herte, so doth a good name fede \( \ddot{y} \) bones. The eare \( \ddot{y} \) harkeneth vnto wholsome warnyne, and enclynyth therto, shall dwell amongeth \( \ddot{y} \) wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submyteth himselfe to correccion, is wyse.

The 19. Chapter.

The feare of \( \ddot{y} \) LORDE is \( \ddot{y} \) right seyce of wyszdom, and lowlynes goeth before honoure. A man maye well purpose a thinge in his harte, but \( \ddot{y} \) anserwe of \( \ddot{y} \) tonge cometh of \( \ddot{y} \) LORDE. \( \ddot{y} \) a m"a thinketh all his waies to be clene, but it is \( \ddot{y} \) LORDE \( \ddot{y} \) fashioneth \( \ddot{y} \) myndes. \( \ddot{y} \) Conmytth thy workes vnto \( \ddot{y} LORDE, and looke what thou deuyseth, it shall prosper. The LORDE doth all thinges for his owne sake, yee \( \ddot{y} \) when he kepeth \( \ddot{y} vngrudly for \( \ddot{y} \) daye of wrath.

The LORDE abhorreth all presumptuous \( \ddot{y} \) proude hertes, there maye nether strengh ner power escape. With louynge mercye \( \ddot{y} faithfulness synnes be foryguen, and who so feareth \( \ddot{y} \) LORDE escheweth euell. When a mans waies please \( \ddot{y} \) LORDE, he maketh his very enemies to be his frendes. Better is it to haue a little thing with rightuouses, the greate rentes wrongelesly gotten. \( \ddot{y} \) ma deuseth a waye in his herte, but it is \( \ddot{y} LORDE \( \ddot{y} \) ordreth his goynges. When \( \ddot{y} prophecy is in \( \ddot{y} \) lippes of \( \ddot{y} \) kynge, his mouth shall not go wr"oge in judgmen. A true measure \( \ddot{y} \) a true balauce are \( \ddot{y} \) LORDES, he maketh all weightes. It is a greate abominaci when kynge are wycked, for a kynge seate shulde be holden vp with righteousnesse.

Righteous lippes are pleasaunt vnto kynge,
and they loue him \( \ddot{y} \) speaketh \( \ddot{y} \) trueth.
The kynge displeasure is a messauner of death, but a wyse man wyl pacifie hym.
The cherefull countenaunce of \( \ddot{y} \) kynge is life, and his louynge fauoure is as the euenynge dewe. \( \ddot{y} \) to haue wyszdom in possession is better then golde, and to get vnderstondynge, is more worth then sylyuer. The path of \( \ddot{y} righteous escheweth euell, \( \ddot{y} \) who so loketh well to his waies, kepeth his owne soule.

Presumptuousnes goeth before destruccion, and after a proude stомake there foloweth a fall. Better it is to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde \( \ddot{y} \) spoyles with \( \ddot{y} proude. He \( \ddot{y} \) handleth a matter wysely, opteyneth good: \( \ddot{y} \) blessed is he, \( \ddot{y} putteth his trust in \( \ddot{y} \) LORDE. Who so hath a wyse vnderstondinge, is called to counsell: but he \( \ddot{y} \) can speake fayre, getthet more riches.
Vnderstondinge is a well of life vnto hym \( \ddot{y} haft it, as for \( \ddot{y} \) chastenyng of fooles, it is but foolishnesse. The herte of the wyse enfavourmeth his mouth, and amendeth \( \ddot{y} doctrine in his lippes.

Fayre words are an hony combe, a refreshinge of \( \ddot{y} \) mynde, \( \ddot{y} \) health of \( \ddot{y} \) bones.

\( \ddot{y} \) There is a waye \( \ddot{y} \) men thinke to be right, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. A troublesoue soule disquyeteth hir selfe, for hir owne mouth hath brought her therto. An vngrudly person stereth vp euell, and in his lippes he is as an whote burnynge fyre.

A frowarde body causeth strifte, and he \( \ddot{y} is a blabbe of his tonge, maketh deuysion amonge prynces. A wicked \( \ddot{y} \) begyleth his neiboure, \( \ddot{y} some harme.  "Age is a crowne of worshipes,

yf it be founde in the waye of righteousnes.
A pacient man is better then one that is strōge: and he that can rule him selfe, is more worth then he y wynneth a cite. The lottes are cast in to the lappe, but their fall stōdeth in the LORDE.

The rōij. Chapter.

B E T T E R is a drye morsell with quetynnesse, the a full house and many fatt catell with stryfe.  A discrete seruait shalt hau more rule then the sonnes y haue no wysdome, and shall haue like heretage with the brethren.  "Like as syluer is tried in the fyre and golde in the fornace, euene so doth
the LORDE proue the hertes. A wicked body holdeth mouch of false lippes, y a dyssemblynge persone geueth care to a disceatfull
tōge.  "Who so laugheth y poore to scorne, blasphemeth his maker: and he y is glad of another mans hurte, shal not be vnpuynished.
Childers children are a worshipie vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honour of the children. An eloquent speach becorneth not a foole, a dyssemblyng mouth also besemeth not a pryncle. Liberalite is a precious stone vynto that he hath it, for where so euere he becometh, he prospereth. Who so couereth another mans offence, seketh loue: but he y discloseth the faute, setteenth frendes at variaunce. One reproofe only doth more good to him y hath vnnderstōdine, then an C. stripes vynto a foole. A sedicia personse seketh myschefe, but a cruel messaunger shall be sent agaynst him. It were better to come agaynst a she Bere robbed of hir whelpes, then agaynst a foole in his foolishnes.  "Who so rewardeth euell for good, the plaghe shall not departhe fro his house.  "He y soweth discorde y strife, is like one y dyggeth vp a water broke: but an open enemie is like the water y breaketh out y reneth abrode. The LORDE hateth as well him y iustifieth y
vngodly, as him y condemneth the innocet.
What helped it to geue a foole money in his hōde, where as he hath no mynde to bye wyszdome? He is a frende that allwayne loueth, and in aduersite a man shal knowe who is his brother. Who so promiseth by the hande, y is suertie for another, he is a foole.
He y loueth strife, delyeth in synne: y who so setteth his dore to hye, seketh after a fall.
Who so hath a frowarde herte, opteyneth no
good: and he y hath an ouerthwarzhe tongue, shal fall in to myschefe. An vnwys body byrnygeth himself selue in to sorowe, and y father of a foole can haue no foie.  "A mery herte
maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull mide dryeth vp y bones. The vngodly taketh giftes out of the bosome, to wraist the wyayes of judgment.  "Wyszdome shyneth in y face of him y hath vnnderstōdine, but y eyes of fooles wandre thorow out all lōdes.  "An vndiscreet sonne is a grefe vnto his father, and heuynesse vnto his mother y bare him. To punish y innocent, and to smyte y prynces y geue true iudgment, are both euell. He is wyse and discrete, y tempereth his wordes: "and he is a mā of vnnderstōdine, y maketh moch of his sprete. "Yee a very foole (when he holdeth his tongue) is counted wyse, and to haue vnnderstōdine, when he shutteth his lippes.

The rōij. Chapter.

W HO so hath pleasure to sowe discorde, piketh a quarell in every thing. A foole hath no delaie in vnnderstōdine, but only in those things wherein his herte reloysteth. Where vngodlynes is, there is also disidayne: y so there foloweth shame y dis-honoure. The wordes of a mā mouth are like depe waters, and the well of wyszdome is like a full streame.  "It is not good to regarde
y persone of the vngodly, or to put backe y righteous in iudgment. A fools lippes are euer brawlinge, and his mouth proueketh vnto batayll. A fooles mouth is his owne destruction, and his lippes are y suare for his owne soule. The wordes of a slanderer are very woudes, and go thorow vnto the ynnost partes of the body. Who so is slouthfull and slacke in his laboure, is y brother of him y is a waister. The name of y LORDE is a strange castell, y righteous flyeth vnto it, and shalbe saued. But y rich mā goods are his stronge holde, yee he taketh them for an hye wall roide aboute him. After pryde cōmēth destrueciō, and honoure after lowlynes.  "He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, and worthy to be confounded.
A good stomacke dryeth awaye a man's disease, but wha thy sprete is vexed, who maye abyde it? A wyse herte laboureth for knowledge, and a prudent care seketh vnderstanding. Liberalite bryngeth a man to honour and worshiue, 3 setteth him amonge greate men.

The righteous accuseth his self first of all, yf his neibour come, he shal fynde him. The lot pacifieth thy variace, 3 parteth thy mightie asunder. The vnite of brethren is stronger then a castell, and they that holde together are like the barre of a palace. A mans bely shalbe satisfied with the frute of his owne mouth, and with the increase of his lippes shal he be fylled. Death and life stonde in the power of the tonge, that loueth it, shal enjoye the frete thereof.

"Who so fyndeth a wife fyndeth a good thynge, 3 receaueth an wholsome benefite of the LORDE. The poore maketh supplicacion and prayeth mekyly, but the riche geueth a rough answerwe. A frende that delyteth in loue, deth a man more fredshiue, and sticketh faster vnto him then a brother.

Fetter is the poore that lyueth godly, the the blaspheuer that is but a foole. Where no discretion is, there the soule is not well: and who so is swifte on fote, stombleth hastily. Foolishnesse maketh a man to go out of his waye, 3 then is his herte vpacient agaynst the LORDE. Riches make many frendes, but the poore is forsake of his owne frendes. A false wytnesse shal not remayne vnpunished, and he that speaketh lyes shal not escape. The multitude hageth vpó greate men, 3 euer man fawoureth him that geueth rewardes. As for the poore, he is hated amongst all his brethren: yee his owne frendes forsake him, 3 he that geueth credice vnto wordes, getteth nothinge. He that is wyse, loueth his owne soule: and who so hath vnderstandinge, shal suuer. A false wytnesse shal not remayne vnpunished, 3 he thy speake thy lyes shal pershe. Delicate ease becometh not a foole, much more vnsemely is it, a bonde man to haue thy rule of prynces. A wyse man puttheth of displeasure, 3 it is his honoure to let some fautes passe.

Wyne is a volupitous thinge, 3 drok-ennes causeth sedicioun: 4 who so de-lyteth therin, shal neuer be wyse. The kyngge ought to be feared as the roaringe of a lyon, who so prouoketh him vnto anger, offendeth agaynst his owne soule. It is a mans honoure to kepe himself from strife, but they thy haue pleasure in braulinge, are foole suuerene.
A slouthfull body wyl not go to plowe for colde, therfore shal he go abeggynge in Sommer, and haue nothing. Wyse counsell in the herte of man is like a water in the depe of the earth, but he that hath vnderstandinge, bryngeth it forth. Many there be that are called good doers, but where shal one fynde a true faithful man? Who so ledeth a godly and an innocent life, happie shal his children be, whom he leaueth behynde him.

A kyng that syyteth in judgament, and loketh well aboute him, dryueth awaye all euell. Who can saye: my hert is cleane, I am innocent from synne? To vs two maner of weightes, or two maner of measures, both these are abominable vnto the LORDE.

A childe is knowne by his conversacio, whether his workes be pure and right. As for the hearyng of the eare, the sight of the eye, the LORDE hath made the both. Delyte not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouerte: but opě thine eyes, thou shalt haue bred ynowh. It is naught, It is naught (saye men) when they haue it, but when it is gone, they geue it a good worde.

A mouth of vnderstoinge is more worth then golde, many precious stones, and costly Jewels. Take his garment that is suertie for a straunger, take a pledge of him for vnknowne mans sake. Every man liketh the bred that is gotten with diucate, but at the last is mouth shalbe filled with grauel.

Thorow counsell the thinges that men deuyse go forwarde: with discrecion ought warres to be taken in honde. Medle not with him that bewrayeth secretes, and is a slaunderer, and disceueth with his lippes. This who so curseth his father and mother, his light shalbe put out in the myddest of darknesse. The heretage that commeth to haile at the first, shal not be praysed at the ende.

Saye not thou: I will recompence euell, but put thy trust in the LORDE, shal he shal deffende? The LORDE abhorreth two maner of weightes, and a false balauice is an euell thinge. The LORDE ordreth euery man to goinge, for what is he, that vnderstoendeth his owne wayes? It is a snare for a man to blaspheyme that which is holy, then to go aboute with vowes. A wyse kyng destroyeth vngodly, bryngeth the whole ouer them. The lanterne of the LORDE is the breth of man, goeth thorow all the inwarde partes of the body. Mercy faithfulnes preserve the kyng, a vesp louynge kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The strength of yonge men is their worship, a gray heade, is an honoure vnto aged. Woundes dryue awaye euell, and so do stripes the inwarde partes of the body.*

The kynges hert is in the hande of the LORDE, like as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it wherther so euer he will. Every man thinketh his owne waye to be right, but the LORDE judgeth his hertes. To do righteousnesse and judgmet is more acceptable to the LORDE the sacrifice.

A presumptuous loke, a proude stomacke, the lanterne of the vngodly is synne. The deuyseis of one that is diligent, bryngeth plentyousnes: but he that is vnaduyed, commeth vnto pouerte. Who so hoordeth vp riches with the vndescaefulnes of his tonge, he is a foole, a vngodly vnto them that seke their owne death. The robberies of the vngodly shalbe their owne destruccicon, for they wolde not do the thynge that was right. The wayes of the frowarde are strangue, but the workes of him is cleane, are right. It is better to dwell in a corner vnder house toppes, then with a brauling woman in a wyde house. The soule of the vngodly wyssheth euell, and hath no pitie vpon his neibbour.

When the scornefull is pynshed, the ignoraunt take it better hede: when a wyse man is warned, he wil receaue the more vnderstanding. The righteous enfourmeth the house of the vngodly, but the vngodly go on still afther their owne wickednesse. Who so stoppeth his care at the crigne of the poore, he shal criue himself and not be herde. A preuy rewarde pacifieth displeasure, and a gifte in the bosome stilleth furiousnesse.

The iust delyteth in doyng the thyenge that is right, but the workers of wickednesse abhorre the same. The man that wandreth out of the wyse wyse, shal remayne in the colgagion of the deed. He the deed pleasure in banckettes, shal be a poore man: Who so delyteth in wyne and delicates, shal not be riche. The vngodly shalbe geuen for the rightouss, the wicked for the iust.

It is better to dwell in a wylderness, the with a chydinge and an angrie woman. In a wyse mans house there is grete treasure and plenteousnesse, but a foolish body spendeth vp all. Who so foloweth rightoussnesse and mercy, fyndeth both life, rightoussnesse and honour. A wyse man wynneth the cite of the mightie, and as for the strength the they trust in, he bryngeth it downe. Who so kepeth his mouth and his tongue, the same kepeth his soule from troubles. He the is proude a presumptuous, is called a scornefull man, which in wrath darre worke maliciously.

The voluptuousnesse of the slouthfull is his owne death, for his haides will not labour.

He coueteth and desyreth all the daye longe, but the rightouss is allwaye geuyng kepeth nothinge backe. The sacrifice of the vngodly is abominacion, for they offre the thinge the is gotten with wickednes. A false wytnesse shal perishe, but he the wilbe content to heare, shal allwaye haue power to speake himself. An vngodly man goeth forth rashly, but the iust reformathe his owne waye.

There is no wysszdom, there is no understandinge, there is no counsell agaynst the LORDE. The horse is prepared agaynst the daye of battayll, but the LORDE geuyeth the victory.

The rulij. Chapter.

A GOOD name is more worth then greate riches, and loungey favoure is better then syluer and golde. Whether riches or pouer do mete vs, it commeth all of God. A wyse man seythe the plage and hydeth himself, but the foolish go on still and are punished. The ende of lowlynes the feare of God, is riches, honoure, prosperite and health. Speares and snares are in the wyne of the frowarde, but he the wil kepeth his soule, let him fle fro soch. If thou teachest a childe in his youth what waye he shulde go, he shall not leaue it when he is olde. The rich ruleth the poore, and the bowere is seruannt to the lender. He the soweth wickednesse, shal reape sorowse, the rokke of his plage shal destreye him. A loungeye eye shalbe blessed, for he geuyeth of his bred vnto the poore. Cast out the scornefull man, and so shall strife go out with him, yee varianc and slandering shall cease. Who so delyteth to be of a cleene herte and of gracious lyppes, the kyng shal be his frende.

The eyes of the LORDE preserue knowlege, but as for the wordes of the despetyeful, he hyngeth them to naught. The slouthfull body sayeth: there is a lyd with out, I might be slayne in thre strete. The mouth of an harlot is a depe pyt, wherein he falleth that the LORDE is angrie withall. Foolishnes sticketh in the herte of lyt lad, but the rod of correction driueth it awaye. Who so doth a poore man wronge to increase his owne riches, geuyeth (comoly) vnto the rich, and at the last commeth to pouerthe himself. My soume, bowe downe thine eare, and herken vnto the wordes of wyszdomde, applye thy mynde vnto my doctrine: for it is a pleasant thinge thy thou kepeth it in thine herte, and prictise it in thy mouth: that thou mayest allwaye put thy trust in the LORDE. Haue not I warned ye very oft with counsell and lerninge? If I might shewe the the treuth, and that thou with the verite mightest answere them the laye any thinge against thee? Se the thou robbe not thy poore because he is weake, and oppresse not the simple in judgment: for the LORDE himself wyl defende their cause, and do violence vnto them the have vsed violence.

Make no frede with an angrie wyffull man, and kepe no company with a furious: lest thou lerne his wayes, and receaue hurte vnto thy soule. Be not thou one of them the bynde their hande vp to promyse, and are suertie for dett: for if thou hast nothinge to paye, they shall take awaye thy bed from vnder the. Thou shalt not remoue the lande marcke, which thy fore elders haue sett. Seist thou not, the they which be diligent in their busynesse stonde before kynges, and not amongethe the symple people?

The rulij. Chapter.

WHEN thou syttest at the table to eate with a lorde, ordre thy self manerly with the things that are set before thee. Measure thine appetit: and if thou wilt rule thine owne self, be not ouer greedy of his meate, for meate begyleth and disceaueth.

"Take not ouer greate trauayle and laboure to be riche, beware of soch a purpose. Why wilt thou set thine eye vpon thine thinge, which sodenly vanishe awaye? For riches make them selues wynges, and take their flight like an Aegle in to thy ayre. Eate not thou with thy envyous, and desyre not thy meate, for he hath a maruelous herte. He sayeth vnto thy: eate and drynke, where as his herte is not with thy.

Yee thy morsels that thou hast eaten shalt thou perbreake, and lese those swete wordes. Tel nothinge in to thee eares of a foole, for he wyll despyse the wyszdome of thy wordes. 4 Remoue not thy olde lande marke, and come not within thy felde of the fatherlesse: For he thy deluereth them is mightie, euen he shal defende their cause agaist ye. Applie thine herte vnto lernynge, and thine eare to the wordes of knyghowe. 5 Witholde not correcction from thy childe, for if thou beatest him with the rodde, he shal not dye thereof. Thou smytest him with the rodde, but thou deluerest his soule from hell. My sonne, if thy herte receaue wyszdome, my herte also shal reioyce: yee my ryynes shall be very glad, if thy lyppes speake the thinges if is right. 6 Let not thine herte be gelous to followe synners, but kepe still in the feare of the LORDE all the daye lige: for the ende is not yet come, and thy pacient abydinge shal not be in vayne. My sonne, geue eare to be wyse, so shal thine hert prosper in the waye. Kepe no company with wyne beubbers and ryotous eaters of flesh: for soch as be droncekardes and ryotous, 6 shal come to pouer, he that is gueyen to moch slepe, shal goe with a ragged cote. Geue eare vnto thy father that begat the, and despyse not thy mother when shal is olde. Laboure for to get the typography: sell not awaye wyszdome, nourtoure vnderstoédinge (for a righteouse father is maruelous glad of a wyse sonne, he deptyeth in hi) so shal thy father be glad, and thy mother that bare the, shal reioyse. My sonne, geue me thine herte, and let thine eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. 1 For an whores is a depe grauie, and an harlot is a narow pytt. She lurketh like a thefe, and those that be not awarde she brigtheth vnto her. Where is wo? where is sorrow? where is strife?

where is braunlyng? where are wounds without cause? where be reed eyes? Euen amonge those that be euer at the wyne, and seke out where the best is. Loke not thou vpon the wyne, how reed it is, and what a colour it geueth in the glasse.

It goeth downe softly, but at the last it byteth like a serpét, and styngeth as an Adder. So shal thine eyes loke vnto straunge women, my thine herte shal muse vpon frowarde thinges. Yee thou shalt be as though thou slepte, in thy myddest of thy see, or vpo thy toppe of the mast. They wounded me (shalt thou saie) but it hath not hurte me, they smote me, but I felt it not. Whë I am wel wakened, I wil go to thy drynke agayne.

The riiij. Chapter.

Be not thou guloous ouer wicked mè, se syre not thou to be amonge them. 1 For their herte ymagineth to do hurte, their lippes talke of myschefe. Thorow wyszdome an house shalbe byyled, 1 with vnderstondinge it shalbe set vp. Thorow discrecion shal thy chàbers be fylled with all costly plauns riches. A wyse mè is strëge, yee a mè of vnderstoédinge is better, the he thy is mightie of strëgh. For with discrecion must warres be take in honde, and where as are many thy can gene counseell, there is thy victory. Wyszdome is an hie thinge, yee euë to foole, for he darre not opê his mouth in thy gate. He thy ymagineth myschefe, maye weƚ be called an vngracious persone. The thoughte of thy foolish is synne, thy scornewfyle is an abhominaçion vnto mè. 1 Yf thou be ouersene thy necliȝet in tyme of neede, the is thy strëgh but small. Deluyer thy go vnto death, thy are led awaie to be slaine, thy be not necliȝet therin. Yf thou wilt saye: I knewe not of it. Thynkest thou thy he which made thy hertes, doth not cosidre it? 1 Thy he which regardeth thy soule, seith it not? Shal not he recôpence every man acordinge to his workes? My sonne, thou eatest hony thy sweete hone còbe, because it is good thy sweete in thy mouth. Een so shal thy knowlege of wyszdome be vnto thy soule, as soone as thou hast gotte it. And there is good hope, yee thy hope shal not be in vayne. Laye no preysete wickedly vpon thy house of thy righteous, thy disquiète not

The xvith Chapter.

These also are Salomons prouerbes, which the men of Ezechias kinge of Iuda gathered together.

It is the honoure of God to kepe a thinge secrete,

but thy kinges honoure is to search out a thing.

The heaven is hie, thy earth is depe,

thy kinges hert is vnsearchable.

Take thy drosse from thy syluer,

there shalbe a cleane vessell therof.

Take awaye vngodlinesse fro thy kyngye,

this seate shalbe stablished with rightousnes.

Put not forth thy self in thy presence of thy kyngye,

prease not in to thy place of greate men.

Better it is thy it be sayde vnto:

come vp hither, then thou to be set downe in thy presence of thy pryncye, whom thou seyst with thine eyes.

Be not haistie to go to the lawe, happie thou ordre thy self so at thy last,

thy thy neigboure put thy to shame.

Handle thy matter with thy neigboure himself,

discover not another mans secrete:

lest when men heare thereof,

it turne to thy dishonoure, lest thine euell name do not ceasse.

A worde spoken in due season, is like apples of golde in a syluer dyse.

The correcion of the wyse is to an obedient eare,

a golden cheyne and a Jewel of golde.

Like as the wynter coole in the haruest, so is a faithfull messaunger to him that sent him, refreszheth his masters mynde.

Who so maketh greate boasts genueth nothinge, is like cloudes

wynde without rayne.

With pacience maye a pryncye be pacified, with a soft tonge maye rigorousnes be broke.

Yf thou findest hony, eate so much as is suffiect for thy: lest thou be overtull, per breake it out againe.

Withdrawe thy foote fro thy neigbours house,

lest he be weery of the,

and so abhorre the.

Who so beareth false wytnesse agaynst his neigboure,

he is a very speare, a swearde

a sharpe arowe.

The hope of the vngodly in tyme of dede, is like a rotten toth and a slippery foote.

Who so syngeth a songe to a wicked herte,

closeth hi with rages in the colde,

and pouereth vyneger vpon chalke.

Yf thine enemie honger,

fede hym:

yf he thyst,

geue him drynke:

for so shalt thou heape coales of fyre

rwarde the.

The north wynde dryueth awaye

rayne, even so doth an earnest sober countenaunce

a back byters tonge. It is better to gyt in a corner vnder the rofe,

then with a braulnyng woman in a wyde house.

A good reporte out of a farre countre, is like colde water to a thystrie soule.

A righteous man

LIKE as it is not good to eate to moch hony, even so he that wyl search out hye thynges, it shal be to heuy for him. He that can not rul him self, is like a cite, which is broken downe, and hath no walles.

The 117. Chapter.

LIKE as snowe is not mete in sommer, ner rayne in haruest: even so is wor-shippe vnsemely for a foole. Like as y byrde and the swalowe take their flight and fle here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shal not light vpon a man. \[Vpto the horse belongeth a whyppe, tv the Asse a byrde, and a rodde to the fooles backe. Geue not the foole an answeare after his foolishnesse, lest thou become like vnto him: but make y foole an answeare to his foolishnesse, lest he be wyse in his owne coceate. He is lame of his fete, yee droncken is he in vanite, that comitteth evy thinge to a foole. Like as it is an vnsemely thighe to haue legges y yet to halte, euë so is a parable in y foolees mouth.

He y setteth a foole in hye dignite, y es euë as yf a man dyd cast a precious stone vpo y galous. A parable in a foolees mouth, is like a thorne y pricketh a droncken man in y hande. A man of experience discerneth all thinges well, but who so hyreth a foole, hyreth soch one as wyl take no hede. Like as the dogg turneth agayne to his vomite; euë so a foole begynneth his foolishnesse agayne afresh. Yf thou seyest a man y is wyle in his owne concoate, there is more hope in a foole then in hi. The slouthfull sayeth: there is a leoparde in y waye, and a lyon in y myddest of the streetes. Like as the doore turneth aboute vpon the tresholde, euë so doth the slouthfull welter himself in his bedd. The slouthfull body thrusteth his hode in to his bosome, and it greueth him to put it agayne to his mouth. The slogarde thinketh him self wyser, then vij men that sytt and teach.

Who so goeth by and medleth with other mens strife, he is like one y taketh a dogg by y eares. Like as one shuteth deadly arowes and dartes out of a preuy place, euë so doth a dyssembler with his neghbour, And then sayeth he: I dyd it but in sporte. Where no wodd is, there the fyre goeth out: and where the bacbyter is taken awaye, there the strife ceaseth. Coles kyndle heate, and wodd y

fyre: euë so doth a braulinge felowe stre vareiance. A slauderers words are like flattery, but they pearse y inwarde partes of y body. Venymous lippes a wicked herte, are like a pottherde couered with syluer drosse. An enemie dyssembleth with his lippes, and in the meane season he ymagineth myschefe: but wha he speaketh fayre, beleue him not, for there are seuen abhominacions in his herte. Who so kepeth euell will secretly to do herte, his malyce shal be shewed before the whole congregacion. Who so dyggeth vp a pytt, shal fal therin: and he y weltreth a stone, shal stumble vpon it hymselfe.

A dyssembleinge tonge hateth one that rebuketh him, and a flattere mouth worketh myschefe.

The 118. Chapter.

MAKE not thy boost of tommorrow, for thou knowest not what maye happen todaye. Let another maa prays the, g not thine owne mouth: yee other folkes lippes, and not thyne. The stone is heuy, and the sonde weightie: but a foolees wrath is heuyer then they both. Wrath is a cruell thighe, and furiousnes is a very tempest: yee who is able to abyde envye? An open reube is better, then a secrete loue. Faithfull are the wounded of a lourer, but y kysses of an enemie are disceatfull. He that is full, abhorreth an hony combe: but vnto him that is borgrie, euery sower thinges is swete. He that oft tymes flytteth, is like a byrde y forsaketh hir nest. The herte is glad of a swete oymtment and sauoure, but a stomacke that cal gue good counseil, reioyseth a mens neghbour. Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frende se thou forsake not, but go not in to thy brothers house in tyne of thy trouble.

Better is a frende at hode, then a brother farre of. My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalt make me a glad herte: so that I shall make answere vnto my rebukers. A wyse man seynge the plage wyl hyde him self, as for foolees they go on still, and suffer harme. Take his garment that is suertie for a straunger, take a pledge of him for the vndtownes sake. He that is to hastie to praise his neghbour aboue measure, shalbe taken as one y geueth him an euell reporte. A brawlynge woman and the rofe of the house droopynge in a raynie daye, maye well be comparde together. He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in his hode. Like as one yrō whetteth another, so doth one man comforthe another. Who so kepeth his fyge tre, shal enjoye the frutes therof: he that wayeteth on his master, shal come to honoure. Like as in one water there apare dyuerse faces, ene so dyuerse men hane dyuerse hertes. Like as hell destructione are neuer full, even so the eyes of mē can never be satisfied. Syluer is tryed in the moulde, golde in the fornuce, so is a man, when he is openly pryased to his face. Though thou shiddest bray a foole with a pestell in a morter like otomcell, yet wil not his foolishnesse go from him. So thou knowe the nombre of thy catell thy self, and loke well to thy flockes. For riches abyde not allwayne, the crowne endureth not for euer. The hay groweth, the grass grasse vp, herbes are gathered in mountains.

The lambes shal clothe thee, the goates thou shalt haue money to fede the, to vpholde thy husholde, to susteyne thy maydens.

He that is no man chasyng he, but the righous stoneeth stiffe as a lyon. Because of synne he londe doth oft chaunge his prync: but thorow men of vnderstandinge wysdome a realme endureth longe. One poore man oppresseing anothe by violence, is like a contynuall rayne that destroyeth the frute. They that forsake the lawe, praye vngodly: but soche as kepe the lawe, abhorre them. Wicked men diercene not the thinge is right, but they that seike after the LORDE, discerne all things. A poore man ledynge a godly life, is better then the riche that goeth in frowarde wayes. Who so kepeth the lawe, is a child of vnderstandinge: but he fedeth ryotous men, shameneth his father. Who so increaseth his riches by vaytage wynnyng, let him gather them to helpe the poore withal. He that turneth awaye his care from hearinge of lawe, his prayer shalbe abhorred. Who so ledeth the rightous in to an euell waye, shal fall in to his owne pyt, but ñ just shal have the good in possession.

The rich man thynketh him selfe to be wyse, but the poore that hath vnderstandinge, perceaueth him wel ynowth. When righous men are in prosperite, the doth honoure florish: but when the vngodly come vp, they state of men changeth. He that hydeth his synnes, shall not prosper: but who so knowlegeth them and forsaketh them, shal have mercy. Well is him that stōdeth all waye in awe: as for him that hardeneth his herte, he shal fall in to mischefe. Like as a roaringe lyon and an hongrie beer, even so is an vngodly prynce ouer the poore people.

Where the prync is without vnderstandinge, there is greate oppression wronge: but ñ he be soch one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe raigne. He that by violē sheddeth eny mans bloud, shal be a renagate vnto his graue, and no man shal be able to succoure him. Who so leadeth a godly and an innocent life, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shal once haue a fall. He tylleth his londe, shal have plenteounesse of brede: but he that foloweth yldinesse, shal haue pouerete ynowth. A faithfull man is greatly to be commendèd, but he that maketh to mouch haist for to be riche, ñ shall not vnguité. To haue respecte of personnes in iudgment is not good: And why? he will do wronge, yee even for a pece of brede. He that will be rich all to soone, hath an euell eye, and considereth not, that pouerete shall come vpon him. He that rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at ñ last, the he that flatreth him. Who so robbeth his father and mother,* and sayeth it is no synne: the same is like vnto a mortherer.

He that is of a proude stomacke, stereth vp strife: but he that putteth his trust in ñ LORDE, shalbe well fedd. He that trusteth in his owne hert, is a foole: but he that dealeth wisely, shalbe safe. He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye his eyes from such as be in necessite, shall suffre greater pouerete himself.

*When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hyde them selues: but whē they perish, the righous increase.
H

HE that is stiffnecked v will not be renourmed, shall sdenly be destroyed with out eny helpe. *Where v righteous haue the ouer hande, v people are in prosperitie: but where the vn godsly beareth rule, there v people mourn. Who so loueth wyszdome, maketh his father a glad man: but he v kepet har-lottes, spedeth awaye v he hath. With true judgment v kyenge setteth vp the londe, but v he be a man v taketh gifts, he turneth it vsyde downe. Who so flatreth his neibbour, layeth a nette for his fete. The synne of v wicked is his owne snare, but v righteous shal be glad and reioyse. The righteous considereth the cause of the poore, but the vn godsly regardeth no vnderstondynge. Wicked people brynge a cite in decaye, but wyse men set it vp agayne. Yf a wyse man go to lave with a foole (whether he deale with him friendly or roughly) he geteth no rest. The bloud-thurstie hate the righteous, but the just seke his soyle. A foole poureth out his sprete allto-gether, but a wyse man kepeth it in till afterwarde.
Yf a prync e delyte in lyes, all his seruauntes are vn godsly. The poore and the lendre mete together, the LORDE lightenth both their eyes. *The seate of the kinge v faithfully judgeth the poore, shal continue sure for evermore. The rode and correccion mynstre wyszdome, but vf a childe be not loked vnto, be bryngeth his mother to shame. When the vn godsly come vp, wickednesse increaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall. Nurtoure thy sonne with correccion, and he shal conforte
the, yee he shal do the good at thine hert.
Where no prophete is, there the people perishe:
but well is him that kepeth the lawe. A seruaunt wil not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstonde, yet wil he not regarde them.

Yf thou seyst a man that is haistic to speake vnaduyed, thou mayest trust a foole more then him. He that delicately bryngeth vp his seruaunt from a childe, shal make him his master at length. An angrie man stereth vp strife, and he that bareaeth euell wyll in his mynde, doth moch euell. After pryde con-meth a fall, but a lowly sprete bryngeth great worship. Who so kepeth company with a thefe, hateth his owne soule: he heareth blasphemies, a tellet it not forth.

He that feareth men, shall haue a fall: but who so puttheth his trust in the LORDE, shal come to honour. Many there be that seke v prynces fauoure, but every mans judgment commeth from the LORDE.

The righteous abhorre the vn godsly: but as for those that be in v right waye, v wicked hate them.

The ende of the proverbs of Salomon.

These are the words of Kynge Lamuel, a y lesson y his mother taught him.
My sonne, thou sonne of my body: O my deare beloued sonne, gene not ouer thy substance a mynde vnto women, which are the destruccio euë of kynges. O Lamuel, gene kinges no wyne, gene kynges a prynce no stronge drynke: lest they beinge dronken forget the lawe, a regarde not y cause of the poore, a of all soch as be in aduersite. Gene stronge drynke vnto soch as are condemnpd to death, a wyne vnto those y mourne: that they maye drynke it, a forget their misery a aduersite. Be thou an advocate a stonde in judgment thyself, to speake for all soch as be dome a sucourles. With thy mouth defende y thinge y is lauffull and right, and y cause of y poore and helplesse.

Who so fyndeth an honest faithful woma, she is much more worth the perles. The herte of hir husbande maye safely trust in her, so that he shal haue no neede of spoyles.

She wil do him good a not euel all y dayes of hir life. She occupieth woll a flax, a laboureth gladly with hir handes. She is like a marchauntes shippe, that bryngeth hir vytyales from farre. She is vp in y night season, to prouyde meate for hir housholde, a foode for hir maydens. She considreth lode, a byeth it, and with the frute of hir handes she planteth a vynyarde. She gyrdeth hir lownes with strength, and courageth hir armes. And yf she perceauce that hir houswifrie doth good, hir candle goeth not out by night. She layeth hir fyngers to the spynydle, a hir hande taketh holde of y rocke.

She openeth hir hande to y poore, yee she stretcheth forth hir hades to soch as haue nede. She feareth not y the colde of wynter shal hurte hir house, for all hir housholde folkes are dube clothed. She maketh hir selfe fayre ornaments, hir clothige is whyte sylke a purple.

Hir huszbade is moch set by in y gates, whë he sytteth amonge y rulers of y londe. She maketh cloth of sylke a selleth it, and deuuereth a girdle vnto y marchaït.

Strëght and honoure is hir clothinge, a in the latter daye she shal reioyse. She openeth hir mouth with wyszdome, a in hir toge is the lawe of grace. She loketh wel to the wayes of hir housholde, a eateth not hir bred with ydilnes. Hir children arise a call hir blessed, a hir husbane maketh moch of her. Many daughters there be y gather riches together, but thou goest aboute the all. As for faouore, it is discatefull, and beutie is aayne thinge: but a woman that feareth the LORDE, she is worthy to be prayd. Gene her of the frute of hir handes, and let hir owne workes prayse her in the gates.

Ecclesiastes.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. I.
All things (yf a mā wyl cōsidre them wel) are but vanite. Neeuertheles amōge them all there is nothige weaker and more vnstedfast, then man him self.

Chap. II.
In this chapter (and in the other also) be maketh oft tymes mēsion of the wordes and cōuersaciō of the vngodly : that by this meanes he maye the better cause men to despise all creatures, in respecte of the only euerlastinge God.

Chap. III.
Euery thing hath a tyme. There is no thige, but God hath put tedyousnesse and trauayle in it, to exercice men withall. What so ever a man enioyeth of his laboure, the same is a gift of God, geuen to the intent that men shulde feare him.

Chap. IIII.
A cōsideracion of diuerse thinges. There is nothinge so excellent and hye, but yf it do not the deuty and office where vnto it is ordened, it shalbe brought lowe.

Chap. V.
Agaynst foolish and temerarious vowes. Let no man marauyle that so much enell is done, for the wicked are many. Agaynst the riche and agaynest riches.

Chap. VI.
Agaynst those riche mē that darre not enioye their riches : how mad and foolish they be.

Chap. VII.
No man knoweth what is for to come. How worthy a thige it is to haue a good name. The profit of wyszdome.

Chap. VIII.
Of the obedïeçce which men owe vnto God and to their heads. The lōge sufferance of God is not to be despised. It is not possible for eny mā, to cōprehende the workes that be in the worlde.

Chap. IX.
Like thinges happen vnto all men : therfore with myrth and thankfulnesse shulde men enioye the gifts of God. Wyszdome passeth all thinges.

Chap. X. XI.
In these two chapters are many wyse and profitable sentences, wel worthy to be considered of euery man.

Chap. XII.
In this chapter the preacher sheweth his whole meanynge, as though he wolde saye: As for all the thinges that be vnder the Sonne (wher of I haue spoken) I haue cōsidred them, and proued them metely well by experience. And this is the conclucion, that there is nothynge stedfast and durable but God himself, whō men ought to feare, and to haue his cōmande-mentes before their eyes euyn from their youth vp.

The first Chapter.
These are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of Dauid, kyng of Jerusalem.

ALL is but vanite (saieth y preacher) "all is but playne vanite. For what els
* Eccl. 12. b.

hath a mā, of all the laboure ḳ he taketh vnder the Sonne? One generacio passeth awaye, another commeth, but the earth abydeth still. The Sōne arysteth, the Sonne goeth downe, a returneth to his place, ḳ he maye there ryse vp agayne. The wynde goeth towards the South, fetcheth his copase aboute vnto the North, so turneth in to himself agayne. All floudes runne in to the see, yet the see is not fyllde: for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thene they come agayne. All thinges are so harde, y no ma can expresse them. The eye is not satisfied with sight, the care is not fyllde with hearinge.

The thinge ye hath bene, cometh to passe agayne: ye thinge ye hath bene done, is done agayne, there is no new thinges vnder the Sonne. Is there any thinge, wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is new? For it was loge agoo in the tymes ye haue bene before vs. The thinge ye is past, is out of remembreannce: Euen so the thinges that are for to come, shal no more be thought vpó amoge the that come after. I myself ye Preacher, beyng kynge of Israel ye Jerusalem, applied my mynde to seke out search for the knowlege of all thinges ye are done vnder heau. Soch traualye ye laboure hath God geue vnto ye childre of me, to exercise the selues theer.

Thus I haue considered all the thinges that come to passe vnder the Sonne, lo, they are all but vanite ye vexacion of mynde. The crooked can not be mayde straight, ye the fautes ca not be nóbred. I comonned with myne owne herte, sayenge: lo, I am come to a greate estate, and haue gotte more wyszdome, the all they ye haue bene before me in Jerusalem. Yee my herte had greate experiecce of wyszdome ye knowlege, for there vnto I applied my mynde: ye I might knowe what were wyszdome ye vnderstodinge, what were errore ye foolishnes. And I perceaued ye this also was but a vexacion of mynde: for where moch wyszdome is, there is also greate traualye ye disquietnes: ye ye more knowlege a man hath, the more is his care.

The 12. Chapter.

THE sayde I thus in my herte: Now go to, I wil take myne ease ye haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanite also: in so mocch that I sayde vnto laughter: thou art madd, and to myrth: what doest thou?

So I thought in my herte, to withdrawe my flesh from wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wyszdome, and to comprehende foolishnes, vntill the tyme that (amonge all ye thinges which are vnder ye Sonne) I might se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

I made gorgious fayre worke, I buylded me houses, and planted vynyardes: I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water ye grene and frutefull trees withall. I bought seruantes and maydès, and had a greate housholde. As for catell and shipe, I had more substaunce of them, then all they ye were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered syluer ye gold together, euenc a treasurye of kynges ye londes.

I provided me syngers and womenc which coude playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth and pastime. I gat me drynkynges cuppes also and glasses. (Shortly) I was greater ye in more worshipe, then all my predecessours in Jerusalem. Fyr wyszdome remaynede with me: ye loke what so euere myne eyes desyre, I let them haue it: ye wherein so euere my herte delayted or had eny pleasure, I withhelde it not fro it. Thus my herte rejoyced in all ye I dyd, and this I toke for the porcion of all my traualye. But when I considered all the worke ye my handes had wrought, and all the labours that I had taken therin: lo, all was but vanite and vexacion of mynde, ye nothinge of eny value vnder ye Sonne. Then turned I me to consider wyszdome, errore and foolishnes (for what is he amonge men, that might be compared to me ye kyng in soch worke?) and I sawe, that wyszdome excelleth foolishnesse, as farre as light doth darknesse. For a wyse man beareth his eyes aboute in his heade, but the foole goeth in the darknesse. I perceaued also that they both had one ende.

Then thought I in my mynde: Ye if it happen c vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to laboure eny more for wyszdome? So I confessed within my herte, that this also was but vanite. For the wyse are euere as little in remembreannce as the foolish, and all the dayes for to come shalbe forgotten, yee the wyse man dyeth as well as ye foole. Thus begane I to be weere of my life, in so mocch that I coude awaye with nothinge that is done vnder the Sonne, for all was was but vanite ye vexacion of mynde: Yee I was weere of all my laboure, which I had taken vnder the Sonne, because I shulde be fayne to leaue them vnto another man, that cōmoth after me: for who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyse mā or a fool? And yet shal he be lorde of all my labours, which I with soch wyszdome haue taken under the Sonne. Is not this a vayne thinge?

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde from all soch traualye, as I toke vnder the Sonne: for so much as a man shulde weere him self with wyszdome, with understondinge and opportunitie, and yet be fayne to leauie his labours vnto another, y yeuer sweett for them. This is also a vayne thinge and a great misery. For what getteth a mā of all y laboure q laboure of his mynde, y he taketh vnder the Sonne, but heuyynesse, sorowe q disquyetnes all y dayes of his life? In so much that his herte can not rest in the night. Is not this also a vayne thinge? Is it not better then for a mā to eate and drynke, and his soule to be mery in his laboure? Yee I sawe that this also was a gifte of God: *For who maye eate, drynke, or brynge eny thinge to passe without him? And why? he geueth vnto mā, what it pleaseth hym: whether it be wyszdome, understondinge, or gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth weeryness and sorow, that he maye gather and heape togeth er y thinge, y afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto hym whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thinge, yee a very disquietenese and vexaciō of mynde.

The iii. Chapter.

E UERY thinge hath a tyme, yee all that is vnder the heauen, hath is convenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye. *There is a tyme to plate, and a tyme to plucke vp the thinge, y is planted: A tyme to slaye, and a tyme to make whole: A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp: A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh: A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunse: A tyme to cast away stones, and a tyme to gather stones together: A tyme to embrace, q a tyme to refrayne from enbracynge: A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese: A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende: A tyme to cutt in peaces, and a tyme to sowe together: A tyme to kepe sylēce, and a tyme to speake: A tyme to lōue, q a tyme to hate: A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a mā els (that doth eny thinge) but weerynesse and laboure? *For as touchinge the traualye and carefulnesse which God hath geuen vnto mē, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All this hath he ordened marvelous goodly, to every thinge his due tyme. He hath platted ignoraunce also in the hertes of men, y they shulde not fynde out y grounde of his workes, which he doth from y beginninge to y ende. So I perceaued, y in these thinges there is nothinge better for a man, the to be mery q to do well so longe as he lyueth. For all y a man eathet q drynketh, yee what so euer a mā enioyeth of all his laboure, y same is a gift of God. *I considered also y what so euer God doth, it cotynueth for euer, q y nothinge can be put vnto it ner takē from it: q y God doth it to y intent, y men shulde feare him. *The thinge y hath bene, is now: q the thinge y is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for God restoreth agayn the thinges that was past. Morover, I sawe vnder y Sonne, vngodlynesse in the steade of judgment, q iniquite in steade of rightousnesse.

Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separate the rightuous from the vngodly, q then shal be the tyme q judgmet of all councevs q workes. I comoned with myne owne herte also cočerunys the childeř of men: how God hath chosen them, and yet letteč the apare, as though they were beasts: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beasts, q as the one dyeth, so dyeth y other: yee they haue both one maner of breth, so y (in this) a man hath no preemynence aboue a beest, but all are subdun vnto vanite. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shal they all turne vnto dust againe.

*Who knoweth the sprete of man y goeth vpwarde, and the breth of the beest y goeth downe in to the earth? Wherfore I perceaued, y there is nothinge better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his laboure, for that is his porcion. But who wil brynge him to se the thinges, that shal come after him?

The iii. Chapter.

S O I turned me, *and considered all the a violent wronge that is done vnder the Sonne: and beholde, the teares of soch as were oppressed, and there was no man to comforte them, or that wolde delyuer and defende them from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I judgged those that are deed, to be more happie then such as be alyue: yee him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease the they both, because he seith not the miserable worke that are done vnder the Sonne. Agayne, I sawe that all travayle and diligence of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vaine thinge, and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, a eateth vp his owne flesh. One handfull (saith he) is better with rest, the both the handes full with labour and travayle. Moreover, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanite vnder the Sonne. There is one man, no mo but himselfe alone, hauynge nether childe ner brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull travayle, his eyes can not be satisfied with riches, (yet doth he not remembre himself, a saye:) For whom do I take soch travayle? for whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and miserable thinge. THEREFORE two are better then one, for they maye well enjoye the profit of their labour. Yf one of them fall, his companyon helpeth him vp againe: But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One maye be overcome, but two maye make resistauce: A threfolde cable is not lightly broken. A poore childe beynge wyse, is better then an olde kinge, that doteth, and can not beware in tyme to come. *Some one commeth out of preson, a is made a kyng: a another which is borne in the kyngdom, commeth vnto pouer. And I perceaued, y all men lyuynge vnder the Sonne, go with the seconde childe, that commeth vp in the steade of the other. As for the people that hauue bene before him, and that come after him, they are inumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thorow him. This is also a vayne thinge and a vexacion of mynde. When thou commest in to the house of God, kepe thy fote, and drawe nye, that thou mayest heare: *that is better then the offeringes offooles, for they knowe not what euell they do.

The 6. Chapter.

BE not haste with thy mouth, a let not a thine hert speake any thige rashly before God. For God is in heauen, a thou vpon earth, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moch carefullnesse is, there are many carefulnes: a where many wordes are, there men maye heare foole. *Yf thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to perforrne it. As for foolish wordes, he hath no pleasure in them. Yf thou promyeve any thinge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then that thou shuldest promise, and not paye. Vse not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne, y thou saye not before the angell: my foolishnesse is in y fauete.

For the God wil be angrie at thy voyce, and destroye all the workes of thine handes.

And why? where as are many dreams a many wordes, there are also dyuerse vanities: *but loke y thou feare God. Yf thou seyst the poore to be oppressed and wrongeously dealt withall, so y equite a the right of the lawe is wraisted in the londe: maruell not thou at soch judgmet, for one greate m kepeth touch with another, and the mightie helpe the selues together. The whole londe also with the feldes and all that is therin, is in subieccion and bondage vnto y kinge.

He that loueth money, wil neuer be satisfied with money: and who so deyltet in riches, shal haue no profit thereof. Is not this also a vayne thinge? Where as many riches are, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, sawynge that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouringe man slepeth swetely, whether it be litle or moch that he eateth: *but the abundance of the riche wil not suffre him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, which I haue sen vnder the Sonne (namely) riches kepte to the hurt of him y hath them in possession.

*For oft times they perishe with his grete misery and trouble: and yf he haue a childe, it getteh nothinge. Like as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, and carieth nothinge awaye with him of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, y he shal go awaye euyn as he came. What helpeth it him then, y he hath labored in the wynde? All the daies of his life also must he eate in the darseke, with greate carefulnesse, sickenes and sorow.

"Therefore me thinketh a better and a fayerer thinge, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of all his labour, y he taketh vnder the Sonne all the daies of his life which God geueth him, for this is his porcion. For vnto whom so euer God geueth riches, goodes and power, he geueth it him to enioye it, to take it for his porcion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is now the gifte of God. For he thinketh not mouch how longe he shall lyue, for so mouch as God fylleth his hert with gladness.

The vi. Chapter.

A THERE is yet a plage vnder y Sonne, it is a generall thinge amonge me: when God geueth a man riches, goodes and honoure, so that he wanteth nothinge of all that his herte can desyre: and yet God geueth him not leue to enioye the same, but another man spedeth them. This is a vayne thinge a miserable plage. Yf a man begett an hundred children, and lyue many yeres, so that his daies are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, neither be buried: as for him I saye, that an vn tymely byrth is better then he. For he cometh to naught, goeth his wyne in to dareknese, and his name is forgotten. Morover, he seth not the Sonne, and knoweth of no rest nether here nether there: Yee though he lyued two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good life. Come not all to one place? All the laboure that a man taketh, is for himself, and yet his desyre is neuer fylld after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walke before the lyuyne? The sight of the eyes is better, then that the soule shulde so departe awaye. Howbeit this is also a vayne thinge and a disquietnesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet he can not in the lawe get the victorie of him that is mightier the he: A vayne thinge is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man els?

The vii. Chapter.

A FOR who knoweth what is good for man lyuyne, in y daies of his vayne life, which is but a shadowe? Or, who wil tell a man, what shal happen after him vnder the Sonne? A good name is more worth then a precious oynment, and the daie of death is better thē y daie of byrth. It is better to go in to an house of mournyng, then in to a bancket house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuyng, taketh it to herte. It is better to be sory then to laugh, for whe the countenance is heuy, the herte is joyfull. The herte of y wyse is in the mournyng house, but the hert of the foolish is in the house of myrth. It is better to gue eare to the chastennyng of a wyse man, then to heare the songe of foole. For the laughinge of fooles is like y crackynge of thornes vnder a pott. And y is but a vayne thinge.

Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyse man to go out of his witt, and destroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thinge is better then the begynnynge. The pacient of sprette is better then the he mynyed. Be not hastily angrie in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: What is the cause that y daies of y olde tyme were better, then they y be now? for that were no wyse question. Wyszdome is better then riches, yee more more worth then the eye sight. For wyszdome defendeth as well as moneye, and the excellent knowlege and wyszdome geueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Considre the worke of God, how that no man can make the thinge straight, which he maketh croked. Vse well the tyme of prosperite, and remembere the tyme of mysfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde no thinge els.

These ij. thyges also hæue I cosidred in y tyme of vanite: y the iust man perisheth for his righteousnes sake, the vngodly lyueth in his wickednesse. Therfore be thou nether to rightious ner ouer wyse, thy thou perish not: be nether to vnrighetus also ner to foolish, lest thou die before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, not to let y go out of thy hande. For he y feareth God shall escape them all.

"Wyszdome geueth more correge vnto the wyse, then ten mightie men of the citie: for there is not one iust vpō earth, y doth good, a sinneth not. Take not hede vnto euer Wyszdoms. — maketh a mans face to shine, but malice putteth it out of fauoure. Kepe the kynges commaundemete (I warne the) that the oath y thou hast made vnto God. Be not haistie to go out of his sight, but stone cōtynue in no euell thynge: for what so euer it pleaseth hym, dooth he. Like as when a kyng geueth a charge, his commaundement is mightie: Euen so whome maye saye vnto hym: what doest thou? Who so kepeith the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mans herte discerneth tymeth and maner: For every thynge wil haue opportunitie and judgment, and this is the thing that maketh men full of carefulnesse and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for whoyll tell him? Nether is there eny ma y hath power ouer y sprete, to kepe still y sprete, ner to haue eny power in the tyme of death: It is not he also that can make an ende of the batayll, nether maye vngodlynes deluyer him y medleth withall.

All these things haue I considered, and applied my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the Sonne: how one man hath lord-ship vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue ofte seen y vngodly brought to their graves, and fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so moch y they were forgotten in the cite, where they were had in so hye greate reputation. This is also a vayne thynge. Because now that euell worke are not haistely punished, the hert of man geueth him selfe ouer vnto wickednesse: But though an euell persone offende an hundrith tymes, and haue a longe life: yet am I sure, that it shal go well with the that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shal not be well with him, nether shal he prologue his dayes: but euene as a shadowe, so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vane it vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whom it goeth as though they had the workes of y righteous. This me thinketh also a vaine thing. Therefore I commendee gladnesse, because a man hath no better thinge vnder the Sonne, then to eate and drynke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of his labour all the dates of his life, which God geueth him vnder the Sonne. When I applied my mynde to lerne wyszdomd, and to knowe the travaile that is in the world (and that of soch a fashion, y I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether daye ner night) I vnderstode of all it worke of God, that it is not possible for a man, to attayne vnto it worke that are done vnder it Sonne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto the: yee though a wyse man wolde vnderake to knowe them, yet might he not fynde them.

For all these thinges I in my mynde to seke out. The righteous and wyse yee and their worke also are in the hande of God: and there is no man that knoweth ether the loue or hate of the thinge that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth with the righteuous as with the vngodly: with the good clean as with the vnicleane: with him that offereth as with him that offereth not: like as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also.
with the syner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also vnto him that is aafayed to be man sworn. Amonge all things y come to passe vnder the Sonne, this is a misery, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the herites of men are full of wickednesse, a madd foolishnesse is in their herites as longe as they lyne, vntill they dye.

And why? As longe as a man lyueth, he is careles: for a quyck dogg (saye they) is better then a deed lion: for they that be lyuynge, knowe y they shall dye: but they y be deed, knowe nothinge, nether deserue they eny more. For their memorie is forgotte, so y they be nether loued, hated ner enyved: nether haue they eny more parte in y worlde, in all y is done vnder the Sonne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy bred with ioye, a drynke thy wyne with gladnesse, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmettes be all waye whyte, a let thy heade want no oyntmet. Vse thy self to lyue joyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, all y daies of thy life (which is but vayne) y

God hath geue the vnder the Sonne, all y daies of thy vanite: for y is thy porcion in this life, of all thy labour a traualle y thou takest vnder the Sonne. What so euer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for amoge the deed (where as thou goest vnto) there is nether worke, counell, knowelege nere wyszdome.

So I turned me vnto other things vnder y Sonne, and I sawe, that in runnyng, it helpe not to be swift: in batayll, it helpe not to be stronge: to fedyngg, it helpe not to be wyse: to riches, it helpe not to be sylly: to be had in fawoure, it helpe not to be connynge: but that all lyeth in tyne a fortune. For a man knoweth not his tyne, but like as the fyshe are takyn with the angle, and as the byrdes are catched with the snare: Euyn so are men taken in the perilous tymes, when it commeth sodenyly vpon them.

This wyszdome haue I sene also vnder y Sonne, a y me thought it a greate thynge. There was a little cite, a a fewe men within it: so there came a greate kyngge a beseged it, a made greate bulworkes agaynst it. And in the cite there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which with his wyszdome deluyed the cite: yet was there no body, y had any respecte vnto such a sylmpe man. Then sayde I: wyszdome is better then strengthe. Neuertheles, a sylmpe mans wyszdome is despysed, a his wordes are not herde. A wise mans counell that is folowed in sylence, is farre above the crienge of a captaine amoue fooles. For wyszdome is better then harnesse: but one vnthrift alone destroyeth moch good.

The r. Chapter.

D EED flies y corruppe swete oyntment a a make it to stynecke, are somthinge more worth then the wyszdome a honoure of a foole. A wyse mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles hert is vpon the left. A dotinge foole thinketh, y every man doth as foolishly as himself. Yf a principal sprete be gue the to beare rule/ be not negliget the in thine office: for so shal greate wickednesse be put downe, as it were with a medecyne. Another plagge is there, which I haue sene vnder the Sonne: namely, y ignorance y is comonly amonge prynces: in y a foole syyteth in greate dignite, a the rich are sett downe beneth: I se seruantes ryde vpon horses, a prynces goinge vpon their fete as it were seruantes. But he y dyggeth vp a pyt, shall fall therin himself: a who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shall byte him. Who so remoueth stones, shall haue traualye withall: and he that heweth wod,shalbe hurt therwith.

When an yron is blont, and y point not sharpened, it must be whett againe, and that with might: Euen so doth wiszdome folowe diligence. A babler of his tongue is no better, then a serpent that styngeth without hyssynge. The wordes out of a wyse mens mouth are gracious, but the lippes of a foole wil destroye himself. The begynnynge of his talkynge is foolishnes, and the last wordes of his mouth is greate madnesse. A foole is so full of wordes, that a man can not tell what ende he wyl make: who wyl then warn he to make a conclucion? The laboure of y foolish is grousous vnto the, while they knowe not how to go in to the cite.

Wo be vnto the (O thou realme and londe) c whose kyngge is but a childe, and whose prynces are early at their banckettes. But well is the (O thou realme and londe) whose kinge is Come of nobles, and whose prynces eate in due season, for strength and not for lust. Thorow slouthfulnessse the bales fall downe, and thorow ydle hides it rythenh in at the house. Meate maketh men to laugh," and wyne maketh them mery: but vnto money are all things obedient. Wysh the kynghe no euell in thy thought, and speake no hurte of " ryche in thy preuye chamber: for a byrde of the ayre shal betraye thy voyce, and with his fethers shal she bewraye thy wordes.

The ri. Chapter.

S ENDE thy vytayles ouer the waters, and so shalt thou fynde the after many yeares. Geue it awaye amonge seuen or eight, for thou knowest not what misery shall come vp of earth. Whel the cloudes are full, they poure out rayne vpon the earth. And whel thetre falleth, (whether it be towarde the south or north) in what place so euer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth th wynde, shal not sowe: and he that hath respecte vnto the cloudes, shal not reap. Nowe as like as thou knowest not the waye of the wynde, ner how bones are fylled in a mothers wombe: Even so thou knowest not the worke of God, which is the workemaster of all.

Cease not thoutherefore with thy handes to sowe thy sede, whether it be in thymornyng or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper, if they both take, it is the better. The light is swete, a a pleasingaunt it is for the eyes to loke vpon the Sonne. If a man lyue many yeares, and be glad in them all, let him remembre the dayes of darcknessse, which shal be many: if when they come, all thinges shal be but vane. Be glad then (O thou yonge man) in thy youth, and lat thine hert be mery in thy yonge dayes: solowe the wayes of thine owne hert, and the lust of thine eyes: but be thou sure, that God shal bringe the in to judgment for all these thinges.

The riij. Chapter.

PUT awaye displeasure out of thy hert, a remoue euell from thy body: for child-

hode and youth is but vanite. Remembre thy maker in thy youth, or euer the dayes of aduersite come, and or the years drawe nye, when thou shalt saye: I haue no pleasure in them: before the Sonne, light, Moone and the starres be darckened, and or the cloudes turre agayn after the rayne: when the kepers of the house shall tremble, and when the stronge men shal bowe them selues: when the Myllers stonde still because they be so fewe, and when the sight of the wyndowes shal waxe dynmme: when the dores in the stretes shal be shutt, and when voyce of the Myller shall be layed downe: when men shal rysse vp at the voyce of the byrde, and when all daughters of musycke shal be brought lowe: when men shal feare in hey places, and be ayled in the stretes: when the Almonde tre shal be despyed, the greshopper borne out, and when greate poueret shall breake in: when man goeth to his longe home, and the mourmers go aboute the stretes. Or euer the syluer lace be taken awaye, and or the golden bende be broken: Or the pott be brokken at the well, a the whole vpon the Cisterne: Or dust be turned againe vnto earth from whence it came, and or the sprette returne vnto God, which gaueth it. All is but vanite (sayeth the preacher) all is but playne vanite.

The same preacher was not wyse alone, but taught the people knowle ges also: he gaue good hede, sought out the groiide and set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, right scripture, and the wordes of trueth. For the wordes of wyse are like prickes and naules that go thorow, wherwith men are kepeth together: for they are geuen of one shepherde onely. Therfore beware (my sonne) that aboue these thou make the not many innumerable bokes, nor take dyuerser doctrynes in hande, to weery thy body withall.

Lat vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: Feare God, and kepe his comandementes, for that toucheth all men: For God shall judge all workes and secrete thinges, whether they be good or euell.

The kynge hath brought me in to his preuy chambre. We wil be glad a rejoyce in the, we thynke more of thy breestes then of wyne: well is them that loue the.

I am black (o ye doughters of Ierusale) like as the tentes of the Cedarenes,\[ \text{b} \] and as the hanginges of Salomon: but yet am I faire a welfauoured withal. Maruell not at me \[ \text{d} \] I am so black, a why? \[ \text{y} \] Sonne hath shyned vpon me. For whan my mothers childre had euell wil at me, they made me \[ \text{y} \] keper of the vynyarde. Thus was I fayne to kepe a vynyarde, which was not myne owne.

Tell me (o thou whom my soule loueth) where thou fedest, where thou restest at the noone daye: lest I go wronge, and come vnto the flockes of thy companions.

Yf thou knowe not thy self (o thou fayrest amõge women) thã go thy waye forth after \[ \text{y} \] fotesteppes of the shepe, as though woldest fede thy goates besyde \[ \text{y} \] shepherdes tentes. The iii. Chapter.

By night in my bedd, I sought him, whom my soule loneth: yee diligently sought I him, but I founde him not. I wil get vp (thought I) and go aboute the cito, vpon the market and in all the stretes will I seke him whom my soule loueth, but when I sought him, I founde him not. The watchmen that go aboute the cito, founde me. Sawe ye not him, whom my soule loueth?

So when I was a litle past them, I foude him whom my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpone him, and wyl not let him go, vntill I brynge him in to my mothers house, and in to hir chambe that bare me.

I charge you (o ye daughters of Ierusale) by the Roes and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loure nor touch her, till she be content herself.

Who is this, that commeth out of the ywylderness like pilers of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrre, frankencense and all maner spyces of the Apotecary?

Beholde, aboute Salomōs bedsteade there stonde I.X. valeaunt men of the mightie in Israel. They holde swordes euery one, are experte in warre. Euyer man hath his sword vpō his thee, because of feare in the night.

Kyng Salomon hath made himself a bed-steade of the worlde of Libanus, the pilers are of syluer, the coueringe of golde, y seate of purple, y grounde pleasantly pained for the daughters of Ierusaleme.

Go forth (o ye daughters of Sion) and beholde kyng Salomon in the crowne, wherwith his mother crownded him in the daye of his mariage, and in the daye of the gladnesse of his hert.

The iii. Chapter.

O HOW fayre art thou (my loue) how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes besyde that which lyeth hid within. Thy hayrie lockes are like a flocke of shepe that be clapped, which go first vp from the washing place: where euery one beareth two twyns, and not one unfrutefull amoge them. Thy lippes are like a rose coloured rybende, thy wordes are louely: thy chokes are like a pece of a pomeragntane, besydes that which lyed hyd within. Thy neck is like the tower of Davud buyldeed with bulworkes, wher vpon there hage a thousande sheldes, yee all the weapes of the giautes. Thy two brestes are like two twyns of yonge roes, which fede amoge the lilies. O that I might go to the mountayne of Myrre, and to the hyll of frankensense: till the daye breake, and till the shadowes be past awaye. Thou art all fayre (o my loure) no spott is there in the.

Come to me from Libanus (o my spouse) come to me from Libanus: come soone the next waye from the toppe of Aman, from the toppe of Sanir and Hermon, from the Lyons dennes and from the mountaynes of y leopards. Thou hastwoued my hert (o my sister, my spouse) thou hast wounded my hert, with one of thine eyes, and with one cheyne of thy neck. O how fayre and louely are thy brestes, my sister, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasing then wyne, and the smell of thy oytunntes passeth all spices. Thy lippes (o my spouse) drope as the hony combe, yee mylek and hony is vnder thy tonge, and the smell of thy garmentes is like the smell of frankensense.

Thou art a well kepte garden (o my sister, my spouse) thou art a well kepte water sprynge, a sealed well. The frutes that sproute in the, are like a very paradyse of pomeragntanes with sweote frutes: as Cypresse, Nardus, Saffron, Chap. vi.  Salomons Balettes.  Fo. dixiii.

Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aoles, and all the best spiceys. Thou art a well of gardens, a well of liuyngue waters, which renne downe from Libanus. Vp thou northwynde, come thou southwynde, and blowe vpō my gardē, that the smell thereof maye be carried on euery syde: Yee that my beloved maye come in to my garden, ε eate of the frutes and apples that growe therin.

The 6. Chapter.

COME in to my garden o my sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre with my spice, I wil eate my honie and my honie coβe, I wil drynke my wyne κ my mylk. Eate (o ye frendes) drynke and be mery, o ye beloued.

As I was a slepe, α my hert wakynge, I herde the voyce of my beloued, ω he knocked. Open to me (sayde he) o my sister, my loue, my doue, my derlinge: for my heade is full of dew, and δ lockes of my hayre are full of the night drops.

I haue put off my cote, how cā I do it on agayne? I haue washed my fete, how shal I fyle them agayne? But whan my loue put in his hande at the hole, my hert was moved towards him: so that I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My hādes dropped with Myrre, α the Myrre ranne downe my fyngers vpon δ lock. Neuerthelesse ω I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed, and gone his waye.

Now like as afore tyme whan he spake, my hert coude no longer refrayne: Euen so now I sought hi, but I coude not fynde him: I cried vpon him, neuerthelesse he gaue me no answere. So the watchmen that wente aboute the cite, foūde me, smote me, and wounded me: Yee thay that kepte the walles, toké awaye my garnet fro me. I charge you therfore (o ye daughters of Ierusalem) yf ye fynde my beloued, that ye tell him, how that I am sick for loue.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers, O thou fairest amonste women? Or, what can thy loue do, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straitly?

As for my loue, he is whyte and reade coloured, a syngetter personne amonste many thousandes: his heade is the most fyne golde, the lockes of his hayre are busched, browne

as the euenyng: His eyes are as the eyes of dounes by the water brokes, washen with mylck, and remaynnyng in a plenteous place: His chekes are like a garden bedd, where in the Apotecaries plate all maner of sweete thinges: His lippes drope as the flourys of the most pryncipall Myrre, his hādes are full of golde ryngyes and precious stones. His body is as the pure yuerly, decte ouer with Saphyres:

"His legges are as the pilers of Marbel, sett vpon sokettes of golde: His face is as Libanus, and as the beway of the Cedre trees:

His throte is sweete, yee he is altogether louely.

Soch one is my loue (o ye daughters of Ierusalem) soch one is my loue.

Whither is thy loue gone thē (o thou fairest amony weymē) whither is thy loue departed, that we maye seke him with the?

The 6. Chapter.

My loue is gone downe in to his garden, α vnto δ sweete smellinge beddes, that he maye refresh himselfe in the garden, and gather flourys. My loue is myyne, and I am his, which fedeth amonste the lilies.

Thon art pleasant (o my loue) even as louelynesse itselfe, thou art fayre as Ierusalem, glorious as an armye of men with their bāners. (Turne awaye thine eyes fro me, for they make me to proude.) δ Thy hayrie lockes are like a flocke of goates vpon δ mount of Galaad. Thy theth are like a flocke of shepe δ be cluppyd, which go out of the washlinge place: where euery one beareth two twyns, α not one vn-frutefull amōge them. Thy chekes are like a pece of a pomegranate, besydes δ which lyeth hid within. There are thre score quenes, ω four score concubynes, and yonge wemen without nombre. But one is my doue, my derlynge. She is the onely beloued of his mother, α deare vnto her that bare her. Whā the daughters sawe her, they sayde she was blessed: Yee the quenes and concubines praysed her. What is she this, that pepeth out as the mornynge? fayre as the Moone, excellent as the Sonne, glorious as an armye of men with their banners?

I waent downe in to the nutt garden, to se what grew by the brokes, to loke yf the vyn vard flourished, and yf the pomegranates were shot forth. Then the charrettys of the prynce of my people made me sodenly afrayed. "Turne againe, turne againe (O thou Sulamite) turne agayne, turne agayne, that we maye loke vpon the.

The viij. Chapter.

What pleasure haue ye more in Sula-mite, than when she daunseth amongethe men of warre? O how pleasing are thy treadinges with thy shoues, thou lynces daughter? Thy thees are like a fayre ieweell, which is wrought by a connyng workmaster:
Thy nauell is like a rounde goblitt, which is neuer without drynde: Thy wombe is like an heape of wheate, sett aboute with lilies: Thy two brestes are like two twyns of yonge roes:
Thy neck is as it were a tower of yuerie:
Thyne eyes are like eyre water poles in Hesebon, beside the port de Bathrabbim: Thy nose is like the tower of Libanus, which loketh towarde Damascus: That heade that stondeth vpon the is like Carmel: The hayre of thy heade is like the kynges purple follen vp in plates.

O how fayre and lovey art thou (my der-lynge) in pleasures? Thy stature is like a date tre, and thy brestes like the grapes. I sayde: I wil clymme vp in to the date tre, and take bolde of his braunches. Thy brestes also shalbe as the vyne grapes, the smell of thy nostrels like the smell of apples, and thy throte like the best wyne.

This shalbe pure cleare for my loue, his lippes and teth shal haue their pleasure.
There wil I turne me vpnto my loue, and he shall turne him vpnto me. O come on my loue, let vs go forth in to the felde, and take our lodginge in the vyllages. In the mornynge wil we ryse by tyme, and go se the vynyarde:
yf it be sprouge forthe, yf the grapes be growne, yf the pomeranates be shott out. There wil I geue the my brestes: There shal the Mandrargoas geue their smell beside our bore: There (o my loue) haue I kepte vpnto
the all maner of frutes, both new and olde.

The viij. Chapter.

That I might fynde the without a tykysse y, whom I loue as my brother which suckte my mothers brestes: If thou woldest not be offended, yf I toke the and brought the in to my mothers house: that thou mightest teach me, and that I might gene the drynde of spycyd wyne and of the swete sappe of my pommeranates. * His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heade, if his right hande embraceth me.

I charge you (o ye daughters of Ierusale) that ye wake not vp my loue ner touch her, yll she be content herself. What is she this,
that cometh vp from the wildernes, and leaneth vpon hir loue? I am the same that waked the vp amongethe the aple trees, where thy mother beare y, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

O set me as a seale vp to thine hert, and as a seale vp to thine arme: for loue is mightie
as the death, if gelousy as the hell. Hir coales are of fyre, and a very flame of the LORDE:
so y many waters are not able to quench loue, nether maye y streams drowne it. Yee if a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shulde counte it nothinge.

When oure loue is tolde oure yonge sister,
whose brestes are not yet growne, what shal
we do vnto her? If she be a wall, we shal bwynde a syluer bollworke there vpon: If she be a tower, we shal testen her with bordes of Cedre tre.

If I be a wall, if my brestes like towres, thou am I as one that hath founde fauoure in his sight.

Salomon had a vyynarde at Baal Hamon,
this vyynarde delyuered he vnto the keepers:
if every one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousande peces of syluer. But my vyynarde (o Salomon) goeth the a thousande,
and two hundreth to keepers of the frute.

Thou that dwelseth in the gardens, O let me here thy voyce, that my compaynyons maye herken to the same. O get the awaye (my loue) as a roo or a yonge hert vnto the swete smellinge moitynyes.

This is the prophecy of Esay the sonne of Amos, which he shewed vpon Iuda and Ierusalem: In the tyme of Osias, Ioathan, Ahas, and Ezechias kynges of Iuda.

The first Chapter.

HEARE o heauen, herken o earth, for the LORDE speaketh: I haue norished vp children, and they are fallen awaye fro me. An oxe knoweth his lorde, and an Asse his masters stall, but Israel knoweth nothinge, my people hath no vnderstandinge. Alas for this synful people, which are experte in blasphemies, a frawerde generacion, vnnatural children. They haue forsaken the LORDE, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto anger, and are gone bacward. Wherfore shulde ye be plaged eny more? For ye are euer fallinge awaye. The whole heade is sick, and the herte is very heuy. From the sole of the foote vnto the heade, there is no whole parte in all youre body: but all are woundes, botches, sores and strypes, which can nether be helped, bounde vp, molified, ner eased with eny oymtment.

Yeoure londe lieth waist, youre cities are brent vp, youre enemies deouere youre londe, and ye must beayne to stonde, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemies in a batell. Morouer þ daughter of Syon is left alone like a cottage in a vynyearde, like a watchouse in tyme of warre, like a beseged citie. And excepte the LORDE of hostes had left us a few alyue: we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, like vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the LORDE ye tyrantes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am discontent for the brentoffringes of wethers, and with þ fatnesse of fedbeastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambs and gootes. When ye apeare before me, who requyreth you to tredde within my porches? Offre me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost laboure.

Deut. 32. a. Micah. 1. a. Iere. 3. b. Osee 7. c. 4Ps. 85. c. Abac. 1. c. & Deut. 28. d.

I maye not awaye with youre newmoones, yourre Sabbathes and solempe dayes.
*Yourre fastinges are also inayne. I hate youre new holy dayes and fastinges, even fro my very harte. They make me weery, I can not abyde them. Though ye holde out youre bondes, yet tunne I myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet heare I nothing at all, for youre bondes are full of blewde.

C. Wash you, make you elene, *put awaye your euell thoughtes out of my sight, cease from doinge of euell and violence. Lerne to do right, applie youre selues to equyte, deluyer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his right, let the wydowes complaynte come before you. Now go to (saith the LORDE) we wil talke together. Is it not so? Though youre synnes be as read as scarlet, shal they not be wyther then snowe? And though they were like purple, shall they not be like whyte wol? Is it not so? Yf ye be louynge obedient, ye shall enjoye the best thinges that growtheth in the londe. *But yf ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shalbe deoured with the swerde: for thus the LORDE hath promised with his owne mouth.

How happeneth it then that the righteous citie (which was full of equite) is become vnfaithfull as an whore? righteousnes dwelt in it, but now murthur. *Thy Siluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne myxte with water. Thy prynces are traytours and companiones of theues. *They loue gifts altogether, and folowe rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe him not to his right, nether wil they let the wydowes causes come before them. Therefore speaketh the LORDE God of hostes the mighty one of Israel: Ah I must ease me of myne enemies, and a venge me vpô the. And therfore shal I laye my honde vpon the, and burne out thy drose from the fynest and purest, and put out al thy leade, *set thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme, and thy Senatours as they were from ý begynnynge. *Then shal thou be called the righteous citie, the faithful citie. But Sion shal be redeemed with equyte, and hyr captiuyte with rightousnesse. For the transgressours and vngodly, and soch as are become vnfaithfull vnto the LORDE, must all together be utterly destroyed.

And excepte ye be ashamed of the oke-trees wherein ye haue so delited, and of the gardes that ye haue chosen: ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye, *and as a garden that hath no moystnesse. And as for the glory of these thinges, it shalbe turned to drie strawe, *and he that made them to a sparke. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The ij. Chapter.

MOROUSER this is the wordes that was opened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amos, vpon Iuda and Jerusalem. It will be also in processe of tyme: *That the hill where the house of the LORDE is byulded, shalbe ý chefe amose hilles, and exalted aboue al little hilles. *And al heith shal prase vnto him and the multitude of people shall go vnto him, speakinge thus one to another: *vp, let us go to the hill of the LORDE, and to the house of ý God of Iacob: ý he maye shewe us his wyve, *and ý we maye walke in his pathes. For ý lawe shal come out of Syon, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the heithen, and shal reforme the multitude of people: So that they shal breake their swerdes and speares, to make sythes, sycles ý sawes therof.

*From that tyme forth shal not one people lift vp wapen agaynst another, nether shal they lerne to fight from thensforth. It is to the that I crie (o house of Iacob) vp, let us walke in the light of the LORDE. But thou art scaterd abrode with thy people (o house of Iacob) for ye go farre beyonde youre fathers, whether it be in Sorcerers (whom ye haue as the phylistynes had) or in calkers of mens byrthes, wherof ye haue to many. *As soone as youre londe was ful of syluer and golde, and no ende of youre treasure: so soone as youre londe was ful of stronge horses and no ende of youre charettes: *Imediately was it ful of Ídols also, even workes of youre owne hondes, which ye youre selues haue facioned, and youre fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so ʒ thou canst not bringe him awaye from thence.

And therefore get ʒ soone in to some rock, and hyde the in the grounde from the sight of the fearful judge, and from ʒ glory of his Majestie. Which casteth downe ʒ high lokes of presumptuious persons, and bryngeth lowe the pryde of mà, and he only shall be exalted in ʒ daye. For the daye of ʒ LORDE of hostes shall go ouer all pryde ʒ presumptiœ, vpon all the ʒ that exalte the selues, and shall bringe them all downe: vpô all high ʒ stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all high hilles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shippes of the see, and vpon euery thinge ʒ is glorious and pleasautn to loke vpon.

And it shall bringe downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumptuiousnesse full lowe, and the LORDE shall only haue the victory in that daye. But the Idols shall utterly be roted out. Men shall crepe in to holes of stone, and in to caues of the earth, from the sight of the fearfull judge, and from the glory of his majesty: what tyme as he shall make him vp to shake the earth. Then, the shall mà cast awaye his goddes of syluer and golde (which he nevertheless had made to honoure the) vnto Molles and Backes: that he maye the better crepe in to the caues and rockes, and in to the cliffs of hard stones, from ʒ sight of the fearful judge and from the glory of his Majesty.

The iij. Chapter.

Euery man can eschew a persone mused in anger, for what doth he wysely? Euen so shall ʒ LORDE of hostes take awaye fro Ierusale ʒ ȃ Iuda, all possession ȃ power, all meat and drinke, ʒ captyne and the soudyare, ʒ jude and the prophete, the wyse and the aged mà, the worshipful of fiftie yeares olde, and the honorable: the Senatours, and men of vnderstandinge: the masters of craftes and oratours. And I shall geue you children to be your pynes (saith the LORDE) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euere be doinge violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honor-able. Yee one shall take a frende of his owne kynred by ʒ bosome, and saie: thou hast clothinge, thou shalt be oure heade, for thou mayest kepe us from this fall and parell.

Then shall he sweare and saie: I can not helpe you. Morouer, there is nether meate nor clothinge in my house, make me no rueler of the people. For Ierusalem and Iuda must decaye, because that both their wordes and counsels are agaynst the LORDE, they pro-voke the presence of his majesty vnto anger. The chaunginge of their countenaunce bewrayeth them, yee they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodmites, ʒ hyde the not. Wo be vnto their soules, for they shalbe heuely rewarded. Then shall they saie: O happie are the godly, for they maye enioye the frutes of their studies. But wo be to ʒ vngodly and vnrighteous for they shalbe rewarded after their workes. O my people, rybaudes oppresse ʒ, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leders deceaue the, and tred out the waye of thy footsteppes. The LORDE is here to comon of the matter, and stondeth to geue judgment with the people. The LORDE shall come forth to reason with the Senatours and prynces of his people, and shall saie thus vnto them: It is ye that haue burnt vp my vnyerde, the robbery of the poore is in youre house. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, and marre ʒ faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of hostes reuyle them.

Morouer thus saith ʒ LORDE: Seinge the daughters of Sion are become so proude, and come in with stretched out neckes, and with vayne wanton eyes: seinge they come in trippinge so nycely with their fete: Therfore shall the LORDE shawe the heads of the daughters of Sion, and make their bewtie bare in that daye. In that daye shall the LORDE take awaye the gorgiousnes of their apparel, and spanges, cheynes, partlettes, and colares, bracelett and hooues, ʒ goodly floured, wyde and brodered raynet, brushes and headbandes, rynge and garrêdes, holy daye clothes and vales, kerches and pynnes, glasses and smockes, bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell there shalbe stynek amonge them. And for their gyrdles there shalbe lowse bondes. And for wellset hayre there shalbe baldnesse. In stead of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for their bewty wythrednesse and sonneburnyng. Their husbands and their mightie men shall perish with the swerde in batell.

The iii. Chapter.

That tyme shall their gates mourne and complayne, and they shal syt as desolate folck vpon the earth. Then shal seuen wynes take holde of one man, and saye: we will laye all oure meat and clothinge together in comon, only that we maye be called thy wynes, and that this shamefull reprofe maye be take from us. "After that tyme shal the braunch of ¶ LORDE be beutiful and mightie, and ¶ frute of the earth shalbe fayre and pleasant for those Israelites that shall springe therof. Then shall the remnaunt in Sion and the remnaunt at Ierusalem be called holy: namely al soch as are written amonge the lyuynge at Ierusalem: what tyme as the LORDE shall wash awaye the desolacion of the doughters of Siö, ad purge the bloud out from Ierusalē, with ¶ wynde of his smoke and fyre.

Morouer vpon all the dwellings of the hill of Sion and vpon their whole congregacion, shal the LORDE prouyde a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shyning of a flammynge fyre by night, for all their glory shalbe preserved. And Ierusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hethe in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe him for wether and rayne.

The b. Chapter.

N

NOW well than, I will synge my beloued frende a songe of his vynyearde. ¶ My beloued frende hath a vynyeaerde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. ¶ This he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylde he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwaunde when he loked ¶ it it shulde bringe him grapes, it shalbe forth thornes. I shewes you now my cause (o ye Citysens of Ierusalem and whole Iuda:) Iudge I praye you betwyxte me: and my wynegardinge. ¶ What more coude haue bene done for it, that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it.

Well, I shall tell you how I will do with my vynyarde: I will take the hedges from it, that it maye perish, and breake downe ¶ wall, that it maye be troden vnder fote. I will laye it waiste, that it shal be nether be tywsted nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wil also forbyd ¶ cloudes, that they shal not rayne vpon it. As for the vynyarde of the LORDE of boosts it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda his fayre plantinge. Of these he loked for equyte, but se there is wronge: for rightousnesse, lo, It is but misery.

Wo to you that ioyne one house to another, ¶ and bringe one londe so nigh vnto another, till ye can get no more grounde. ¶ Wil ye dwell vpon the earth alone? The LORDE of hoostes rovneth me thus: ¶ i myne eare: shal not many, greater and more gorgious houses be so waiste, that no man shal dwell in thē? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a Quarte, and xxx. bushels of sede shal geue but thre.

Wo be vnto them that ryse vp early to vse them selues in dromkynnes, and yet at night are more superfluous with wyne. In whose companies are harpes and lutes, ¶ tabrettis and pipes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the LORDE, ¶ and cōsider not the operacio of his hondes. Therfore cometh my folck also in captuyme, ¶ because they haue no vnderstondyng. Their glory shalbe myxte with hüger, and their pryde shalbe marred for thurst. Therfore gapeth hel, and openeth hyr mouth marvalous wyde: that pryde, boostinge and wisdome, with soch as reioyse therin, maye descend in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shalbe brought lowe, and the high lokes of the proude layde downe. But the LORDE of hoostes, ¶ holy God: shalbe exalted and vn-touched, when he shal declare his equyte and rightousnesse after this maner. Then shal ¶ lambes cate their apoynted foder, and shal fede plenteously in the mountaynes. Wo vnto vayne persones, that drawe wickednes vnto thē, as it were with a coorde: and synne, as it were with a cart rope. Which vse to speake on this maner: let him make haist now, and go forth with his worke, that we maye se it.
2 Let the counsell of thy holy one of Israel come, and drawe nie,
y we maye knowe it.
3 Wo vnto them that call euel good, and good euel; which make darknesse light, light darknesse, y make sower sweate, and swete sower. Wo vnto them that are wyse in their owne sight, and thinke them selues to haue vnderstoúnginge. 4 Wo vnto them, y are connuye me to suppe oute wyne, and experte to set vp dôkënessse. 5 These gye sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne
the just cause of the righteous.
6 Therefore, like as fyre licketh vp the strawe,
and as the flame cûsumeneth the stubble: Euen
so (when their root is ful,) their blossom shall vanish awaye like dust or smoke, 9 for they despyse the lawe of the LORDE of hoostes, and blaspheme the worde of the holy maker
of Israel.
7 Therefore is the wrath of the LORDE kyndled
dlo against his people, and he shaketh his honde at them: yee he shal smyte so, that the hilles shall tremble. And their carcases shal lye in the opë stretes, like myre. 9 After all this, the wrath of God shall not cease, but he shal stretch his hode wyde. And he shal gyne a tokë vnto a strange people, 9 and call vnto them in a farre countre; and be holde, they shall come hastely with spede.
There is not one fant nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggishe nor slepery parson.
8 There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, ner loswe the lachet of his shue. Their arrowes are sharpe, and their bowes bent. Their horse hooves are like flynt, and their cart wheles like a stormy wynde.
Their crie is as it were of a lyon, and the roaringe of them like lyons whelpes. They shal roare, and hatch vp the praye, and no man shal recovery it or get it from thè.
In that daye they shal se f arcane vpon them, as the see. And yf we loke vnto the londe, helinde, it shallbe all darcknesse and sorowe.
Yf we loke to heauen: beholde, it shalbe
darck with carefull desperacion.

The vi. Chapter.

1 In the same yeare shy kyng Osias dyed, I saw the LORDE. 9 sittinge vpon an high and glorious seate, and his trayne fylled of palace. From aboue flakred the Seraphins, wherof every one had sex wynges. With twayne ech covered his face, with twayne his fete, and with twayne dyd he flyve. They cried also ech one to other on this maner:

holy, holy, holy is the LORDE of hoostes.
The whole worlde is ful of his glory. Yee the geastes and dorecheses moued at their crienge, and the house was ful of smoke.
Then I sayde: O wo is me. For I was astonished: that I (which am a man of vncleene lippes, and dwell amonge people y hath vncleene lippes also:) Shulde se thy Kynge and LORDE of hoostes with myne eyes.

Then fleye one of the Seraphins vnto me, haunghe a hote cole in his honde, which he had taken from the aultar with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde: lo, this hath touched thy mouth, ã thy vnrighteousnes is taken awaye, and thy synne forugeuen. After this I herde the voyce of the LORDE takinge advysement on this maner: Whom shal I sende, and who wilbe oure messaunguer? Thè I sayde: here am I, sende me. And so he sayde: go, and tel this people: ye shal heare in dede, but ye shal not vnderstonde, 9 ye shall planely se, and not pereceau. Harden the harte of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut their eyes, that they se not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstonde not with their harts, and conquerte and be healed.

Then spake I: LORDE, how longe? he answered: vntil the cities be vterly without inhabitours, and ã houses without men, till the lode be also desolate, and lyne buylded. For the LORDE shal take the men farre awaye, so that the londe shall yse waist.
Neuertheles, the tenth parte shal remayn therin, for it shal conuerse and be fruteul. And likewise as the Terebyntes and Oketrees bringe forth their frutes, so shal the holy sede haue frute.

The vi. Chapter.

It happened in the tyme of Ahas the sonne of Jonathas, which was the sonne of Joathan Kyngge of Luda: that Rezin the Kinge of Siria, and Poca Romelies sonne, Kyngge of Israel: wente vp toward Jerusalem to besiege it (but wanne it not.) Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahas) herde worde therof, Siria and Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (yea and hertes also of his people) like as a tre in the feld, that is moused with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ahas (thou and thy sonne ear Isabus) at the heade of thy ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto hym: take hede to thy selfe and be still, but feare not, nether be faynt harted, for these two tales: that is: for these two smokyng fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnes of Rezin the Sirian and Romelies sonne: because that the Kynge of Siria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wekedly conspyred agaynst the, sayenge: We will go downe in to Iuda, vexe the, and brynye them vnder vs, and set a Kyng there, euyn the sonne of Taball. For thus saith the LORDE God ther to, It shall not so go forth, nether come so to passe: for the head citie of Siria is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rezin. And after fyue and threscore yeare, shal Ephraim be nomore a people. And the chefe citie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. And ye be beleue not, there shall no promyse be kepte with you.

Morouer, God spake vnto Ahas, sayenge: requyre a token of the LORDE thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde hight aboue. Thesayde Ahas: I will requyre none, nether will I tempte the LORDE. The LORDE answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not enough for you, that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therefore the LORDE shal gene you a token of him self: Beholde, a virgin shall conceale and beare a sonne, and shal call his name Emanuel. Butter and hony shall he eate, he maye knowe the euell, and chose the good. But or euer that childe come to knowlege, to escue the euell and chose the good: The londe (that thou art so afayde for) shalbe desolate of both hir kynges.

The LORDE also shal sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpo thy fathers house (soch as neuer came sence the tyme)

Ephraim departed from Iuda) thorow kynge of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shal the LORDE whistle for the flies are aboute the water of Egipte, and for kynge of the Assirians londe. These shall come, and shal light all in the valeyes, in vowtes of stone, vpon all grene thinges, and in all corners.

At the same tyme shal the LORDE shewe the hayre of the heade and the fete and the beerd clene of, with the rasoure that he shall paye them withall beyonde the water: namely, with kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of the abundaunce of mylck, he shall make butter and eat it. So that euery one which remayneth in the londe, shal eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vynyardes (though there be a thousand vynes in one, and were solde for a thousand siluerlinges) shalbe turned to brears and thornes. Like as they shal come in to the londe with arowes and bowes, so shal all the londe become brears and thornes. And as for all hilles that now are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpo them, for feare of brears and thornes. But the catel shal be dryuen thither, and the shepe shal fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

Morouer the LORDE sayde vnto me: Take the a greate leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede him to robbe, and haist him to spoyle. And Imediately I called vnto me faithfull wytnesses: Vrias the prest, and Zacharias sonne of Barachias. Auer that went I vnto the prophetisse, that now had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the LORDE to me: gene him this name: Maherschalah haschbas, that is, a speidic robber, an hastie spoyler. For why, or euer the childe shal have knowlege to saye: Abi and Im, is father, and mother: shal riches of Damascus and substance of Samaria be take awaye, thorow the kynge of Assirians.

The LORDE spake also vnto me, sayenge: for so moch as the people refuseth the stil-renning water of Silo, and put their delite in Rezin and Romelies sonne: Beholde, the LORDE shal bringe mightie and great floude of water vpon them: namely, kynge of the Assirians with all his power. Which shall pour out his furyousnes vpô ouery man, and reme ouer all their bankes. And shal breake in vpon Iuda, increasinge in power, till he get him by the throte. He shal fy also the wydes nes of thy londe with his brode wynges, O Emanuell. Go together ye people, and gather you, herken to all ye of farre coun trees. Mestre you, and gather you: mestre you and gather you, take youre councl together, yet must youre councl come to nought: go in honde withal, yet shal it not prosper. Excepte Emanuell: (that is God) be with us. For the LORDE chastised me, and toke me by ý honde, and warned me, sayenge vnto me: that I shulde not walse in the waye of this people. He sayde mor oner: Rounde with none of the, who so euer saye: yonder people are bounde together. Neuertheles feare them not, nether be afraye of them, but sanctifie the LORDE of hoastes, let him be youre feare and drede. For he is the sanctifiegne, and stone to stamble at, ý rock to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses: to Israel, and the inhabitours of Jeru salem. And many shal stamble, fall, and be broké vpon him: yee they shalbe snared and taken.

Now laye the witnesses together (sayde the LORDE) and seale the lawe with my discip les. Thus I waite vpon the LORDE, that hath turned his face from the house of Iacob, and I loke vnto hym. But lo, as for me, and the children which the LORDE hath geuen me: we are a token and a wondere in Israel, for the LORDE of hoastes sake, which dwellethe vpon the hill of Syon.

And threfore yf they saye vnto you: aske councl at the sothsayers, witches, charmers and coniurers, then make them this answer: Is there a people anywhere, that axeth not councl at his God: whether it be connernynge the dead, or the lyuyng? Yf eny man want light, let him loke vpon the lawe and the testimonie, whether they speake not after this meanynge. Yf he do not this, he stambleth and suffreth búger. And yf he suffre honger, he is out of pacienci, and blasphemeth his kyngge and his God. Then loketh he vp warde, and downe warde to the earth, and beholde, there is trouble and darknesse, vexacion is rounde aboute him, and the cloude of erreoure. And out of such aduersaries, shall he not escape.

Euen like as in tyme past it hath bene, ythat ý londe of Zabulon and the londe of Nepthali {where thorow the see wyne goeth ouer Iordane in to the londe of Galile} was at the first in litle trouble, but afterward sore vexed.

Neuertheles ý people that haue dwelt in darknesse, shal se a greate light. As for the them that dwel in the londe of the shadowe of death, vpou them shal the light shyne. Shalt thou multiply the people, and not increase the ioye also? They shal reioyce before the euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the ycke of the peoples burthen: the staff of hys shulder, and the rod of his op pressoure, as in ý daye at Madis.

Moreroue all temerarious and sediciou power (yee where there is but a cote fyled with bloude) shalbe burnt, and fehe the lyre. For vnto us a childle shalbe borne, and vnto us a sonne shalbe geüe. Vpô his shulder shal the kyngdome lye, and he shalbe called with his owne name: The wóderous gener of councl, the mightie God, the euerlastinge father the prynce of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shal syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablish it with equyte and rightou snesses, from thence forth for euermore. This shal the gelousy of the LORDE of hoastes bringe to passe.

The LORDE sent a worde in to Iacob, the same is come in to Israel. All the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwel in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hee stomackes, on this maner: The tyle worcke is fallen downe, but we will byule it with harder stones. The Molbery tymbre ys broken, but we shal set it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the LORDE shal prepare Rezin the enemie agaynst the, and so ordre their aduer saries, that ý Sirians shal laye holde vpon

them before, and the Philistynes behynde, and so deuoure Israel with open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the LORDE shal not ceasse, but yet his hande shalbe stretched out still. For the people turneth not vnto him, that chastiseth them, nether do they seke the LORDE of hoostes. Therfore the LORDE shal rote out of Israel both heade and tale, braunch and twyggge in one daye. By the heade, is understande the Senatoure and honorable man, and by tale, the prophet that preacheth lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a right case, soch be disceauers. Soch as men thinke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but east awaye.

Therfore shal the LORDE haue no pleasure in their yonge me, nether fauoure their fatherlesse and wydowes. For thei are altogither ypoprites and wicked, and all their mouthes speake foly. After all this shal not the LORDES wrath cease, but yet his honde shalbe stretched out still. For the vngodly burne, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes: And as it were out of a fyre in a wod or a redebushe, so ascendet the smoke of their pryde.

For this cause shal ye wrath of the LORDE of hoostes fall vpon the londe, and the people shall be consumed, as it were with fyre, no man shal spare his brother. Yf a man do turne him to the right honde, he shal famesh, or to the lefte hande to eat, he shal not haue ynoough. Every man shal eate the flesh of his owne arme: Manasses shal eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they both shal eate Luda. After all this shal not the LORDES wrath cease, but yet shal his honde be stretched out still.

The y. Chapter.

WO be vnto you ye make vnrighteous lawes, and devyse thinges, which be to haerde for to kepe: wherthorow the poore are oppressed, on euery syde, and the innocetes of my people are there with robbed of judgment: that wyddowes maye be youre praye, and that ye maye robbte the fatherlesse. What will ye do in tyme of the visitacion and destruction, that shal come from farre? To whom will ye renne for helpe? or to whom will ye geue youre honoure, that he maye kepe it? that ye come not amounge the presomers, or lyce amoung the deed? After all this shal not the wrath of the LORDE cease, but yet shal his honde be stretched out still.

Wo be also vnto Assur, which is a staff of my wrath, in whose honde is the rod of my punishement. For I shal sende him amoung those ypopritis people, amonste the people that haue deserued my disfauoure shal I send him: that he maye utterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treate them downe like the myre in the strete. Howbeit his meanyng is not so, nether thinketh his harte of this fashion. But he ymagineth onyl, how he maye overthrowe and destroype moch people, for he saith: are not my princes all kynges? Is not Calno as easie to wyne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquer Antiochias then Arpdel? Or is it lighter to overcome Damascus the Samar? As who say: I were able to wyne the kingdome of the Idolaters and their goddes, but not Ierusaleam and Samar. Shal I not do vnto Ierusaleam and their ymage, as I dyd vnto Samar and their ymages?

Wherfore the LORDE saith: As soone as I haue perfourmed my whole worke vpon the Hyl of Syon and Ierusaleam: thè will I also vyset the noble and stoute kyng of Assyria, with his wydsomde and pryde. For he stondeth thus in his owne cöcete: This do I, thorow the power of myne owne honde, and thorow my wisdome: For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the lodges of the people, I robbte their prynces: and (like one of the worthies) I draye them from their hie seates. My honde hath founde out the hoostes of the people, as it were a nest. And like as egges, that were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, ye darre be so bolde, as to touch a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whisper.

But doth the axe boast it self, agaynst him ye heweth therwith, or doth the sawe make eny krakinge, agaynst him that ruleth it? That were euens like, as yf the rod dyd exalte it self agaynst him, that beareth it: or as though ye staff shulde magnifie it self, as who saye: it were no wodd. Therfore shal the LORDE of hoostes sende him pouer in his riches, and burne vp his power, as it were with a fyre. But the light of Israel shalbe fyre, and his Sanctuary shalbe the flame, and it shal kynadle, and burne vp his thornes and breyers in one daye, yee all the glory of his woddes and feldes shalbe consumed with body and soule. As for him self, he shalbe as one chased awaye. The trees also of his feld shalbe of soch a nombre, that a childe maye tell them.

After daye shal the remnaunt of Israel, and soch as are escaped out of the house of Iacob, seke no more coforte at him that smote them, but shal conforte them selues with faithfulness and treuth in the LORDE, the holy, one of Israel.

The remnaunt, yee and the Posteryte of Iacob, shal coute vnto God the mighty one. For though thy people (o Israel) be as the sondre of the see, yet shal but the remnaunt of them only coute vnto him. Perfecte is the judgeth of him that floweth in rightousnesse: and therfore LORDE of hoostes shal perfectly fullfil the thinge, that he hath determined in the myddfest of the whole worlde. Therfore thus saith the LORDE God of hoostes: Thou my people, that dwelst in Sion, be not afrayde for the kinge of the Assirians: He shal wagg his staff at the, yee and beate with the rodd, as the Egiptiasses dyd sometyme: But soone after, shal my wrath and my indignacion be fullyfled against their blasphemies.

Moruer the LORDE of hoostes shal prepare a scourge for him, like as was the punysmetch of Madiā vpō mount of Oreb. And he shal lift vp his rod over the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egiptiasses. Then shal his burthen be taken from thy shulders, and his yock from thy neck, yee the same yock shal corruppte for very fatnesse. He shal come to Aiaith, and go therow toward Mignor. But at Machmas shal he muster his hooste, and go ouer vpoorde. Gaba shall be their resting place, Rāma shalbe afrayde, Gabea Saul shal fle awaye. The voyce of y noysie of thy horses (o daughter Gallim) shalbe herde vnto lais and to Anateth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shal tremble for feare, but the citesyns of Gabim are maly, yet shal he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shal he lift vp his honde agaynst the mount Sion, and agaynst the hill of Jerusalem. But se, the LORDE God of hoostes shal take awaye the proude from thence, with feare. He shal hew downe the proude, and fel the hie mynded. The thornes of the wod shal be rooted out with yron, and Libanus shal have a mightie fal.

The ri. Chapter.

AFTER this there shall come a rod forth of Kynrede of Jesse, and a blossom out of his rote. The sprete of the LORDE shal light vpou it: the sprete of wysdome, and vnderstondinge: the sprete of counsel, and strength: the sprete of knowlege, and of the feare of God: and shall make him fervent in the feare of God. For he shal not geue sentecke, after the thinge shal be brought before his eies, neither reproue a matter at the first hearinge: but with rightousnesse shal he judge the poore, and with holynes shal he reforme the symple of the worlde.

He shal smyte vpoorlde with the staff of his mouth, a with the breath of his mouth shal he slaye the wicked. Rightousnesse shalbe the gyrdle of his lynes, treuth and faithfulness the gyrdinge vp of his raynes. Thel shal wolfe dwel with the läche, and the leoparde shal lye downe by the gote. Bulokes, lyons and catel shal kepe company together, so that a little childe shal dryue them forth. The cowe and the Bere shal fede together, and their yongones shal lye together.

The lyō shal eate strawe like the ox, or the cowe. The childe whyle he sucketh, shal haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and whié he is weened, he shal put his hande in to the Cockatryce denne. Noman shal do euel to another, no man shal destroye another, in all the hill of my Sanctuary. For the earth shalbe ful of knowlege of LORDE, even as though the water of the see flowed over the earth.

Then shal the Gentiles enquire after the rote of Jesse (which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the Gentiles) for his dwellinge shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shal the LORDE take in honde agayne, to conquer y remnaunt... of his people (which are lefft alyue) From the Assirians, Egyptians, Arabians, Morians, Elamites, Caldeyes, Antiochis and llothes of the see. And he shall set vp a tokè amonge the Gentiles, and gather together y dispersè of Israel, yee and the outcastes of Iuda from the four eye corners of y worlde. The hatred of Ephraim, and y enmyte of Iuda shalbe clene rooted out. Ephraim shal beare no euel wil to Iuda, and Iuda shal not hate Ephraim: but they both together shal lyke vpö the shoulders of the Philistynes toward the West, and spoyle them together that dwell toward the East. The Idunynes and the Moabites shal let their hodes fall, and the Ammounites shalbe obedient vnto them.

The LORDE also shal cleue the tungs of the Egipcis see, and with a mightie wynde shal he lyft vp his honde ouer Niles, and shal smyte his seuè streams and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shal he make a waye for his people, y remayneth from the Assirians, like as it happened to y Israelites, what tyme they departed out of the londe of Egipte.

The rij. Chapter.

A So that then thou shalt saye: O LORDE, I thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but thou hast refrayned thy wrath, and hast mercy vpon me. Beholde, God is my health, in whom I trust, and am not afrayde. For the LORDE God is my strength, and my pryse, he also shalbe my refuge. Therefore with ioye shal ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sauioure, and then shal ye saye: Let vs geue thanke vnto the LORDE, and call vpon his name, and declare his counseles amonge the people, and kepe them in remembranunce, for his name is excellèt. O synge praizes vnto the LORDE, for he doth great things, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Crie out, and be glad, thou that dwelvest in Sion, for greate is thy prince: the holy one of Israel.

The riij. Chapter.

A THIS is y heury burthè of Babilò, which Esaye the sonne of Amos dyd se. Make some tokès to the hee hilles, call vnto them, holde vp youre hode, that the prynces maye go in at the dore. For I will sende for my debites and my gyauetes (sayeth the LORDE) and in my wrath I will calle for soch, as tryumphpe in my glory.

With that, me thought I herde in the mouitaynes, a noyse, like as it had bene of a greate people: and a ruzshinge, as though the kyngdomes of all naciones had come together. (And the LORDE of hoostes was the captyayne of the whole armeye.) As they had come not only out of farre countrees, but also from the endes of the heauës: Esà the LORDE himself with the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the whole lode. Mourn therefore, for the daye of the LORDE is at honde, and commeth as a destroyer from y allmighty. Then shal all hondes be letten downe, and all mens hertes shal melt awaie, they shal stonde in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shall come vpö them, and they shal haue payne, as a woman that traneleth with childe. One shall euere be abasshed of another, ã their faces shal burne, like ã flame.

For lo, the daye of the LORDE shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrath: to make the londe waist, and to root out the synne therof. For the starres and planetes of heauen shall not geue their light, the Sonne shalbe quenched in the rysinge, ã and the Mone shal not shyne with his light. And I wil punysh the wickednesse of the worlde, ã the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the LORDE. The hye stomackes of the proud wil I take awaye, and will laye downe the boostinge of tyrantanes. I will make a man dearer thè fyne golde, and a man to be more worth, thè a golden wedge of Ophir. Morover, I will so shake the heauë, that the earth shall remoue out of hir place.

Thus shall it go with Babilon, in the wrath of the LORDE of hoostes in ã daye of his fearfull indignacion. And Babilon shalbe as an hunteed or chased doo, and as a flocke without a shepheard. Every má shal turne to his owne people, ã fle echone in to his owne londe. Who so is founde alone, shalbe shot thorow: And who so gather together, shalbe destroyed with the swerde. Their children shalbe slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, ã their wyues raussen. For lo, I shall bringe vp ã Medes agaynst thè, which...
shal not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of golde. Then shall yonge mens bowes be knapped asunder. The Medes shall haue no pitie vpō womę with childe, q their faces shall not spare y children. And Babilo (y glory of kigdomes and beutie of the Caldees honoure) shalbe destroyed, euę as God destroyed Sodom
q Gomorra. It shal neuer be more inhabited, nether shal there be eny more dwell-inge there, from generacion to generacion.
The Arabians shall make no mo tentes there, nether shall the shepardes make their folds there eny more: but wyllde beastes shal lie there, q y houses shalbe full of great Oules. Estriches shal dwell there, q Apes shal daunse there: The little Oules shal crie
in the palaces, one after another, q Dragos shalbe in the pleasaut perlours. And as for Babilons tyme, it is at honde, q hir dayes
may be not longe absolute.

The riiij. Chapter.

B

UT y LORDE wilbe mercyfull vnto Iacob, q will take vp Israel agayne, q set the in their owne lōde. Straīgers shall dene vnto thec, q get the to y house of Iacob.
They shall take y people, q cary thec home with thec. And y house of Israel shal haue the in possession, for seruaites q maydēs in y lōde of y LORDE. They shall take those prisoners, whose captuyes they had bene afore:
q rule those, y had oppresséd the. When y LORDE now shal bringe y to rest, frō y trau-yl, feare, q harde bondaige y thou wast laden with all: then shalt thon vse this mockage vpon y kinge of Babilon, q saye: How hap-penneth it y y oppressour leauneth of? Is y golden tribute come to an ende? Doubtes the LORDE hath broken the staffe of the vngeoły, y the cepter of y lordly. Whē he is worth, smyeth y people with durable strokes,
y in his wōders he persecuteth y, q tameth thee contynual. And therefore y whole worlde is now at rest and quyetnesse, q men syngne for joype.

Yee euyn the Fyrre trees and Cedres of Libanus reioyse at thy fall, sayenge: Now y thou art layde downe, there come no mo vp to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy commynge. All mightie men and prynces of the earth, steppe forth before the. All kynges of the earth stonde vp frō their seates, that they maye all (one after another) synge and spake vnto the. Art thou wounded also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell:'
Mothes shalbe laydye vnder the, q wormes shalbe thy coureringe.

How art thou fallen from heauen (o Lucier) thou faire mornige childe? hast thou gotten a fall euyn to the grounde, thou that (notwithstondinge) dydest subdue the people? And yet thon thoughtest in thine harte:
I will clymme vp in to heauen, and make my seate aboue the stars of God, I wyll syt upon the glorious mount toward the North, I wyll clymme vp aboue the cloudes, q wilbe like the highest of all. Yet darre I laye, y thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. 'That they se the, shal narowly loke
vpō the, and thinke in them selues, sayenge:
Is this the man, that brought all londes in feare, and made y kingdomes auyde: Is this be that made the worlde in a maner waist, q layde the cities to the grounde, which let not his prisoners go home?

How happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lie, euery one at home in his owne palace, with worship, and thou art cast out of thy graue like a wilde branuch: like as dead mens rayment that are shott thorow with the sworde: as they that go downe to the stones of the depe: as a dead course that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried with them? Euen because that thou hast waisted thy lōde, and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wicked shalbe without honoure, for euuer. There shal a waye be sought to destroye their childrē, for their fathers wickednes: they shal not come vp gaygne to possesse the londe, and fyll the worlde ful of castels and townes.

I wil stonde vp agaynst them (sayeth the LORDE of hoostes) and root out y name and generacion of Babilon (saieth the LORDE)
y wil geue it to the Otters, and wil make water poddels of it. And I wil swepe them out with the besome of destruction, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. The LORDE of hoostes hath sporne an ooth, sayenge: It shal come to passe as I haue determined: y shall fulfilled as I haue deuyse. 'The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my londe, and vpon my mountaynes wyll I tredye them vnder fote.

Chap. vi.

The prophet Esay.

The crie went ouer the whole londe of Moab:
from Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothinge but mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for thy enemie had sent thither a bonde of men, which as a lyon, layde waite for the remnaunt of the londe, and for them y were escaped.

The

THEN sent the lorde of the lode a mā of warre, from the rocke that lieth toward the deserete, vnto the hill of the doughter Sion (For as for the doughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a trymblinge byrde, y is put out of hir nest, by the fery of Arnon) which messuanger sayde: gather youre councel, come together, couer vs with youre shadowe in the myydaye, as the night doth:
yde the chased, bewraye not the that are set, let the persecuted Moabites dwel amōge you, be oure open refuge against the destroyer: for the adversary oppresseth vs, the robber vndooth vs, the tyraunte dryueth vs out of oure londe. But y Trone of youre kingdome is full of grace, therfore he that syt-teth vpon it with faithfulnessse a treuth in the house of David, knowe the thinge y do his diligence to helpe shortly, acordinge to Equite and righteousnes. As for Moabs pride (shal they answere) it is wel knowne. And all though they be excellent, proude, arrogante y hie myndede: yet is their strength nothinge like. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, wher thorow they come all to mourne:
y now y they be smytten, they take their deuuyce beneth by the bryckwall, and make their cõplaynte.

The suburbes also of Hesebon were made wast, y the princes of the Gentyles hewed downe y vynyarde of Sibma, which were planted with noble grapes, and spred vnto lazer, and went vnto the ende of the deserete, whose braunches stretched their selues forth byonde the see. Therfore I mourned for lazer, y for y vynyarde of Sibma with greate sorow. I poured my teares vpon Hesebon y Eleale, for all their songes were layde downe,
in their haruest y gatheringe of their grapes:
Myrth and chere was gone out of y felde y
vynyarde, in so moch, that no man was glaner surge. There wēte no treader in to the

Wher thorow his yocke shall come from you, y
his burthen shalbe taken from youre shulders.
This deuyce hath God taken thorow the whole worlde, and thus is his honde stretched out over all people. For yf the LORDE of hoostes determe a thinge, who wy dyssanulle it? And yf he stretch forth his honde, who wil holde it in agayne?

The same yeare that kynga Achas dyed,
God threatened by Esay on this maner:
Re-
yosey not (thou whole Palestina) as thoug y rod of him y buteth the were broken: For out of y serpentes rote, there shal waxe a kockatrice, y the frute shalbe a fyrie worme.
But the poore shall fede of the best thinges,
and the symple shal dwell in safetie.
y Thy rotes wil I destroye with honger, and it shall slaye thy remnaunt. Mournne ye portes, wepe vy Cities. And feare thou (w whole Palestina) for there shal come frō the North a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shall then maynteyne the messages of the Gentyles? But the LORDE stablissheth Syon, y the poore of my people shall put their trust in him.

This is y heu burthē vpō Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the night season: The walles of Moab perished in the night, y vanished awaye: They wete to Baidu and Dibon in the hie places, for to wepe: Moab did mourne frō Nebo to Medba: All their heades were cockled, and al their beardes shauen.
In their strethes were they gyrded aboute with sack cloth. In all the toppes of their houses y strethes was there nothinge, but mournyngge and weeping.
Hesebon and Eleale cried, that their voyce was herde vnto Iahaz. The worthyes also of Moab blearred and cried for very sorow of their ynynede: Wo is my hert for Moabs sake.
They fled vnto the cite of Zoar, which is like a fayre fruteful bullock, they went vp to Luhith, weeping. The waye toward Horo-naim was ful of lamentacion for y hurte. The waters of Nimnim were dried vp, the grass was wythred, the herbes destroyed, y what necessary grene thinge there was besyde. In like maner the thinge y was left them of their substance, they carried it by water to Araby.

The viij. Chapter.

A THIS is the heuy burthē vpō Damascus:
Beholde, Damascus shall be nomore a cite, but an heape of broken stones. The cities of Aroor shalbe waist, The catel shal lie there, a nomă shal frayte the awaye. Ephrah shal no more be strōge, a Damascus shal no more be a kyngdome. And as for y glory of y remnaunt of y Sirians, it shalbe as the glory of the childre of Israel, saith y LORDE of hoostes. At that tyme also shal y glory of Iacob be very poore, a his fatnes leane. It shal happē to thē, as when one sheareth in haruest, which cutteth his handful with the sickle, a when one gathreth y sheaues together in the valley, of Rephaim, there remayneth yet some ears ouer. Or as whē one shaketh an olyue tre, b which fyndeth but two or thre olyue beries aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the LORDE God of Israel hath spoken.

Then shal man cōurte agayne vpō his maker, a turne his eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shal not turne to the aulters that are y worke of his owne hōdes, nether shal he loke vpon groaues ymages, which his fyngers haue wrought. At the same tyme shal their stronge cities be desolate, like as were once y forsakē plowes y corne, which they forsoke, d for fœre of y children of Israel.

So shalt thou (o Damascus) be desolate, because thou hast forgottē God thy Sauionre, a hast not called to remembrance y rock of thi strēgh, Wherfore thou hast also set a fayre plate, a graffed a straungne braunch. In the daye when thou diddest plante it, it was great, and gaue soone the frute of thi sede: But in the daye of haruest, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes a miseries.

Wo be to the multitude of moch people, b that rush in like the see, and to the heape of folke, that renue ouer all like greate waters. c For though so many people increase as the flowinge watres, and though they be armed, yet they fle farre of, and vanish awaye like the dust with the wynde vpon an hill, and as the whyrle wynde thorow a storne. Though they be fearful at night, yet in the morninge it is gone with thē. This is their porcion, that do vs harme, and heretage of them, that robbe vs.

The viij. Chapter.

WO be to the londe of slieenge shippes, a which is of this syde y floude of Ethiopia: which sendeth hir message ouer the see in shippes of redes vpō y water, and sayeth: go soone, and do youre message vnto a strange and harde folke: to a fearful peole, a to a people y is further then this: to a desperate and pilled folke, whose londe is deuyded from vs with ryuers of water. Yee all ye y syt in the compass of the worlde, and dwell vpon the earth: when the token shalbe geuen vpō the mountaynes, then loke vp: and when the horne bloweth, then herken to, for thus hath y LORDE sayde vnto me. I layde me downe, and pondred the matter in my house, at the noone daye when it was hote: and there fel a myslinge shower, like a dew, as it happeneth in haruest. But the frutes, were not yet ripe cut of, and the grapes were but yonge and grene. Then one smote of the grapes with an hoke, yee he hewed downe also the buwes and the braunches, a dyd cast thē awaye. And thus they were layde waist, for the foules of the mountaynes, and for y beastes of the earth together. So y the foules sat ther vpon, and the beastes of the earth wyntered there. Then shal there be a present brought vnto the LORDE of hoostes: euen that harde folke, that fearful folke, and that further is thē this: y desperate and pilled folke (whose londe is deuyded from vs with floudes of water) vnto the place of the name of the LORDE of hoostes: euen vnto the hill of Sion.

T HIS is the heuy burthen vpon Egipte:
"Beholde, the LORDE wil ryde vpon a swifte cloude, and come in to Egipte. And the goddes of Egipte shal trymble at his comyng, and the hert of Egipte shal quake within her. For thus saieth the LORDE: I wil sterve vp the Egiptians one agaynst another amonge them selues; so that one shalbe euer agaynst his brother and nebboure, yee one cite agaynst another, and one kyngdome agaynst another. And Egipte shalbe chocked in hir self. Whé they axe counel at their goddes, at their Propheteres, at their soothsayers and witches: then wil I bringe their counel to naught.

I wil deluyer Egipte also in to the hondes of greuous rulers, and a cruel kinge shal haue the rule of them. The water of the see shalbe drawé out, Nitus shal synke awaye, q be dronke vp. The ryuers also shalbe drawn out, the welles shal decrease and drie awaye. Rede and rush shal yafe, the grasse by the waters syde or vpon y ryuers bancke, yee and what so euer is sowen by the waters, shal be wythered, destroyed, q brought to naught. The fyshers shal mourne, all soch as cast angles in the water, shal complayne, q they that sprede their nettes in the water, shalbe faynt harted. Soch as laboure vpon flax q sylcke, shal come to pouerte, q they also that weeeue fyne workes. All the pondes of Egipte, all the policie of their Moates q riches shal come to naught."

Yee the vndiscreete prynces of Zoan, the councel of the wyse Senatours of Pharaos, shal turne to foolishnesse: Those that darre boast q saye of Pharaos behalfe: I am come of wyse people. But where are now thy wyse me? Let them tel the q shewe the, what the LORDE of hoostes hath taken in honde agaynst Egipte. Fooles are those prynces of Zoan, q proude are the prynces of Noph: yee they dyseeaue Egipte with the nobilite of their stocke. For the LORDE hath made Egipte droune with the sprete of erroure, and they shal vse it in all matters: euee like as a droune ma goeth spewing aboute. For Egipte shal lacke good counel, so y they shal not knowe what to do, nether beginnyng nor ende, nether vpon the hode nor water. Thé shal q Egiptiás be like vnto women, afayde q astoied, at the liftinge vp of the hode, which q LORDE of hoostes shal lyft vp ouer them.

The londe of Iuda also shal make the Egiptians afayde, who so doth but speake vpon it, shal put them in feare: And that because of the counel, which q LORDE of hoostes hath devysed agaynst them. Then shal the fuye cities of Egipte speake with the Cannaantes tynge, and sweare by the LORDE of hoostes, q Heliopolis shalbe one of them. At the same tyme shal the LORDE of hoostes haue an auler in the myndest of the londe of Egipte, with this title ther by: Vnto the LORDE. This shalbe a token or testimony vnto the LORDE of hoostes in the londe of Egipte, when they shal erue vnto him, because of those that oppresse them: that he shal sende them a captayne and a Saviour to deluyer them.

Moreover, Egipte shalbe bought vnto the LORDE, and the Egiptians also shal knowe the LORDE at the same tyme: they shal do him reuerence with peace offrings, and with meat offrings: they shal promyse him offrings, yee q paye him also. Thus the LORDE shal smyte Egipte, q heale it agayne: q so shal they turne to q LORDE, and he also shal haue mercy vpo them, and saue them. Then shal there be a comon waye out of Egipte in to Assiria. The Assirians shal come in to Egipte, and the Egiptians in to Assiria. The Egiptians also and the Assirians shall both haue one Gods seruuyre. Then shal Israel with honoure be the thirde to Egipte and Assiria. And the LORDE of hoostes shal blesse them, sayenge: Blisshed is my people of the Egiptians, Assir is the worke of my hodes, but Israel is myne eruenrance.

fete. And so he dyd, goinge naked & barefote. Then sayde the LORDE: where as my seruant Esaye goeth naked and barefote, it is a token and signification of the thinge, that after thre yeare shall come vp Egipte and Ethiopia. For euyn thus shal the kinge of the Assirians drine both yonge and olde, as prisoners naked and barefote, out of Egipte and Ethiopia. And shal dyscouer thy shame of Egipte. They shalbe also at their wittes ende, and ashamed of one another: the Egipcians of the Moryans, and the Morians of the Egipcians, at the sight of their glory.

Morouer they that dwel in thy Iles shal saye euyn the same daye: beholde, this is oure hope, to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we might be delyvered from the kinge of thy Assirians. How will we escape?

The 171. Chapter.

THIS is the heuy burthe of the waist see: A greuous visiō was shewed vnto me, like as when a storme of wynde and rayne russheth in from the wylderness, that terribile londe. Who so maye diseace (sayde the voyce) let him diseace: Whoso maye dis-tryve, let him distroye. Vp Elam, besiege it o Madai, for I will still all their gronynes. With this, the raynes of my backe were ful of payne: *Panges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in hir trauayle. When I herde it, I was abasshed: and wē I loked vp, I was afrayde. Myne herte painted, I trembled for feare. The darknesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

Yee sooner make redy the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watch, eate and drynkke: Vp ye captaynes, take you to youre shlyde, for thus the LORDE hath charged me: go thy waye, and set a watchmā, that he maye tell what he seyth. And whē he had wayted diligētly, he sawe two horsmen: the one rydinge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a camel. And the lyon cried: LORDE, I haue stonde waytinge all the whole daye, and haue kepte my watch all the nighte. With y came there one rydinge vpon a charet, which answered, and sayde: *Babilon is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, and all y images of hir goddes are smytten to y grounde. This (o my felowe throssers and fanners) haue I herde of the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel, to shewe it vnto you.

The heuy burthen of Duma.

One of Seir cried vnto me: *watchman, what hast thou espyed by night? Watchman, what hast thou espyed by night? The watch- man answered: The daye breaketh on, and the night is cōmyng: Yf youre request be earnest, then axe, and come agayne.

The heuy burthen vpon Arabia.

For thei shal runne awaye from the weapon, from the drawē swerde, from the bōt bowe, and from the greate batel. For thus hath the LORDE spoken vnto me: ouer a yere shal all the power of Cedar be gone, like as when the office of an hyred seruant goeth out: And the remnaunt of the good Archers of Cedar, shalbe very few: For the LORDE God of Israel hath spoken it.

For this is y daye of the LORDE of hoostes, wherein he will plage, treade downe, and wedge out the valley of Vīsōs, and brake downe the walles, with soch a crack, that it shal geue a sownde in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Elamites take the quyuers to carte and to horse, and that the walles were bare from harness. Thy goodly valleys were ful of Charettes, the horse men made them soone to besiege the gates. For the LORDE himself hath sayde it.

AN heuy burthen vpon Tirus. Mourne ye shippes of Tharsis, for she is throwne downe to the grounde, and conquered of them, that are come from Cithim. The Indwellers of the Iondes, the marchauntes of Sidon, and they that occupied the see (of whom thou wast ful somtyme) are at a poynte. For by see were there frutes brought vnto the, and all maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comon marcket of al people. Sidó is sorry for it, yee and all y power of the see coplaneth, and saith: O y I had neuer trauled with childe, that I had neuer borne eny, yf I had nether norished boye, ner brought vp daughter.

As soone as Egypte perecauth it, she wilbe as sory as Tiris it self. Go ouer the see, Mourne, ye y dwel in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cite, which hath bene of longe antiquite? whose natynes dwellinge farre of, commende her so greatly? Who hath deyseyd soch thinges vpon Tirus the crowne of al cities, whose marchauntes and captaynes were the highest and principal of the worlde? Ené the LORDE of hoostes hath deyseyd it, that he maye put downe al pompe, and minish all the glory of the worlde. Go thorow thy londe (to thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a gyrdle more.

Thus the LORDE (that remoueth the kingdomes, and hath taken in hande agaynst that mightie Canaan to rote it out:) hath stretched out his honde over the see, and sayde: From hence forth shalt thou make no more myrth (o thou daughter Sidon) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethës. Stonde vp therfore, and go where the enemie wil Carrie the, where thou shalt also haue no rest. Beholde (for thynke usample:) The Caldees were soch a people, that no man was like them. Assur buyled them: he set vp his castels 3 palaces, and broke them downe agaynse. And therfore mourne (ye shippes of the see) for youre power shalbe throwne downe.

After that, shal the lxx. yeares of Tirus (euen as longe as their kings life was) be Beholde, ye LORDE shall waist and plague the world, he shall make the face of the earth desolate, seart abrode inhabitants thereof. Then shall the prest be as the people, the master as the seruant, the dame like the mayde, the seller like the byer, he that lêdeth vp vsury, like him y boroweth vpô vsury, the creditoure, as the better. Yee miserably shall y world be waysted y clene destroyed. For y LORDE hath so determed in himself. The earth shall heuye and decaye: The face of y earth shall perish fall awaye, the proude people of y world shall come to naught, For y earth is corrupte of hir indwellers.

For why? they have offended y lawe, changed the ordinacues, and made the everlasting testamet of none effecte, And therefore shall the curse deoure the earth: for they y dwell therô, haue synned, wherfore they shalbe brea tre also, and those that remayne, shalbe very few. The swete wyne shal mornue, the grapes shalbe weake, and all y haue bene mery in harte, shal sighe. The myrth of tabrettes shalbe layde downe, the chere of the joyfull shal cease, and the pleasure of lutes shall have an ende: there shall no more wyne be dronke with myrth, the beer shall be bytter to the that drinke it, the wicked cities shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretees shall there be lift vp a crie because of wyne, all mens cire shal vanish awaye, and all ioye of the earth shal passe. Desolacion shal remaine in the citie, and the gates shalbe smytten with waistnesse. For it shall happen vnto all londes and to all people, like as when a ma Smytheth downe òlytes, ò are left vpon the tre: or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatheringe is out. And those same (that remaine) shal lift vp their voyce, and be glad, shal magnifie the glory of the LORDE, even from the see, praye the name of the LORDE God of Israel, in the valeis and Iodes. We heare songes suge to the praye of the righteous, fro al the endes of the world. Therfore I must speake: O my vnfruitfulnesse, o my pouerte, Wo is me, all is ful of synneres, which offende of purpose and malice. And therfore, (o thou that dwellst vpon the earth) there is at hôde for the, fere, pyt and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crie, shal fall in to the pyt. And yf he come out of the pyt, he shalbe take with the snare. For the wyndowes aboue shalbe opened, and the founder of the earth shal moue.

The earth shall geue a greate crack, it shal haue a sore ruyne, and take an horrible fall. The earth shal stagger like a dronken man, and be takè awaye like a tent. Hir misledes shall lie so heuye vpô her, ò she must fall, and neuer rise vp agayne. At the same tymre shal the LORDE mushte together the hie hooste aboue, and y kynes of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled together as prisoners be, and shalbe shut in one ware and punished innumerable daies. The Moone and the Sonne shalbe ashamed, when the LORDE of holostes shal rule them at Jerusalem vpon the mount Sion, before and with his excellent counsell.
strength for the needful in his necessite. Thou art a defence agaynst euel wether, a schadowe agaynst the hete. But vnto the presumptuous, thou art like a ströge whylke wynde, that casteth downe the boastinge of the vngodly, thou kepest men from heate with the shadow of the cloudes, thou cuttest of the branches of tyrauntes.

Moruer the LORDE of hoостes shal once prepare a feast for all people vpon the hill: "A plenteous, costly, pleasant feast, of fat and wellfode beasts, of sweate and most pure things. Vpon the hill shal he take awaye the syde vale y hāgeth before y face of al people, and the coureringe wherewith all Gentiles are coerued. As for death, he shall utterly consume it. The LORDE God shall wipe awaye the teares from all faces, and take awaye the con-fucio of his people thorow y whole worlde. For y LORDE himself hath sayde it.

At the same tymel shal it be sayde: lo, this is oure God in whō we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the LORDE that we haue wayted for: Let vs rejoyse y delethe in his health. For the hōde of y LORDE ceseth vpon this hill. But Moab shalbe throwd vnder him, like as the straw is trod vnder fete in a yðge hill. For he shall stretch out his hōdes vpon him, like as a swimmer doth to swimme. And with the power of his hondes shal he cast downe his hie pompe. As for his styre holdes y hie walles: he shal buwe them, cast thē downe, and fell thē to the grounde in to dust.

The y:vi. Chapter.

THEN shal this songe be sunge in the londe of Iuda: 4 We have a ströge citie, the walles y the ordinânce shal kepe vs. Opē y gates, y the good people maye go in, which laboureth for the treuth. And thou, which art the doer and hast the matter in honde: shal prouyde for peace, euē the peace y mē hope for in the. Hope stil in the LORDE, for in the LORDE God is euerslasting strēght. For why, it is he, y bringeth lowe the hie mynded cīteyns, y casteth downe the proude cities. He casteth thē to the groudē, yee euē in to y myre, y they maye be trod vnder the fete of the symeple, y with the steppes of the poore. 7Thou (LORDE) cosidrest the path of y righteous, whether it be right, whether the wave of y righteous be right. Therfore (LORDE) we have a respecte vnto the waye of thy judgmentes, thy name and thy remembrânce rejoyse the soule. 2My soule lusteth after the all the night lōge, y my mynde haiseth frely to the. For as soone as thy judgment is knowne to the worlde, thē the inhabitors of the earth lerne rightousnesse. But the vngodly (though he have receawed grace) yet lerneth he not rightousnesse, but in that place where he is punished, he offendeth, y feareth not the glory of the LORDE.

LORDE, they wil not se thine hie honde, but they shal se it, and be comounde: whē thou shalt devoure them with the wrath of the people, and with the fyre of thine enemies. But vnto vs (LORDE) prouyde for peace: 4 for thou workest in vs all oure worke. O LORDE oure God, though soch lorde haue doomination vpon vs as knowe not the: yet graūte, that we maye only hope in the, and kepe thy name in remembrânce. 1The malicious Tyrauntes whē they die, are nether in life nor in the resurrectio, for thou visitest thē and rootest thē out, and destroyest all the memoryall of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people (o LORDE), thou increasest the people, thou shalt be prayed and magnified in all y enes of the worlde. The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersite which they complaine of, is vnto thē a chastenynge before the. Like as a wife with childe (whē hir trauayle cohēth vpon her) 4 is ashamed, crieth and suffreth the payne: Euē so are we (o LORDE) in thy sight. We are with childe, we trauayle, y beare, y with the spretē we bringe forth health, wherethrow the earth is vndestroyed, and the inhabitors of the worlde perish not.

4But as for thy dead men and ours, that be departed, they are in life and resurrection. They lie in the earth, they wake, y haue ioye: for thy dew is a dew of life y light. But y place of the malicious Tyrauntes is falle awaye. 4 So go now my people in to thy châbre, and shut the doore to the, and suffre now y twicklinge of an eye, 4 till the wrath be
Then the LORDE with his heuy, great and lôge swearde shal yset Leuiathâ, that invincible serpêt: euê Leuiathâ y croked serpent, and shal slaye the Wallfish in y see. At the same tyme shal më synge of the vyn-yarde of Muscatel. I the LORDE kepe it, and water it in due season. I watch daye a night, that no man breake in to it. I beare no euel wil in my mynde. Who will compell me, that I greatly forgettynge all faithfulnessse, shulde burne it vp at once with thornes a bushes? Or who will enforce me to kepe or make peace? It wil come to this pouynye, y Iacob shalbe rooted againe, and Israel shalbe grene a beare faylues, a they shal fyll y whole worlde with their frute. Smyteth he not his smyter, as euel as he is smytê himself? Destroieth he not y murtherers, as he is murthered? Every mă recöpenseth with y measure y he receaueth: He museth vpô his sore wynde, as vpô the dayes of extreme heate. And therefor shal the inique of Iacob be thus reconciled. And so shal he take awaye all y frute of his synnes.

As for aultur stones, he shal make them all as stones beaten to poulter: the Grones and Idols shal not stonde. The stronge cities shalbe desolate, and y fayre cities shalbe left like a wildernes. The catel shal fede and lie there, and the shepe shal eate it vp. Their haruest shal be brent; their wyues which were their bweete when they came forth: shalbe defyld. For it is a people without vnderstödinge, and therefore he y created them, shal not favoure them: and he y made them, shal not be merciful to the. In y tyme shal y LORDE shute from y swifte water of Euphrates, vnto y ryuer of Egipte. And there shal the children be chosen out one by one. Then shal the grete trompet be blowen, so that those which have bene destroyed in the Assirians londe, and those that be secatred abrode in Egipte: shal come y worshipe the LORDE at Ierusale, vpô the holy mount.

W be to y crowne of pryde, to y dronke Ephraemites, and to the faydinge floure, to the glory of his pope, y is vpô the toppe of the plenteous valley: which më be ouer laden with wyne. Beholde, the strenght and power of the LORDE shal breake in to the londe on euery syde, like a tempest of hale, that beareth downe stronge holds, and like an horrible, mightie and ouer flowinge water. And the proude crowne of the drunken Ephraemites, shal be troden under foote. And as for the faydinge floure, the glory of his pompe, which is vpô the toppe of the plenteous valley: it shal happen vnto him, as to an vntymely frute before the haruest come. Which as soone as it is sene, is by and by deoured, or euer it come well in a mans honde

And then shal the LORDE of hoostes be a joyful crowne, and a glorious garlade vnto the remnauant of his people. Vnto the lowly, he shalbe a sprete of iudgment, and vnto them that dryue awaye the enemies from y gates, he shalbe a sprete of streçth. But they go wronge by y reason of wyne, they fall and stacker because of stöge dryne. Yee euê the prestes and prophætes them selues go amisse, they are dronken with wyne, and weake braned thorow stronge dryne. They erre in seinge, and in iudgment they fayle. For all tables are so ful of vomyte and fylthynes, y no place is clene. What is he amonge them, y can teach, instructe or enforrme the childrê, which are weened from suck or taken from the brestes: of euery other fashion, then:

Commande y maye be commaundad, byd y maye be byddê, forbyd that maye be byfyrddê, kepe backê y maye be kepe backe, here a litle, here a litle. And therefore the LORDE als shal speake with lispinge lippes and with a straunge lâguage vnto this people, to whom he speake afor of this maner: This shal bringe rest, yf one refresh the weery, ye this shal bringe rest. But they had no will to heare. And therefore the LORDE shal answere their stubbournes (Cômaunde y maye be co-maundad, byd y maye be byddên, forbyd y maye be byfyrddê, kepe backê y maye be kepe backe, here a litle, there a litle) That they maye go forth, fall backwarde, be brussed.
snared and taken. Wherefore heare the worde of the LORDE, ye mockers that rule the LORDES people, which is at Ierusalém. For ye coftore youre selues thus: Tush, death ꕢ we are at a poynte, ꕢ as for hell, we haue made a codicion with it: that though there breake out eny sore plaghe, it shal not come vpon vs. ꕢ For with diseace wil we escape, and with ymblices will we defende oure selues. ꕢ Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, I wil laye a stone in Sion, a greate stone, a costlye corner stone for a sure foundation: ꕢ who so putteth his trust in him, shal not be confounded. Rightuousnes wil I set vp agayne in ꕢ balancce, and judgment in the weightes. ꕢ The tẹpest of hale shal take awaye youre refuge, that ye haue to diseace withal, and ꕢ ouerflowinge waters shal breake downe youre strōge holdes of dissimulaciō. ꕢ Thus the appoyntment that ye haue made with death, shalbe done awaye, and the codicion that ye made with hell, shal not stōde. When the greate destrucțiō goeth throw, it shal all to treda you, It shal take you qwite awaye before it. For it shal go forth early in the mornynge, and continuye only ꕢ daye and ꕢ night. And the very feare only shal teach you, when ye heare it. For ꕢ bedde shal be so narow ꕢ a mā ca not lye vpon it. And the coueringe to small, that a mā maye not wynde him self therin. ꕢ For the LORDE shal steppe forth as he dyd vpon the mount Perazim, and shal take on as he dyd vpō the dale of Gabaon: that he maye bringe forth his deuyce, his straungue deuyce: and fulfil his worke, his wonderfull worcke. And therfor make no mockes at it, that youre captiuyte increase not: for I haue herde the LORDE of hooistes saye, that there shal come a soden destruction and plaghe vpon the whole earth. Take hede, and heare my voyce, pondre and merck my wordes wel. Goeth not the husbondane man euere in due season earnestly to his londe? he moweth ꕢ ploweth his grounde to sowe. And whē he hath made it playne, he soweth it with fitches or comyn. He soweth ꕢ wheate and Barlye in their place, Milium and Rye also in their place. And ꕢ he maye do it right, his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he tredeth not the fitches out with a wayne, nether bringeth he the cart here and there ouer the comyn, but he throsseth ꕢ fitches out with a flake, and the comyn with a rod. As for the wheate, he grynseth it to make bred therof, In as much as he can not bringe it to passe with treadinge out. For nether the brussinge that the cart wheles make, nether his beasts can grynde it. This and soch like thinges come of the LORDE of hostes which is maruellous in councel, and greate in rightuousnesse.

The 111. Chapter.

WO vnto the o Ariel Ariel, thou cite that a Daud wāne. ꕢ Take yet some yeares, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: then shal Ariel be beseged, so that she shal be heuy and sorrowful, and shal be vnto me euyn as a lyon. For I wil laye sege to the rounde aboute, and kepe ꕢ in with towers, and graue vp dykes agaynst ꕢ. And thou shalt be brought lowe, and speake out of the earth, and thy wordes shal go humbly out of ꕢ grounde. Thy voyce shal come out of the earth, like the voyce of a witch, and thy talkinge shal groane out of the myre. For the multitude of thine enemies shalbe like meal dust. ꕢ And the nombre of Tyrauntes shalbe as ꕢ dust that the wynde taketh awaye sodenly.

Thou shalt be visited of the LORDE of hostes with thounder, earth quake, and with a greate crack, with the whyrle wynde, tempest, and with the flame of a consumyng fyre. But now the multitude of all the people, that went out agaynst Ariel: the whole hooste, the stronge holdes, and sege: is like a dreame which apareth in the night. ꕢ It is like as when an hungrie man dreameth that he is eateynge, and when he awaketh, he hath nothinge: like as when a thurstie man dreameth that he is drinkinge, and when he awaketh, he is faynt, and his soule vnpatienct.

So is the multitude of all people, that mustre them selues agaynst the hill of Sion. But ye shalbe at your wittes ende, ye shalbe abasshed: ye shal stackre, and rele to and fro. Ye shalbe drunken, but not of wyne. Ye shal fall, but not thorow dronkenes: For the LORDE shal geue you an hard slepinge sprete, and holde downe youre eyes: namely youre prophets and heads which shulde se, them shal he couer. ꕢ And all visions shalbe vnto you, as the wordes that stonde in a sealed lettre, when one offeth it to a man that is lerned, and sayeth: rede vs this lettre. Thé he answereth: I can not rede it, for it is shutt. But yf it be geuë to one y is not lerned, or sayë vnto him: rede this lettre: Then sayeth he. I can not rede.

Therefore thus sayeth the LORDE:
"For so much as this people draweth nye me with their mouth, and prayseth me highly with their lippes (where as there herte nevertheless is farre fro me, and the feare which they owe vnto me, that turne they to mens lawes and doctrynes) thereof wil I also shewe vnto this people, a maruelous terrible and greate thinge (Namely this:) I wil destroye the wisdome of their wise, and the vnderstandinge of their lerned men shal perish.

"WO be vnto them that seke so depe, to hyde their ymaginacion be fore the LORDE, which rehaerse their couéels in

darkenes, and saye: who seith vs, or who knoweth vs?

Which ymaginacion of yours is euene as when the potters claye taketh advisement, as though the worke might saye to worke master: make me not, or as when an erthen vessel saith of the potter: he vnderstandeth not.

"Se ye not that it is hard by, that Libanus shalbe turned in to Charmel, and that Charmel shalbe taken as a womde? Then shal deaf men vnderstonde the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blinde shal se without eyne cloude or darkenes. The oppressed shal holde a mery feast in the LORDE, and the poore people shal reioyse in the holy one of the LORDE.

Then shal the furious people ceasse, and

\[ \hat{y} \]
mockers shal be put awaye, and all they do wronge shalbe rooted out, soch as laboure to drawe më vnto synne: and

\[ \hat{y} \]
disceauze him, which reproueth them in the gate,

\[ \hat{y} \]
such as turne good persons to vanite.

And threfore the LORDE (even the defender of Abraham) saith thus vnto the house of Iacob:

"Now shal not Iacob be ashamed, nor his face cofounded, when he seith amonge his children (whom my hondes haue made) soch as halowe my name amonge them: that they maye sanctifie the holy one of Iacob, and feare the God of Israel: and that they which afore tyme were of an erroneous sprete, haue now vnderstandinge, and

\[ \hat{y} \]
such as before coude not speake, are now lerned in my lawe.

The 11th Chptrer.

WO be to those shronkinge children (saith the LORDE) which seke counsel, but not at me: which take a webbe in honde, but not after my will: that they maye haue one synne vpon another. They go downe in to Egipte, (and axe me no counsel) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and cõforte in the shadowe of the Egipciæs. But Pharao helpe shalbe youre cõfucion, and the comforte in the Egipciæs shadowe shalbe youre owne shame. Youre rulers haue bene at Zoan, and youre messaungers came vnto Hanes.

But ye shal all be ashamed of the people

maye not helpe you, which shal not bringe you strength or comforte, but shame and confucion.

Youre beasts haue borne burthen vpö their backes tender the South, thorow the waye that is ful of parell and trouble, because of the lyo and lyones, of the Cockatrice and shuttyngye dragon. Yee the Mules bare youre subsauncen, and the Camels brought youre treasure vpon their croked backes, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egipciæs helpe shalbe but vane and lost. Therfore I tolde you also youre pryde shulde haue an ende.

\[ \hat{y} \]

"Wherfore go hee, and write them this in their tables, and note it in a booke: that it maye remayne by their posterite, and be stille kepte. For it is an obstatinate people,

\[ \hat{y} \]
unfaithful children, children that will not heare the lawe of the LORDE.

They darre saye to the prophetes:

For the LORDE God, euyn the holy one of Israel hath promised thus: With stilsettinge and rest shal ye be healed, In quyetnesse and hope shal youre strength lie. Notwithstandinge ye regarde it not, but ye will saie: No, for thus are we costrayned to ffe vpon horses. A thousand of you shal fle for one, or at the most for fyue, which do but only geue you euell wordes: vntil ye be desolate, as a ship mast vpon an hie mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an hill.

Yet stondeth the LORDE waitinge, that he maye haue mercy vpon you, and lifteth him self vp, that he maye receaue you to grace. For the LORDE God is righteous. Happie are all thei that wate for him. For thus (o thou people of Sion and ye citizens of Jerusalem) shal ye neuer be in heuynes, for doutlesse he will haue mercy vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crie, he will helpe the. The LORDE geueth you the bred of aduerseite, and the water of trouble. But thine instruiter fleyth not farre from the, yf thine eyes loke vnto thine instruiter, and thine eares harken to his worde, that crieth after the and saith: This is the waye, go this, and turne nether to the right honde nor the lefte.

Morouer yf ye destroye the slyuer workes of youre Idols, and cast awaye the golden coapes that ye deckt them withall (as fylthynes) and saie, get you hence: The wil he geue rayme to the sede, that ye shal sowe in the earth, and geue you breade of the encrease of the earth, so that all shalbe plentifuls and abundaunt. Thy catel also shal he fede in the brode medowes, yee thyne oxes and Mules that till the grounde, shal eate good fodder, which is pourged with y fanne. Goodly ryners shal flowe out of all his mountaynes and hilles. In the daye of the great slaughter when the towers shal fall, the Moone shal shine as the Sonne and y Sone shyne shalbe seufolde, and haue as much shine, as in seuen dayes beside.

In that daye shal the LORDE bynde vp y brussed sores of his people, and heale their woundes. Beholde, the glory of the LORDE shal come from farre, his face shal burne, that no man shalbe able to abide it, his lippes shal wagge for very indignacion, and his tunge shal be as a consumynge fyre. His breath like a vehememt floude of water, which goeth vp to the throte. That he maye take awaye y people, which haue turned them selues vnto vanite, and the brylde of erroure, that lieth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shal syngge, as the vse is in y night of the holy solemnitie. Ye shal rejoysse from youre hert, as they that come with the pipe, when they go vp to the mount of the LORDE, vnto y rock of Israel. The LORDE also shal set vp the power of his voyce, and declare his terrible arme, with his angrie countenance, yee and the flame of the consumynge fyre, with earth quake, tempest of wynde, and hale stones. Then shal the Assirian feare also, because of the voyce of the LORDE, which shal smyte him with the rodde. And the same rodde which the LORDE wil sende vpon him, shal move the whole founodon: with trumpet, with noyse of warre and batell to destroye. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynnynge, yee euens for kynges also. This hath he made dyde and wyde, y norishinge therof is fyre and wodde immumerable, which the breath of the LORDE kyndleth, as it were a match of brymstone.

The 33rd Chapter.

W O vnto them that go downe in to Egipte for helpe, and trust in horses, and conforte them selues in Charettes, because they be many, and in horse me because they be lustie and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of Israel, and they aske no question at the LORDE. Where as he neuertheles plageth y wicked, and yet goeth not from his worde, wha he steppeth forth and taketh the victory against the housholde of the frauwerde, and against the helpe of euel doers. Now the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horses flesh and not sprete. And as soone as the LORDE stretcheth out his honde, then shal the helper fall, and he that shulde haue bene helped, and shal altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the LORDE spokè vnto me: *Like as the Lyon or lyês whelp roareth vpon the pray that he hath gotten, and is not afayrde, though a multitude of shepheardes crie out vpon him, neither abashed for all the heape of them: So shall the LORDE of hoostes come downe from the mount Sion, and defende his hill. Like as byrdes flote aboute their nestes, so shall the LORDE of hoostes kepe, saue, defende and deliever Jerusalem. Therfore (o ye childe of Israel) turne agayne, like as ye haue exceeded in youre goyng back. For in y daye euery man shal cast out his Idols of syluer and golde, *which ye have made with youre synful hondes. Assur also shalbe slayne with the swerde, not with a mans swerde. A swerde shal deoure him, *but not a mans swerde. And he shal fle from the slaughter, and his servauntes shalbe taken prisoners. He shal go for feare to his stronge holdes, and his princyes shal fle from his badge. This hath y LORDE spokè, whose light burneth in Sion, and his fyre in Jerusalem.

The 1111. Chapter.

BEHOLDE, the kinge shal governe after y rule of rightouesnes, and y princes shal rule accordinge to the balancce of equite. He shalbe vnto me, as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempest, like as a ryuer of water in a thurstie place, and y shadowe of a greate rock in a drie lode. The eyes of the seigne shal not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare, shal take diligët hede. The hert of the vnwise, shal attayne to knowlledge, and the vnpardite tuge shal speake planely and distinctly. Then shal the nygarde be no more called gentle, ner the churle lybere. But the churle wil be churlisly mynded, and his hert wil worke euell and playe the ypocrite, and ymagyn abominaciös agaynst God, to make the hungrie leane, and to withholde drinke from the thurstie: These are the perilous weapons of the cuvetous, these be his shamefule counsels: that he maye begyle the poor with disceatful workes, yee euern there as he shulde geue sentence with the poore. *But the liberall person ymagineth honest things, and commeth vp with honesty.

Vp (ye rich and ydle cities), harken vnto my voyce. Ye careles cities, marcke my wordes. After yeares and dayes shal ye be brought in feare, o ye carelesse cities. For Haruest shalbe out, and the grape gathering shall not come. O ye rich ydle cities, ye that feare no parell, ye shalbe abashed and remoued: when ye see the barenness, the nakednesse and preparinge to warre. Ye shal knock vpó your breastes, because of the pleasauent felde, and because of the frutefull vynyarde. My peoples felde shal bringe thorndes and thistels, for in euery house is voluptuousnes in the cities, wilfulnes. The palaces also shalbe broken, and the greatly occupiè cities desolate. The towers and bulwerckes shal become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of Mules shalbe turned to pasture for shope:

Vnto the tyme that y sprete be poured vpon vs from aboue.

Then shal the wildernesse be a frutefull felde and the plenteous felde shalbe rekened for a wodde. Then shal equyte dwel in the desert, and rightouesnesse in a frutefull londe. And the rewarde of rightouesnesse shalbe peace, and hire frute rest and quietenesse for euer. *And my people shal dwel in the ynyes of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure, where there is ynough in the all. And whè the hale falleth, it shal fall in the wodde and in the citie. O how happy shal ye be, whè ye shal safely sowe youre sede besyde all waters dryue thither the fete of youre oxè asses.

The 1111. Chapter.

THERFORE wo vnto the (o robber) a shal not thou be robbed also?* and vnto the that laiest wait, as who saye there shulde no waite be lade for the? *Wo vnto the which doest hurte, euin so shalt thou be hurt also. And as thou layest waite, so shalt waite be lade for the also.

LORDE be merciful vnto vs, we wait for the. *Thine arme is at a paynte to vset vs, but be thou oure health in the tyme of trouble. Graête that the people maye fle at the anger of thy voyce, *that at thy vpostondinge the Gentiles maye be scarred abrode, and that their spoyle maye be gathered, as the gresshoppers are comouly gathered togethier in to the pyt. Stonde vp LORDE, thou that dwellest on hie: Let Sió be fyllèd with equyte and righteousness. Let truth and faithfulnesse be in hir tyme: power, health, wisdome, knowlege & the fear of God are hir treasure. Behold, their anguys crie with out, the messenguers of peace wepe byterly. The stretes are waist, there walketh no man therin, the appoyntment is broken, the cities are despised, they are not regarded, the desolate earth is in heuynes. Libanus taketh it but for a spore, that it is heuen downe: Saran is like a wyldernes: Basæ Charmel are turned vsipside downe. And therefore saith § LORDE: I wil vp, now wil I get vp, now wil I arysse. Ye shal conceaue stubble, and beare strawe, if youre sprete shal be the fyer, that it maye consume you: if the people shalbe burnt like lyne, as thornes burne that are hewen of, cast in the fyer.

Now herken to (ye that are farre of) how I do with them, cosidre my glory, ye that be at honde. The synner at Sion are afraie, a sodane fearfullnesse is come vpon the vpo-crytes. What is he amonge us (saye they) that will dwell by that consumyng fyer? which of vs maye abyde that everlastinge heate? He that ledeth a godly life (saye I) speaketh the truth: He that abhorreth to do violence and disseate: he that kepeth his hõde that he touch no rewarde: which stoppeth his eares, that he heare no counsell against the innocent: which holdeth downe his eyes, that he se no euel. He it is, that shal dwel on hie, whose saugarder shalbe in the true rocke, to him shalbe geuen the right true meat drynke. His eyes shal se the kyngue in his glory: in the wyde worlde, and his herte shalbe delite in the feare of God.

What shal then become of the scrybe? of the Senatores? what of him that teacheth childrên? There shalt thou not se a people of a strange tůge, to have so diffused a liguage, that it maye not be vnderstande: nether so strange a speache, but it shal be perceaued.

There shal Sion be sene, the head citie of oure solempe feastes. There shal thine eyes se Ierusalem that glorious habitation: the tabernacle that neuer shal remove, whose nales shal be neuer taken out worlde without ende, whose coardes euerychone shal neuer corruppe: for the glorious Magesie of the LORDE shal there be present amôge vs. In that place (where fayre broade ryuers are) shal nether Gallye rowe, ner greate shippe sale. For the LORDE shalbe our captyayne, the LORDE shalbe our lawe gever, The LORDE shalbe our kinge, he himself shalbe our Saniuoure. There are the coardes so layd abrode, that they câ not be better: The mast set vp of soch a fashion, that no bâner ner sale higeth therõ: but there is dealed great spoyle, yee lame men runne after the pray. There lieth no mà that saith: I am sike, but all euel is taken awaie from the people, that dwel there.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

COME ye Heithen ã heare, take hede ye a people. Herkẽ thou earth ã all that is therin: thou rounde copasse ã al that growtheth vtherpon: for the LORDE is angrie with al people, ã his displeasure is kindled agaynst all the multitude of them, to curse them, ã to slaye them. So that their slayne shalbe cast out, ã their bodies stincke: that euë the very hilles shalbe wet with the bloude of them. All the sterres of heauen shalbe consumed, ã the heauen shal folde together like a roll, ã all the sterres therof shal fall, like as the leaves fall from the vynes and fygetrees. For my swearde (saith he) shalbe bathed in heauen, ã shal immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, and vpon the people which I haue cursed for my vengeaunce.

And the LORDES swearde shalbe fall of bloude, ã be rustie with the fatnesse ã bloude of lambs and gootes, with the fatnesse of neeres of the wethers. For the LORDE shal kyl a great offringe in Bosra, and in the londe of Idumea. There shal the Vnicornes fall with the Bulles, (that is with the giauntes) and their londe shalbe washed with bloude, ã their grounde corrupte with fatnesse. Vnto the also (o Sion) shal come the daye of the vengeaunce of God, ã and the yeare when as thynye owne judgmentes shalbe recompensed. Thy floundes shalbe turned to pytch, and thine earth to brymstone, ã therewith shal the londe be kyndled, so that it shal not be quenched daye ner night: But smoke euermore, ã so forth to lie waist. And no man shal go thorow thy londe for euer: ã But Pellicanes, Storkes, great Oules, and Rwens shal have it in possession, ã dwell there in.

For God shal sprede out the lyne of 9. b. * Iac. 4. c. / 2 Pet. 3. b. * Es. 63. a. * Soph. 2. b.
But the deserte will be变成了 glad, and shal be transformed into a pleasing place. It will be transformed to a place of blossoming, with the appearance of lilies, and all the flowers of the field will grow there. All the dark places will be filled with joy, and the wilderness will be transformed into a garden of bloom. The desert will be transformed into a fertile land, as the Lord has declared, and a beautiful tree will grow there. The beauty of the Lord will stand as a sign for all who worship Him. He will be honored among the nations, and His name will be great among the peoples. The Lord will lift up His holy hand, and all the nations will see His glory. The Lord will come to His people and His land will be reunited with Him. All who are gathered to the Lord will receive His blessing.

The 37th Chapter.

I. In the third year of king Ezechias, the king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh, who made a voyage to Lachis toward Jerusalem, against king Ezechias, with a great host of cavalry, which set him by the condite of the ouerpol, in the waye that goeth torow so fuller, and so there came forth unto him Eliachim, that was sonne the president, Soba the scribe, and Ioha Asaphs sonne the Secretary.

And Rabshakesh saide vnto them: Tell Ezechias, that the great king of Assyria sayeth thus vnto him: What presumpction is this, that thou trustest vnto? Thou knowest (peradventure) that thou hast counsellor a power ynowe, to mayntene this warre: or els wier to trusteth thou, that thou canst ther thine self of fro me? lo, Thou puttest thy trust in a broken staff of rede, (I mean Egypte) which he that leaneth vpon it, goeth in to his houe and shuteth him thorow. Even so is Pharaoh the king of Egypte, vnto all thee that trust in him. But yf thou woldest saye to me: We trust in the Lord, that is our God: A goodly god, in dede whose hie plaes aliuteres Ezechias toke downe, and commaundeth Iuda and Jerusalem, to woshippe only before the aluter. Abyde the, thou hast made a condicion with my lorde the kinge of the Assyriases, that he shulde geue the two thousande horses: Art thou able to set me there wy? Seinge now that thou canst not resit the power of the smallest prync e that my lorde hath, how darrest thou trust in the charettes and horse men of Egypte? Moreover, thinkest thou vpon thee can come downe hither, to destoyse this londe with out the LORDES will? The LORDE sayde vnto me: goe downe in to that londe, that thou mayest destroye it.

Then sayde Eliachim, Sobna τ Iohah vnto Rabsaches: Speake to vs thy seruauntes (we praye the) in the Sirians language, for we understonde it well: And speake not to vs in the Iews tunge, lest the folcke heare, which lieth vpon the wall. Then answered Rab-saches: Thinke ye, γ the kinge sent me to speake this only vnto you? Hath he not sent me to the also, that lie vpō the wall? that they be not copelled to eate their owne donge, and drinke their owne stale with you?

And Rabsaches stode stiſh, γ cried with a loude voyce in the Iews tuge, and sayde:

Now taketh, howe the great kinge of the Assiriasses geueth you warnyng. Thus saieth the kinge:

Let not Ezechias disseae you, for he shal not be able to deluyer you. Morouer, let not Ezechias comforte you in the LORDE, when he saieth: The LORDE with out doute shal delunde vs, γ shal not geue ouer this cito in to the hondes of the kinge of the Assiriasses, beleue him not. But thus saieth the kinge of Assiria: opteyne my fauoure, endclyne to me: So maye every man enjoye his vynnyardes and fygetrees, and drinke the water of his cisterne:
vnto the tymne that I come myself, γ bringe you in to a londe, γ is like youre owne: wher in is wheat and wyne, which is both swen with sede, and planted with vynnyardes. Let not Ezechias disseae you, when he sayeth vnto you: the LORDE shal deluyer us.

γ Might the goddes of the Gentiles kepe euerymans londe, from the power of the kinge of the Assiriasses? Wher is the God of hemath γ Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharnaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my honde? Or which of all the goddes of the lodes, hath deliuered their countre out of my power, so that the LORDE shalde deluyer Jerusalem fro my honde? Vnto this, Ezechias messuengers helde their tunges, and answered not one worde: for the kinge had charged them, that they shalde geue him none anwere. So cam Eliachim Elchias sonne the presidet, Sobna the scrybe, and Ioh Asaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Ezechias with rente clothes, γ tolde him the worde of Rabsaches.

THE 117th. Chapter.

WHEN Ezechias herde that, he rente his clothes, γ put on a sack cloth, γ went in to the temple of the LORDE. But he sent Eliachim the Presidet, Sobna the scrybe with the eldest prestes cloothed in sacke, γ vnto the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amos, γ they sayde vnto him: Thus saieth Ezechias: this is the daye of trouble, of plage γ of wrath: like as when a childe cometh to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bringe it forth. The LORDE thy God (no doute) hath well considered the wordes of Rabsaches, whom his lorde γ kinge of the Assiriasses hath sent, to defie γ blaspheme the lyuyng God: with soch wordes, as the LORDE thy God hath herde right well. And thereforliift vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of kinge Ezechias came to Esay.

And Esay gaue them this answere: Sayde thus vnto youre lorde: thus saieth the LORDE: Be not afrayde of the worde of that thou hast herde, wherwith the kinge of Assiriasses seruauentes haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I γ will cause a wynde go ouer hym, as soone as he heareth it, he shal go agayne in to his countre, there will I destroye him with the swerde. Now when Rabsaches returned, he founde γ kinge of Assiria layenge sege to Lobna, for he had understonde, that he was departed from Lachi. For there came a rumoure, γ Taracha kinge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst hym.

And when the kinge of Assiria herde γ, he sent other messaungers to kinge Ezechias, with this commaundement. Saye thus to Ezechias kinge of Iuda: Let not thy God disseae the, in whom thou hopest, γ sayest: Ierusalel shal not be geue in to the hondes of the kinge of Assiria. For thou knowest well, how the kinges of Assiria haue handled all the lones, that they haue subuered, γ hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentiles (whom my progenitours coquered) deliuered at any tymne thorow their goddes? As namely, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, γ the childre of Eden, which dwell at Thalassar. Where is the kinge of Hemath, γ the kinge of Arphad, γ the kinge of the citie Sepharnaim, Ena and Aua? Now when Ezechias had receaued γ lettre of the messaungers, γ red it, he went vp in to the house of the LORDE, γ opened the lettre before γ LORDE. And Ezechias prayed befo-

efore the LORDE on this maner: O LORDE of hoostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest

I wil put a rynge in thy nose, a bridle byt in the chawes of the, a turne the aboute, eue the same waye thou camest. I wil geue the also this token (o Ezechias) this yeare shalt thou eate that is kepeth in store, a the next yeare soch as growth of himself, and in the third yeare ye shalt sowe and reappe, yee ye shal plante vnyardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And soch of the house of Iuda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnunta shall take rote beneth, a bringe forth frute aboone. For the escaped shall go out of Ierusale, a the remnunta frome the mount Sion. And this shal the gelousy of the LORDE of hoostes bringe to passe. Therfore thus saith the LORDE, cöcernynge the kinge of the Assirians: He shall not come in to the citie, and shal shute no arowe in to it, there shall no shilde hurte it, nether shal they graue aboute it. The same waye that he came, shal he returne, and not come at this citie, saith the LORDE. And I will kepe and saue the citie (saieth he) for myne owne, a for my seruanta Dauids sake.

Thus the angel went forth, and slewe of the Assirians hoostes, an cxlv. thousande. And when men arose vp early (at Ierusale:) Beholde, all laye ful of deed bodies. So Senachierib the kinge of the Assirians brake vp, and dwelt at Niniume. Afterwarde it chammes, as he prayed in the Tẹple of Nesrah his god, that Adramalech and Sarazer his owne sounes slewe him with the swearde, and fled in to the londe of Ararat. And Esarhadon his sonne reigned after him.

The rrribij. Chapter.

NOT longe afore this, was Ezechias dead-sick: And the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos came vnto him, and sayde: Thus commaudeth the LORDE: Set thyne house in ordre, for thou must dye, and shalt not escape. Then Ezechias turned his face towarde the wall, a prayed vnto the LORDE, and sayde: Remembre (o LORDE) that I haue walked before the in treuth and a stedfast hert, and haue done the thinge that is pleasant to the. And Ezechias wepte sore. The sayde God vnto Esay: Go and speake vnto Ezechias: The LORDE God of Dauid thy father sendeth this worde: a I haue herde Delyuer vs (o LORDE) and we wil synge prayses in thy house, all the dayes of oure life.

And Esay sayde: take a playster of fyges, and laye it vpon the sore, that it shal be whole. Then said Ezechias: O what a greate thing is this, that I shal go vp in to the house of the LORDE.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The same tyme Merodach Baladâ, a Baladâ sonne kinge of Babilon, sent lettres and presents to Ezechias. For he vnderstode, how that he had bene sick, a was recovered agayne. a And Ezechias was glad thereof, a shewed them the commodities of his trasure: of syluer, of golde, of spyes a rootes, of precious oyles, all that was in his cubboordes and treasure houses. There was not one thinge in Ezechias house, a so thorow out all his kingdome, but he let them se it.

The came Esay the prophet to kinge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What haue ye men sayde, and from whence came they vnto the? Ezechias answered: They came out of a farre countrie vnto me: out of Babilon. Esay sayde: what haue they looked vpon in thynne house? Ezechias answerde: All that is in myne house, haue they sene: and there is nothinge in my trasure, but I shewed it them.

Then said Esay vnto Ezechias: Vnderstode the worde of the LORDE of hoostes, Beholde, the tyne wil come, that euery thinge which is in thine house, and all that thy progenitours haue layde vp in stoure vnto this daye, shaethylene to Babilon, and nothinge left behinde. This sayeth the LORDE. Yee and parte of thy sonnes that shal come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shalbe caired hence, and become gelded chamberlaines in the kinge of Babilons courte: Then sayde Ezechias to Esay: Now God prosperre his owne counsel, which thou hast tolde me. He sayde moroner: So that there be peace, and faithfulness in my tyne.

The xi. Chapter.

BE of good chere my people, be of good chere (saieth youre God) Conforte Jerusalem, and tell her: that hir traualue is at an ende, that hir offence is pardoned, that she hath receaved of the LORDES honde sufficient correction for all hir synnes. A voyce crieth: *Prepare y waye for the LORDE in the wylderness, make straight y path for oure God in the deserte. Let all valleis be exalted, and euery mountayne and hill be layde lowe. What so is eroked, let it be made straight, and let the rough places be made playne feldes. For the glory of the LORDE shall apeare, & all flesh shall se it, for why, y mouth of the LORDE hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Now crie. And I sayde: what shal I crie? Then spake it: that, all flesh is grasse, and that all the bestie therof, is as the floure of the felde. When the grasse is wythered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breath of the LORDE bloweth vpon them. Neuerthelesse whether the grasse wyther, or the floure fade awaye: Yet the worde of oure God endureth for euer. Morowe the voyce cried thus: Go vp vnto the hill (o Sion thou that bringest good tidinges, lift vp thy voyce with power, o thou preacher Ierusalem. Lift it vp without feare, and say vnto the cities of Iuda: 'Beholde, youre God: beholde, the LORDE, euem the almightie shal come with power, & beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he bringeth his treasure with him, and his workes go before him. He shal fede his flock like an hirdman. He shal gather the lambes together with his arme, and carie them in his bosome, & shal kindly intreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fist? Who hath measured heauen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earth of y worlde in thre fyngers? Who hath weyed the mountaynes and hilles? *Who hath reformed the mynde of the LORDE? Or who is of his councell to teach him? At whom hath he asked coucel, to make him vnderstode, and to lerne him the waye of judgment: to teach him science, and to enctruet him in the waye of vnderstodinge? Beholde, all people are in coparison of him, as a dropppe to a bucket full, and are counted as the least thing y the balace wyeth. Beholde, y Ises are in comparison of him, as the shadowe of the Sonne beame. Libanus is not suffiect to ministre fyre for his offringe, and all the besties therof are not ynoogh to one sacrifice. All people in comparision of him, are rekened, as nothinge, *yee vayne vanite and emptynesse.

To whom then will ye licken God? or what similitude will ye set vp vnto him? Shal the caruer make him a carded ymage? and shal the goldsmith cover him with golde, or cast him in to a foyrme of syluer plates? Morowe shal the ymage maker (y the poore man which is disposed, maye haue somthinge to set vp also) seke out and chose a tre, that is not rotten, and carue therout an ymage, y mouethe not? Knowe ye not this? Herde ye neuer of it? Hath it not bene preache vnto you sence the begynynge? Haue ye not bene enformed of this, sence the foundation of y earth was layde: That he sytteth vpon the Circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabittours of the worlde are in coparison of him, but as greshoppers: 'That he spredeth out the heauens as a couringhe, that he stretcheth them out, as a tent to dwell in: That he bringeth princes to nothinge, and the judges of the earth to dust: so that they be not planted nor sowen agayne, neither their stocke rootet agayne in the earth? For as soone as he bloweth vpon them, they wither & fade awaye, like the strawe in a whire wynde.

To whom now wil ye licken me, *whom shal I be like, saith the holy one? Lift vp youre eyes an hie, and considre. Who hath made those things, which come out by so greate heapes? and he can call them all by their names. *For there is nothinge hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strength, and might. How maye then Iacob thinke, or how maye Israel saye: My wayes are hyd from the LORDE, and my God knoweth not of my judgmenetes. Knouew thou not, or hast thou not herde, that the eueraldige God, the LORDE which made all the corners of the earth, is nether weepy nor faynt, and that his wisdome cannot be comprehended: but that he gength vnto the weery, and power vnto the faynte? Children are weepy and faynt, and the strongest men fall:

*But vnto them that haue the LORDE before their eyes, shal strength be encrease, Aegles
wynges shall growe vpon them: When they runne, they shall not fall: and when they go, they shall not be weery.

The ril. Chapter.

BE still (ye Iondes) and herken vnto me. Be strong ye people, Come hither, and shew youre cause, we will go to the lawe together. Who rayseth vp y iuste from the ryssinge of the Sonne, and calleth him to go forth? Who casteth downe the people, and subdueth the kinges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the grounde with his swarde, and scathe them like stubble with his bowe? He followeth vpoun them, and goeth safely himself, and cometh in no footpath with his fete. Who hath made, created, and called the generations from the begynnynge? Euen I the LORDE, which am the first, and with the last.

Looke not behinde the, for I wil be thy God, to streth the, helpe the, to kepe the with this right hode of myne. Beholde, all they that resist the, shal come to confusion and shame: and thine aduersaries shalbe destroyed brought to naught. So that who so seketh after them, shall not fynde them. Thy destroyers shal perish, so shall they that vndertake to make batell against the. For I thy LORDE God, will streth thy right honde. Euen I that saye vnto the: Feare not, I wil helpe the. Be not afrayde thou little worme Iacob, and thou despysed Israel: For I wil helpe the, saith the LORDE, the holyone of Israel thine avenger. Beholde, I will make the a treadinge cart a newe fale, thou mayest throsshe gynde the moun-

A brusset redel shal he not breake, *the smokinge flax shal he not quench: but faithfully *truly shal he geue iudgmenct. He shal nether be ouersene ner haistie, that he meye restore rightrouesnesse vnto the earth: *the Gëtiles also shal kepe his lawes. *For thus saith God the LORDE vnto him (Euen he that made the heauen, and spred them abreede, *set forth the earth with hir enerces: which geueth vnto the people that is in it, *them to that dwel therin) I the LORDE haue called *in rightrouesnesse, *led the by the honde. Syne therfore vnto the LORDE, a new songe of thakes geuyng, blow out his prysye vnto the ende of the worlde. They that be vpon the see, *all that is therin, praysie him, the Iles *they that dwel in them. Let the wildernes with hir cities lift vp hir voyce, the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be glad that syt vpon rockes of stone, and let them cry downe from the hie mountaynes: ascribinge almightynes vnto the LORDE, *magnifinge him amonge the Gëtiles. The LORDE shal come forth as a gyaunte, and take a stomacke to him like a fresh man of warre. He shal roare and crye, and overcome his enemies.

I haue longe holden my peace (saieth the LORDE) shulde I therfore be still, and kepe sylencce for euer? I will crye like a tranelinge woman, and once wil I destroye, and deououre. I wil make waist both mountayne *hill, *drie vp every grene thinge, that growth theron. I wil drie vp the floudes of water, *drinke vp the ryuers. I wil bringe the blinde in to a strete, that they knowe not: and ledge them in to a fotepath, that they are ignoraunt in. I shal make darknesse light before the, *the thinge y is croked, to be straight. These thinges will I do, *not forget them. *And therfore let them convete, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in Idols, *saye to fashioned ymanes: ye are oure godes.

Heare, o ye deaf men, and sharpen youre sightes to se (o ye blinde.) *But who is blynder, the my seruaunt? Or so deaf, as my messaungers, whom I sent vnto them? For who is so blynde as my people, *they y haue the rule of them? *They are like, as yf thou vnderstodest moch, and kepte nothinge: or yf one herde well, but were not obedient. The LORDE be merciful vnto them for his rightrouesnesse sake, that his worde might be magnified *prayset. But it is a myscheuous *wiked people. Their yonge men belonge all to the snare, *shal be shut in to preson houses. *They shal be caried awaye captuye and no man shal lowe them. They shal be trode vnder fote, *no man shal laboure to bringe the agayne. But who is he amonge you, *pondreth this in his mynde, *con-sidreth it, *taketh it for a warrynge in tyne to come?

Who suffred Iacob to be trodden vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled? dyd not the LORDE? Now haue we synned against him, and haue had no delite to walke in his ways, nether bene obedient vnto his lawe. Therfore hath he pourde vpon vs his wrothfull displeasure, and strõge batell, which maketh vs haue to do on euery syde, yet will we not vnderstode: He burneth vs vp, yet syncketh it not in to oure hartes.

The rliij. Chapter.

BUT now, the LORDE that made the (o Iacob) *and he that fashioned the (o I saith thus: Feare not, for I will defende *y. I haue called *by thy name, thou art ye owne. When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the stróge floudes shulde not pluck ỳ awaye: When thou walkest in the fyre, it shal not burne ỳ, and the flame shal not kindle vpon the. For I am the LORDE thy God, the holyone of Israel, thy Sauioure. I gaue Egipte for thy delueryeuer, the Moriyâ and the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my sight, and because I set by the, and loved the. "I pillèd all men for the, and delueryer vp all people for thy sake, ỳ that thou shuldest not feare, for I was with the. I wil bring thy sede from the east, and gather the together from the west. I wil saye to the north: let go. And to the south, kepe not backe: But bringe me thy sonnes from farre, and my daughters from the endes of the worlde. Namely, all those that be called after my name: For the haue I created, fashioned, and made for myne hounoure.

Bringe forth that people, whether they haue eyes or be blynde, ỳ deaf or haue eares. All nacions shal come in one, and be gathered in one people. But which amonge younder goddes shall declare such thinges, ỳ tell vs what is to come? Let them bringe their witnesses, so shal they be fre: for then shal haue heare it, and saye: it is truth. But I bringe you witnesses (saith the LORDE) euens those that are my seruauntes, whom I haue choosen: to the intent that ye might be certified, and gue me faithful creidence: yee and to còsidre, that I am he, before whom there was never eny God, and that there shalbe none after me.

I am only the LORDE, and without me is there nò Sauioure. I gue me warnynge, I make whole, I teach you, that there shulde be no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde must ye beare me youre selues (saith the LORDE) that I am God. And euuen he am I from the begynnynge, and there is none, "that can take any thinge out of my honde. And what I do, can no man chaunge.

Thus saith the LORDE the holy one of Israel youre redemer: ỳ For youre sake I wil sende to Babilon, and bringe all the strongest of them from thence: Namely, the Caldees that boost them of their shippes: Euen I the LORDE youre holy one which haue made Israel, and am youre kinge. Moreover, thus saith the LORDE (Euen he that maketh a waye in the see, ỳ and a footpath in the mightie waters: which bringeth forth the charrettes and horses, the hooste and the power, that they maye fall a slepe and neuer ryse, and be extint, like as tow is quenched.

"Ye remembre not thinges of olde, and re-arde nothinge that is past. Therfore beholde, I shal make a new thinge, and shortly shall it apeare: Ye shall well knowe it, I tolde it you afore, but I will tell it you agane.

I will make strestes in the deserte, and ryuers of water in the wildernesse. 'The wilde beastesshal worshipp me: the dragon, and the Estrich. ỳ For I shall guee water in ỳ wildernesse, and streames in the deserte: that I maye guee drinke to my people, whom I chose. This people haue I made for my self, and they shal shewe forth my praye.' For thou (Iacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnlust toward me, outh Israel. Thou gauest me not thy yonge beastes for burnoffringes, nether didest honour me with thy sacrific(es). Thou boughtest me no deare spice with thi money, nether pourdest the fat of thy sacrific(es) vpon me. ỳ Howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offringes, nether greuous in Incense.

"But thou hast ladè me with thy synnes, and weeried me with thy vngodlynes: Where as I yet am euuen he only, that for myne owne selifes sake do awaye thine offences, ỳ forget thy synnes: so that I wil neuer thinke vpon them. Put me now in remembrance (for we will reason together) ỳ shewe what thou hast for the, to make the quyte. ỳ Thy first father offended sore, and thy rulers haue synned agayn me. Therfore I ether suspended, or slewe the cheifest prynces: I dyd curse Iacob, and gaue Israel in to reprofe.

The 1111. Chapter.

SO heare now, o Iacob my seruaunt, and ỳ "Israel whom I haue chosè. For thus saithet the LORDE, that made the, fashioned the, and helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe: Be not afrayde (o Iacob my seruaunte,) thou rightoush, whom I haue choosen. ỳ For I shal pourue water vpon the drie grounde, and ryuers vpon the thurstie. I shal fyre of it to bake bred. And after warde maketh a god there of, to honour it: and an Idol, to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre, with another he rosteth flesh, that he maye eate roste his bely full: with the third he warmeth himself, and saichet: A ha: I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the residue, he maketh him a god, and an Idol for himself. He kneelthey before it, he worshippest it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayeth: deluyer me, for thou art my god.

Yet men nether considere ner vnderstonde, because their eyes are stoppte, that they can not se: and their hertes, that they can not perceave. They pondre not in their myndes (for they have nether knowlege ner vnder- stodinge) to thinke thus: I haue brët one pece in the fyre, I haue baked bred with Æ coles there of. I haue rosted flesh withal, and eaten it: Shal I now of the residue make an abominacation, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wood? The kepinge of dust, and folishnesse of herte hath turned them a syde: so that none of them can haue a fre conscience to thinke: maye not I erre?

Cosider this (o Jacob and Israel) for thou art my seruaute. I haue made the, that thou mightest serve me. O Israel, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I dryeue them awaye like the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst. Torue Æ agayne vnto me, Æ I will deluyer Æ.

Be glad ye heauen, whom the LORDE hath made, let all Æ is here benevpon the earth, be joyfull. Reioyse ye mountaynes Æ woddes, with all the trees that are in you: for Æ LORDE shall redeeme Iacob, Æ shewe his glory vpon Israel. For thus saiceth the LORDE thy redeemer, even he that fashioned the from thy mothers wombe: Æ I am the LORDE, which do all thinges my self alone. I only haue spred out the heauen, and I only haue layde the foundacion of the earth. I destroye the tokens of witches, and make the Sothsayers goe wronge. As for the wise, I turne them bacward, and make their conninge folishnesse.

But I set vp the purpose of my seruauntes, and fulfil the counsel of my messaungers. I saye to Ierusale: turne agayne: And to the cities of Iuda, be ye buylde agayne: and I repayre their decayed places. I saye to the
The prophet Esay.

He shall builde my cite,

that nether for gift nor rewardes, saieth the LORDE of hoostes.

The LORDE hath sayde morouer: The occupiers of Egipte, the marchauntes of the Moryans and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shalbe thine, they shal folowe the, and go with cheynes vpon their fete. They shal fall downe before the, and make supplication vnto the. For God (with out whö there is none other God) shal be with the. O how profounde art thou o God, thou God q Sauioure of Israel? Confounded be ye, and put to dishonoure: go hence together with shame, all ye that be workmasters of erroure: (that is worshippers of Idols.) But Israel shalbe saued in the LORDE, which is the euerlastinge salvaciō: They shal not come to shame ner confusion, worlde without ende.

For thus sayeth the LORDE: 'euen he that created heauen, the God l made the earth, that fashioned it, and set it forth: I haue not made it for naught, but I made it to be inhabited: Euen I the LORDE, without whom there is none other. I haue not spoken secretly, nether in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I sayde vnto the sede of Iacob: seke me. I am the LORDE, which whē I speake, declare the things that is righteous and true. Let the be gathered together, let the drawe nye hyther, y are escaped of the people: Haue they eny vnderstandinge, set vp the stocks of their Idols, and praye vnto a god, that cā not holpe the? Let men drawe nye, let them come hither, ād aske counelc one at another, and shewe forth: What is he, that tolde this before? or, who spake of it, euer since the begynnynge? Haue not I l LORDE done it: without whom there is none other God? the true God and sauioure, and there is els none but I? And therefore turne you vnto me (all ye enedes of the earth) so shal ye be saued, for I am God, q there is els none. I sware by my self: out of my mouth cōmeth y wordes of righteousnesse, and that maye no man turne: but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tungen shall sware by me, sayenge: Verely in the LORDE is my righteousness and with rightoussenesse, and ordre all his wayes.

The 1st. Chapter.

NEUERTHELES Bel shal fall, Nabi Nabob shalbe broken: whose ymage are a burthce for the beasts and catell, to overlade the, and to make them weercy. They shal syncke downe, and fall together: for they maye not ease them of their burthen, therefore must they go in to captiuynge.

Herken vnto me, o house of Iacob, and all ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel: whom I have borne from youre mothers wombe, and brought you vp from youre byrth, till ye were grewen: I which shalbe vnto youre last age: I have made you, I will also norish you, beare you and saue you. Whom will ye make me like, in fashion or ymage, that I maye be like him? Ye fooles (no doute) wil take out syluer and golde out of youre purses, and weye it, and hyre a gold-smyth to make a god of it, that men maye knele downe and worshippe it. Yet must he be taken on mens shoulders and borne, and set in his place, that he maye stonde and not moue. Alas that men shulde crie vnto him, which geueth no answere: and delyuereth not the man that calleth vpon him, from his trouble.

Consider this well, and be ashamed, Go in to youre owne seltes (O ye runnagates). Remembre the thinges which are past, sence the begynnynge of the worlde: that I am God, and that there is els no God, yee and ly there is nothinge like vnto me. In the begynnynge of a thinge, I shewte the ende therof: and tel before, thinges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my deuyce accomplished, fulfilleth all my pleasure. I call a byrde out of the east, and all that I take in honde, out of farre countrees. As soone as I commaunde, I bringe it hit: therfore as soone as I thinke to deuyse a thinge, I do it.

Heare me, o ye that are of an hie stomach, but farre from righteousnessse. I shal bringe forth my righteousnessse, It is not farre, and my health shal not tarie longe awaye. I wil laye health in Siō, and gene Israel my glory.

BUT as for the (O daughter, thou virgin Babylon) thou shalt syt in the dust. Thou shalt syt vpon the grounde, and not in a trone (o thou mayden of Chaldea). Thou shalt nomore be called tender, and pleasante. Thou shalt bringe forth the querne, gynyne meel, put downe thy stomacher, make bare thy knees, and shalt wade thorow the water ryueres. Thy shame shalbe discouered, ad thy preuyttes shall be sene. For I wil auenge me of the, and no man shall let me: saith oure redeemer, which is called the LORDE of hoostes, the holy one of Israel.

Syt still, holde thy tunge, and get the into some darcke corner (O daughter Caldea) for thou shalt nomore be called lady of kyng-domes. I was so wroth with my people, y I punished myne enheritance, and gane them in to thy power. Neuertheles, thou shewdest them no mercy, but euen the very aged men of the, didest thou oppresse right sore with thy yock, thou thoughtest thus: I shalbe lady for euer. And besyde all that, thou hast not regarded these thinges, nether cast, what shulde come after.

Heare now therefor, thou wilful, that syttest so carelesse, speakest thus in thine herte. I am alone, and without me is there none: I shal neuer be wydel, ner desolate agayne. And yet both these thinges shall come to the vpō one daye in the twinklinge of an eye: Namely, wyddowhead, and desolacion. They shall mightely fall vpon the, for they multitude of thy witches, and for the greate heape of thy couriers. For thou hast comforted thy self in thy discatfulnes, and hast sayde: No ma seth me. Thyne owne wisdome companion hauə diseaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, and without me there is none. Therefor shall trouble come vpō, thou shalt not knowe, from whicke it shal arise. Myscheve shall fall vpō, which thou shalt not he able to put of. A sodaine misery shall come vpon the, or euer thou be avarre.

Now go to thy couriers, and to the multitude of thy witches, whom thou hast bene acquainted withal from thy youth) ye they maye helpe the, or strengthe the. Thou hast hither to had many councels of them, so let the shaunegasers & the beholders of starres, come on now and delyuer the: yee and let the shewe, when these new things shall come upon the. Beholde, they shalbe like strawe, which ye it be kindled with fyre, no man maye rydle it for the vehement of the flame: And yet it geuillez no zyners to warme a man by, ner cleare fyre to syt by. Euen so shal they be vnto the, whom thou hast vsed to occupyde from thy youth. Every one shall shewe his erroneous waye, yet shall none of them defende the.

The rlviiij. Chapter.

HEARE this, O thou house of Iacob: ye are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one stocke with Iuda: which swear by the name of the LORDE, and bear weisse by the God of Israel (but not with treuth and right) "which are called fremen of the holy citie, as they that loke for conforth in the God of Israel, whose name is the LORDE of hoostes.

The things that I shewed you euer sence
the begynnynge: Haue I not brought the to passe, immediately as they came out of my mouth, and declared them? And they are come? Howbeit I knewe that thou art obstinate, and that thy neck hath an yron vane, and that thy brow is of brasse. Neuertheles
I haue euer sence the begynnynge shewed the of things for to come, and declared the vnto
the, or euer they came to passe: that thou shuldest not saye: myne Idol hath done it,
my craved or cast ymage hath shewed it.

Hear ye consider all these things, whether it was ye that prophecyed the: But as for me, I tolde the before at the begynnynge, new secrete things, ye thou knewest not of: "And some done now not of olde time, wherof thou neuer herdest, before they were brought to passe: that thou canst not saye: I knewe of them. Morouer there be some wherof thou hadst neither herde nether see, nether haue
they bene opened vnto thin eares afore tyme.
For I knew that thou woldest maliciousli offende, thefere haue I called the a trans-gressoure, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my names sake, I haue withdrawn my wrath, and for myne honours sake I haue ouersene the, so that I haue not rooted the out. Beholde I haue pouredd the,
and not for moneye. I haue chosen the in the fyre of pouerete, And that only for myne owne sake, 'for I geue myne Honour to none
other, that thou shuldest not despise me.
Herken vnto me o Iacob, t Israel who I haue called. I am euen he that is, I am ye first and the last." My honde is the foundation of the earth, t my right honde spanneth ouer the heauens. As soone as I called thee they were there. Gather you all together, and herken:
Which of yonder goddesz hath declared this,
that the LORDE wil do by the kinge of Babilon, (whom he loueth t fauoureth) and by the Caldees his arme? I my self alone haue tolde you this before. Yee I shal call him and bringe him forth, t geue him a prosperous iourneye. Come ny eare this: haue I spokken this thinge darkely" sence the begynnynge? whe a thinge begynneth, I am there.

Wherefore the LORDE God with his spryte hath sent me, And thus saith the LORDE thine avenger, the holyone of Israel: "I am ye LORDE thy God, which teach the profitable things, and lede ye the waye, that thou shuldest go. Yf thou wilt now regard the cōmaunde-ment, wel ythynshes shalle as the water stremme: t thy rightousnes as the wawes flowinge in the see. Thy sede shalle like as the sonde in the see, t the frute of thy body, like the gruel stones therof: Thy name shal
not be roeted out, nor destroyed before me.
Ye shal goe awaye from Babilon, and escape
the Caldees with a mery voyce. "This shalle spoken of, declared abrode, t go forth vnto
the ende of the worlde: so that it shalbe sayde:
The LORDE hath defended his seruaunte Iacob, that they suffred no thurste,' whe they trauyled in the wildernesse. He clave the rockes a sonder, and the water gushed out.
As for the vngodly, they have no peace, saith
the LORDE."

made my mouth like a sharpe swerde, vnnder y shadowe of his honde hath he defended me, and hyd me in his quyuer, as a good arowe, and sayde vnto me: Thou art my seruant Israel, I wilbe honoured in the. Then answere 1: I shal lese my labour, I shal spende my strenght in vayne. Neuertheles, I wil commyte my cause and my worke vnto the LORDE my God. And now saieth the LORDE euë he that fashioned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruanitie, that I maye bringe Iacob agayne vnto him: howbeit, Israel will not be gathered vnto his agayne. In whose sight I am greate, which also is my LORDE, my God and my streth.) Let it be but a small thinge, that thou art my seruanat, to set vp the kinredde of Iacob, to restore the destructiö of Israel: yf I make the not also the light of the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my health vnto the ende of the worlde.

Morouer thus saieth the LORDE the avenger and holy one of Israel, because of the abhorringe and despisinge amongethe Gentiles, concernynge the seruanat of all them y beare rule: Kynges and prynces shal se, and arise and worspe, because of the LORDE that he is faithfull: and because of the holy one of Israel, which hath chosen the.

And thus saieth the LORDE: In the tyme apoynted wil I be present with the. And in the houre of health wil I helpe the, a delyne the. I wil make the a pledge for y people, so y thou shalt helpe vp the earth agayn, and chalenge agayne the scatred heritages: That thou mayest saye to y presoner: go forth, a to them that are in darknesse: come in to the light, that they maye fede in the hie wayes, a get their lyuyng in all places. There shall nether hunger ner thurst, heat nor Sonne hurt them. For he that fanoureth them, shall lede them, and guie them drike of the springe welles. I wil make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, they shal come from farre: lo, some from the north and west, some from the south. Reioyse ye heauens, and synge prayses thou earth: Talke of ioye ye hilles, for God wil coëferte his people, a haue mercy vpon his, y be in trouble.

Then shal Sion saye: God hath forsaken me, and the LORDE hath forgett me. Doth a wife forget the childe of hir wombe, a the sonne whö she hath borne? And though she do forget, yet wil I not forget the. Beholde, I haue written the vp vpon my hondes, thy walles are euer in my sight. They that haue broken the downe, shal make haist to buyle the vp agayne: and they that made the waist, shal dwell in the. Lift vp thine eyes, and loke aboute the: these shal gather them together,' and come to the. As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE) thou shalt put them all vp the, as an apparell, and gynde the to the, as a bryde doth hir jewels. As for thy londe that lieth desolate, waisted a destroyed: it shalbe to narow for the, that shal dwell in it. And they y wolde denoue the, shalbe farre awaie. Then the childe whö y barë shal bringe forth vnto y, shal saye in thine eare: this place is to narow, syt nye together, y I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thinke by thy self: Who hath begotte me these? seinge I am bare a also, a captuyne a an outcast? And who hath norished the vp for me? I am desolate a alone, but fro whëce come these?

And theryfore thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, I will stretch out myne honde to the Gentiles, and set vp my token to the people. They shall bringe the thy sonnes in their lappes, a carie thy daughteres vnto y vpon their shoulers. For kinges shalbe thy nourisinge fathers, and Queenes shalbe thy nourisinge mothers. They shall fall before the with their faces flat vpon the earth, and lick vp the dust of thy fete: that thou mayest knowe, how that I am the LORDE. And who so putth his trust in me, shal not be confounded. Who spoyleth the giaunte of his pray? or who taketh the presoner from the mightie? And theryfore thus saieth the LORDE: The prisoners shalbe taken from the giaunte, and the spoyle deluyered from the violette: for I wil maynteyne thy cause agaynst thine aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And wil fede thine enemies with their owne fleshe, and make the drinke of their owne bloud, as of swete wyne. And all fleshe shal knowe (o Iacob) that I am the LORDE thy Saviour, and stronge avenger.
The 1. Chapter.

THUS saith the LORDE: Where is the bill of thyre mothers deuoreemët, that I sent vnto her? or who is the vsurer, to whom I solde you? Beholde, for thoue owne offices are ye solde: ¼ because of thyre transgression, is yeoure mother forsakë. For why wolde no man receaue me, when I came? ¼ when I called, no man gaue me answere. Was my hode cleene smyte of, that it might not helpe? or, had I not power to deluyer? ¼ lo, at a worde I dike vp the see, æ of water floudes I make dreie lode: so ¼ for want of water, the fish corruppe and die of thirst. ¼ As for heauen, I dooth it with darkenesse, and put a sack vpon it.

The LORDE God hath geuen me a wel lerned tijge, so that I can conforte them which are troubled, yee æ ë in due season. He waked myne eare vp by tymes in æ mornyngæ (as æ solemasters do) ë I might herke. The LORDE God hath opened myne eare, therefore câ I not saye naye, ë ner with drawe my self, but I offre my backe vnto ë smyters, and my chekes to the nypplers. I turne not my face fro shame æd spittinge, for the LORDE God helpeith me, therfore shal I not be co- founded. I haue hardene my face like a flynt stone, for I am sure, that I shal not come to confusion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wil then go with me to lawe? Let vs stode one against another: æf there be eny that wil reason with me, let him come here forth to me. Beholde, the LORDE God stondeth by me, æ what is he that can condempne me? ë lo, they shalbe all like as an olde cloth, æ which ë mothes shal eate vp.

Therfore who so feareth the LORDE amoge you, let him heare the voyce of his seruaunt. Who so walketh in darkenesse, æ no light shyneth vpô him, let him hope in the LORDE, and holde him by his God. But take hede, ye haue all kyndled a fyre, and gyrded yourre selues with the flame: Ye walke in the glistirge of yourre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. This cometh vnto you fro mye honde, namely, æ ye ye shal slepe in sorowe.

The 1. Chapter.

HERKEN vnto me, ye that holde of righteousnes, ye that seke the LORDE. Take hede vnto the stone, wherout ye are hewen, and to the graue wherout ye are digged. ¼ Considre Abraham your father, æ Sara that bare you: how that I called him alone, prospered him wel, æ encreased him: how the LORDE comforted Sio, and repayred all hir decaye: makeinge hir deserte as a Paradise, and hir wildernes as the garden of the LORDE. Myrth and ioye was there, thankes-geunge æ ë voyce of pryse. Haue respecte vnto me then (o my people) and laye thine eare to me: for a lawe, and an ordinaunce shal go forth fro me, æ to lighten the Gentiles. It is hard by, that my health æ my righteousnes shal go forth, and the people shalbe ordred with myne armes.

The Ionges (that is æ Gentiles) shal hope in me, and put their trust in myne armes. Lift vp youre eyes toward heauë, and loke vpon the earth beneth. æ For the heauens shal vanish awaye like smoke, and the earth shall teare like a clothe, æ they that dwel therin, shal perish in like maner. æ But my health endureth for euer, and my righteousnes shall not ceasse. Therfore herckne vnto me, ye æ haue pleasure in righteousness, æ thou people that bearest my lawe in thine herte. æ Fear not the curse of men, be not afrayde of their blasphemies æ reuylinges: for worrnes æ mothes shal eat the vp like clothe æ well. But my righteousnesse shal endure for euer, æ my sauynge health from generacion to generacion.

Wake vp, wake vp, ë be stronge: O thou armes of the LORDE: wake vp, lyke as in tymes past, euer and sence the worlde beganne. æ Art not thou he, that hast wounded that proude lucifer, and hewen the dragon in peces? Art not thou euen he, which hast dried vp the depe of the see, which hast made playne the see grounde, that the deluyer might go thowor? æ That the redeemed of the LORDE, which turned agayne, might come with ioye vnto Sio, there to endure for euer? That æ myrth and gladness might be with them: that sorowe æ wo might fle from the? æ Yee
I, I am euë he, that in all thi ges geueth you consolation. What art thou then, that fearest a mortall mā, † child of man, which goeth awaye as doeth the flour? And forgettest the LORDE that made the, that spread out the heauen, and layde the foundational of the earth. But thou art euë afraide for the sight of thyne oppresseour, which is ready to do harme: Where is the wrath of the oppresseour? It cometh on fast, it maketh haist to apeare: It shall not perish, † it should not be able to destroye, nether shall it faile for faute of norishinge. I am the LORDE thy God, that make the see to be still, and to rage: whose name is the LORDE of hoostes. I shal put my worde also in thy mouth, and defende the with the turnynge of my honde: that thou mayest plant the heauens, and laye the foundational of the earth, and saye vnto Sion: thou art my people.

Awake, Awake, and stonde vp Ierusalem, † thou that from the honde of the LORDE, haft dronke out the cuppe of his wrath; thou that hast supped of, and sucked out the slombringe cuppe to the botome. For amonge all the sonnes whom thou hast be-gotten, there is not one that maye holde the vp: and not one to lode the by the honde, of all the sonnes that thou hast norished. Both these things are happened vnto the, but who is sory for it? Yee, destruction, waistinge, hunger † swerde: but who hath comforted the? Thy sonnes lie comfortles at † ye heads of euery strete like a taked venysone, † are ful of † terrible wrath of † LORDE, † punishemt of thy God. And therefor thou miserable † dronke (howbeit not with wyne) Hearre this: Thus saieth thy LORDE: thy LORDE † God, † defender of his people: Beholde, I wil take † slombrige cuppe out of thy hode, euë † cuppe with the dregges of my wrath: † frō hence forth thou shalt neuer drinke it more, † wil put it † their hode that trouble the: which have spoken to thy soule: stoupe downe, that we maye go ouer the: make thy body euë with the grounde, and as the strete to go vpoun.

The liii. Chapter.

BUT who gateth credence vnto oure preachinge? "Or to whò is the arme of the LORDE knowne? He shal growe before the LORDE like as a braunch, as a rote in a drie grounde. He shal haue nether bewty nor faneour. When we loke vpon him, there shalbe no fayrnesse: we shal haue no lust vnto him. "He shalbe the most ymplye \( \gamma \) despised of all, which yet hath good experience of sorewes \( \gamma \) infirmities. We shal reken him so ymplye \( \gamma \) so vyle, that we shal hyde oure faces fro him. "Howbeit (of a treueth) he only taketh awaye oure infirmite, \( \gamma \) beareth oure payne: Yet we shal judge him, as though he were plaged and cast downe of God: where as he (not withstodinge) shal be wounded for oure offences, \( \gamma \) smytten for oure wickednes. For the payne of oure punysshment shalbe layde vpó him, \( \gamma \) with his stripes shal be healed.

As for vs, we go all astraye (like shewe), eeny one turneth his owne waye. But thorow him, the LORDE parduneth all oure synnes. He shal be payned \( \gamma \) troubled, \( \gamma \) shal not opè his mouth. "He shalbe led as a shewe to be slayne, yet shal he be as still as a lambe before the shearer, \( \gamma \) not open his mouth. He shal be had awaye, his cause not herde, \( \gamma \) without eny judgment: Whose generation yet no man maye nombre, when he shalbe cut of fro the grounde of the lyvinge: Which punysshment shal go vpon him, for the transgression of my people. "His graue shalbe gene\( \gamma \) him with the cõdemned, \( \gamma \) his cruicifigene with the theñes; "Where as he dyd neuer violence ner vright, nether hath there bene eny disceatfulness in his mouth.

Yet hath it pleased \( \gamma \) LORDE to smyte him with infirmite, "that when he had made his soule an offeringe for synne, he might se a lõye lastinge sede. And this device of the LORDE shal prosper in his honde. With traualye and laboure of his soule, shal he optayne greate riches. My rightuous seuranunt shall with his wisdome justifie \( \gamma \) deluere the multitude, for he shal bear awaye their synnes. "Therfore wil I geue him the multitude for his parte, \( \gamma \) he shal deuyde the strophe spoyle because he shal gene ouer his soule to death, \( \gamma \) shalbe rekened amoninge the transgressours, which neuertheles shal take awaye \( \gamma \) synnes of the multitude, and make intercession for the myszdoers.

The liii. Chapter.

THERFORE be glad now, thou barè that bearest not. Reloyce, synge \( \gamma \) be mery, thou \( \gamma \) art not with childe: For the desolate hath moo children, "then the maried wife, saiecth the LORDE. Make thy tente wyder, \( \gamma \) spede out the hanginges of thine habitació: spare not, laye forth thy coardes, and make fast thy stakes: for thou shalt breake out on the right syde and on the left, \( \gamma \) thy sede shal haue \( \gamma \) Gêtîles in possession, \( \gamma \) dwel in the desolate cities. Tearne not, for thou shalt not be confouded: Be not ashamed, for thou shalt not come to confucion. Yee thou shalt forget the shame off thy youth, and shalt not remembre the dishonoure of thy wedowheade. For he that made the, shalbe thy LORDE \( \gamma \) husbonde (whose name is the LORDE of hoostes) \( \gamma \) thine avenger shalbe even the holy one off Israel, the LORDE of the whole worlde. For the LORDE shal call thee, beinge as a desolate soroufull woman, and as a yonge wife that hath broken hir wedlocke: saiecth thy God.

A little while haue I forsaken the, "but with greate mercifulnes shal I take the vp vnto me. Whê I was angrie, I hid my face from the for a little season, but thorow euerlastinge goodness shal I pardon the, saiecth the LORDE thine avenger. And this must be vnto me, as the water of Noe: For like as I haue sworne \( \gamma \) I wil not bringe the water off Noe eny more vpó the worlde:" So haue I sworne, \( \gamma \) \( \gamma \) I wil neuer be angrie with the, ner reproueth: The mountayne shall remoue, \( \gamma \) the hilles shall fall downe: but my lounyng kyndnesse shal not moue, and the bonde off my peace shall not fall downe fro \( \gamma \), saiecth \( \gamma \) LORDE thy merciful louter.

Beholde, thou poore, vexed \( \gamma \) despised: I wil make thy walles of precious stones, \( \gamma \) thy foundació of Saphires, thy wyndowes off Cristall, thy gates of fyné cleare stone, \( \gamma \) thy borders of pleasaut stones. Thy children shal
all be taught of God; "I will give thee plentifulnes of peace. In rightousnes shalt thou be grounded, I will be farre from oppression: for the which thou nedest not be arrayed, neither for hynderance, for it shall not come nye the. Beholde, ye alcaunt was farre from the, shall dwell with the; he was sometime a stranger vnto the, shall be ioyned with the: Beholde, I make the Smyth bloweth the coles in the fyre, I make a weapon after his hondy worke. I make also the waister to destroye: but all the weapons ye are made against the, shall not prosper. And as for all tugnes, ye shall resiste the in indicnet, thou shalt overcome the, condemne them. This is the heretage of the LORDED seruauntes, ye the rightousnes that they shall haue of me, saieth the LORDE.

The lb. Chapter.

COME to the waters all ye, ye that have no moneye. Come, bye, that ye maye haue to eate. Come, bye wyue mylck, without any money, or moneye worth, Wherfore do ye laye out your moneye, for the thingynge fedeth not, and spende youre laboure aboute the thingynge that satisfieth you not? But herke rather vnto me, ad ye shall eate of the best, ye youre soule shall haue bis pleasure in plentifulnes. Emelye youre cares, ye come vnto me, take hede ye youre soule shall lyue. For I will make an euerlastinge couenaunt with you, euene the sure mercies of Davyd.

Beholde, I shall geue him for a witnesse amoge folke, for a prynce captayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalt call an vnknowne people: ye a people that had no knowledge of the, shall runne vnto the: because off the LORDE thy God, ye holy one of Israel, which glorifieth the. Seke the LORDE while he maye be founde, call vpô him while he is nyc. Let the vngodly man forsaque his wyues, ad ye the vnrighous hymaginaciôs, ye turne agayne vnto the LORDE, so shal he be mercifull vnto hym: and tooure God, for he is redy to forgeue.

For thus saieth the LORDE: My thoughts are not youre thoughts, ye youre wyues are not my wyues: But as farre as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my waies exceede yours, ye my thoughtes yours. And like as the rayne snowe cometh downe from heauè, ye returneth not thither agayne, but watereth the earth, maketh it fruitfull ye grene, that it maye geue corne ye breade vnto the sower: So the worde also that commeth out of my mouth, shal not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shal accomplish my wil ye prosper in the thinge, wherto I sende it. And so shal ye go forth with ioye, ye be led with peace. The mountaynes and hilles shal synge with you for ioye, and all the trees of the felde shal clappe their hondes. For thornes, there shall growe Fyrre trees, ye Myrte tre in the steade of beres. And this shal be done to the praye of the LORDE, ye for an euerlasting toke, that shal not be taken awaye.

The lb. Chapter.

THUS saieth ye LORDE: Kepe equite, A and do right, for my sauyenge health shall come shortly, ye my rightousnes shalbe opened. Blissed is the man ye doth this, ye the mans childe which kepeth the same. He that taketh hede, ye he vnhalowe not the Sabbath (that is) he that kepeth himselfe that he do no euel. Then shal not the straunger, which cleaneth to the LORDE, saye: Alas the LORDE hath shut me cleanse out from his people. Nether shal the gelded man saye: lo, I am a drie tre. For thus saieth the LORDE, first vnto the gelded ye kepeth my Sabbath: Namely: that holdeth greatly of the thinge that pleaseth me, and kepeth my couenaunt: Vnto them wil I geue in my housholde and with in my walles, a better heretage ye name: thè ye they had bene called sonnes ye daughtyers. I wil geue them an euerlastinge name, that shall not perishe. Agayne, he saieth vnto the strangers that are disposed to sticke to the LORDE, to serue him, ye to louse his name: That they shalbe no bode me. And all they, which kepe thè selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath, namely: that they fulfill my couenaunt: Them wil I bringe to my holy molitayne, ye make the ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnt offeringes and sacrifices shalbe accepted vpô myne aulte, "for my house shalbe an house of prayer for all people. Thus saieth the LORDE God which ga-thither together the scattered of Israel: "Thou shalt have trouble for thine own ways, saydest thou, but I will leave thee. If thou thinkest to have life (or health) of thyself, and therefore thou believest not that thou art sick. For when wilt thou be abashed and fear, seeing thou hast broken my promise, and remembrest not me, neither hast me in thine heart? Thinketh thou, that I also will hold my peace (as afore time) and thou fearest me not? Yea verily I will declare thy goodnes and thy works, but they shall not profit thee: who art thou, that thou criest, let thy chosen heape deliver the. But the wynde shall take them all away, and carry thee in thy ayre. Neuertheless, they shall trust in me, and inherit the londe, and have my holy hill in possession.

And therefore thus saith: Make redy, make redy, and close your strete, take vp what ye can out of the wyne, that leadeth to your people. For thus saith the he and excellë, even he that dwelleth in the everlastingnesse, whose name is the holyone: I dwell in the sanctuary, and in the sanctuary, with him also, is of a cotrite and hable sprete: I maye heale a troubled mynde, and a cotrite herte. For I chide not euere, but am not wroth with out ende. But thy blastinge goeth fro me, though I make the breath. I am wroth with him for his countoues and lust, I smyfe him, I hyde me, and am angrie, whiche he turneth him self, and foloweth thy waye of his owne herte. But if I maye se his right wyne agayne, I make him whole, I lede him, and restore him vnto them whom he maketh joyful, that were sorry for him. I make the frutes of thankesgivinge. I geue peace vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nere, saye I the LORDE, that make him whole. But the wicked are like the raginge see, that ca not rest, whose water fometh with the myre and granel. Euen so thy wicked haue no peace, saith my God.

A ND therfore crie now, as loud as thou canst. Leute not of, lift vp thy voyce like a trope, and shewe my people their offences, and thy house of Iacob their synnes. For they seke me dalye, and wilt knowe my ways, euens as it were a people that dyde

The liii. Chapter.
Behold, when ye fast, your lust remaineth still: *for ye do no lesse violence to youre detters: lo, ye fast to strive and debate, and to smythe him with youre fist, that speaketh vnto you. Ye fast not (as somtyme) that youre voyce might be herde above. *Thynke ye this fast pleaseth me, that a mā shulde chasten himself for a daye, and to wryth his heade aboute like an hoke in an hairy cloth, θ to lye vpon the earth? Shulde that be called fastinge, or a daye θ pleaseth θ LORDE? But this fastinge pleaseth not me, *till θ tyne be thou lowe him out of bondage, that is in thy danger: that thou breake the ooth of wicked bargayne, that thou let the oppressed go fre, and take from them all maner of burthen. *It pleaseth not me, till thou deale thy bred to the hongrie, θ bryngye the poore fatherlesse home in to thy house, when thou seist the naked that thou cover him, and hyde not thy face fro thine owne flesh. Then shal thy light breake forth as θ mornynge, and thy health flourishe right shortly: *thy righteousnesse shal go before the, and θ glory of the LORDE shal embrace the.

Then θf thou callest, the LORDE shal answere the: *θf thou criest, he shal saye: here I am. Yee θf thou layest awaye thy burthens, and holdest thy fyngers, and ceast from blasphemous talkinge, θf thou hast compassion vpon thy soule, and refreßshest θ troubled soule: *Then shal thy light springe out in the darknesse, and thy darknesse shalbe as the noone daye. The LORDE shal euer be thy gyde, and satisfie the desyre of, thine hert, and fyl thy bones with marry. Thou shalt be like a freshwatred garden, and like the founteyne of water, that neuer leaueth rynnyng. Then the places that hane euer bene waist, shalbe buyled of the: there shalt thou laye a foundacion for many kynredes. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, and θ buylder agayne of θ waye of the Sabbath.

ND therefore get the vp by tymes, for thy light cometh, the glory of the LORDE shall rise vp vpô vpô. For lo, while the darkness cloude couereth the earth the people, the LORDE shall shewe the light, his glory shall be seen in the. The Gentiles shall come to thy light, kynges to the brightness springeth forth vpô vpô. Lift vp thine eyes, loke rounde aboute the: All these gather the selues, come to the. Sonnes shall come vnto vpô from farre, daughters shall gather the selues to the on euery side. When thou seist this, shalt maruel exceedingly, and thine hert shalbe opened: when the power of the see shalbe couerthe vnto the (that is) the strength of the Gentiles shall come vnto the. The multitude of Camels shall couer vpô, the Dromedaries of Madia and Ephra. All they of Saba shall come, bringinge golde incense, shewinge the praye of the LORDE. All the catel of Cedar shalbe gathered vpô, the rames of Nabaoth shall serve the, to be ofred vpô myne aultur, which I have chosen, in the house of my glory which I haue garnished. But what are these that fle here like the cloudes, and as the doues flieenge to their wyndowes? The Iles also shall gather the selues, and specially the shippes of vpô see: that they maye bringe the sonnes from farre, and their syller and their golde with them, vnto the name of the LORDE thy God, vnto the holy one of Israel, that hath glorified the. Strangers shall buyyde vpô thy walles, and their kinges shall do the servyce. For when I am angrie, I smyte the: and when it pleaseth me, I pardon the. Thy gates shall stonde open still both daye and night, and neuer be shut: that the hooste of the Gentiles maye come, and that their kinges maye be brought vnto the. For euery people a kingdome that serueth not the, shall perish, and be destroyed with the swerde. The glory of libanus shall come vnto the: The Fyrre trees, Boxes Cedres together, to garnish the place of my Sanctuary, for I wil glorifie the place of my fete.

Morouer those shall come knelinge vnto the, haue vexed the: all they that despisde vpô, shall fall downe at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the cite of the LORDE, the holy Sion of Israel. Because thou hast bene forsakke and hated, so that noman wenth throwe the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, a joyful thorow all posterities. Thou shalt half deed. We roare all like Beeres, mourn like doves. We loke for equite, but there is none: for health, but it is farre fro vs. For oure offences are manye before, our synnes testifie agaynst vs. Yee we must cofesse, we offende, knowlege, doe we amyse: Namely, transgresse, dissemble agaynst LORDE, fall awaye fro our God: vsinge presiptuous traytorous ymaginacions, castinge false matters in oure hertes. And therefore is euque gone asyde, righteousnes stôdeth farre of: treuth is fallen downe in the strete, and the thinge that is playne and open, maye not be shewed. Yee vpô treuth is lade in preson, and he that refrayneth himself fro euell, must be spoyled.

When the LORDE sawe this, it displeased him sore, vpô there was no were eny equite. He sawe also, that there was no man, which had pitie therof, or was greued at it. And he helde him by his owne power, and clened to his owne righteousnes. He put righteousnes vpô him for a brest plate, set the helmet of health vpô his heade. He put on wrath in stead of clothinge, take golousy aboute him for a cloke: as like as a man goeth forth wrothfully to recopenc his enemies, to be avenged of his aduersaries. Namely, that he might recompence and rewarde the Ílodes, wherhow the name of the LORDE might be feared, from the risynge of the Söne: and his majesty, vnto the goigne downe of the same.

For he shal come as a violent waterstremme, which the wynde of the LORDE hath moued. But vpô Sion there shal come a redeemer, and vnto them in Iacob that turne from wickednese, saiceth the LORDE. I will make this covenaut with them (sayeth vpô LORDE): My sprete that is vpon you, the wordes which I haue put in thy mouth, shal neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of vpô mouth of thy childre, no ner out of vpô mouth of thy childers childre, from this tyme forth for euer more.
The prophet Esay.                 Chap. ixi.

suckle the mylck of the Gentiles, and kinges brestes shall fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the LORDE am thy Sauioure and defender, the mighty one of Iacob. For brasse wil I geneue the golde, and for yron slyluer, for wod brasse, and for stones yron.
I wil make peace thy ruluer, and rightuousnes thyne officer. Violence and robbery shal neuer be herde of in thy londe, nether harme and destruction with in thy borders. Thy walles shalbe called health, thy thy gates the prayse of God. "The Sonne shall neuer be thy daye light, ad the light of the Moone shall neuer shyne vnto the: but the LORDE himself shalbe thy everlastinge light, thy God shalbe thy glory. "The Sonne shall neuer go downe, thy Moone shall not be taken awaye, for the LORDE himselfe shalbe thy everlastinge light, ad thy sorowful dayes shalbe rewarded thy. People shalbe all godly, possess the londe for euer: the floure of my plantinge, the worke of my bondes, wherof I wil rejoicye. The yongest leest shal growe in to a thounodes, the symplest in to a stronge people. I the LORDE shal shortly bringe this thinge to passe in his tyme.

The ixi. Chapter.

THE sprete of the LORDE God is with me; for the LORDE hath anoynted me, and sent me, to preach good tydes vnto the poore, for I might bynde vp by wounded hertes, I might preach deluyerance to thy captuyne, open the preson to the that are bounde: I might declare acceptable yeare of the LORDE, the daye of thy avengeance of oure God: that I might comforte all them that are in heuyynesse, that I might geue vnto them thy moune in Sion, bewty in the steade of ashes, joyful oynmt for sighninge, pleasant raympt for an heuy mide: That they might be called excellent in rightuousnesse, a platinge of the LORDE for him to reioyce in. They shal buylde the lode rough wildernes, set vp by olde deserte. They shal repaye the waist places, soch as haue bene voyde thorow out many generacioun. Straungaers shal stode fede youre cautel, the Aleauntes shalbe youre plowmen reapers. But ye shalbe named the preste of the LORDE, me shall call you the seruauntes of oure God. Ye shall enjoye the goodes of the Gentiles tryphipe in their substaunce. For youre greate reprofe thy shame, shal they haue loye, ye maye haue parte with the. For they shal haue dubble possession i their lode, shalbe shyne vnto them. For I the LORDE, which loue right ad hate robbery (though it were offered me) shal make their workes full of faithfullnes, make an everlastinge couenaunt with them.

Their sede also and their generacion shall be knowne anmoge the Gentiles, and amoge the people. All they that se them, shall knowe, that they are the hie blessed sede of the LORDE. And threfore I am joyful in the LORDE, me soule reioyseth in my God. For he shall put vpon me the garmet of health, couer me with the mante of rightuousnes. He shal decke me like a brydegrome, as a bryde that hath hir apparell vpoo her. For like as shynge light, their health as a burnynge lampe. Then shal the Gentiles se thy rightuousnesse all kinges thy glory. Thou shalt be named with a newe name, which the mouth of the LORDE shal shewe. Thou shalt be a crowne in the honde of the LORDE, and a glorious garlade in the hode of thy God. From this tyme forth thou shalt neuer be called the forsake, thy lode shall nomore be called the wildernes. But thou shalt be called Hephzibah (that is, my beloued) thy londe Beula (that is) a maried woman: for the LORDE loueth thy lode shalbe inhabited. And like as a yonge mæ taketh a daughter to mariage, so shal God mary himselfe vnto thy sonnes. And as a brydegrome is glad of his bryde, so shal God reioyse over the. I will set watchme vpoo thy walles (o Jerusalem) which shall nether ceasse daye nor night, to preach the LORDE. And ye also shall not kepe him close, nor leave to speake of hi, vntill Ierusalé be set vp. γ made the prayse of the worlde. The LORDE hath swore by his right honde γ by his stronge arme, that & hence forth he wil not geue thy corne to be meate for thine enemies, ner thy wyne (where thou hast laboured) to be drinke for thy strangers. But they that haue gathered in the corne, shal eate it, γ geue thanks to the LORDE: γ they that haue borne in the wyne, shall drinke it in the court of my Sanctuary.

Stode back, γ departe a sunder, ye γ stonde vnder γ gate, make rowme ye people, repaire the strete, γ take away γ stones; γ set out a toké for the people. "Beholde, γ LORDE proclameth in the endes of the worlde: tel γ daughter Siô: se, thy Saluació cometh, beholde, he bringeth his treasure with him, γ his worke go before him. For they whô γ LORDE delyuereth, shall be called the holy people: γ as for the, thou shalt be named the greatly occupied, and not the forsaken.

The Iruii. Chapter.

What is he this, that cometh from Edom, with stayned reade clothes of Bosra: (which is so costly cloth) γ cometh in so nechly with all his stréth? I am he γ teacheth rightousnes, γ am of power to helpe. Wherfore thô is thy clothinge reade, γ thy rayment like his γ treadeth in γ wyne presse? I haue trodde the presse my self alone, γ of all people, there was not one with me. Thus haue I trodde downe myne enemies in my wrath,γ and set my fete vpô them in my indignacion: And their bloude sprang vpô my clothe, γ so haue I stayned all my rayment. For the daye of vengeance that I haue taked in honde, γ the yeare of my deltyraunce is come. I loked aboute me, and there was no mā to shewe me eny helpe. I fel downe, and no man helde me vp. Thô I helde me by myne owne arme, γ my feruencnes susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrath, and bathed them in my displeasure: In so much that I haue shed their bloude vpon the earth.

I will declare the goodnesse of the LORDE, γ yee and the prayse of the LORDE for all that he hath gyuen vs, for the greate good γ he hath done for Israel: which he hath gyuen them of his owne fauoure, γ according to the multitude of his lounyge kindnesse. For he sayde: These no dout wilbe my people, and no shriekinge children, and so he was their Sauior. "In their troubles he forsketh the not, but the angel that went forth from his presence, delyuered them: Of very louse γ kindnesse that he had vnto them, redeemed he them. He hath borne them, and caried them vp euer, sence the worlde begane. But after they prouoked him to wrath and vexed his holy minde, he was their enemie, and fought against then him self. Yet remembre he the olde tyme, of Moses γ his people: "How he brought them from the water of the see, as a shepheard doth with his shepe: how he had gyuen his holy sprete amonge them: how he had led Moses by the right honde with his glorious arme: how he had denuyed the water before them (wherby he gat him self an euerlasting name) how he led them in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, that they shulde not stomble. The sprete of the LORDE led them, as a tame beast goeth in the feld.

Thus (o God) hast thou led thy people, to make thy self a glorious name with all. Looke downe then from heaué, γ and beholde the dwellings place of thy sanctuary γ thy glory. How is it, γ thy gelosy, thy strength, the multitude of thy mercies and thy lownyge kyndnesse, wyl not be entreated of vs? Yet art thou oure father: For Abraham knoweth vs not, nether is Israel acquainted with vs. But thou LORDE art oure father and redeemer, and thy name is euer lasting. O LORDE wherfore hast thou led vs out of thy waye? wherfore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne, for thy seruantes sake γ are of the generació of thy heretage. Thy people hath had but litle of thy Sanctuary in possesió, for oure enemies haue taked it in: And we are become, euen as we were from the beginnyng: but thou art not their LORDE, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

The Iruii. Chapter.

O THAT thou woldes cleue the heauen in sonder, γ come downe: that the mountaines might melt awaye at thy presence, like as at an hote fyre: and that the malicious... might boyle, as the water doth vpon the fyre: Wherby thy name might be knowne anmoge thine enemies, & thy the Gétiles might trebile before. That thou mightest come downe with thy wonderous strange workes, then shulde the hilles melt at thy presence. For sence the begynnynge of the worlde there was none (excepte thou o God) that herde or perceaued, nether hath eny eye sene what thou dost for the, that put their trust in the.

Thou helperst him that doth right with cherefullnesse, and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou art angrie, for we offende, and haue bene euer in synne, and there is not one whole. ¶ We are all as an vnclene thinge, all our righteousnesse are as the clothes stayedn with the floures of a woman: we fall erychone as the leaf, for our synnes carie vs awaye like the wynde. There is no man that calleth vpon thy name, that stondeth vp to take holde by the. Therfore hydest thou thy face from vs, and consumest vs, because of oure synnes.

But now o LORDE, thou father of ours: we are the claye, and thou art oure potter, and we all are the worke of thy hondes. Be not to sore displeased (o LORDE) and kepe not oure offences to lyge in thy remembranse, but considre that we all are thy people. The cities of thy Sanctuary lyke waist, Sion is a wildernesse, and Jerusalem a deserte. Oure holy house which is oure beway, where oure fathers pryed the, is bret vp, yee all oure comodities and pleasures are waysted awaye. Wilt thou not be intreated (LORDE) for all this? Wilt thou holde thy peace, and scourge vs so sore?

The lvb. Chapter.

THEY shal seke me, that hitherto haue not axed for me: they shal fynde me, that hither to haue not theyed me. Then shal I saye immediatly, to the people that never called vpon my name: I am here, I am here. For thus longe haue I euer holden out my hondes to an vnfaithful people, that go not the right waye, but after their owne ymaginacions: To a people, that is euer dyfeyne me to my face. ¶ They make their obstaclos in gardens, and their smoke vpon aulters of bricke, they lurrek amonge the graues, and lie in the dennes all night. ¶ They eate swyne flesh, and vnclene broth is in their vessells. Yf thou comest naye them, they saie: touch me not, for I am holyer then thou.

All these men when I am angrie, shalbe turned to smoke and fyre, that shal burne for euer. Beholde, it is written before my face, ¶ shal not be forgotten, but recopensed. I shal rewarde it them in to their bosome: ¶ I meane youre mysdedes, and the mysdedes of youre fathers together (saieth the LORDE) which haue made their smokes vpon the mountaines, and blasphemed me vpon the hilles: therfore wil I measure their olde dedes in to their bosome agayne.

Morerue thus saieth the LORDE: ¶ like as when one wolde gather holy grapes, men saye vnto him: break it not of, for it is holy: Euen so will I do also for my servauntes sakes, that I will not destroye them all. ¶ But I will take a sade out of Iacob, and out of Iuda one, to take possession of my hill. My chosen shal possesse these things. ¶ my servauntes shal dwell there. Saron shalbe a shepefolde, and the valley of Achor" shal geue stallinge for the eatell of my people, that feare me. But as for you, ye are they, ¶ haue forsaken the LORDE, and forgotten my holy hill. Ye haue set vp an aultur vnto fortune, ¶ geue rich drinkofferinges vnto treasure. Therfore wil I nombre you with the swerde, that ye shall be destroyed all together. ¶ For when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake, ye herkened not vnto me, but dyd wickednes before myne eyes, and chose the thinge that pleased me not.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: ¶ Beholde, my servauntes shal eate, but ye shall haue honger. Beholde, my servauntes shal drynke, but ye shall suffre thURSTE. Beholde, my servauntes shal be mery, but ye shall be cofounded. Beholde, my servauntes shal reioyse for very quietnesse of herte. ¶ But ye shal crie for sorow of hert, and cOplayne for vexacion of mynde. Yourne name shall not be sworne by amonge my chosen, for God the LORDE shal seye you, and call his servauntes by another name. ¶ Who so reioyseth vpo earth, shal reioyse in the true God: And Who so sweareth vpo earth, shal swear in the true God. For the olde enimite shalbe forgotten, and taken awaye out of my sight. For lo, I shal make a new heauæ, a new earth. And as for the olde, they shall never be thought vp, ner kepte in mynde: but me shalbe glad and euermore reioyse, for the thinges, that I shal do.

For why: Beholde, I shal make a joyfull Jerusalem, yee I my self will reioyse with Jerusalem, a be glad with my people: And the voyce of weeping and waylinge shall not be herede in her from thence forth. There shall neuer be childe ner olde man, that haue not their full days. But whẽ the childe cometh to an hũderth yeare olde, it shal dye. And yf he that is an hũderth yeare of age do wronge, he shalbe cursed. They shal buylde houses, and dwel in them: they shal plante vynyardes, and eate the frute of them. They shall not buylde, a another possesse: they shall not plante, and another eate: But the life of my people shalbe like a tre, and so shal the worke of their hondes.

My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not laboure in wynne, ner beget with trouble: for they are the hie blessed sede of the LORDE, their frutes with them. And it shalbe, that or euere they call, I shal answere them. Whyle they are yet but thinkinge how to speake, I shal heare them. The woff and the lambe shal fede together, and the lyon shal eate haye like the bullocke. But earth shalbe the serpẽtes meate. There shal no man hurte ner slaye another, in all my holy hill, saith the LORDE.

The 4vi. Chapter.

THUS saith the LORDE: Heauæ is my seate, and the earth is my fote stole. Where shal now the house stonde, ‎ý ye will buylde vnto me? And where shal be the place, ‎ý I wil dwel in? As for these thinges, my hōde hath made them all, and they are all created, saith the LORDE. Which of them shal I then regard? Eue him that is of a lowly troubled sprete, and stødeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an oxe for me, doth me so greate dishonoure, as he † kylleth a må. He that kylleth a shpe for me, choketh a dogge. He that bringeth me meat offringes, offreth swyne's bloude: Who so maketh me a memoriall of Incense, prayseth the thinge † is vright. Yet take they soch wayes in honde, and their soule delithe in these abominacions.

Therfore wil I also haue pleasure in laughinge them to scorne, and the thinge that they feare, wil I bringe vpon the. For when I called, no man gaue answere: when I spake, they wolde not heare: But dyd wickednesse before myne eyes, a chose the thinges that displeasse me. Heare the worde of God all ye, that feare the thinge which he speaketh. Youre brethren that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye: Let the LORDE magnifie himself, that we maye se youre gladnesse: a yet they shalbe co-founded.

For as touchinge the cite and the temple, I heare the voyce of the LORDE, that will rewarde, and recompece his enemies: like as when a wife bringeth forth a man childe, or euer she suffre the payne of the byrth and angynsh of † traynale. Who euer herde or sawe soch thinges? doth the grounde beare in one daye? or are the people borne all at once, as Sion beareth his sonnes? For thus sayeth the LORDE: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my self? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh baren? saith thy God. Reioyse with Jerusalem, a be glad with her, all ye that loue her. Be joyful with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shal sucke coforme out of hir breastes, and be satisfied. Ye shal taist, and haue delite in the plenteousnesse of hir power. For thus sayeth the LORDE: beholde, I wil let peace † to her, like a water floude, † might of the Heithẽ like a flowinge streame. Then shal ye sucke, ye shal be borne vpon hir sydes, and be joyful vpō hir knees. For like as a childe is comforted of his mother, so shal I conforte you, and ye shal be comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye se this, youre herte shal reioyse, and youre bones shal florish like an herbe.

Thus shal the honde of the LORDE be knowe amongst his seruauntes, and his indignacion amongst his enemies. For beholde, the LORDE shal come with fyre, and his charet shal be like a whyrlynde, that he maye recompence his vengeaunce in his wrath, and his indignacion with the flame of fyre. For the LORDE shal iudge all flesh with the fyre and with his swerde, and there shalbe a greate nombre slayne of the LORDE. Soch as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abhominaciōs, shal be taken awaye together, saieth the LORDE. For I wil come to gather all people and tonges, with their workes and ymaginacions: these shal come, and se my glory. Vnto them shal I geue a toke, and sende certayne of the (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentiles: in to Celicia, Africa and Lidia (where men can handle bowes) in to Italie also and Greke londe.

"The Iles farre of, that haue not herde speake of me, cl haue not sene my glory: shal preach my prayse amonge the Gentiles, and shal bringe all youre brether for an offringe

Chap. LII.
A recitynge how Ierusalê was beseged, wonne, and taken.
 THESE are the Sermons of Jeremy the sonne of Helchia the prest, one of them that dwelt at Anathot in the londe of Ben Iamin: when the LORDE had first spoken with him, in the tyme of Iosias the sonne of Amon kinge of Iuda, in the xij yeares of his kingdome: and so durng the tyme of Joachim the sonne of Iosias kinge of Iuda, and vnto the xiiij yeares of Sedeochias the sonne of Iosias kinke of Iuda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken, euen in the fift Moneth.

The first Chapter.

A THE worde of the LORDE spake thus vnto me: 'Before I fashioned the in thy mothers wobe, I dyd knowe the: And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctified thee, and or- dened the, to be a prophet vnto the people. The sayde I: "Oh LORDE God, I am vn- mete, for I am yet but yonge. And the LORDE answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge: 'For thou shalt go to all that I shall sende the vnto, and what so euer I com- maunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afraid of their faces, for I wilbe with the, to deluyer the, saith the LORDE.

And with that, the LORDE stretched out his honde, and touched my mouth, and sayde morover vnto me: Beholde I put my wordes in thy mouth, and this daye do I set the ouer the people and kingdomes: that thou mayest rote out, breake of, destroye, and make waist; and that thou mayest buyde vp, and plate. Afterthis, the LORDE spake vnto me sayenge: Jeremy, what seist thou? And I sayde: I se a wakyng yng rodde. Then sayde the LORDE: thou hast sene right, for I will watch diligently vpon my worde, to performe it.

It happened afterwarde, that the LORDE spake to me agayne, I sayde: What seist thou? 'And I sayde: I do se a seethinge pot, lokinge from out of the north hitherwarde.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: Out of the north shall come a plagge vpon all the dwellers of the londe. For lo, I will call all the officers of the kyngdomes of the north, (saith the LORDE.) And they shall come, and euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in all their walles rounde aboute, and thorow all the cities of Iuda. And thorow them shall I declare my judg- ment, vpon all the wickednesse of those men that haue forsaken me: that haue offerd vnto straunge goddes, & worshipped the workes of their owne hondes.

And therfore gyarde vp thy løynes, arise, and tell them all, that I geue the in commandement. Feare them not, I will not haue the to be a fraayed of the. For beholde, this daye do I make the a stroge fensed towne, an yron pyler, and a wall of stele agaynst whole londe, agaynst the kinges and mightie men of Iuda, agaynst the prestes and people of the londe. They shall fight agaynst the, but they shall not be able to overcome the: "for I am with the, to deluyer the, saith the LORDE.

The ij. Chapter.

MOROUER, the worde of the LORDE comaunderd me thus: "Go thy waye, crie in the cares of Ierusale, saie: Thus saieth the LORDE: I remembere the for the kyndnesse of thy youth, and because of thy stedfast loue: in that thou folowdest me thorow the wilundersse, in an vntilled londe. Thou Israel wast halowed vnto the LORDE, and so was his first frutes. All they that denoured Israel, offended: mischief fell vpon them, saith the LORDE. Hears therfore the worde of the LORDE, O thou house of Iacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israel. Thus saith the LORDE vnto you:

What vnfaithfulnessse founde voure fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye fro me, fallinge to lightnesse, and beinge so yayne? They thought not in their hertes: Where hauwe we left the LORDE, y brought vs out of the lode of Egipte: y led vs thorow the wilundersse, thorow a deserete, and rough londe, thorow a drie and a deadlye londe, yee a londe that no man had gone thorow, and wherein no man had dwelt. And when I had brought you in to a pleasant welbuylded londe, that ye might enioye the frutes and all the comodities of the same: ye wente forth and defyled my londe, brought myne heretage to abominacion.

The prestes the selues saide not once:

I. Jer. 25. 6. 2 Esd. 3. 7. Jer. 15. 5. 2 Or breaste. 5 Jer. 25. 6. 6 Jer. 15. 5. 5 Jer. 10. 3. and 30. 8. 2 Esd. 3. 7. 7 Jer. 14. 4. 8 Esd. 39. 1. Deut. 6. 2.
where is thy LORDE? * They thy haue the lawe in their hondes, knowe me not: The shepherdes offende against me. The prophetes do seruyce vnto Baal, & folowe soch thinges as shall bringe them no profit.

Wherfore I am constrained (sayeth the LORDE) to make my complaynte vpon you, and vpon youre children. Go in to the Iles of Cethim, and loke wel: sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede: and se, whether soch thinges be done there, whether the Gentiles themselfes deale so falsely & vntruly with their goddes (which yet are no goddes in dede.)

But my people hath haue ouer their hie honoure, for a thinge that maye not helpe them.

Be astonished (o ye heauens) be afrayde, and abashed at soch a thinge, saith the LORDE. For my people hath done two euel. They haue forsake me the well of the water of life, and digged them pittes, yee vile and broken pittes, that holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roare and erie then vpon him, as a lyon? They haue made his londe waye, his cities are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellinge in them. Yee the children of Noph and Taphanes haue defyled thy necke.

Cethim, not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the LORDE thy God, euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in thy strete of Egipte? to drinke foule water? Either, what maketh thou in the waye to Assiria? To drinke water of the floude? Thine owne wickednesse shall reproue the, and thy turnynge ayewe shal condemne the: that thou mayest knowe and understonde, how euel and hurtful a thinge it is, thy thou hast forsaken the LORDE thy God, and not feared him, saith the LORDE God of hoostes.

I haue euer broken thy yock of olde, I bursten thy bondes: yet saiest thou, I wil nonmore serue, but (like an harlot) thou runnest aboute vpon all his hilles, I amonge all grene trees: where as I planted the out of noble grapes and good rotes. How art thou turned then in to a byter, vnfrutefull, and strange grape? Yee and that so sore: that though thou wasshest the with Nitrus I makest thiselse to sauoure with that sweete smellinge herbe of Borith: yet in my sight thou art stayned with thy wickednesse, saith the LORDE thy God.

Sayes not now: I am not vnclene, and I haue not followed the goddes. Ilke vp thyne owne waies in the woddes, valleis I dennes: so shalt thou knowe, what thou hast done. Thou art like a swift Dromedary, that goeth easely his waye: and thy wantonnes is like a wilde Asse, that vseth the wildernesse, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his wil. Who can tame the? All they that seke the, shall not fayle, but fynde the in thyne owne vnclenes. Thou kepest thy fote from nakendes, and thy throte from thurste, and thinkest thus in thy self: tush, I will take no sorowe, I will loue the straunge goddes, I hange vpon them.

Like as a thefe that is taken with the dede, commeth to shame, euë so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the common people, their kings and rulers, their prestes and prophetes. For they saye to a stock, thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotten me, yee they haue turned their back vpon me, I not their face. But in the tyme of their trouble, when they saye: stonde vp, and helpe vs, I shal anwresse the: Where are now thy goddes, that thou hast made the? byd them stonde vp, and helpe the in the tyme of neede? For ilke how many cities thou hast (o Iuda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore the wil ye go to lawe with me, seinge ye all are synners against me, saith the LORDE? It is but lost laboure, that I smyte youere children, for they receaue not my correction. Youre owne swearde destroyeth youre prophetes, like a deouringe lyon. Yf ye be the people of the LORDE, then herdke vnto his worde: Am I the become a wildernesse vnto the people of Israel? or a londe that hath no light? Wherfore saieth my people then: we are fallé of, and we wil come no more vnto the? Doth a mayden forget hir raymet, or a bryde hir stomacher? And doth my people forget me so lõge? Why boostest thou thy wayes so hylie, (to optayne fauoure there thorow) when thou hast yet stained them with blasphemies?

Chap. iii.
The prophet Jeremy.
Fo. derric.

"Vpon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darrest thou saye: I am gil lesse: Tush, his wrath can not come vpô me. Beholde, I wil reason with thee, because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. O how euel wilt it be for the, to abyde it: 4 when it shall be knowne, how oft thou hast gone bac warde? For thou shalt be confounded, as wel of Egipte, as of the Assirians: Yee thou shalt go thy waye from the, α Smyte thynne hondes together vpon thy heade. 5 Because the LORDE shall bringe that confidence and hope of thine to naught, and thou shalt not prosper with all.

The iiij. Chapter.

COMMONLY, when a man putteth awaye his wife, 6 and she goeth from him, and mairieth with another, then the question is: shulde he resorte vnto her eny more after that? Is not this felde then defyled and vnclene? 7 But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet turne agayne to me, saith the LORDE. Lift vp thine eyes on every syde, and loke, if thou be not defyled. Thou hast waited for them in the stretes, and as a murtherer in the wilnderesse. Thorow thy whorde and shamefull blasphemies, is the londe defyled.

"This is the cause, that the rayne and euenyng dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whores foreheade, and canst not be ashamed. Eles woldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp, and led me fro my youth: Wilt thou then put me awaye, and cast me of for euer? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy self clene fro me? Neuerthelesse, thou speakest such wordes, but thou art euer doinge worse, and worse.

The LORDE sayde also vnto me, in the tyme of Josias the kynge: Hast thou sene what that shrekinge Israel hath done? how she hath runne vp vpon all his hilles, 8 and amongst all thick trees, and there played the harlot? hast thou sene also, (when she had done all this) how I sayde vnto her: that she shulde turne agayne vnto me, and yet she is not returned? 9 Iuda that vnfaithfull sister of hirs also sawe this: Namely, that afther I had well sene the aduoutrye of the shrenkinge harlot Israel, I put her awaie, and gaue her a byll of deuorement.

For all this, hir vnfaithfull sister Iuda was not ashamed, but wente backe and played the whore also. Yee and the noyse of hir whor dome hath defyled the whole lode. For she hath committed hir aduoutrie with stones and stockes.

Neuerthelesse, hir vnfaithfull sister Iuda is not 4 turned vnto me agayne with hir whole herte, but fayndly, saith the LORDE. And the LORDE sayde vnto me: The bacslyder Israel is more righteous, 10 the the vnfaithfull Iuda: and therefore go preache these wordes towarde the north, 11 saye: Thou shrenkinge Israel, turne agayne (saieth the LORDE,) and I will not turne my face from you, for I am mercifull, saith the LORDE, 12 I will not allwaye beare displeasure agaynste the: but on this condicion, that thou knowe thy greate blasphemy: Namely, that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the LORDE thy God, 13 hast made thy syl partaker of straunge goddes vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wil to heare my voycye, saieth the LORDE.

"O ye shrenkinge children, turne agayne, saieth the LORDE, and I wilbe maried with you. For I will take one out of the citie and two out of one generacion from amôge you, and bringe you out of Sion: and will geue you byrdme after myne owne mynde, which shal fede you with lernynge and wyssdome. Moreover, when ye be increased and multiplied in the londe, then (saieth the LORDE) there shall nomore boost be made of the arke of the LORDES Testament: No man shall thinke vpon it, nether shall eny man make menccion of it: for from thence forth it shall nether be visited, ner honoured with giftes.

Then shall Jerusalem be called theLORDES seate, and all Heithen shalbe gathered vnto it, for the name of the LORDE sake, which shalbe set vp at Jerusalem. And from that tyme forth, they shall folowe nomore the ymaginacion of their owne frauawarde herte.

Thè those 3 be of the house of Iuda, shall go vnto the house of Israel: And they shall come together out of the north, 14 in to the same londe that I have geuen youre fathers. And I haue shewed also, how I toke the vp beinge but a childe, and gaue the a pleasant londe for thine heretage, yee and a goodly hooste of the Heithen: and how I commanded the, that thou shuldest call me father only, and not to shrencke fro me.

But like as a woman fayleth hir louter, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (o ye house of Israel) saith the LORDE. And therfore the voyce of the children of Israel was herd on euery side, weeping and waylinge: for they haue defyled their waye, and forgotten God their LORDE.

O ye shrenkinge children, turne agayne, (sayenge: lo, we are thine, for thou art the LORDE oure God:) And so shal I heale youre bacturnynges. The hilles fall, and all the hie pryde of the mountaynes, but the health of Israel stondeth only vpon God oure LORDE.

Confucion hath deououred oure fathers labour from oure youth vp: yee their shepe and bullockes, their sonnes and daughters. So do we also slepe in oure confucion, and shame couereth vs: for we and oure fathers from oure youth vp vnto this daye haue synned agaynst the LORDE oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the LORDE oure God.

The iii. Chapter.

ISRAEL, yf thou wilt turne the, then turne vnto me, saith the LORDE. And yf thou wilt put awaye thy abominacion out of my sight, thou shalt not be moued: And shalt swere: The LORDE lyueth: in treuth, in equite and rightuousnesse: and all people shall be fortunable and joyfull in him. For thus saith the LORDE, to all Iuda and Jerusalem: powre youre londe, and sowe not amonge the thornes.

Be circuncised in the LORDE, and cut awaye the foreskynge of youre hertes, all ye of Iuda, and all the indwellers of Jerusalem: that my indignacion breake not out like lyre, kynde, so that no man maye quench it, because of the wickednes of youre ymaginations.

Preach in Iuda and Jerusalem, crye out and speake: Blowe the trompettes in the londe, crie that euery man maye heare, and saye: Gather you together, and we will goe in to stronge cities. Set vp the token in Sion, spede you, and make no tarienge: for I will bringe a greate plage, and a greate destruction from the north. For the spoyle of the Gentiles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon out of his dene, that he maye make the londe waist, and destroye the cities, so, that no man maye dwell therin. Wherfore gyre youre selues aboute with sack cloth, mourne, and wepe, for the fearfull wrath of the LORDE shal not be withdrawn from you.

At the same tyme (saith the LORDE) the hert of the kinde and of the prynees shall be gone, the pretes shall be astonished, and the prophetes shall be sore afraied. Then sayde I: O LORDE God, hast thou then disceane this people and Jerusalem, sayenge: ye shall haue peace, and now the swearde goeth thorow their lyues? Then shal it be saide to the people of Ierusalem: there commeth a warme wynde from the north thorow the waye of my people, but nether to fanne, ner to clisse.

After that shal there come vnto me a stronge wynde, and then wil I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, he commeth downe like as a cloude, and his charrettes are like a stormy wynde: his horsmen are swifter then the Aegle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, wash thine hert from wickednes, that thou mayest be helped. How longe shal thy noysome thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from hill of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruction. Beholde, the Heithen geue Jerusalem warnynge, and preach vnto her, that hir destroyers are comyng from farre countrees. They tell the cities of Iuda the same also, they shall geue them warnynge in euery place, like as the watch men in the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wrath, saith the LORDE.

Thy wanes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this, this is thynge owne wickednes and disobedie, that hath possessed thynge hert: Ah my bely, ah my bely, (shalt thou crye) how is my hert so sore? my hert paunt-

...eth within me, I can not be still, for I haue herde the crienge of the trompettes, and peales of warre.

They crie murthur vpon murthur, the whole londe shal perish. Immediathly my tentes were destroyed, and my hanginges, in the twincklinge of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

Neuertheles this shall come vpon them, because my people is become foolish, and hath vtherly no understandinge. They are the children of foolishnes, and without ey dis-creció. To do euell, they haue witt ynoyng: but to do well, they haue no wisdome. I haue loked vpon the earth, and se, it is wasyt and voyde. I loked towardes heauen, and it had no shyne.

I behelde the mountaynes, and they trembled, and all the hilles were in a feare. I loked aboute me, and there was no body, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become wast: yee all their cities were destroyed, and I will not go from it. The whole londe shal fle, for the noyse of the horsmen and bowmen: they shall runne in to dennes in to woddes, and clyme vp the stony rockes. All the cities shalbe voyde, and no man dwellinge therin.

What wilt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy self with scarlet, deckest þ with gold: though thou paynest thy face with colours, yet shalt thou tryyume thy self in voyne.

For those that hither to haue bene thy greate faouerers, shal abhorre the, and go aboute to slaye þ. For (me think) I heare a noyse, like as it were of a woman trauellinge, or one laboringe of his first childe: Euen the voyce of the daughter Sion, that casteth out his armes, and swenneth, sayenge: Ah wo is me, how sore vexed and faynte is my herte, for them that are slayne?

The 6. Chapter.

OLKE thorow Ierusalem, beholde and se: A Seke thorow stretes also within, yf ye can fynde one man, that doth equall and right, or that laboureth to be faithfull: and I shall spare him (saieth the LORDE). For though they can saye: the LORDE lyueth, yet do they sweare to discouer: Whereas thou (o LORDE) lokest only vpon faith and treuthe. Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentance: thou hast correte them for amendemént, but they refusd thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, and wolde not amend.

Therfore I thought in my selfe: peraduen-ture they are so symple and foltish, that they understonde nothinge of the LORDES waye, and judgmentes of oure God. Therfore will I go vnto their heads and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the LORDE, and the judgmetes of oure God. But these (in like maner) haue broken the yock, and bursten the bondes in sonder.

Wherefore a lyon out of the wood shal hurte them, and a wilde in the euencyne shal destroye them. The cat of the mountayne shal lie lurkinge by their cities, to teare in peces all them, that come therout. For their offences are many, and their deparinge awaye is grete.

Shulde I then for all this haue mercy vpon the? Thy children haue forsaken me, and sworn by them that are no goddes. And albeit they were bounde to me in mariage, yet they fell to aduoutrie, and haunted harlottes houses.

In the desyre of vnclenen lust they are become like the stoned horse, evry man neyth at his neighbours wife. Shulde I not correecke this, saieth the LORDE?

Shulde I not be avened of evry people, that is like vnto this? Clyme vp vpon their walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not vterly: cut of their braunches, because they are not the LORDES.

For vnfaithfully hath the house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, saieth the LORDE. They haue denied the LORDE, and sayde: it is not he.

Tush, there shall no misfortune come vpon vs, we shal se nether sweare ner honger.
As for the warnyng of the prophete, they take it but for wynde, * yee there is none of these, which will tell them, that soch thinges shall happen vnto them.

Wherefore thus saith the LORDE God of hoostes: because ye speake soch wordes, beholde: *The wordes that are in thy mouth will I turne to fyre, and make the people to be woed, that it maye consume them.

Lo, I will binke a people vpou you from farre, o house of Israel (saith the LORDE) a mightie people, an olde people, a people whose speach thou knowest not, nether vnderstodest what they saye.

Their arowes are sodane death, yee they them selues be very gianuotes. This people shall eate vp thy fruit & thy meate, yee they shall deouere thy sonses and thy daughteres, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shall eate vp thy grapes & fyges. As for thy stronge and well fensed cities, wherein thou didest trust, they shall destroye them with the swarde.

Neuertheles I will not then hate done with you, saith the LORDE. But ye they saye: wherefore doth the LORDE oure God all this vnto vs?

Then answere them: because, that like as ye haue forsakë me, and %serued straunge goddes in youre owne londe, euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge londe.

Preach this vnto the house of Jacob, & crie it out in Iuda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou folish and vndiscrate people.) * Ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

Feare ye not me, saithi the LORDE? Are ye not ashamed, to loke in the face? * which bynde the see with the sonde, so that it can not passe his boundes: For though it rage, yet can it do nothinge: and though the wawes thereof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer.

But this people hath a false and an obstinate herte, they are departed and gone awaye fro me. They thinke not in their hartes: O let vs feare the LORDE oure God, that geue us rayne early and late, when nede is: which kepeth euer still the harvest for vs yearly.

Neuertheles youre miszededes haue turned these from you, * A youre synnes haue robbed you herof.

COME out of Ierusalem, ye stronge childre of Ben Iamin: %blowe vp the trompettes ye Tecuites, set vp a token vnto Bethacarem, for a plauge and a greate misery pepeth out from the North.

I will licken the daughter Sion to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shall come the shepheredes with their flockes. Their tentes shall they pitch rounde aboute her, and euery one shall fedde with his honde. Make battell against her (shal they saye :) Arise, let vs go vp, while it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, * the night shadowes fall downe: Arise, let vs go vp by night, and destroye hur stronge holdes, for thus hath the LORDE of hoostes commaundéd.

Hew downe hur trees, and set vp bulworkes against Ierusalé. This is the cite that must be punished, for in her is all maliciousnes. Like as a cogyde aboumdeth in water, euë so this cite abouëdeth in wickednes. Robbery and vnrightenousnesse is herde in her, sorow & woundes are euer there in my sight. Amède the (o Ierusalem) lest I with drawe my herte from the, and make the desolate: a thy londe also, y no man dwell in it. For thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: The residue of Israel shalbe gathered, as the remaunt of grapes.

And therefore turne thine honde agayne in to the baszket, like the grape gatherer. But Chap. bij.  The prophet Jerem.  Fo. derlijj.

Vnto whom shal I speake? whom shal I warne, that he maye take hede? "Their eares are so vnocircumised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde,  they take the worde of God but for a scorne, and haue no lust therto. And therefore I am so full of thy indignacion (o LORDE) that I maye suffer no longer. Shed out thy wrath vpon the children that are without, and vpon all yonge men. Yee the man must be taken presoner with the wife, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses with their londes and wines shal be turned vnto strangers, whē I stretch out myne hode vpon the inhabitors of this londe, saieth the LORDE. "For from the least vnto the most, they hange all vpon covetousnes: and from the prophet vnto the presstor, they go all aboute with falsede and lyes.

"And besyde that, they heale the hurt of my people with sweete worde, sayenge: peace, peace, when there is no peace at all." Therfore they must be ashamed, for they haue committed abominacion. But how shulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothinge, nether of shame nor good nurture? "And therfore they shal fall amonge the slayne, and in the houre when I shall viset them, they shal be brought downe, saieth the LORDE. Thus saieth the LORDE: go in to the stretes, considirre and make inquisition for the olde waye: and yf it be the good and right waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. (But they saye: we will not walke therin) and I will set watchmen ouer you, and therfore take hede vnto the voyce of the trompet. But they saye: we will not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentiles, and thou congregacion shalt knowe, what I haue deuyed for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde, "I will cause a plaghe come vpon this people, euyn the frute of their owne ymaginacions.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes and to my lawe, but abhorred them. "Wherfore bringe ye me incense from Saba,  a sweete smellinge Calamus from farre countrees? Yore burnt offeringes displesse me, and I reioyse not in youre sacrifices.

And therfore thus saieth the LORDE: beholde, I will make this people fall, and there shall fall from amonge them the father with the children, one neigbour shall perish with another.

Morouer thus saieth  LORDE: Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, a great people shall arise from the endes of the earth, with bowes and darters shal they be weapaned: It is a rouge a feareous people, an vnmercifull people: their voyce roareth like the see, they ride vpon horses wel apointed to batell against the, o daughter Son. Then shall this crie be herde: Oure armes are feble, heuynes and sorow is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman travelling with childe. Nomam go forth in to the selde, no man come vpon the hie strete: for the swarde and feare of the enemie shalbe on euery side.

Wherfore, gyarde a sack cloth aboute the (o thou daughter of my people) sprynkyle thy self with aszhes,  mourne and wepe bitterly, as vpon thy only beloued sonne: For the destroyer shall sadowly fall vpon vs. The hau I set for a prouer of my harde people, to seke out and to trye their wayes. For they are all vnfaithful and fallen awaye, they hange vpon shameful lucere, they are clene brasse and yron, for they hurt and destroye euery man. The bellous are brent in the fyre, the leade is consumed, the melter melteth in vayne, for the euel is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shal they be called naughty syluer, because the LORDE hath cast them out.

The bij. Chapter.

THESE are the worde, that God spake vnto Jeremiy: 'Stonde vnder the gates of the LORDES house, and crie out these worde there, with a loude voyce, and saye: Heare the worde of the LORDE, all ye of Iuda, that go in at this dore, to honoure the LORDE. Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Ierusalem. "Amende your eye waiues and your counells, and I wil let you dwell in this place. Trust not in false luyenge worde, sayenge: here is the temple of the LORDE, here is the temple of the LORDE, here is the temple of the LORDE.

"For yf ye will amende youre waiues and counells, yf ye wil indige right betwixte a man and his neigbour: yf ye wil not oppresse the straunger, the fatherles  the wyddowe: yf ye will not shed innocent bloud in this place: yt ye wil not cleue to strange goddes to youre owne destruction: then will I let you dwell in this place, yee in the londe that I gave afore tyme vnto youre fathers for euer. But take heed, yee trust in councells, that begyle you and do you no good. For when ye haue stolte, murthured, committet aduntrie, and peryurie: Whie ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowinge strange g vknowne goddes: "Then come ye, and stonde before me in this house (which hath my name geuen vnto it) and saye: Tush, we are absolved quyte, though we haue done all these abominacions.

What? thinkes you this house that beareth my name, is a deme of theues? And these things are not done priuely, but before myne eyes, saieth the LORDE. Go to my place in Silo, where vnto I gaue my name afore tyme, and looke well what I dyd to the same place, for the wickednes of my people of Israel. And now, though ye haue done all these dedes (saith the LORDE) and I my selfe rose vp euer by tymes to warne you and to comon with you: yet wolde ye not heare me: I called, ye wolde not answere. And therfore euyn as I haue done vnto Silo, so wil I do to this house, that my name is geuen vnto, (and that ye put youre trust in) yee vnto the place that I haue geuen to you and youre fathers. And I shal thrust you out of my sight, as I haue cast out all youre brethren the whole sede of Ephraim.

Therfore thou shalt not praye for this people, thou shalt nether geue thakes, nor byd prayer for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wise will I heare the. Seist thou not what they do in the cities of Iuda, and without Ierusalem? The children gather stickes, the fathers kyndle the fyre, the mothers kneade the dowre, to bake cakes for the quene of heauen.

They poure out drinkoffringes vnto strange goddes, to provoke me vnto wrath: How be it they hurte not me (saith the LORDE) but rather confounde, and shame them selues.

And therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: beholde, my wrath and my indignation shalbe poured out vpon this place, vpon men and catell, vpo the trees in the felds and all frute of the londe, it shal burne so, that no man maye quench it.

Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes, the God of Israel: Ye haape vp youre burnoffringes with youre sacrifices, eate your flesh. But when I brought youre fathers out of Egipte, I spake no worde vnto them of burnoffringes and sacrifices: but this I commaunded them, sayenge: heken and obeye my voyce, and I shalbe youre God and ye shal be my people: so that ye walke in all the wayes, which I haue comanded you, that ye maye prospere.

But they were not obedient, they inclyned not their cares there vnto, but went after their owne ymagynacions and after the mocions of their owne wicked herte, and so turned them selues awaye, and converted not vnto me. And this haue they done, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egipte, vnto this daye.

Neuertheles, I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the prophetes: I rose vp early and sent them worde, yet wolde they not herke, ner offre me their cares, but were obstinate, and worse then their fathers.

And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shal not heare the: thou shalt crie vpon them, but they shal not answere the. Therfore shal thou saye vnto them: this is the people, that nether heareth the voyce of the LORDE their God, nor receaueth his correction. Faithfulness treueh is clene rooted out of their mouth.

Wherfore cut of thine hayre, and cast it awaye, take vp a complaunte in the whole londe: for the LORDE shal cast awaye, and sactre the people, he is displeased withall.

For the children of Iuda haue done euell in my sight, saieth the LORDE. They haue set vp their abominacions, in the house he hath my name, and haue defyled it. They haue also buyled an aulter at Tophet, which is in the valley of childre of Emno: they might burne their sonnes and daughteres, which I never comanded them, nether came it euuer in my thought. And therfore beholde, the dayes shal come (saieth the LORDE) that it shal no more be called, Tophet, or the valley of the children of Ennom, but the valley of...
The same tyme, saideth the LORDE, the bones of his princes, the bones of the prophanes, ye and the bones of the citizens of Jerusalem, shall be brought out of their graves and laid against the sonne, the Moone and all the heavenly host, whom they loved, whom they served, whom they ranne after, whom they sought and worshipped. They shall neither be gathered together nor buried, but shall lye vpo the earth, to their shame and despising.

And all they that remaine of this wicked generation, shall desyre rather to dye the to lyue: where so ever they remaine, as where I scathe them, saideth the LORDE of hostes. This shalt thou saye vnto them also: Thus saith the LORDE: Do men fall so, that they arise not vp agayn? And turne, they so farre awaye, y they neuer converted? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so farre bacte, that they turne not againe? They are euuer the longer the more obstinate, and will not be converted.

For I haue loked, and considered: but there is no man, that speaketh a good wordes: there is no man, that taketh repentance for his synne, that will so much as saye: wherfore haue I done this? But euery man (as soone as he is turned bacte) runneth forth still, like a wilde horse in a battayl. The Storke knoweth his apoynted tyme, the Turtle-dove, y Swalow, the Crane, cosidre the tyme of their traualye: but my people will not knowe the tyme of the punishment of the LORDE. How darre ye saye then: we are wise, we haue the lawe of the LORDE amonge vs?

Beholde, the disceatfull penne of the scrybes, setteth forth lies: therfore shal the wise be confounded, they shalbe afracayed and taken: for lo, they haue cast out the worde of the LORDE: what wyszdome can then be amonge them? Wherfore, I will geue their wyues vnto aleauntes, and their feldes to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folowe all shamefull lucre: and from the prophete vnto the prest, they deale all with lies.

Fye for shame, how abominable things do they? And yet they be not ashamed, yee they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall fall amonge the dead bodies, saith the LORDE.

Moroner I will gather them in (saieth the LORDE) so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vyne, nether one fyge vpon the fyge tre, and the leanes shall pluctose of.

Then will I cause them to departe, and saye: why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs gather oure selues together, and go in to the stronge cite, there shall we be in rest: For the LORDE oure God hath put vs to sylence, and geuen vs water myxt with gall, to drynke, because we haue synned against him.

We loked for peace, and we fayre not the better, we wayted for the tyme of health, and lo, here is nothinge but trouble.

Then shall the noyse of his horses be herde from Dan, the whole londe shall be afrayed at the nevyge of his stronge horses: for they shall go in, and denoure the londe, with all that is in it: the cities, and those that dwell therin. Moroner, I will sende Cockatrice that serpotes amonge you (which will not be charmed) and they shal byte you, sayeth the LORDE.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and heuynes vexeth my herte: for lo, the voyce of the crieghe of my people is herde from a farre countre: Is not the LORDE in Sion? Is not he kinge in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shal the LORDE saye) with their nyages and fooleish strange fashions? The haruest is gone, the Somer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurt of my people: I am heuy and abashed, for there is no more Triacle at Galaad, and there is no Phisician, that ca\nheale the hurt of my people.

The iv. Chapter.

O, WHO will gene my heade water ynough, a a well of teares for myne eyes: that I maye wepe night ad daye, for theslaughter of my people? Wolde God that I had a cottage some where farre from folke, that I might leave my people, and go from thee: for they be all aduoturers and a shrenckinge sorte. They bede their tuges like bowes, to shute out lies: As for the treuth, they maye notheinge awaye with all in the worlde. For they go from one wickedne to another, and holde notheinge of me, saith the LORDE.

Yee one must kepe himself from another, no man maye safely trust his owne brother: for one brother vndermythen another, a one neighbour begyleth another. Yee one dissembleth with another, and they deal with no treuth. They haue practised their tungen to lye, and token greate paynes to do myscshe. They haue set their stoe in the myddest of disceate, and (for very dissembleing false) they wil not knowe me, saith the LORDE.

Therfore thus saith the LORDE of hoostes, beholde, I wil melte them, and trie the, for what shulde I els do to my people? Their tungen are like sharpe arowes, to speake disceate. With their mouth they speake peaceably to their neigbour, but preuely they laye waite for him. Shulde I not punysh them for these thinges, saith the LORDE? Or, shulde I not be auenged of eny soch people, as this? Vpon the mountayne will I take vp a lamentacion and soroufull crie, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wildernes: Namely, how they are so brente vp, that no man goeth there eny more: Yee a man shal not heare one beast crietheere.

Byrdes and catell are all gone from thence. I will make Jerusalem also an heape of stone, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wil make the cities of Iuda so waist, that no man shal dwell therein. What man is so wise, as to vnderstande this? Or to whom hath the LORDE spoken by mouth, that he maye shewe this, and saye: O thou londe, why perishest thou so? Wherfore art thou so brent vp, and like a wildernesse, that no man goeth thorow? Yee the LORDE himself tolde the same vnto them, that forsoke his lawe, and keppe not the thryne that he gave them in commandement, nether lyued thereafter: but folowed the wickednes of their owne hertes, and serued straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therfore, thus saith the LORDE of hoostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I will fede this people with wormwod, and gene the gall to dryuke. I will scathe them also amonge the Heithen, whom nether they nor their fathers haue knowne: and I will sende a swaarde amonge them, to persecute them, vntill I bringe them to naught. Morouer, thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: loke that ye call for mournynge wyues, and sende for wise women: that they come shortly, and singe a mournynge songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that oure eye lyddes maye guszhe out of water.

For there is a lamentable noysse herde of Sion: O how are we so sore destroyed? O how are we so piteously confounded? We must forsake oure owne naturall countre, and we are shot out of oure owne lodgiges. Yet heare the worde of the LORDE (o ye women) and let youre eares regarde the worde of his mouth: that ye maye lerne youre daughters to mourne, and that euery one maye teach hir neigbouresse, to make lamentacion. Namely thus: Deeth is elymme vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the childre before the dore, a yonge man in the strete.

But tell thou planely, thus saith the LORDE: The deod bodies of men shal lye vpon y grounde, as the donge vpon the falde, and as the hay after the mower, and there shal be no man to take them vp. Morouer, thus saith the LORDE: Let not the wise man reioyse in his wisdome, ner the stronge man in his strength, nether the rich man in his riches: But who so wil reioyse, let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstodeth, and knoweth me: for I am the LORDE, which do mercie, equite and rughtousnes vpon earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in soch things, saith \( \dagger \) LORDE. Beholde, the tyme cometh (saith the LORDE) that I vil wyset all them, whose foreskyne is uncircumcised: The Egyptian, \( \ast \) the Israel, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the shauen Madianites, that dwell in the wildernes. \( \ast \) For all \( \ast \) Gentiles are uncircumcised in the fleshe, but all the house of Israel, are uncircumcised in the herte.

The r. Chapter.

HEARE the worde of the LORDE, \( \dagger \) he speketh vnto the, o thou house of Israel: Thus saith the LORDE: Ye shall not lerne after the manner of the Heith:\( \ast \) and ye shall not be afraied for the tokens of heauen: for the Heithen are afraied of soch: Yee all the customes and lawes of the Gethiles are nothing, but vanite. \( \ast \) They hewe downe a tre in the wod with the honden of the workeeman, and fashion it with the axe: they cower it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nales and hammers, that it moue not. It stodoth as stiff as the palme tre, it can nether speake ner go, but must be borne. \( \ast \) Be not ye afraied of soch, for they c\( \dagger \) do nether good ner euel. But there is none like vnto \( \dagger \) (o LORDE) thou art greate, \( \ast \) and greate is the name of thy power. Who woldt not feare the? or what kige of the Gentiles woldt not obeye the?

For amonge all the wysemen of the Gethiles, and in all their kingdoms, there is none, that maye be lickened vnto the. They are all together vnlerned and vnwise, All their connyng is but vanite: namely, wod, syluer, which is brought out of Tharsis, and beate to plates: \( \ast \) and golde from Ophir, a worke \( \dagger \) is made with the honden of the craftsman \( \ast \) the caster, clothed with yallow sylck and scarlet: euen so is the worke of their wyse men all together. But the LORDE is a true God, a lyuing God, and an everlastinge king. \( \ast \) Yf he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gethiles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their goddes, it maye well be sayde of the: they are goddes, that made nether heau\( \dagger \) ner earth: therfore shall they perish fro the earth, and from all things vnder heauen.

But (as for oure God) he made the earth with his power, and with his wisdome hath he finished the whole compasse of the worlde, with his discrecion hath he spreid out the heuanes, At his voyce the waters gather together in the ayre, he draweth vp \( \dagger \) clouds from the vttmost partes of \( \dagger \) earth: \( \ast \) he turneth lighteninge to rayne, and brighet forth the wyndes out of their treasures: \( \ast \) His wisdome maketh all men foolis. And confunded be all casters of ymage, \( \ast \) for that they cast, is but a vayne thinge, and hath no life. \( \ast \) The vayne craftes men with their worke, that they in their vanite haue made, shall perish one with another in the tyme of visitacion. Neuertheless, Jacobs porci\( \dagger \) is not soch: but it is he, that hath made all thinges, and Israel is the rodd of his inheritaunce: The LORDE of hoostes is his name. Put awaye thy vnclennesse out of the londe, thou that art in the strong cities. For thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, I wil now thrust out the inhabitours of this londe a greate warie off, and trouble them of soch a fashi\( \dagger \), that they shall no more be founde.

Alas, how am I hurte? Alas, how panefull are my seurges vnto me? For I coside this sorow by my self, \( \ast \) I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my coardes are broken. My children are gone fro me, \( \ast \) can no where be founde. Now haue I none to sprede out my tente, or to set vp my hanginges. For the hyrdmen haue done folishly, that they haue not sought the LORDE. Therfore haue they dealt vnwisely with their catell, \( \ast \) all are scatred abrode. Beholde, the noyse is harde at honde, and greate sedicio out of the north: to make the cities of Iuda a wyldernesse, and a dwellinge place for Dragons. \( \ast \) Now I knowe (o LORDE) that it is not in his power to ordre his owne waies, or to rule his owne steppes \( \ast \) goinges. Therfore chast\( \dagger \) thou vs (o LORDE) but with fauoure, \( \ast \) and not in thy wrath, bringe vs not vttterly to naught. PourYE out thy indignacion rather vpon the Gethiles, that knowe \( \dagger \) not, and vpon the people that call not on thy name: And that because they haue consumed, dewoured and destroyed Iacob, and haue roset out his glory.
The 7th Chapter.

This is another Sermon, which the LORDE commanded Jeremy for to preach, sayenge:

Heare the words of the couenaunt, and speake vnto all Iuda, and to all them that dwel at Jerusalem, And saye thou vnto the: Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israel: Cursed be every one, that is not obedient vnto thy wordes of this couenaunt: which I commanded vnto thyre fathers, what tymne as I brought them out of Egipte, from the yron fornace, sayenge: "Be obedient vnto my voyce, and do accordinge to all that I commaunde you: "so shal ye be my people, and I will be your God, and will kepe my promyse, "I haue sworne vnto your fathers: Namely, that I wolde geue them a londe which floweth with mylke and honie, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye.

Then answered I, and sayde: Amen. It is euon so LORDE, as thou sayest. Then the LORDE sayde vnto me agayne: Preach this in y cities off Iuda and rounde aboute Jerusalem, and saye: Heare the words off this couenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exorted youre fathers, euer sence the tymne that I brought them out off the Londe off Egipte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnyngye by tymes, sayenge: herken vnto my voyce: "Neuertheles, they wolde not obeye me, nor enclyne their eares vnto me, but folowed the wicked ymaginaciouns of their owne hertes. And therfore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes off this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, which they (notwithstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the LORDE sayde vnto me: It is founde out, that whole Israel and all the citisens off Jerusalem are gone backe. They have turned them selues to the blasphemies off their fore fathers, which had no lust to heare my worde. Euen likewise haue these also folowed strange goddes, and worshipped them. The house off Israel and Iuda haue broken my couenaunt, which I made with their fathers.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: Be-

olah, I will sende a plaige amonge you, which ye shal not be able to escape: and though ye cri eu vnto me, I will not heare you. Tho shal the townes off Iuda and the citisens off Israel go, and call vpon their goddes, vnto whom they made their oblaciouns: "but they are not able to helpe them in tymne off their trouble. For as many cities as thou hast (o Iuda) so many goddes hast thou also: And loke how many stretes there be in the (o Israel) so many shameful anluters haue ye set vp, to orffe vpon them vnto Baal. But praye not thou for this people, byd nether prayse ner prayer for them: for though they cri eu vnto me in their trouble, yet will I not heare them.

O thou beloued, why doest thou so shamefull greate blasphemies in my house? "even as though that holy flesh might absolve the, specially when thou hast made thy boost off thy wickednes. The LORDE called the a grene olyue tre," a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodly one: but now that there is a contrary reporte off the abrode, he will burne the vp, ad destroye thy braunches. For the LORDE off hoostes that plated the, hath deuyed a plaige for the (o thouse house of Israel f Iuda) for y euel that ye haue done, to prouoke him to wrath, in that ye dyd servyce vnto Baal.

This (o LORDE) haue I lerned of the, and vnderstonde it, for thou hast shewed me their ymaginacion. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowinge, that they had deuyed soch a councel agaynst me, sayenge: "We will destroye his meate with wod, and dryue hym out of the londe of the lyuyngye, that his name shal neuer be thought vpon. Therfore I will beske the now (o LORDE of hoostes) "thou righteous judge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: let me se the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I committed my cause. The LORDE therfore spake thus of the citisens of Anothot, that sought to slaye me, sayenge: "Preach not vnto vs in the name of the LORDE, or els shal dye of oure hondes. Thus (I saye) spake the LORDE of hoostes: Beholde, I will viset you. Youre yonge me shal perish with the swearde, youre sonnes and youre doughters shal vitally dye of honger, so that none shall remaine. For upon the citesyns off Anathoth wil I bringe a plague, and the yeare of their visitacion.

The rj. Chapter.

OLORDE, thou art more righteous, then that I shulde dispute with the: Neuertheles, let me talke with the in thinges reasonable.

`How happeneth it, that the waye off the vngodly is so prosperus? and that it goeth so wel with them, which (with out eny shame) offede and lyue in wickednesse? Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, and bringe forth frute. They boost moch off the, yet doest thou not punysh them. But thou LORDE (to whom I am well knowne) thou hast sent, that proved my herte, take them awaye, like as a flock is caried to the slaughter house,

"and apoynte them for the daye off slaughteringe.

How longe shall the londe mourne, and all the herbes off the felde perish, for the wickednes off them that dwell therin?

"The catell and the byrdes are gone, yet saye they: tush, God will not destroye vs vitterly.

Seinge thou art weery in rumnyngge with the fote men, how wilt thou then runne with horses? In a peaceable sure londe thou mayest be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furious pryde of Iordane? For thy brethren ad thy kynred haue altogether despised the, and cried out vpon the in thine absence.

`Belene them not, though they speake faire wordes to the. As for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellings place, and left myne heretage. My life also that I loue so wel, haue I geuen in to the hodes of myne enemies. Myne heretage is become vnto me, as a Lyon in the wod. It cried out vpon me, threfore haue I forsaken it.

"Myne heretage is vnto me, as a sprockled byrde, a byrde of dyuere colours is vpon it. Go hence, and gather all the beastes of the felde together, that they maye eate it vp.

`Dyuere byrdyne haue broken downe my vynyarde, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasanth porcion, they haue made a wiludernes deserte. They haue layed it waist: and now that it is waist, it sigheth vnto me. Yee the whole londe lieth waist, and no man regardeth it. The distroiers come ouer the heeth every waye, for the swearde off the LORDE shal consume from the one ende of y lode to the other, and no flesh shal haue rest. They shal sowe wheat, and deepe thornes. They shal take heretage in possession, but it shal do them no good. And ye shalbe confounded of youre owne wynnynges, because of the greate wrath of the LORDE.

Thus saith the LORDE vpon all myne euell neighbours, that laye honde on myne heretage, which I haue geuen my people of Israel: Beholde, I will plucke them (namely Israel) out of their londe, and put out the house of luda from amonke them.

"And whiche I haue rooted the out, I wilbe at one with the agayne, and wil haue mercy vpon them: and brynyng them agayne, euery man to his owne heretage, and in to his lode. And ye they (namely that trouble my people) wil lerne y waves off them, to sweare by my name: The LORDE lyueth (like as they lerned my people to sweare by Baal) the shal they be rekeched amoge my people.

But ye they wil not obeye, the wil I rote out the same folke, and destroye them, saith the LORDE.

The rj. Chapter.

MORUER, thus saide the LORDE A vnto me: go thy waye & get the a lymmen breche, and gyrdre it aboute thy lownes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a brech, acordinge to the commandement of the LORDE, and put it aboute my lownes. After this, the LORDE spake vnto me agayne: Take the breche that thou hast prepared & put aboute the, and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole off the rock. So wet I, and hydde it, as the LORDE comanded me. And it happened longe after this, that the LORDE spake vnto me: Vp, and get the to Euphrates, and set the breche from thence, which I comanded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, and toke the brech from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the brech was corrupte, so that it was profitable for nothings.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: Thus saith the LORDE: Euen so will I corruppe the pryde off Iuda, and the hie mynde off...
Jerusalem. This people is a wicked people, they will not heare my worde, they folowe your wicked imaginations off their owne hert, and hange vpon straunge goddes, the haue they serued as worshipped: and therefore they shalbe as this brech, that serueth for nothinge. For as strately as a brech lieth vpon a mäis loynes, so strately dyd I bynde your whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Juda vnto me, saieth the LORDE: that they might be my people: that they might have a glorious name: as they might be in honour: but they wolde not obeye me. Therefore laye this ryddle before them, and saye: Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israel: every pot shalbe fylled with wyne. And they shal saye: thinkest thou we knowe not, that every pot shalbe fylled with wyne? Then shalt thou saye vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I shall fyll all the inhabitours of this lode with dronckenes, the kynges that syt vpó Dauids stole, the prestes and prophete, with all dwel at Ierusalem. And I will shute them one against another, yee fathers agaynst the sones, saieth the LORDE. I wil not pardon them, I wil not spare them, neer haue pitie vpon them: but destroye them. Be obedient, geue eare, take no disdayn at it, for it is the LORDE himself that speaketh. Honoure your God herein, or he take his light from you, and euer euer ye feate stomble in darknesse at your hill: lest whè ye loke for the light, he turne it in to your shadowe and darknesse of death. But yf ye wil not heare me, that geue you secrete warnyng, I will mourn fro my whole herte for youre stubburnesse. Piteusully will I wepe, and the teares shall gusze out of myne eyes. For the LORDES flocke shalbe carrid awaye captiue. Tell the kinge your rulers: Humble youre selues, set you downe lowe, for your crowne of youre glory shal fall from youre heade. The cities towardes the south shalbe shut vp, noe man shal open thè. All Iuda shal be carrid awaye captiue, so that none shall remayne. Lift vp youre eyes, and beholde thè, that come from the North: Like a fat flocke shal they fall vpon the. To whom wilt thou make thy mone, when they come vpon the? for thou hast taught thè thy self, and made thè masters ouer the. Shall not sorely come vpò the, as on a woman traueling with childe? And yf thou wildest saye the in thine hert: Wherefore come these thinges vpò me? Eucè for the multitude of thy blaspemis, shall thy hynder partes of thy fete be discovered. For like as the man of Iude maye chaunge his skynne, the eat of the mountayne hir spots: so maye ye that be exercised in euell, do good. Therefore will I scathe you, lyke as stolbe that is takè awaye with your south wynde. This shal be youre porcion, and the porcion of youre measure, wher with ye shal be rewarded of me, saieth the LORDE: because ye haue forgotten me, and put youre trust in disceatful thinges. Therfore shall I turne thy clothes ouer thy heade, and discoure thy thees, that thy preuytis maye be sene: thy aduotrie, thy deedly malice, thy beastlynes and thy shamefull whordome. For vpon the feldes and hilles I haue sene thy abominacions. Woe be vnto the (o Jerusalem) whè wilt thou euer be clensed enymore?

The riiij. Chapter.

The word of the LORDE shewed vnto Jeremy, cocernyng the therthe off the frutes.

Iuda shal mourne, men shall not goe much more thorow his gates: the londe shal be nomore had in reputacion, the cri of Jerusalem shal brake out. The lordes shall sende their seruanettes to fetch water, and shall fynde no water, but shall carie their vessels home emptie. They shal be ashamed ad confounded, shall couer their heads. For the groide shalbe dried vp, because there cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also shalbe ashamed, ad shall couer their heades. The Hynde shall forsake the yonge fawne, that she bridget forth in your felle, because there shalbe no grasse. The wilde Asses shall stonde in the Mosse, and drawe in their wynde like the Dragos, their eyes shal sayle for water of grasse.

Doutles oure owne wickedness rewarde vs: But LORDE do thou acordinge to thy name, though oure transgressions and synnes be many. For thou art the confort thè helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wilt thou be as a straunger in the Londe, and as...
Then spake the LORD, concerning thee this people: why hast thou not put to heart that which I spake through all my seruants the prophets of Jerusalem, to whom I sent them to say, Both thou and thy people haue seen that there was none among you that should return unto the LORD your God, saying in thine heart, Wherefore is this done unto me?" For though there be in the mouth of Jacob divers languages and diffirent tongues, yet is he not so as to know that I am the LORD, saith the LORD. Hast thou not heard, that I determined it long ago? I knew, when it was in the works of creation, even then through Jacob I spake; and through Israel I will continue it.

Then spake the LORD, concerning thee this people: why hast thou not put to heart that which I spake through all my seruants the prophets of Jerusalem, to whom I sent them to say, Both thou and thy people haue seen that there was none among you that should return unto the LORD your God, saying in thine heart, Wherefore is this done unto me?" I knew, when it was in the works of creation, even then through Jacob I spake; and through Israel I will continue it.
Sodenly and vnwarres, shal I sende a feare vpon their cities. She that hath borne vij. children, shal haue none, her herte shal be ful of sorowe.

The Sonne shall fayle her in the cleare daye, when she shalbe confounded and faynte for very heynesse. As for those y remayne, I wil deluyer them vnto the swearde off their enemies, saieth the LORDE. O mother, alas that euer thou dydest beare me, an enemie and hated of the whole londe: Though I neuer lente ner receaued vpon vsury, yet euer man speake euell vpon me. And y LORDE answered me: Lede not I the then vnfo good? Come not I to the, when thou art in trouble: and helpe y, when thine enemie oppresseth the? Doth one yron hurte another, or one mettall that cometh from the north, another? As for youre riches and treasure, I wil geue them out in to a pray, not for euery money, but because of all youre synnes, that ye haue done i all youre coastes. And I wil brige you with youre enemies in to a londe, y ye knowe not: for the frye that is kyndled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O LORDE (sayde I then) thou knowest all things, therfore remembre me, ad viset me, deluyer me fro my persecuters: Receace not my cause in thy loge wrath, yet thou knowest, that for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When I had founde thy worde, I at them vp greedly: they have made my hert joyfull and glad. For I call vpon thy name, o LORDE God off hoostes. I dwel not amonge the scorners, nether is my delyte therin: but I dwel only in the feare of thy honde, for thou hast fylled me with bytternes. Shall my heynes endure for euer? Are my plages then so greate, y they maye neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a water, that falleth, and can not contynue? Vpon these wordes, thus sayde the LORDE vnfo me: Yf thou wilt turne agayne, I shal set the in my servyce: and yf thou wilt take out the thinges that is precious from the vyle, thou shalt be euens as myne owne mouth. They shal concentue vnto thee, but turne not thou vnto the: and so shal I make the a strege wall of stele agaynst this people. They shal fight agaynst the, but they shal not preuyale. For I my selfe will be with the, to helpe the, and deluyer the, saieth the LORDE. And I will ryde the out of the hondes of the wicked, and deluyer the out of the honde of Tirauntes.

The 36. Chapter.

MOROUSER, thus sayde the LORDE vnto me: Thou shalt take y no wife, ner beget children in this place. For of the children that are borne in this place, of their mothers that haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this londe, thus saieth the LORDE: They shal dye an horrible deeth, no mā shal mourne for them, ner burie them, but they shal lye as doge vpon the earth. They shal perish thowre the swearde and honger, and their bodies shal be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the earth. Agayne, thus saieth the LORDE: Go not vnto them, that come together, for to mourne and wepe: for I haue taken my peace fro this people (saieth the LORDE) yee my favoure and my mercy. And in this londe shal they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buried; no man shall bewepe them, no man shall clippe or shawe himself for them.

There shal not one viset another, to mourne with them for their deed, or to comforte them. One shall not offere another the cuppe off consolacion, to forget their heynes for father and mother. Thou shalt not go in to their feast house, to syt downe, moch lesse to eate or drylke with them. For thus saieth the LORDE off hoostes the God off Israel: Beholde, I shall take awaye out of this place, the voyce off myrrh ad gladnesse, the voyce off the brydegrome and off the bryde: yee and that in your dayes, that ye maye se it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these worde, and they saye vnto the: Wherefore hath the LORDE deuyed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and synne, that we haue done agaynst the LORDE our God? Then make thou them this answere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me (saieth the LORDE) and haue cleued vnto strange goddes, whom they haue honoure and worshipped: but me haue they forsakē, and haue not kepte my lawe. And ye with youre shamefull blasphemies, haue exceeded the wickednes off youre fathers. For every one off you foloweth the frawerde euel ymagination off his owne hert, and is not obedient vnto me.

Therefore wil I cast you out off this londe, in to a londe that ye and youre fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue straunge goddes daye and night, there will I shewe you no fauour. Beholde therefore (saith the LORDE) the daies are come, that it shall nomore be sayed: "The LORDE lyueth, which brought the children of Israel out of the lode of Egypte: but (it shall be sayde) the LORDE lyueth, that brought the children of Israel from the North, from all londes where I had scarted them. For I wil bringe the agayne in to the lode, that I gauw vnto their fathers.

Beholde, (saith the LORDE) I wil sende out many fisshers to take them, and after y wil I sende out many hunters to hunte the out, from all mountaynes and hilles ad out of the caus of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, nether can their wicked dedes be kepte close out of my sight. But first will I sufficiently rewarde their shamefull blasphemies and synnes, wherwith they haue defyled my londe: Namely, with their stinekinge Idols and abominaciones, wherwith they haue fyled myne heretage. "O LORDE, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme off trouble. The Gentiles shall come vnto the from the endes off the worlde, and saye: Verely oure fathers haue cleued vnto lies, their Idols are but vayne and vnonprofitable. How can a man make those his goddes, which are not able to be goddes? And therefore, I wil once teache them (saith the LORDE) I wil shewe them my monde and my power, that they maye knowe, y my name is the LORDE.

The r6ij. Chapter.

YOUre syne (o ye off the trype of Juda) is writte in the table of youre hertes, grazed so vpon the edges of youre aulters with a penne of yron with an Adamat clawe: youre woddes also maye thyneke vpon youre aulters, woddes, theke trees, theke hilles, mountaynes feldes. Wherefore, I will make all youre substauce treasuere be spoyled, for the greate syne that ye haue done vpon youre hie places, thow out all y coostes off youre lode. Ye shal be cast out also from the heretage, that I gauw. And I wil subdue you vnder the heuy bodeage of youre enemies, in a londe that ye knowe not. For ye haue ministred fyre to my indignacion, which shal burne euermor. Thus saith the LORDE: "Cursed be the man that putteh his trust in man, ad that taketh fleshe for his arme: and he, whose herte departeth from y LORDE. He shall be like the heeth, that groweth in the wildernes. As for the good thinges that is for to come, he shall not se it: but dwell in a drie place off the wildernes, in a salt and vnooccupied londe. O Blissed is the man, "that putteh his trust in the LORDE, and whose hope the LORDE is himself. For he shalbe as a tre, that is planted by the water syde: which spredeth out the rote vnto moystnesse, whom the heate can not harming, when it commeth, but his leaues are greene. And though there growe but little frute because off drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forthe frute. Amoung all thinges lyuynge, man hath the most disceatfull and vnscherchable hert.

Who shall then knowe it? "Euen I the LORDE rippe out the grounde off the hert, ad search the reynes and reward every ma acordinge to his wayes, and acordinge to the frute off his counseels.

The disceatfull maketh a nest, but bringeth forth no yonge: He commeth by riches, but not rightuously. In the mydyest off his life must he leauie them behinde him, and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (o LORDE) whose trone is most glorious, excellent and off most antiquite, which dwellest in the place of oure holy rest: Thou art the comforte off Israel. All they that forsake the, shalbe confounded: all they that departe from the, shalbe written in earth, for they haue forsaken the LORDE, the very condite of the waters of life.

Heale me (o LORDE) and I shall be whole: sane thou me, and I shalbe saued, for thou art my prayed. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the LORDE? Let it come. Where as I neuertheles ledinge

Let my persecuter be confounded, but not me: let them be afraied, and not me. Thou shalt bringe vpon the the tyme of their plage, and shalt destorye them right sore.

Agayne, thus hath the LORDE sayde vnto me: Go and stonde vnder the gate, where thorow the people and the kings of Iuda go out and in, yee vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, and save vnto them: Heare the worde of the LORDE, ye kings of Iuda, and all thou people of Iuda, and all ye citesyns of Jerusalem, that go thorow this gate: Thus the LORDE commandeth:

Take hede for youre lyues, that ye carie no burthen vpon you in the Sabbath, to bringe it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of youre houses in the Sabbath: Ye shall do no laboure there in, but halowe the Sabbath, as I commanded youre fathers.

How be it they obeyed me not, neither herkenned they vnto me: but were obstinate stubburne, ad nether obeyed me, ner receaued my correction.

Neuertheless, yf ye will heare me (saith the LORDE) and beare no burthen in to cite thorow this gate vpon the Sabbath: Yf ye will halowe the Sabbath, *so that ye do no worke there in: then shall there go thorow the gates of this cite, kings and prynces, that shall syt vpon the stole of Daud: They shall be caried vpon charrettes, and ryde vpon horses, both they and their princes: Yee whole Iuda and all the citesyns of Jerusalem shall go here thorow, and this cite shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also from the cities of Iuda, from aboute Jerusalem, ad from the loude of Ben Iamin, from the playne feldes, from the mountaynes and from the wildernes: which shall bringe burntoffrinages, sacrifices, oblivions, and incense, and offre vp thankesgeuynge in the house of the LORDE. But yff ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabbath, so that ye will beare youre burthens thorow the gates off Jerusalem vpon the Sabbath: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates off Jerusalem, ad it shall burne vp the houses off Jerusalem, and no man shal be able to quench it.

The rbiij. Chapter.

This is another communicacion, that God had with Jeremey, sayenge:

ARISE, and go downe in to the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more off my mynde. Now when I came to the Potters house, I founde him makinge his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the Potter made off claye, brake amonst his hodes: So he beganne a new, and made another vessell, accordance to his mynde. Then sayde the LORDE thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel? sayeth the LORDE? Beholde, ye house off Israel: ye are in my honde, even as the claye in the Potters honde.

When I take in honde to rote out, to destroye, or to waist awaye eny people or kig-dome: yff that people (agaynst whom I haue thus deuysed) couerthe from their wickednes: Immediatly, I repente off the plage, that I denied to bringe vpon the. Agayne: Whé I take in honde, to byulde, or to plante a people or a kingdome: yff the same people do euell before me, and heare not my voyce: Immediatly, I repente of the good, that I denied to do for them.

Spage now therefore vnto whole Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus saith the LORDE: Beholde, I am deuyng a plage for you, and am takinge a thinge in honde agaynst you.

Therfore, let enery man turne from his euell waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, and do right. But they saye: No more of this, we will followe our owne ymagnacions, and do euery ma accordinge to the wilfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus saith the LORDE: Axe amonge the Heithen, yf eny man hath herde soch horrible thinges, as the doughter of Sion hath done. Shal not y snowe (y melteth vpon the stony rocks of Libanus) moisture the feldes? Or maye the springes off waters be so grauen awaye, that they runne no more, geue moystnesse, ner make frutefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, y they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes. And whyle they followed their owne wayes they are come out of the hie strete, and gone in to a fote waye not vset to be troden. Wherethow they haue brought their londe in to an euer-lastinge wildeenesse and scorne: "So y who so euer traualyleth ther by, shalbe abashed, and wagge their heads. With an East wynde will I scathe thè, before their enemies. And when their destruction cometh, I will turne my backe vpô them, but not my face.

"Then sayde they: come, let vs ymagin somthinge agaynst this Ieryem. Yee this dyd euene the preastes, to whom y lawe was commytted: the Senatours, y were the wysest: and the prophetes, which wanted not y worde off God. Come (sayde they) let vs cut out his tûge, and let vs not regardre his wordes. Considre me (o LORDE) and hearre the voyce of myne enemies. Do they not recompence euell for good, "when they dygg a pyt for my soule? "Remembre, how that I stode before the, to speake for thè, âd to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

"Yerfore let their childrè dye of hunger, and let them be oppressed with the swearde. Let their wyues be robbed of their childrè, and become wyddowes: "let their huszbôdes be slayne, let their yonge men be kylled with the swearde in the felle. Let the noyse be herde out of their houses, when the murtherer cometh sodyenly vpô them: For they haue digged a pit to take me, and layed snares for my fete. "Yet LORDE, thou knowest all their councell, that they haue deuysed, to slaye me. And yerfore forgive them their wickednesse, and let not their synne be put out of thy sight: but let them be judged before the as the gilie: This shalt thou do vnto thè in y tyme of thy indignacion.

The xir. Chapter.

MOROUER, thus saide the LORDE vnto Ieryem: Go thy waye, and bye the an erthen pitchery, and bringe forth the Senatours and chefe preistes in to the valley of the children off Ennon, which lieth before the porte that is made of brick, y shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, and saye thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the LORDE, ye kinges of Iuda, âd ye citesyns of Ierusalem: Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bringe such a plage vpon this place, that y eares of all that heare it, shal glowe. "And that because they haue forsakè me, and vn-halowed this place, and haue offred in it vnto strange goddes: whô nether they, their fathers, ner the kinges off Iuda haue knowne. They haue filled this place also with the bloude of innocentes, for they haue set vp an aultere vnto Baal, to burne their children for a burnt-offringe vnto Baal, which I nether commaunded, ner charged them, nether thought once there vpon.

Beholde therfore, y tyne cometh (sayeth the LORDE) y this place shal nomore be called Tophet, ner y valley of y childrè of Ennô, but y valley of slaughter. For in this place wil I slaye the Senatours of Iuda â Ierusalem, â kill the downe with the swearde in y sight of their enemies, âd of them that seke their lyues. And their deed carcases wil I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the felle. And I wil make this cito so desolate, âd despysed: that 'who so goeth there by, shal be abaszed â geast vpon her, because of all hir plages.

I will fede them also with the flesh of their sonnes â their daughters. Yeeâ every one shal eate vp another in the beseginge â staytnesse, wher with their enemies (y seke their lyues) shal kepe thè in. And the pitcher shalt thou breake in the sight of the mè, y shalbe with the, and saye vnto thè: Thus saith the LORDE off hoostes: "Enô so wil I destroye this people â cite: as a Potter breakeyth a vessel, that can not be made whole agayne.

In Tophet shal they be buried," for they shal haue none other place. Thus wil I do vnto this place also, saith the LORDE, and to the y dwell there in: yee I wil do to this cite, as vnto Tophet (For the houses of Ierusale â the houses of the kinges of Iuda are defyled, like as Tophet,) because off all the houses, in whose parlers they dyd sacrifice vnto all the hooste of heaulè, and poured out drynke offeringes vnto straunge goddes. And so Ieremy came from Tophet, where the LORDE had sent him to prophesie, and stode in the courte off the house off the LORDE, and spake to all the people: Thus saith the LORDE off hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bringe vpon this cite and vpon euerie towne about it, all the plages that I haue deuyed agaynst them: for they haue bene obstinate,\(^2\) ad wolde not obeye my warnynge.

The 11. Chapter.

WHEN Pashur the preaste, the sonne off Emmer, chefe in the house of \(\ddagger\) LORDE, herde Ieremy preach so stedfastly: \(^4\) he smote Ieremy, and put him in the stockes, that are by the hie gate of Ben Iamin, in the house of \(\ddagger\) LORDE. The nexte daye folowinge, Pashur brought Ieremy out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Ieremy vnto him: The LORDE shall call the nomore Pashur (that is excellent and increasinge) but Major (that is fearfull ad afrayed) euery where. For thus saith the LORDE: beholde, I will make the afrayed, the thy self, and all that faoure \(\ddagger\): which shal perish with the swearde off their enemies, euene before thy face.

And I wil geue whole Iuda under the power of the kinge of Babilon, which shall carie some vnto Babilon presoners, and slaye some with the swearde. Morover, \(\ddagger\) all \(\ddagger\) substance of this londe, all their precious and gorgeous workes, all costynesse, and all the treasure of the kinges of Iuda: wil I geue in to the hodes of their enemies, which shal spoyle them, and carie them vnto Babilon. But as for the (o Pashur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babilon with all thine housole, \(\ddagger\) to Babilo shalt thou come, where thou shalt die, and be buried: thou and all thy favoures, to whom thou hast preached lies. O LORDE, thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, \(\ddagger\) makest me stronge agayne. \(^5\) All the daye longe am I despyed, and laughed to scorn of euery man: because I haue now preached longe agaynst malicious Tyranny, and shewed them off destruccicon. \(^6\) For \(\ddagger\) which cause they cast the worde off the LORDE in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst.

Wherfore, I thought from hence forth, not to speake of him, ner to preach eny more in his name. But the worde off the LORDE was a very burnyng fyre in my heart and in my bones, which when I wolde haue stopped, I might not. For why, I herde so many derisios and blasphemies, \(\ddagger\) yee euen of myne owne companions, and off soch as were conversaunte with me: which wente aboute, to make me afrayed sayenge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to feare him, and make him holde his tongue: \(\ddagger\) we maye overcome him, and be avenged off him.

But the LORDE stode by me, like a mightie giaunte: therfore my persecuters fell, and coude do nothinge. They shal be sore confounded, for they haue done vnwisely, they shall haue an everlastinge shame. And now, o LORDE of hoostes, \(\ddagger\) thou righteous sercher (which knowest the reynes and the very hertes:) let me se them punyshed, for vnto the I committ my cause.

Syenge vnto the LORDE, and praye him, for he hath deluyered the soule off the oppresed, from the honde off the violent. Cursed be the daye, wherein I was borne: \(\ddagger\) vnhappie be \(\ddagger\) daye, where in my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father the tidinges, to make him glad, sayenge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cities which \(\ddagger\) LORDE turned vp side downe (when he had longe herde the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not, as soone as I came out off my mothers wombe, and because my mother was not my graue hisell, that the byrth might not haue come out, but remayned still in her. \(\ddagger\) Wherfore came I forth off my mothers wombe? To haue experience of labour and sorowe? And to lede my life with shame?

The 131. Chapter.

THESE are the worde that the LORDE spake vnto Ieremy, what tymre as kinge Sedechias sent vnto him Pashur the sonne of Melchia, and Sophonias the sonne of Maasia, preste, sayenge: Axe counsell at the LORDE (we praye the) of oure behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon behesegeth vs, yff the LORDE (peraduenture) will deale with vs, accordinge to his maruelous power, and take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremiy: Geue Sedeelias this answer, Thus sayeth the LORDE God off Israel: beholde, I will turne backe the weapons, that ye haue in youre handes, wherewith ye fight agaynst the kinge of Babilo & the Caldees, which besiege you rounde aboute y walles: I will brige the together in to the mynddest of this cite, and I my selfe will fight agaynst you, with an outstretched honde, ad with a mightie arme, in greate displeasure and terrible wrath: and will smythe you, that dwell in this cite: yee both me ad catell shall dye of the pestilence.

And after this (saith the LORDE) I shall deluuer Sedeelias the kinge of Iuda, & his seruauntes, his people (and sooch as are escaped in the cite, from the pestilence, swarde, and horner) in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon: yee in to the hode of their enemies, in to the hodes of those y folowe vpon their lyues, which shall smythe you with y swerde: they shall not pite the, they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: beholde, I laye before you the waye of life and death. Who so abydeth in this cite, shall perish: either with the swarde, with honger, or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on y Caldees parte, y besiege it, he shall saue his life, and shall wyne his soule for a pray. For I haue set my face agaynst this cite (saith the LORDE) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be guene in to the honde of the kinge of Babilon, & be brent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kinge off Iuda, sayeth thus: Heare the worde of y LORDE (o thou house off Davuid) for thus sayeth the LORDE: Minestre righteousnes, and that soone, deluer the oppresseed fro violent power: or enuer my terrible wrath break out like a fyre, and burne me, that no man maye quench it, because of the wickednes of youre ymaginationes. Beholde (saith the LORDE) I wil come vpou you, that dwel in the valleis, rocks and feldes and saye: Tush, who will make vs afayed? or who will come in to oure houses? For I wil ryset you (saith the LORDE) because of the wickednes of youre invencion, and will kyndle soch a fyre in youre wod, as shall consume all, that is aboute you.

I Thus sayde the LORDE also: Go downe in to the house of the kinge off Iuda, and speake there these worde, saye: Heare the worde off the LORDE, thou kinge of Iuda that syttest in the kyngly seate off Davuid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people, that go in & out at this gate. Thus the LORDE commandeth: kepe equite and righteousnesse, deluer the oppresseed fro the power off the violent: do not greue nem opposse the straunger, the fatherlesse nem the wyddowe, ad shed no innocet bloude in this place.

And yff ye kepe these thinges faithfully, then shall there come in at the dore off this house kynges, to syt vpou Davuids seate: they shal be caried in Charettes and ryde vpou horses, both they & their seruauntes, ad their people. But yff ye wil not be obedient vnto these commanimaltes, I sweare by myne owne self (saith y LORDE) this house shal be waiast. For thus hath the LORDE spoken vpon the kinges house of Iuda: Thou art the heade, as Galaad is in Libanus: What willest thou laye of it, yf I make the not so waiast (thy cities also) that no man shal dwell there in? I will prepare a destroyer with his wepons for the, to hew downe thy special Cedre trees, and to cast them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cite, shall speake one to another: Wherfore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this noble cite? Then shal it be answered: because they haue broken the couenaunt off the LORDE their God, and haue worshipped and serued strange goddes. Mourne not ouer the deed, and be not wo for them, but be sory for him that departeth awaie: for he commeth not agayne, ad seeth his natue countre no more. For thus saith the LORDE, as touchinge Sellum the sonne of Iosias kinge of Iuda, which regyned after his father, and is caried out of this place:

He shal neuer come hither agayne, for he shall dye in the place, where vnto he is led captuye, and shall se this londe nomore. Wo worth him, that buyldeth his house with vnrighteousnes, ad his perlers with the good, that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neighbours labour, nor payeth him his hyre. He thinketh in himself: I will buylde me a wyde house, ad gorgeous perlers: He causeth wyndowes to be hewen there in, and the sylinges and geastes maketh he off Cedere, and payuyth them with Zenober. Thinkest thou to reigne, now that thou prowokest me to wrath with thy Cedere trees?

Dydy not thy fathere eate and drynke, and prosper well, as lõge as he dealt with equite ad rightuousnesse? Yee when he helped ye oppressed and poore to their right, then prospered he well.

From whence came this, but only because he had me before his eyes? saieth the LORDE. Neuertheles, as for thine eyes and thine herte, they loke vpon covetousnesse, to shed innocent bloute, to do wronge and violence. And therfore, thus saieth the LORDE agaynst Ioachim, ý sonne of Iosias kyng of Iuda: They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster: Nether shall they saye vnto hym: Alas syf, alas for that noble pryncye. But as an Asse shall be buried, corruppte and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clyyme vp the hill off Libanus (o thou daughter Sion) lift vp thy voyce vpon Basan, erie from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gau the warninge, whyle thou wast yet i prosperite, But thou saydest: I wil not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed from thy youth, that thou woldest never heare my voyce. All thy hyrdmen shalbe dryuen with the wynde, and thy derlinges shalbe caried awaye in to captiuyte: Then shalt thou be brought to shame and confusion, because of all thy wickednes: thou that dwellest vpon Libanus, ad maketh thy nest in the Cedere trees. O how greate shal thy mournynge be, when thy sowres com vpon the, as a woman traueling with childe?

As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE,) Though Iechonias the sonne of Ioachim kynge off Iuda were the signet off my right honde, yet will I pleuce him of: And I wil gene the in to ý power off the that seke to slaye the, and in to the power off them that thou fearest: in to the power off Nabuchodo-nosor the kynge off Babilon, and in to the power of the Caldees. Morouer, I will sende the, and thy mother that bare the, in to a straunge londe, where ye were not borne, ad there shall ye dye. But as for the londe that ye will desire to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This ma Iechonias shal be like an ymage robbed and torne in peces, which pleaseth no man, for all his apparell. Wherfore both he and his sede shalt be sent awaye, and cast out in to a lode, that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the worde off the LORDE: Wryte this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperite shall this man haue all his life longe. Nether shall eny of his sede be so happi, as to syt vpon the seate of Daud, and to beare rule in Iuda.

The piiiij. Chapter.

WO be vnto the shepherdes, "that destroye, and scatre my flocke, saieth the LORDE. Wherfore, this is the co-maundemet of the LORDE God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre ad thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therefore, now will I vsethe the wickednes of youre imaginaciones, saieth ý LORDE: And will gather together the remnaunt of my flocke, from all londes that I had dryuen them vnto, and will bringe them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe and increase. I will set shepherdes also ouer them, which shall fede them. They shall no more feare and drede, for there shall none off them be lost, saieth the LORDE. "Beholde, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORDE) that I wil rayse vp the rightuous braunch off Daud, which shall beare rule, "and discusse matters with wyszdome, and shall set vp equyte and rightuousnes agayne in the earth.

"In his tyme shall Iuda be saued, and Israel shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call him: euem the LORDE oure rightuous maker." And therfore beholde, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORDE) that it shall no more be sayde: the LORDE lyueth, which brought the children off Israel out of the londe of Egipte: But the LORDE lyueth, which brought forth, ad led the sede of the house off Israel, out off
The north londe, and from all countrees where I had scattered them, and they shall dwell in their owne londe agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become like a dronken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the LORDE, and of his holy wordes: Because the londe is full of aduoturers, where thorow it is destroyed and mourneth, and pleasant pastures of the deserte are dried vp. Yee the waye that men take, is wicked, so their gouernance is nothing like the holy wordes of the LORDE. For the prophetes and the prestes them selues are polished Ypocrityes, and their wickednes haue I found in my house, saieth the LORDE. Wherfore, their waye shall be slippery in the darknesse, wherein they maye stacker and fall. For I will bringe a plague vpon them, euyn the yeare of their visitacion, saieth the LORDE. I haue sene sely amonst the prophetes of Samaria, they preched for Baal, and diseanned my people off Israel. I haue sene also amonst the Prophetes off Ierusalem foule aduotery, and presumptuous lies. They take the most shamefull men by the hode, flatingre them, so that they can not returne from their wickednes. All these with their citesyns are vnto me, as Sodom, and as the inhabition of Gomorre.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes concernyng the prophetes: Beholde, I wil fede them with wormwod, and make them drynke the water of gall. For frō the prophetes of Ierusalem is the sicknes of Ypocrisye come in to all the londe.

And therfore the LORDE of hoostes geuth you this warnyngge: Hear not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and diseanned you: for they speake the meanynge of their owne herte, and not out of the mouth of the LORDE. They saye vnto them, that despyse me: The LORDE hath spoken it: Tush, ye shall prosper right well. And vnto all them, that walke after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tush, there shall no mysfortune happen you. For who hath sitten in the councell of the LORDE, that he hath herde and vnderstond, what he is aboute to do? Who hath marcked his deuyce, and herde it? Beholde, the stormy wether of the LORDE (that is, his indignacion) shall go forth, and shal fall downe vpon the head of the vngodly. And the wrath of the LORDE shall not turne agayne, vntill he perfourme, and fullfill the thoughte of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

I haue not sent these prophetes, (saieth the LORDE) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But if they had continued in my counsell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from their euell wayes and wicked ymageynacions. Am I the God that seeth but the thinge, which is nye at honde, and not that is farre of? saieth the LORDE. Maye any man hyde him self so, that I shall not se hym? saieth the LORDE. Do not I fullfill heaven and earth? saieth the LORDE. I haue herde well ynowgh, what the prophetes saye, that preach lyes in my name, sayege: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wil this cōtynue in the prophetes herties, to tel lyes, and to preach the craftie sotylte of their owne herte? Whose purpose is, (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as their fore fathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let him tell it: and he that vnderstondeth my worde, let him shewe it faithfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheat to do together? saieth the LORDE. Is not my worde like a fyre, (saieth the LORDE) and like an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: beholde, I wil vpo the prophetes, that steale my worde priuely from euery man. Beholde, here am I (saieth the LORDE) agaynst the prophetes, that take vpon their tunges to speake: The LORDE hath sayde it. Beholde, here am I (saieth I LORDE) agaynst those prophetes, that darre prophecye lies, and diseanned my people with their vanities and miracles, whom I neuer sent, ner commannded them. They shal do this people greate harme, saieth the LORDE.

LORDE? Thou shalt saye vnto them: What? burthen? Therfore will I cast you fro me (saith the LORDE) because ye youre selues are a burthen. And the prophet, prest or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of the LORDE) him will I viset, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, evry one to another: What answere hath the LORDE geuen? or, what is the LORDES commandement? And as for the burthen of the LORDE, ye shall speake nomore of it: for every mans owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuyng God the LORDE of hoostes oure God.

Thus shall evry man saye to the prophets: what answere hath the LORDE geuen the? Or, what saith the LORDE? And not once to name the burthen of the LORDE. Therfore thus saith the LORDE: For so moch as ye haue vsted this terme (the burthen of the LORDE) where as I notwithstandinge sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the LORDES burthen:

Beholde therfore, I will repute you as a burthen, and will cast you out of my presence: yee and the cite also, that I gave you and youre fathers: and will bringe you to an euerlastinge confusion, and in to soch a shame, as shall never be forgotten.

The xiij. Chapter.

THE LORDE shewed me a visio: Beholde, there stode two maundes of fyges before ð Temple of the LORDE, "after ð Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon had led awaye captuye Iechonias the sone of Ioachim kynge of Iuda, the mightie men also of Iuda, with the workemasters and conynges of Jerusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good fyges, euyn like as those that be first ripe. In the other maunde were very naughtie fyges, which might not be eaten, they were so euell.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: what seist thou Ieremy? I sayde: fyges, where of some be very good, and some so euell, that no man maye eate them.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, after this maner: Thus saith ð LORDE the God of Israel: like as thou knowest the good fyges, so shal I knowe the men led awaye, whom I haue sent out of this place in to the londe of the Caldees, for their profite: and I will set myne eyes vpon them for the best, for I will bringe them agayne in to this londe: I will buylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plante them, and not rote them out. "And I will geue them an herte, to knowe, how that I am the LORDE. They shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God, for they shall returne vnto me with their whole herte.

And like as thou knowest the naughtie fyges, which maye not be eaten, they are so euell: Euen so wil I (saith the LORDE) let Sedecehias the kynge of Iuda, (ye and all his prynces, ð the residue of Ierusalem that remayne ouer in this londe, ð them also that dwell in Egipte) to be vexed ð plaged in all kingdomes ð londes. And will make them to be a reprofe, ð a comon byworde, a laughinge stocke ð shame, in all the places, where I shal scatre them. I will sende the swearde, honger ð pestilence amongst them, vntill I haue elene consumed them out of the londe, that I gaue vnto them ð their fathers.

The xv. Chapter.

A SERMONE that was geuen vnto Ieremy, vpon all the people of Iuda: In the fourth yeare of Ioachim the sone of Iosias kynge of Iuda, that was, in the first yeare of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon. Whiche sermone, Ieremy the prophet made vnto all the people of Iuda, ð to all ð Inhabitours of Ierusalem, on this maner:

From the xiiij yeare of Iosias the sone of Amon kynge of Iuda, vnto this present daye, (that is euyn xxij yeare) the worde of the LORDE hath bene committed vnto me. "And so I haue spokene to you, I haue rysen vp early, I haue geue you waruyng in season, but ye wolde not heare me. Though the LORDE hath sent his seruauntes, ð all the prophets vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not encline youre eares to heare.

He sayde: turne agayne every man from his euell waye, ð from youre wicked imaginationis, ð so shal ye dwell for euer in the londe, that the LORDE promised you ð youre fore fathers: And go not after strange goddes, serue them not, worship them not, g anger me not with the worke of youre hodes: then will not I punysh you. Neuerthelesse, ye wolde not heare me (saith the LORDE) but haue defied me with the worke of youre hodes, to youre owne greate harme.

3 Wherfore, thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: Because ye have not heerkened vnto my worde, lo, I will sende out, c call for all the people, y dwell in the north" (saith the LORDE) g wil preparie Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon my seruant, 4 and wil bringe them vpon this londe, and vpon all y dwell therein, g vpon all the people that are aboute them, and will vterly rote them out. I will make of them a wildernes, a mockage, and a continuall deserte.

Morouer, I will take from them the voye of gladnesse and solace, 5 the voye of the brydegome g the bryde, the voye of the anoynted, with the cresshettes: g this whole londe shall become a wildernes, g they shall serue the sayde people and the kinge of Babylon, thre score yeares and ten. 6 When the lxx yeares are expyred, I will viset also the wickednesse of the kinge of Babylon g his people, saith the LORDE: yee g the londe of the Caldees, g wil make it a perpetuall wildernes, g wil fulfil all my wordes vpon that londe, which I haue deuysed agaynst it: yee all that is written in this boke, which Jeremy hath prophesied of all people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto dyuerse nacions g greate kynges, for I wil recompense them, acordinge to their dedes g worke of their owne hondes.

For thus hath the LORDE God of Israel spoken vnto me: 7 Take this wyne cuppe of indignacion fro my honde, that thou mayest cause all the people (to whom I sende the) for to drinke of it: that when they haue drunked thereof, they maye be madd, g out of their wythes, when the swarde commeth, that I wil sende amoge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the LORDES honde, g made all the people drinke there of, vnto whom the LORDE had sent me.

But first the cite of Ierusalem, g all the cities of Iuda, their kynges g prynces: to make the desolate, waist, * despyssed g cursed, acordinge as it is come to passe this daye. Yee g Pharaoo g kinge of Egipte, his seruanntes, his prynces g his people altogether one with another and all kinges of the londe of Hus, all kinges of the Philistynes londe, Ascalon, Gaza, Accaron g the remnaunt of Aszdod, the Edomites, the Moabites g the Ammonites: all the kinges of Tirus g Sidon: the kinges of the Iles, that are beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz g the shaun of Ismaelites: g all the kinges of Araby, g (generally) all the kinges that dwell in the deserte: all the kinges of Simri, all the kinges of Elam, all g kinges of the Meedes, all kinges towarde the north (whether they be farre or nye) euerie one with his neighbours: Yee and all the kingdoms that are vpon the whole earth. The kinge of Sesach (sayde he) shal drinke with them also.

And saye thou vnto them: this is the commanuement of the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: drinke and be droncken, spewe, and fall, that ye neuer ryse: and that thorow the swarde, which I wil sende amongeth you. But yf they will not receaue the cuppe of thy honde, and drinke it, then tell them: Thus doth the LORDE of hoostes threaten you: 8 drynke it ye shal, and that shortly. For I begynne to pla ge the cite, that my name is geuen vnto: thyneke ye then, that I will leaue you vnpuished? Ye shall not go quyte.

For why, I call for a swarde ypô all the inhabitours of the earth, saith the LORDE of hoostes.

Therfore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: 9 The LORDE shal crie from aboue, and let his voyce be herde from his holy habitation. With a greate noyse shall he crie from his courte regall. He shal geue a greate voyce (like the grape gatherers) and the sounde thereof shalbe herde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the LORDE hath a judgment to geue vpon all people, and will holde his courte of justice with all flesh and punyse the vngodly, saith the LORDE.

For thus sayeth g LORDE of hoostes: Beholde, a miserable plaghe shall go from one people to another, and a greate stormy water shal arise from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the LORDE him-

In the begynynge of the reigne of Iochaim the sonne of Iosias kyng of Iuda, came this worde from the LORDE, saithenge: Thus saith the LORDE:
Stonde in the courte of the LORDES house, and speake vnto all them which (out of the cities of Iuda) come to do worshippe in the LORDES house, all the wordes I commande to saye. Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yt (peraunture) they will herke, and turne every man from his wicked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage, which I haue determed to brynge vpon them, because of their wicked invencones.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE: yt ye will not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the prophete, whom I sent vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and still sendinge: Ye ye will not folowe the (I saye) then will I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Silo, and will make this cite to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the prophetes, and all the people herde Jeremye speake these wordes, in the house of the LORDE.

Now when he had spokne out all the wordes, that the LORDE commanded him to preach vnto all the people, then the prestes, the prophete and all the people toke holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalt dye. How darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the LORDE: it shall happe to this house as it dyd vnto Silo? and this cite shalbe so waist, that no man shall dwell there in?

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremye in the house of the LORDE, the prynces of Iuda herde of this rumoure, and they came soone out of the kinges Palace in to the house of the LORDE, and sat them downe before the new dore of the LORDE. Then spake the prestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers to all the people, these wordes: This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this cite, as ye your selues haue herde with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The LORDE hath sente me to preach agaynst this house agaynst this cite all the wordes that ye haue herde. Therefore amende your wayes, and your advise-mentes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the LORDE your God: so shal the LORDE repetch of the plage, yt he had deuyed agaynst you. Now as for me: I am in youre hondes, to do with me, as ye thinke expedient and good. But this shall ye knowe: yt ye put me to death, ye shal make your selues, this cite all the inhabitours there of, gilte of innocent bloude. For this is of a trueth: that the LORDE hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in youre eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the prestes and prophete: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the LORDE our God. The Elders also of the londe stode vpon, and sayde thus vnto all the people: Michæas the Morasite, which was a prophet vnder Ezechias kinge of Iuda, speake to all the people of Iuda: Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: Sion shall be plowed like a felde, Jerusalē shall be an heape of stones, the hill of the LORDES house shall turne to an hie wed. Dyd Ezechias ye kinge of Iuda the people of Iuda put him to death for this? No verely, but rather feared ye LORDE, ye made their prayre vnto him. For the which cause also ye LORDE repented of the plage.
In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiachin, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, this word came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, Thus saith the Lord: make the bonds, and put them by thy neck, and make the bracelets, and put them on thy hand, and say to the king of Babylon, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I have使我 from the beginning to cast your necks into bonds, and I will show you no more mercy.

Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I will bring such a thing upon this city, as is terrible in the ears of all that hear it: the eyes of all the nations shall fall upon this city, which I have appointed to be desolate.

And now! the Lord hath brought you into this place, saying, I have brought you into this city, to throw you into bonds, and into captivity, and into bonds, and into captivity; but behold, I will deliver you out of the hand of the king of Babylon, out of the hand of the king of Egypt, and out of the hand of the king of Persia, out of the hand of all kings, and will deliver you out of their hand.

For I have made you a sanctuary in the midst of all the places where you are a reproach, saith the Lord. No man shall drive you out any more out of the land which I gave to your fathers, saith the Lord, which went out of the land of Egypt, and the land of Canaan, and the land of Moab, and the land of Ammon, and the land of Edom, and the land of Philistia, and the land of all the kings of the Amorites who were over the land, saith the Lord.

I will also make you a name, and you shall be a joy in the midst of all the nations whither you are driven, saith the Lord. And you shall know that I am the Lord, when I have brought you out of the land of Egypt, and brought you into the land of Canaan, which I promised to your fathers, and when I have made you a name, and you shall be a joy and a song, saith the Lord. And I will take you out of the land of Babylon, where you are now driven, and will gather you together, and will bring you into the land of Judah.

And I will give you pilots, the lavers, the kinsmen, and the residue of the king of Babylon's house, and his sons, and his officers, the officers of the princes, the governors, the captains, and the dishes, and all their vessels, and all the ornaments thereof, which are in the house of the king of Judah, and in the house of the princes; and I will give them into your hands. And you shall break their necks, and put their necks under your yoke, and you shall carry away the residue of the spoils of the house of the Lord, which is at Jerusalem, and of the house of the princes which are in Jerusalem.

And you shall carry away out of there all the vessels of the house of the Lord, that are written by the prophet Nathan, which are in the temple of the Lord. And you shall carry away out of there the vessels of the king's house, and the vessels of the princes, which are in the house of the Lord, and of the house of the king of Judah.

And you shall carry away out of there the articles of the altar, and the vases, and the shovels, and the stoves, and all the vessels of brass, wherein the physicians used. And you shall carry away the consecrated vessels, which are in the house of the Lord, and in the house of the king of Judah.

And you shall carry away out of there all the vessels of gold and of silver, which you shall find in the temple of the Lord, and the vessels of the house of the king of Judah, and the vessels of the princes, and the vessels of the altar, and you shall carry away out of there all the vessels of brass, wherein the physicians used.

And now! the Lord hath brought you into this place, saying, I have brought you into this city, to throw you into bonds, and into captivity, and into bonds, and into captivity; but behold, I will deliver you out of the hand of the king of Babylon, out of the hand of the king of Egypt, and out of the hand of the king of Persia, out of the hand of all kings, and will deliver you out of their hand.

the sonne of Ioachim kinge of Iuda, with all the power of Iuda and Jerusalem, from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, captuye.

Yee thus hath the LORDE of hoastes the God of Israel spoken, as touchinge the residue of the ornamentes of the LORDES house, of the kinge of Iudaes house, and of Jerusalem: They shalbe caried vnto Babilon, and there they shall renowne, vntil I vsset them, saieth the LORDE. Then wil I bringe them hither agayne. And this was done in the same yeare: eué in the begynnynge of the reigne of Sedechias kinge of Iuda.

The 11b. Chapter.

BUT in the fourth yeare of the reigne of Sedechias kinge of Iuda, in the fifth Moneth, It happened, that Hananias ſome of Assur the prophet of Gabaon, spake to me in the house of the LORDE, in the presence of the prestes ٱ of all the people, 委宣传部: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoastes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yoke of the kinge of Babilon, and after two yeare wil I bringe agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the LORDES house, ٱ Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilo vnto Babilon. Yee I wil bringe agayne leconias the sonne of Ioachim the kinge of Iuda himself, with all the presoner of Iuda, (ٱ are caried vnto Babilon,) eué in to this place, saieth ٱ LORDE, for I wil brake ٱ yock of the kinge of Babilo.

Then the prophet Ieremy gaue answere vnto that prophet Hananias, before the prestes ٱ before all the people that were present in the house of the LORDE. And the prophet Ieremy sayde: 'Amen, the LORDE do that, (propertyName) the thinge, which thou hast prophecied: that he maye bringe agayne all the ornamentes of the LORDES house, ٱ restore all the presoner from Babilon in to this place. Neuertheles, herken thou also, what I will saye, that thou ٱ all the people maye heare: The prophets that were before us in tymes past, which prophecied of warre, or trouble, or pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nations ٱ greate kingdomes, were proued by this (if God had sende them in very ddee) when the thinge came to passe, which that prophet tolde before.

And Hananias the prophet take the chayne from the prophet Ieremias neck, ٱ brake it; ٱ with that sayde Hananias, that all the people might heare: Thus hath the LORDE spoken: Euen so will I brake the yock of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilo, from the neck of all naciones, ٱ that within this two yeare. And so the prophet Ieremy wente his waye. After now that Hananias the prophet had taken the chayne from the prophet Ieremies neck, and broken it: The wordes of the LORDE came vnto the prophet Ieremy sayenge: Go, and tell Hananias these wordes: Thus saieth the LORDE: Thou hast broken the chayne of wodd, but in steade of wodd, thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thou saieth the LORDE of hoastes the God of Israel: I wil put a yock of yron vpon the neck of all this people, that they maye seuer Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilo, ٱ that they do. And I wil geue him ſeestes in the feld. Then sayde the prophet Ieremy vnto ſe prophet Hananias: Heare me (I praye the) Hananias: The LORDE hath not sent the, but thou bringest this people in to a false beleue. And therfore thus saieth ٱ LORDE: beholde, I wil sende the out of the lode, ٱ within a yeare thou shalt die, because thou hast falsely spoké agaynst the LORDE. So Hananias the prophet died the same yeare in the seuenthe Moneth.

The 11c. Chapter.

THIS is the Copie of the lettre, ٱ Ieremy  the prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the presoner: the Senatours, prestes, prophets, ٱ all the people, whom Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babilo: after ٱ tyme ٱ lorde lechonias ٱ his Quene, his chambreyenes, the pryncees of Iuda ٱ Jerusalem the workmasters of Jerusalem were departed thither. Which lettre, Elasa ٱ sonne of Sapha ٱ Gamaria ٱ sonne of Helechia dyde beare, whõ Sedechias the kinge of Iuda sent vnto Babilo to Nabuchodonosor ٱ kinge of Babilo: these were ٱ wordes of Ieremias lettre: Thus hath ٱ LORDE of hoastes ٱ God of Israel spoké, vnto all the presoner, ٱ were led fro Jerusalem vnto Babilo: 'Buyld ٱ you houses to dwell therein: plate you gardes, ٱ ye maye enjoye the frutes thereof: 'take you wyues, to beare

Though I shal destroy all the people, amonge whom I haue scatered the, yet will I not destroye the, but correcke the, and that with discrecion. For I knowe, that thou art in no wise without faute. Therefore thus saieth the LORDE: I am sore for thy hurte and wounds. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to bynde vp thy wounds: there maye no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothinge for the. For I have geuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy myszyedede, for thy synnes haue had the ouer hande. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? I my self haue pite of thy sorowe, but for the multitude of thy myszyedede and synnes, I haue done this vnto the.

And therefore all they that deoure the, shall be deoured, and all thine enemies shall be led in to captiuyte. All they that make the waist, shall waisted them selves: and all those that robbe the, will I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy health agayne, and make thy wounds whole, saieth the LORDE: because they rouyed the, as one cast awaye and despised, o Sion.

For thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I will set vp Jacobs tentes agayne, and defende his dwellinge place. The cite shall be buylded in hir olde estate, and the houses shall haue their right fondacion. And out of them shall go thankesgeuynge, and the voyce of joye.

I will multiplye them, and they shall not mynyshe: I shall endue them with honour, and no man shall subdue them. Their children shall be as afore tyme, and their congregacion shall continue in my sight. And all those that vexe them, will I viset.

A captiuyte also shall come of them: and a prynce shall springe out from the mydeldest of them: him will I chalenge to myself, and he shall come vnto me. For what is he, that geueth ouer his herte, to come vnto me? saieth the LORDE. Ye shall be my people also, and I wilbe youre God. Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrath of the LORDE breake out as a storme water, as a mightie whylde wynde: and shall fall vp the heads of the vngodly.

The terrible displeasure of the LORDE shall not leaue of, vntill he haue done, performed the intent of his herte," which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstonde. At the same yrne (saith the LORDE) shall I be the God of all the generacions of Israel, and gladly set sprede For understonde, he speake O *'

"Arise, the LORDE shall also apere vnto me from farre, and saye: I doue the with an everlastinge loue, thersfore do I sprede my mercy before the. 'I will repayre the agayne (o thou daughter of Israel) that thou mayest be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne,

and go forth with them, that lede the daunce.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon billes of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and synge.

And when it is yrne, the watchmen vpon

the mount of Ephraim shall crye: 'Arise, let come Sion to oure LORDE God, for thus saith the LORDE: Reioyce with gladnes because of Iacob, erie vnto the heades of the Gentiles: speake out, synge, and saye:

The LORDE shall deluyer his people, the remnaunt of Israel,

make them whole. Be-holde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lode, and gather them from the dedes of the worlde, with the bynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greate with childe, and soch as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greate.

They departed from hence in heuynes, but with ioye will I bringe them bither agayne.

I will lede them by the ryuers of water in a straight waye, where they shall not stolme:

For I will be Israels father, and Epraim shalbe

my firstborne.'

Heare the worde of the LORDE (o ye Gentiles) preach in the Iles, that lie farre of,

and saye: he that hath scatred Israel, shall gather him together agayne, and shall kepe him as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the

LORDE shall redeem Iacob, and ryd him from the bonde of the violent. And they shall come,

reioyce vpon the hill of Sion,

shall haue plenteousnes of goodes, which the

LORDE shall geue them: Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe and calies. And their conscience shalbe as a well watred garden,

for they shall nomore be hongrie.

Then shal the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yee both yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorow in to gladnesse, and will comforte them, and make them ioyfull, euen

from their hertes. I will poure plenteousnes vpon the hertes of the prestes, and my people shalbe satisfied with good things, saith the

LORDE.

Thus saith the LORDE: 'The voyce of heuynes, wepynge and lamentacion came vp in to heauen: euen of Rachel mournynge for hir children, and wolde not be comforted, because they were awaye.

But now saith the LORDE: leaue of

from wepynge and crienge, withhold thyne

eyes from teares, for thy labour shalbe rewarded, saith the LORDE. And they shall come agayne out of the londe of their enemies:

Yee euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion
in this (saith the LORDE) that thy children shall come agayne in to their owne londe.

Morouer I herde Ephraim, (that was led awaye captuyne) complayne on this maner: O

LORDE, thou hast correcte me, and thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed

calfe.

Conuerte thou me, and I shalbe converted, for thou art my LORDE God. Yee as soone as thou turnest me, I shall refourme

my self: and when I vnderstonde, I shall smyte vpon my thee. For verely I haue comitted shamefull thinges: O let my youth

beare this reprofe and confusion.

Vpon this complaynte, I thought thus by my self: 'is not Ephraim my deare sonne?

Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the yrne that I first cōmoned with him, I haue him

euer in remembranc: therfore my very herte dryueth me vnto him: gladly and louyingly will I haue mercy vpon him, saith

the LORDE. Get the watchmen, prouye teachers for the: set thine herte vpon the right waie, that thou shuldest walke, and turne

agayne: (o thou daughter of Israel,) turne

agayne to these cities of thynge. How longe wilt thou go astraye, o thou shrēkinge doughter?

For the LORDE will worke a new thynge vpon earth: A woman shall compass a man.

For thus saith the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel: It will come thereto, that when I haue brought Iuda out of captiuyte, these wordes shalbe herde in y londe and in his cities: "The LORDE, which is the fayre brydegrome of righteousnesse, make the fruitefull, o thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Iuda and all hir cities, the shepherdes and husbande men: For I shall fede the hongrie soule, and refresh all faynte hertes. When I herde this, I came agayne to my self, and mused, like as I had bene wake out of a swete slepe.

Beholde (saieth the LORDE) the dayes come, that I will sowe the house of Israel and the house of Iuda, with men and with catell. Yee it shall come thereto, that like as I have gone aboute in tymes past to r ote them out, to scape them, to breake them downe, to destroye them and chastie them: Euen so will I also go diligentely aboute, to buylyde them vp agayne, and to plante them, saieth the LORDE.

"Then shall it no more be sayde: y fathers haue eaten a sower grape, and the childrens teth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for his owne myszdede, so that who so eateth a sower grape, his teth shalbe set on edge.

Beholde, the dayes come (saieth the LORDE) y I will make a new coenuaut with y house of Israel a with y house of Iuda: not after the coenuaut that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the honde, a led them out of the londe of Egypte: which coenuaut they brake, wherefore I punysched them sore, saieth the LORDE: But this shall be the coenuaut that I will make with the house of Israel after those dayes, saieth the LORDE: I will plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and write it in their hertes, and wilbe their God, and they shalbe my people.

And from thence forth shall no man teach his neibour or his brother, and saye: knowe the LORDE: But they shall all knowe me, from the lowest vnto the hyest, saieth the LORDE. For I will forguee their myszdedes, and wil neuer remembre their synnes

As for Sedeclias the kinge of Iuda, he shal not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shal come in to the hondes of the kinge of Babilon: which shall speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shall loke another in the face. and there shall he be, vntill the tyme that I vsset him, saieth the LORDE. But ye thou takest in hode to fight agaynst the Caldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremey sayde: Thus hath the LORDE spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hananeel the sonne of Selhum thine Vncles sonne shall come vnto the, and require the to redeeme y londe, that lieth in Anathot vnto thy self: 'for by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeeme it, and to bye it out.

And so Hananeel myne Vncles sonne came to me in the courte of the preson, (acordinge to the worde of the LORDE,) and sayde vnto me: Bye my londe (I praye the) that lieth in Anothot in the courte of Ben Iamyn: for by heretage thou hast right to lowe it out for thy self, therfore redeeme it. Then I pre- ceaued, that this was the commandeuent of the LORDE, and so I lowed the londe from Hananeel of Anathot, myne Vncles sonne, and weyed him there the moneye: even seuen ycles, and ten syluer pens.

I caused him also to make me a writinge, and to seale it, and called recorder there by, and weyed him there the money vpon the waigtehe. So I take the euynedence with the copie (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) and I gau the euynedence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia in the sight of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in the euynedence, and before all the Iewes that were therby in the courte of the preson.

I charged Baruch also before them, saieng: The LORDE of boastes the God of Israel commandeth the, to take this sealed euynedence with the copie, and to laye it in an erthen vessell, that it maye longe continue.

For the LORDE of boastes the God of Israel hath determed, that houses, fieldes, and vynyardes shalbe possessed agayne in this londe.

Now when I had deluyed the euynedence vnto Baruch y sonne of Nerias, I besought the LORDE, saieng: 'O LORDE God, It is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and his arme, and there is no thinge to harde for y. Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompecest the wickednes of the fathers, in to the bosome of the children that come after them.

Thou art the greate and mightie God, whose name is the LORDE of hoostie God, in counsell, and infinite in thought: Thine eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens children, to rewarde euerie one after his waye, and acordinge to the frutes of his innencions: Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the londe of Egipte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israel and vpon those men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye: 'Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the londe of Egipte, with tokens, with wondres, with a mightie honde, with a stretched out arme and with greate terriblenes: and hast geuen them this londe, like as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers: Namely, that thou woldest gene them a lode, that floweth with mylke and hone.

Now when they came therin, and possesed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: but all that thou com- maundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plages vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwurckes made now agaynst the cite, to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Caldees that besege it, with swearde, with honger and death, and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shal come vpon them.

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the: Yet sayest thou vnto me (o LORDE God) and commaundest me, that I shal lose a pece of londe vnto my self, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cite is deluyed in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, saieng: Beholde, I am the LORDE God of all flesh, Is there eny thinge then to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde the LORDE: beholde, I shal deluyer this cite in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, they shall take it in: For the Caldees shall come, and wynne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the generous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and poured drynke offerings vnto strange goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For seinge the children of Israel and the children of Iuda haue wrought wickedneses before me euery from their youth vp, what haue they els done, but provoked me with the worke of their owne hondes? saith the LORDE.

Or, what hath this cite bene els, but a provokinge of my wrath, euery sence the daye that I buylde it, vnto this houre? Wherin I cast it out of my sight, because of the great blasphemies of the childre of Israel and Iuda, which they haue done to provoke me: yee they, their kin ges, their prynces, their prestes, their prophetes, whole Iuda, and all the ciste-syns of Jerusalem.

When I stode vp early, and taught them and instructe them, they turned their backes to me, and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformede and correcte. They haue set their goddes in y house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylde bice places for Baal in the valley of the children of Ennon, to vowe their sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer commanded them, nether came it euery in my thought, to make Iuda synne with soch abominacion.

Morouer thus hath the LORDE God of Israel spoken, concerneyng this cite, which (as ye youre selues confesse) shalbe delyuered in to the honde of the kinge of Babilon, when it is wonne with the swerde, with honger and with pestillence. Beholde, I will gather them together from all londes wherin I haue searted them in my wrath, in my fearfull and greate displeasure; and will bringe them agayne vnto this place, where they shal dwell safely. And they shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God.

And I will geue them one horte and one waye, that they maye feare me all the daies of their life, that they and their children after them maye prosper. And I will set vp an euerlastinge covenaut with them, Namely: that I will never ceasse to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their hertes, so that they shall not runne awaye fro me.

Yee I will haue a lust and pleasure to do them good, and faithfully to plante them in this londe, with my whole herte, and with all my soule.

For thus saith the LORDE: like as I haue brought all this greate place vpon this people: so will I also bringe vpon them all the good, that I haue promised them. And men shall haue their possessions in this londe, wherof ye saye now, that it shal nether be inhabited of people ner of catell, but be deliuered in to the hodes of the Caldees: Yee londe shalbe bought for money, MOROUER the wordes of the LORDE came vnto Jeremey on this maner, whë he was yet bounde in the courte of the preson: Thus saith the LORDE, which fulfilleth the thinges that he speaketh, the LORDE which perfourmeth the thinges that he taketh in honde: euuen he, whose name is the LORDE: Thou hast cried vnto me, and I haue heerde the: I haue shewed great and hie thinges, which were vnknowne vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the LORDE God of Israel, concerneyng the houses of this cite, and the houses of the kings of Iuda: that they shalbe broken thorow the ordinaunce and weapons, when the Caldees come to beseech them: and they shalbe fylled with the deede carcases of men, whom I will slaye in my wrath and displeasure: whë I turne my face from this cite, because of all hir wickednes. Beholde, (saith the LORDE) I will heale their woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the treasure of peace and trecth.

And I will returne the captiuyte of Iuda and Israel: and will set thom vp agaynse, as they were afore. From all myszdeses (wherin they have offended agaynst me) I will close them: And all their blasphemies which they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I will forgeue them.

And this shal get me a name, a prayse and honoure, amonste all people of the earth, which shall heare all the good, that I will shewe vnto them: Yee they shall be afrayed and astonnied at all the good dedes and beneiftes, that I will do for them. Morouer, thus saith the

d XIV.

LORDE: "In this place, wherof ye saye that it shalbe a wildernessse, wherein nether people ner catell shall dwell: In like manner in the cities of Juda and without Ierusalem (which also shalbe so voyde, that nether people ner catell shall dwell there) Shall the voyce of gladnesse be herde agayne, the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shal be syngye: (Prayse the LORDE of hoostes, for he is lounge, and his mercy endureth for euer) and the voyce of them that shall offere vp giftes in the house of the LORDE. For I will restore the captiuyte of this londe, as it was afore, saieth the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes. It shal come yet therto, that in this londe, which is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cities of the londe, there shall be set vp shepherdes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountayne, and in the cities that lye vpon the playne, and in the deserte.

In the londe of Ben Iamin, in the felde of Ierusalem, and in the cities of Juda shal the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the honde of him, that telleth them, saieth the LORDE. Beholde, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORDE) that I wil perfourme that good thinge, which I haue promised vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In those daies and at the same tyme, I will bringe forth vnto Dauid, the branche of rightouesnesse, and he shal do equite and rightouesnesse in the londe. In those daies shal Juda be helped, and Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her is euem God oure rightoues maker. For thus the LORDE promyseth: Dauid shal neuer want one, to syt vpon the stoe of the house of Israel: nether shal the prestes and Leuites want one to offre all waye before me, burntofferinges, to kyndle the meatofferinges, to prepare the sacrifices.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremiy after this maner: Thus saieth the LORDE: Maye the couenaunt which I haue made with daye and night, be broken, that there shulde not be daye and night in due season? Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, which I made with Dauid my seruaunt, and so he not to have a sonne to regynge in his Throne. So shall also the prestes and Leuites neuer fayle, but serue me. For like as the starres of heauen maye not be nombred, nether the sonde of the see measured: so will I multyplie the sede of Dauid my seruaunt, and of the Leuites my ministers.

Morover, the worde of the LORDE came to Jeremiy, saieng: Cosidrest thou not what this people speake? Two kynreddes (saye they) had the LORDE chosen, tho those same two hath he cast awaye. For so farre is my people come, that they have no hope to come together eny more, and to be one people agayne. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: If I have made no couenaunt with daye or night, and geue no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also cast awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt: so that I wil take no prynce out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abrahā, Isaac and Iacob. But yet I will turrene agayne their captiuyte, and be mercifull vnto them.

THESE are the wordes which the LORDE spake vnto Jeremiy, what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon, all his hoostes (out of all the kingdomes) were vnder his power) and all his people, fought agaynst Ierusalem and all the cities thereof. Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israel: Go, speake to Sedeuchias the kinge of Juda, and tell him: The LORDE sendeth the this worde: Beholde, I wil deluyer this citee in to the hede of the kinge of Babylon, he shal burne it, and thou shalt not escape his hondes, but shalt be led awaye presoner, and deluyer into his power. Thou shalt loke the kinge of Babylon in the face, and he shal speake with the mouth to mouth, and then shalt thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the LORDE, o Sedeuchias thou kinge of Iuda: Thus saieth the LORDE vnto the: Thou shalt not be slayne with the swarde, but shalt dye in peace. Like as thy fore fathers, the kingses, thy progeniours were brente: so shalt thou be brente also, in the mounnyng they shal saye: oh lorde. For thus haue I determed, saieth the LORDE.

Then spake Jeremiy the prophet all these wordes vnto Sedeuchias kinge of Juda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kinge of Babilons hooste beseged Ierusalem, and the remaunt of the cities: Namely, Lachis and Azecha, which yet remayned of the stronge defended cities of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the LORDE spake vnto Jeremye the prophet, when Sedechias was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed a liberte: * so that every man shulde let fre go his seruaunt and handemayde, Hebrue τ Hebruesse, τ no lewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. Now as they had consented, euery so they were obedient, τ let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented, τ toke agayne the seruauntes and handemaydeus, whom they had letten go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

C For the which cause the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jeremye from the LORDE himself, sayenge: Thus saith the LORDE God of Israel: I made a couenant with youre fathers, when I brought them out of Egipte, (that they shulde no more be bond-men,) sayenge: "When sevene yeares are out, euery man shal let go fre his bought seruaunte an Hebrue, yf he haue servd him sixe yeares. But youre fathers obeied me not τ herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now turned, τ dyd right before me, in τ ye proclamed, euery mà to let his nebboure go fre, τ in τ ye made a covenaunt before me, in the temple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned youre selnes agayne, and blasphemed my name: In this, τ euery man hath required his seruaunt and hand mayden agayne, whom ye had letten go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be youre bonde men. And therefor thus saith the LORDE: Ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclame fredome vnto his brother and nebboure: wherfore, I will call you vnto a fredome, saith the LORDE: euuen vnto the swarde, to the pestilence, and to honger, and will make you to be plagued in all the kyngdomes of the earth. Yee those men that hane broke my couenaunt, and not kepte the wordes of the apoynymet, which they made before me: * when they hewed the calfe in two, τ when there wente thorow the two halles therof: The prynces of Iuda, the prynces of Jerusalem, the gelled men, the prestes and all the people of the londe (which wete thorow the two sydes of the calfe.) Those men wil I geue in to the power of their enemies, and in to the hondes of them that folowe vpon their lyues.

*And their deed bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. As for Sedechias the kynge of Iuda τ his prynces, I will deluyer them in to the power of their enemies, and of that that desyre to slaye them, and in to the hondes of the kyng of Babilons hooste, τ which now is departed from you: But thowr my commandement (saieth the LORDE) they shal comne agayne before this cite, they shall fight agaynst it, wynne it, and burne it. Morover I will laye the cities of Iuda so waist, that no man shall dwell therin.

THE 176. Chapter.

THE wordes which the LORDE spake vnto Jeremye, (in the reigne of Iochaim the sonne of Iosias kynge of Iuda) are these: "Go vnto τ house of the Rechabites, τ call them out, τ bringe thē τ house of the LORDE in to some commodious place, and geue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Lasanias the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Habazania, and his brethre and all his sonnes, and the whole housholde off the Rechabites: and brought them to the house off the LORDE, in to the closet of the children off Hanan the sonne off Igdalia the man off God: which was by the closet off the prynces, that is aboue the closet of Maasia the sonne of Sellum, which is the chefe off the tresury. And before the sonnes of the kyndred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: drynke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne, For Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father commaundved vs, sayenge: Ye and youre sonnes shal neuer drynke wyne, τ buryde no houses, some no sede, plante no vynes, yee ye shal haue no vynyarde: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tetes, τ ye maye lyue lōge in the lōde, wherin ye be straugers.

Thus haue we obeyed the coamaundement of Ionadab τ sonne of Rechab our father, in all τ he hath charged vs, and so we drynke no wyne all our lyue longe: we, oure wyues, oure sonnes τ oure doutheres. Nether buryde we eny house to dwell therin, we haue also amonge vs nether vynyarde, ner corne lōde

Chap. rrrth.

The rrrth. Chapter.

IN the fourth yeare of Iochim the sonne \( \text{a} \) of Iosias kynge of Iuda, came \( \text{y} \) worde of the LORDE vnto Jeremey, sayenge: Take a boke, \( \text{z} \) "write therin all \( \text{y} \) worde: you, \( \text{y} \) I haue spake to the, to Israel, to Iuda \( \text{z} \) to all the people, frō the tyne \( \text{y} \) I begane for to speake vnto the (in \( \text{y} \) regine of Iosias) vnto this daye. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, which I haue deyseyd for the, they maye peradventure turme, euerie man frō his wicked waye, that I maye forgeue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremey call Baruch the sonne of Nerias, \( \text{r} \) Baruch wrote in the boke at \( \text{y} \) mouth of Jeremey, all the wordes of the LORDE, which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremey commaundde Baruch sayenge: I am in preson, so that I maye not come in to the house of \( \text{y} \) LORDE: therfore go thou thither, \( \text{y} \) rede the boke, that thou hast writte at my mouth: Namely, the wordes off the LORDE, \( \text{r} \) rede thē in the LORDES house vpon the fastinge daye: that the people, whole Iuda, \( \text{z} \) all they that come out of the cities, maye heare. Peradventure they will praye melye before the face of the LORDE, and turme, euerie one from his wicked waye. For greate is the wrath and displeasure, that the LORDE hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Nerias dyd, acordinge vnto all that Jeremey the prophet co-maundde him, readinge the wordes off the LORDE out of the boke in the LORDES house. And this was done in the fyfth yeare off Iochim \( \text{y} \) sonne of Iosias kynge of Iuda, in the ix. moneth \( \text{y} \) when it was commaundde, that all the people of Jerusalem shulde fast before the LORDE, and they also that were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Jerusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremey out of the boke within the house of the LORDE, out of \( \text{y} \) treasury of \( \text{r} \) Gamarias the sonne off Saphan the scribe, which is byside the hyer loftte off the new dore of the LORDES house: that all \( \text{y} \) people might heare. Now whē Micheas the sonne of Gamarias the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the LORDE out of \( \text{y} \) boke, he wēte downe to the kinges palace in to \( \text{y} \) scrybes chābre, for there all the prynces were set: Elisama the scrybe, Dalias the sonne of Semei, Elnathia the sonne of Achor, Gamaria the sonne of Saphan, Sedecias the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Micheas tolde them all the wordes, y he herde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then all the prynces sent Iehudi y sonne of Nathanael the sonne of Salamian the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayenge: Take in thine honde the boke, wherout thou hast read before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Nerias toke y boke in his honde, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Syt downe, and rede the boke, y we maye heare also. So Baruch red, y we might heare. Now when they had herde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wil certyfie the kynge of all these wordes. And they examined Baruch, sayenge: Tell vs, how didest thou wryte all these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, and I alone was with him, and wrote them in the boke.

Then sayde the prynces vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, and hyde the with Ieremy, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kynge to the courte. But they kept the boke in the chambe off Elisam the scrybe, nd tolde the kynge all the wordes, that he might heare. So the kynge sent Iehudi to fetch him y boke, which he brought out of Elisama y scrybes chambe. And Iehudi red it, that the kynge and all the prynces, which were aboute him, might heare. Now the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ix. Moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And whiche Iehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and cast it in to the fyre vpone the herth, vntil the boke was all brente in the fyre vpon the herth.

Yet no man was abashed thereof, or rente his clothes: neither the kynge himselfe, ner his seruauntes, though they herde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalias ad Gamaria, besoughte the kynge, that he wolde not burne the boke: notwithstanding y kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Ieramyhel the sonne of Amalech, Sarias the sonne of Esriel and Selamia y sonne of Abdiel, to laye hondes vpon Baruch the scrybe, and vpon Ieremy the prophet: but the LORDE kepte them out of sight. After now that the kynge had brente the boke, ad y sermos which Baruch wrote at y mouth off Ieremy: The worde of the LORDE came vnto Ieremy sayenge: Take another boke, and write in it all the forsyaide sermons, that were written in the first boke, which Iochachim the kynge off Iuda hath brente.

And tell Iochachim the kynge off Iuda, Thus saieth the LORDE: thou hast brente y boke, and thoughtest within thy selff: Why hast thou written therin, that the kynge off Babilon shall come, t make this lode waist? so that he shall make both people and catel to be out of it? Therefore the LORDE saieth, of Iochachim the kynge of Iuda: There shal none of his generacion syt vpon the trone of Dauid. His deed corse shalbe cast out, t heat off the daye, and the frost of the night maye come vpon him: And I will vyset the wickednes of him, of his sede, and of his seruauntes.

Morover all the euell that I haue promised the (though they herde me not) will I bringe vpon them, vpon y inhabitors of Jerusalem, and vpon all Iuda. Then toke Ieremy another boke, and gawe it Baruch the scrybe the sonne of Nerias, which wrote therin out of the mouth off Ieremy: all the sermons that were in the first boke, which Iochachim the kynge off Iuda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons, then before.

The 19th Chapter.

SEDECHIAS y sonne of Iosias (which was made kynge thowor Nabuchadonosor kynge of Babilon) reigned in the londe of Iuda, in the stede off Iechonias the sonne of Iochachim. But nether he, ner his seruauntes, ner the people in the lode wolde obeye the wordes of y LORDE, which he spake by the prophet Ieremy. Neuertheles Sedechias the kynge sent Iuchal the sonne of Selamia and Sophonias the sonne of Maasia the prest to the prophet Ieremy, sayenge: O praye thou vnto the LORDE our God for vs. Now Ieremy walked fre amounge the people at that tyme, and was not put in preson as yet. Pharaos hooste also was come out of Egipte: which when the Caldees that beseged Jerusalem, perceuued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto Jeremey the prophet, sayenge: Thus saieth the LORDE God of Israel, This answeer shal ye geue to the kyng of Iuda, that sent you vnto me for councell: Beholde, Pharaos hooste, which is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egipte in to his owne londe: But the Caldees shall come agayne, & fight against this cite, wyne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus saieth the LORDE: disceane not youre owne myndes, thinkeynge on this maner: Tush, the Caldees go now their waye from vs: No, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoaste off the Caldees that besiege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stonde vp, and set fyre vpon this cite. Now whedy the hoaste of the Caldees was brokke vp from Ierusale for feare of the Egipcians armeye, Jeremey went out of Ierusale towarde the lode of Ben Iamin, to do certayne busynesse there amonge people. And whedy he came vnder Ben Iamyns Porte, there was a porter called Ierias the sonne of Selamia, & zone of Hananias, which fell vpô him & toke him, sayenge: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremey: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheles Ierias wolde not beleue him, but brought Jeremey boûde before the princes. Wherfore the princes were angrie with Jeremey, causinge him to be beaten, & to be layed in preson in the house of Ionathas the scrybe. For he was the ruler of the preson. Thus was Jeremey put in to the dongeon preson, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then Sedechias the kyng sent for him, & called him, & axed him quietly in his owne house, sayenge: thinkest thou this busynes (that now is in houde) cometh of the LORDE? Jeremey answere: yee thi it doth: & thou (sayde he) shalt be deluyed in to the kyng of Babilons power.

Moruer, Jeremey sayde vnto kyng Sedechias: What haue I offended agaynst thee, agaynst thy seruautes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue causé me to be put in preson? Where are youre prophetes, which haue prophesied vnto you and sayde, that thy kyng of Babilo shulde not come agaynst you this lode? And theryfore heare now, o my lorde the kyng: let my prayer be accepte before the, & sende me nomore in to thy house of Ionathas the scrybe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kyng commaundéd to put Jeremey in the fore entrée off the preson, and dayly to be geuyn him a cake of bred, and els no dighte meate, vntill all the bred in the cite was eaten vp. Thus Jeremey remarayned in the fore entrée off the preson.

SAPHATIAS the sonne off Matha, Gedolias the sonne of Pashur, Iuchal the sonne of Selamia, & Pashur the sonne of Malchias perceuued the worde: Jeremey had speké vnto all the people, namelie on this maner: Thus saieth the LORDE: Who so remayneth in this cite, shall perish, ethere with the swearde, with honger or with pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shal escape, wynnyng his soule for a pray, he shal lyue. For thus saieth the LORDE: This cite (no doute) must be deluyed in to the power of the kige of Babilo, he also shal wynne it. Thé sayde the princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we besech you let this man be put to death, For he discorgath the hodes of the soudyers thy be in this cite, the hodes of all the people, whé he speketh such worde vnto the. This mä verely laboureth not for peace of people, but mischefe. Sedechias the kinge answered and sayde: lo, he is in youre hodes, for thy kige maye denye you nothinge. Then toke they Jeremey, and cast him in to the dongeon off Malchias the sonne off Amalech, that dwelt in the fore entre off the preson. And they let downe Jeremey with coardes in to a dongeon, where there was no water, but myre. So Jeremey stack fast in the myre. Now when Abdemelech the Morian beynge a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstode, that they had cast Jeremey in to the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to the kyng (which the sat vnder the porte off Ben Iamin) these worde: My lorde the kyng, where as these men medle with Jeremey the prophet, they do him wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in preson, there to dye of honger, for there is no more bred in the cite. Thé the kyng comaundéd Abdemelech the Morian, and sayde: Take from hécé xxx. men whom thou wilt, & drawe vp. Ieremy the prophet out of the dungeon, before he dие. So Abdemelech toke the men with him, 2 went to 3 house of Arnaelech, 2 there vnder an alnery he got olde ragges 2 wore his cloutes, 1 let the downe by a coare, in to the dungeon to Ieremy.

And Abdemelech the Morian sayde vp to the prophet Ieremy: O put these ragges and cloutes vnder thine arme holes, betwixte the and the coarles: ad Ieremy dyd so. So they drewe vp Ieremy with coardes and toke him out of the dungeon, and he remayned in the fore entrie of the preson. The Sedeclias the kyng sent and caused Ieremy the prophet be called vp to him, in to the third entrie, that was by the house of the LORDE. 2 And the kyng sayde vp to Ieremy: I wil axe the somwhat, but hyde nothinge fro me. The Ieremy answerde Sedeclias: Yf I be playne vp to the, thou wilt cause me suffre death: yf I geue the coucell, thou wilt not folowe me. So the kyng swore an ooth secretly vp to Ieremy, sayenge: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, that made vs these soules, I will not slaye the, ner geue the in to the hodes of them, that seke after thy life.

Then sayde Ieremy vp to Sedeclias: Thus saieth  the LORDE off hoostes the God of Israel: Yf case be, that thou wilt go forth vp to the kyng of Babilons prynces, thou shalt saue thy life, 2 and this cote shall not be brec, yee both thou and thy housholde shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wilt not go forth to the kyng of Babilons prynces, then shale this cote be deluyeres in to the hondes of the Caldees which shale set fyre vp on it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Sedeclias sayde vp to Ieremy: I am afraide for the Iewes, that are fled vp to the Caldees, lest I come in their hodes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Ieremy answerde: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vp to the voyce off the LORDE (I beske 5) which I speake vp to the, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy life. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the LORDE hath tolde me this planely: Beholde, all the women that are left in the kyng of Iudaes house, shal go out to the kyng of Babilons prynces. For they thinke, 5 thou art deceaued: and that 5 men in whom thou didest put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, and set thy fete fast in the myre, and gone their waye from the. Therfore all thy wyues with their children shall fe vp to the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their hondes, but shalt be 5 kyng of Babilons presoner, 5 this cote shall be brent. Then sayde Sedeclias vp to Ieremy: loke 5 no body knowe off these worde, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the prynces perceau, that I haue talked with the, and come vp to the, sayenge: O speake, what sayde the kyng to the? hyde it not from vs, and we wil not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayde 5 kyng to the? So thou geue them this answere: I haue humbly besought the kyng, that he will let me lye no more in Jonathas house, that I dye not there? Then came all the prynces vp to Ieremy, and axed him, And he tolde them, after the maner as the kyng bad him. 5 Then they helde their peace, for they perceaued nothinge. So Ieremy abode still in the fore entrie off the preson, vntill the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

The xxxiv. Chapter.

Now when the cote off Ierasale was taken 4 (for in the ix. yeare of Sedeclias kyng of Iuda in the tenth Moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the kyng off Babilon and all his hooste, and besieged Jerusalem. And in the xi. yeare of Sedeclias in the fourth Moneth 5 ix. daye of 5 Moneth, he brake in to the cote). Then all the kyng of Babilons prynces came in, a sat the downe vnder the porte: Nergall, Sarezer, Sangaerno, Sarsechim, Rabsaris, Nergal, Sarezer, Rabmag, with all the other prynces of the kyng of Babilon. And when Sedeclias the kyng of Iuda with his soudyers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of 5 cote by night thorow the kynges garde, and thorow the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they went towarde the wildernesse.

But the Caldees hoostee folowed fast after them, and toke Sedeclias in the felde of Iericho, and brought him presoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng off Babilo vnto Reblahtha, that lieth in the londe off Hemath where he gau judgment vpon him. So the kyng of Babilon caused the children of Sedeclias and all the nobles off Iuda be slayn, before his face at Reblahtha. And made Sedeclias eyes be put out, and boude him with chaynes, and sent him to Babilon.

Morouer, the Caldees brēt vp the kynges palace, "with other houses of the people, and brake downe the wallles off Ierusalem. As for the remaunt of the people that were in the cith, and soche as were come to helpe them (what so euer was left of the comē sorte) Nabuzaradan the chefe captyane caried them to Babilon. But Nabuzaradan the chefe captyane let the rascall people (and those that had nothing) dwell still in the lode off Iuda, and gau their vynyars and corne feldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kyng of Babilon gaue Nabuzarada the chefe captyane a charge, cōcernyng Jeremey, sayenge: take and cherishe him, and make mouch off him: se thou do him no harme, but in- treate him after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzarada the chefe captyane, Nabu- saszā the chefe chamberlayne, Nergalsarezer the treasurer and all the kynges of Babilons lordes, sent for Jeremey, caused him be fet out of the fore entrie off the preson, and committed him vnto Godolias the sonne off Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde carie him home, and so he dwelte amoung the people. Now whyle Jeremey laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the preson, the words off the LORDE came vnto him sayenge: Go, and tell Abdemelech the Morian: Thus saith the LORDE off hostes God off Israel: Beholde, the cruel and sharpe plage that I haue deyseyd for this cith, will I brynge vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I wil deluyer the (sayeth the LORDE) and thou shalt not come in the bondes off those men, whom thou fearest. For doultles I wil saue the, so that thou shalt not perish with the swarde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, and that because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORDE.

The ry. Chapter.

THIS is the maner, how the LORDE in- treated Jeremey, when Nebuzaradan the chefe captyane had lett him go fre from Rama, whither as he had led him bonde, amoung all the presoners, that were caried from Ierusalem and Iuda vnto Babilon. The chefe captyane called for Jeremey, and sayde vnto him: The LORDE thy God spake mightely before off the mystery vpon this place: Now the LORDE hath sent it, and perfourmed it, as he had promised: For ye haue synned against the LORDE, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, I lowse the bondes from thy hōdes this daye: ye thou wilt now go with me vnto Babilon, vp the: For I will se to the, and prouyde for the: But ye thou wilt not go with me to Babilon, then remaye se here. Beholde, all the londe is at thy will: loke where thou thinkest conveniēt go good for the to Abyde, there dwell. Ye thou canst not be content to dwell alone, then remaye with Godolias the sonne off Ahicā the sonne of Saphā, whom the kyng of Babīlō̄ hath made gounoure ouer cities of Iuda, dwell with him amoung the people, or remaye, where so euer it pleaseth ye. So the chefe captyane gaue him his expĕse with a rewarde, let him go. Then went Ieremey vnto Godolias the sonne of Ahicā to Masphat, dwel there with him amoung the people that were left in the londe.

Now when the captynes of the hooste of Iuda (which with their felowes were scatred abrode on every syde in the lode) vnderstode, the kyng of Babīlō̄ had made Godolias the sonne of Ahicā gounoure in the lode, man, wife childe, ye the poor men in the londe (were not led captyue to Babilon) shulde be vnder his Iurisdicṭio: They came to Godolias vnto Masphat: Namely, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniās, Ionahs the sonnes of Carea, Sareas the sonne of Tanhometh, the sonnes of Opheus the Nethophet, Iesania the sonne of Machati, with their copānyous. And Godolias the sonne of Ahicam the sonne off Saphā, swore vnto the their felowes on this maner: He not ayled to serve the Caldees, dwell in the lode, do the kyng of Babīlō̄ seruycye, so shall ye prosper. Beholde, I dwell at Masphat to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, to satisfie soch as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe them in youre ware houses, and dwell in youre cities, that ye haue in kepinge.

But in the seuenth Moneth it happened, ʒ Ismael the sonne of Nathanias ʒ sonne of Elisam (one of ʒ kynge bloude) came with thec that were greatest aboute the kynge, ʒ ten men that were sworne with him: vnto Godolias the sonne off Ahicam to Masphat, and eate there together. And Ismael ʒ sonne of Nathanias with those ten men that were sworne to him, starte vp, and smote Godolias the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan with the swarde, ʒ slewe hym, whom the kynge off Babilô had made gouernoure off the londe. Ismael also slewe all the Iewes that were with Godolias at Masphat, and all the Caldees that he founde there waitynge vpon hym.

The neste daye after that he had slayne Godolias (the matter was yet vnknowne) there came certayne men from Sichem, frô Sîlo and Samaria, to the nombre off lxxx. which had shauen their beeredes, rent their clothes, ʒ were all heuye, bringinge meat offerings and incense in their houdes, to offre it in the house off the LORDE. And Ismael the sonne of Nathanias went forth of Masphat weeping, to mete them. Now whê he met them, he sayde: Go youre waye to Godolias the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came in the myddest off the cite, Ismael the sonne off Nathanias (with them that were sworne vnto him) slewe them, euëc at the myddest off the pyt. Amonge these lxxx. më there were ten, ʒ sayde vnto Ismael: Oh slaye vs not, for we haue yet a greate treasure in the felde, off wheate, barley, oyle and honie. So he spared the, and slewe them not with their brethren. Now the pyt wherin Ismael dyd cast the deed bodies off the më (whom he slewe because off Godolias) had kynge Asa caused to be made, ʒ for feare off Baasa the kynge off Israel, and the same pit dyd Ismael fyll with slaye men. As for the rénaunt off the people, the kynge daughters and all the people that were yet left at Masphat, ʒ vpon whom Nabusaradan the chefe Captayne had made Godolias the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne off Nathanias caried them awaye presoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Iohâna the sonne off Carea and all they that had bene captyynes ouer the kynge hooste with him, ʒ herde of all the wickednes that Ismael the sonne off Nathanias had done: they toke their companions, and wente out for to fight with Ismael the sonne off Nathanias, and founde him by the waters of Rabim in Gabaon. Now when all the people, whom Ismael led captyue, sawe Iohâna ʒ sonne off Carea and all the other captyynes off the hooste, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had caried awaye frô Masphat, were brought agayne.

And whê they returned, they came to Iohanna the sonne off Carea. But Ismael the sonne off Nathanias fled from Iohâna with eight of his sworne companions, ʒ wente to the Ammonites. Then Iohanna the sonne of Carea and all the captyynes of the hooste that were with him, toke the remnaunt of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathanias had led awaye (When he had slayne Godolias the sonne of Ahicâ) whom they also had rescued from him: fightinge men, women ʒ children, and gelded men, whom they brought agayne from Gabaon: and wente from thence, and sat them downe at Geruth Chimham, which lieth besyde Bethleæ, that they might go in to Egipte for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afrayed, because that Ismael the sonne off Nathanihas had slayne Godolias Ahiams sonne, whom the kyngge off Babilon had made gouernoure in the londe.

The riiij. Chapter.

S O all the rulers, and Iohanna the sonne off Carea, Iesanius the sonne off Osias came with all the people fro the leest vnto the most, q sayde vnto Jeremey the prophet: O heare oure peticion, that thou mayest praye for vs vnto the LORDE thy God, and for the remaunt, wherof there be very few left off many, as thou seist vs: that the LORDE thy God maye shewe vs a waye to go in, q tell vs, what we shulde do. Then jeremy the prophone sayde vnto them: I haue hearde you. Beholde, I will praye vnto God your LORDE, as ye haue required me: and loke what answere the LORDE geueth you, I shall certifie you theroff, and kepe nothinge back for you. And they sayde vnto Jeremey: The LORDE off treuth & faithfulnes be oure recorder, that we wil do all, that the LORDE thy God comandeth vs, whether it be good or euell. We will herken vnto the voyce off oure LORDE God, to whom we sende the: that we maye prosper, when we haue folowed the voyce off the LORDE oure God.

And after ten dayes came the worde off the LORDE vnto Jeremey. Then called he Io- hannana the sonne of Carea, and all the cap- taynes of the people that were with him: Yee q all the people from the leest to the most, q sayde vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE God of Israel vnto whome ye sent me, to laye forth youre prayers before him: Yf ye wil dwell in this londe, I shall buylde you vp, q not breake you downe: I shall plante you, q not rote you out: for I am pacified, as cöc ern ynge the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kyngge off Babilon, off whom ye stonde in awe: O be not afrayed off him, saith the LORDE: for I wil be with you, to helpe you, and deluyer you from his horde. I will pardon you, I wil haue mercy vpon you, and brynge you agayne in to youre owne londe.

Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this londe, ner to folowe the voyce off the LORDE youre God: but will saye thus: we will not dwell here, but go in to Egipte: where we shall nether se warre, heare the noyse off batell, ner suffre honger, there will we dwell. Wherfore heare now the worde of the LORDE, o ye remnaunt of Iuda. Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Yf ye be whole purposed to go in to Egipte, ad to be there as strangers: the swearde that ye feare, shall ouer take you in Egipte: and the honger wheroff ye be here afrayed, shall hange vpon you in to Egipte, and there ye shall dye. For all they, that off set purpose vndertake to go in to Egipte, there to ease them selues off their mystery, shall perishe with the swearde, with honger and pestilence: not one off them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plage, that I wil bringe vpon them.

For thus saith the LORDE off hoostes the God off Israel: like as my wrath and indignacion is come vpon the inhabitours of Ierusale, so shall my displeasure go forth vpon you also, yf ye go in to Egipte: For there ye shalbe reuyled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shall neuer se it more. The LORDE forbiddeth you (o ye remnaunt of Iuda) that ye shall not go in to Egipte. And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye els shal ye begyle youre selues. For ye sent me vnto the LORDE youre God, and sayde: O praye thou the LORDE oure God for vs: and loke what answere the LORDE oure God geueth the, that bringe vs agayne, ad we shall do thereafter. Now haue I shewed, and declared vnto you the voyce off the LORDE youre God, for the which cause he hath sent me to you. Yf ye will not folowe it, be sure, yf ye shall perishe with the swearde, with honger & pestilence: euin in the same place, where youre lust was to go, and dwell.

The riiij. Chaptr.

NOW when Jeremey had ended all y A wordes of y LORDE God vnto y people, (for their sakes to whom God had sent him) Asarias the sonne of Osias, q Iohanna y sonne of Carea, with all the proude personnes, sayde vnto Jeremey: Thou lust, the LORDE oure God hath not sent y to speake vnto vs, that we shalde not go in to Egipte, and dwell

there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias pro-ouketh the agaynst vs, that he might bringe vs in to the captuyte off the Caldees: that they might slaye vs, and carie vs awaye pre-soners vnto Babylon.

So Iohanna the sonne of Carea, and all the captaynes of the hooste, and all the people folowed not the commandement of the LORDE: Namely, to dwell in the londe off Iuda: But Iohanna the sonne of Carea
all the captaynes of the hooste, caried awaye all the remnaunt in Iuda, that were come together agayne from the Heithen (amóge whom they had bene seactred) a to dwell in the londe of Iuda: Men, women, childrén, the kynges doughters:
all those that Nabusaradan the chefe captayne had left with Godolias the sonne of Ahican. They caried awaye also the prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Nerias, and so came in to Egipte: for they were not obedient vnto the commandement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the worde off the LORDE
happended vnto Jeremy, sayenge: Take greate stones in thine hode, and hyde them in the brick wall, vnder the dore off Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Iuda maye se, and saye vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kyngye of Babylon my seruaunt, and will set his seate upon these stones that I have hyd, and he shall sprede his tente ouer them.

And when he commeth, he shal smyte the lode of Egipte with slaughter, with preson-ment and with the swearde. He shall set fyre upon the temples of the Egiptiæ goddes, and burne them vp, a take them selues presoners.
Morouer he shall arayse himselff with the lode of Egipte, like as a shepheard putteth on his cote, and shall darke awaye from thence in peace. The pileres also of the temple of the Sonne that is in Egipte, shal he breake in peces, and burne the tempels of the Egipcians
goddes.

The r.iii. Chapter.

T HIS is the worde was shewed to Jeremy \coccerninge all \lews, which dwelt in \egipte: at Magdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, in the londe of Patures. Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Ye

haue sene all \mysery,
I haue brought vpon
Jerusalem, and vpon all the cities of Iuda: so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwellinge therin:
\ because of the greate
blasphemies, which they committed, to proouke me vnto anger: In that they wente
backe to do sacrifice àd worshippe vnto straunge goddes: whom nether they, ner ye, ner youre fathers haue knowne. How be it, I sent vnto them my seruaûtes all the propheteles:
\rose

vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them
warninge: O do no soch abominable thinges, \ thinges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ner herké, to turne from their wickednes, and to do no more sacrifice vnto straunge
goddes.

Wherfore my indignacion à wrath was kyndied, and it brente vp the cities of Iuda, the feldes with the strestes off Jerusalem: so that they were made waist and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Now therfore thus saith the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: How happeneth it, that ye do so greate euell vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, childrén and babes of Iuda? so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of youre owne hondes: whé ye offre
vnto straunge goddes in the londe off Egipte, where as ye be gone to dwell: That ye might utterly persehe, and that ye might be reuyled and shamfully intreated of all naciones. Or, haue ye now forgotten the wickednes off youre forefathers, the wickednes off
y kynges of Iuda
and their wyues,
wickednes that yeoure
selues àd youre wyues have done in the londe
of Iuda, in the cite and in the londe off Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sory this daye, ye feare not,
nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I have geue vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therfore thus saith the LORDE of hoostes
the God off Israel: I am stedfastly advysed
and determed, to punysh ye, and to rote out all Iuda.
As for the remnaunt off Iuda that purposly wente in to Egipte, there to ease them off their mystery: I will take them, and they shall all be destroyed. In londe of Egipte shall they persehe, byynge consumed with the swearde and with honger. For from of leest vnto

most, they shal persehe with the swarde and with honger. Morower they shalbe reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I will visit them that dwell in Egipte, as I have visited Jerusalem: with the swarde, with honger and with pestilence: So that none off the remnaunt off Iuda, which are gone to dwell in Egipte, shall be left to come agayn in to thy londe off Iuda: all though they thinke to come thither agayn, and to dwell there. For none shal come agayn, but soch as are fled awaye.

Then all the men which knew that their wyues had offred vnto straunge goddes, a greate sorte off wyues that stode there, yee and all the people that dwelt there in Egipte in the cite of Patures, answerde Jeremye, a sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the LORDE, we will in no wyse heare them: but what so euer goeth out of owre owne mouth, that wil we do: We will do sacrifice, and offfe oblationes vnto the Queene off heauen: like as we and owre forefathers, owre kynges and owre heades haue done in the cities off Iuda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnesse off vytales, then were we in prosperite, and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

But sens the we left of, to offre, and to do sacrifice vnto the Queene of heauen, c haue had searcenes of all thinges, and perish with the swarde and honger. Last of all, when we womel did sacrifice and offred vnto the Queene of heauen, did we make her cakes ad pouring vnto her drinkoffringes, to do her seruyce, without our husbondes wylles?

Then sayde Jeremye vnto all the people, to the men, to the women and to all the folke, which had geuen him that answere: Dyd not the LORDE remembre the sacrifices that ye, yeere forefathers, dyre kynges a rullers (with all the people) have offred in the cities of Iuda, in the stretes and londe off Jerusalem? and hath he not considered this in his mynde?

In so mocl, that the LORDE myght no longer suffice the wickednes off yeere inuencions, and the abominable thynges which ye dyd? Is not yeere londe desolate a voyde, yee and abhorred, so that no ma dwelth therin eny more, as it is come to passe this daye?

Dyd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made soch sacrifice, and synned agaynst the LORDE? Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinances and statutes.

Yee this is the cause, that all my sufforte happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye.

Morower, Jeremye speake vnto all the people and to all the women: Heare the wordes off the LORDE all Iuda, ye that be in the londe off Egipte: Thus saieth the LORDE off hoostes the God of Israel: Ye and youre wyues haue spoken with youre owne mouth, the thinges that ye haue fulfilled in dede.

Yee thus haue ye sayde: We will not fayle, but do the thyng that pleaseth vs: we wil do sacrifice and poure out drynkoffringes to the Queene of heauen. Purposly haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, a hastily haue ye fulfilled youre owne intente. And threfore, hear the wordes of the LORDE all Iuda, ye that dwell in the londe off Egipte.

Beholde, I haue sworn by my greate name (saieth the LORDE) that my name shall not be rehearsed thorow any mans mouth of Iuda, in all the londe of Egipte: to saye: The LORDE God lyueth, for I wil watch, to place them, and not for their wealth. And all the men of Iuda that be in the lode of Egipte, shal perish with the swarde and with honger, vntill they be vterly destroyed.

Neuertheles, those that fled awaye for y swarde, shal come agayn in to the lode of Iuda (but there shal be very fewe of them) And all the remnaunt off Iuda, that are gone in to Egipte, there to dwell, shall knowe, whose wordes shalbe founde true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I will viset you in this place (saieth the LORDE) and that ye maye knowe, how that I (without doute) wil perfourme my purpose vpon you, to punysh you. Beholde (saieth the LORDE) I wil deluyer Pharo Ophram kyngye of Egipte in to the hondes of his enemies, y seke after his life: euyn as I gaue Sedecheias the kyngye of Iuda in to the hondes of Nabuchodonosor kyge of Babilo, which sought after his life.

of Nerias, "after that he had written these Sermon in to a boke at the mouth of Jeremey, In the fourth yeare of Ioachim the sonne of Iosias kyng of Iuda.

Thus saith the LORDE God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch: In so much as thou thoughtest thus (when thou wast writinge) Wo is me, the LORDE hath geuen me payne for my travaile: I have weereied my self with sighinge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therefore tell him (O Jeremey) thy the LORDE saith thus: Beholde, The thyge that I haue buylded, wil I breake downe agayne, and rote out the thinge, that I haue planted, ye this whole londe. And sekest thou yet promociō? Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I will bringe a miserable plagge vpō all flesh, saith the LORDE. But thy life will I geue th for a pray, where so euer thou goest.

The 116th Chapter.

HERE folowe the wordes off the LORDE to the prophet Jeremey, which he spake vnto the Gentiles. These wordes folowinge preached he to the Egipciaes concernynge the hoost off Pharuo Necho kyng kyng e of Egipte, when he was in Charcanis byside the water off Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon slewe him, In the fourth yeare off Ioachim the sonne off Iosias kyng of Iuda.

Ye make redy buckler and shylde, ye go forth to fight: Ye harnesse youre horses, set youre sel caste vp on them: Ye set youre salettas fast on, ye bringe forth speares, ye scourre youre sweardes, put on youre brest plates.

But alas, how happeneth it, that I se you so afrayed? why shrecke ye backe? wherefore are youre worthies slayne? Yee they runne so fast awaye, that none off them loketh behyde him. Fearfulnesse is fallen vp on[e] euerychone off them, saith the LORDE.

The lightest off fote shall not fle awaye, and the worthies shall not escape.

Toward the north by the water of Euphrates they shall stamble and fall. But what is he this, that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe a raginge like the streams off water? It is Egipte that ryseth vp like the floude, and casteth out the waters with so greate noyse.

For they saye: We will go vp, and will cower the earth: we wil destroye vp Cities, with them that dwell therin. Get you to horse backe, roll forth the Charettes, come forth ye worthies: ye Morians, ye Libeans with youre bucklers, ye Lideans with youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the LORDE God of hoostes, a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye avenge of his enemies. The swearde shal deoure, it shall be satisfied and bated in their bloude: For the LORDE God off hoostes shall haue a slayneoffringe towards the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (o Galaad) bringe triacle vnto the doughter off Egipte:

But in vayne shalt thou goe to surgery, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The Heithen shall heare off thy shame, and the londe shalbe full of thy confusion: for one stronge man shall stamble vpon another, how then shulde they not fall both together?

These are the wordes that the LORDE spake to the prophet Jeremey, concernynge thou hoost of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, which was to destroye the londe off Egipte: Preach out thorow the londe of Egipte, and cause it be proclaimed at Migdal, Memphis and Taphnis, and saye: Stonde still, make the redie, for the swearde shal consume the rounde abouete.

How happeneth it that thy mightie worthies are fallen? why stode they not fast? Even because the LORDE thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euere still vpon another. One cried vpon another: Vp, let vs go agayne to owre owne people, and to owre owne naturall countre, from the swearde of owre enemie.

Crie euene there: O Pharao kyng of Egipte, the tymes will bringe sedicion. As truly as I lyue (saith the kyng, whose name is the LORDE of hoostes) it shall come as mount of Thabor, and as Libanus yf it stode in the see. O thou doughter of Egipte, make redy thy geer to flyt. For Memphis shalbe voyde and desolate, so that nomā shall dwell therin. The londe of Egipte is like a goodly fayre calfe, but one shall come out of the north to dryue her forwarde. Hir wagied souldyers that be with her, are like fat calnes.

They also shall fle awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye off their slaughter and
The tyme of their visitacion shall come vpon them.

The crie off their enemies shall make a noyse, as the blast of a trumpet. For they shall ente in with their hooste, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wod, and they shall cut downe hir wod (saith the LORDE) with out eny discretion. For they shall be mo in nöbre then the greshoppers, so that no man shall able to tell the. The daughter of Egypte shalbe confouded, whe she shalbe deleyuered in to the hondes off the people off the north.

Moroner thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde I will vsset that restlesse people off Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte, yee both their goddes and their kynges: euens Pharao, and all them y litten vnto him. "Yee I will deleyuer them in to the hondes of them, that seke after their lyues: Namely, in to the power off Nabuchodonosor the kyngge off Babilon, and in to the power off his seruautes. "And after all these thinges, it shalbe inhabited as afore tyme, saieth the LORDE.

"But be not thou afrayed (o my seruant Iacob) feare not thou, o Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the from farre, and thy sede from the londe of thy captiuyte. Iacob also shal come agaynand, and be in rest: he shall be rich, and no man shal do him harme. "Feare thou not (o Iacob my seruant) saieth the LORDE, for I am with the: and will destroye all naciones, amonche whom I haue scattered the. Neuertheles I will not consume the, but chasent the and correcke the: yee and that with discretion: nether wil I spare the, as one that were fautlesse.

The 12th. Chapter.

These are the wordes, that the LORDE spake vnto Jeremy the prophet agaynst the Phylstines, before that Pharao smote the cite off Gaza. Thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, there shall waters arise out off the north: and shall growe to a great floude, runnyng over and coueryng the londe, the cities and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crie, and all they that dwell in the londe, shall mourn the noyse and stampyngge off their stronge barded horses, at the shakynge off their charettes, and at the romblinge off the wheales. The fathers shall not loke to their children, so feable and weery shall their hondes be: at the same tyne, when he shal be there, to destroye the whole londe off the Phylstynes. He shall make waist both Tirus, Sidon as all other that are sworne vnto them.

For the LORDE will destroye all Palestina, and the other Iles, that be deuyded fro the countre. Baldnesse is come vpon Gaza, Asscalon with hir other valleys shall kepe hir peace.

How longe wilt thou slaye, O thou swearde off the LORDE? Turne agayn in to thy sheeth, reste, and leane off. But how can it cease, when the LORDE himself hath geuen it a charge agaynst Asscalon, and raiseth it vp agaynst the cities off the see coast?

The 12th. Chapter.

Thus saieth y LORDE off hoostes y God of Israel against Moab: 'Wo be to y cite of Nebo, for it shall be layed waist, brought to confusion and taken. Yee thy stragle cite of Cariatharim shalbe brought to shame, and afrayed: Moab shall nomore be had in honoure: Wicked counsell shalbe taken vpon Hesebon. Come (shall they saye) let vs rote them out, that they maye be nomore amonde the nombre of the Gentiles, yee that they maye nomore be thought vpon: Thus the swearde shall persecute y. A voynge shall crie from Horonaim: With greate waisting and destruction, is Moab made desolate.

And this crie shalbe herde in all hir cities. At the goinge vp vnto Luhith there shall arise a lametacion: and downe towards Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deadly crie: Get you awaye, saue youre lyues q be like vnto the heeth in y wildernes. "For, because thou hast trusted in thy strange holdes and treasure, thou shal be taken. Chamos with his prestes and prynces shall go awaye in to captiuyte.

The destroyer shal come vpon all cities, none shall escape. The valleys shalbe destroyed, and the fields shall be layed waist: like as the LORDE hath determed.

Make a token vnto Moab, that she get hir awaye spedely: for hir cities shalbe made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin.
Cursed be he that doth the worke of the LORDE neiligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his swearde from sheddynge off bloud, a. Moab hath euere bene rich and carlesse from hir youth vp, she hath shutten and taketh hir ease with hir treasure. She was never yet put out off one vessell in to another (yi is) she neuer wente awaye in to captuythe, therefore hir taist remayneth, and hir saoure is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tymne commeth (saieth the LORDE) that I shall sende hir trussers to trusse her vp, to prepare and seass hir vessells: yee hir tankredes rattell, and shake to g fro. And Moab shalbe ashamed off Chamos, like as Israel was ashamed off Bethel, wherin she put hir trust.

Wherefore do ye thinke thus: we are mightie, and stronge men off warre? b Moab shall be destroyed, and hir cities brente vp: c hir chosen young men shall be slayne, saieth the kinge, whose name is the LORDE off hoostes. The destruction off Moab commeth on a pace, and hir fall is at honde.

All hir neighbours shall mould for her, and all they that knowe hir name, shal saye: O how happeneth it, that the stronge staff and the goodly rod is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibō, come downe from thy glory, and sitt in pouerete. For he that destroyeth Moab, shal come vp to the also, and brake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwelllest in Aroer, get the to y strete, g loke aboute the: axe them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thynge is happened? O, Moab is confounded and overcome.

Mourne and crie, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. And myssye shall come vp to the playne londe: Namely, vpō holon, and Iaza: vp on Mephat and Dibō, vp on Nebo and the house of Diplathaims, vp on Caritharam and Bethgalum, vp on Bethmaon and Carloth, vp on Bosra and all the cities in the lode off Moab, whether they ry farre or nere.

The horne of Moab shall be smyttē downe, hir arme broken, saieth the LORDE. Make hir dronken (for she magnified hir self above the LORDE:) that men maye clappe their hondes at hir vomyte, and that she also maye be laughed to scorn. O Israel, shalt thou not laugh him to scorn, when he is taken amongst theues? d Yee because off thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynste him, thou shalt be dryuen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leave the cities, and dwell in rookes off stone, and become like doues, that make their nestes in holes.

As for Moabs prye, we haue herde off it, she is very hie mynded. e I knowe her stoutnesse, hir boostinge, hir arrogance and the prye off hir stomacke, saieth the LORDE. For hir furiousnes maye nether vpholde hir with strength, ner dede. Therefore shal there mournyng be made for Moab, and euery ma shall cere for Moabs saker: a lamentacion shalbe made, to the men that stonde vp on the wall. So will I mourne for the also (o Iazer) and for the, O thou vynynarde off Sybma.

Thy wyne braunches shal come ouer the see, and the braunches off Iazer but vnto the see: the destoryer shall breake in to thy haruest and grape gatheringe. Myrth and cheare shalbe taken awaye from the tymbre felde, and from the whole londe off Moab.

There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the treader shall haue no stomacke to crye, yee there shall be none to cere vnto him: which afore tymne were herde from hesebon to Eleale and Ioz, which lyfted vp their voyce from Zoor vnto Horonaim, that bullock off thre yeare olde. The waters also off Nemrim shalbe dried vp.

Morover I will make Moab ceasse (saieth the LORDE) from the offeringes and censure that she hath made vnto hir goddes in hir places. Wherfore my herte mourning for Moab, like a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mens sake off the bricke wall my herte mourning also, e euene as a pype, that pipeth a doflule songe: for they shalbe very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all beuerds clipped off: all houde bounde, and all loynes gyrded aboute with sack cloth. Vpō all the house toppes and stretes off Moab, there shalbe mourninge: For I will breake Moab like an vnprofitable vessell saieth the LORDE. O how fearfull is she? O how mourning she? O how doth Moab hange downe hir heades, and is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them, that be rounde aboute her.

47 b. 3 Re. 13. e 3 Re. 11. g. 27 a. Es. 16. b. Iere. 49. c. Es. 15. a.
For thus saith the LORDE: "Beholde, the enemie shall come flyenge as an Aegle, and spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and wynne the stronge holdes. Then the mighty mens hertes in Moab, "shalbe like the herte off a woman trasheling with childe.

And Moab shalbe made so desolate, that she shal nomore be a people, because she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the LORDE. Fear, pyt, and snare shall come vpō the (o Moab) saieth the LORDE. Who so escapeth the feare, shal fall in the pyt: and who sogeth out off the pyt, shall be taken in the snare."

For I will bringe a yeare off visitacion vpon Moab, saieth the LORDE. They that are able to flie, shall stonde vnder the shadowe off Hesebon. For there shall go a fyre out off Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, ¥ shall burne vp that proude people off Moab, both before and behynde.

Wo be vnto the (o Moab) for thou people off Chamos shal perish: Yee thy sonnes and daughters shall be led awaye captuye. Yet at the last will I bringe Moab out off captiuyte agayne, saieth the LORDE. Thus farre off the plage off Moab.

Beholde, I will brynge a feare vpon the, saieth the LORDE God off hoostes, from all those that be aboute the: so that ye shall be scatred euery man from another, and no ma shall gather them together agayne, that be fled. But after that, I will bringe the Ammonites also out off captiuyte agayne.

Vpon the Edomites hath the LORDE off hoostes spoken on this maner: "Is there no more wyszdome in Theman? Is there no more good councell amonste his people? Is their wyszdome then turned clene to naught? Get you hence, turne youre backes, crepe downe in to the depe, O ye citens off Dedan.

For I will bringe destructiō vpon Esau, yee and the daye off his visitacion. Yff the grape gatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leave some grapes? Yff the night robbes came vpon the, shulde they not take so much, as they thought were enough?

But I will make Esau bare, and discouer his secrete, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His sede shalbe waisted awaye, yee his brethren and his neighbours, ãd he himself shall not be left behinde.

Thou shalt leave thy fatherlesse children behinde the, ãd I will kepe them and thy wydowes shall take their comforth in me. For thus hath the LORDE spoken: Beholde, they that men thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the first: and thynkest thou then to be fre?

No, no: thou shalt nether be quyte nor fre, but thou must drynke also: For why, I haue sworne by my selfi (saieth the LORDE) that Bosra shall become a wyldernes, an open shame, a laughinge stooke and cursynge: and hir cities shalbe a continuall deseerte.

For I am perfectly informed of the LORDE, that he hath sent a message all ready vnto the Heithen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battayle, for lo: ¥ I will make the but small amonste the Heithen, and little regarded amonste men.

Thy hie stomack ¥ the pryde of thy herte have diseanced ¥, because thou wilt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hie mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles though thy nest were as hie as the Aegles, yet wil I cast the downe, saieth the LORDE. Morouer

Chap. I.

Idumea shall be a wilderness: "who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, and wonder at all his miserable plagues. Like as Sodom, Go-mor and the cities that laye there aboute, were turned vpyde downe (saith the LORDE) so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habitacion there. Behold, like as the Lyon cometh vp from the pleasant medowes of Iordane vnto grane pastures of Ehâ, so wil I dryue him, that make him runne agaynst her. But who is the ymage man that I will ordene therto? Who is like, vnto me? What is he that will stryue with me? What shepheard maye stonde in my hondes?

Therefore heare the counsell of the LORDE, that he hath taken vpon Idumea: he hath purpose, that he hath deuyed vpon the citsyns of Themian: The leest of the flocke shall teare them in peces, he looke what fayre thyngue they haue, they shall make it waist, they themselves also. At the noyse of their fall thy earth shall quake, the crie of their voyce shall herde vnto the reed see. Beholde, thy enemie shall come and fle vp hither, as it were an Aegle, he speedie his wynges vpon Bosra. Then shall the herettes of the worthies in Edom be as the herte of a woman travelinge of childe. Vpon Damascus, Hemath and Arpad shall come confucion, for they shall heare euell tydinges: they shall be tossed to and fro like the see that can not stonde still. Damascus shalbe sore afayde, shal fle, tremblinge shal come vpon her. Sorowe and payne shal over take her as a woman travelinge of childe. But how shalde so worshipfull and glorious a cite be forsaken? Hearre therefore: hir yonge men shal fall in the stretes, and all hir men of warre shal be take awaye in that tyme, saith the LORDE of hooestes. I will kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shal consume the palace of Benadad.

As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Hasor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyngge of Babilon smote downe, the LORDE hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, and get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people toward the easte. Their tentes and their flockes shal take awaye, yee their hanginges and their vesseyl. Their Camels also shal take awaye vpon them. They shall come aboute them on euery syde with a fearfull criе.

Fle, get you soone awaye, crepe in to caues, that ye maye dwell there: O ye inhabitors of Hasor, saith the LORDE: for Nabuchodonosor thy kyngge of Babilon hath helden a councell concerninge you, he concluded his deuyce agaynst you. Arise, get you vp agaynst yonder rich carelesse people (saith the LORDE) which haue nether gates nere boare, that dwell not together. Their Camels shalbe stollen, the droues of their catell dryuen awaye.

Morouer, these that be shauen wil I seatre towarde all the wyndes, he bringe them to destruction: Yee he that thorow their owne familiers, saith the LORDE. Hasor also shall be a dwellinge for Dragons, and an eueralastinge wildernesse: so that no body shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there his habitacion.

These are the wordes, that the LORDE spake to the prophet Jerem'y concerninge Elam, in the begynnynge of the reigne of Sedechias kyngge of Iuda. Thus saith the LORDE of hooestes: Beholde, I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye their strength: and vpon Elam I will bringe the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, and scathe them against the same foure wyndes. And there shal be no people, but some of Elam shal fle vnto them.

For I wil cause Elam be afayred of their enemies, of them that seke their lyues: I wil bringe vp the indignacion of my wrath, saith the LORDE. And I wil persecute them with the swearde so longe til I haue brought them to naught. I wil set my stole in Elam, I wil destoye both the kyngge and prynces from thence, saith the LORDE. But in processe of tyme, I wil bringe Elam out of captynyte agayne, saith the LORDE.

The I. Chapter.

The wordes the LORDE spake vnto the prophet Jerem'y, concerninge Babilon, the lond of the Caldees: The wordes in the gentiles, let yee voyce be herde, make a toke: criе out, kepe no sylence, but saye: Babilon shal be wonne, Bel shalbe cofounded, and Merodach shalbe ouercome.

Yee their goddes shal be brought to shame, and their ymages shal stonde in feare. For out of the north there shall come a people against her, which shall make her londe so waist, that no body shall dwell therein: neither man nor beast, for they shall fle and departe from thence. In those days I at that time (saith the LORDE) the children of Israel shall come, they shall the children of Judah, weeping and making haste, shall seek the LORDE their God. They shall axe the way to Sion, thyther shall they turne their faces, come, and hange upon the, in a couenaunt that never shall be broken.

My people hath been a lost flocke, my shepherdes have disceane them, have made them as ostrayye upon the hill. They have gone from the mountayn to the little hill, forgotten their folde. All they came upon them, have deuoureth them: their enemies sayde: We have made no faute against them, for they have displeased the LORDE, yee even the LORDE which is the bawtie of their righteousnes, defended their fathers. Yet shal ye fle from Babilon, departe out of londe of the Caldees, and ye shall be as the rammes that go before the flocke. For lo, I will wake vp an hoost of people from londe, bringe them vpon Babilon: these shall laye sege to it, and wyne it: Their arowes shal not mysse, like as a connynge archer shuteth not wronge. And the Caldees shalbe spoyled, all they that spoyle them, shalbe satisfied, saith the LORDE: because ye were so chearfull glad, to treadye downe myne heretage, fulfilled your pleasures, as the calues in the grasse: and triumphed ouer them like the bulles, when ye had gonne the victory. Youre mothers shalbe sore confounded, and they that bare you, shal come to shame. She shall be the last set by amonge the naciones, voyde, waist, dried vp. No man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of LORDE, but she shall be whole desolate. All that they that go by Babilon, shall stonde still, abased, and shal wondre at all hir plages.

Go forth in youre aray against Babilon rounde aboute, all ye that can hande bowes: shute at her, spare no arowes, for she hath synned against the LORDE. Crie out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her roude aboute: she shal yele her selle, her foundacios shall fall, hir walles shall come downe, for it shalbe the vengeance of the LORDE. Yee vengeaunce shalbe taken of her, as she hath done, so shal she be dealt withall. They shal rote out the sower from Babilon, him handleth the sickle in harvest. For feare of the swearde of the enemie, every man shall get him to his owne people, every man shal file to his owne londe. Israel is a scarred flocke, the Lyons have dispersed them. First the kinge of the Assirians devoured them, last of all this Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon hath brussed all their bones.

Therfore thus saith the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will visete the kinge of Babilon his kingdome, as I haue visited the kinge of the Assirians: and will bringe Israel agayne to his pleasant pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charmel Basan, and be satisfied vpon the mount of Ephraim Galaad. In those days and at the same tyme (saith the LORDE) if the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be founde: Yf men enqueere for the synne of Juda, there shall be none: for I wil be mercifull vnto them, whom I suffre to remayne ouer.

Go downe (o thou avenger) in to the enemie londe, vset them that dwell therein: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, saith the LORDE: do acording to all, that I haue commaundede them. There is gone aboute the londe a crie of a slaughter greate murthour, namely on this maner: How happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken brussed in sondor? How chaunteeth it, that Babilon is become a wildernes amonge the Heithen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, thou art taken: vnwarres art thou traued snared: for why, thou hast proouked LORDE vnto anger: The LORDE hath opened his house of ordinance, brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thinge that is done in the londe of the Caldees, it is the LORDE of hoostes worke.

These things shall come vpon her at the last, they shall brake in to hir preuy chibres, they shall leave her as bare as stones, that be layed together vpon heapes. They shall so destoye her, nothinge shall be left. They shall slaye all hir mightie souldyers, and put them to death. Wo be vnto the, for the daye a tyue of their visitacion is at honde. Me-thinke I heare already a crie, of them that be fled a escaped out of the londe of Babilon, which shewe in Sion the vengeantrue of the LORDEoure God, the vengeantrue of his temple: Yee a voyce of them, that crie agaynst Babilon: Call vp all the archers agaynst Babilon, pytch youre tentes rounde aboute her, that none escape. a Recompence her, as she hath desperued: and acordinge as she hath done, so deale with her agayne: for she hath set vp her self agaynst the LORDE, agaynst thy holy one of Israel. Therfore shal hir yonge men fall downe in the stretes, a all hir men of warre shall be roted out in thy daye, saith the LORDE. Beholde, I speake vnto the (o thou proude) saith the LORDE God of hoostes: for thy daye shall come, euë the tyue of thy visitacion. a And the proude shall stromble a fall, a no man shal helpe him vp. I wil burne vp his cities with fyre, a it shal consume all that is rounde aboute him.

Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: The children of Israel a Iuda suffere violence to-gether. All theye that haue them in captiuyte, kepe them fast, a wil not let them go: but their avenger a redeemer is mightie, whose name is the LORDE of hoostes: he shal manteyne their cause, he shal make the londe shake, a judge them that dwell therin, one with another. The swearde shall come vpon the Caldees (saith the LORDE) vpon them that dwell in Babilon, vpon their prynce, a vpö their wyse me: The swearde vpon their soythsayres, (as for those, they shal come to passe.) a The swearde vpö their worthies, so that they shal stonde in feare: The swearde vpon their horesmen and charettes, a vpon all the comun people that dwell vnder thec: a so that they all shal come like women: The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shal be stollen awaye:

The swearde vpon their waters, so that they shalbe dried vp: For the londe worshippeth ymaghes, a deylythe in straunge wondefull things. Therfore shal wilde beestes, Apes a Estriches dwell therin: for there shal neuer man dwell there, nether shal eny man haue his habitation there for euer more. a Like as God destroyed Sodom a Gomorre, with the cities that laye there aboute, saith the LORDE: So shal noman dwell there also, nether shal eny mâ haue there his habitation. a Beholde, there shal come a people from the north, with a greate bonde of men, a many kinges shal stonde vp from the endes of the earth: They beare bowes a buclers, cruel are they a vynmercifull.

Their voyce roareth like the ragine see, they ryde vpon horses, a come weakened to fight agaynst the: O Babilon. As soone as the kinge of Babilon heareth tell of them, his hondes shal waxe feable: Sorowe and heuynes shall come vpon him, as a woman travelinge with childe. Beholde, a like as the Lyon commeth vp from the pleasant medowes of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wil I dryne thè forth, and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shal I chose out, a ordene to soch thinges? a For who is like me, or who will stryue with me? or what shepherde maye stonde agaynst me? Therfore heare the councell that the LORDE hath geuen vpon Babilon, and the deuyce that he hath taken vpon the londe of the Caldees. The leest amôge the people shal teare them in peces, a loke what pleasauant thinge they haue: they shal laye it waist. The noyse at thy wynnynge of Babilon shal moue the earth, a the crie shalbe herde amongethe Gêtiles.

The li. Chapter.

ThUS hath the LORDE sayde: a Beholde, I wil rayse vp a perulous wynde agaynst Babilon a hir citseyens, a beare euell will agaynst me. I wil sende also in to Babilo famers, to fanshe her out, a destroye hir londe: for in the daye of hir trouble they shal be aboute her on euery syde. Morover, the LORDE hath sayde vnto the bowe men, a to them a clymme ouer the walles in brest plates: Ye shal not spare hir yonge më, kyll downe all hir hoost. Thus the slayne shal fall downe in the londe of the Caldees, and the wounded in the stretes. a As for Israel a Iuda, they shall not be forsa kale of their God, of the LORDE of hoostes, of the holyone of Israel: no, though they haue fyllèd all their londe full of syme. a Fè awaye from Babilon, euery man save his life. Let no man holde his tunge to hir wickednes, for the tyme of the LORDES vengeantrue is come, yee he shal name is the LORDE of hostes, he is the rodde of his erheritance. Thou breakest my weapons of warre, \( \tau \) yet thorow the I haue scarred the naciones \( \tau \) kyngdomes: Thorow the haue I scarred horse \( \tau \) horse man, yee the charrettes, \( \tau \) soch as set vp them: Thorow the I haue scarred man \( \tau \) woman, olde and yonge, bachelor \( \tau \) mayden. Thorow the I haue scarred the shepherde \( \tau \) his flocke, the husband man \( \tau \) his catell, the prynces \( \tau \) the rulers. Therfore wil I rewarde the cite of Babilon \( \tau \) all hir citsyns the Caldees, with all the euell which they haue done vnto Sion: Yee that ye youre selues shall se it, saieth the LORDE. Beholde, I come vpon the (thou noysome hill) saieth the LORDE, thou that destroyest all londes. I wil stretch out my honde ouer the, \( \tau \) cast the downe from the stony rockyes: \( \tau \) wil make the a brente hill, so that nether corner stones, ner pinnacles, ner foudacions stones shalbe taken eny more out of the, but waist \( \tau \) desolate shalt thou lie for euermore, saieth the LORDE.

Set vp a toké in the londe: blowe the trompettes amonge the Heithen, prouoke the nacionys agaynst her, call the kyngdomes, of Ararat, Menni \( \tau \) Ascaneys agaynst her: nombre out Taphsar agaynst her, bringe as greate a sorte of horses agaynst her, as \( \tau \) if they were greshoppers. Prepare agaynst them \( \tau \) people of the Meedes with their kynges, prynces \( \tau \) all their chefe rulers, yee and the whole londe that is vnder them.

The londe also shal shake \( \tau \) be afrayed, when the deuyce of the LORDE shal come forth agaynst Babilon: to make the londe of Babilon so waist, that no mā shal dwell eny more therin. The Worthies of Babilon shal leave the batell, \( \tau \) kepe them selues in stronge holdes, their strengthe hath fayled them, they shalbe like women. Their dwelinge places shalbe brennte vp, their barres shalbe broken. One pursuauant shal mete another, yee one poste shal come by another, to bringe the kynge of Babilon tydinges: that his cite is taken in on euery syde, the foordes occupyde, the fennes brennte vp, and the souldyers sore afrayed.

For thus saieth the LORDE of hostes the God of Israel: The daughter of Babilon hath bene in hir tyme like as a threszshine floore, but shortly shal hir harvest come. Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an emptie vessell. He swalowed me vp like a Dragon, and fyllid his bely with my delicatcs: he hath cast me out, he hath takè my substaunce awaye, the thinges that was left me hath he carried vnto Babilon, saith the daughter, that dwelleth in Sion: Yee saith the LORDE: Beholde, then so manye tydinges, in runne he (londe wrath layed) shal vyset Babilon ouer earth.

Babilon shall become an heape of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnes wonders, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roarre together like lyons, as the yonge lyons when they be angrie, so shal they beđe them selues. In their heate I shal set drynke before the, they shal droncken for joye: Then shal they slepe an euerlasting slepe, a neuer wake, saith the LORDE. I shal carie them downe to be slayne like shepe, like wethers goote. O, how was Sesah wonne? O, how was the glory of whole londe taken? how happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at amonge the Heithe? The see is rysen ouer Babilon, hath couered her with his greate wawes. Hir cities are layed waist, the londe lieth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a londe where no man dwelleth, where no mã traueleth thorow. Morouer, wil vyset Bel at Babilo: the-thinges that he hath swalowed vp, that same shal I plucked out of his mouth. The Gentiles also shall runne nomore vnto him, yee and the walles of Babilon shall fall.

O my people, come out of Babilon, that every man maye saue his life, from the fearfull wrath of the LORDE. Be not faynte herted, feare not at euer rumoure that shal slayne in the londe: for euer yeare bringeth new tydinges, yee straunge wickednes and lordshiphe. And lo, the tyme commeth that I wil vyset the ymage of Babilo, and the whole londe shalbe confounded, yee and hir slayne shal lie in the mynderst of her. Heauen and earth with all that is therin, shall reioyce ouer Babilon, when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north, saith the LORDE.

Like as Babilo hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shal there fall many, and be slayne in all hir kyngdom. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haist you, stode not still, remembre the LORDE afarre of: and thinke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemies: our faces were covered with shame, because the straunge aleanentes came in to the Sanctuary of the LORDE. Wherfore beholde (saieth the LORDE) the tyme commeth, that I wil vyset the ymage of Babilon, and thorow the whole lode they shal mourne and fall. Though Babilon elymned vp in to heane, and kepte her power an hie: yet shal I sende her destroyers saith the LORDE.

A piteous crie shall be herde from Babilon, and a greate mystry from the londe of the Caldees: when the LORDE destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hie stomack, with proud and proude boostinge, where with they haue bene as furious, as the wawes of greate water floudes, and made greate crackes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babilon) which shall take hir thoughtlesse, and brake their bowes: for God is disposed to avenge him self vpon them, sufficiently to recompence thie. Yee saith the LORDE) I will make their prynce, their wyse men, their chefe rulcrs all their worthies, dronckè: so that they shal slepe an euerlastinge slepe, and neuer wake: Thus saith the kynges, whose name is the LORDE of hoostes.

Morouer, thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: The thicke wall of Babilon shal be broken, and hir proude gates shalbe brente vp. And the thinges that the Gentiles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and labour, shal come to naught, and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremi gaue vnto Sarias the sonne of Nerias, the sonne of Maasia, when he wente towarde Babilon with Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, in the fourthe yeare of his regne. Now this Sarias was a peaceable prynce. Jeremi wrote in a boke, all the misery that should come vpon Babilon, yee and all these sermons that be written against Babilon, and gaue Sarias this charge: When thou commest vnto Babilon, se that thou rede all these wordes, and saye: O LORDE, thou art determined to rote out this

Thus farre are g preachinges of Jeremy.

The liij. Chapter.

S EDECHIAS was xxij. yeare olde, when he was made kyng, 'g he raigned xij. yeare in Ierusalem. His mothers name was Hamithal, Jeremyes daughter of Lobna. He lyued wickedly before the LORDE euem as Joachim dyd. Wherfore the LORDE was angrie at Ierusalem g Iuda, so longe till he had cast the out of his presence. And Sedechias fel from the kyngge of Babilon. ' But in the ix. yeare of his raigne, in the the Moneth, the tenth daye of the Moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor kyngge of Babilon with all his hooste came before Ierusaleme, g besieged it. g made them bulworkes rounde aboute it. And this beseginge of the cite endurend vtto the xj. yeare of kyngge Sedechias.

And in the fourth Moneth, the ix daye of the Moneth, there was so great honger in the cite: that there were no more vitayles for the people of the londe. ' So all the souldyers brake awaye, and fled out of the cite by night, thowr the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now y Caldees had copassed the cite rounde aboute, yet wente these men their waye toward the wildernesse.

And so the Caldees folowed vp them, and toke Sedechias the kyngge in the felde of Iericho, when his hoost was runne from him. So they caried the kyngge awaye presoner to Reblatha, vnto the kyngge of Babilon in the londe of Hemath, ' where he gaue judgment vpon him.

The kyngge of Babilon also caused Sedechias sonnes be slayne before his face, yee g put all the prynces of Iuda to death at Reblatha. Morowre he put out the eyes of Sedechias, caused him be bounde with cheynes, to be carried vnto Babilon: g let him lie in preson, till he dyed.

Now y tenth daye of the fift Moneth in the xix. yeare of Nabuchodonosor kyngge of Babilon, Nabusaradan the chefe captayne and the kyngge of Babylons seruauntes came vnto Ierusalem, g brent vp the house of the LORDE. He brent vp also the kingges palace, all the houses g all the gorgeous buyldinges in Ierusalé. And the whole hoost of the Caldees y were with the chefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Ierusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people g soch folke as yet was left in the cite, which also were fallen to the kyngge of Babilon, yee g what people as yet remayned: Nabusaradan the chefe captayne caried them awaye presoners. But y poore people of the countre, dyd Nabusaradan the chefe captayne leane in the londe, to occupie the vynyardes g felde. The Caldees also brake the brasen pilers, that were in the house of the LORDE, yee the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of y LORDE: g caried all the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, shoules, flesh hokes, sprinklers, spones g all the brasen vessell that was occupide in the seruyce: with the basens, cole-pannes, sprinklers, pottes, candlstickes, spones, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe captayne toke also the two pilers, the lauer, the xij. brasen bullockes y stode vnder y seate, 'which kyngge Salomon made in the house of the LORDE: g all the vessell conseynd so mocch metall, that it might not be weyed. For euery piler was xvij cubites hie, g the rope that went aboute it, was xij cubites, g foure fingers thick and rounde: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, g euery knoppe was fyue cubites hie: g vpon the knoppes were whopes, g pomgranates rounde aboute of clene brasse.

After this maner were both the pilers fashioned with the pomgranates, wherof there were an hundredth and xcvij, which hanged vpon the whoopes rounde aboute. The chefe captayne also toke Sarias y hie prest, g Solomonias that was chefe next him, and the thre kepers of the treasury. He toke out of the
And it came to passe (after Israel was brought in to captiuyte, and Jerusalem destroyed:) that Jeremy the prophet sat weeping, mourning and making his mone in Jerusalem: so that with an heuy herte he sighed, a sobbed, sayenge:

She wepeth sore in the night, so that y teares runne downe hir chekes: for amonge all hir louers, there is none, that gueth her eny confort: yee hir nexte frendes abhorre her, a are become hir enemies.

Juda is taken presoner, because she was defyled: a for seruynge so many strange goddes, she dwellett now amonge the Heithen. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, and so she dwellett amonge hir enemies.

Chap. iii. The Lamentacions of Jereomy.

7 Hir enemies are fallen vpon hire heade, she haue put her to shame: because the LORDE hath chastened her for hire greate wickednes: hire children are ledde awaye captiue before their enemie.

1 All the bewte of the daughter of Sion is awaye, hire princes are become like wethers, that fyünde no pasture. They are drynne awaye before their enemie, so that they haue no more power.

Now doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of hire misery, yee the ioye of pleasure she hath had in tymes past: seyenge hire people is brought downe thorow the power of their enemie, there is no man for to helpe hire: hire enemies shake lokinge at her and laugh hire Sabbath dayes to scorne.

Jerusalem synned euer more, for hire eyes had sene hire fylthinesse. Yee she sigheth, and is a shamed of herselfe.

Hir skyrtes are defyled, she remembred not what wolde folowe: therfore is hire fall so greate, and there is no man to comforte hire. O LORDE, considre my trouble, for myne enemie hath the vpper honde.

The enemie hath put his honde to all the precious things that she had, yee euens before hire eyes came the Heithen in and out of the Sanctuary: whom thou hast forbydden to come within thy congregacion.

All hire people seke their bred with heynes, loke what precious thinge euer man hath, that geneth he for meate, to saue his life. Considre (O LORDE) and se, how vyle I am become.

O ye all that goe forby, beholde and se, if there be eny sorowe like vnto myne, when the LORDE hath troubled me, in the daye of his fearefull wrath.

From aboute hath he sent downe a fyre, in to mine bones and chastened me: he hath layed a net for my fete, and throwne me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mounnynge.

The yocke of my transgression is come at the last, with his honde hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my neck. My strength is gone: the LORDE hath deliuered me in to those hondes, wherout I can not quyte myself.

The LORDE hath destroyed all the mighty men, that were in me. He hath proclaimed a feast, to slaughter all my best men. The LORDE hath troden downe the daughter of Iuda, like as it were in a wyne presse.

Therfore do I wepe, and myne eyes gushe out of water: for the comforter that shulde quycken me, is farre fro me. My children are dryuen awaye, for why? the enemie hath gotten the ouer honde.

Sion casteth out hire hordes, and there is no man to comforte her. The LORDE hath layed the enemies rounde aboute Iacob, and Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous woma, in the mynddest of them.

The LORDE is righteous, for I haue provoked his countenance vnto anger. O take hede all ye people, and considre my heynes: My maydens and my yonge men are led awaye in to captiuyte.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me:) for my prestes and counclers, but they perished: euens while they sought for meate, to saue their lyues.

Considre (O LORDE) how I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my herte turneth aboute in me, and I am full of heynes. The swearde hurte me without, and within I am like vnto death.

They heare my mounnynge, but there is none that wil comforte me. All myne enemiees have herde of my trouble, and are glad therof, because thou hast done it. But thou shalt brynge forth the tyme, when they also shal be like vnto me.

From the shall come all their aduersite: thou shal plucke them awaye, euë as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wickednesse. For my sorow is very greate, and my herte is heuy.

The iij. Chapter.

ALAS, how hath the LORDE darckened the daughter of Sion? so sore in his wrath? As for the honour of Israel, he hath casten it downe from heauen: How happeneth it, that he remembred not his owne fote stole, when he was angrie?
The LORDE hath cast downe all the glory of Iacob without eny fauoure: All the strong places of the daughter Iuda hath he broken in his wrath, & throwne them downe to the grounde: hir kyngdome & hir prynces hath he suspended.

In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken all the horne of Israel: he hath with drawe his right honde from the enemie: yee a flame of fyre is kyndled in Iacob, & hath consumed vp all rounde aboute.

He hath bent his bowe like an enemie, he hath fastened his right honde as an adversary: and every thing that was pleasauit to se, he hath smytyn it downe. He hath poured out his wrath like a fyre, in to the tabernacle of the daughter Sion.

The LORDE is become, like as it were an enemie, he hath cast downe Israel & all his places: yee all his stronge holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the daughter of Iuda with moch sorow and heuyness.

Hir tabernacle (which was like a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: hir hie solcpe feaseth hath he put downe. "The LORDE hath brought it so to passe, that the hie solempne feaseth and Sabbathes in Sion, are elene forgotté. In his heuy displeasure hath he made the kyng & prestes to be despised.

The LORDE hath forsaken his owne aulter, & is wroth with his owne Sanctuary, & hath geuen the walles of their towres in to the bondes of the enemie. Their enemies made a noysse in the house of the LORDE, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

The LORDE thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter Sion, he spred out his lyne, & drewe not in his honde, till he had destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles together.

Hir portes are casten downe to the grounde, hir barres are broken & smytyn in sonder: hir kyng & prynces are caried awaye to the Gethes.\(^a\) They haue nether lawe ner prophetes, ner yet eny vision from the LORDE.

The Senatours of the daughter Sion sitt vpoun the grounde in sylence, they have strowed ashes vpoun their heads, and gyrded them selues with sack cloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe their heads to the grounde.

"Myne eyes begynne to sayle me thorow wepinge, my body is disquieted, my leuer is poured vpon the earth, for the greate hurte of my people, seyne the children and babes dyd swowne in the stretes of the cite.

Euen when they speake to their mothers: where is meate and drynke? for whyle they so sayde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cite, like as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in their mothers bosome.

What shal I saye of the (O thou daughter Jerusalem) to whom shall I licker the? To whom shal I cypare the (O thou daughter Sion) to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is like a mayne see, who maye heale the?

Thy prophetes haue loked out vayne & foolish thinges for the,\(^b\) they haue not shewed the of thy wickednesse, to kepe the from captiuyte: but haue ouerladen the, and thorow falsede seaterd the abrode.

All they that goe by the, clappe thir hondes at the: hissinge and waggynge their heads vpon the daughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the cite that men call so sayre, wherin the whole londe reijoseth?

All thine enemies gape vpon the, whisperinge and bytinghe their teth, sayenge: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we loked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it.

The LORDE hath fulfilled the thinge, that he was pursed to do: and perfourmed that he had deuyed longe ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thine adversary to trypumpe over the, and set vp the horne of thine enemie.

Let thine hert crie vnto the LORDE, O thou cite of the daughter Sion: 'let thy teares rúne downe like a ryuer daye \(\text{&}\) night: rest not, & let not the aple of thine eye leaue of.

Stonde vp, and make thy prayer in the first watch of the night, pour out thine hert like water before the LORDE: lift vp thine hondes, for the lyues of thy yonge children, that dye of honger in the stretes.

Beholde (O LORDE) & considere, why hast thou gathered me vp so clene? Shal the women then eate their owne frute, euken children of a spanne longe? Shal the prestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuary of the LORDE?

Yonge & olde lye behinde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens & yonge men are slayne with the swearde: whom thou in the \(^a\) Iere. 7. b. \(^b\) Iere. 32. b. \(^c\) Tren. 1. c. \(^d\) Iere. 3. b.

daye of thy wrothfull indignacion hast put to death: Yee euene thou hast put them to death, \( \text{a} \) not spared them.

My neighbours that are rounde aboute me, hast thou called, as it were to a feast day: so that in the dayes of the LORDEs wrath none escaped, nether was any left behinde. Those that I had brought vp \( \text{a} \) norished, hath myne enemy destroyed

The iii. Chapter.

I AM the ma, that (thorow the rod of his wrath) have experience of misery.

He slew me forth, and led mee: yee in to darknesse, but not in to light.

Agaynst me only he turnd his hunde, \( \text{a} \) layeth it euere vpon me.

My flesh \( \text{a} \) my skynne he made olde, and my bones hath he brussed.

He hath buylde rounde aboute me, \( \text{a} \) closed me in with galle and trouayle.

He hath set me in darknesse, as they that be deede for euere.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, \( \text{a} \) hath layed heuy lynckes vpon me.

Though I crie \( \text{a} \) call piteously, yet earthe he not my prayer.

He hath stopped \( \text{a} \) my wayes with foure squared stones, \( \text{a} \) made my pathes croked.

He layeth waite for me like a Bere, and as a lyon in a hole.

He hath marred my wayes, and brok\( \text{e} \) me in peaces, he hath layed me waist altogether.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marck to shute at.

The arrowes of his quyer hath he shot, euene in to my reynes.

I am laught to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all \( \text{y} \) dyaye lode.

He hath fyllde me with byttenesse, \( \text{a} \) geuen me wormwod to dryne.

He hath smyttyn my teth in peaces, \( \text{a} \) rollde me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good things.

I thought in my self: I am ydone, there is no hope for me in the LORDE.

O remembre yet my myserie and my trouble, the wormwod and the gall.

Yee thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I co\( \text{s} \)idre these things in my hert, I get a hope agayne.

Namely, that the mercies of the LORDE are not clene gone, \( \text{a} \) that his louyng kyndnesse ceasseth not.

His faithfullnes is greate, and remeeth itself as the moronyng.

The LORDE is my porcion (saieth my soule) therfore wil I hope in hym.

O how good is the LORDE vnto the\( \text{e} \), that put their trust in hym, and to the soule that seke after hym?

O how good is it with stilnesse to wate and tarie, for the health of the LORDE?

O how good is it for a man, to take the yock vpon him from his youth \( \text{v} \) ?

He sitteth alone, he holdeth him still, and dalleth quietly by him self.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, \( \text{y} \) (per case) there happen to be any hope.

He offreth his cheke to the smyter, he will be content with reproves.

For the LORDE wil not forsake for euer.

But though he do cast of, yet (acordinge to) \( \text{y} \) multitude of his mercies he receaueyth to grace agayne.

For he doth not plague, \( \text{a} \) cast out the children of men from his hert.

To tredde the presoners of the earth vnnder his fete.

To moue the judgment of man before the most highest.

To condemne a man in his cause: The LORDE hath no pleasure in soch thinges.

What is he then that saieth: there shulde somethings be done without the LORDES commaundement?

Out of the mouth of the most highest goeth not euell and good.

Wherfore then murmurth the lyuinge man? let hym murmoure at his owne synne.

LORDE.

Let vs louke well vpon oure owne waies, \( \text{a} \) remembre oure selues, and turne agayn to \( \text{y} \) LORDE.

Let vs lift \( \text{v} \) oure hertes with oure hondes vnto the LORDE, that is in heauen.

We haue bene dyssemblers \( \text{a} \) haue offended, wilt thou therfore not be intreated?

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, \( \text{a} \) persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without euy favoure.

Thou hast hyd thy self in a cloude, that oure prayer shulde not go thorow.

Thou hast made vs outcastes, and to be despysed amongethe Heithen.
The children of Sion that were all waye in honoure,
most precious golde:
how are they now become like the erthen vessels which be made with the potters honde?

The Lamys ordered that were their yonge ones suck with bare brestes: but the daughter of my people is cruel, and dwelleth in the wylder-nesse: like the Striches.

The tonges of the suckinge children, cleue to rose of their mouthes for very thirst.
The yonge children axe bred, but there is noman, that geneth them.

They that were won to faire delicatly, perishe in the stretes: they that afores were brought vp in purple, make now moch of dongs.

The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater, then wickednesse of Sodome,
that sodely was destroyed, and not taken with hondes.

Hir absteyners (or Nazarees) were whyter then snowe myrkye: their coloure was fresh read as the Corall, their beutie like the Saphire.

But now their faces are very black: In so mauch, that thou shuldest not knewe them in the stretes. Their skyme cleueth to theirbones,
It is wythered, and become like a drye stock.
They that be slayne with the swearde, are happier, then soch as dye of honger, and perisse awaye famishinge for the frutes of the selde.

The womc (which of nature are pitefull) haue sodden their owne children with their hondes: that they might be their meate, in miserable destruction of the daughter of my people.

The LORDE hath perfourmed his heuy wrath: a he hath poured out the furiousnes of his displeasure. He hath kindled a fyre in Sion, which hath consumed the foundacions therof.

Nether the kings of the earth, ner all ihabitours of the world, wolde haue believed, that the enemie of adversitie shulde haue come in at the gates of the cite of Ierusale.

Which neoertheles is come to passe for synne of hir prophetes, and for the wickednes of hir prestes, haue shed innocentes bloude within her.

So that these blynde men wolde stomblinge in the stretes, and stayned them selues with bloude, which els wolde touche no bloody cloth.
The Lamentations of Jeremy.

But they cried vnto euery maidie, for the staynynge, awaye, get you hewe, touch it not. Yee (sayde they) ye must be brent, ye must dwell amonge the Gentiles, & byde no longer here. The countenaunce of the LORDE hath banished them, & shall never loke more vpon them: For they them selues neither regarded the prestes, nor pitied their elders.

Wherfore yet ooure eyes sayle vs, whyle we loke for vayne helpe: seynge we be euere waitynge vpon a people, that can do vs no good. They laye so sharpe waite for vs, that we can not go safe vpon the stretes: for oure ende is come, oure dayes are fulfilled, oure ende is here.

Oure persecutors are swifter then the Aegles of the ayre: they followed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes, and layed wait for vs in the wildeishnesse.

The very breth of oure mouth: a euene the anointing LORDE himselfe shalbe taken in oure synnes, of whom we saye: Vnder his shadowe we shalbe preserved amonge the Heithens.

And thou (O doughter Edom) that dweltest in the londe of Hus, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shal come vnto the also, which whiche thou suppost of, thou shalt be dronck.

Thy synne is wel punished (O thou doughter Sion) he shall not suffer the to be caried awaye any more. But thy wickednesse (O doughter Edom) shal be vset, and for thy synnes sake, he shal lede the in to captiuyte.

The 2. Chapter.

CALL to remembrance (O LORDE) what we haue suffered, cosidre and se oure colucion. Oure heritance is turned to the strangers, & oure houses to the aleauntes. We are become carefull and fatherlesse, and oure mothers are as the wydowes. We are fayne to drynke oure owne water for moneye, and oure owne wod must we bye with moneye. Oure neckes are vnder persecucion, we are weery, and haue no rest.

Afore tyme we yielded oure selues to the Egipcians, and now to the Assirians, only that we might haue bred ynoough. Oure fathers (which now are gone) haue synned, & we must beare their wickednesse. Seruauentes haue the rule of vs, and no man deluyereth vs out of their hōdes. We must get oure lyuynghe with the parell of oure lyues, because of the drouth of the wildeishnesse.

Oure skynne is as it had bene brent in an ouen, for very sore honger. The wyues are raueshed in Sion, & the maydens in the cities of luda. The prynces are hanged vp with the honde of the enemies, they haue not spared the olde sage men, they haue taken yonge mens lyues from them, and the boyes are hanged vp vpone trees. The elders syt no more vnder the gates, and the yonge men vse no more playenge of Musick. The lyoe of oure herte is gone, oure mery queere is turned in to mourninge. The garlande of oure heade is fallen: alas, that euerm we synned so sore.

Therfore oure hert is full of heuyynesse, & oure eyes dymme: because of the hill of Sion that is destroyed, In so much, that the foxes runne vpone it. But thou (O LORDE) that remaynest for euermore, and thy seate worlde with out ende: Wherfore wilt thou still forget vs, and forsake vs so long? O LORDE: Turne thou vs vnto the, & so shal we be turned.

Renue oure daies as in olde tyme, for thou hast now banished vs longe ynoough, and bene sore displeased at vs.

The ende of the Lamentacions of Jeremy.

The Prophet Baruch.

What Baruch containeth.

Chap. I. Baruch readeth the boke before the kyng and all the people, which sende money to Jerusalem.

Chap. II. They knowlege, that they haue undeserd punishment: God promyseth them forueneesse.

Chap. III. They praye hartely beinge in preson, and he exorteth them to amende.

Chap. III. A sermon to the people, with an exortacion to pacience.

Chap. V. He conforteth them, and sheweth the vocacion of the Heithen.

Chap. VI. A copie of the epistle, that Ieremy sent to the Iewes, which were led awaye presoners vnto Babilon.

These are the wordes of the boke, that Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia, the sonne of Sedecheas, the sonne of Sedei, the sonne of Helchia, wrote at Babilon in the fifth yeare the seueth daye of the moneth: "what tyme as the Caldees wanne Ierusalem and brent it.

The first Chapter.

And Baruch dyd rede the wordes of this boke, that Ichonias the sonne of Ioachim kyng of Iuda might heare: and in the presence of all the people, that were come to heare the boke: yee and before all the noble kinges sonnes, before the lorde of the councell and elders: and before the whole people, from the lowest vnto the hyest: before all them that dwelt at Babilon, by the water of Sodi. Which when they herde it, wepte, fasted, and prayed before the Lorde.

They made a collection also of money, according to euery mans power, and sent it to Ierusalem vnto Ioachim the sonne of Helchia the sonne of Salon prest, with other prestes: and to all the people which were with him at Ierusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornaments of the temple of the Lorde (that were taken awaye out of the temple) that they might brynge them agayn in to the londe of Iuda, the x. daye of the moneth Siban:

namely, syluer vessel, (which Sedecheas the sonne of Iosias kinge of Iuda had made.) After that Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon had taken Ichonias, with all his prynces, lorde, and all the people, and led them captuye from Ierusalem vnto Babilon.

And they sayde: "Beholde, we haue sent you money, to bye you burntofferynges and incense withall: make you vnleuended bred, and offer for synne vpon the aultor of the Lorde our God." And praye for the prosperite of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon, and of Baltasar his sonne: the dayes maye be vpon earth, as the dayes of heauen: that God also maye geue vs strength, and lighten oure eyes: that we maye lyue vnder the defence of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon, and vnder the protection of Baltasar his sonne: that we maye longe do them seruice, and fynde fauoure in their sight. Praye for vs also vnto the Lorde our God, for we haue synned agaynst the Lorde our God, and vnto this daye is not his wrath turned yet awaye from vs. And se that ye rede this boke (which we haue sent vnto you to be rehearced in the temple of the Lorde) vpon the hye dayes, and at tyme convenient.

Thus shal ye saye: "The Lorde our God is righteous, but we are worthy of coffusion & shame: like as it is come to passe this daye, vnto all Iuda, to euery one dwelleth at Jerusalem: to oure kinges, prynces, prestes, prophets vnto oure fathers. We haue synned before the LORDE oure God, we haue not put oure trust in him, neuer euene his credence: we haue not obeyed him, we haue not herkene vnto the voyce of the LORDE oure God, to walke in the commandementes that he gaue vs. Sens the daye that he brought oure forefatheres out of the londe of Egipte vnto this present daye, we haue bene euere a mysbeleuyng and an unfaithfull people vnto the LORDE oure God: destroyenge oure selues vnterly, and shreinekinge backe, that we shulde not heare his voyce.

Wherefore there are come vpone vs great plages dyuerse curses, like as the LORDE deuyngede by Moses his seruant: which brought oure forefatheres out of the londe of Egipte, to geue vs a lode, that floweth with mylke and honey, like as it is to se this daye. Neuertheles, we haue not herkene vnto the voyce of the LORDE oure God, acordinge to all the wordes of the LORDE oure God, whom he sent vnto vs and to oure rulers: but euery man followed his owne mynde and wicked ymaginacion: to offre vnto strange goddes, and to do euell in the sight of the LORDE oure God.

The iij. Chapter.

For the which cause the LORDE oure God hath perfourned his deuyngede, wherof he certified vs, and oure heads that ruled in Ierusalem: yee and oure kynges, oure princes, with all Israel and Iuda. And soch plages hath the LORDE brought vpo vs, as neuer came to passe vnder the heauens: like as it is fulfilled in Hierusalem, acordinge as it is written in the lawe of Moses: that a man shulde eate flesh of his owne sonne, the flesh of his owne daughter. Morover, he hath deuynged them in to the hondes of all the kynges, are rounde aboute vs (to be confounded and desolate) scatered the abrode in all londes of nauicions. Thus are we brought beneth aboue, for we haue synned against the LORDE oure God, not bene obedient vnto his voyce. Therfore the LORDE oure God is rightuous, we with oure fathers (as reason is) are brought to opè shame, as it is to se this daye. And as for these plagges are come vpon vs allready, the LORDE had deuyngede thee for vs: yet wolde we not praye vnto the LORDE our God, we might euery ma turne fro his vnogodly wayes. So the LORDE hath caused soch plages to come vpon vs, for he is rightuous in all his worikes, which he hath comanded vs: which we also haue not done, ner harkened vnto his voyce, for to walke in his commandementes of the LORDE, he haue gonn vnto vs.

And nowe the LORDE God of Israel, thou that hast brought thy people out of the londe of Egipte with a mightie honde, with tokens and wodres, with thy greatie power ad outstretched arme: and hast gotten thy self a name, as it is come to passe this daye: O the LORDE oure God, we haue synned, we haue done wickedly, we haue behaued oure selues vnogodly in all thy rightuousnes. Turne thy wrath fro vs (we beseeke the) for we are but a fewe lefte amonge the Heathen, where thou hast scatered vs. Heare oure prayers (o the LORDE) oure peticions, bringe vs out of captiuitie, for thine owne sake: get vs fauoure in the sight of thee, which haue led vs awaye: all lodes maye knowe, that thou art the LORDE oure God, and that Israel and his generacion calleth vpon thy name.

O the LORDE, loke downe fro thy holy house vpon vs: enclyne thine eare, heare vs. For the deed, the LORDE is gone downe to their graues, whose soules are out of their bodies, ascribe vnto the LORDE nether prayse nether rightuousmakinge: but the soule that is vexed for the multitude of his synnes, which goeth on heneul and weakely, whose eyes begynne to fayle: yee such a soule ascribeth prayse and rightuousnesse vnto the LORDE. O the LORDE, we pourc out oure prayers before thee, and requeymeryc in thy sight, O the LORDE oure God: not for eny godlynesse off oure forefatheres, but because thou hast sent out thy wrath indignacion vpon vs: acordinge as thou dyest threaten vs, by thy seruauites the prophetes, sayenge:

Thus sauyth the LORDE: Bowe downe youre sholders and necke, and serue the kyng of Babilon, so shal ye remayne still in the londe, that I gaue vnto youre fathers. Yff ye will not do this, ner heare the voyce of the LORDE oure God, to serue the kyng of Babilon: I shall destroye you in the cities of...
Iuda, within Ierusalem and without. I will also take from you the voice off myrth and the voice of ioye, the voice of the brydegrone and the voice of the byrdye, ad there shall no man dwell more in the londe. But they wolde not herken vnto your voice, to do the kyngye of Babilon seruyce: and therfore hast thou perfourmed the wordes, that thou spakst by thy seruanthes the prophetes: namely, that the bones of oure kynges and the bones of oure fathers shulde be traslated out of their place.

And lo, now are they layde out in the heate of thy Sonne, in the colde of thy night, ad deed in greate mysery: with hunger, with swearde, with pestilence are cleene cast forth. As for the tẹple wherin thy name was called vpon thou hast layde it waist, as it is to se this daye: for the wickednes of the house of Israel thou the house of Iuda. O LORDE oure God, thou hast intreated vs after all thy goodnes accordinge to all thy greate louinge mercy of thyne, like as thou spakst by thy seruanute Moses, in the daye when thou didest comaunde him, to wryte thy lawe before the children of Israel, sayenge: Ye will not herke vnto my voyce, the shal this greate multitude be turned in to a very small people, for I wil scarte the abrode. Not withstodeinge I am sure, that this folke will not heare me: for it is an hardnecked people. But in thy lode of their captiuyte, they shall remembre them selues, lerne to knowe, I am the LORDE their God: when I geue thee an herte to vnderstode, ears to heare. Then shal they praye me in the lode of their captiuyte, thinke vpon my name. Then shal they turne them fro their harde bakes, from their vyngodlynes: Then shal they remembre the thynges, happened vnto their forefathers, which synned agaynst me. So will I bringe them agayne in to the londe, which I promised with an ooth vnto their fathers: Abraha, Isaac a Iacob: they shal be lوردes of it, yee I wil increace the, and not minysh the. And I wil make another covenant with them: soch one as shal endure for euer: namely, I will be their God, and they shalbe my people: and I wil nomore drynte my people the children off Israel, out of the londe I have geue the.

A ND now o LORDE allnightie, thou God of Israel: oure soule ñ is in trouble, ooure sprete ñ is vexed, crieth vnto the: heare vs (o LORDE) haue pite vpon vs, for thou art a mercifull God: be gracious vnto vs, for we haue synuned before ñ. Thou endurest for euer, shulde we the vetterly perishe? O LORDE allnightie, thou God of Israel: Heare now ñ prayer of ñ, I will Israelites ñ of their childre, which haue synned before ñ, ñ not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE their God, for the which cause these plages hange now vpó vs. O LORDE, remembre not ñ wickednes of oure forefathers, but thinke vpó thy power ñ name now at this tyme: for thou art ñ LORDE oure God, ñ (o LORDE) wil we praye. For thou hast put thy feare i oure hartes, to ñ intêt ñ we shulde call vpon thy name, ñ prayse ñ in oure captiuyte: ñ and ñ we might turne from the wickednesse of oure forefathers, ñ synned before the.

Beholde, we are yet this daye in oure captiuyte, where as thou hast scatred vs, to be an abominacion, curse, and synne: like as it hath happened vnto oure fathers also, because of all their wickednesse and departynge from the.

O Israel, heare the commandementes of life: pondre them well with thine eares, that thou mayest lerne wysdome. But how happeneth it Israel, that thou art in thyne enemies lode? thou art waxen olde in a strange countyre, and defyed with the deed. Why art thou become like them, that goe downe to their graues? Éuè because thou hast forsaken the well of wysdome. For ñ thou haddest walked in the waye of God, truly thou shuldest haue remayned still safe à thine owne londe.

A LORDE then when where discreacion is, where vertu is, where vnderstodeinge is: that thou mayest knowe also frô whence cometh longe life, à a necessary lyuynge, the light of the eyes quytenes. Who euer foude out hir place? or who came euer in to hir treasures?

Where are ñ princes of the Heithen become, and sooch as ruled the beestes vpon the earth? They that had their pastyme with the foules of the ayre, they that hoorded vp syluer and golde (wherin men trust so moch) and made no ende of their gatheringe? What is worth of them, that coyned siluer, and were so carefull, and coule not bringe their workes to passe? They be roeted out, and gone downe to hell, and other men are come vp in their stead: Younge men haue sene light, and dwelt vpone earth: but the waye of reformacion haue they not knowne, ner vnder-stonde the pathes thereof: neither haue their children receaued it, yee right farre is it fro the. It hath not bene herde of in the lode of Canaan, neither hath it bene seate at Themam.

The Agarennes sought after wisdome, but that which is earthly, like as the marchauntes of the lode doe. They of Themam are con-nynge also, they labour for wise and vnderstandinge: but y waye of true wisdome they knowe not, neither do they thinke vpone the pathes thereof. O Israel, how greate is the house of God? and how large is the place of his possession? * Greate is he, and hath none ende: hye and vnmeasurable. What is become of those famous gianantes, that were so greate of bodies, and so worthy men of warre? Those had not the LORDE chosen, nether haue they the waye of reformacion, therfore were they destroyed: and for so much as they had no wisdome, they perished because of their foolishnesse.

Who hath gone vp in to heauen, to take wisdome there, * brought her downe fro the cloudes? Who hath gone ouer the see to fynde her, * hath chosen her aboue golde, and so brought her hither? No man knoweth the wayes of wisdome, nether is there eny y can seke out his pathes. But he that woteth all thynges, knoweth her, * he hath founde her out with his foreknowlege. *This same is he which prepared the earth at the begynnynge, * fyld it with all maner of foules * and beastes. When he sendeth out the light, it goeth: * whiche he called it agayne, it obeyeth hi with feare. The starres kepe their watch, * geue their light, yee and y gladly. When he calleth them, they saye: here we be. And so with earfulness they shewe light vnto him * made the. This is oure God, * ther shall none other be copared vnto him: It is he, * hath founde out all wisdome, * and hath geuen her vnto Iacob his seruaunt, * to Israel his beloued. *Afterwarde dyd he shewe himself vpon earth, and dwelt amounge men.

T HIS is the boke off the commaundementes of God, and the lawe * endureth for ever. All they * kepe it, shall come to life: but soch as forsake it, shall come to death. Turne the o Iacob, and take holde of it: walke by this waye, thorow his brightnesse and shyne. Geue not thyne honour to another, and thy worshiphe to a straunge people. * O Israel, how happie are we, seige that God hath shewed vs soch thynges as are pleasant vnto him? Be of good cheare, thou people of God, o thou awnei et Israel. Now are ye solde amonge the Heithen, howbeit not for youre vetter destruc: but because ye prouked God the LORDE to wrath and displeasure, therfore were ye defuyered vnto youre enemies: For ye displeased the euernastinge God that made you, offerynge vnto deuels and not God. Ye haue forgotte him that brought you vp, ad youre nurse haue ye greued, o Ierusalem.

When she sawe that the wrath off God was commynge vpon you: she sayde: Herkë o ye that dwell aboute Sion, for God hath brought me in to greate heynesse: ad why? I se the captiuyte of my people, of my sones and daughters, which the euernastinge God will brynge vpon them. With ioye dyd I norish them, but now must I leane them with wepyng and sorrow.

Let no man reioyce ouer me wyddowe ad forsaken: which for the synnes my children, am desolate of every man. For why, they departed from the lawe of God: they wolde not knowe his rightousnes, ner walke in the waye of his commaundementes: and as for the pathes off the treuth and godlynesse, they had no lust to go in them.

O ye dwellers aboute Sion: come, and let vs call to remembrance the captiuyte, that the euernastinge God hath brought vpon my sones and my daughters. He hath brought a people vpon them from farre, an vncurteous people, and of a straunge liguage: which nether regarde the olde, ner pytte the yonge.

These haue caried awaie the deare beloued of my wyddowes, leaunyng me alone, both desolate and childlesse. But alas, what can I helpe you? Now he * hath brought these plages vpon you, delyuer you also fro the hondes of youre enemies.

Go youre waye (O my children) go youre waye: for I am desolate and forsaken. I have put of the clothinge of peace, and put vpon me the sackcloth off prayer, and for my tyme I will call vpon the most hyest. Be off good cheare, o my children: "erie vnto the LORDE, and he shall delyuer you from the power of the prynces, youre enemies.

For verely, I haue euery a good hope off youre prosperous health: yee a very gladnesse is come vpon me from the holy one, because of the mercy that yeshall haue ofoure euerlastinge Saniuere.

With mournynge and weepinge dyd I let you go fro me, but with ioye and perpetuall gladnesse, shall the LORDE brynge you agayne vnto me. Like as the neibour of Sion sawe youre captuyte from God, Euè so shal they also se shortly youre health in God, which shal come on you with greate honour and euerlastinge worship.

O my children, suffer paciety the wrath that shal come vpon you, For the enemie hath persecuted the, but shortly thou shalt se his destrucccon, and shalt treade vpon his necke. My derlinges haue gone rough hardy wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is seared abrode with the enemies. But be of good copyte (o my children) a crye vnto the LORDE: For he that led you awaye, hath you yet in remembrance: and like as ye haue bene mynded to swarue from youre God, so shal ye now endureoure youre selues x. tymes more, to turne agayne, and to seeke him. For he that hath brought these plages vpon you, shall brynge you euerlastinge ioye agayne with youre health. Take a good herte vnto the, o Ierusalam: for he which gaue y that name, exorthe the so to do.

'The wicked doers that now put the to trouble, shall perish: and sooch as haue reioyse at thy fall, shalbe punished. The cities whom thy children serue, and that haue caried awaye thy sonses, shalbe correccote. For like as they be now glad of thy decaye, so shal they mourne in their owne destrucccon. The ioye off their multitude shalbe taken awaye ad their chare shalbe turned to sorowe. For a fyre shal fall vpon them from the euerlastinge God, longe to endure: and it shalbe inhabited of devuels for a greate season.
in Babiló, goddes of golde, of syluer, of wodd and of stone: borne vpon mens shulders, to cast out a fearfulnes before the Heithen. But loke that ye do not as the other: be not ye afrayed, and let not the feare of them overcome you.

Therefore, when ye se the multitude of people worshippinge them behinde & before, saye ye in youre hertes: O LORDE, it is thou, that oughtest only to be worshipped? Myne angel also shall be with you, and I myself will care for youre soules. As for the tymbre of those goddes, carpeter hath polisshd them: yee gylded be they, laying ouer with syluer, yet are they but vayne thinges, can not speake. Like as a wench loueth paramours is trymly deckte, even so are these made hanged with golde. Crownes of golde verely haue their goddes vpon their heads: so the prestes selues take the golde and syluer from them, put it to their owne vses: yee they geue of the same vnto harlottes, &d trymme their whores withall: Agayne, they take it from the whores, and decke their goddes therwith. Yet can not these goddes deluyer them selues from rust and mothes. Whë they haue couered them with clothynge off purple, they wype their faces for the dust of the temple, wherof is their amoge thë. One hath a sceptre in his honde, as though he were judge of the countre: yet can he not slaye soch as offende him. Another hath a swearde or an axe in his honde, for all that, is he nether able to defende him selfe from batayll, nor fro murtherers.

By this ye maye vnderstonde, that they be no goddes: therfore se ye nether worshippe them, nere feare them. For like as a vessel y ye a man vseth, is nothinge worth when it is broken, even so is it with their goddes. When they be set vp in the temple, their eyes be full of dust, thorow the fete of those that come in. And like as y dores are shut in roude aboute vpó him, y hath offended the kinge: Or as it were a deed body kepte besyde the graue: Euen so the prestes keste the dores with barres and lockes, lest their goddes be spoyled with robbers. They set vp cadelis before thë (yee verely and y many) wherof they can not se one, but even as blockes, so stonde they in the temple. It is sayde, y the serpentes and wormes, which come off the earth, gnawe out their hertes, eatinge them their clothes also, and yet they fele it not. Their faces are blacke, thorow the smoke y is in the temple. The oules, sylowes y byrdes fle vpon them, yee and the cattes runne ouer their heads.

By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore feare them not. The golde that they haue, is to make them bentifull: for all that, excepte some body dight off their rust, they wil geue no shyne: and when they were cast in to a fourme, they felt it not. They are bought for money, and haue no breth off life within them. They must be borne vpon mens shulders, as those that haue no fete: whereby they declare vnto men, that they be nothinge worth. Confounded be they then, that worshippe them. For yf they fall to the grounde, they can not ryse vp agayne of the selues: Yee though one helpe them vp and set them right, yet are they not able to stonde alone: but must haue propses set vnder them, like deed men. As for the thinge that is offred vnto them, their prestes sell it, &d abuse it: yee the prestes wyues take therof, but vnto the sicke and poore they geue nothinge of it, the women with child are the mestrous laye hondes of their offerenges. By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore be not ye afrayde of them. From whence cometh it thë, that they be called goddes? The women syt before the goddes of syluer, golde and wodd, and the prestes syt in their temples, hanynge open clothes, whose heads and beeredes are shauen, and haue nothinge vpon their heads: roaringe and cryenge vpon their goddes, as men do at the feast, when one is deed.

The prestes also take awaye the garmentede of the ymagess, and decke their wyues selues withall. Whether it be good or euell eu any man do vnto them, they are not able to recom pense it: they can nether set vp a kynge, ner put him downe. In like maner they maye nether gene riches, ner reward euell. Though a man make a vowe vnto them ad kepe it not, they wil not requyre it. They can not restore a blinde më to his sight, ner helpe eu any at his nede. They ca slewe no mercye to the wyddowe, ner do good to eu fathers. Their goddes of wodd, stone, golde & syluer, are but euen as other stones, y be hewè of y mountayne. They y worshippe thë, shall be cofounded. How shulde they then be taken for goddes? yee how darre men call the goddes? And though the caldees worshiped the not, hearinge they were but domme the could not speake: Yet they them selues offer unto Bel, and woldeayne have him to speake: as who saye, they could fele, y maye not moue. But when these me come to vnderstandinge, they shall forsake them, for their goddes haue no felinge. A greate sorte of women gyrded with coardes, yst in the stretes, a burne oluye beries. Now yf one off them be conveyed awaye, a lye with eny soch as come by: she casteth hir neibourresse in the theth, because she was not so worthyly reputed, ner hir coorde broken. What so euer is done for them, it is but in vayne ad lost: How maye it the be thought or sayde, y they are goddes? Carpenters a goldsmythes make the, nether be they eny other thinges, but euen what the worke men wil make of them. Yee the goldsmithes them selues that make the, are of no longe cöytnaunce: How shulde then the thinges that are made of them, be goddes? Vayne theryfore are the thinges (yee very shame is it) that they leane behinde the for their posterite. For as soone as there cometh eny warre or plage vpon the, then the prestes ymagyn, where they maye hyde the selues with the. How can men thynke then, that they be goddes, which nether maye defende them selues from warre, ner deluyer the fro mysfortune? For seyngye they be but of wodde, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people a kynges shal knowe herafter, that they be but vayne thinges: yee it shalbe openly declared, that they be no goddes: but euen the very workes off més hodes, a that God hath nothinge to do with the. They can set no kynges in the londe ner geue rayne vnto men. They can gene no sentence of a matter, neither defende the londe fro wronge: For they are not able to do so moch as a crowe, that flyeth betwixte heuen and earth.

Wherethere happeneth a fyre in to the house of those goddes of wodde, of syluer and of golde, the prestes wil escape a same the selues, but the goddes burne as the balkes therin. They can not withstode eny kyngye or batell: how maye it then be thought or graunted, that they be goddes? Moroner, these goddes of wodde, of stone, of golde a syluer maye nether defende the selues from theues ner robbers: yee a very wicked are stronger the they. These stryfe them out off their apparell, that they be clothed withall, these take their golde a syluer fro the, and so get the awaye: yet eii they not helpe the selues. Therfore it is much better for a man, to be a kinge a so to shewe his power: or els a profitable vessel in a house, wherein he a oweth it, might haue pleasure: yee or to be a dore in a house, to keppe soch thinges safe as be therin: the to be soch a vayne god. The Sone, the Mone a all the starrles when they gene their shyne a light, are obedient, a do men good: When the lightenyng glistreth, all is cleare: The wynde bloweth in euery countrie, a wher God cómaundeth the clouds to go rounde about the whole worlde, they do as they are bydden: when the fyre is sent downe fro abone a cómaund, it burneth vp hilles ad woddes: But as for those goddes, they are not like one off these thynge, nether in beuty ner strength. Therfore me shulde not thynke, ner saye that they be goddes, seyngye they ca nether gene sentence in iudgment, ner do men good. For so much now as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare them not: For they can nether speake euell nner good of kynges. They ca shewe no tokens in heaué for a Heithen, nether shyne as the Sone, ner gene light as the Mone: yee a unreasonable beasts are better then they: for they can get the vnder the rofe, and do them selues good: So can ye be certified by no maner off meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare the not. For like as a frayboggarde in a garden off Cucumbers kepeth nothinge, euern so are their goddes of wodde, of syluer a golde: and like as a whyte thorne in an orcharde, that euery byrde sytteth vpon: yee like as a deede body that is cast in the darkke, Euen so is it with those goddes of wodde, syluer and golde. By the purple and scarlet which they haue vpon the, ad soone faydeth awaye, ye maye vnder- stonde, that they be no goddes: yee they them selues shal be cósumed at the last, which shall be a greate coñfucion of the londe. Blessed is the godly man, y hath no ymages a worshippeth none, for he shalbe farre from reprofe.

The first Chapter.

It chaused, in the xxx. yeare the fifth daye off the fourth Moneth, that I was amonge the presoners by the ryer off Cobar: where the heauens opened, I sawe a vision of God. Now the fifth daye off the Moneth made out the fift yeare off kyngs Ioachims captiuyte. At the same tyme came my worde off the LORDE vnto Ezeciel the sonne off Buzi prest, in the londe off the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the honde off the LORDE came vp vpon him. And I loked: I beholde, a stormy wynde came out off the north with a greate cloude full of fyre, which with his glistre lightened all rounde aboute.

And in myndest off the fyre it was all cleare, and as it were the licknesse of foure beastes, which were fashioned like a man: saunyge, that every one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Their legges were straight, but their fete were like bullockes fete, and they glistred, as if it had bene fayre scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon all the foute corners, they had mens hondes. Their faces and their wynges were towarde the foute corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euery touched another. When they wente, they turned them not aboute: but each one wente straight forwarde.

Vpon the right side off these foute, their faces were like the face off a man and the face off a Lyon: But vpon the left side, they had the face off an oxe and the face off an Aegle.

Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboute: so that two wynges off one touched euery two wynges off another, and with the other two they covered their bodie. Evry one when it wente, it wente straight forwarde.

Where as the spryte led them, thither they wente, and turned not aboute in their goynte.

The fashion and countenauce of the beastes was like hote coales off fyre, euyn as though burnyng cresshettes had bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gane a glistre, and out off the fyre there wente lighteninge. Whē ȝ Æbo. beestes Ïe forwarde ȝ backwarde, one wolde have thought it had lightened. Now whē I had well considered the beestes, I sawe a worke off wethes Ïepon the earth with fourf faces also like the beestes.

The fashion ȝ worke of the whales was like the see. The foure whales were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whale in another. When one wente forwarde, they wente all four, and turned the ȝ not aboute ȝ their goinge. They were large, greate and horrible to loke vpon.

Their bodies were full off eyes rounde aboute them all four. Whē the beestes wete, the whales wente also with them: And when the beestes lift them selues vp from ȝ earth, the whales were lift vp also. Whytter so euer the sprete wente, thither wente they also, ȝ ȝ whales were lift vp ȝ followed the, for ȝ sprete of life was in the whales. When ȝ beestes wete forth, stode still, or lift them selues vp from the earth: then the whales also wente, stode still, ȝ were lift vp, for ȝ breth off life was in the whales.

Aboue ouer ȝ heads of the beestes there was a firmament, which was fashioned as it had bene off the most pure Cristall, ȝ that was spred out aboue vpon their heads: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layed abrode, one toward another, and two wynges covered the body of euerie beast. And when they wente forth, I herde the noysse off their wynges, like the noysse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce off the greate God, and a rushinge together as it were off an hooct off men. And when they stode still, they let downe their wynges. Now when they stode still, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the firmament, that was aboue their heads.

Aboue the firmament that was ouer their heads, there was the fashion off a seate, as it had bene made off Saphir. Apon the seate there sat one like a mā. I behelde him, and he was like a cleare light, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpwarde.

And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder ȝ loynes, me thought he was like a shyninge fyre, that geeneth light on euery syde. Yee, the shyne and glistre ȝ lightened rounde aboute, was like a raynbowe, which in a rayne daye appeareth in the clouds. Euē so was the similitude, wherin the glory off the LORDE apearde. Whē I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and herkened vpnto the voyce off him, that spake.

The iiij. Chapter.

THEN sayde he vnto me: Stonde vp vpon thy fete (O thou sonne of mā) and I will talke with the. And as he was commonygne with me, the sprete came in to me, and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I marcked the thinge, that he sayde vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde, thou sonne off man: I will sende the to the children off Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue takē parte agaynst me, and are runne awaye fro me: both they, and their forefathers, vnto this daye.

Yee I will sende ȝ vnto a people ȝ haue rough vysages and stiff stomackes: vnto whom thou shalt saye on this maner: This the LORDE God himself hath spoken, ȝ whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frawarde housholde) they maye knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amongeth them.

Therfore (thou sonne off man) feare the not, nether be aferayed off their wordes: for they shall rebell agaynst the, and despise ȝ. Yee thou shalt dwell amongeth scorpions: but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their lokes, for it is a frawarde housholde.

Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obediet or not, for they are obstinate. Therfore (thou sonne of man) obeye thou all thinges, that I saye vnto ȝ, and be not thou stiffnecked, like as they are a stiffnecked housholde. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hande, wherin was a closed boke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was written within and without, full off carefull mourninges: alas, and wo.

The iiij. Chapter.

THEN sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of mā, eate that, what so euer it be: Yee eate that closed boke, and go thy waye, and speake vnto the children off Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he gane me the boke for to eate, and sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy bely shal eate, and thy bowels
And he sayde vnto me : thou sonne of ma, get the sonne vnto the house off Israel, &d shewe thc y wordes, that I commaunde the: for I sende the not to a people that hath a strange, vknowne or harde speache, but vnto the house off Israel: Not to many nacions, which haue diuers speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstodest not: Neuertheles, yf I sent the to those people, they wolde folowe the: But the house off Israel wil not folowe y, for they wil not folowe me: "Yee all the house off Israel haue stiff foreheads and harde hertes. Behold, I will make thy face preuayle agaynst their faces, and harden thy forehead agaynst their foreheads: so that thy forehead shall be harder then an Adamit or flynt stone: that thou mayest feare them y lesse, and be lesse afrayed off them, for they are a frauwerde houshold.

He sayde morouer vnto me : thou sonne off man, take diligent hede to thine cares, to y wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thine herte: and go to the presoners off thy people, speake vnto them, &d saye on this maner:

Thus the LORDE God hath spokè: Whether ye heare, or heare not. With that, the sprete toke me vp. And I herde the noyse of a greate russhinge and remouynge off the most blissed glory off the LORDE out off his place.

I herde also the noyse off the wynges off the beestes, that russhed one agaynst another, yee and the raflynge off the whelles, that were by them, which russhinge & noyse was very greate.

Now when the sprete toke me vp, and caried me awaye, I wente with an heuy and a sorouful full mynde, but the honde off y LORDE comforted me right soon.

And so in the begynnynge off the Moneth Abib, I came to the presoners, that dwelt by the water off Cobar, &d remayned in that place, where they were: and so continued I amonge them seuen dayes, beinge very sory.

And when the seuen dayes were expyrede, the LORDE sayde vnto me : Thou sonne off man, I haue made the a watch man vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes, and gene them wrynge at my commaundement.

Yff I saye vnto the, concernyng the vn-godly ma, that (without doute) he must dye, and thou genest him not wrynge, ner speakest vnto him, that he maye turne from his euell waye, and so to lyue: Then shall the same vn-godly man dye in his owne vnrighuusnes: but his bloude will I requyre off thynde honde. Neuertheles, yff thou geue wrynge vnto the wicked, and he yet forsoke not his vn-godlynesse: then shall he dye in his owne wickednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Now yf a righteous ma go fro his rightouusnes, & do the thinge that is euell: I will laye a stomblinge blocke before him, and he shall dye, because thou hast not geuen him warninge: Yee dye shall he in his owne synne, so that the vertue, which he did before, shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude will I requyre of thine honde.

Neuertheles, yf thou exhortest the rightouus, that he synne not, and so y rightouus do not synne: Then shall he lyue, because he hath receauned thy warninge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hode off the LORDE vpon me, and he sayde vnto me: Stonde vp, and go in to the felde, y I maye there talke with the.

So when I had yresen vp, and gone forth in to the felde: Behold, the glory off the LORDE stode there, like as I sawe it afor, by the water off Cobar.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, and y sprete came in to me, which set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde thus vnto me: Go thy waye, and spurre thy self in thyne house. Beholde (O thou sonne off man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bynde the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out off thè. And I will make thy tongue cleue to the rofe off thy mouth, that thou shalt be domine, and not be as a chider with them: for it is an obstinate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus saieth the LORDE God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so will not, let him leaue: for it is a frauwerde housholde.
The iii. Chapter.

Then sayde I: Oh LORDE God, Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned: for fro my youth vp vnto this houre, I dyd neuer eate of a deed carcasse, or of that which was slayne of wilde beastes, nether came there euery vnclene flesh in my mouth.

Where vnto he answered me, and sayde: Well thin, I will graunte the to take cowes donge, for the dunge off a man, and to strake the bred ouer with all, before thē.

And he sayde vnto me: "Beholde thou sonne off man, I will myniste all the prouysion of bred in Jerusalem, so that they shall whey their bred, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a very little measure therof, to drynke. And when they haue nomore bred nar water, one shall be destroyed with another, and famish awaye for their wickednesse.

The b. Chapter.

TAKE the then a sharpe knyfe (O thou sonne of man) namely, a rasoure. Take that, and shauke the hayre off thy heade and beerd: Then take the scaoles and the weght, and deuyde the hayre a sunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myydest off the cite, and cut the other thirde parte in peces with a knyfe." As for the thirde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a little off the same, and drynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtesy of it, and cast it in the myydest of thy fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there go a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel.

Morouer, thus sayde the LORDE God: This same is Jerusalem. I set her in the middest of the Heithen and nacions, that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despyed my iudgmtēes more then Gentiles the selues, and broken my comaundementes more then then the nacions, that lye rounde aboute her: For they haue cast out myne ordinances, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore, thus sayeth the LORDE God: For so moch as ye with youre wickednesse farre excede the Heithē, that dwell rounde aboute you: (For ye haue not walked in my lawes, nether haue ye kepte myne ordinances) Therfore thus saith LORDE God:

I will also come vpon the, for in the myndest of the will I s ye in judgmēt, in the sight of the Heithen, and will handle the of such a fashion, as I neuer dyd befofe, and as I neuer wil do from that tymne forth, and that because of all thy abominacions. For in the the fathers shal be fayne to eate their owne sones, and the sones their owne fathers. Soch a courte wil I kepe in the, and the whole remaunt wil I scatre in to all the wyndes.

Wherfore, as truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) seyng thou hast defyled my Sanctuary, with all maner off abominacions and with all thy shamefull offences: For this cause will I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not oversee the, nether wil I spare the.

One thirde parte within the, shall die of the pestilence and of honger: Another thirde parte shall be slayn downe rounde aboute the, with the swearde: The other thirde parte that remayneth, wil I scatre abrode towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swearde after them. Thus wil I performe my indignacion and set my wrath agaynst them, and ease my self. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe, that I am the LORDE, which with a feruent gelousy haue spoken it.

Morouer I will make the waist and abhorred, before all the Heithen that dwell aboute the, and in the sight off all them, that go by the: so that when I punsh the in my wrath, in myne anger, and with the plage off mye whote displeasure: thou shalt be a very abominacion, shame, a gasinge and wonndringe stocke, amonche the Heithen that lye aboute the.

Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it, and it shall come to passe, when I shute amonge them the perlous darte of hōger, which shalbe but death: Yee therfore shall I shute them, because I will destroye you. I will encreas hunger, and mynish all the pronysion off bret amonge you.

Plages and mysery will I sende you, yee and wilde beestes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudsheddinge shall come vpon you, and the swearde wil I bringe ouer you. Euen I the LORDE, haue sayde it.

\[\text{Deu. 28. e.} \text{Tren. s. b. 4 Reg. 6. f.} \text{Baru. 3. f.}\]
vpon them. And so shall ye lerne to knowe, that I am the LORDE, whè youre slayne men lye amôge youre goddes, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hie hilles and toppes off mountaynes, amôge all grene trees, amonge all thicke ökes: eu en in the places, where they dyd sacrifice to all their Idols. I will stretch myne honde out vpon them, & will make the londe waist: So that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wilderness off Deblat forth, thorow all their habitaciones: to lerne them for to knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The viij. Chapter.

A T

HE worde off the LORDE came vnto me, on this maner: The I call, O thou somne off man. Thus saieth the LORDE God vnto the londe off Israel: The ende commeth, yee verelye the ende commeth vpon all the four corners off the earth.

But now shall the ende come vpon the: for I will sende my wrath vpö the, and will punish the: according to thy wayes, and rewarde the after all thy abhominacionis. Myne eye shall not oversee the, nether will I spare the: but rewarde the, according to thy wayes, and declare thy abominacionis. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, one mystery and plauge shall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that waiteth for the, is come already, ihour e come against the, that dwellest in the londe.

The tymne is at honde, the daye of sediciô is hard by, & no glad tidinges vpö the montaynes. Therfor, I will shortlye poure out my sore displeasure over the, and fulfill my wrath vpon the. I will judge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abominacionis.

Myne eye shall not oversee the, nether wil I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shewe thy abominacionis: to lerne you for to knowe, how i am the LORDE, i smythet. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the hour e is runne out, the rokke flourisheth, wyulfulnesse waxeth grene, malicious violëce is growne vp, and the vngodly waxen to a staff. Yet shall there no complaynte be made for them, ner for the trouble that shall come of these thinges.

The tymne cómeth, the daye draweth nye:

Who so byeth, let him not reioyce: he that setteth, let him not be sory: for why, Trouble shall come in the myndest off all rest: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the yerer, for nether off them both shall lyue. For the vision shall come so greatly over all, i it shall not be hyndered: No man also with his wickednesse shall be able to saue his owne life.

The trompettes shall ye blowe, and make you all ready, but no man shall go to the batell, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shalbe without, pestilence and honger within: so that who so is in the felde, shalbe slayne with the swearde: & he that is in the cite, shall perish with honger and pestilence.

And soch as escape and fle from amonge them, shal be vpon the hilles, like as the doones in the felde: every one shalbe afayed, because off his owne wickednesse.

All hondes shalbe letten downe, and all knees shalbe weake as the water: they shall gyrdle them selues with sack cloth, feare shal fall vpon them. Their faces shall be confoïed, and their heads balde: thy syller shall lye in the stretes, and their golde shalbe despised:

Yee their syller and golde maye not deluyer them, in the daye of the fearfull wrath of the LORDE.

They shall not satisfi their hongrie soules, nether fyll their emptie belies therwith: For it is become their owne decaye thorow their wickednesse: because they made therof, not only costly leweles for their pompe and prye, but also abominable ymage and Idols. For this cause will I make them to be abhorred. Morover, I will geue it in to y hondes off the straungers to be spoyled: and to y wicked, for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it.

My face wil I turne from the, my Treasury shall be defyled: for the theues shall go in to it, and suspende it. I wil make clene ryddanne, for the londe is whole defyled with vnrightuous judgment of innocent bloude, & the cite is full off abhominacionis.

Wherfore, I wil bringe the most cruell tyrauntes from amonge the Heithen, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe off the proude to ceasse, &d they shal
It happened, that in the sixe yeare, the fifth daye of the sixte Moneth I sat in my house, and the lorde off the councell off Juda with me: and the honde off the LORDE God fell euen there vpō me.

And as I loked vp, I sawe as it were a lycnesse off fyre from his loynes downwarde, and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned maruoules cleare.

This symilitude stretched out an honde, and toke me by the hayrie lockes off my heade, and the sprete lift me vp betwixte heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vision to Jerusalem, in to the courte off the inwarde porte that lieth towards the north: there stode an ymage, with whom he that hath all thinges in his power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glory off the God off Israel was in the same place: eũē as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne off man, O lift vp thine eyes, and loke towards the north. Then lift I vp myne eyes towards the north, and beholde: Beside the porte northwarde, there was an aultar made vnto the ymage off provocacion in the very entrynye in.

And he sayde furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne off man, Seist thou what these do? Seist thou the greate abominacions that the house off Israel commyttte in this place? which ought not to be done in my sanctuary?

But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greate abominacions. And with that brought he me to the courte gate: and whě I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne off man, dygge thorow the wall. And when I dygged thorow the wall, beholde, there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: go thry waye in, and loke what wicked abominacions they do there.

So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ynames off wormes they beasts, all Idols and abominacions of y house off Israel paynted euerychone rounde aboute the wall.

There stode also before the ynames lx, lordes of the councell off the house off Israel: and in the myddest off them stode Iaasianias the sonne off Saphan: And euery one off them had a censoure in his honde, and out off the incense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne off man, hast thou sene what the Senatours off the house off Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambre? For they saye: Tush, the LORDE sett vs not, the LORDE regardeth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se the greate abominacions that they do.

And with that, he brought me to the dore off the porte off the LORDES house, towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mournynge for Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of mā? Turne th̄ aboute, thou shalt se yet greater abominacions. And so he brought me in to the inwarde courte of the LORDES house: beholde, at the porte of the LORDES house, betwixte the fore entrie and the aultar, there were fynue and twenty men, that turned their backes vp̄ on the Temple of the LORDE, their faces towarde the easte, and these worshipped the Sonne.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Thinketh the house of Israel, that it is but a trifle, to do these abominacions here? Shulde they fyll the londe full of wickednesse, and undertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yee purpouso to cast vp their noses vpon me? Theryfore wil I also do some thinge in my wrathfull displeasure, so that myne eye shal not oversee them, nether wil I spare them. Yee and though they erie in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wil I not hear̄ them.

I 38. c. b. 11. d. Eze. 1. a. 4 Eze. 18. d. Num. 11. d.

H

E cried also with a loud voice in myne ears, sayenge: Come here ye rulers of the cite, everie man with his wepenned honde to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men out of the strete of the uppere porte toward the north, and everie man a weapon in his honde to the slaughter. There was one amongst them, that had on him a lynynge rayment, and a wryters yncchorne by his syde.

These wente in, and stood beside the brasen aultre: for the glory of the LORD was gone awaye from the Cherub, and was come downe to the threshold of the house, & he called the mā, that had the lynynge rayment vpon him, and the wryters yncchorne by his syde, and the LORDE sayde vnto him: Go thy waye throw the cite of Jerusalem, and set this marck: Than vpon the foreheads of them, that mourne, and are sorry for all the abominacions, that be done therin. And to the other, he sayde that I might heare: Go ye after him throw the cite, slaye, ouersee none, spare none: Kyl, destroye both olde men and yonge, myddens, children, and wyues.

But as for those, that haue this marck: Than vpon them: se that ye touch them not, and begynne at my Sanctuary. Then they begane at the elders, which were in the Temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue defyled the Temple, and fylled the courte with the slayne, then go youre waye forth. So they wete out and slewe downe throw the cite. Now when they had done y slaughter, I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, and sayenge: O LORDE, wilt thou then destroye all the residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem?

Then sayde he vnto me: The wickednesse of the house of Israel and Iuda is very grete: so that the lōde is full of bloute, and v cite full of vnaithfulness: For they saye: Tush, LORDE regardeth not the earth, he seyth vs not. Therfore will I vpon them, myne eye shall not ouersee them, nether will I spare them, but will recompence their wickednesse vpon their heads.

And beholde, the mā that had the lynynge rayment vpon him, and the writers yncchorne by his syde: tolde all the matter how it happened, and sayde: LORD, as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

The r. Chapter.

AND as I loked, beholde, In the firmament that was aboue the Cherubins there appeared the similitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them: Then sayde he that sat therin, to him that had the lynynge rayment vpon him: Crepe in betwene the whales that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thine honde full of hote coales out from betwene the Cherubins, and cast them ouer the cite. And he crepte in, that I might se.

Now the Cherubins stode vpon the right syde of the house, when the man wete in, and the cloude fylled the ymmerne court. But the glory of the LORDE removed from the Cherubins, and came vpon the threshold of the house: so that the Temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the LORDES glory. Yee and the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was herde in to the forecourte, like as it had bene the voyce of the almighty God, when he speake thin. Now when he had bydden the man y was clothed in lynynge, to go and take the hote coales from the mydest of y whales, which were vnder the Cherubins: he wente and stode byside the whales. Then the one Cherub reached forth his honde from vnder the Cherubins, vnto y fyre that was betwene the Cherubins, and toke therof, and gane it vnto him (that had on the lynynge rayment) in his honde: which toke it, and wente out. And vnder the wynges of y Cherubins, there appeared the licknes of a mā hōde: I save also foure whales byside the Cherubins, so that by everie Cherub there stode a whole. And the whales were (to loke vpon) after y fashion of y precious stone of Tharsis: Yet (vnto the sight) were they fashioned as like, as yf one whale had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wete all iiij together, not turnynge aboute in their goinge: But where the first wente, thither wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goinge. Their whole bodies, their backes, their hōdes y wynges, yee y the whales also, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I herde him call ã whales, Galgal (that is) a rounde boull. Evry one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thirde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, æ they were lift vp aboue. This is the beest, that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubins wente, the whales wente with them; æ when the Cherubins shake their wynges to lift them selues vpwarde, the whales remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Shortly, when they stode, these stode also: And when they were lift vp, ã whales were lift vp also with the, for the sprete of life was in the whales.

Then the glory of the LORDE was lift vp from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubins: And the Cherubins flackred with their wynges, and lift the selues vp from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the whales with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the LORDE. So the glory of the LORDE was vpon them. This is the beest that I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubins. Evry one had foure faces, æ every one foure wynges, æ vnder their wynges, as it were mes hondes. Now the figure of their faces was, even as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, æ so was the countenaunce of the: Evry one in his goinge wente straight forwarde.

The ri. Chapter.

MOROUER, the sprete of the LORDE lift me vp, æ brought me vnto ã east porte of the LORDES house. And beholde, there were xxv men vnder the dore: amõge whom I sawe Iaasanias the sonne of Asur, æ Pheltias the sonne of Banias, the rulers of the people. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: Thou sonne of man: These men ymagin myschefe, and a wicked counsell take they in this cite, sayenge: Tush, there is no destruction at honde, let vs buylle houses: This Jerusalem is the caudron, æ we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophesie vnto them, yee prophesie shalt thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that, fell the sprete of the LORDE vpon me, and sayde vnto me:

Speake, thus saieth the LORDE: On this maner haue yee spokë (O ye house of Israel) and I knowe the ymaginacions of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this cite, æ filled the stretes full of the slayne.

Therefore, thus saieth the LORDE God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in this cite, are the flesh, æ this citë is the caudron: Æ But I wil bringe you out of it: ye haue drawe out ã swarede, etce so wil I also bringe a swarede ouer you, saieth ã LORDE God. I will dryue you out of this cite and delyuer you in to youre enemies honde, æ wil condemne you. Ye shal be slayne in all the coastes of Israel, I wil be avenged of you: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the LORDE. This cite shal not be youre caudron, nether shal ye be the flesh therin: but in the coastes of Israel wil I punysh you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the LORDE: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walked, ner kepe his lawes: but ã haue done after the customes of the Heithen, that lie rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Pheltias the sonne of Banias dyed. Then fell I downe vpô my face, æ cried with a loude voyce: O LORDE God, wille thou then vterly destroye all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the LORDE came to me on this maner: Thou sonne of man: Thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, æ ã whole house of Iuda, which dwell at Ierusalam, saye: They be gone farre from the LORDE, but the londe is geuen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, thus saieth the LORDE God: I wil sende you farre of amõge the Gentiles, æ scatere you amonge the naciones, æ I wil halowe you but a litle, in the londes where ye shall come. Tell them also, thus saieth the LORDE God: I wil gather you agayne out of the naciones, æ bringe you from the countreys where ye be scatred, æ wil geue you the londe of Israel agayne: æ thither shal ye come. And as for all impedimentes, æ all youre abominacions: I wil take them awaye.

And I wil geue you one herte, æ wil plante a new sprete within youre bowels. Æ That stony herte wil I take out of youre body, æ geue you a fleshy herte: that ye maye walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordinances, æ do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hertes are disposed to folowe their abominacions and wicked luyynes: Those mens dedes will I bringe vpon owne heads, saieth the LORDE God. After this dyd the Cherubins lift vp their winges, and the whales wente with them, and the glory of the LORDE was vpon them. "So the glory of the LORDE went vp from the myydest of the côte, 2 and stode vpon the mount of the côte toward the east. But the wynde toke me vp, 3 in a vision (which came by the sprete of God) it brought me agayne in to Caldea amonge the presoners. Then the vision that I had sene, vanished awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the presoners, all the wordes of the LORDE, which he had shewed me.

The LORDE. Chapter.

THE worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: 'Thou sonne of mā, thou dwellest in the myydest of a frauwerde housholde: which haue eyes to se, 4 yet se not: cares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate housholde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere redy to flit, and go forth by fayre daye light, 5 they maye se. Yee euē in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to another place: 6 yf peraduenture they wil considere, 7 yf they be an vnobedient housholde. Thy gerye that thou hast made redy to flit withall, shalt thou beare out by fayre daye light, that they maie se: 8 thou thy self shall go forth also at euē in their sight, as a mā doth whē he flitteth.

Dyge thorow the wall, that they maye se, and beare thorow it the same thinge, that thou tokest vp in their sight. As for thy self, thou shalt go forth in the darecke. Hyde thy face that thou se not euē earth, for I haue made the a shewtōkē vnto the house of Israel. Now as 9 LORDE commaunded me, so I dyd: 9 9 gerye that I had made redy, brought I out by daye. At euē I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my honde: 9 when it was darecke, I toke the gere vpō my shulders, and bare them out in their sight.

And in the mornynge, came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, yf Israel, yf frauwerde housholde axe the, and saye: what dost thou there? Then tell them: Thus saieth the LORDE God: This pynshment toucheth the chefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel, that dwell amongeth them: Tell them: I am youre shewtoken: like as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you: Flyt shal ye also, and go in to captuayte. 'The chefest that is amonge you, shall lade his shulders in the darecke, and get him awaye. He shal brake downe the wall, to carie stuff there thorow: He shal cover his face, that he se not the gronde, with his eyes.

My lyne will I spredde out vpon him, and catch him in my net, 5 and carie him to Babilon, in the lode of the Caldees: which he shal not se, 6 yet shal he dye there. As for all his helpers, and all his hosettes that be aboute him: I will scatere them towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out a swearde after them. 4 So when I haue scatred them amonge the Heithen, and strowed them in the londes: they shal knowe, that I am 5 LORDE. But, I will leave a little nombre of them, from the swearde, hunger 5 pestilence: to tell all their abominacions amonge the Heithen, where they come: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

Morerue, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me sayenge: Thou sonne of man: with a fear full treblinge shal thou eate thy bred, with carefullnesse 5 sorowe shalt thou drinke thy water. And vnto the people of the londe, speake thou on this maner: Thus saieth the LORDE God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the londe of Israel: Ye shall eate youre bred with sorowe, and drinke youre water with heynynesse: Yee the londe with the fulnesse therof shalbe layde waist, for 5 wickednesse of them that dwell therin. And the cities that now be well occupied, shall be voyde, and the londe desolate: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

Yet came the worde of the LORDE vnto me agayne, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, 5 which ye vse in the londe of Israel, sayenge: Tush, sayenge that the daies are so slaccke in commynge, 5 all the visiōs are of none effecte: Tell them theryfore, thus saieth the LORDE God: I will make that byworde to ceasse, so that it shall nonore be comonely vsed in Israel.

But saye this vnto them: The daies are at honde, that euery thinge which hath bene prophesied, shalbe fulfilled. There shall no vision be in vayne, nether eny prophesie fayle amonge the children of Israel: For it is I the LORDE, that speake it: and what so euer I saye, it shalbe perfourmed, and not be slacke in commyngne.

Yee euen in your dayes (O ye frauwarde householde) will I deuyse some thinges, I bringe it to passe, saieth the LORDE God. And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel saye in this maner: Tush, as for the vision that he hath sene, it will be many a daye or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, the thinges that he prophecieth. Therfore saye vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE God: All my wordeshal nomore be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, saieth the LORDE.

THE worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, Speake prophesie agaynst those prophets, that preach in Israel: I saye thou vnto them that prophesie out of their owne hertes: Heare the worde of the LORDE, thus saieth the LORDE God: Wo be vnto those foolish prophets, that folowe their owne sprete, and speake, where they se no thinke. O Israel, thy prophets are like the foxes vpon the drie seeld: For they stonde not in the gappes, nether make they an henge for the house of Israel, that mē might abyde the parell in the daye of the LORDE. Vayne thinges they se, I tell lies, to mayntene their preachinges withall. The LORDE (saye they) hath spokē it, when in very dede the LORDE hath not sent them. Vayne visiōs haue ye sene, I spokē false prophesies, when ye saye: the LORDE hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therfore, thus saieth the LORDE God: Because youre wordees be vayne, I ye seke out lies: Beholde, I wil vpon you, saieth I the LORDE. Myne hondeshal come vpon the prophets, that loke out vayne·thinges, and preach lies: they shal not be in the counsell of my people, ner written in the boke of the house of Israel, nether shal they come in the lond of Israel: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE God. And:that for this cause: the have discouened my people, I tolde them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a wall, I they dawbe it with lowse claye. Therfore tell them which dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shal fall. For there shal come a great shower of rayne, great stones shall fall vpon it, I a sere storme of wynde shal brake it, so shal it wall come dowe. Shall it not then be sayde vnto you: where is now the morter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: I will breake out in my wrotchfull displeasure with a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger there shal come a mightie shower of rayne, I hale stones in my wrath, to destroye withall.

As for it wall, that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I wil breake it downe, I make it eauen with the grounde: so that the foundacion therof shal remove, I it shal fall, yee I ye youre selues shal perish in the myndest therof: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the LORDE. Thus wil I perfourme my wrath vpon this wall, I vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wil I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, I the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophets of Israel, which prophesie vnto the cite of Jerusalem, I loke out visions of peace for them, where as no peace is, saieth the LORDE God. Wherefore (o thou sonne of mā,) set thy face agaynst the dotheres of thy people, which prophesie out of their owne hertes: I speake thou prophesie agaynst them, I saye: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Wo be vnto you, that sove pilowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsteres vnder the heads both of yonge and olde, to catch soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuyte, I ye promyse them life, and dishonoure me to my people, for an hand full of barly, I for a pece of bred: when ye kyll the soules of them that dye not, I promyse life to them, that lyue not: Thus ye dyssemble with my people, I beleneth youre lies.

Wherefore thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, I wil also ypō the pillowes, wherewith ye catch the soules in flyenge: the wil I take from youre armes, I let the soules go, that ye catch in flyenge. Youre bolsteres also wil I
The prophet Ezechiel.

A THERE resorted vnto me certaine of ye elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Then came the wordes of the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their Idols in their hertes, and purposly vpon the stomblinge block of their owne wickednesse: how darre they then axe councell at me? Therefore speake vnto them, ye saye: thus saith the LORDE God: Every man of the house of Israel that beareth his Idols in his herte, purposyng to stoble in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquire any thinge at me by him: vnto that man wil I the LORDE myself geue answere, acordinge to the multitude of his Idols: that the house of Israel maye be snared in their owne hertes, because they be clene gone fro me, for their Idols sake.

Wherfore, tell the house of Israel: thus saith the LORDE God: Be converted, forsake your Idols, and turne your face from all your abbominacions. For euery man (whether he be of the house of Israel, or a straunger, that sogeourneth in Israel) which departeth fro me, and carieth Idols in his herte, purposinge to go still stomblinge in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to axe councell at me thorow him: vnto that man wil I the LORDE geue answere, by myne owne self.

I wil set my face agaynst that man, and wil make him to be an example for yee, and a commow byworde: and wil rote him out of my people, that he maye knowe, how I am the LORDE. And ye that prophete be diseaced, when he telleth him a worde: then I the LORDE myself have diseaced that prophet, and wil stretch forth myne honde vpon him, to rote him out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punished for their wickednesse.

Acordinge to ye synne of him that axeth, shal the synne of the prophet be: that ye house of Israel be led nomore fro me thorow errore, and be nomore defyled in their wickednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I their God, saith the LORDE God. And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, when the londe synneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wickednesse: I will stretch out myne hode vpon it, and destroye all the prouision of their bred, and sende derth vpon them, to destroye man and beast in the londe. And though Noe, Daniel and Job these thre men were amonge them, yet shal they in their rightuousnesse deluyer but their owne soules, saith the LORDE God.

Yf I bringe noysome beestes in to the londe, to waist it vp, and it be so desolate, that no man may go therin for beestes: ye these thre men also were in the londe, as truly as I lyue (saith the LORDE God) they shal saue nether sonnes ner doughters, but be only deluyed them selues: and as for the londe, it shal be waist.

Or, ye I bringe a swarde in to the londe, and charge it to go thorow the londe: so that I slaye downe man and beast in it, and ye these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (saith the LORDE God) they shal deluyer nether sonnes ner doughters, but saue saue them selues.

Yf I sende a pestilence in to the londe, and poure out my sore indignacion vpon it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both man and beast, and ye Noe, Daniel and Job were therin: As truly as I lyue (saith the LORDE God) they shal deluyer nether sonnes ner doughters, but saue their owne soules in their rightuousnesse.

Morover, thus saith the LORDE God: Though I sende my foure troublous plagues vpon Jerusalem: the swarde, honger, pellous beestes and pestilence, to destroye man and beast out of it: yet shal there a remnaunt be saued therin, which shal bringe forth their sonnes and doughters. Beholde, they shal come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in honde, g ye shall be conforted, as touching all the plages that I have brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye se their waye and worke: and ye shall knowe, how ye it is not without a cause, that I have done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I dyd, saith the LORDE God.

The 7b. Chapter.

T HE worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the wyne amonge all other trees? and of the wyne stocke, amoue all other tymbre of the groaue? Do me take wodd of it, to make eny worke withall? Or maye there a nale be made of it, to hange eny thinge vpon? Beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is brent to aszshes. Is it mete then for eny worke? No. Seinge then, that it was mete for no worke, beinge whole: moch lesse maye there eny thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus saith the LORDE God: Like as I cast the wyne in to the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wod: Euen so wil I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face against them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I set my face against them, and make the londe waist: because they haue so sore offended, saith the LORDE God.

A GAYNE, the worde of the LORDE spake vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, shewe the cito of Jerusalem their abominacions, and saye: thus saith the LORDE God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the londe of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethite. In y daye of thy byrth when thou wast borne, y stringe of thy nauel was not cut of: thou wast not bathed in water to make the clene: Thou wast neither rubbied with salt, ner swedled in cloutes: No man regarded the so moch, as to do eny of these things for y, or to shewe the soch fauncour, but thou wast utterly cast out vpon y felde, yee despised wast thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and sawe the troden downe in thine owne bloude, g sayde vnto the: thou shalt be pourged from thine owne bloude, fr6 thine owne bloude (I saye) shalt thou be clensed. 4 So I planted the, as the blossom of thy felde: thou art growen vp, g waxe great: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasure beutie, thy brestes are come vp, thy hayre is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afofe.

Now when I wente by y, g lokked vpon the beholde, thy tyne was come, yee eue the tyne to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes over the, to couer thy dishonestie: 4 Yee I made an ooth vnto the, g maried my selfe with the (saith the LORDE God) g so thou becamest myne owne. Then waszshed I the with water, g peurred thy bloude from the. I anoyned the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made the shues of Taxus letter: I gyrthed y aboute with white sylke, I clothed the with kerchues, I decked the with costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne aboute thy necke, spages vpothy forheade, eare rynges vpon thyne eares, g set a beutifull crowne vpon thine heade. Thus wast thou deckte with syluer g golde, g thy rayment was of fyne white sylke, of nede worke g of dyneres colours.

Thou didest eate nothinge but symnels, honny g oyle: maruelous goodly wast thou g beutifull, yee euen a very Quene wast thou: In so moch, that thy beuty was spoken of amonge the Heithen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty, which I put vpo the, saith the LORDE God. But thou hast put confidenc in thine owne beuty, g played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten a name. Thou hast committed whordome, with all that wente by the, g hast fulfilled their desyres: Yee thou hast taken thy garmêtes of dyneres colours, g deckte thine aulters therwith, where vpon thou mightest fulfill thine whordome, of soch a fashion, as neuer was done, ner shalbe. 4 The goodly ornamêtes g Jewels which I gaue the of myne owne golde and syluer, hast thou tak3, g made the mês ymages thereof, and committed whordome withall.

Thy garmêtes of dyneres colours hast thou taken, and decke them therwith: myne oyle & incense hast thou set before them. My meate which I gane the, as symnells, oyle & hony: (to fede the withall) that hast thou set before them, for a swee saunoure. And this came also to passe, saieth the LORDE God: E

Thou hast taketh thine owne sonnes & daughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto them, to be their meate. Is this but a small whordome of thine (thine ) thou slayest my children, and geuest them ouer, to be brest vnto them? And yet in all thy abominaciones and whordome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked and bare thou wast at that tym, troden downe in thine owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesse (wo wo vnto the, saieth ye LORDE) thou hast buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euerie place: yee at the head of euery strete hast thou buylded the an aulter. Thou hast made thy bently to be abhorred: thou hast layed out thy legges to euerie one that came by, and multiplied thine whordome. Thou hast committed fornicacion with the Egiptians thy neibours, which had moch flesh: thus hast thou vsed thine whordome, to anger me.

Beholde, I will stretch out myne honde ouer the, and wil mynshy thy stoare of fode, and delyuer the ouer in to the willes of the Philistynes thine enemies, which are ashamed of thy abhominable waye. Thou hast played the whore also with the Assirians, which might not satisfie the: Yee thou hast played the harlot, not had enought. Thus hast thou still committted thy fornicacion from the londe of Canaan vnto the Caldees, and yet thy lust not satisfied. How shulde I circumcise thine herte (saieth the LORDE God) seinge thou doest all these thinges, thou precious whore: buyldinge thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy brodel houses in all places? Thou hast not bene as an another whore, maketh boaste of hir wynnynge: but as a wife breaketh wedlocke, taketh other in stead of hir huszbode. Gifts are geuen to all other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: offrest them giftes, to come vnto the out of all places, to comitte fornicacion with the. It is come to passe with the in thy whordomes, contrary to the use of other women: yee there hath no soch fornicacion beene committed after the, seinge that thou profrest giftes vnto other, no rewarde is geuen the: this is a contrary thinge. Therefore heare the worde of the LORDE, o thou harlot: Thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as thou hast spet thy moneye, discovered thy shame, thorow thy whordome with all thy louers, and with all the Idols of thy abominaciones in the bloude of thy children, whom thou hast geuen them: Beholde therefore, I will gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy self comon: yee all them whom thou favaourest, and euery one that thou hatest: and will discover thy shame before the, that they all maye se thy fylthines.

Moreover, I will judge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murthurer, and rescompence the thine owne bloude in wrath and gelousy. I wil geue the ouer in to their power, that shal breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodel houses: they shall stripe the out of thy clothes, all thy fayre beatifull Jewes shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked bare: Yee they shal bringe the comon people vpon the, which shall stone the, slaye the downe with their swardes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and punysh the in the sight of many womes. Thus wil I make thy whordome to ceasse, so that thou shalt geue out no no rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrath to be still, take my gelousy from the, be content, and nomore to be displeased? seinge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? Beholde therefore, I wil bringe thine owne wayes vpon thine heade, saieth the LORDE God: how be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, acordinge to thy wickednesse and all thy abominaciones. Beholde, all they y vse comon prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: Souch a mother, soch a daughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne daughter, that hath cast of hir houszbonde and hir children: Yee thou art the sister of thy sisters, which forsoke their huszbodes and their children. Youre mother is a Cethite, and youre father an Amorite. Thine eldest sister is Samaria, she and hir douhters that dwel vperto thy left honde.

But thy youngest sister that dwelleth on thy right hode, is Sodoma and hir daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, ner done after their abominacions: But in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they.

"As truly as I lyue, saieth the LORDE God: Sodoma thy sister with hir daughters, hath not done so euel, as thou and thy daughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, abundance and Idilnesse: these things had she and hir daughters. Besydes that, they reached not their honde to the poore and nedy, but were proude, and dyd abominable things before me: therefore I toke them awaye, when I had sene it. "Nether hath Samaria done half of thy synnes, yee thou hast exceeded them in wickednesse: In so much that in comparison of all the abominacions which thou hast done, thou hast made thy sisters good women. Theryfore beare thine owne shame, thou that in synne hast overcome thy sisters: seiinge thou hast done so abominably, that they were better then thou. Be ashamed therfore (I saye) and beare thine owne confucion, thou that makest thy sisters good women.

As for their captiuyte, namely the captiuyte of Sodoma and hir daughters: the captiuyte of Samaria and hir daughters: I wil bringe them agayne, so will I also bringe agayne thy captiuyte amoge them: that thou mayest take thine owne confucion vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to conforte them.

Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and hir daughters: Samaria and hir daughters with thy self a thy daughters, shalbe brought agayne to youre olde estate. Wher thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wickednesse came to light: thou woldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntill the tyme that the Sirians with all their towns, and the Philistynes with all that lye rounde aboute them, brought the to shame and confucion: that thou mightest beare thine owne fylthyenes and abominacion, saieth the LORDE.

For thus saieth the LORDE God: I shulde (by right) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the ooth, and broken the couenaunte. Neuertheles, I wil remembre the couenaunt, that I made with the in thy youth, in so much that it shall be an euerlastinge couenaunt: So that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of the: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and yonger sisters, whom I wil make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaunt. "And so I wil renue my couenaunt with thee, y thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORDE: that thou mayest thincke vpó it, be ashamed, and excuse thine owne confucion nomore: when I haue forugen the, all that thou hast done, saieth the LORDE God.

The a. Chapter.

The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man: put forth a darkke speakynga and a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye: "Thus saieth the LORDE God: There came a great Aegle with greate wynges, yee with mightie longe wynges, and full of fethers of dyuers coloure, vpon the mount of Libanus, and toke a braunch from a Cedre tre, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, and caried it in to the londe of Canaan, and set it in a cite of marshauntes. He toke also a braunch of the londe, and planted it in a frutesfull grounde, he brought it vnto greate waters, a set it as a willye tre therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greate wyne stocke, but lowe by the grounde: thus there came of it a wyne, and it brought forth blossomes, a spred out braunches.

But there was another Aegle, a greate one, which had greate wynges and many fethers: and beholde, a rotes of this wyne had an higer after him, and spred out his braunches towarde him, to water his frutes: Neuertheles it was plaeted vpon a good grounde besyde greate waters: so that (by reason) it shulde haue brought out braunches and frute, and haue bene a goodly wyne. Speake thou therefore, thus saieth the LORDE God: Shal this wyne prosper? shal not his rotes be pluckte out, his frute broken of, his grene braunches wythered and faide awaye? yee without other strange arme or many peoole, shall it be pluckte vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prosper therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and wiethered, yee euen in the shutinge out of his blossomes, as soone as ye east wynde bloweth?
Morover, the wordes of the LORDE came vnto me sayenge: "Speake to that frauwarde householde: knowe ye not, what these thinges do signifie? Tell them: Beholde, the kinge of Babilon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kinge & his prynces, and ledde them to Babilon.

He toke of the kinges sede, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an ooth of him: The prynces of the londe toke he with him also, that the londe might be holden in subiecction, and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfill it. But he fell from him, & sent his Embassitours in to Egipte, that he might haue horses & much people. Shulde that prosper? Shulde he be kepe safe, that doth soch thinges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt?

As truly as I lyue, saith the LORDE God: He shal dye at Babilon, in that place where the kinge dwelleteh, that made him kinge: whose ooth he hath despised, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Nether shall Pharaoh with his great hoost and multitude of people, maynteyne him in the warre: when they cast vp ditches, and set vp bulworkes to destroye mouch people. For seinge he hath despysed the ooth, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue his honde therupon) and done all these thinges, he shall not escape.

Therfore thus saith the LORDE God: As truly as I lyue, I will bringe myne ooth that he hath despysed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vp on his owne heade. I will cast my net aboute him, and catch him in my yarne. To Babilon will I cary him, there will I punysh him, because of the great offence that he made me. As for those vp fle from him out of that hoost, they shalbe slayne with the swearde. The residue shalbe searted towards all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the LORDE have spoken it.

Thus saith the LORDE God: I will also take a braunch from an hie Cedre tre, and will set it, and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tendre, and plante it vpon an hie hill: Namely, vpon the hie hill of Sion will I plante it: that it maye bringe forth twygges, and geue frute, and be a great Cedre tre: so that all maner of soules maye byde in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his branches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe, that I the LORDE haue brought downe the hie tre, and set the lowe tre vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tre, and made the drye tre to flourish: Euen I the LORDE y spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The 8th. Chapter.

T HE worde of the LORDE came vnto me, on this maner: what meane ye by this comon prouerbe, that ye vse in the londe of Israel, sayenge: The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, & the childe's teeth are set on edge? As truly as I lyue, saith the LORDE God, ye shal vse this byworde nomore in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Like as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synnyth, shal dye. "If a man be godly, and do the thinge that is equall to right, (he eateth not vp the hilles: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the 'Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neibour's wife: he medleth with no menstruous woman: he greueth no body: he geneteth his detter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by violenc: he parteth his mete with the hongrie: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth no thinge vp vnsury: he taketh no thinge ouer: he withdraweth his honde from doinge wronge: he hafdeleth faithfully betwixte man & man: he walketh in my commandementes, & kepeth my lawes, & performeth the faithfullly:

This is a righteous man, he shal surely lyue, saieth the LORDE God.

Ye he now get a sonne, that is a murthurer, a shedder of bloude: ye he do one of these thinges (though he do not all) he eateth vp the hilles: he defyleth his neibours wife: he greueth the poore and nedy: he robbeth and spoyleth: he geneth not the detter his pledge agayne: he lifteth vp his eyes vnto the 'Idols, & medleth with abominable thinges: he lendeth vp vsury, and taketh more ouer. Shal this man lyue? He shal not lyue. Seinge he hath done all these abominacions, he shall dye: his bloude shalbe vpon him.

Now ye this man get a sonne also, that seith all this fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, neither doth soch like:

Namely, he eateth not upon the mountaynes: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wife: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth, nether robbeth any man: he dealeth his meate with the hungrie: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receauneth no usury, ner any thinge ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commandementes: This man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is deed in his owne synne. And yet saie ye: Wherfore the shulde not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therefore: because the sonne hath done equyte and right, hath kepte all my commandementes, and done them: therefore, shall he lyue in dede.

"The same soule is synne, shall dye. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, neither shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The rightuousnes of the rightuous shall be vpon himself, and the wickednes of the wicked shall be vpon him self also. But if thy vngodly will turne awaye, from all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commandements, and do the thinge which is equall right: doules he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all his synnes that he dyd before, they shall not be thought vp: but in his rightuousnes that he hath done, he shall lyue. "For haue I eny pleasure in the death of a synner, saieth the LORDE God? but rather that he converte, and lyue?

Agayne: if the rightuous turne awaye from his rightuousnes, and do iniquyte, acordinge to all the abominaciones, that thy wicked mā doth: shal he lyue? All the rightuousnes that he hath done, shall not be thought vp: but in the fawte that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye. And yet ye saie: "Tush, the waye of the LORDE is not indifferent. Heare therefore ye house of Israel: Is not my wave right? Or, are not youre wayes rather wicked? When a rightuous mā turneth awaye from his rightuousnesse, and medleth with vngodlynes: he must dye therin: Yee for the vrightuousnesse that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne: when the wicked man turneth awaye from his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thinges which is equall and right: he shall saue his soule alyue. For in so much as he remembreth himself, and turneth him from all the vngodlynes, that he hath vsed, he shall lyue, and not dye.

And yet saith the house of Israel: Tush, the waye of the LORDE is not equall. Are my wayes vnright, or ye house of Israel? Are not youre wayes rather vnequal? As for me, I wil judge every man, acordinge to his wayes, O ye house of Israel, saieth the LORDE God. Wherfore, be converted, and turne you clene from all youre wickednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Cast awaye from you all youre vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you new hertes and a new sprete. Wherfore wil ye dye, O ye house of Israel? sayenge I haue no pleasure in the death of him that dyeth, saieth the LORDE God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The rïr. Chapter.

But mourning thou for the prynces off Israell, saie: Wherfore laye thy mother that lonesse, amôge the Lyons? that norished hir yonge ones amôge the Lyons whelpes? One of hir whelpes she brought vp, it became a lyon: it lerned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The Heithen herde of him, ga toke him in their nettes, ga brought him in chaynes vnfo the londe of Egipte.

Now when the damme sawe, that all hir hope comforted was awaye, she toke another of hir whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: which wente amonge the Lyons, ga became a fawre lyon: lerned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and mad their cities waist: In so much that the whole londe and euery thinge therin, were vttely desolate, thorow the very voyce of his roaringe.

Then came the Heithen togethers on euery syde out of all countreys gaaynast hym, layed their nettes for him, and toke him in their pytte. So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kinge of Babilon: which put him in preson, that his voyce shulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is like a vyne in thy bloude, planted by the water syde: hir frutes and branches are grown out of many waters: hir stalkes were so stronge, that men might haue made staues therof for officers: she grew so hie in hir stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceeded yt heith and multitude of hir branche, she was rote out in displeasure, and cast downe to the grounde. The East wynde dryed vp hir frute, hir stronge stalkes were broken of, wythered and brente in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wildernes, in a drye and thurstie grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of hir stalkes, which hath brete vp hir branches and hir frute: so that she hath no mo stronge stalkes, to be staues for officers.

This is a pitious and miserable thinge.

The xxv. Chapter.

In the xviij yeare the x daye of the v Moneth, it happened, *that certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me for to axe councell at the LORDE, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man: Speake to the elders of Israel, and saye vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Are ye come hither to axe eny thinge at me? As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE,) I will geue you no answere. Wilt thou not reprouе them (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reprouе them? Shewe them the abominaciones of their forefathers, & tell thē: Thus saieth the LORDE God: *In the daye when I chose Israel, and lift vp myne honde vpon the sede of the house of Jacob, & shewed my self vnto them in the londe of Egipte: Yee when I lifte vp myne honde ouer thē, and sayde: I am the LORDE youre God, even in the daye that I lift vp myne honde ouer them, to bringe them out of the londe of Egipte: in to a londe that I had prouyded for them, which floweth with mylke and honie, and is a pleasante lōde amonge all other: Then sayde I vnto them: *Cast away euery man the abominations that he hath before him, and defyle not youre selues with the Idols of Egipte, for I am the LORDE youre God.

But they rebelled against me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast away euery man the abominations of his eyes, and to forsake the Idols of Egipte. Then I made me to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfie my wrath vpon them: yee euyn in the myldest of the londe of Egipte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the Heithen, amonge whom they dwelt, and amonge whom I shewed my self vnto them, that I wolde bringe them out of the londe of Egipte. Now when I had caried them out of the londe of Egipte, and brought them in to the wildernesse; *I gaue them my commandementes, & shewed thē my lawes: which who so kepeth shal lyue in them. I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixte me and them, and therby to knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haloweth them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wildernesse, they wolde not walke in my commandementes, they haue cast awaye my lawes: (which who so kepeth shulde lyue in them,) and my Sabbath daies haue they greatly vnhalowed.

*The I made me to poure out my indignacion vpon them, & to consume them in the wildernes. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the Heithen, from the which I had caried them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wildernes, that I wolde not bringe them in to the londe, which I gaue them: a londe that floweth with mylke & honie, & is a pleasure of all londes: & y because they refused my lawes, & walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbathes, for their herte was gone after their Idols. Nevertheless myne eye spared thē, so y I wolde not utterly slaye thē, & consume thē in the wildernes. Moroner, I sayde vnto their sonnes in thē wildernes: *walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not their ordinances, and defyle not youre selues with their Idols, for I am the LORDE your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halowe my Sabbathes: *for they are a token betwixte me & you, that ye maye knowe, how y I am the LORDE. *Notwithstëdinge, their sonnes rebelled against me also: they walked not in my statutes, they kepte not my lawes to fulfill them (which he that doth shal lyue in them) nether halowed they my Sabbath daies. Thē I made me agayne to poure out my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfie my wrath vpon them in the wildernes. Neuertheles I with drewe my honde for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the Heithen, before whom I had brought them forth. I lift vp myne honde ouer them also in the wildernes, that I wold seatre amonse the Heithen, and strowe them amonse the naciones: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commandeiments, vnhalowed my Sab- bathes, and lift vp their eyes to their fathers Idols. Wherfore I gau them also commandeiments not good, 2lawes thowre the which they shulde not lyue, " 4 I vnhalowed them in their owne giftes: (when I appoynted for my self all their first borne) to make them desolate: that they might knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) tell the house of Israel, thus saieth the LORDE God: Besyde all this, youre forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me: For after I had brought them in to the londe, 5 I promised to guee them, when they sawe every hie hill 7 all the thicke trees: they made there their offeringes, and prouoked me with their oblacions, makinge sweate saunours there, 7 poured out their drinke offeringes. Then I axed them: what haue ye to do with all, that ye go thither? And thersore is it called the hie place vnto this daye. Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Ye are euene as vnclene as youre forefathers, 7 committe whorderne also with their abominaciis. In all youre Idols, where vnto ye bringe youre oblacions, 7 to whose honour ye burne youre children: ye defyle youre selues, euen vnto this daye: how darre ye the come, and axe eny question at me? O ye householde of Israel? As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) ye get no answere of me: 7 as for the thinges that ye go aboute, it shall not come to passe, where as ye saye: we wil be as the Heithen, 7 do as other people in the londe, wod 7 stone wil we worship.

As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) I myself, wil rule you with a mightie honde, with a stretchedout arme, and with indignacion poured out ouer you: 7 wil bringe you out of the naciones and londes, wherein ye are scatred: and gather you together with a mightie hode, with a stretchedout arme 7 with indignacion poured out vpon you: 7 wil bringe you in to the wildernes of the people, 7 there I will reason with you face to face. Like as I punished youre foereathers in the wildernes, so wil I punish you also, saieth the LORDE God. I wil bringe you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the covenaut. The forsakers also and the transgressours wil I take from amonse you, 7 bringe them out of the londe of youre habitation: as for the londe of Israel, they shall not come in it: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

"Go now then (saieth the LORDE God) ye house of Israel, cast awaye, and destroye euery man his Idols: then shal ye heare me, and nomore blaspheme my holy name with youre offringes and Idols. But vpon my holy hill, eu e vpon the hie hill of Israel shal all the house of Israel and all that is in the londe, worship me: 7 and in the same place will I fauoure them, and there will I requyre youre heauenoffringes, and the firstlinges of youre oblacions, with all youre holy thinges.

I wil accepte youre sweete saunoure, when I 7 bringe you from the naciones, and gather you together out of the londes, wherein ye be scatred: that I maye be hallowed in you before the Heithen, and that ye maye knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue brought you in to the londe of Israel: yee in to the same lode, that I spake to geue vnto youre fore fathers. There shal ye call to remembrance youre owne wayes and all youre ymaginacies, wherein ye haue bene defyled: 7 and ye shall be displeased with youre owne selues, for all youre wickednes, that ye haue done. And ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE: when I entreate you after my name, not after youre wicked wayes, nor acordinge to youre corrupte workes: o ye house of Israel, saieth the LORDE.

Morover, the worde of 5 LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face towards the south, 7 speake to the south wynde, and saye to the wodde towards the south: Heare the worde of the LORDE, thus saieth the LORDE God: Behold, I wil kynde a fyre in the, 5 shall consume the

The 39th Chapter.

The word of the LORDE came to me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face towarde Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, *prophecye agaynst the londe of Israel, saye to the lode of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, I wil vpon the, *will drawe my swearde out of thy sheath, a rote out of thy both the righteous a wicked, forseal shal my swearde go out of his sheath, agaynst all flesh from the north to the south: that all flesh maye knowe, how that I the LORDE have drawen my swearde out of the sheath, it shall not be put in agayn.

Mourne therefoe (o thou sonne of man) *thou shal make thy lownes crack withall, yee mourne betterly for them: And ye they saye, wherfore mournest thou? Then tell them: for the tydinges that commeth, at the which all hertes shall melt, all hondes shall be letten downe, all stomackes shall fayne, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth a shall be fulfilled, saieth the LORDE God.

Agayn, the word of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophesse, and speake: Thus saieth the LORDE God: speake, the swearde is sharpened wel scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, a scourd *it maye be bright. *O, the destroyenge staff of my sonne, shal bringe downe all wode. He hath put his swearde to thy dightinge, *good holde maye be takë of it. This swearde is sharpened dight, *it maye be geuen in to the honde of the manslayer.

Crie (o thou sonne of man) and howle, for this swearde shal smyte my people, *all the rulers in Israel, with which my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde thorow this swearde. Smyte thou vpo thy thee, for, wherfore shulde not the place a staff of indignit come? Prophecy thou sonne of man, a smyte thine hodes together: make the swearde two edged, yee make it thre edged, of man-slayers swearde, that swearde of the greate slaughter, which shal smyte them, euens in their preuy chambres: to make them abaszed a faynte at the hertes, a in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bright and shapere is it, how wel dight a mete for a slaughter? Get the to some place alone, ether vpon the right honde or on the lefte, whither so euer thy face turneth. I wil smyte my hondes together also, and satisfie my wrothfull indignacion: Euen I the LORDE haue sayde it.

The word of the LORDE came yet vnto me agayn, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, make the two stretes, that the swearde of thy kinge of Babilo maye come. Both these stretes shall go out of one londe. He shal set him vp a place, at the head of the strelte shal he chose him out a corner. Make a strelte, that the swearde maye come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cite of Jerusalem. For the kinge of Babilon shall stonde in the turnynge of the waye, at the head of the two stretes: *to axe councell at the sothsayers, castinge the lottes with his arowes, to axe councell at the Idols, and to loke in the lyuer. But the sothsayenge shall poynte to the right syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre, to smyte it with a greate noyse, to crie out Alarum, to set battell-rammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp dyches, a to make bulworkes.

Neuertheles, as for a sothsayenge, they shal holde it but for vanite, euens as though a lye were tolde them: Yee and they them selues remembre their wickednesse, so that by right they must be takë and wonne. Therefoe saieth the LORDE God: For so much as ye youre selues shewe youre offence, and hane opened youre wickednesse, so that in all youre workes men maye se youre synnes: Yee in so much (I saye) that ye youre selues haue made mention thereof, ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shameful wicked gyde of Israel, whose daye is come: euens the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende: Thus saieth the LORDE God: take awaye the mytre, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punysh, punysh, yee punysh them will I, and destroye them: and that shall not be fulfilled, vntill he come, to whom the judgment belongeth, and to whom I haue given it. And thou (o sonne of man) prophesie: Thus saith the LORDE God to the children of Ammon, I to their blaspemie, prophesie thou: The swearde, the swearde, is drawn forth already to the slaughter; hast thou loked the out vanities prophesied thy eyes: it maye come vpon thy necke, like as vpo that other vngodly, which be slayne: whose daye came, when their wickednesse was full.

Though it were put vp agayne in to the sheath, yet will I punysh the, in the londe where thou wast norished borne, and poure my indignacion vpon the, and will blowe vpon the, in the fyre of my wrath, and deluyer the vnto cruel people, which are lerned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre, and thy bloude shall be shed in the londe, that thou mayest be put out of remembrance. Even I the LORDE haue spoken it.

The riiij. Chapter.

MOROUER, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, saith: Thou sonne of man, wilt thou not reprove this bloud-thurstie cite? Shewe the their abominations, tell them: Thus saith the LORDE God: O thou cite, that sheddest bloude in my myddest of the, thy tyme maye come also: and makest the Idols to defyle the withall. Thou hast made thy selfe gilty, in bloude thou hast shed: defyled i i dydols, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy daies to drawe nye, made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore will I make it to bee confounded amoghe the Heathen, to be despised in all the lodes, whether be nye or farre frome: they shall laugh it to scorne, thou hast gott the soule of a name, art full off myschefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shed bloude in the. In the haue they despised father mother, in the haue they oppressed the strainger, in the haue they vexed the wydowe fatherlesse. Thou hast despised my Sanctuary, and vnhalowed my Sabbath. Murthers are there in the, that shed bloude, and eate upon the hilles, and in the they se vnhappyynesse.

In thou haue they discovered their fathers shame, in the haue they vexed women in their sickness. Every man hath dealt shamefully with his neighbours wife, abominably defyled his daughter in lawe. In the hate every man forced his owne sister, euen his fathers daughter: Yee giffes hath bene receauned in the, to shed bloude. Thou hast taken vsury encreace, thou hast oppressed thy neighbours by extorcion, and forgotten me, saith the LORDE God. Beholde, I haue smytten my hordes vp vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vse, and vpon the bloude which hath bene shed in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or maye thy hordes defende them selues, in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon? Euen I the LORDE that speake it, will bringe it also to passe.

I will scartre the amonke the Heithen, strowe the aboute in the lodes, and will cause thy fylthynesse to cerse out of the: yee and I will haue the in possession in the sight of the Heithen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORDE.

And the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that shulde be brasse, tynne, yr5 lead, are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore, thus saith the LORDE God: For so much as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I will bryngye you together vnsto Jerusalem, like as slyuer, brasse, yron, tynne and leade are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melt them: Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath and indignacion. I will bryngye you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruel displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Like as the slyuer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye maye knowe, that I the LORDE haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of ma, tell her: Thou art an vn cleene londe, which is not rayned vpon in the daye off the cruel wrath: thy prophets that are in the, are swore together to devour soules, like as a roaringe Lyon, that lyeth by his pray. They receaune riches and good, and make many wyddowes in ÿ. Thy prestes breake my lawe, and defy[e] my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene the holy and vnholie, nether discerne betwene the cleane and vnclene: they turne their eyes fro my Sabbathes, and I am vnhalowed amongst them.

"Thy rulers in the are like rauyshinge wolues, to shed bloude, and to destroye soules, for their owne covetous lucre. As for thy prophete, they dawbe with vntempered claye, they se vanities, and prophetic lies vnto them, sayenge: the LORDE God sayeth so, where as the LORDE hath not spoken. The people in the londe vseth extorci[on] and roberry. They vexe the poore and nedy: and oppresse the straunger agaynst right. And I sought in the londe for a man, that wolde make vp the hedge, and set him selfe in the gappe before me in the lodes behalfe, ÿ I shulde not vttterly destroye it: but I coude fynde none. Therefore wil I pour out my cruel displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes will I recompence vpô their heads, saith the LORDE God.

THE worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, there were two wom[e], that had one mother: "These (when they were yonge) beganne to playe the harlottes in Egipte. There were their brestes brussed, and the pappes off their maydenheade destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oola, and hir yongest sister Ooliba. These two were myne, and bare sonnes and daughters. Their names were, Samaria, and that was Oola: and Jerusalem, that was Ooliba. As for Oola, she beganne to go a whorynge, when I had takë her to me. She was set on fyre vpô hir louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: "even the prynces and lorde[s], that were deckte in costye araye: fayre yonge men, lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thorow hir whordome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men off Assiria: Yee she was madde vpon them, and defy[e]d herself with all their Idols. Nether ceased she frô the fornicacion, that she vsed with the Egipcians: for in hir youth they laye with her, they brussed the brestes of hir maydenheade, and poured their wordome vpon her. "Wherfore, I deleyuered hir in to ÿ hodes of hir louers, even the Assirians, whom she so loued. "These discovered hir shame, toke hir soumes and doughters, and slue her with the swearde: An euell name gat she of all people, ãd they punisshed her.

"Hir sister Ooliba sawe this, ãd destroyed herself with inordinate loue, more then she, "exceeded hir sister in whordome: she loued ÿ Assirians (which also laye with her) namely, the prynces ã greate lorde[s], that were clothed with all maner of gorgious apparell, all lusty horsemen and fayre yonge persons. Then I sawe, that they both were defy[e]d a like. But she increased still in whordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymage[s] of the Caldees set forth with fresh colours, with fayre gyrdles aboute them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heads, lokyng all like prynces (after ÿ maner of the Babilonias and Caldees in their owne londe, where they be borne) Imeddiately, as soone as she sawe them, she bret in loue vpon them, and sent messa[n]gers for them in to the londe of the Caldees.

Now when the Babilonias came to her, they laye with her, and defy[e]d her with their whordome, and so was she volupted with them. And when hir lust was abated from them, hir whordome and shame was discovered ã sene: "then my herte forsoke her, like as my herte was gone from hir sister also. Neuertheles she vsed hir whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes off hir youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the londe off Egipte: she bret in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like ÿ flesh of Asses, ãd their sede like the sede off horses. Thus thou hast rem[n]ued the fylynesse of thy youth, when thy louers bressed thy pappes, and marred thy brestes in Egipte.

Therfore (ô Ooliba) thus saith ÿ LORDE God. I will rayse vpon thy louers (with whom thou hast satisfied thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them together rounde aboute the: Namely, the Babilonians, and all the Caldees: Pecod, Schoa and Coa, with all the Assirians:

all yonge and fayre louters: princes and lordes, knyghtes and gentlemen, which be all good horsmen: These shall come vpon the with horses, charretes, ã a greate multitude of people: which shall be harnesed aboute the on euery syde, with brestplates, sheldes and helmettes. I will punysh ã before them, yee they the selues shall punysh the, acordinge to their owne iudgment. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so that they shall deale cruely with the. They shall cut of thy nose and thine eares, and the remnaunt shall fall thorow the swearde. They shall cary awaye thy sones and daughters, ã the resydue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shall strype the out of thy clothes, ã cary thy costly Jewels awaye with them.

Thus will I make an ende off thy fylthynenesse ã whordome, which thou hast brought out of the lode of Egipte: so that thou shalt turne thine eyes nomore after them, ã cast thy mynde nomore vpon Egipte. For thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I will deluyer ã in to the hodes of them, whom thou hatest: yee euen in to the hondes of them, with whô thou hast fulfylled thy lust, which shall deale cruely with ã: All thy laboure shall they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy filthy whordome shall come to light. All these thinges shall happen vnto the, because of thy whordome, which thou hast vsed amonge the Gentiles, with whose Idols thou hast defyled thy self. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy sister, therfore will I geue the hir cuppe in thy honde. Thus saieth the LORDE God: Thou shalt dryuke off thy sisters cuppe, how depe ã farre so euer it be to the botomme. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be full off dronckeennes and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cuppe of destruccio ã waistinge: the same shalt thou dryuke, and suppe it out eue to ã dregges, yee thou shalt eate vp the broken peces off it, and so teare thine owne brestes: For euen I haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God.

Thus saieth ã LORDE God: For so moch as thou hast forgotte me, ã cast me asyde, so beare now thine owne fylthinesse ã whordome. The LORDE sayde morouer vnto me: Thou sonne of mû, wilt thou not reprove Oola ã Ooliba? Shewe the theiur abominacionis: namely, ã they haue broke their wedlocke, ã stayned their hodes with bloud: yee euen with their Idols haue they committed aduoutry, ã oﬀered them theiur owne children (to be deuoured) whô they had borne vnto me. ã Yee ã this haue they done vnto me also: they have defyled my Sactuary in that same daye, ã haue vnhallowed my Sabbath. For when they had slayne their childre for their Idols, they came the same daye in to my Sanctuary, to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my house. Besyde all this, thon hast sent thy messaugers for men out of farre coutrees: and whê they came, thou hast bathed, trymed and set forth thy self off the best fashion: ã thou sattest vpo a goodly bed, ã a table spred before the: wherypon thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Then was there greate cheare with her, ã the men ã were sent fro farre coutrees ouer the deserte: vnto these they gaue bracelets vpon their hondes, ã set glorious crownes vpon their heads. Then thought I: no doute, these wil use their harlotry also with yoder olde whore. And they wenite in to her, as vnto a comon harlot: Euen so wenite they also to Oola ã Ooliba, those filthy women.

O ye all that love vertue and righteousnes, judge the, punysh them: as aduouters and murtherers ought to be judged and punysched. For they are breakers off wedlocke, and the bloud is in their hondes. Wherefore thus saieth the LORDE God: bringe a greate multitude off people vpon them, and make them be scatred and spoyled: these shal stone them, and gorre them with their swearde. They shal slaye their sonsnes and daughters and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus will I destroye all soch fylthynes out off the londe: that all women may lerne, not to do after youre vncenesse. And so they shall laye youre fylthinesse vpon youre owne selunes, and ye shalbe punyshed for the synnes, that ye haue commited with youre Idols: ã ye shal knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The xiii. Chapter.

In the ix. yeare, in the x. Moneth, the x. daye off the Moneth, came the worde off the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: O thou sonne off man, wryte vp the name off this daye, yee eue ã hourlye of this present daye: when the kyng of Babilon set himself against Jerusalem.  *Shewe ã obstinate housholde a parable, ã speake vnto the: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Get the a pot, set it on, ã poure water in to it: put all the peces together in it, all the good peces: the lyon and the shulder, ã fyll it with the best bones. Take one off the best shepe, ã an heape off bones withall: let it boyle well, ã let the bones seyth well therin.

With that, sayde the LORDE God on this maner: *Wo be vnto the bloudy cite of ã pot, wherypon the rustynesse hægeth, and is not yet soured awaye. *Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: there nede no lottes be cast thercfor, for the bloude is yet in it. Vpon a playne drye stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde, for that it might be couered with dust. And thercfor hane I letten her poure hir bloude vpon a playne drye stony rocke, because it shulde not be hid, and that I might breinge my wrothfull indignacion and vengeance vpon her.

Wherfore, thus saieth ã LORDE God: O, wo be vnto that bloudehurstic cite, for whô I will prepare a heape off wodde: beare thou ã bones together, kyndle thou the fyre, seeth the flesh, let all be well sodde, that the bones maye be suckte out. Morouer, set the pot emptye vpon the coales, that it maye be warne and the metall hote: that the fyth and rustynesse maye be consumed. But it will not go off, there is so moch off it: the rustinesse must be brent out. Thy filthynesse is abbominable, for I wolde haue clenched the, but thou woldest not be clenched. Thou canst not be poured from thine vnclennesse, till I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Even I the LORDE haue so deuyed: Yee it is come therto alredy, that I will do it. I will not go backe, I will not spare, I wil not be intreated: but acordinge to thy wayes ad ymaginacions, thou shalt be punyshed, saieth the LORDE God.

And the worde vnto the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off man, beholde, I will take awaye the pleasure off thine eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou nether mourne ner wepe, ner water thy chokes thercfor: thou mayest mourns by thy self alone, but vse no deadly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shues vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners bred. So I speake vnto the people by tymes in the morning, and at euene my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morow, I dyd as I was comauended. And ã people sayde vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs, what that signifieth, which thou dost? I answered them, the worde vnto the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Tell the house of Israel, thus saieth ã LORDE God: beholde, I wil suspende my Sanctuary: euë the glory of youre power, the pleasure of youre eyes, and the thinge that ye lone: youre sonnes and doughters whom ye haue left, shal fall thorow the swerde.

Like as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shal not hyde youre faces, ye shal eate no mourners bred: youre bonettes shal haue vpon youre heads, ã shues vpon youre fete. Ye shal nether mourne ner wepe, but in youre synnes ye shal be sorowfull, and one repenteth with another. Thus Ezechiel is youre shewtökë. For loke as he hath done, so (when this commeth) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, that I am ã LORDE God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them their power, their IOye and honoure, the lust off their eyes, the burthë of their bodies: namely, their sonnes and doughters: Thë shall there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shewe the. In that daye shal thy mouth be opened to him, which is escaped, that thou mayest speake, and be nonmore domme: Yee and thou shal be their shewtökë, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

The ye. Chapter.

THe worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst ã Ammonites, prophyece vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: Hearre the worde off the LORDE God, Thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary: A ha, I trow it be now suspende: and ouer the londe of Israel, I trow it be now desolate: yee ad ouer the house of Iuda, I trow they be now led awaye presoners: Beholde, I wil deluyer ã to the people of the east, ã they maye haue the in possession: these shal set their castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and drynkle vp thy mylcke. As for Rabath, I wil make of it a stall for camels, and of Ammon a sheepfold: and ye shal knowe, that I am the LORDE.

For thus sayeth the LORDE God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thine hondes, and stamped with thy fete, yee rejoised in thine herte over the londe of Israel with despys: beholde, I wil stretch out myne hode over the also, and deluyer the, to be spoyled off the Heithen, and rote the from amoune the people, and cause the be destroyed out off all londes: yee I will make the be layed waist, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the LORDE God: *For so much as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house off Iuda, it is but like as all other Gëtiles be: Therefore beholde, I will make the cities off Moab weponslesse, and take awaye their strength: their cities and chefe coastes off their londe, which are the pleasures off the countre: As namely, Betisimoth, Baalmeô and Cariathaim: these will I open vnto the off the east, *they maye fall vpon the Ammonites: and will geue it them in possession: so that the Ammonites shall no more be had in remebrauence amonge the Heithen. Euen thus will I punysh Moab also, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

Morouer, thus sayeth the LORDE God: "Because that Edom hath avenged *eased himself vpon the house off Iuda, thercfor thus sayeth the LORDE: I will reach out myne honde vpon Edom, and take awaye man and boest out of it. From Themâ vnto Dedan wil I make it desolate, they shalbe slayne with the swarde. Thorrow my people of Israel, *wil I avenge me agayne vpo Edô: they shall hâdle him, acordinge to my wrath and indignació, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce, saith the LORDE God.

Thus sayeth the LORDE God: "For so much as the Philistynes have done this: namely, taken vengeaunce with despitefull stomaches, and off an euell euell will set them selues to destroye: Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE God: Beholde, I wil stretch out myne hode over the Philistynes, and destroye the destroyer, and cause all the remnaunt off the see coast to perish. A great vengeaunce will I take vpon them, and punysh them cruellly: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE, which haue avenged me off them.

The 116. Chapter.

I talke, that in the xi. yeare, the first 2 daye off the Moneth, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: "Thou sonne of man, Because that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: A ha, now I trow the portes of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my bely full. Yee thercfor sayeth the LORDE God: Beholde O Tyre, I will vpó the, I will bringe a greate multitude off people agaynst *, like as whé the see arysth with his waves: These shall bærke the walles off Tyre, and cast downe his towres: I wil scraye the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yee as the dryenge place, where the fyshers hange vp their nettes by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the LORDE God. The Gëtiles shall spoyle her: hir daughters vpon the felde shall perish with the swarde, *they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

For thus sayeth the LORDE God: Beholde, I wil bryngé hither Nabuchodonosor (which is the kyng off Babilon * a kyng of kynges) from the North, vpó Tyre, with horses, charettes, horsmen and with a greate multitude of people. Thy daughters that are in the londe, shal he slaye with * swarde: But agaynst * he shall maké bullwerké * grage vp dyches abouté the, a lift vp his shyldé agaynst *. His slynes * batelrâmes shall he prepare for thy walles, * 'with his weape's bærke downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shall couer *, they shall be manye: thy walles shal shake at the noysye of * horse men, charettes * wheles: when he cómeth to thy portes, as men do in to an open cite. With the hoffes off his horse fete, shal he tredge downe all thy stretes.

He shall slaye people with the swarde, * bærke downe the pilers of thy strength. They shall waist awaye thy riches, * spoyle thy marchâudise. Thy walles shal they bærke downe, * destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre * foundacions, shal they cast in the water. Thus wil I bryngé the melody of thy songes, * the voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an ende, so that they shal nomor be herde. I wil make a bare stone off the, yee a dryenge place for nettes, and shal neuer be buylded agayne: For euery LORDE
haue spoken it, sayeth the LORDE God: thus hath the LORDE God spoken concernynge Tyre: The Iles shall be moued at the nysse off thy fall, y at the crie of the slayne, y shall be murthered in the. All kynges off the see shall come downe from their seates regall: they shal laye awaye their robases, and put of their costly clotthings: Yee with tremblinge shal they be clothed, they shall syt vpó the grounde: they shal be afayed
at thy sodane fall, and be abassled at the.
They shal mourne for the, and saye vnto
the: O thou noble cite, y hast bene so greatly occupied off olde, "thou hast bene the strongest vpon the see with thine inhabitors off whom al men stode in feare: How art thou now so ytterly destroyed? Now at the tyme off thy fall the inhabitors off the Iles, yee and the Iles them selues shall stonde in feare at thine ende. For thus sayeth the LORDE God: when I make the a desolate cite (as other cities be, that no man dwell in) and when I brynge the depe vpon the, y greate waters maye couer the: Then will I cast the downe vnto them, that descende in to y pytte: vnto a people that hath bene løge deed, and set the in a londe y is beneth, like the olde wyldernes, with them which go downe to their graues, so y no ma shal dwell more in the. And I will make the to be no more in honoure, in the lode of the lynynge. I will make an ende off the, ad thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be founde for euermore, saith y LORDE God.

The rviij. Chapter.

THE worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: O thou sonne off ma,
make a lamentable cōplaynte vpon Tyre, y
saye vnto Tyre, which is a port off the sea,
y occupieth with moche people; y and many Iles: thus speaketh y LORDE God: O Tyre thou hast sayde: what, I am a noble cite, thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goody.
All thy tables haue they made of Cipre trees of the mount Senir. Fro Libanus haue they take Cedere trees, to make the mastes: y the Okes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy bordres haue they made of yuer, y costly wod out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy sale was of whyte small neddle worke out off the londe of Egipte, to haue vpó thy mast: y thy hanginges of yelow syleke y purple, out of y Iles of Elisa. They of Sidó y Arnad were thy maryners, y the wysest in Tyre were thy shypmasters. The eldest and wysest at Gebal were they, that mended y stopped thy shippes.

All shippes off the see with their shipme occupied their marchaundises in the. The Perses, Lydians and Lybians were in thyne hoost, and helped the to fight: these hanged vp their shildes y helmettes with the, these set forth thy beuty.

They off Arnad were with thine hoost
rōude aboute thy walles, y were thy watchmen vpon thy towres: these hanged vp their shildes rōude aboute thy walles, and made the maruelous goody. Tharsis occupied with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne and lead, and made thy market greate. Iauan, Tubal and Mesech were thy marchauntes,
which brought the men, y ornamentes off metall for thy occupynge. They off the house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme off thy Marte, horse, horsmen and mules.
They off Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other Iles that occupied with the,
brought the wethers, elphæt bones and Paycokes for a present. The Sierins occupied with the, because of thy dyuerse workes, and increased thy marchaundises, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worke, with whyte
lynynge cloth, with syleke and with Christall.

Iuda and the londe off Israel occupide with the, and brought vnto thy markettes, wheate, balme, hony, oyle, y triaycle. Damascus also vesd marchaundises with the, in the best wyne and whyte woll: because thy occupienge was so greate, and thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, and Meusal have brought vnto thy markettes, yron redy made, with Casia and Calamus, acordinge to thyne occupienge.
Dedan occupied with the, in fayre tapestry worke and quyszhyns. Arabia y all the princes off Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wethers and goates.

The marchauntes off Seba and Rema haue occupied also with the, in all costly spices, all precious stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy marckettes. Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchauntes off Saba, Assiria and Chelmad, were all dowers with y and occupied with the: In costly rayment, off yelow slyke and neddle worke, (very precious, t therefore packte y bonde together with roapes) Yee and in Cedre wodde, at the tyme off thy marckettes. The shippes of Tharsis were the chefe off thy occupienge.

Thus thou art full, and in greate worship, euen in the myddest off the see. Thy mariners were euer byrynginge vnto the out of many waters. But y easte wynde shal overbeare the in to the myddest off the see: so y thy wares, thy marchaudies, thy ryches, thy mariners, thy shipmasters, thy helpers, thy occupiers (that brought the things necessary) the men off warre that are in the: yee and all thy cowns shall perish in the myddest off the see, in the daye off thy fall. The suberbes shall shake at the loude crie off thy shippmen. All whirry men, and all mariners vpo the see, shall leape out of their boates, and set them selues vpon the lode. They shal lift vpon their voyce because off the, and make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon their heades, ad lye downe in the ashes. They shal shawe them selues, g put sackle cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall monrhe for the with hertfull sorow, and heuy lamentacion, yee their children also shall wepe for the: Alas, what cite hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares t marchaudies came fro the sees, thou gauest all people enough. The kynes off the earth hast thou made rich, thorow the multitude off thy wares and occupieng: But now art thou cast downe in to the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwell in the fles are abasshed at the, and all their kynes are afrayed, yee their faces haue chaunged coloure. The marchauntes of the nacions wondre at the, In that thou art so cleene brought to naught, g comest nonore vp.

The rybiiij. Chapter.

The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, tell the prynce of Tyre: * Thus saieth the LORDE God: because thou hast a proude hert and last sayde: *I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest off the see like a god: where as thou art but a man t not God, t yet stoundest in thine owne cőceate, that thou art God: Behold, thou thykest thy selfe wyser then Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd from y. * With thy wiszdome t thy vnderstōdinge, thou hast gottē the greate wylthynesse, and gathered treasure of syluer g golde. With thy greate wiszdome and occupienge, hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate riches thy hert is proude.

Therfore thus saieth y LORDE God: For so much as thou hast lift vp thine herte, as though thou werest God: behold, I wil bringe enemies vpon the, euen the tyrauntes of the Heithē: these shall drawe out their swarde vpon thy beuty and wiszdome, and shall dye thy glory. They shall cast the downe to the pytte, so that thou shalt dye in the middest of the see, as they that be slaye. Let se, yff thou wilt saye then (before the that slaye y) I am God: where as thou art but a man, and not God, in the hondes of them that slaye the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncreasised in the hōdes of y enemies: for I myself haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God.

Morouer, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complayne over the kynge of Tyre, t tell him: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Thou art a seale of a licknesse, full off wyszdome g excellent beuty. Thou hast bene in y pleasait garde off God: thou art dexte with all maner of precious stones: with Ruby, Topas, Christall, Iacyncte, Onyx, Iaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbucē, g golde. Thy beuty y holes y be in y were set forth in the daye of thy creacion. Thou art a fayre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

I haue set the vpon the holy mount off God, there hast thou bene, and walked amōge the fayre glisteringe stones. From the tyme of thy creacion thou hast bene right excellent, tyll wickednesse was founde in the. *Because off thy greate marchaundise, thy hert is full off wickednesse, g thou hast offended. Therfore wil I cast the from the mount of God, (O thou coueringe Cherub) and destroye the amōge the glisteringe stones. Thy hert was proude in thy fayre beuty, g thorow thy beuty thou hast destroyed thy wiszdome. * I will

I vil make the lôde of Egipte to be desolate amonge other wast countrie, and her cities to lye voyde xi. yeares, amonge other voyde cities: And I vil scatre the Egipcians amonge the Heithen and nacios.

Agayne, thus sayeth the LORDE God: Whê the xi. yeares are expyred, } } I vil gather the Egipcians together agayn, out off the nacios, amonge wîo they were setatred, and vil bringe the presoners off Egipte agayn in to the lôde off Pathures their owne natuye countrie, that they maye be ther a lowly small kyngdome: yee they shall be the smallest amonge other kyngdoms, lest they exalte them selues aboue the Heithen: for I vil so mynush them, that they shall nomore rule the Heithen. In the xxviij. yeare, the first daye of the first Moneth, came ye worde of the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babile, the he maye take awaye all hir substance, robbe hir robberies, ad spoyle hir spoyles, to paye his hoost theirwagones withall. I wil geue him the londe of Egipte for his laboure, that he take for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wil I cause the horne off the house of Israel to growe forth, thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

The 112. Chapter.

MOROUER, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophecy saith: thus saith the LORDE God: "Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the LORDE is come: the darcke daye of Heithê, the houre is at honde, the swarde commeth vpon Egipte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egipte, when hir people are taken awaye, and hir foundacions are destroyed: the Morians londe shall be afraied, yee the Morians londe, Lybia and Lydia, all their comon people, and Chub, all ye be confederate vnto the, shal fall with the swarde.

Thus saith the LORDE: The maynteyners of the londe of Egipte shall fall, the pryde of hir power shall come downe: euen vnto the tower off Syenes shall they be slayne downe with the swarde, saith the LORDE God: amonge other desolate countrees they shall be made desolate, amoure other waist cities they shalbe waisted. And they shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I kyndle a fyre in Egipte, when all hir helpers are destroyed.

At that tyme, shal there messangers go forth fro me in shippes, to make carelesse Morians afraied: and sorowe shal come vpon them in the daye of Egipte, for doutes it shal come. Thus saith the LORDE God: I wil make an ende of the people of Egipte thorow the honde of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babile. He and his people with him, yee and the cruell tyrantunes of the Heithen shalbe brought to destroye the londe. They shal drawe out their swarde vpon Egipte and fyll the londe full of slayne men. I will drye vp their fluides of water, ad sell the londe in to the hondes of wicked people. The londe and all ye is therin, wil I destroye thorow the enemys. Euë the LORDE haue sayde it.

And thus saith the LORDE God: I will destroye the Idols, and bryngye the ymages of Noph to an ende. "There shal nomore be a prynce of Egipte, and a fearfulnesse wil I sende in to the Egyptian londe. As for Paphures, I wil make it desolate, ad kyndle a fyre in Zano, Alexandria wil I punyshe, pooure my wrothfull indignaciop vpon Sin, which is the strength of Egipte. All the sustaunce of Alexandria wil I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egipte.

Sin shalbe in greathe heunyesse, Alexandria shalbe rooted out, and Noph shal haue daylie sorowe. The best men off Heliopolis and Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swarde, ad caried awaye captuye. At Taphnis the daye shalbe darcke, when I breake there the scepter of the londe of Egipte, and when the pompe of hir power shall haue an ende. A cloud shal cover her, and hir daughters shalbe led awaye into captuyte. Thus wil I punyshe Egipte, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

It happened in the xi. yeare, vpon the seuenthe daye of the first Moneth, the LORDES worde vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne of my, I wil breake thy arme of Pharao kyng of Egipte: and lo, it shal not be bond to be healed, nether shal eny playstre be layed vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so strôge, as to holde a swarde. Therfore, thus saith the LORDE God: beholde, I will vpon Pharao thy kinge of Egipte, and bruse his strôge arme (yet is it but a broken one) wil smyte the swarde out of his honde.

As for the Egyptian, I wil scathe them amonge the Heithen, strowe the in the londes aboute. Agayyne I wil strength thy arme of the kinge of Babile, geue him my swarde in his hode: but I wil breake Pharaos arme, as he shal holde it before him piteously, like a wounded man.
MORUER, it happened in the xi. yeare

namely, a great multitude of people: these shall drye the in to my yarne, for I will cast the vpō the lōde, and let the lye vpō the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpō the: I will geue all the beasts of the felde enough off the. Thy flesh will I cast vpō the hilles, and flyl the valleys with thy hyenesse. I will water the londe with the abundance off thy bloude euon to the mōtaynes, ęż valleys shall be full off the.

All the lightes off heauen will I put out ower the, and bringe darknesse vpon thy londe, saieth ęż LORDE God. I wil trouble the herettes off many people, when I bringe thy destruccion amōge the Heithen and countreces, whom thou knowest not. Yee I will make many people with their kynges so afrayed thorow ęż, that their hayre shal stonde vp, whē I shake my swearde at their faces. Sodenly shal they be astonnyed, euery man in him self, at ęż daye of thy fall. For thus saieth the LORDE God: the kyng of Babilons swearde shall come vpon ęż, with ęż sweardes of the worthies will I smyte downe thy people. All they that be mightie amonge the Gētiles, shal waist the proude pompe of Egypte, and byrynge downe all hir people. All the catell also of Egypte wil I destroye, that they shal come nomore vpō the waters: so that nether mās fote ner beasts clawe, shal stere them eny more. Then wil I make their waters cleare, and cause their flowses to runne like oyle, sayeth the LORDE God: when I make the londe of Egypte desolate, and when ęż countre with all that is therin, shalbe layde waist: and whē I smyte all thē which dwell in it, that they maye knowe, that I am the LORDE. This is the mournyng, that the doughters off the Heithen shal make: Yee a sorrow and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte and all hir people, saieth the LORDE God.

In the xij. yeare, the xv. daye of the Moneth, came the wordes off the LORDE vpto me sayenge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypte, and cast them downe, yee ăd the mightie people of the Heithē also, euon with thē that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (how fayre so euer thou be) and laye thē with the vncrecymisē. Amōge thē that be slayne with the swearde, shal they lye. The swearde is geuen alredy, he shal be drawn forth and all his people. The mightie worthies and his helpers, ęż be gone downe and lye with the vncrecymisē and with thēm that be slayne with ęż swearde: shal speake to him out of the hell.

Assur is there also with his company, ăd their graues rounde aboute, which were slayne ăd fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye besyde him in the howe pytte. His comōs are buried rounde aboute his graue: alltogether wounded and slayne with the swearde, which men afore tyme brought feare in to ęż londe off the lyuynge.

"There is Elam also with all his people, and their graues rounde aboute: which all beynge wounded and slayne with the swearde, are gone downe vncrecymisē vnder the earth, which nevertheless somtyme brought feare in to the londe off the lyuynge: for the which they beare their shame, with the other that be gone downe to ęż graue. Their buryall is geuen them and all their people, amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are rounde aboute all them, which be vncrecymisē, and with them that be slayne thorow the swearde: for seynge that in tymes past they made the londe off the lyuynge afrayed, they must now beare their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, and their people, and their graues rounde aboute. These all are amonge the vncrecymisē, and then that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the londe off the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge ęż worthies, and vncrecymisē Giantes? which with their weapons are gone downe to hel: whose sweardes are layed vnder their heads, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthies, they haue brought feare in to ęż lōde of ęż lyuynge? Yee amōge the vncrecymisē shalbe destroyed, and slepe with them, that perished thorow the swearde.

There is the lōde off Edom with hir kynges and prynces also, ăd which with their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swerade, yee amonge the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe in to the pytte. Moreover, there be all the prynces of the north, with all the Sidoniæ, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare and strength they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircumcised, amonge those that be slayne with the swerade: and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to ý pytte. Now when Pharao seyth this, he shall be comforted oner all his people, that is slayne with the swerade: both Pharao all his hoost, saith ý LORDE God. For I haue gecé my feare in the lode of the lyynge. But Pharao all his people shal lye amóge the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swerade, saith the LORDE God.

The rxxiiij. Chapter.

A GAYNE, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off man, Speake to the childre of thy people, and tell them: When I seconde a swerade vpon a londe, yf the people off the londe take a man off their countre, and set him to be their watchman: ý same man (whái he seyth the swerade come vpon the londe) shall blowe the trompet, and warne the people. Yff a man now heare the noysse off the trompet ý will not be warned, and the swerade come ád take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his owne heade: For he herde the soide of the trompet, and wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yff he will reecane warneynge, he shal sane his life. Agayne, yf the watch man se the swerade come, and shewe it not with the trompet, so ý the people is not warned: yff the swerade come then, and take eny man from amóge thê: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude will I requyre off the watchmans houde.

And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman ý vnto the house of Israell: that where as thou hearest eny thing out of my mouth, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. Yff I seye vnto the wicked: thou wicked, thou shalt surely dye: and thou genest him not warneynge, that he maye bewarre off his vngodly waye: then shall the wicked dye in his owne synne, but his bloude will I requyre of thy honde. Neuertheless yf thou warne the wicked off his waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wil not be turned from it: then shal he dye because off his synne, but thou hast delueryd thy soule.

Therefore (O thou sonne off man) speake vnto the house off Israel, Ye saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shuld we then be restored vnto life? Tell them: As truly as I lyue (saith the LORDE God) I have no pleasure in the death off the wicked, but much rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, o ye off the house off Israel. Oh, wherfore will ye dye?

Thou sonne off man, tell the children off thy people: ý The rightoussnes of the rightouss shall not saue him, when so euer he turneth awaye vnfaithfuly: Agayne, the wickednesse of the wicked shall not hurt him, when so euer he connerteth from his vnagodlynesse:

And ý rightoussnesse of the rightouss shall not saine his life, when so euer he synneth. Yff I saye vnto the rightouss, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his owne rightoussnesse, and do synne: then shall his rightoussnesse be nonore thought vpon, but in the wickednesse that he hath done, he shall dye.

Agayne, yff I seye to the wicked: ý thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne fro his synnes, and do the things that is laufull and right: In so moch that the same wicked man geneth the pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes off life, and dothe no wrógge:

Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yee the synnes that he had done, shal never be thought vpon: For in so moch as he doth now the thygne that is laufull and right, he shall lyue. And yet the children off thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the LORDE is not right, where as their owne waye is rather vnright.

When the rightouss turneth from his rightoussnesse, and doeth the thygne that is wicked, he shall dye therfore. But yf the wicked turne from his wickednesse, doinge the thinge that is laufull and right, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of ý LORDE is not equal. O ye house of Israel, I will judge every one of you after his ways.

In the xiij. yeare, the v. daye of the x. Moneth of our captuynte, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: ye cite is destroyed. Now the honde of the LORDE had bene vpon me the euenyng, afores this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vsytill the mornynge that he came to me: Yee he opened my mouth, so y I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of y LORDE vnto me, and sayde: Thou some off man, these that dwell in the waisted londe of Israel, saye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the londe in possession: now are we many, and the londe is geuen vs to possesses also. And therefore tell them: Thus saith the LORDE: In the bloude haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lyft vp to Idols, and haue shed bloude: shal ye then haue the londe in possession?

Ye leane vpon youre sweardes, ye worke abominacions, euery one defyleth his neibours wife: and shal ye then possess the londe? Saye thou these worde vnto the: Thus saith the LORDE: As truely as I lyue, all ye that dwell in this wildernesse, shall be slayne with the swearde: what so is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the beeste to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and demes, shall dye off the pestilence. For I wil make the londe desolate and waiste, and ye pope off hir strength shall come to an end. The mountaynes in Israel shal be so waiste that no man shal trauyle therby.

Then shall they lerne to knowe, that I am the LORDE, whè I make the lode waiste and desolate, because off all their abominacions, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne off man, the children off thy people ye talke of the, by the walles ad in the dores of their houses, sayenge one to another: come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the LORDE: These come vnto the, after y maner of a greate people: yee my people syt downe before the, and heare thy worde, but they do not thereafter: For in their mouthes they shewe them selues, as though they were fercient, but their herte goeth after their owne couetous lucre. And as a balet y hath a sweete tune, ad is pleasaunt to syngge, so shal thou be vnto them: thy worde shal they heare, but they will not do therafter. Whè this commeth to passe (for lo, it cometh in dede) then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophet amongeth them.

The xviiij. Chapter.

And the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off ma, prophaceye agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophacey, and speake vnto them: Thus saith the LORDE God: Wo be vnto the shepherdes off Israel, that fede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede y flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the wol: the best felde haue ye slayne, but ye flocke haue ye not norished: The weake haue ye not holden vp, the sick haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde together, the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: ye lost haue ye not sought, but churlishly and cruelly haue ye ruled the. Thus are they searted here and there without a shepherde: yee all the beasts off the felde deuoure them, and they go astraye.

My shepe go wandringe vpon all mouayne and vpon euery hye hill, yee they be searted abrode in all feldes, and there is no man, that careth for them, or seketh after them.

Therfore o ye shepherdes, heare the worde off the LORDE, Thus sayeth the LORDE God: As truely as I lyue, for so much as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured off all the wylde beeste off the felde, haunge no shepherde: and sayenge that my shepherdes take no regarde off my shepe, but fede them selues only, and not my shepe: Therfore heare y worde off the LORDE, o ye shepherdes: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Beholde, I my selfe will vpon the shepherdes, and require my shepe from their hondes, and make the ceasse from fedynge of my shepe: yee the shepherdes shall fede them seluesnomore: For I wil deluyer my shepe out of their mouthes so that they shal not deuoure them after this.

For thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, I wil loke to my shepe myselfe, and seke them. Like as a shepherde amonge the flocke sekeithe after the shepe that are searted.
abrode, even so will I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scattered in the cloudy and darke daye. I will bringe them out from all people, and gather them together out of all londes. I will bringe the in to their owne londe, and fede them vpone the mountaynes off Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countre. I will fede them in right good pastures, and vpone the hie mountaynes off Israel shall their foldes be. There shal they lye in a good folde, ad in a fat pasture shall they fede: euen vpone the mountaynes of Israel.

I will fede my shepe myself, and bringe them to their rest, sayeth the LORDE God. Soch as be lost, will I seke: "soch as go astraye, wil I brynge agayn: such as be wounded, will I bynde vp: such as be weake, will I make stronge: such as be fat and well lykinge, those will I preserue, and fede them with thinges that is laufful. And as for you (o my shepe) sayeth the LORDE God: I will put a difference amonge the shepe, amonge the wethers ad the goates. Was it not enough for you, to eat vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of youre pasture with youre fete also? Was it not enough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye must trouble the residue also with youre fete?

Thus my shepe must be fayne to eate thinges, that ye haue troden downe with youre fete, and to drynke it, that ye with youre fete haue defyled.

Therfor, thus sayeth the LORDE God vnto them: Behold, I will seuer the fat shepe from the leane: for so much as ye haue shot the weake shepe apoth y sydes of sholders, and runne vpone them with youre hones, so longe till ye haue utterly seared them abrode. I wil helpe my shepe, so they shall nomore be spoyle: yee I wil discerne one shepe from another. I wil rayse vp vnto them one only shepheard: "euen my seruanta Daud, he shal fede the, and he shal be their shepheard. I the LORDE wil be their God, and my seruanta Daud shall be their prince: Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it.

Morover, I wil make a covenaut of peace with them, and drynne euell beasts out of the londe: so that they maye dwell safely in the wildernesse, and shepe in the woddes.

Good fortune prosperite wil I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hill.

A prosperous shower and rayne wil I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye bringe forth their frutes, y grounde hir increase. They shalbe safe in their londe, and shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue broke their yocke, and deluyery out of the hondes of those, that helde them in subjeccon.

They shal nomore be spoyled of the Heithen, ner detouured with the beasts of the lode: but safely shal they dwell, no man shall fraye them. I wil set vp an excellént plate for them, so they shal suffer no more hunger in the londe, neither beare the reprofe of y Heithen any more. Thus shal they vnderstonde, that I the LORDE their God am with them. I they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, saith the LORDE God. Ye men are my flocke, ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God, saith the LORDE God.

The 17th Chapter.

MOROWER, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou somne of man, tume thy face towards the mount Seir, prophecye vpon it, saye vnto it: Thus saith the LORDE God: Behold, (o thou mount Seir) I will vpon the, I will reach out myne hode ouer the, yee waist of desolate wil I make the. Thy citiis wil I breake downe, thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayest knowe, how that I am the LORDE. For so much as thou bearest an olde enmyte againstst the children of Israel, with a cruel honde hast made them afrayed, what tymse as they were troubled with punishment for their synne: Therfore, as truly as I lyue (saith y LORDE God) I wil prepare the vnto bloude, yee bloude shall folowe vpon the; seing thou layest waite for bloude, therfore shall bloude persecute the. Thus wil I make the mount Seir desolate of waist, and bringe to passe, that there shall no man go thither, ner come from thence. His mountaynes wil I full with his slayne men: thy hilles, dales and valleys shall lye full of them, that are slayne with swerde. I wil make the a perpetuall wildernes, so that no man shall dwell in thy citiis: y ye maye knowe, how y I am the LORDE.

And because thou hast sayde: what, both these naciones and both these londes must be myne, I wil haue them in possession, as the LORDE was there. Therfore, thus saieth the LORDE God: As truly as I lyue, I will haue the acordinge to thy wrath and gelys, like as thou hast dealt cruelly with them: that I maye be knowne amongst them, how I haue punshyd the. Yee and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the LORDE haue herde all thy deasyteful wordes, which thou hast spoké against the mountaynes of Israel, sayenge: Lo, they are made waist, and gessen vs to deouer.

Thus with youre mouthes ye haue made youre boost agaynst me, yee multiplied youre proude wordes agaynst me, which I haue herde altogether. Where vnto, thus saieth \( y \) LORDE God: when the whole worlde is in wealth, then wil I make the waist. And like as thou (o mount Seir) wast glad, because the heretage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wil I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, \( y \) knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The \( 1386 \)th Chapter.

THOU some of man, prophesie vpon the mountaynes of Israel, \( y \) speake: Hearre the worde of the LORDE, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Because youre enemie hath sayde vpon you: A ha, \( y \) hie euerylastynge places are now become ours: prophesie therfore, \( y \) speake: thus saieth the LORDE God: Seinge ye be waisted \( y \) trode downe on euery syde, \( y \) become a possession vnto \( y \) resydue of \( y \) Gétiles, which haue brought you in to més mouthes \( y \) vnto an euel name amonge \( y \) people: Therfore, heare the worde of the LORDE God, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys \( y \) dales, to the voyde wildernesses \( y \) desolate cities, which are spoyled, and had in derision on euery syde, amoninge the resydue of the Heithê: Yee euë thus saieth the LORDE God: In the fyre of my gelys haue I taken a deucye, agaynst the resydue of the Gétiles, and agaynst all Edom: which haue take in my lode vnto thè selues for a possession: which also reioyset frō their whole herte with a deaspitifull stomacke, to waist it, and to spoyle it.

Prophecy therfore vpon the londe of Israel, \( y \) speake vnto \( y \) mountaynes and hilles, to valleys and dales, thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, this haue I deuyed in my gelys and terrible wrath: For so much as ye haue suffered reprof of the Heithen, therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: I haue sworne, that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shal beare youre confusion them selues. And as for you (o mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out youre branches, and bringe forth youre frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by, that it wil come.

Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, that ye maye be tyttled and sown. I wil sende you moche people, which shalbe all of the house of Israel: the cities shalbe inhabited, and \( y \) decayed places shalbe repayed againe. I wil prouyde you with moche people and catell, which shal increase \( y \) bringe frute. I wil restore you also to youre olde estate, and shewe you more kindnes the euer ye had before: whereby ye shal knowe, \( y \) I am the LORDE. Yee people wil I sende vnto you (o my folke of Israel) which shal haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritance, so that thou shalt nomore be without them. Agayne, thus saieth the LORDE God: For so much as they saye vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, and a waister of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neither destroye thy people eny more, saieth the LORDE God. And I wil not suffre the, for to hearre thine owne confusion amonge the Gentiles from hensforth. Thou shalt not beare the reprofe of the naciones, ner cast out thine owne people enymore, saieth the LORDE God.

Morover, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: O thou some of më, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their owne grounde, they defyled them selues with their owne wayes \( y \) ymaginationes: so that in my sight their waye was like the vncleness of a menstruous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrothfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the londe, \( y \) because of their Idols, wherwith they had defyled them selues. I seared them also amoninge the Heithen, so that they were strowed aboute in the lôdes. Acordinge to their wayes \( y \) after their owne incencions, so dyd I punysh them.

D  Now when they were gone vnto the Heithen, and come in amonge them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of their owne londe? Then spared I my holy name, which thy house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therfore tell thy house of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: I do not this for youre sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured amôge the Heithen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wil halowe my great name agayne, which amonge the Gentiles is euell spoken of: for ye youre selues haue dishonoured it amôge them. And the Gentiles shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayeth thy LORDE God.

As for you, I will take you from amonge the Heithen, and gather you together out of all countreys, and bringe you agayne in to youre owne londe. 2 Then will I poure cleare water vpon you, a ye shalbe elene: Yee from all youre vnclennesse, and from all youre Idols shal I clene you. A new herte also wil I geue you, and a new sprete wil I put in to you: As for that stony hert, I will take it out of youre body, and 2geue you a fleszhy herte. I wil geue you my sprete amonge you, and cause you to walke in my commandemêtes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the londe, that I gaue to youre forefathers, a ye shall be my people, and I wil be youre God. I wil helpe you out of all youre vnclennesse, I wil call for the corne, and wil increase it, and wil let you have no honger. I will multiply the frutes of the trees and 2 increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall bare no more reprose of honger amôge the Heithê. Then shal ye remêbre youre owne wicked wayes, and youre ymaginaciôs, which were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at youre owne selues, by reason of youre synnes and abominacions.

But I wil not do this for youre sakes (saieth the LORDE God) be ye sure of it. Therfore (o ye house of Israel) be ashamed of youre synnes. Morouer, thus saieth the LORDE God: what tyme as I shal elêse you from all youre offences, then wil I make the cities to be occupied agayne, and wil repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate londe shal be buyled agayne, which afore tyme laye waist, in the sight of all them, that wete by. Then shal it be sayde: This waist lode is become like a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate and broke downe cities, are now stronge, and fensed agayne. Then the residue of the Heithen that lye rounde aboute you, shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, which repayre that was broken downe, and plante agayne, that was made waist. Enen I the LORDE haue spoken it, a wil do it in dede.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: I wil yet once be founde agayne of thy house of Israel, a do this for them: I shal increase them as a flocke of men. Like as the holy flocke and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the hi solempne feastes: so shal also the wilde wested cities be fyled with flockes of men: and they shal knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The 17th. Chapter.

THE honde of the LORDE came vpon me, a caried me out in the sprete of the LORDE, a let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, a he led me rounde aboute by them: a beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, a maruelous dreys also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O LORDE God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecy thou vpon these bones, a speake vnto them: Ye drye bones, heare the worde of the LORDE. Thus saieth the LORDE God vnto these bones: Beholde, I will put breth in to you, that ye maye lyue: I wil geue you synowes, a make flesh growe vpon you, a couer you ouer with skynne: a so geue you breth, that ye maye lyue, and knowe, that I am the LORDE.

So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophesieinge, there came a noyse and a greate noision, so that the bones ranne euery one to another. Now whe I had loked, beholde, they had synowes, and flesh growe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecie thou towarde the wynde: prophecy, and speake to the wynde:

Thus saith the LORDE God: Come (o thou ayre) from the four wyndes, g blowe vp these slaynye, that they maye be restored to life. So I prophesied, as he had commanded me: Then came the breth in to them, and they receyved life, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruells greate sorte.

Morover, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: "oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophesie thou, g speake vnto them. Thus saith the LORDE God: Be-holde, I wil open youre graues (o my people) & take you out of youre sepulcres, g bringe you in to the londe of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe y I am the LORDE, when I open your graues, g bringe you out of them. My sprete also wil I put in you, g ye shall lyue:
I wil set you agayne in youre owne londe, and ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, take a sticke and wryte vpon it: Vnto Iuda g to the children of Israel his companions. Then take another sticke, and wryte vpon it: Vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the housholde of Israel his companions. And than take both these together in thine honde, so shal there be one sticke therof. Now yf the childre of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then gene them this answere: Thus saith the LORDE God: Beholde, * I will take the stocke of Joseph, which is in the honde of Ephraim and of the trybes of Israel his felowes, and wil put them to the stocke of Iuda, g make them one stocke, and they shall be one in my honde. And the two sticke where vpon thou wrytest, shalt thou haue in thine honde,
that they maye se, and shalt saue vnto them:

Thus saith the LORDE God: beholde,
I wil take awaye the childr of Israel from amonge the Heithen, vnto whom they be gone, and wil gather them together on euery syde,
and bringe them agayne in to their owne londe: yee I wil make one people of the in y londe, vpon the mountaines of Israel, and they all shal haue but one kinge. They shall nonore be two peoples from hensforth, nether

be deuyded in to two kingdomes: they shal also defyle the selues nomore with their abominacions, Idolos and all their wicked-doiges. I wil helpe the out of all their dwellinge places, wherein they haue synned:
g will so cleene them, that they shalbe my people, and I their God.

Dauid my seruaunt shalbe their kinge, g they all shal have one shepheard only. They shal walke in my lawes, and my commande-mentes shal they both kepe g fulfill. They shal dwell in the londe, that I gane vnto Iacob
my seruaunt, where as youre fathers also haue dwelt. Yee euene in the same londe shal they, their children, g their childrens children dwell for euermore: and my seruaunt Dauid shal be their everlastynge prynce. Morover, I will make a bondë of peace with them, which shal be vnto them an everlastinge covenantaunt. I wil sattle the also, and multiplie them, my Sanctuary wil I set amongeth for euermore.

My dwellinge shalbe with them, yee wil be their God, g they shalbe my people. Thus the Heithen also shal knowe, that I the LORDE am y holy maker of Israel: whe my Sanctuary shal be amongeth for euermore.

The prophecy.

A ND the worde of the LORDE came A unto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in the londe of Magog, which is the chefe prynce at Mesech
and Tubal: prophecy agaynst him, and saye:
"Thus saith the LORDE God: 'G Gog thou
chefe prynce of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I wil vpon the, and wil turne the aboute, and put a bytt in thy chawes: I wil bringe the forth and all thine hoost, both horse g horsmen, which be all weapaned of the best fashion: a greate people, that handle alogether speares, shylkes, and swordes: the Perses, Moryans and with them the Lybians, which all beare shilkedes and helmettes: Gomer, and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma out of the north quarters, and all his hoostes, yee
and moch people with the.

Therfore prepare the, set thy self in araye with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeares thou shalt come in to the lode, that hath bene destroyed with the swearde, g

* Eze. 33. b.  " Osee 1. b.  Eze. 39.  Apo. 20. e.
now the replenished agayne with dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, which haue longe lyen waist. Yee they be brought out of the nacions, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wether, to couer the lode, and as it were a darcke cloude: thou with all thine hoastes, and a greate multitude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus saieth the LORDE God:

At the same time shal many things come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn myschefe, and saye: I wil vp to yonder playne londe, seinge they syt at ease, and dwell so saffely (for they dwell all without eny walles, they haue nether barres nor dores) to spoyle them, to robbe the, to laye honde vpon their so wel inhabited wildenesse: agaynst that people, is gathered together from amonge the Heithen, which haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myndest of the londe. Then shal Saba and Dedan and the marchauntes of Tharsis with all their Worthies, saye vpnto the: Art thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle? to take sylver and golde: to cary awaye catell and good: and to haue a greate pray?

Therefore, o thou soune of man, thou shalt prophesie, and saye vpnto Gog: Thus saieth the LORDE God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place, out of the north partes: thou and much people with the, which ryde vpnto horses, wherof there is a greate multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yee thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lode. This shal come to passe in the latter dayes: I wil bringe the vp in to my londe, that the Heithen maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon the (o Gog) before their eyes.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: Thou art he, of whom I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes prophetes of Israel, which prophesiede in those dayes yeares, that I shulde bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp in to the londe of Israel (saieth the LORDE God) shal my indignacion go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousy and hote displeasure I haue deuyed, that there shalbe a greate trouble in the londe of Israel at that tyme. The very fysshhes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beestes of the felde, and all the men are vpon the earth, shal tremble for feare of me.

The hilles also shalbe turned vp side downe, the stayres of stone shal fall, and all walles shal syncke to the grounde. I wil call for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaynes, saieth the LORDE God: so that every mans swearde shal be vpon another. With pestilence and bloude wil I punysh him: stormy rayne and hale stones, fyre and byrstone, wil I cause to rayne vpon him and all his heape, yee and vpon all that greate people that is with him. Thus wil I be magnified, honoured, and knowe amonge the Heithen: that they maye be sure, how y I am y LORDE.

THEYRFOR e o thou soune of man, a prophecie agaynst Gog, and speake: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, o Gog: thou chefe prynce at Mesech and Tubal, I wil vpon the, and turne the aboute, and carie the forth, lede the, from the north partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wil smyte it out of thy left honde, and cast thine arrowes out of thy right honde. Thou with all thine heape, and all the people that is with the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wil I geue the vpnto foules and wilde beasts of the felde, to be denoued: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euie I the LORDE haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God.

In to Magog, and amonage those that sit so carelesse in the Iles: wil I sende a fyre, and they shal knowe, y I am the LORDE. I wil make also the name of my holynesse to be knowe amonge my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euell spoken of enymore: but the very Heithen also shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it commeth, and shalbe fulfilled in dede, saieth the LORDE God. This is the daye, wherof I haue spoken: They that dwell in y cities of Israel, shall goe forth and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shyldes and speres, bowes and arowes, bylles and clubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burnyng therof, so that they shall els bringe no stickes from y felde, nether haue ned to hew downe any out of the wodde: For they shall have weapons ynew to burne. They shall robe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled them, saith the LORDE God.

At the same tune will I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buried in, in Israel: euë the valley, where thorow men go from the east to the searde. Those that tranayle therby, shal abhorre it. There shall Gog and all his people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be buryinge of them, that they maye clense the lode: Yee all the people of the londe shal burie them. O it shal be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, saith the LORDE God. They shal ordene men also to be deedburiers, euer goinge thorow the lode, and appoynte them certayne places to bury those in, which re-mayne vpon the felde, that the londe maye be clenased. From ende to ende shal they seke, and that vij monethes lôge. Now those that go thorow the londe, where se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, till the deedburiers haue buryed it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cite shalbe called Hamona: Thus shal they make the londe clene.

And thou soune of man: thus saieth the LORDE God: Speake vnto all the foules and euer byrde, yee and to all the wilde beastes of the felde: haape you together and come, gather you roide aboute vpo my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euë a greate slaughter vpon the mountaines of Israel: eate flesh, and drynke bloude. Ye shal eate vnder the worthis, and drynke the bloude of the prynces of the londe: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goats, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate vnder youre bely full, and drynke bloude, till ye be droncken of the slaughter, which I haue slayne vnto you. Fyl you at my table, with horses & stronge horsmen: with captaynes and all me of warre, saieth the LORDE God.

I will bringe my glory also amongst the Gentiles, that all the Heithen maye se my judgment, that I haue kepte, and my homde which I haue layed vpon them: that y house of Israel maye knowe, how that I am y LORDE their God, from that daye forth. And the Heithen shal knowe, that where as the house of Israel were led in to captiuyte: it was for their wickednes sake, because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyde my face from them, and deluyered them in to the homde of their enemies, that they might all be slayne with the swearde. Acordinge to their vnclenesse and vnfaithfull dealings, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them. Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: Now will I bringe agayne the captiuytes of Iacob, and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelys for my holy names sake. All their confusion andoffence that they have done agaynst me, shal be taken awaye: and so safely shal they dwell in their londe, that no man shal make them afrayed. And when I haue brought the agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies londes, and am prayed in them before many Heithen: then shall they knowe, that I am the LORDE their God, which suffred them to be led in to captiuyte amongst the Heithen, but now haue brought them agayne in to their owne londe, and not left one of them yonder.

After that, will I hyde my face nomore from them, but will poure out my sprete vpon the house of Israel, saieth the LORDE God.

In the xxx yeare of our captiuyte, in the begynnynge of the yeare, the x daye of the moneth: that is the xiiij yeare, after that y cite was smyttyn downe: the same daye came the homde of the LORDE vpon me, and caried me forth: euë in to the londe of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and set me downe vpo a marvelous hee mountainye, wherupon there was a buyldinge (as it had bene of a cite) toward the north.

Thither he caried me, and beholde, there was a man, whose similitude was like brasse, which had a threde of flax in his homde, and a meterodde also. He stode in the dore, and sayde vnto me: marcke well with thine eyes, herken to with thine eare, and fasten it in thine hert, what so euer I shal shewe the, for to the intent that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hither. And what soeuer thou seyst, thou shal certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall upon the outsyde
Chap. 11. The prophet Ezechiel.

rounde aboute the house: the meterodde that he had in his honde, was six cubites longe & a spanne. So he measured the brethth of the byuylinge, which was a meterodde, and the heyth also a meterodde. Then came he vnto the east dore, and wente vp the staires, & measured the postes of the dore; wherof every one was a meterodde thicke. Evry chamber was a meterodde longe and brode: betwene the chambers were fuye cubites. The poste of the dore within the porche, was one mete-rodde. He measured also the porche of the ynymer dore, which conteyned a meterodde. The measured he the entrie of the dore, that conteyned eight cubites, and his pilers two cubites: and this entrie stode inwarde.

The chambers of the dore eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: alike brode and longe. The pilers also that stode of both the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydennesse of the dore: which was x cubites, & the heyth of the dore xiiij cubites. The edge before the chabres was one cubite brode vpon both the sydes, & the chambres six cubites wyde of either syde. He measured y dore from the rygg of one chabre to another, whose wydennesse was xxv cubites, & one dore stode agaynst another. He made pilers also lx cubites hie, rounde aboute the courte dore. Before the inwarme parte vnto the fore entre of the ynymer dore, were fiiij cubites. The chambers and their pilers within, rounde aboute vnto y dore, had syde wyndowes: So had the fore entries also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pilers stode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the fore courte, where as were chabres & paued worke, made in y fore courte ruide aboute: xxx chabres vpon one paued worcke. Now the paued worke was a lode beside the dores, and that was the lower paued worke. After this, he measured y brethth from the lower dore, vnto the ynymer courte of the out syde, which had an hundreth cubites vpon the east & the north parte. And the dore in the vvtemost courte toward the north, measured he after the lenth and brethth: his thre chambres also on either syde, with his pilers & fore entries: which had euyn the measure of the first dore. His heyth was fiiij cubites, the brethth xxv cubites: his wyndowes & porches with his date trees, had euyn like measure as the dore toward the east: there were vij steppes to go vp vpon, their porche before them. Now y dore of the ynymer courte stode straight ouer against the dore, that was towarde y north east. From one dore to another, he measured an C cubites.

After that, he brought me to the south syde, where there stode a dore towarde y south: whose pilers and porches he measured, these had the first measure, & with their porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, like the first wyndowes. The heyth was l cubites, y brethth xxv, with steppes to go vp vpon: his porche stode before him, with his pilers and date trees on either syde. And the dore of the ynymer courte stode towarde the south, & he measured from one dore to another an C cubites. So he brought me in to y ynymer courte, thorow the dore of the south syde: which he measured, & it had the measure a fore sayde. In like maner, his chambers, pilers and fore entries, had euyn the fore sayde measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute, wyndowes of l cubites hye, & xxv cubites brode. The porches rounde aboute were xxv cubites longe, and v cubites brode: and his porche reached vnto y vvtemost courte: vpon his pilers there were date trees, and vijj steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also in to the ynymost courte vpon the east syde, and measured the dore, acordinge to y measure afore sayde. His chabres, pilers and porches had euyn the same measure, as the first had: & with his porches he had wyndowes ruede aboute. The heith was l cubites, y brethth xxv cubites: His porches reached vnto the vvtemost courte: his pilers also had date trees on either syde, and vijj steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north dore, and measured it, which also had the foresayde measure. His chabres, pilers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heyth was l cubites, and the brethth xxv. His pilers stode towarde the vvtemost courte, and vpon them both were date trees, and vijj steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose intrauce was at the dore pilers, and there the burntoffringes were waszshed.

In the dore porche, there stode on other syde two tables for the slaughteringe: to slaye the brentoffringes, synneoffringes and tres-paceoffringes thervpon. And on the out syde as men go forth to the north dore, there stode two tables. Four tables stode on ether syde of the dore, that is vij tables, wherupon they slaughtered. Four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt-offringes, of a cubite and a half longe and brode, and one cubite hie: wherupon were layed  \( \frac{1}{4} \) vessels and ornaments, which were used to the burnet \( \frac{1}{4} \) slayne offeringes, when they were slaughtered. And within there were hokes fourie fyngers brode, fastened rounde aboute, to hange flesh vpon, \( \frac{1}{4} \) vpon the tables was layed the offeringe flesh. On the outsyde of the ynnermer dore were the syngers chambers in the inwarde courte besyde \( \frac{1}{2} \) north dore ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also, besyde the east dore north warde.

And he sayde vnto me: "This chambre on the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habitacion: and this towardre the north, is the prestes that wayte vpon the aultre: which be the sonsnes of Sadoch, that do seruice before the LORDE in steade of the children of Leui. So he measured the fore courte, which had in length an C cubites, and as mouch in breth by the foure corners. Now the aultre stode before the house: And he brought me to the fore entre of the house, and measured the walles by the entre dore: which were fyue cubites longe on ether syde. The thicknesse also of the dore on ether syde, was thre cubites. The lēght of the porche was xx cubites, the breth xj. cubites, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pilers, on ether syde one.

The rxi. Chapter.

AFTER this he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes: which were of both the sydes vj. cubites thicke, according to the wydnesse of the tabernacle. The breth of \( \frac{1}{2} \) dore was x. cubites, \( \frac{1}{4} \) the walles of the dore on either syde fyue cubites. He measured the length therof, which conteyned xl. cubites, and the breth xx. The wente he in, and measured the dore postes, which were two cubites thicke: but the dore it self was syxe cubites, and the breth of the dore was vij. cubites. He measured the lēght and breth thereof, which were euery one xx. cubites, before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holiest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was sixe cubites. The chambres \( \frac{1}{2} \) stode rounde aboute \( \frac{1}{2} \) house, were euery one foure cubites wyde, and one stode harde vpo another, whereof there were xxxij. And there stode postes benefte by the walles rounde aboute the house, to beare the vp: but in \( \frac{1}{2} \) wall of \( \frac{1}{2} \) house they were not fastened: The syde chambres were the hyer the wyder, and had stedes throrow them rounde aboute \( \frac{1}{2} \) house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest men might go to the hyest \( \frac{1}{2} \) myyte chabers. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundations of the syde chambres was a meteroddle (that is sixe cubites) brode. The thicknesse of the syde wall without, conteyned fyue cubites, \( \frac{1}{4} \) so dyd \( \frac{1}{4} \) outwall of the chabers in \( \frac{1}{2} \) house.

Betwene the chambers, was the wydnesse xx. cubites rounde aboute \( \frac{1}{2} \) house. The chambre dores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one dore was towardre the north, \( \frac{1}{2} \) other towardre the south: and the thicknesse of the outwall was v cubites rounde aboute. Now the byuldinge that was separated towardre the west, was lxx. cubites wyde: the wall of the byuldinge was v cubites thicke roünde aboute, and the length foure score cubites and ten. So he measured the house which was an C. cubites longe, and the separated byuldinge with the wall were an C. cubites lōge also. The wydnesse before the house and of it \( \frac{1}{2} \) was separated towardre the east, was an C. cubites.

And he measured the length of the byuldinge before and behinde with the chabers vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an C. cubites. The ynnermer temple, the porch of the fore courte, \( \frac{1}{2} \) syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pilers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer with bordes: \( \frac{1}{4} \) thus was it aboue the dore, vnto the ymmost house, and without also: Yee the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was syled ouer with greate bordes. There were Cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tre stode euer betwixte two Cherubins: One Cherub had two faces, \( \frac{1}{2} \) face of a man lokinge asyde towarde the date tre, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made roünde aboute in all the house: Yee the Cherubins.
and date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the dore, and so stode they also apon the wall of the temple.

The bypostes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashion of the Sanctuary was, euen as it appeared vnto me afore in ¥ vision. The table was of womde, thre cubites hie and two cubites longe: his corners, the length and the walles were of womde. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table, that shal stonde before the LORDE. The temple and the holiest of all had ether of them two dores, and every dore had two little wickettes which were folden in one vpon another, on every syde two. And vpon the dores of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, like as vpon the walles: and a greate thicke balke of womde was before on the out syde of the porche. Vp both the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauyng beames and balkes, like as the house had.

The xlii. Chapter.

HE

EN
caried he me out in to the fore courte towards the north, ¥ brought me in to the chabre that stode ouer agaynst the backebuyldinge northwarde, which had the length of an C. cubites, whose dore turned towards the north. The wydenesse conteyned
L. cubites, ouer agaynst the xx. cubites of the ynnerner courte, ¥ agaynst the paused worke that was in the fore courte. Besyde all these thre there stode pilers, one ouer against another: And before this chabre there was a walkinge place of x. cubites wyde, and within was a waie of one cubite wyde, and their dores towards the north. Thus the hyest chambres were alwaye narower then the lowest and myddelmost of ¥ buildinge: for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre togeth er one vpon another, not hauyng pilers like the fore courte: therfore were they smaller than those beneth and in the myddest, to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by ¥ chambres towards the vtemost courte vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was L. cubites longe:
for the length of ¥ vtemost chambers in the fore courte was L. cubites also: but the length therof before the temple was an C. cubites. These chambres had vnder them an intrauce of the east syde, wherby a man of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the LORDE came in to the house thorow the east dore. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me in to y yunerer courte: therolde, the house was full of the glory of the LORDE.

I herde one speakeinge vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou soune of man, this rowne is my seate, and the place of my fotesteppe: where as I wil dwell amongethe children of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shal nomore defyle my holy name: nether thei, ner their kinges, thorow their whordome, thorow their hie places, thorow the deod bodies of their kinges: which hauue buylde their thresholds in manner harde vpon my thresholds, and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wall betwixte me and them.

Thus hauwe they defyled my holy name with their abominationes, that they hauwe comitted. Wherefore I hauwe destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shal put awaye their whordome and the deod bodies of their kinges out of my sight, that I maye dwell amonge them for euermore. Therfore (0 thou soune of man) shewe than the householde of Israel a temple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse, and measure them selues an example therat.

And when they be ashamed of all their workes, then shewe them the fourme and fashion of the temple: the comyng in, the goinge out, all the maner and descripcon therof, yee all the vses and ordinancees of it, y they maye kepe all the fashions and customes therof.

This is the descripcon of the house: Aboue vpon the mount rounde aboute all the corners, it shalbe y holiest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcon and fashion of the house. This is the measure of the aultur (after the true cubite: which is a spanne longer then another cubite) his botome in the myddest was a cubite longe and wyde, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute it, was a spanne brode. This is the heyth of the aultur: From the gronde to the lower steppes the length is two cubites, and the brethd one cubite: and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubites, y the brethd but one cubite.

The aultur was foure cubites hie, from the aultur vpwarde stode foure hornes, and it was xij cubites longe and xij cubites brode, vpon the foure corners: the coueringe of the aultur was xij cubites longe and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute, had halfe a cubite: and the botome therof rounde aboute one cubite: his steppes stode towarde the easte. And he sayde vnto me: Thou soune of man, thus saith the LORDE: these are the ordinancees and lawes of the aultur, in the daye whiche it is made, to ofre burntoffrinages, and to sprenkle bloude ther vpon. To the prestes, to y Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch, and tredde before me to do me service, saith the LORDE God: Vnto these geue thou a yonge bullocke, for a synoffringe: take the bloude of hym and sprenkle his foure hornes withall, the foure corners of the aultur coueringe, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute: herewith shalt thou clese it, and reconcile it. Thou shalt take the bullock also of the synoffringe, burne him in a seuerall place with out the Sanctuary.

The nexte daye, take a gootbuck without blemish for a synoffringe, to reconcile the aultur withall: like as it was reconciled with y bullocke. Now when thou hast made it cleene, then ofre a yonge bullocke without blemish, and a ramme out of the flocke without blemish also: Offre them before the LORDE, and let the prest cast salt thevpon, and geue them so vnto the LORDE for a burntoffrinage. Seven dayes shalt thou bringe, every daye a gootbucke. A yonge bullocke a ramme of the flocke (both without blemish) shalt they offre. Seven dayes shalt they reconcile and clese the aultur, ofre vpon it. When these dayes are expired, then vpon the viij daye and so forth, the prestes shall ofre their burntoffrinages and healthoffrinages vpon the aultur: so wil I be mercifull vnto you, saith the LORDE God.

The xliii. Chapter.

AFTER this, he brought me agayne thorowwarde dore of the Sanctuary on the east syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: This dore shall be stil shut, and not opened for eny man to go thorow
it, but only for the LORDE God of Israel: yee he shall go thorow it, els shall it be shut still. The prynce himself shall come thorow it, that he maye eate bred before the LORDE. At the porche shall he come in, and there shall he goe agayne. Then brought he me to the dore, vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde, the glory of the LORDE fylled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the LORDE spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thine herte, beholde, and take diliget hede to all that I wil saye vnto the, concernyng all the ordinances of the LORDE and all his lawes: pondre well with thine herte the commynyng of in the house and the goinge forth of the Sanctuary: and tell that obstatne householde of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE. God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowe done ynowh with all youre abominacions, sayenge that ye haue brought in to my Sanctuary straungers, hauyng vnincircumcised hertes, flesh, where thorow my Sactuary is defiled, whè ye ofre my bred, fat, & bloude. Thus with all youre abominacions ye haue broken my covenant, and not kepte the holy ordinances of my Sanctuary: but set keepers of my Sanctuary, even after youre owne myynede. Therefore thus saieth the LORDE God: Of all the straungers that dwell amoung the children of Israel, no straunge (whose herte flesh is not circumsed) shall come within my Sanctuary: No ner the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue disseased the people of Israel with erroures, goinge after their Idols: therfore shall thei beare their owne wickednes. Shulde they be set and ordened to ministre, vnder the dores of the house of my Sanctuary, and to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burntoffrinages and sacrifices for youre people: to stode before them, and to servye them: saynge the seruyce that they do them, is before their Idols, and cause the house of Israel to stonde thorow wickednesse? For the which cause I haue plucked out myne honde ouer them (saieth the LORDE) so that now they must beare their owne iniquyte, and not to come nye me, to servye me with their preasheade, in my Sanctuary, and most holyst of all: that they maye beare their owne shame and abominacions, which they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to all the seruyce is done therin? But the prestes y LORDE the sonnes of Sadoch, that kepeth the holy ordinances of my Sanctuary, when the children of Israel were gone fro me: shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stonde before me, and to offere me the fat and the bloude, saith the LORDE God.

They shall goe in to my Sanctuary, and treade before my table, to do me seruyce, and to waite vpon myne ordinances. Now whyle they go in at the dores of the ymnermer courte, they shall put on lynnyngg clothes, so that no wolyny come vpon them: whyle they do seruyce vnder the dores of ymnermer courte, and within. They shall haue fayre lynnyngg bonettes vpon their heads, and lynnyngg breches vpon their lynes, which in their laboure they shall not put aboute them: And when they goe forth to the people in to the outwarde courte, they shall put of the clothes, wherin they haue ministred, and laye them in the habitation of the Sanctuary, put on other apparell, lest they onhalowe y people with their clothes. They shall not shawe their heads, neither shall they norish the bushe of their hayre, but rouide their heads only. All the prestes that goe in to the ymnest courte, shall drynke no wyne. They shall mary no wydowes, neether one that is put fro his husbonde: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israel, or a wydowe, that hath had a prest before.

They shall shewe my people the difference betwene the holy and vnholy, betwixte the elene and vnciene. Yf any discorde arse, they shall discerne it, and gene sentence after my judgmente. My solemne feastes, my lawes and ordinances shall they kepe, and halowe my Sabbathes. They shall come at no deed persone, to defyle them selues: (excepte it be father or mother, sonne or doughter, brother or sister that hath had yet no husbonde) in soch they maye be defyled.

And when he is clensed, there shall be rekened vnto him vij dayes: and ye he go in to the Sanctuary agayne to do seruyce, he shall bringe a synoffrinage saith the LORDE God. They shall haue an heretage, yee I my self wilbe their heretage: els ye geue thc no possession in Israel, for I am their possession. The meatoffringe, synoffringe, trespass offringe shall they eate, and every dedicate thinge in Israel, shalbe theirs. The firstlinges of all the first frutes, and all fre will offringes shalbe the prestes.

Ye shall geue vnto the prest also the firstlinges of youre dowe, that God maye prospere the resydue. "But no deed carion shall the prest eate, ner soch as is deuoured of wilde beestes, foules or catell.

The ylb. Chapter.

W WHEN ye deuyde the lode by the lott, ye shal put asyde one parte for the LORDE, to be holy from other londes: namely, xxv M meteroddes longe, and x M brede. This shalbe holy, as wyde as it is rounde aboute. Of this parte there shal be longe vnto the Sanctuary v C meteroddes in all the foure corners, and l cubites wyde rounde aboute to the suburbs. And from this measure, namely of xxv M meteroddes longe, and x M brede, thou shalt measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holiest of all maye stonde.

The resydue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes, which do servyce in the Sanctuary of the LORDE, and go in before the LORDE to serue him, that they maye haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary, it shal stonde for itself: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shal be geuen xx habitationes, of the xxv M lëgh x M brede: ye shal geue also vnto the cite a possessio of v M meteroddes brede, x xxv M longe, besyde the parte of ý Sanctuary: that shal be for the whole house of Israel. Vpon both the sydes of the Sanctuaries parte, ý by the cite, there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce, what so ever lyeth ouer agaynst the cite, as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde: which shalbe as longe as one parte, frý ý west vnto ý east.

This shalbe his owne lode in Israel, that my princes be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And soch as remayneth yet ouer in the londe, shalbe geuen to the house of Israel acordinge to their trybyses. Thus saith the LORDE God: O ye princes, ye haue now oppressed and destroyed ynoth: now leaue of handle now acordinge to the thinge, that is equall and laufull: and thrust out my people nomore, sayeth ý LORDE God. Ye shal have a true weight, a true Epha, ý a true Bat.

"The Epha ý the Bat shalbe a like. One Bat shal coteyne ý teth parte of an Homer, and so shal one Epha do: their measure shal be after ý Homer. One Syeke maketh xx. Geras. So xx. Sycles, and xxv. ý xx. Sycles make a pounde. This is the Heane offyringe, that ye shal geue to be heaued: namely, the xvj. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of wheat: and the xvj. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of barley. The oyle shal be measured with the Bat: even the x. parte of one Bat out of a Cor.

Ten Battes make one Homer: for one Homer maketh ten Battes. And one labe from two hundreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meatoffyringe, burntoffyringe and healthoffyringe, to recocile them, sayeth the LORDE God. All the people of the londe shal geue this heane offyringe with a fre wil. Agayne, it shal be the prynces parte to offre burntoffyringes, meatoffyringes and drynoffyringes vnto the LORDE, in the holy dayes, new Moones, Sabbathes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The synoffyringe, meatoffyringe, brentoffyringe ý healthoffyringe shal he geue, to recocile the house of Israel. Thus sayeth ý LORDE God: The first daye of the first moneth thou shalt take a ýoge bullocke without blemish, and clense the Sanctuary.

So the prest shal take of the bloude of ý synoffyringe, and sprenkle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aultar, with the dorepostes of the ymmermer court. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth daye of ý moneth (for soch as haue symmed of ignourance, or beyng disceaued) to reconcile the house withall. Vpon ý xij. daye of the first moneth ye shal kepe Easter. Þe seuen dayes shal the feast contynue, wherin there shal no sower ner leueded bred be eate.

Vpon the same daye shal ý prynce geue for himself and all the people of the londe, a bullocke for a synoffyringe. And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shal ofre euery daye a bullocke ý a ram, that are with out blemish, for a burntoffyringe vnto the LORDE: ý an he goate daylie for a synoffyringe. For the meatoffyringes he shall geue euery an Ephra to

The 11th Chapter.

Thus sayeth the LORD God: Ye shall unto the ymotion courte towards the east, shall be shut the vj. worke dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the new Moone, it shall be opened. Then shall the prynce come vnder the dore porche, and stonde still without by the dore cheke. So ye prestes shall offer vp his burnt offering, and he shall worship at the dore poste, and go his waye forth agayne: but ye dore shall nomore be shut till the evenynge.

On the same maner shall the people of the lond also do their worshippe before the LORDE, without this dore upon the Sabbathes and new Moones. This is now the burnt offering, that the prynce shall bringe vnto the LORDE upon the Sabbath: sixe lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish, and an Ephah for a meatofferinge, with ye ram. As for the lambs, he maye geue as many meatoffyrnges to them, as he wil, an Ephah of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the new moneth, it shall be a yonge bullocke without blemish, sixe lambs, and a ram also without blemish. With the bullocke he shall geue an Ephah, and with the ram an Ephah also for a meatofferinge: but to ye lambs, what he maye come by: And euer an Ephah of oyle to an Ephah. When the prynce cometh, he shall go vnder the dore porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lond come before the LORDE in the hye solemnne feast, as many as come in by the north dore to do worshippe, shall go out agayne at the south dore. And they that come in at the south dore, shall go forth agayne at ye north dore. There shall none go out at the dore where he came in, but shall go forth right on the other syde, and the prynce shall go in and out amonge them.

Vpon the solemnne and hie feast dayes, this shalbe the meatofferinge: An Ephah to a bullock, and an Ephah to a ram: and to the lambs, as many as he wil, but euer an Ephah of oyle to an Ephah. Now when the prynce bryngeth a burnt offeringe or an healthofferinge with a fre wil vnto the LORDE, the east dore shalbe opened vnto him, ye he maye do with his burnt offeringe, as he doth vpother the Sabbath: and when he goeth forth, the dore shall be shut after him agayne. He shal daylie bryng vnto the LORDE a lamb of a yeare old without blemish: bitten of the pruning: this shal he do euery moriyntge. And for a meatofferinge he shal geue the sixe parte of an Ephah, and the thirde parte of an Ephah of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery moriyntge. Yee this shalbe a daylie meatofferinge vnto the LORDE, for an euercasting ordinaunce: and shal the lambe, the meatofferinge and oyle be genen euery moriyntge, for a dailie burnt offeringe.

Moreover, thus sayeth the LORDE God: Yf the prynce geue a gifte vnto euery of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heretage perpetuall, ye he maye possesse it. But ye he wil geue one of his seruauntes some of his heretage, ye it shall be his to the fre yeare, and ye he that returne agayne vnto ye prynce: for his heretage shalbe his sonnes only. The prynce also shall take none of the peoples enheritance, nor put thence from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shal he geue his possession, that my people be not scatred abrode, but that euery man maye haue his owne.

And he brought me thorow the intranonce at the syde of the dore to ye habitation of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to ye prestes and stode towards the north, ye beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the prestes shal dight the trespace and synoffyrnges, ye bake ye meatoffyrnges: that they sede not beare there in to the outwarde courte, and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vytemost courte, rounde aboute all the four corners. Beholde, in euery corner of ye fore courte, there was yet a litte courte. Yee in all the fore corners of the courte, there was made a litte courte of xl. cubites longe, and xxx. cubites broade: these four corners were of one like measure, ye there went a rygge wall rounde aboute them all fore, vnder the which there were harthes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the kechin, where the ministers of the house shal dight the slayne offeringes of the people.
AFTER this he brought me agayne before the dore of the house: \( t \) beholde, there guszshed out waters from vnder \( y \) postes of the house eastwarde (for the house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vp\( p \) the right syde of the house, which lyeth to the aulter south warde. The caryed he me out to the north dore, and brought me forth there ronde aboute by the vttemost dore, \( y \) turneth eastwarde. Beholde, \( t \) there came forth the water vpon the right syde. Now when the man \( y \) had the meterodde in his honde wente out vnto the east dore, he measured a M. eu-bites, \( t \) the he brought me thorow \( y \) water, eu\( t \) the to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousande, \( t \) brought me thorow \( y \) water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorow the water vnto the lownes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it soch a ryuer, \( y \) I might not wade thorow it: The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, o thou some of man? and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.

Now when I came there, there stode many trees vpon ether syde of the ryuer bëcke. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out towarde the east, and runneth downe in to the playne felde, commeth in to the see: and from the see it runneth out, \( t \) maketh the waters whole. Yee all that liue and mowe, where vnto this ryuer commeth, shal recover. And where this water cometh, there shalbe many fishe. For all that commeth to this water, shall be lusty and whole. By this ryuer shal the fyszshers stonde from En-gaddi vnto En Eglaim, \( t \) there sprede out their nettes: for there shalbe great heapes of fishe, like as in the mayne see. As for his claye and pyttes, they shal not be whole, for why, it shalbe occupide for salt.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of frutefull trees, whose leaves shall not fall of, neither shall their frute perish: \( t \) but euer be rype at their monethes, for their water runneth out of the Sanctuary. His frute is good to eate, and his leaf profitable for medicine. Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Let this be the border, wherein ye shall deuyde the londe vnto the xij. trybes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: \( t \) of the which lode I swore vnto youre fathers, that it shulde fall to youre erheritaunce.

This is the border of the londe vpon the north syde, from the mayne see, as men go to Zadada: namely, Hemath, Berothera, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Tichon, that lieth vpon the coastes of Hauera. Thus the borders frö the see forth, shalbe Hazar Enan, the border of Damascus the north, and the borders of Hezeph: that is the north parte.

The east syde shal ye measure from Hauera and Damascus, from Galad and the londe of Israel by Iordane and so forth, from the see coast, that lieth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

The south syde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of strife vnto Cades, \( d \) the ryuer, to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the greate see from the borders therof, till a man come vnto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This londe shal ye parte amonge you, accordance to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an heretage for you, and for the straunge that dwel amóge you, and begette children.

For ye shal take them amonge the childré of Israel, like as though they were of youre owne housholde and countrie, and they shal haue heretage with you amonge the childré of Israel.

Looke in what trybe the straunge dwelleth, in the same trybe shal ye gene him his heretage, saith the LORDE God.

THESE are \( y \) names of the trybes that lye vpon the northsyde, by the waye of Hebron, tyll thou commest vnto Hemath and Hazard Enam, the borders of Damascus towarde the north byseide Hemath: Dan shal haue his porcie from the east quarter vnto the west. Vpon the borders of Dan from the east syde vnto the west, shall Asser haue his porcion. Vpon the borders of Asser frö the east parte vnto the west, shall Nephtalí haue his porcion.

Vpon the borders of Nephtalí from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his porcion. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his porcion. Vpon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto the west, shall Ruben haue his porcion. Vpô the borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west, shal Iuda haue his porcion. Vpon the borders of Iuda from the east parte vnto the west, ye shal set a syde one porciō of xxv. M. meterordes longe and brode (like as another porcion from the east syde vnto the west,) wherein the Sanctuary shal stode.

As for the porcion, that ye shal "separate out for the LORDE, it shalbe xxv. M. longe, and x. M. brode. Which separated holy porcion shal belonge vnto these: namely to the prestes, toward the north xxv. M. toward the west x. M. brode, toward the east x. M. brode also, toward the south xxv. M. longe, wherein the Sanctuary of the LORDE shal stonde. Yee this same place shal be the prestes, y are of the children of Sadoch, "x haue kepe my holy ordinance: which wente not astraye in the erreoure of the children of Israel, like as the Leuites are gone astraye: and this separated peec that they haue of the londe, shalbe the most holy, harde vpon the borders of the Leuites. And nexte vnto the prestes, shal the Leuites haue xxv. M. longe and x. M. brode. This shalbe on euer syde xxv. M. longe, and x. M. brode. Of this porciō they shal sell nothing, ner make any permutation thereof, lest the chefe of the londe fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the LORDE.

The other v. M. after the brethd, y lyeth by the xxv. M, shalbe comon: it shal belonge to the cite and to the suburbs for habitacions, and y cite shal stonde in the myddest thereof. Let this be the measure: toward y north parte, v. C. x iiiij. M: toward the south parte, v. C. x iiiij. M: toward the east parte, v. C. and iiiij. M: toward y west parte, v. C. and iiiij. M.

The suburbs harde vpon the cite, shalbe toward the north, L and iiij. C: toward the south, L and tvo C: toward the west also, L. and two C. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth hard vpon the separated holy ground: namely, x. M. toward the east and x. M. toward the west, next vnto the holy porciō: it and the increase thereof shal serue for their meate, that laboure in the cite. They that laboure for the welth of the cite, shal manteine this also, out of what tribe so ener they be in Israel.

The first Chapter.

In the thirde yeare of the raigne of Ioachim kynge off Iuda, *came Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon vnto Ierusalem, & beseged it: and the LORDE delyuered Ioachim the kynge off Iuda in to his honde, with certayne ornamentes of the house off God, which he caried awaye vnto the londe of Sennar, to the house of his god, and there brought them in to his gods treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Asphenes, & chefe chamberlayne, that he shulde brynghe him certayne of the children of Israel, that were some of the kynges sede and of prynces, yoge sprynyaldes with out eyn blemish but fayre ad welfauored, instructe in all wisdome, connyngye and vnderstödingye: which were able to stonde in the kynges palace, to reade, and to lerne for to speake Caldeish.

Vnto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcion of his owne meate and of the wine, which he dranke himselff, so to norish the thre yeare: that afterwaerde they might stonde before the kynge. Amonge these now were certayne of the children off Iuda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias. Vnto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias, Sydrac: Misael, Misac: and Asarias, Abdenago. But Daniel was at a poyn with himself, that he wolde not be defyled thorow the kynges meate, *ner ÿ wyne which he

* 4 Re. 24. a. 2 Par. 36. c.
Then Daniel answered Melassar, whom the chefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Asarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drynke: then loke vpon oure faces, and theirs that eate off the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale with thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter, ad proued the x. dayes. And after lyte ten dayes, their faces were better lykinge and fatter, then all the yonge spryngaldes, which ate of the kynges meate.

Thus Melassar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gane them potage therefor. God gane now these foure spryngaldes connynge and lernynge in all scriptur and wisdome: but vnto Daniel specially, he gane vnderstandinge off all visions and dreams. Now when the tyne was expyred, that the kyngye had appoynted to byryng in these yonge spryngaldes vnto hym: the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kyngye commonded with them. But amongst them all were founde none soch as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias. Therefore stode they before the kyngye, which in all wisdome and matters off vnderstandinge, that he enquered off them, founde them ten tymes better, the all the soythsayers and chariners, that were in all his realme. And Daniel abode still, vnto the first yeare of kyngye Cyrus.

The iij. Chapter.

Iν the seeconde yeare off the raigne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, "where thorow his sprete was vexed, and his slepe brake from him. Then the kyngye commaunded to call together all thy soythsayers, chariners, witches and Caldees, for to shewe the kyngye his dreame. So they came, and stode before the kyngye. And the kyngye sayde vnto them: I haued dreamed a dreame, q my sprete was so troubled therwith, y I haue elene forgotten, what I dreamed. Vpon this, the Caldees answered the kyngye in the Syriens speach: O kyngye, God saie thy life for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meane. The kyngye gane the Caldees their answere, ad sayde: It is gone fro me: Yf ye wil not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacion theroff, ye shal dye, and youre houses shall be pryzed. But yt ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge theroff, ye shall haue off me giftes, rewardes and greate honoure; only, shewe me the dreame and the significacion of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kyngye must shewe his seruauntes the dreame, and so shal we declare, what it meane.

Then the kyngye answere, sayenge: I perceane off a treath, that ye do but prologue yt tyne: for so moch as ye se, that the thing is gone fro me. Therefore, yt ye wil not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one judgment. But ye layne and dyssembile with vayne worde, which ye speake before me, to put of the tyne. Therefore tell me the dreame, ad so shall I knowe, yt ye can shewe me, what it meane. Vpon this, the Caldees gane answere before the kyngye, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thing, which yt kyngye speake of: Yee there is nether kyngye prynce ner lorde, that euuer axed soch thinges at a soythsayer, charmer or Caldeer: for it is a very harde matter, that the kyngye requyreth. Nether is there eny, that can certifie the kyngye theroff, excepte the goddes: whose dwelinge is not amonge the creatures.

For yt which cause the kyngye was wroth with greate indignacio, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babilon: and yt proclamation wete forth, that the wyse me shulde be slaye. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his copanyons. Then Daniel enquered Arioch the kyngyes stewarde, off the judgment and sentence, that was gone forth already to kyli soch as were wyse at Babilon. He answered, and sayde vnto Arioch beinge then the kinges debyte: Why hath the kyngye proclaimed so cruel a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Vpon this, wente Daniel vp, and desyred the kinge, yt he might haue leysoure, to shewe the kyngye the interpretacion: and then came he home agayne & shewed the thinge vnto Ananias, Misael & Asarias his companions: they shulde besoke the God of heau'n for grace in this secrete, that Daniel and his fellowes with other soch as were wyse in Babilton, perished not. Then was the mystery shewed vnto Daniel in a visiō by nytght. And Daniel prayed ã God of heau'n, Daniel also cryed loud, and sayde:

Q that the name of God might be prayed for euer and euer, for wisdome and strength are his owne: a he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: he geneth wysdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstödinge to those that vnderstöde: he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth ã thynge that lyeth in dareknesse, for the light dwelleth with him. b I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God off my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysdome and strength, a hast shewed me the thinge, that we desyred off the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Vpon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whom the kynge had ordened to destroye the wyse at Babilton: he wente vnto him, and sayde: destroye not soch as are wyse in Babilton, but bringe me in vnto the kyng, and I shal shewe the kyng the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in all the haist, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amonge the presoners off Iuda, ã shal shewe the kyng the interpretacion. The answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he, ã cast shewe me ã dreame, which I haue sene, ã the interpretacion thereof? Daniel answered the kyng to his face, and sayde: As for this secrete, for the which the kyng maketh inquisicion: it is nether the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer ner the deuell conjurer, that can certifie the kyng off it: Only God in heau'n cā open secretes, ã and he it is, that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng, thou didest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come herafter: So he that is the opener of mysteries, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for eny wisdome that I haue, more then eny other lyuyng: but only that I might shewe the kyng the interpretacion, ã that he might knowe the thoughtes off his owne herete. Thou kyng sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a great ymage, whose fygure was marveulous greate, and his vysage grymme. The ymage heade was of fyne golde, his brest and armes off syluer, his body ad loynes were off copper, his legges were off yron, his fete were parte off yron, and parte of earth.

This thou sawest, till the tyme that (without eny hondes) there was hewen off a stone ã which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were both off yron and earth, and brake the to podlere: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peces: and became like the chaffe off corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from ã somer floores, that they că nomore be fonde.

But the stone that smote the ymage, became a greate mountayne, which fulfylleth the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now will we shewe before the kyng, what it meaneath.

a O kyng, thou art a kyng off kynges: For the God off heau'n hath gue the a kingdome, ryches, strength and maiestie: ã hath delyuered the all thinges, that are amóge ã children off men: the beasts off the feldé, ãd the foules vnder the heau'n, and geuen the dominion ouer them all. Thou art that golde heade. After ã there shal aryme another kingdome, which shall be lesse then thyne. The thryde kingdome shall be lyke copper, and haue dominacion in all fodes. The fourth kingdome shall be as stronge as yron. For like as yron brusseth and breaketh all thinges: Yee euem as yron beateth every thinge downe, so shal it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte off yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, which nevertheles shal haue some off the yron grounde mixte with it, for so moch as thou hast sene the yron mixte with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte off yron and parte off claye, signifieth: that it shalbe a kyngdome partlye stronge and partlye weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxte with claye: they shall myngle them selues with ã sede off symple people, ã yet not continuye one with another, like as yron wil not be souldeder with a potsherde.

*In the dayes off these kynges, shall the God of heauen set vp an euerlastinge kyngdome which shall not perish, and his kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: Yee the same shall breake and de-stroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that without eny hondes there was cut out of the mount a stone,\(^a\) which brake the yron, the copper, \(^b\) earth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath \(^c\) greate God shewed the kyng, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacion of it is sure.

Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpn his face, and bowed him self vnvo Daniel,
and commaunded that they shulde offre meatoffrynges and swete odoures vnvo him.

The kyng answerd Daniel, and sayde:
Yee off a treuth, youre God is a God aboue
all goddes, a \textit{Lorde} aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seyng thou canst discourer this mysterie. So the kyng made Daniel a greate man, and gaue him many and greate giftes.

He made him ruler off all the countrees of Babilon, and lorde of all the nobles, that were at Babilon. Now Daniel intreated the kyng for Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the offyces
in the londe off Babilon: but Daniel himself remayned still in the courte by the kyng.

\textbf{The iij. Chapter.}

\textbf{NABUCHODONOSOR} the kyng caused a golde \textit{ymage} to be kynged, which was lx. cubites bye, and sixe cubites thicke.
This he made to be set vp in the valley of Duran in the londe of Babilon \textit{g} sent out to gather together the dukes, lorde\(^a\) nobles, the judges and officers, the debites \textit{ad} shreus, with all the rulers of the londe: \(^d\) they might come to the dedicacon of the \textit{ymage} which Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. So the dukes, lorde\(^a\) nobles, the judges and officers, debites and shreus with all the rulers of the londe gathered them to gather, and came vnvo the dedicacon of \(^d\) \textit{ymage}, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

Now when they stode before the \textit{ymage},
which Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedell cried out with all his might: O ye people, kynreddes and tunges, to you be it sayde: that whi ye heare the noyse off the trompettes, which shalbe
blowne, with \(^d\) harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies and all maner off Musick: ye fall downe and worship the golden \textit{ymage}, \(^b\) Nabuchodonosor the kyng set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth himself, shal euen the same houre be cast in to an hote burnyng euon. Therfore, when all the folkere the noyse off the trompettes that were blowne, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies and all kynde of Melody:
th\i e all the people, kynreddes and nacies fell downe, and bowed them selues vnvo the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp.

Now were there certayne men off the Caldees, that went euon then and accused \(^d\)
Iewes, and sayde vnvo kyng Nabuchodonosor:
O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kyng hast geuen a commandem\textit{ct}, that all men when they heare the noyse off
the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melod\textit{ies}: shall fall downe and bowe them selues toward the golden \textit{ymage}: who so th\i fell not downe and worshiped not, that he shulde be cast in to an hote burnyng euon. Now are there certaine Iewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offices of the londe off Babilon: \(^c\) namely, Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago. These men (o kyng) regarde not thy commandem\textit{ct}, yee
they will not serue thy goddes, ner bowe them selues to the golden \textit{ymage}, that thou hast
set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath
and displeasure, commaundded, \(^d\) Sydrac, Misac & Abdenago shulde be brought vnvo him. So these men were brought before the kyng.
Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnvo them, and sayde: what? o Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago, will not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe youre selues to the golden \textit{ymage}, that I haue set vp? wel, be redy herafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, blowne with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all \(^d\)
other melod\textit{ies}: that ye fall downe, and wor-shipe the \textit{ymage} which I haue made. But yff ye worship it not, ye shal be cast immediatly in to an hote burnyng euon. Let se, what

god is there, \( \uparrow \) maye deluyer you out of my houes?

Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago answered the kyng, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to cου̂ente vt̂o \( \uparrow \) in this matter, for why: "oure God whom we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnyngge ouen (O kyngē) and can right wel deluyer vs out off thy honden. And though he wil not, ye shalte thou knowe (o kyngē) that we will not serue thy goddes, ner do reuerce to the ymage, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full off indignacion, so that \( \uparrow \) countenaunce of his face Changed vpō Sidrac, Misac & Abdenago. Therfore he charched and commaunded, that the ouen shulde be made seuen tymes hoter, then it was wōte to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hooste, for to bynde Sidrac, Misac and Abdenago, and to cast them in to the hote burnyngge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, shues with their other garmente, ad cast in to the hote burnyngge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strate, and the ouen was exceedyngge hoter. As for the men that put in Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago, the flame off the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago fell downe in \( \uparrow \) hote burnyngge ouen, beinge fast bounde.

Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng marueled, and stode vp in all haist: he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: dyd not ye cast these thre men bounde in to the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kyngē: Yee o kyngē. He answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men goinge lowse in the myddest off the fyre, and nothinge corrupte: "and the fourth is like an angel to loke vpon. Vpon this vte Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnyngge ouen: he speake also, \( \uparrow \) sayde: O Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago, ye seruantes of the hye God: go forth, and come hithe. And so Sydrac, Misac, and Abdenago wente out of the fyre. Then the dukes, lorde, and nobles, and the kynges counsell came together to se these men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodies: \( \uparrow \) in so much that the very hayre of their heade was not burnt, and their clothes vnchaunged: Yee there was no smell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde:

'Blessed be the God of Sidrac, Misac & Abdenago: which hath sent his angel, ad defended his seruautes, that put their trust in him: \( \uparrow \) haue altered the kynges commaundement, and ioperde their bodies therupon: rather then they wolde serue or worshipe any other god, excepte their owne God only.' Therfore I \( \uparrow \) wil and commandee, that all people, kynreddes & tungenes, which speake any blasphem against the God of Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago, shal dye, and their houses shalbe prysed: Because, there is no God \( \uparrow \) maye saue, as this.\( \uparrow \)

So the kynges promoted Sidrac, Misac and Abdenago, in the londe of Babylon.

\( \uparrow \) Nabuchodonosor kyngē, vnto all people, kynreddes and tungenes that dwell vpon the whole earth: peace be multiplied amonge you. I thought it good to shewe the tokēs \( \uparrow \) maruelse workes, \( \uparrow \) \( \uparrow \) hye God hath wrought vpon me. \( \uparrow \)

'Of how greate are his tokēs, \( \uparrow \) how mightie are his wonders? His kyngdome is an euerlastinge kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer.'

The 111. Chapter.

\( \uparrow \) NABUCHODONOSIR beyng at rest a in myne house, ad florishinge in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afraied: ad the thoughtes that I had vpō my bed, with the visions of myne heade, troubled me. Then sent I out a commissioun, that all they which were of wisdome at Babilo shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacion of the dreame. So there came the soythsayers, charmers, Caddes and conjurers of deules: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coulde not shewe me: till at the last, there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar, accordinge to the name of my God) which hath the sprete of the holy goddes in hym: to whom I tolde the dreame, sayenge: O Balthasar, thou pryncle of saythayers: For so much as I knowe, that thou hast the sprete of the holy goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the: tel me therefor, what \( \uparrow \) visio of my dreame (\( \uparrow \) I haue sene) maye signifie. I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre vpon the grounde, which was very hye, great and mightie: y heyth reached vnto the heauu, and the breeth extended to all the endes of the earth: his leaues were fyare, he had very mocch frute, so y euery ma had ynoogh to eate therin.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnnder it, and the foules off the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vision vpon my bede: a beholde, a watchuer (euene an holy angel) came downe from heauen, and cryed mightely, sayenge: Hew downe the tre, breake off his branches, shake of his leaues, and seatre his frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaie from vnnder him, and the foules from his branches. Neuertheleslee leaue the grounde of his rote still in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dew of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall hauue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wyldke beastes.

That mans herte off his shall be taken from him, and a beastes herte shall be geuen him, till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him.

This erande of the watchuer, is a comande-meth grounded and sought out in the counsel off him, that is most holy: to lerne men for to vnderstonde, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes off men, ad geneth them, to whom it liketh him, and bryngeth the very outcastes off men ouer them. This is the dreme, y I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue seene.

Therfore o Balthasar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so much as all the wyse men off my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for y sprete of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peace by the space of an houre ad his thoughtes troubled him. So the kyng spake, and sayde: O Balthasar, let nether the dreme ner the interpretation theroff feare the. Balthasar answered, sayenge: O my lorde, this dreme happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretation to thyne adversaries. As for the tre that thou sawest which was so grete, ad mightie, whose heyth reached vnto the heauen, and his breeth in to all the worlde: whose leaues were fyare, ad the frute mocch: vnder the which the beastes of the felde had their habitacion, and vpon whose branches the foules of the ayre dyd syt:

Euen thou (o kyng) art the tre, grete
stroge. Thy greatness increaseth, q reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watchuer euen an holy angel, that came downe from heauen, and sayde: Hew downe the tre, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron and stele: He shall be wet with the dew off heaurn, and his parte shalbe with the beastes of the felde, till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him: This (o kyng) is y interpretaciõ, yee it is the very deuyce of him, y is hyest of all, ad it toucheth my lorde the kyngye.

Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and thy dwelinge shalbe with the beastes of the felde: with grasse shalt thou be fed like an ox. Thou must be wet with the dew of the heauen: yee seuen yeares shall come and go vpon the, till thou knowe, that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, "ad geneth them, to whom he lyseth. Morover, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tre shalbe let still in the grounde: it betokeneth, y thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto y, after thou hast lerned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherefore (o kyng) be contë with my counsel, that thou mayest lowe thy synnes with rightuousnesse, ad thyne offences with mercy to poore people: for soch thinges shall prolonge thy peace. All these thynges touch the kyngye Nabuchodonosor.

So after xij. monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palaice off the kyngdome off Babilon, and sayde: This is the grete cite off Babilo, which I myself (with my power ad strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure off my majesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fell a voyce from heauen, sayenge: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spokë: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellinge shalbe with the beastes off the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse like as an ox, till seuen yeares be come and gone ouer the: euen vntill thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes off men, and that he maye geue them, vnto whom it pleaseth him.

The very same houre was this matter ful fyllde vpô Nabuchodonosor: so that he was

* Dan. 2. c. Iere. 27. n.
cast out off mēs cōpany, a ate grasse like an ox. His body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hayres were as great as Aegles fethers, and his nales like byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lift vp myne eyes vnto heaven, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyest. I magnified and prayed him that lyueth for euermore, whose power endureth allwaye, and his kyngdome from one generacion to another: in comparson off whom, all they that dwell vpon the earth, *are to be reputed as nothinge.

He handleth acordynge to his will, amōge his powers of heaven *amonge the inhabitours of the earth: and there is none that maye resiste his honde, or saye: *what doest thou? At the same tyme was myne vnderstandynge geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honour of my kyngdome, to my dignite, and to myne owne shappe agayne. My great estates and prynges sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worship.

The dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loaue, magnifie and prayse the kyng of heaven: for all his worke is true, and his wayes right. As for those that go on prouly, he is able to bringe them downe.

The v. Chapter.

Balthasar the kyng made a greate bancket to his thonede lorde: withall these thonede he made greate cheare, and when he was dronken with wyne, he commanded to brynghe him *golden and syluer vessel, which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Ierusalem: *that the kyng and his lorde (with his quene and concubynes) myghte therout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was takē out of the temple of the LORDES house at Ierusalem. Then the kyng and his lorde with his quene and concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne, and prayede their Idolis of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it hēd bene of a mans honde wrytinge, right ouer agaynst the candelsticke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palacie; and the kyng sawe the palme of *honde *wrote. *Then chaunged the kyngke his coute-nence, and his thoughtes troubled him: so that the ioyntes off his body shake, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. Wherfore the kyngke cryed mightely, *that they shulde brynghe him the charmers, Caldees and conjurers of deuells. The kyngke spake also to the wyse men of Babilon, and sayde: *Who so can rede this wrytinge, and shewe me the playne meanyng theroff: shall be cloathed with purple, haue a cheyne off golde aboute his necke, and rule the thirde parte off my kyngdome.

Vpon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coude nether rede the wrytinge, nor shewe the kyngke what it signified. The was the kyngke sore afraied, in so moch, that his coloure chaunged, and his lorde was sore vexed. So by reason off this matter, *had happened to the kyngke his lorde, the quene went vp herself in to the bancket house, and spake vnto the kyngke, sayenge: O kyngke, God saue thy life for evere: Let not thy thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. For why: there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the sprete off the holy goddes within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandinge ad wysdome like the goddes. Yee the kyngke Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the soythsayers, charmers, Caldees and deueld conjurers: because that soch an abundante sprete, knowlege *wisdome (to expoide dreams, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in hym: yee euen in Daniel, whom the kyngke named Balthasar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyngke spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Art thou that Daniel, one off the presoners of Iuda, whom my father the kyngke brought out of Iewry? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the sprete of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstödinge, and that there hath bene greate wisdome founde in the. Now haue there bene broughte me, wise and con-nyngge charmers, to rede this wrytynge, and to shewe me the meanyng theroff: But they coude not tell me, what this matter signified. Then herde I saye, *thou canst expounde darcke thinges, and declare darke doutes.

a Dan. 3. f. b Psalm. 134. a. c Iob 42. b. d 2 Par. 36. c. e Iere. 50. a. f Dan. 2. a.
Well then, if thou canst rede this writinge, and shewe me the meaninge thereof: thou shalt be clothed with purple, have a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayde before his kyng:

As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy self, or geue thy rych gifts to another: "yet not thelesse, I wil rede the wryntyng that thou hast shewed me, and the interpretation thereof. O kyng, God the hyest gane vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, \\ \textit{digyte} of a kyng, with worshippe and honoure: so \\ ye all people, kyndeed \\
tuneg stode in awe of him, by reason off the hye estate, that he had lent him. For why: he sewe, whom he wolde: he smote, whom it pleased him. \\
Agyayne: whom he wolde, he set vp: and whom he list, he put downe. \\
But because his herte was so proude, and his stomack set fast vnto wyfulnesse: he was deposed from his kyngly trone, and his majestye was taken from him. He was shot out from amonge men, his herte was like a beastes herte, and his dulwlynge was with the wyldes Asses: he was fayne to eate grasse like an ox, and his body was wet with the dew off the heauen: till he knewe, that the hyest had power vpon the kyngdones of men, and sette ouer them, whom he list.

And thogh his sonne (o Balthasar) for all this, hast not submitted thine hert, though thou knewest all these thinges: but hast magnified thy selff abowte the LORDE off heauen, so that the vessels off his house were brought before the: that thou, and thy lorde, with thy quene and conewynes, myght drynke wyne therout: And hast prayed the Idols of syluer and golde, copper and yrone, off wodde \\
stone: As for the God, \\
im whose honde consisteth thy breth, \\
all the thy wyyes: thou hast not loued him.

Therefor is the palme off this honde sent hither from him, to token vp this wryntynge. And this is the scripture, that is written vp:

\textit{Mane, Thetel, Phares.} Now the interpretation off the thynge is this: \\
\textit{Mane, God hath nombred thy kyngdome, and broughe it to an ende: Thetel, Thou art wedyd in the balaunce, and art founde to light: Phares, Thy kyngdome is deld in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.}

Then commanded Balthasar, to cloth Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne off golde aboute his necke, and to make a proclamation concernynge hym: that he shulde be the ruler off the thirde parte off his kyngdome. "The very same night was Balthasar the kyng off the Caldees slayn, and Darius out of Media toke in the kyngdome, beynge lxxx. yeare off age.

\textbf{The bi. Chapter.}

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdome \\
an C. and xx. lorde, which shulde be in all his kyngdome aboute. Abone these he set thre prynces (off whom Daniel was one) that the lorde might geue accompltes vnto them, and the kyng to be vn Diseased.

But Daniel exceeded all these princes off lordes, for the sprete off God was plenteous in him: so that the kyng was mynded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the prynces and lordes sought, to pyke out in Daniel some quarell against the kyngdome: yet coude they fynde none occasion nor fawte vpon him. For why: he was so faythful, \\ there was no blame nor dishonesty founde in him.

Then sayde these men: we will get no quarell against this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe off his God. Vpon this, wente the princes and lordes together vnto the kyng, and sayde thus vnto hym: kyng Darius, God sanc thy life for euer.

All the great estates off the realme: as \\ prynces, dukes, senatours and judges, are determed to put out a commandement off \\ kyng, and to make a sure statute: namely, \\ that who so desyreth any peticion, ether of \\ eny god or man (with in this xxx. dayes) excepte it be only off the, O kyng: the same person maye be cast in to the Lyons denne. Wherfore, o kyng, conforme thou this statute, and make a wryntyng: that the thyng which the Medes and Perses have ordened be not altered ner broken.

So Darius made the wryntyng, and confirmed it. Now when Daniel vnderstode that the wryntyng was made, he wente in to his house: and the wyndowes of his hall towards Jerusalem stode open. There kneelde he downe vpon his knees, three tymes a daye: there he made his peticion, and prayed his God, like as his maner was to do afore tyne.
Daniel made his petition and prayer before the king, to show that he was not afraid to speak against the king's decrees. So he was brought out of the dungeon, and found to be in the highest degree of health and strength. He explained the things that were written in the book of the secrets, and the king was pleased with his work. Daniel was made the chief of the magistrates, and had the reins of government in his hands. He was effectively used in the nations, and his wisdom was increased. His kingdom was increased, and he was made the ruler of all the nations of the world.
like vnto a Leoparde: this had wynges as a foule, euene foure vpon the backe. This beest had foure heades, ad there was power geuen him. After this I sawe in a vision by night, beholde: the fourth beest was grymme and horrible, and marvelous stronge. It had greate yron teth, it deuoured, and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder fete. It was farre vnlike the other beestes that were before it: for it had ten hornes, wheroff I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amongst the, another like horne, before whom there were thre of the first hornes pluckte awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes like a ma, a mouth speakingyng presumpuous things. I loked till the seates were prepared, ad till the olde aged sat him downe. His clothinge was as white as snowe, and the hayres of his heade like the pure woll.

His trone was like the firie flame, and his wheales as the burnyng fyre. There drew forth a firie streame, wente out from him. A thousand tynnes a thousande serued him, x. M. tynnes ten thousande stode before him. The judgmet was set, and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede there vnto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which that horne spake.

I behelde, till the beest was slayne, and his body destroyed, geuen ouer to be brent in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beestes also, it was taken awaye, but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by night, and beholde: there came one in the cloudes of heauen like the sonne of a man, which vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him: Then geue he him power ad dignite regall, that all people, trybes and tongue shulde serue him. His power is an euerlastinge power, which shall neuer be put downe: his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My herte was vexed, 1 Daniel had a troubled spryte within me, ad the visions off my heade made me affrayed: till I gat me vnto one off them that stode by, to knowe the treuth, concerninge all these things. So he tolde me, and made me vsystode the interpretaciō of these things.

These foure greate beestes, are foure kinges which shal arysse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome off the sayntes of the most hyest, and possesse it still more + more for a longe season. After this I required diligently to knowe the treuth, concerninge the fourth beest, which was so farre vnlike the other beestes, and so horrible: whose teth were of yron, and his nales off brasse: which deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. I desyred also to knowe the treuth, as touchinge the ten hornes that he had vpon his heade, and this other which came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that speake presumpuous things, and loked with a grimmer visage then his felowes.

I behelde, and the same horne made battail against the sayntes, yee ad gat the victory off them: vntill the tyme, that the olde aged came, that the judgment was geue to the cheuest sayntes: and till the tyme, that sayntes had the kyngdome in possession. He gae me this answere: That fourth beest shalbe the fourth kyngdome vpō earth: it shalbe more then all other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe ad destroye all other londes.

The ten hornes, are ten kynges that shal arysse out of that kyngdome, after who there shall stonde vp another, which shall be greater then the first.

He shall subdue thre kynges, and shall speake wordes against the hyest off all: he shall destroye the sayntes of the most hyest, and thynke, that he maye chaunge tymes and lawes. They shall be geuen vnder his power, vntil a tyme, two tymes, and halff a tyme.

But the judgment shalbe kepte, so that his power shalbe taken from him, for he shall be destroyed, and perish at the last. As for the kyngdome, power and all might that is vnder the heauen: it shall be geuen to the holy people off the most hyest, whose kyngdome is euerlastinge, yee all powers shall serue and obeye him. Thus farre exteće your wordes.

Neuerthelesse, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaunce chaunged, but the wordes I kepte still in my herte.
The viij. Chapter.

I

N the thirde yeare off the raigne of kynge Balthasar, there apareid a visiō vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the first. "I sawe in a vision, (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chefe cite, which lyeth in the londe off 'Elam) and in my vision, me thought I was by the ryuer off Vlai.

Then I lokid vp, and sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and these hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, and the hyest came vp last. I sawe that this ramme pusshed with his hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north, and agaynst the south: so that no beastes might stonde before him, ner defende them from his power: but he dyd as he listed, and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an hegoate from the west, ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous goodly horne betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme, that had the two hornes (whom I had sene afoire by the ryuer syde) and ramme fearlessly vpon him with his might. I sawe him drawe nye vnto the ramme, beynge very feare vpon him: yee he gane him soch a stroke, that he brake his two hornes:

Nether had the ramme so mocch strength as to stonde before him: but he kyst hym downe, trode hym vnder his fete: and no man was able to delyne the ramme out of his power.

The goate waxed excedinge greate, and when he was at the strongest, his greate hornes was broken also. Then grewe there other foure soch like in the steade, toward the foure wyndes off the heauen. "Yee out of one of the leest off these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, which waxed maruelous greate: toward the south, toward the east, and toward the fayre pleasant londe. It grewe vp to the hoost off heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and off the starrses also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yee it grewe vp vnto the prynce off the hoost, from whom the daylie offeringe was taken, and the place off his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it, agaynst the daylie offeringe (because of wickednesse) that it might cast downe the verite to the grounde, and so to prospere in all things, that it went aboute. Vpon this I herde one off the syntes speakeynge, which synte sayde vnto one that axed this question:

How longe shall this vision off the daylie sacrifice and of the waisting abominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenynge ? the morninge, even two thousande and three hũdred days: then shall the Sanctuary be cleseid agayne.

Now when I Daniel had sene this vision, and sought for the vnderstandinge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thinge like vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer off Vlai, which cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstonde the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was aferayed at his cõminge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in the last tyme shall this vision be fullide. Now as he was speakeynge vnto me, I waxed faynte, so that I syncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayinge: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fullide.

The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kynge off the Medes ad Perses: but the goate is the kynge of Greke londe: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the pryncipall kynge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifieth, that out of this people shall stonde vp foure kyngdomes, but not so mightie as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyte vngodlynesse is a growinge) there shall arys a kyng off an vnshamefast face, which shall be wyse in dareke speakinges.

He shalte mightie and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroy aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboue, shall prospere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorow his craftynes, falsede shall prospere in his honde, his herte shall be proude, and manye one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shall stonde vp agaynst the prynce off prynces, but he shalte destroyed
The prophet Daniel.

In the first yeare off Darius the sonne off Ahasuerus, which was of the seed off the Medes, was made kyng over the realme of the Caldees: Yee even in the first yeare off his rainge, I Daniel desyred to knowe the yearly nombre out of the bokes, whereof the LORDE spake vnto Ieremy the prophet: that Jerusalem shulde lie waist lxx. yeares: ad I turned me vnto God the LORDE, for to praye and make myne intercessiō, with fastinge, sack cloth ad ashes I prayed before the LORDE my God, and knowleged, sayenge: O LORDE, thou greate t fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy with them, which love the, and do thy commaundermente: We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedient and gone bache: yee we haue departed from all thy preceptes and judgementes.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruauntes the prophets, that speke in thy nome to oure kynges and prynces to oure fore fathers, and to all the people off the londe. O LORDE, righteousness belongeth vnto the, vnto vs pertayneth nothinge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto every man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Yee vnto all Israel, whether ye be farre or nye: thorow out all londes, wherin thou hast strowed them, because of the offences that they had done against the.

Yee o LORDE, vnto vs, to oure kynges v prynces, to oure fore fathers: ouen to vs all, that have offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the o LORDE oure God, pertayneth mercy and forgenenesse. As for vs, we are gone bache from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the LORDE oure God, to walke in his lawes, which he layed before vs by his seruauntes the prophets: Yee all Israel haue transgressed, and gone bache from thy lawe, so that they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce. Wherefore the curse and ooth, that is written in the lawe of Moses the seruaunt of God (against whom we haue offended) is poured vpon vs. And he hath perfourmned his wordes, which he spake agaynst us, and we haue disobedient the, and be betherd in thy verite. Therfore hath the LORDE made haist, to bringe this plage vpon vs: for the LORDE oure God is righteous, in all his workes which he doth: for why, we wolde not harken vnto his voyce.

And now, o LORDE oure God, thon that with a mightie honde hast broughth thy people out of Egipte, to get thy selfe a name, which remayneth this daye: we haue synned (o LORDE) and we haue offended thee, so that thou hast synned against thee, and abhorred the thy citie Jerusalem thy holy hill. And why? for oure synnes sake and for the wickednesse of oure forefathers: is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are aboute vs. Now therfore (O oure God) heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and his intercession: O let thy face shyne ouer thy sanctuary, that heih waist.

O my God, enclyne thine eare, and herken (at the leest for thine owne sake) open thine eyes: beholde how we be desolated, yee and the cite also, which is called after thy name: For we do not cast oure prayers before the in oure owne righteousnesse, no: but only in thy greate mercies. O LORDE, heare: O for-gene LORDE: O LORDE considire, tary not ouer longe: but for thine owne sake do it, O my God: for thy cite and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowleginge myne owne synnes and thy synnes of my people, makinge so myne intercessiō before the LORDE my God, for the holy his sake of my God: yee whyle I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the ma\(\footnote{a\textsuperscript{a}}\) Gabriel (\(\footnote{a\textsuperscript{a}}\) whom I had sene afore in the vision) came flyenge to me, and touched me aboute \(\footnote{e}\) offeringe tyme in the eueneynge. He infornmed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniel (sayde he) I am now come, to make the understondende it: For as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so diuysed, and therfore am I come to shewe the. \(\footnote{a}\) And why? for thou art a man greatly beloved.

Wertherefore, pondre the matter wel, that thou mayest lerne, to understonde the vision. Lxx. wekes are determed ouer thy people, \(\footnote{a}\) ouer thy holy cite: that the wickednesse maye be consumed, that the synne maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconciled, and to bringe in euuerlastinge righteousnesse, to fulfill \(\footnote{f}\) visions and the propheteis, and to anoynyte the most holy one. Vnderstode this then, and märeke it well: \(\footnote{f}\) that from the tyme it shalbe concluded, to go and repaire Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ (or the anoyned) prynce: there shalbe seuen wekes. Then shall the strestes \(\footnote{f}\) walles be buylded agayne \(\footnote{a}\) wekes, but with harde troublous tyme. Aftre these \(\footnote{a}\) wekes, shal Christ be slayne, \(\footnote{a}\) they shal haue no pleasure in him. Then shal there come a people with the prynce, and destroye the cite and the sanctuary: and his ende shal come as the water floude. But the desolation shall continue till the ende of the batell.

He shall make a stronge bonde with many, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shal put downe the slayne and meatoffringe. \(\footnote{a}\) And in the temple there shalbe an abominable desolaci\(\footnote{a}\)o, till it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, \(\footnote{f}\) this waistinge shal continue vnto the ende.

\(\footnote{a}\) The r. Chapter.

In the thirde yeare of kinge Cirius of Persia, there was shewe vnto Daniel (otherwise called Balthasar) a matter, yee a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it.

He vnderstode the matter well, and perceived what the vision was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no lust to eate bred: as for fleshe and wyne, there came none within my mouth: No, I dyd not ones anoynyte my self, till the whole thre wekes were out.

Vpon the xxiiiij. daye of the first moneth, I was by the greate floude, called Tigris: I lift vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynyngye, \(\footnote{a}\) whose lynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Arabye: his body was like the Chrisolite stone, his face (to loke vpnon) was like lightenyngye, his eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes and fete were like fayre glisteringe metall, but the voyce of his wordes was like \(\footnote{f}\) voyce of a multitude.

\(\footnote{a}\) I Daniel alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfullnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye, and hyd them selues. I was left there by myself alone, and sawe this greate vision, so longe til there remayned nomore strength within me: Yee I lost my colore clene, I washt awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes: \(\footnote{a}\) as soone as I herde it, fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, which set me vp vpon my knees \(\footnote{a}\) vpon the palmes of my bondes, sayenge vnto me: \(\footnote{a}\) O Daniel, thou well beloned man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shal saye vnto \(\footnote{f}\) stode right vp, for vnto \(\footnote{f}\) am I now sent.

And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp tremblinge. Then saide he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why, sence the first daye that thou set thine herte to vnderstondende, and didest chasten thy self before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the whiche thou begannest to speake, had not the prynce ouer the kingdome of the Perses with stonde me xxij. dayes. But lo, Michael one of the chefe prynces, \(\footnote{a}\) came to holpe me, him haue I left by the kinge of Persia, \(\footnote{a}\) am come to shewe the, what shal happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes: for it wilbe lõge yet or the vision be fulfilled.

Now when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I kest downe my heade to \(\footnote{f}\) grounde, and helde my tunge. Beholde, there touched my lippes one, very like vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him, that stode before me: O my lorde, my luyntes are loused in the vision, and there is no more streth within me: How maye my lordes

The y. Chapter.

And in the first yeare of Darius of Media, I stode by him, to conforte him, to strengthe him, and now wil I shew the the treuth. Beholde, there shal stonde vp yet thre kingses in Persia, but this fourth shal be farre richer then they all. And when he is in the chefst power of his riches, he shal prooke every man agaynst the realme of Grekelonde. Then shal there arise yet a mightie kinge, that shal rule with greate dominion, and do what him list. And as soone as his kingdome commeth vp, it shalbe destroyed, deuyed towaerde foure wyndes of the heaven. They come after him, shall not hane soch power of dominion as he: but his kingdome shalbe scatred, yee euen amonge other the those. And the kyngs of this south shalbe mightier, then his other prynces. Agaynst him there shal one make himself strege, shal rule his dominió with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they shalbe ioyned together, the kynges daughter of the south shall come to the kynges of the north, for to make frendshipe, but she shal not optayne the power of that arme, nether shal she be able to endure thorow his might: but she, soch as brought her (yea she beget her, conformed her for his tyme) shalbe deluyered vp.

Out of thy branches of hir rote, there shal one stonde vp in his stede: which with power of armes shal gow thorow the kynges londe of the north, handle him accordinge to his strengthe. As for their Idols prynces, with their costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shal cary them awaye captuynes in to Egipte, and he shal preuaile agaynst the kynges of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come in to thy kynges realme of thy south, he shal be fayle to turne agayne in to his owne londe. Wherfore his sonnes shalbe displeased, and shal gather together a mightie greate hoost of people: and one of them shal come, and go thorow like a waterfloude: then shal he returne, and go forth with defyenge and boostinge vnto his owne londe.

The the kyng of thy south shalbe angrie, and shal come forth to fight agaynst the kyng of the north: Yee he shal bringe a greate multitude of people together, and a greate heape shalbe geue in to his hone: these shal he cary awaye with greate pryde, for so moch as he hath cast downe so many thousands, nethertheles he shal not preuaile. For thy kyng of thy north shal gather (of the new) a greater heape of people then afore, come forth (after a certayne tyme and yeares) with a mightie hoost g exceadinge greate good.

At the same tyme there shal be stonde vp agaynst the kyng of the south, so that thy wicked children of thy people also shal exalte them selues (to fulfill the vision) and then fall. So the kyng of the north shal come to laye sege, and to take the strôge fensed cities: And the power of the of thy south shal not be able to abyde him, the best men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resist him. Shortly, when he commeth, he shal handle him as he list, no man shalbe so hardly as to stonde agaynst him. He shal stôde in the pleasannt countrie, which thorow him shalbe destroyed. He shal set his face with all his power to optayne his kingdome, to be like it. Yee that shal he do, geue him vnto the daughteres amôge women, to destroy him. But he shal fayle, nether shal he optayne his purpose. After this, shall he set his face vnto the lles, take many of the.

A prynce shal stoppe him, to do him a shame, besyde the confusion that els shal come vnto him. Thus shal he turne agayne to his owne londe, stamble, fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon him dyd him violence, shal stonde in his place, have a pleasant kingdom: and after few dayes he shal be destroyed, that nether in wrath ner in battell. In his stead there shall arise a \textit{vyle} person not holdèd worthy of a kings dignitet: this shall come in craftely, & optayne the kingdome with fayne words: he shall fight agaynst the armses of the mightie (& destroye them,) yee & agaynst the prynce of the couenauant.

So after \textit{he} hath taken truce with him, he shall huddle disceatfully: that he maye get vp, & ouer come him with a small flocke: & so with craftynesse to get him to \textit{y}e fattest place of the londe, and to deale otherwise, then ether his fathers or graudfathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thinge, \textit{y}e they had robbed & spoyled, yee & all their substaunce: ymagen-\textit{y}e thoughtes agaynst the strogè holdes, & that for a tyme. His power and herte shalbe sterred vp with a great arnye agaynst the kinge of the south: where thorow the kinge of the south shalbe moued then vnto batell, with a great & mightie hoost also. Neuerthelessse, he shall not be able to stonde, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yee they \textit{y}e eate of his meate, shal hurte him: so that his hoost shal fall, many be slayne downe.

These two kings shalbe mynded to do myschefe, & talke of disceate at one table: but they shall not prosper: 'for the eade shal not come yet, vnto the tymre appoynted. Thè shall he go home agayn in to his owne londe with great good, & set his herte agayn the holy couenauant, he shalbe busy agaynst it, & then returne home. At the tymre appoynted he shall come agayne, & goe toward the south: So shall it happen otherwise then at the first, yet ones agayn. And why, the shippes of Cythim shall come vpon him, that he maye be smyttyn & turne agayne: \textit{y}e he maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holyes, to medle agaynst it. Yee he shall turne him, & drawe soch vnto him, as leave the holy couenauant.

He shall set mightie men to vnhalowe the sanctuary of streghte, to put downe the daylie offeringe, & to set vp the abominable desolacion. And soch as breake the couenaunt, shal he flatter with fayre wordes. But \textit{y}e people that wil knowe their God, shal haue the ouerhade and prosper. Those also that haue understandinge amongeth the people, shal enforme the multitude: & for a longe season, they shalbe persecuted with swearde, with fyre, with captuynte & with the takyng awaye of their goods. Now whe they fall, they shalbe set vp with a little helpe: but many shal cleue vnto them faynely.

Yee some of those which haue understondyng ye shalbe persecuted also: \textit{y}e they maye be tryed, purifid & clisèd, till the tymre be out: for there is yet another tymre appoyned. The kinge shall do what him list, he shal exalte and magnifie himself agaynst all, that is God. Yee he shall speake maruelous thinges agaynst the God of all godsdes, wherin he shal prosper, so londe till the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is deuyed alredy. He shal not regearde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon womè: Yee he shal not care for evy God, for he shal magnifie himself above all. In his place shal he worshiphe the mightie Idols: & the god whom his fathers knewe not, shal he honoure with golde and siluer, with precious stones and pleasuante Jewels.

This shal he do, sekinge helpe and succoure at the mightie Idols and straungge goddes. Soch as wil receaue him, and take him for God, he shal geue them great worshiphe and power: yee and make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the londe with rewardes. In the latter tymre, shal the kinge of the south sryue with him: and the kinge of the north in like maner shall come agaynst him with charrettes, horsmen & with a greate naue of shippes. He shal come in to the londes, destroye and go thorow: he shal entre also in to the fayre pleasuante londe. \textit{f} Many cities & countrees shal decaye, excepte Edom, Moab & the best of the children of Ammon, which shal escape from his honde. He shall stretch forth his hodes vpon the countrees, & the londe of Egipte shal not escape him. For thorow his goinge in, he shal have dominion ouer the treasures of siluer & golde, & ouer all the precious Jewels of Egipte, Lybia and Ethiopia. \textit{g} Neuerthelessse the tydings out of the east and the north shall trouble him, for the which cause he shal goe forth to destroy & curse a great multitude. The tentes of his palace shal he pytch betwixte the two sees, vpon the bill of the noble sanctuary, & he shal come to the ende of it, and then shal no man helpe him.
The 11th. Chapter.

THE tyme wil come also, that the greate prynee Michael,\(^a\) which stondeth on thy peoples syde, shal arys vp, for there shal come a tyme of trouble,\(^b\) soch as neuer was, sens there begane to be eny people, vnto that same tyme. Then shal thy people be deliuered, yee all those that be fouled written in the boke. \(^c\) Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth, shal awake: some to euerlastinge life, some to perpetuall shame \(\tau\) reprofe. \(^d\) The wyse (soch as haue taught other) shal glister, as the shyninge of heauen: and those that haue instructe the multitude vnto godlynesse, shalbe as the starres, worlde without ende.

And thou o Daniel, shut vp these wordes, \(\tau\) seale the boke, till the last tyme. Many shal go aboute here and there, and th\(\epsilon\) shal knowledge increase. So I Daniel loked, and beholde, there stode other two: one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpon yonder syde. And one of th\(\epsilon\) sayde vnto him, which was clothed in lynnynge, and stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: How longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderous workes? \(^e\) Then herde I the man with the lynnynge clothes, which stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: when he helde vp his right and left honde vnto heauen, \(\tau\) swer by him which lyueth for euer:\(^f\) that it shal tary for a tyme, two tymes \(\tau\) halfe a tyme: \(\tau\) when the power of the holy people is clene scatred abrode, th\(\epsilon\) shal all these thinges be fulfilled.

I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not. \(^c\) Then sayde I: O my lorde, what shal happen after that? He answered: Go thy waye Daniel, for these wordes shal be closed vp \(\tau\) sealed, till the last tyme: \(\tau\) many shalbe purifie, clesed \(\tau\) tried. But the vngodly shall lyue wickedly, and those wicked (as many of th\(\epsilon\) as they be) shal haue no vnderstandinge. \(^g\) As for soch as haue vnderstandinge, they shal regarde it. And from th\(\epsilon\) tyme forth that the daylie offerynge shalbe put downe \(\tau\) the abominable desolacion set vp, there shalbe a thousande two hundreth \(\tau\) xc. dayes. O well is him, that waiteth, \(\tau\) commeth to the thousande iii. C. \(\tau\) xxxv. dayes. Go thou thy waye now, till it be ended: take thy rest, and byde in thy lot, till the dayes haue an ende.

The prophet Oseas.

Tell you brethren, that they are my people: and youre sisteren, that they have optayned mercy. As for youre mother, ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her: for she is not my wife, nether am I hur huzbode: vnlesse she put awaye hir whordome out of my sight, and hir aduonyr from hir breastes. Yf no, I shall strype her naked, set her, euen as she came in to y worlde: Yee I shall laye hir waist, and make her like a wildernes, and slaye her for thyrrste. I shall haue no pite also uppon hir children, for they be the children of fornacacion.

Their mother hath broken hir wedlocke, and she that bare them, is come to cofucion. For she sayde: I wil go after my louers, that geue me my water and my bred, my woll, my flax, my oyle and my drynke. But I will h Wedge hir waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde hir forstoppes: and though she runne after hir louers, yet shall she not get them: she shall seke them, but not fynde them. Then shal she saye: well, I will go turne agayne to my first husbond, for at y tyme was I better at ease, then now. But this wolde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue hir corne, wyne, oyle, syluer and golde, which she hath hanged uppon Baal.

Wherfore now will I go take my corne a wyne agayne in their season, and fet agayne my woll and my flax, which I gaue her, to couer hir shame. And now will I dyscouuer hir foolishnesse, euen in the sight of hir louers, and no man shal deluyer her out of my hondes. Morover, I wil take awaye all hir myrth, hir holy dayes, hir new moons, hir Sabbathes and all hir solemne feastes: I will destroye hir vynyardes and fyge trees, though she saith: lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers have genen me. I wil make it a wodde, and the wylde beestes shall eate it vp: I will punysh her also for the dayes of Baal, wherein she censed him, deckynge him with hir earynges and chyeynes: when she fol owed hir louers, and forgot me, saith the LORDE.

Wherfore beholde, I wil call her againe, bringe her in to a wildernes, and speake frendly vnto her: there wil I geue hir hir vynyardes agayne, yee and the valley of Achor also, to shewe hir hopy with comforte. Then shal she synge there as in the tyme of hir youth, wil like as in the daye when she came out of the londe of Egipte. Then (saith the LORDE) she shal saye vnto me: O my houszbande, schal call me nomore Baal: for I wil take awaye those names of Baal from hir mouth, yee she shal neuer remembre their names any more. Then will I make a couenaunt with them, with the wylde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, wil with euyry thinge that crepeth vpon the earth.

As for bowe, swerde and batel, I wil destroye soch out of the londe, wil make them to slepe safely. Thus wil I mary the vnto myne owne selfe for euermore: yee euen to my self wil I mary the, in rightousnesse, in equyte, in luyjnye kyndnesse and mercy. In faith also will I mary the vnto my self, thou shalt knowe the LORDE. At the same tyme wil I shewe my self friendly and graciously unto thy heavens, saith the LORDE: 9 the heavens shall help the earth, and the earth shall help the corn, ywe and oyle, and they shall help Israel. 2 I will sowe them vp earth, for a sade to myne owne self, 2 wil have mercy vpon her, 2 was without mercy. And to the which were not my people, 2 I wil saye: thou art my people. And he shal saye: thou art my God. 3

THEN sayde 2 LORDE to me: 4 Go yet thy waye 2 wroue an aduotrous woman, who thy nevbour loueth, as 2 LORDE doth the childre of Israel: how be it they haue respecte to strange goddesses, and loue the wyne kannes. So I gat her for xv. syluerlings, and for an Homer and an half of barlye, 2 sayde vnto her: Thou shalt byde with me a longe season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou medle with none other man, 2 then will I kepe my self for the.

Thus the childre of Israel shal syt a greate whyte without kinde and pryncesd without offerynge and aulter, without prest and reve-kacion. But after warde shal the children of Israel enuerte, and seke the LORDE their God, and Davi their kinge: and in 2 latter dayes they shal worship the LORDE, and his louynge kyndnesse.

The iiiij. Chapter.

HEARE 2 worde of the LORDE, o ye children of Israel: For the LORDE must punyssh they, 2 dwell in the londe. And why? There is no faithfulness, there is no mercy, there is no knowlege of God in the lode: but swearinge, lyge, maslaughter, theft and aduotry haue gotten the ouerhande, 3 one bloudgylynesse foloweth another. Therefore shal the londe be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therin, shal mourne. The beasts in the fielde, the foules in 2 ayr, and the fishes in the sea shall dye. Yet is there none, that wil chasten nor reprowe another. The prestes which shulde reforme other men, are become like the people.

Therefore stumblest thou in 2 daye tyrme, 3 the prophet with the in the night. 5 wil bringe thy mother to sylence, 2 why? 5 my people perish, because they haue no knowlege. Seinge then that thou hast refused vnderstandinge, therefore wil I refuse 2 also: so that thou shal no more be my prest. And for so much as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wil also forget thy childre. The more they increased in multitude, the more they synned agaynst me, therefore wil I chaunge their honoure m to shame. 5 They eate vp the synnes of my people, 3 corage them in their wickednesse. 3 Thus the prest is become like the people. 5 Wherfore I wil punish them for their wicked wayes, 3 rewarde them acordinge to their owne imaginations. They shal eate, 3 not haue ynoygh: They haue vsed whordome, therefore shal they not prosper: 3 why? They haue forsaken the LORDE, 3 not regared him.

Whordome, wyne and dronckenesse take the herte awaie. 4 My people axe council at their stockes, their staffe must tell them. For an whorish mynde hath diseased them, so 2 they comite fornicacion agaynst their God. 7 They make sacrifice vpon the he mon-taynes, 2 burne their incense vpon the hilles, yee amonge the okes, groues 2 buzzhes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore youre daughters are become harlottes, and youre spouses haue brok their wedlocke I wil not punish youre doughters for beinge defyled, 1 youre brydes that became whores: 5seinge the fathers them selues haue medled with harlottes, and offred with vnthriftees: but the people that will not vnderstonde, must be punished.

Though thou Israel art disposed to playe 2 harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended. o Iuda: 2 thou shuldest not haue runne to Galga, ner haue gone vp to Bethaue, ner haue sworn: the LORDE lyueth. For Israel is gone backe, like a woton cowe. The LORDE therefore shal make hir fede, as 2 labe 2 goeth astrayre. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idols, wel, let him go. Their dronckennes hath put the backe, 3 brought them to whordome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bryng (saye they,) to their owne shame. A wynde shall take holde of their fathers, 3 they shal be cofounded in their offeringes.
The b. Chapter.

HEARE this, o ye prestes: take hede, o thou housholde of Israel: gene eare, o thou kingly house: for this punyshment wil come vpon you, that are become a snare vnto Myspa, and a sped net vnto the mount of Thabor: They kyl sacrifices by heapes, to begyle the people therwith: therefore wil I punysh them all. I knowe Ephraim well ynowh, a Israel is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, and Israel is defyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an whorish herte, so they can not knowe the LORDE.

But the pryde of Israel wil be rewarded him in his face, yee both Israel and Ephraim shal fall for their wickednesse, and Iuda with them also. They shall come with their shepe a bullockes to seke the LORDE, but they shal not fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the LORDE, they haue refused him, and brought vp bastarde children: a moneth thercfor shall depoue them with their porcious.

Blowe with the shawmes at Gabea, and with the trumpet in Rama, crie out at Bethauen vpon the ynsode of Ben Iamin. In the tyme of th plage shal Ephraim be layed waist, therefore dyd I faithfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are the prynces of Iuda become like them, that remoue the londemarckes, thercfor wil I pour out my wrath vpon them like water. Ephraim is oppresed, and can haue no right of the lawe: for why? they folowe thy doctrynes of men. Therefore wil I be vnto Ephraim a moth, to the house of Iuda as a catterpillar.

When Ephraim sawe his sicknesse, and Iuda his disease: Ephraim wente vnto Assur, and sent vnto kinge Iareb: yet coude not he helpe you, ner ease you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpel to the house of Iuda. Euen I, I wil spoyle them, go my waye. I wil take them with me, and no man shal rescue them. I wil go, and returne to my place, till they waxe faynt, and seke me.

The vi. Chapter.

IN their aduersite they shall seke me, and saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the LORDE: for he hath smytten vs, and he shal heale vs: He hath wounded vs, a he shal bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes shal he quycken vs, in the thirde daye he shal rage vs vp, so that we shal lyue in his sight. Then shal we haue understandinge, endeoure oure selues to knowe the LORDE. He shal go forth as the spryng of the daye, and come vnto vs as the euenyng and morneyng rayne vpon the earth.

O Ephraim, what shal I do vnto the? O Iuda, how shal I intreate the? seyng ye youre loue is like a morneyng cloude, a like a dew goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophets, letten them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punyshment shal come to light. For I haue pleasure in lounyng kyndnesse, and not in offerynge. Yee in the knowlege of God, more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen like as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt, and set me at naught. Galaad is a cite of wicked doers, of malicious people and bloudshedders. The multitude of the prestes is like an heape of theues, murtherers a bloudthurstie: for they haue wrought abominacion. Horrible thinges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is defyled: but Iuda shall haue an haruest for himself, when I returne the captiuyte of my people.

The vii. Chapter.

WHEN I vndertake to make Israel a whole, then the vngraciousnesse of Ephraim and the wickednes of Samaria commeth to light: then go they aboute with Iyes. At home, they be theues: and without, they fall to robbynge. They cosidre not in their hertes, that I remembre all their wickednes. They go aboute with their owne yuuenosi, but I se them wel ynowh. They make the kinge and the princes, to haue pleasure in their wickednes a Iyes. All these burne in adonyr, as it were an ouen a the baker heateth, whè he hath lefte kneadinge, till the dowre be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kinges and prynces, for they begynne to be woode droncken thorow wyne: they vse familiarite with soch as disceave the. They with the ymaginacion of their herte are like an ouè, their slepe is all y night like the
The prophet Oseas.
Chap. vii.

Set the horse to thy mouth, and blowe:
Get the swiftly (as an Agle) unto the house of the LORDE: for they haue broken my covenants, and transgressed my lawe. Israel can saye vnto me: thou art my God, we knowe the: but he hath refused the thinge that is good, therefore shall the enemy followe vpon him. They haue ordered kings, but not throwe me: they haue made prynces, and I must not knowe of it. Of their syluer and golde haue they made them ymage, to bringe them selues to destruccion.

Thy calfe (O Samaria) shalbe taken awaye, for my wrothfull indignacion is gone forth against the. How longe wil it be, or they can be clensed? For the calfe came from Israel, the worke man made it, therefore can it be no God, but euen to a spyders webbe shal thy calfe of Samaria be turned. They haue sowne wynde, therefore shal they reecepe a storme.

Their sede shal beare no corne, there shal no meel be made of their increase: though ye re be, yet shall straungers deoure it vp. Israel shall perish, the Gentiles shal entreate him as a foule vessel. Sens they went vp to the Assirians, they are become like a wylde asse in the deserte.

Ephraim geueth rewardes to get louers, therfore are they scarted amóge the Heithé, there wil I gather them vp. They shal soone be weery of the burthen of kinges a prynces. Ephraim hath made many aulters to do wickednes, therfore shal the aulters turne to his synne. Though I shewe the my lawe neuer so much, they counte it but straung doctrine. Whereas they do sacrifice, offeringe the flesh and eateinge it: the LORDE will haue no pleasure therin: but will remembre their wickednes, and punysh their synnes.

Israel turneth agayne in to Egipte, they haue forgotten him that made them, they buylde churches, and Juda maketh many stronge cities: therfore wil I sende a fyre in to their cities, and it shal consume their places.

The ir. Chapter.

Do not thou triumphe (O Israel) make no boostinge more then the Heithen, for thou hast committed aduotry agaynst thy God: straungre rewardes hast thou loued, more the all corne floores. Therfore shall they nomore enioy the cornfloores and wynepresses, and their swee wyne shal fayle the. They wil not dwell in the LORDES londe, but Ephraim turneth agayne in to Egipte, eateth vncleane things amonste the Assirians. They poure out no wyne for a drinkeofferinge vnto the LORDE, nether geue they him their slayne offeringes: but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherein all they that eate them, are defyled. For the bred that they

I SRAEL was a goodly vine, but he hath A brought forth unprofitable fruite: yee the more fruite he had, the more aulters he made:
more good I dyd to their londe, the more friendship shewed they to their ymages. Their herte was deuyded, thorefor wil they be destroyed. The LORDE shall breake downe their ymages, he shall destroye their aulters. Then shal they saye: we haue no kinge, for why? we haue not feared the LORDE. And what shal then the kinge do to vs? They comon together, and sweare vayne ooths: they be cofelderate together, thorefor growth their punishment, as the wedes in the forowes of the londe.

They that dwell in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Bethauet: thorefor shall the people mourne ouer them, yee and the prestes also, that in their welthynesse reioysed with them: and why? it shal passe awaye from them. It shalbe brought to the Assyrian, for a present vnto kinge Iareb. Ephraim shal receaue full punishment: Israel shal be confounded for his owne ymaginacions, Samaria with his kinge shall vanish awaye, as the somme vpon the water. The bye places of Auen where Israel do synne, shal be cast downe: thistles and thornes shal growe vpon their aulters. Then shal they saye to y mountaines: cower vs, and to the hilles: fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as Gabaa dyd aforesyme, where they remayned: shalde not the batel then come vpon the wicked children, as well as vpon the Gabaoonites? I wil chasten them, euuen after myne owne desyre, the people shal be gathered together ouer them, whie I punysh them for their greate wickednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cow that is vsed to go to plowe, thorefor I loued him, and fell vpon his fayre neck. I droue Ephraim, Iuda plowed, Iacob played the huszbode man: that they might sowe vnto righteousnes, and reape the frutes of weldoyng: y they might plowe vp their fresh londe, and seke the LORDE, till he came, and lerned them righteousnes.

But now they haue plowed them wickednesse, thorefor shal they reepe synne, and eate the frute of yles. Seinge thou puttest thy
When Israel was y*ge, I loved him: and called my sonne out of the londe of Egipte. But y more they were called, the more they wente backe: offeringe vnto Idols, and censygne ymages. 1 lerned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde hauie helped them. I led them with coarde of frendshipe,  with bondes of loue. I was euен he, that layed the yocke upon their neckes. 1 gaue them their fodder my self, y shulde not go agayne in to Egipte: And now is Assur their kinge: For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore shal y swearde begynne in their cities, the stoare that they haue liekened vnto, shall be destroyed and eaten up: and that because of their owne ymaginges. My people hath no lust to turne vnto me, their prophets laye the yocke vpon thē, but they ease them not of their burthen.

What greate things haue I geuen the, o Ephraim? how faithfully haue I defended the, o Israel? haue I dealt with the as with Adama? or haue I intreated the like Seboim? No, my hert is otherwise mynded. Yee my mercy is to fereuent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroy Ephraim in my wrothful displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euен that holy one in the myndest of the, though I came not within the cite.

The LORDE roareth like a lyon, that they maye folowe him: Yee as a lyon roareth he, that they maye be afraied, like the children of the see: that they maye be scarred awaye from Egipte, as men scarre byrdes: a frayde awaye (as doues vse to be) from the Assirias londe: and that because I wolde haue them tary at home, saiheth the LORDE. But Ephraim goeth aboute me with lies, and the house of Israel dyssembelth. Only Iuda holdeth him with God, and with the true holy thinges.

The rii. Chapter.

The ri Chapter.

Ephraim kepeth the ayre, and foloweth after the east wynde: he is eater increasinge lyes & destruction. They be confedrate with the Assirians, their oyle is caried in to Egipte. ‘The LORDE’ hath a courte to holde with Iuda, and wil pnysh Iacob: After their owne wales and acordinge to their owne innencions, shal he recompence them. He toke his brother by the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in his strength he wrestled with God. He strone with the Angel, and gat the victory: so that he pryade and deseryed him. He fande him at Bethel, there he talked with vs.

Yee the LORDE God of hoostes, eu’en y LORDE him self rememberd him: Then turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equyte, and hope still in thy God. But the marchaunte hath a false weight in his bonde, he hath a pleasure to occupie extroision. Ephraim thinketh thus: Tush, I am rich, I have good ynoough: In all my works shal not one fawte be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the LORDE thy God, eué as when I brought the out of the londe of Egipte, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the ycke feast dayes.

I haue spoke thorow the prophetes, and showed dynerse visions, and declared my self by the ministration of y prophetes. But at Galaad is the abominacion, they are fallen to vanye. At Galgal they haue slayne oxen: and as many heapes of stones as they had in their lode forowes, so many aulters haue they made. Iacob fled in to the londe of Siria, and Israel seruied for a wife, and for a wife he kepeth shepe.

By a prophet the LORDE brought them out of Egipte, and by a prophet he preserved the. But Ephraim hath provoked him to displeasure thorow his abominacions: therefore shal his bloude be pourved vpon him self, and the LORDE his God shal rewarde him his blasphemies.
The riu. Chapter.

THE abomination of Ephraim is come also in to Israel. He is gone backe to Baal, therfore must he dye. a And now they synne more and more: of their syluer, they make them molten ymages, like the Idols of the Heithen, and yet all is nothinge but the worke of the craftesmen. Notwithstanding they preach of the same: who so wil kyssse the calues, offrith to men. Therefore they shalbe as the mornynge cloude, and as the dew that early passeth awaye: and like as dust that \( \tilde{y} \) wynde taketh awaye from the floore, and as smoke that goeth out of \( \tilde{y} \) chymney.

I am the LORDE thy God, which brought the out of the londe of Egipte: that thou shuldest knowe no God but me, \( \alpha \) that thou shouldest have no Sanioure but only me. \( \beta \)

\[ \beta \]

I teke diligent hede of the in the wilderness that drye londe. But when they were wel fedde and had ynothg, they waxed prowde, and forgot me. \( \beta \) Therefore wil I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a leoparde in \( \tilde{y} \) waye to the Assirians. I wil come vpon them as a she beer, that is robbed of hir welpes, and I wil breake that stubburne herte of theirs. There wil I deoueure them as a lyon: yee the wylde beasts shall teare them.

\[ \beta \]

\( \theta \) O Israel, thou doest but destroye thy self, In me only is thy helpe. Where are thy kinges now, that shulde helpe the in all thy cities? Yee and thy ijudges, of whom thou saydest: geue me a kinge and prynces? \( \theta \) well, I gane the a kinge in my wrath, and in my displeasure will I take him from the agayne.

\[ \beta \]

The wickednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, \( \theta \) his synne lieth hyd. Therefore shall sorowes come vpon him, as vpon a woman that traualleth. An vndiscreete sonne is he: for he considereth not, that he shulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of his byrth, had not I defended him from the graue, and deluyered him from death.

\[ \beta \]

\( \omega \) O death, I wil be thy death: o hell, I wil be thy stynge. Yet can I se no comfort, for when he is now the goodliest amonge the brethren, the east wynde (euen the wynde of the LORDE) shal come downe from the wildernesse, and drye vp his condyles, and drynke vp his welles: he shal spoyle the treasure of all pleasant vessels.

\[ \lambda \]

As for Samaria, they shalbe made waist, \( \lambda \) why? they are disobedient vnto their God. They shal perish with the swearde, their children shalbe slayne, and their women bygg with childe shalbe rypte vp.

The riu. Chapter.

TURN the now (o Israel) vnto thy God, \( \theta \) for thou hast taken a great fall thorow thy wickednesse. Take these wordes with you, when ye turne to the LORDE, \( \alpha \) saye vnto him: O forgiue vs all ooure synnes, receaue vs graciously, \( \beta \) then wil we offre \( \tilde{y} \) bullockes ofoure lyppes vnto the. \( \lambda \) Assur shalbe no more oure helper, nether will we ryde vpon horses eny more. As for the workes of oure hondes, we wil nomore call vpon them: For it is thou that art oure God, thou shewest euer mercy vnto the fatherlesse.

O (yf they wolde do this) I shulde heale their sores: yee with all my herte wolde I loue them: so \( \tilde{y} \) my wrath shulde clene be turned awaye from them. Yee I wolde vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shulde growe as \( \tilde{y} \) lylie, \( \beta \) his rote shulde breake out as Libanus. His branches shulde spreede out abroad, \( \beta \) be as fayre as the olyue tre, \( \beta \) smel as Libanus. They that dwel vnder his shadoe, shulde come agayne, \( \beta \) growe vp as the corne, \( \alpha \) flourish as the vyne: he shulde haue as good a name, as the wyne of Libanus.

O Ephraim, what haue I to do with Idols eny more? I wil graciously heare him, \( \alpha \) lede him forth. I wil be vnto the as a greene Fyrrte tre, vpon me shalt thou fynde thy frute. Whos is wyse, shal vnderstonde this: \( \beta \) he \( \tilde{y} \) is right enstructe, wil regarde it. For \( \tilde{y} \) wayes of the LORDE are rightouus, soch as be godly wil walke in them: As for the wicked, they wil stamble therin.

The first Chapter.

THIS is the wordes of the LORDE, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel: Heare o ye elders: pôdre this wel, all ye that dwell in the lôde: ye euer there happened such a thinge in youre dayes, or in ñ dayes of youre fathers. Tell youre children of it, a let them shewe it vnto their children, ñ so they to cerifie their posterite thereof. "Loke what the caterpiller hath lefte, ñ hath the greshopper eaten vp: what the greshopper lefte, that hath the locuste eaten vp: ñ what the locuste hath lefte, that hath the blastinge consumed. Wake vp ye dronckardes, ñ wepe: mourne all ye wyne suppers, because of youre swete wyne, for it shal be taken awaye from youre mouth. Yee a mightie ñ an innumerable people shall come vp in to my londe: these have teth like the teth of lyons, ñ chaftbones like the lyonnesses. They shal make my vinyarde waist, they shal pyll of the barckes of my fygetrees, stripe them bare, cast them away, and make the branches whyte.

Make thy mone as a virgin doth, ñ gyrdeth her selfe with sacke, because of hir bryde grome. For the meate ñ drynkofferynge shalbe taken awaye from the house of the LORDE: ñ the prestes ñ LORDES ministers shall mourne. The felde shalbe waisted, the londe shalbe in a miserable case: for the corne shalbe destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confucion, ñ the oyle vttterly desolate. The huszbôde men ñ the wyne gardeners shal loke piteously ñ make lamentacion, for the wheate wyne ñ barley, ñ because the haruest vpon the felde is so clene destroyed. The grapegatherers shal make greate mone, when the vynyarde ñ fygetrees be so vttterly waisted. Yee all the pognanettes, palmtrees, aplentrees ñ the other trees of the felde shall wyther awaye. Thus the mery cheare of the children of men, shall come to confucion.

Gyrde you, ñ make youre mone, o ye prestes: mourne ye ministres of the aultuer: go youre waye in, ñ slepe in sackcloth, o ye officers of my God: for the meat ñ drynkofferynge shal be taken awaye from the house of youre God. Proclame a fastynge, call the cœgregation, ñ gather the elders ñ all the inhabiteres of the londe together in to the house of the LORDE youre God, ñ cry vnto the LORDE: alas, alas for this daye. And why? the daye of the LORDE is at honde, and commeth as a destroyer from the Almightie. Shal not ñ meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, the myrth also ñ ioye from the house of oure God? The sede shal perish in the grounde, the garners shall lye waist, the floores shalbe broken downe, for the corne shalbe destroyed. "O what a sighinge make the catell? the bullockes are very euell liknynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are fameszshed awaye.
O LORDE, to the will I cry: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wylnderesse, and the flame hath brent vp all the trees of the feld. Yee the wyld beestes crye also vnto the: for the water ryuers are dried vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldneresse.

The ij. Chapter.

BLOWE out $\gamma$ trompet in Sion, $\gamma$ crye vpô my holy hill, $\gamma$ all soch as dwell in the londe, maye tréble at it: for $\gamma$ daie of the LORDE commeth, $\gamma$ is harde at honde: a darcke daye, a gloomynge daye, a cloudy daye, yee $\gamma$ a stormy daye, like as the mornynge spereth out vpô the hilles: Namely, a great $\gamma$ mightie people: soch as haue not bene sens $\gamma$ begynnynge, nether shall be after them for euermore. Before him shal be a consumynge fyre, $\gamma$ behynde him a burnynge flame. The londe shal be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behinde him shal it be a very waist wildnesse, $\gamma$ there is no man, that shal escape him. They are to loke vpôn like bayrde horses, $\gamma$ ronne like horse men. They skyppe vpôn $\gamma$ hilles, as it were the sounde of charettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a mightie people redy to the batell.

The folke shal be afraied of him, all faces shal be as blakke as a pot. These shal rûne like giauntes, $\gamma$ leape over the walles like men of warre. Evy mûn in his goinge shal kepe his arai, $\gamma$ not go out of his Path. There shal not one dryue another, but ech shal kepe his owne waye. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, $\gamma$ not be hurte: They shal come in to the cite, $\gamma$ ronne vpôn the walles: They shal clymme vpôn the houses, $\gamma$ slype in at the wyndowes like a thefe. The earth shal quake before him, yee the heavens shalbe moued: $\delta$ the Sonne $\gamma$ Moone shal be darkened, and the starres shal withdrawe their shyne. The LORDE shal shewe his voyce before his hoost, for his hoost is greate, stronge $\gamma$ mightie to fulfill his commandement. This is $\gamma$ greate and maruelous fearfull daye of the LORDE: And who is able to abyde it?

Now therfore saith the LORDE: *Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes, with fastinge, wepyngye and mornynge: rente youre hertes, $\gamma$ not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the LORDE youre God, $\delta$ for he is gracious $\gamma$ mercifull, longe sufferynge $\gamma$ of greate compassion: $\gamma$ redy to pardon wickednes. Then (no doute) he also shal turne, $\gamma$ forgue: $\gamma$ after his chastenyng, he shal let youre incresse remayne, for meat $\gamma$ dryneck offferynges vnto the LORDE youre God? $\delta$ Blowe out with the tripet in Sion, proclame a fastynge, call the congregacion, $\gamma$ gather the people together: warne the congregacion, gather the elders, bringe the children $\gamma$ suctynge together. Let $\gamma$ brodygrome go forth of his chabre, $\gamma$ the bryde out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the LORDE betwixte the porch $\gamma$ alter, wepinge $\gamma$ sayenge: be fauourable (o LORDE) be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heretage be brought to soch confusion, lest the Heithen be lorde therof. Wherefore shulde they saye amonge the Heithen: $\delta$ where is now their God?

Then shal the LORDE be gelous ouer his londe, $\gamma$ spare his people: yee $\gamma$ LORDE shal answere, $\gamma$ saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wil sende you corne, wyne $\gamma$ oyle, so that ye shal haue plenty of them: $\gamma$ I wil nomore geue you ouer to be a reprofe amonge the Heithen. Agayne, as for him of the north, I shal dryue him farre from you: $\gamma$ shute him out in to a drye and waist londe, his face toward the east see, and his hynder partes toward the vtemost see. The stynke of him shal go vp, and his fylthy corrupcion shal fall vpôn himself, because he hath dealeth so prouly. Feare not (o londe) but be glad and reioys, for the LORDE wil do greate things. Be not ye afraied nether (o ye beasts of the feld) for the pastures shal be grene, and the trees shal beare their frute: the fygetrees $\gamma$ vynardes shal geue their increase.

Be glad then (o ye children of Sion) and reioys in the LORDE youre God, for he hath geuen you the teacher of rightou synes: $\delta$ he it is $\gamma$ shal sende you downe shuwers of rayne, early and late in the first moneth: so that $\gamma$ garners shal be full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeares that $\gamma$ greschopper, locuste, blasstinge $\gamma$ caterpiller (my greate hoost, which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shal restore them to you agayne: so that ye shal haue ynowghe to eate, and be satisfied: and prayse the name of the LORDE youre God, that so maruellously hath dealete with you. And my people shall neuer be confounded eny more: Ye shall well knowe, that I am in the mynyddest of Israel, and that I am youre God: yee and that there is none other, and my people shall nonore be brought to confucion. After this, will I poure out my sprete vpon all flesh: ye youre sonsnes ye youre daughters shall prophesie: youre olde me shall dreame dreams ye youre yonge men shall se visions: Yee in those dayes I will poure out my sprete vpon seruantes and maydens. I will shewe wonderes in heauen aboue, and tokes in the earth benefte: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure off smoke. The Sonne shalbe turned in to darknesse, yt Moone in to bloude: before yt greate yt notable daye off the LORDE come. And the tyme shal come: yt who so euer calleth on the name of the LORDE, shalbe saued. For vpon the mount Sion yt at Ierusalem, there shalbe a saluacion, like as the LORDE hath promised: yee yt amonge the other remnaunt, whom the LORDE shal call.

The iii. Chapter.

F OR take hede: In those dayes yt at yt same tyme, when I turne agayne the captuyte of Iuda yt Ierusalem: I shall gather all people together, yt brynge thec in to the valley of Josaphat: and there wil I reason with thec, because of my people yt heretage of Israel: who they haue scaterd aboute in the naciones, yt parted my lode: yee they haue east lottes for my people, the yonge me haue they set in the brodel house, yt solde the Damsels for wyne, yt they might haue to drinke. Thou Tirus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistynes: what haue ye to do with me? Will ye defye me? wel: yt ye will nedes defye me, I shall recopence you, euyn vpon youre head, yt yt right shortly: for ye haue taketh awaye my slyuer yt golde, my fayre yt goody Jewels, yt brought them in to youre gods houses. The children also of Iuda and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto the Grekes, that ye might brynge thec farre fro yt borders of their owne countrees.

Beholde therfore: I will rayse them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, yt will rewarde you euyn vpon youre heade. Youre sonsnes yt youre daughters will I sell thowre the hondes of the childre of Iuda, yt so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto the of Saba, a people of a farre coure: for the LORDE himself hath sayde it. Crie out these thinges amonge the Gentiles, proclame ware, wake vp the giauntes, let them drawe nyse, let the come vp all the lusty waryrous of the. Make you swearde of youre plowshares, and speares of youre syckles yt sythes. Let yt weake man saye: I am stronge. Mustre you, and come, all ye Heithc roude aboute: gather you togethe, there shall the LORDE laye all thy giauntes to the grounde. Let the people arys, and get them to the valley of Josaphat: for there wil I syt, andudge all Heithc roude aboute.

Laye to youre sythes, for the haruest is ryte: come, get you downe: the wynepresse is full, yee the wynepresses runne ouer, for their wickednesse is waxen greate. In the valley appoynted, there shalbe many, many people: for the daye of the LORDE is nye in yt valley appoynted. The Sonne and Moone shall be darkened, yt the starrs shall withdrawe their light. The LORDE shal roare out of Sion, yt crie out of Ierusalem, yt the heauens yt the earth shall quake withall. But the LORDE shal be a defence vnto his owne people, ad a refuge for the childre of Israel. Thus shal ye knowe, yt I the LORDE youre God dwell vp to my holy mount of Sion. Then shall Ierusalem be holy, yt there shall no straungers go thorow her enmore. Then shall the mountaynes droppe swete wyne, yt the hylles shall flowe with mylke, All the ryuers of Iuda shall haue water ynowgh, yt out of the LORDES house, there shall flowe a spryng, to water yt broke of Sitim: but Egipte shalbe layed waist, yt Edo shall be desolate: because they haue dealete so cruelly with the childre of Iuda, and shed innocent bloude in their londe. Agayne, Iuda shalbe inhabited for euermore, yt Ierusalem from generacion to generacion: for I wil not leave their bloude vnaunged. And the LORDE shal dwell in Sion.

The first Chapter.

THESE are the sermons, that were shewed vnto Amos (which was one of the shepherdes at Theeuia) vpon Israel, in the tyme of Osias kynge of Iuda, *a in the tyme of Ieroboāb y sonne of Ioas kynge of Israel, two yeare before y earthquake. And he sayde: ¶ The LORDE shal roare out off Sion, y shewe his voyce frō Ierusalēm: so that y pastures of the shepherdes shal be in a miserable case, y y toppe of Charmel dryed vp.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: ¶ for thre y foure wickednesse of Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue throszhed Galaad with yrō flales: But I wil sende a fyre in to y house of Hazael, the same shal consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus wil I breake the barres off Damascus, y rote out the inhabiter frō the felde of Auen, and him y holdeth the scepter, out of y pleasant house: so y the people shalbe dryuen out off foure Siria, sayeth the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE: For thre y foure wickednesse of Gaza, I will not spare her: because they make the prisoners yet more captyue, y haue dryuen the in to the lode of Edom. Therfore wil I sende a fyre in to y walles of Gaza, which shal deuoure hir houses. I wil rote out the y dwell at Asdod y him y holdeth the scepter of Ascalon, and stretch out myne honde over Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shal perish, saith the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: ¶ For thre and foure wickednesse off the cite off Tyre, I will not spare her: because they haue increased y

Captiuyte of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the brotherly covenaut. "Therefore will I sende a fyre in to the walles off Tyre, that shal consume hir palaces. Thus sayeth the LORDE: 'For thre and foure wickednesse of Edom I will not spare him, because he persecuted his brother with the swerde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kepte indignacion allwaye by him. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to Themï, which shal deouare the palaces of Bosra.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: 'For thre and foure wickednesse of the children off Ammon, I will not spare them: because they rypete vp the womë greate with childe in Galaad, to make the borders of their londes the wyder. Therefore I wil kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shal consume hir palaces: with a greate erie, in the daye of batel, in tempest and in the daye off storme: so that their kyng shal goe in to captiuyte, he and his prices together, sayeth the LORDE.

The ïij. Chapter.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: For thre and foure wickednesse off Moab, "I will not spare him: because he brent the bones off the kyng of Edom to ashes. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to Moab, which shal consume yé palaces of Carioth: so yé Moab shal perish with a noyse, and the sounde of a shawme. I will rOTE out the Iudge from amőge them, and slaye all his prynces with him, sayeth the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE: 'for thre and foure wickednesse of Iuda, I will not spare him: because he hath cast aside the lawe of the LORDE, and not kepte his commanndementes: for why, they wolde nedes be diseuened with the yes, that their forefathers followed. Therefore will I sende a fyre in to Iuda, which shal consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: For thre and foure wickednesse of Israel, I will not spare him: because he hath solde the rightoues for money, and the poore for shues. They treade vpon poore mens heads in the duste of the earth, yè croke the ways off the meke. The sonne and the father goe to the harlot, to dischonoure my holy name: they lyse bydesy every aultuer vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of their goddes they drynke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amo-rite before them, that was as hie as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: notwithstanding I destroyed his frute frō aboue, and his rote from vuder.

Agyane: I brought you out of the londe of Egipte, and led you xl. yeares thorow the wyldernesse, that ye might haue the Amoriters londe in possession. I rysed vp prohotes amonge youre children, and absteyners amonge youre yōge men. Is it not so, o ye children of Israel, sayeth the LORDE? But ye gaue the absteyners wyne to drynke, yee ye co-maund wed the prohotes, sayenge: Prophecy not. Beholde, I wil erashe you in sonder, like as a wyne crassheth, y is full of sheaues: so that y swifte shall not escape, nether the stronge be able to do eny thyng: no, the giaunte shall not saue his owne life. The archer shall not abyde, and the swifte off fote shall not escape. The horsmā shall not saue his life, y he that is as māly of stomack as a giaunte, shall in that daye be fayne to runne his wyke naked, sayeth the LORDE.

The iiiij. Chapter.

HARE, what the LORDE speaketh vnto you (o ye children of Israel) namely, vnto all yé trybes, whò I brought out of Egipte, and sayde: You only haue I accpeted from all the generaciones off the earth: therefore will I vyset you in all youre wickednesse. Maye twaine wake together excepte they be agreed amongeth them selues? Doth a lyon roare in the wodde, excepte he haue a pray? Or crieth a lions welche out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten somthighe? Doth a byrde fall in a snare vpó yé earth where no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare vp from the grounde, afore he catche somwhat? Crie they out Alarum with the trompet in the cite, and the people not affrayed? Commandeth there eny plage in a cite, without it be the LORDES doinge? Now doth the LORDE God no maner of thinge, but he telleth his secrete before vnto his seruauntes yé prohotes. When a lyon roareth, who will not be affrayed? Seynge then that the

The prophet Amos.

LORDE God himself speaketh, who will not prophecy?

Preach in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces off the londe off Egipte, and saye: gather you together vpon the montaynes off Samaria, so shall ye se greate murthur and violent oppression amonge them: for why, they regard not the things that is right, sayeth the LORDE: they gather together euell gotten goods, and laye vp robbery in their houses.

Therefor, thus sayeth the LORDE God: This londe shalbe troubled and beseged roûde aboute, thy strength shalbe plucte from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus saieth the LORDE: like as an hyrdeman taketh two legges or a pece off an eare out off the Lyons mouth: Euen so the children of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, haulyne their couches in the corner, and their beddes at Damascus) shalbe plucte awaye. HEARE, and beare recorde in the house of Iacob * (sayeth the LORDE God of hoostes) that when I beginne to vset the wickednesse of Israel, I will vsyte vû alters at Bethel also: so that the hornes of the aluter shalbe broken of, v fall to the grûde.

As for the wynter house and sommer house, I will smyte them downe: and the houses of yuer, yee and many other houses shal perish, and be destroyed, sayeth the LORDE.

The iii. Chapter.

HEARE this worde, o ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hill of Samaria: ye that do poore me wronge, and oppresse the nedie: ye that saye to youre lорdes: byrge hyther, let vs drynke. Therefor the LORDE hath sworne by his holynesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shalbe fitt vp vpô speares, and youre posterite caried awaye in fyssher pannes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after another, and in Armon shal ye be cast awaye, sayeth the LORDE.

Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngraciousnes, and haue increased youre synnes at Galgal. * Ye brought youre sacrifices in the mornynge, and youre tythes vnto the thirde daye. Ye made a thakofferinge off leuen, ye promised frewillofferinges, and proclaimed them. Soch lust had ye, o ye children of Israel, sayeth the LORDE God. Therefor haue I geuyn you ydle teeth in all youre cities.

6 Whâ there were but thre monethes vnto ã haruest, I witheld the rayne from you: yee I rayned vpô one cite, and not vpô another one pece off grounde was moystured with rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Wherfore two (yee thre) cities came vnto one, to dryneke water: but they were not satisfied, yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth ã LORDE.

I haue smyte you with drouth and blastinge: and loke how many orchardes, vinyardes, fygetrees and olyue trees ye had: ã catrrippler hath eaten them vp. But yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the LORDE. Pestilence haue I sent amôge you, * as I dyd in Egipte: youre yonge men haue I slayen with ã swerde, and caused youre horses be taken captuye: I made the styckinge sauoure of youre tentes to come vp in to youre nostrels: Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the LORDE. Some off you haue I overthrowen: as I overthrowed Sodome & Go-mor-roe: so that ye were as a brande plucte out of the fyre. Yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the LORDE. Therefor, thus will I handle the agayne (O Israel) ye euyn thus will I handle the. Make the ready then to mete thy God, o Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the mornynge and the darcknesse, he treaeddeth vpô the 'hye places off the earth: ã LORDE God of hoostes is his name.

The b. Chapter.

HEARE this worde (o ye house of Israel) a and why? I must make this mone for you: The vyrgin Israel shall fall, t neuer ryse vp agayne: she shall be cast downe vpon hir owne grounde, and no man shal helpe hir vp. For thus sayeth ã LORDE God: Where as there dwelt a M. in one cite, there shalbe left scarce an C. therin: and where þre dwelt an C. there shall scarce ten be left for the house off Israel. Neuertheles, thus sayeth the LORDE vnto ã house of Israel: Seke after me, ãd ye shal lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Galgal, and go not to Bersaba: for Galgal shall be caried awaye.

captyue, and Bethel shal come to naught.
Seketh the LORDE, ye ye maye lyue, lest the house of Ioseph be brenct with fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to quench Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwood, and cast downe rightouenes vnto the grounde. The LORDE maketh the vij. starres and the Oryons, he turneth the night in to daye, and off the daye he maketh darknesse. He calleth ye waters of the sea, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: the LORDE is his name. He rayseth destruction vpon the mightie people, and bryngeth downe the stronge holde: but they owne him euel will, reproueth them openly: and who so telleth the playne truth, they abhorre him. For so muche the as ye oppresse ye poore, and robbeth him of his best sustenance: therefore, where as ye haue buylded houses of stone, ye shall not dwell in them.

Hate the euell, and loue the good: set vp right agayne in the porte: (no doute) the LORDE God of hoastes shall be mercifull vnto the remnant of Ioseph. Yff no (sayeth the LORDE God, the God of hoastes) there shall be mourninge in all strestes, yee they shal say in euery strest: alas, alas.

They shall call the houesonde man to lamentacion, and soche as can mourn, to mourninge. In all vynyards there shall be heuennesse, for I will come amonge you, sayeth the LORDE. Wo be vnto them that desyre the daye off the LORDE: Wherefore wolde ye haue it? As for that daye of the LORDE, it shalbe darcke ad not cleare: Yee lye as when a ma ryneth fro a lyon, and a Beer meteth with him: or, whede he commeth in to the house, and leenneth his honde vpon the wall, a serpent byeth him. Shall not the daye of the LORDE be darcke, and not cleare? shal it not be cloudy, and no shyne in it?

I hate and abhorre youre holy dayes, ad where as ye cense me when ye come together I will not accepte it. And though ye offre me brentofferinges and meatofferinges, yet haue I no pleasure therin: As for youre fat thankofferynges, I wil not loke vpon them. Awaye with that noyse of thy songs, I will not heare thy playes of musick: but say that equyte flyowe as the water, and rightouenesse as a mightie streame.

Ye house of Israel, gaue ye me offeringes and sacrifices those xl. yeares longe in the wyldernesse? Yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to youre Moloch, and ymage of youre Idols, Yee ad the starre of youre god Remphra, figures which ye made to worshipe them. Therfore wil I cause you be caried awaye beyonde Damascus, sayeth the LORDE, whose name is the God of hoastes.

The 6. Chapter.

WO be to the proude welthie in Siö, to a such as thinketh theno suche vpon ye mount of Samaria? which holde them selues for the best of the worlde, and rule the house of Israel, eueth as they list. Go vnto Calne, and se: and from thence you to Hemath the great cite, and so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the border of their londe wyder then yours? Ye are taken out for the euel daye, euens ye that syt in the stol of wylfullnesse: Ye that lye vpon beddes off yeur, and vse youre wantonnesse vpon youre couches: ye that eate the best lambes of flocke, and the fattest calues off the droaue: ye that synge to the lute, and in playenge off instrumentes compare youre selues vnto Dauid: ye that drynyke wyne out of gobbettes, a anoyneth youre selues with the best oyle, but no man is sory for Ioseps hurte. Therfore now shall ye be the first of them, that shall be led awaye captyue, and the lusty chere of the wylfull shall come to an ende.

The LORDE God hath sworn euyn by himself (sayeth the LORDE God of hoastes:) I hate the pryde of Iacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I wil geue ouer the citie, with all that is therin: so that though there remayne

So their nexte kynszfolckes and the deed buriers shall take them, and carry awaye their bones, and saye vnto him, that is in the ynnermore house: is there yet eny mo by ? And he shal aswerc: they are all gone, holde thy tunge (shall he saye) for they wolde not remembre the name of the LORDE.

Beholde, the LORDE is mynded to smyte the greate houses, so that they shall decaye: ad the little houses, that they shall cleue a sunder. Who can runne with horses, or plowe with oxen vpon the harde rockes of stone? For why, ye haue turned true judgment in to bytermesse, and the frute of righteousnesse in to wormwd: Yee euen ye, that reioyse in vayne thynges: ye that saye: haue not we optayned horses in owre owne strength? The viij. Chapter.

THE LORDE God shewed me soch a vision: beholde, there stode one that made gressshoppers, euen when the corne was shytynge forth, after the kyng had elipte his shope. Now when they vndertoke to eate vp all the grene thinges in y lode, I sayde: O LORDE God, be mercifull, I beseeke the: who shulde els helpe vp Iacob, that is brought so lowe? So the LORDE was gracious therin, and the LORDE sayde: well, it shall not be. Agayne, LORDE shewed me this vision: beholde, the LORDE God called the fyre to punysh withall, and it deououred the greate depe: yee it consumed a parte alredy. Then sayde I: O LORDE God, holde thyne honde; for who shulde els helpe vp Iacob that is brought so lowe? So the LORDE was mercifull therin, and the LORDE God sayde: well, it shall not be.

Morouer, he shewed me this vision: beholde, the LORDE stode vpon a plastered wall, a a masons trowell in his hode. And the LORDE sayde vnto me: Amos, what seist thou? I answered: a masons trowell. Then sayde the LORDE: beholde, I will laye the trowell amoye my people of Israel, and will nomore oversee them: but the hye hilchapels off Isaac must be layed waist, and the churches of Israel made desolate: and as for the house of Ieroboam, I wil stonde vp against it with the swerde. Upon this sent Amasias the prest to Bethel vnto Ieroboam the kinge of Israel, sayenge: Amos maketh the house off Israel to rebelle against thee, the londe ca not awaye with his wordes. For Amos sayeth: Ieroboam shall dye with the swerde, and Israel shall be led awaye captyne out of their owne londe. And Amasias sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence (thou that cast se so well) and flie in to the londe of Iuda: get the there thy lyuynge, and prophecy there: and prophecy nomore at Bethel, for it is the kynges chapel, and the kynges court.

Amos answered, and sayde to Amasias: As for me, I am nether prophet, ner prophetes sonne: but a keper of catell. Now as I was breakynge downe molburies, and goynge after the catell, the LORDE toke me, c sayde vnto me: Go thy waie, and prophecy vnto my people of Israel. And therofore, heare thou now the worde off the LORDE: Thou saiest: prophecy not agaynst Israel, and speake nothinge agaynst the house off Isaac. Wherefore thus sayeth the LORDE: Thy wife shalbe defyled in y cite, thy somnes and doughters shalbe slayne with the swerde, and thy londe shalbe measured out with the lyne: Thou thy self shal dye in an vnclene londe, and Israel shalbe dryuen out off his owne countre.

The viij. Chapter.

T

HE LORDE God shewed me this vision: and beholde, there was a maide with sommer frute. And he sayde: Amos, what seist thou? I answered: a maide with sommer frute. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I wil nomore overseem them. In that daye shall the songes off the temple be turned in to sorow, sayeth the LORDE God. Many deed bodyes shal lye in euerie place, & be caste forth secrety. Heare this, O ye y oppresse the poore, & destroye the nedy in y londe, sayenge: Whan will the newe moneth be gone, that we maye sell vytales, & y Sab- bath, that we maye haue scarenesse of corne: to make the buszesh lesse, and the Sycle greater? We shall set vp false weightes, & we maye get the poore vnder vs with their money, and the nedy also for shues: yee let vs sell the chaffe for corne.

a Deu. 8. d. Some call it a lyne. b 4 Re. 17. a.

Thus will I set my eyes upon them, for their harme and not for their wealth. For when the LORDE God of hostes toucheth a londe, it cōsmeth awaye, and all they that dwell therin, moune for this? Shal not their destruccon come vpon them like a water streame, & flowe ouer thē, as the floude of Egipte? At the same tyme (sayeth the LORDE God) I shall cause y Söne to go downe at noone, and the londe to be dareke in the cleare daye. "You're hye feastes will I turne to sorrow, and youre songs to mourneynge: I will brynge sackcloth vpō all backes, y baldnes vpō eyry headē: yee soch a mourneynge wil I sende them, as is made vpon an only begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayeth the LORDE God) y I shall sende an higer in to y earth: not the hunger of bred, nor the thirsty of water: but an hunger to heare the worde off the LORDE: so that they shall go from the one see to the other, yee from y north vnto y east, runnyng aboute to seke the worde of y LORDE, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme, shal the fayre virgins and the yonge men perish for thirsty, yee euén they that swerde in the office off Samaria, and saye: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truly as thy God lyueth at Bersa, These shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne.

The 9. Chapter.

I SAWE the LORDE stondinge vpon the aulter, and he sayde: smyte the dore cheke, that the postes maye shake withall. For their couetousnesse shall fall vpon all their heads, and their posterite shalbe slayne with the swerde. They shall not fle awaye, there shall not one off them escape, ner be deluyed. Though they were byred in the hēll, my honde shal fetch them from thence: "though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shal I cast them downe: though they hyde them selues vpō the toppes of Carmel, yet shal I seke them out, and bryngye them from thence: Though they crepe downe fro my sight in to the depe of the see, I shal comānde the serpent, euene there to byte them. Yf they go awaye before their enemies i to captuyte, then shal I commaunde the swerde, and there to slaye them.

Thus wil I set myne eyes vpon them, for their harme and not for their wealth. For when the LORDE God of hostes toucheth a londe, it cōsmeth awaye, and all they that dwell therin, must nedes moune: And why? /their destruccon shal arse as evry streame and runne ouer them, as the floude in Egipte. He that hath his dwellinge in heauen, ād groundeth his tabernacle in the earth: He that calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: his name is the LORDE. O ye children off Israel, are ye not vnto me, euuen as the Morians, sayeth the LORDE? haue not I brought Israel out of the londe off Egipte, the Philis-tynes from Capthor, and the Sirians fro Cyr? Beholde, the eyes of the LORDE are vpon the realme that symmeth, to rote it clene out of the earth: Neuertheless, I will not vterly destroye the house of Jacob, saieth the LORDE.

For lo, this I promise: though I siffe y house of Israel amounge all naciones (like as they vse to siffe in a syue) yet shall not y smallest grauel stone fall vpō the earth: But all the wicked doers of my people, that saye: Tush, the plag is not so nye, to come so hastily vpon vs: those shal perish with the swerde. "At that tyme wil I buylde agayne the tabernacle off Davi, that is fallen downe, and henge vp his gappes: and loke what is brokē, I shal repayre it: Yee I shal bylyde it agayne, as it was afore tyme, y they maye possesse the remnaunt of Edom, yee and all soch people as call vpon my name with thē, saieth the LORDE, which doth these things.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORDE) that the plowman shal ouertake y mower, and y treadere off grapes, him that soweth sede. "The mountayne shal droppe sweate wyne, and the hilles shall be frutefull, and I wil turne the captuyte of my people of Israel: they shal repayre the waist cities, y haue thē in possessiō: they shal plante vineyards, ād drynke the wyne therof: they shal make gardens, and enjoye the frutes off thē. And I wil plate them vpō their owne grōūde, so that I wil neuer rote them out agayne from their londe, which I haue geuen thē saieth the LORDE thy God.

The Prophet Abyd.

What Abyd containeth.

Chap. I.

He propheseeeth against the proud stomacques of the Edomites, that vexed the Israelites in their aduersite. He sheweth, what plagues shal come vpon them.

The first Chapter.

This is the vision that was shewed vnto Abyd: Thus hath ¥ LORDE God spoken vpon Edom: 1 We haue herde of the LORDE ¥ there is an embassage sent amonge the Heithen: Vp, let vs aryse, and fight agaynst them. Beholde, I will make ¥ small amoge the Heithen, so that thou shalt be vターly despied. 2 The pryde of thine herte hath lift the vp, thou that dwellest in ¥ strôge holds off stone, and hast made the an hye seate: Thou sayest in thyn herte: who shal cast me downe to the grounde? But ¥ though thou wentest vp as hye as the Aegle, and maydest thy nest aboue amonge the starres: yet wolde I plucke the downe from thêce. ¥f ¥ thenes ¥ robbers came vpon ¥ by-night, thou takinge thy rest: shulke they not steale, till they had enough? ¥f the grape gatherers came vpon the, wolde they not leaue the some grapes? But how shall they rype Esau, and seek out his treasures?

Yee the men that were sworne vnto the, shall dryeue the out off the borders off thynge owne londe. They that be now at one with the, shal discourse the, and overcome ¥: Eue they that eate thy bred, shall betraye the, or euer thou perceauce it. 3 Shal not ¥ at the same tyme destroye the wyse men of Edom, ãd those that hâne vnderstandinge, from the mount of Esau? Thy giauntes (o Themau) shalbe afrayed, for thorow the slaughter they shal be all ouer throwne vpon the mount of Esau. Shame shal come vpon the, for ¥ malice that thou shewedest to thy brother Iacob: ¥ yee for euermore shalt thou perish, ¥ that because of the tyme, when thou didest set thyself agaynst him, euem when the enemie carried awaye his hoost, and when the aleantes came in at his portes, and cast lottes vpon Jerusalem, and thou thyselfe wast as one of them.

Thou shalt nomore se the daye of thy brother, thou shalt nomore beholde the tyme of his captiuyte: thou shalt nomore reioyse vpon the children of Iuda, in the daye of their destruccion, thou shalt triumphe nomore in the tyme of their trouble. Thou shalt nomore come in at the gates off my people, in the tyme of their decaye: thou shalt not se their mystery in the daye of their fall.

Thou shalt sende out no man agaynst their hoost, in the daye of their aduersite: nether shalt thou stode waytinge enymore at ¥ corners of the stretes, to murmure such as are fled, or to take them presoners, that remaine in the daye of their trouble. For the daye off the LORDE is harde by vpon all Heithen. 5 Like as thou hast done, so shalt thou be dealethe withall, yee thou shalt be rewarded euem vpon thine heade. For like wyse as ye haue droncken vpon myne holy hill, so shal all heithen dryncke continûly: yee dryncke shall they, and swalowe vp, so that ye shall be, as though ye had neuer bene.

But vpon the mount Sion, there shall a remnaunt escape: ¥ these shalbe holy, and the house of Iacob shal possesse euem those, that

The Prophet Jonas.

Chap. I.

God sendeth Jonas vnto Niniu, he fleyth, and is cast in to the see.

Chap. II.

A fysh swaloweth vp Jonas, which crieth vnto God, and prayseth hym, and the fysh casteth him out agayne vpon the londe.

Chap. III.

God sendeth him agayne to Ninieu, to shewe them the punyshment for to come, yf they wil not repent: they amend, and God is mercifull to them.

Jonas is angrie, and complayneth of God, which refourmeth him.

The first Chapter.

A THE worde of the LORDE came vnto Jonas the sonne of Amithai, sayenge: Arise, and get the to Ninieu that greate cite: and preach vnto them, how thine wickednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made him ready to fle vnto Tharsis from the presence of the LORDE, and gat him downe to Ioppa: where he founde a shipp ready for to go vnto Tharsis. So he payde his fare, and wente aborde, that he might go with them vnto Tharsis from the presence of the LORDE.

But the LORDE hurled a greate wynde in to the see, and there was a mightie tempest in the see: so that the shipp was in ioperdy of goinge in peces. Then the maryners were afraide, and cried every man vnto his god: and the goodes that were in the shipp, they cast in to the see, to lighten it off them. But Jonas gat him vnder v/hatches, where he layed him downe and slombre.

So the master of the shipp came to him and sayde vnto him: why slomberest thou? Vp, call vpoun thy God: yf God (happily) wil thinke vpon vs, that we persyhe not. And Samaria possess: and the mountaynes of Galaad shal Ben Iamin haue. And this boost shalbe the childre of Israels presoners: Now what so lieth from Canaan vnto Sarphad, and in Sepharad, that shal be vnder the subieccion of Jerusalem: and the cities of the south shal enheret it. Thus they that escape vpon the bill off Sion, shall go vp to punish the mount off Esau, and the kyngdome shalbe the LORDES.

* Gen. 18. c.
they sayde one to another: come, let vs cast lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. a And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Ionas.

Theysayde theynto him: tell vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thine occupacion? whence commest thou? what countre man art thou, and of what nacion? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the LORDE God of heauen, which made both the see and drie londe. Then were y men exceedingly arayed, a sayde vnto him: why didest thou so? (for they knowe, that he was fled from the presence of the LORDE, because he had tolde them) and sayde morouer vnto him: What shall we do vnto the, that the see maye ceasse from troublinge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he answered them: Take me, and caste me in to the see, so shal it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuerthelesse, the men assayed with rowinge, to brynge the shippe to lode: but it wolde not be, because the see wrought so, a was so troublous agaynst them. Wherefore they cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: b O LORDE, let vs not perish for this mans death, nether laye thou innocent bloude vnto oure charge: for thou (o LORDE) hast done, euens as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Ionas, and cast him in to the see, and the see lefte ragynge. And the men feared the LORDE exceedingly, dyonge sacrifices ad makynge vowes vnto the LORDE.

The ij. Chapter.

BUT the LORDE prepared a greate fyshe, to swallow vp Ionas. c So was Ionas in the bely of the fyshe, thre days and threce nyghtes. And Ionas prayed vnto the LORDE his God, out of the fyshes bely, and sayde: d In my trouble I called vnto y LORDE, and he herde me: out offf the bely off hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in y midsted off the see, and the floude compassed me aboute: e yee all thy wawes and rowles of water went ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy sight: but I wil yet agayne loke toward thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, and the wedes were wrapt aboute myne heade. I wente downe to the botome of the hilles, g was barred in with earth for euer. But thou (o LORDE my God) last brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corrupcion. When my soule fastaied within me, I thought vpon the LORDE: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanytys, wil forsake his mercy. But I wil do the sacrifis with the voyce of thankes-geynge, and wil paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacion commeth of the LORDE. And y LORDE spake vnto y fyshe, and it cast out Ionas agayn vpnew the drie londe.

The iii. Chapter.

THEN came the wordes of the LORDE a vnto Ionas agayn, sayenge: vp, and get the to Ninie that greate cite, c a preach vnto them the preachinge, which I bade the. So Ionas arose, and wente to Ninie at the LORDES commeaundement. Ninie was a greate cite vnto God, namely, off thre dayes journey.

And Ionas wente to, and entred in to y cite: euen a dayes journey, and cried, sayenge: There are yet xl. dayes, and then shal Ninie be ouerthrown. d And the people of Ninie beleued God, and proclaimed fastinge, and arayed them selues in sack cloth, as well the greate as the small of them. And the tydinges came vnto y kinge of Ninie, which arose out offf his seate, and dyd his apparell offf, and put on sack cloth, and sate him downe in ashes.

And it was cried and commaundement in Ninie, by the auctorite of the kige and his lorde, sayenge: e se that nether man or beest, oxe or shepe taist ought at all: and that they nether fede ner drinke water: but put on sack cloth both man and beest, and crye mightyly vnto God: yee se that euery man turne fro his euell waye, f and from the wick-enednesse, y he hath in houde.

Who can tell? God maye turne, and repete, and cease from his faire wrath, that we perish not. And when God sawe their workes, how they turned from their wicked wayes: g he repented on the euell, which he sayde he wolde do vnto them, and dyd it not.

The iii. Chapter.

WHEREFORE Jonas was sore discontented and angrie. And he prayed unto the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE, was not this my sayenge (I sayde) when I was yet in my countre? therefore I haisted rather to fle vnto Tharsis, for I knowe well ynoweth that thou art a mercifull God, full of compassion, light sufferinge, and of greate kyndnesse, and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment. And now O LORDE, take my life fro me (I besyke the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the LORDE: art thou so angrie? and Jonas gat him out of the cite, and sat downe on the east syde thereof: and there made him bothe, and sat vnder it in the shadow, till he might se, what shulde chunce vnto the cite.

And the LORDE God prepared a wylde wynde, which sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he might haue shadowe aboue his heade, to deliver hym out of his payne. And Jonas was exceedinge glad of the wylde wynde. But vp the nexte morow agaynst the springe of the daye, the LORDE ordened a wermoe, which smote the wylde wynde, so that it wethered awaye. And when the Sonne was vp God prepared a feruent east wynde: and the Sonne bete ouer the heade of Jonas, that he faynted agayne, and wyszshed vpnto his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, the to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrie for the wylde wynde? And he sayde: yee very angrie am I euyn vnto the deeth. And the LORDE sayde: thou hast compassion vpon a wylde wynde, wherof thou bestowdest no laboure, ner maydest it growe: which sprange vp in one night and perished in another: And shulde not I then haue compassion vpon Ninieua that greate cite, wherin there are aboue an C. and xx. thousande persones, y knowe not their right hode frō the lefte, besydes moch catell?

The ende of the prophet Jonas.

The Prophet Micheas.

What Micheas contyneth.

Chap. I.
He reproueth the people off Israel and Iuda for their wickednesse and Idolatry: he telleth them their punishement with mournynge.

Chap. II.
He rehearseth their abominacions.

Chap. III.
He reproueth the rulers and the prophetes, as cause of the peoples misery.

Chap. III. V.
He prophesyceth of the saluacion off Gods people in Christ, of his kyngdome, and power of his gospel.

Chap. VI.
Another reprofe. Outwarde offeringes are excludet, and here is declared what God re quyreth off man.

Chap. VII.
The summe off the thinges before sayde. The little flocke of the faithful.
The first Chapter.

This is the worde of the LORDE, that came vnto Micheas " the Morasitie, in the days of Joaathan, Achas and Ezechias kiges of Iuda: which was shewd him vpon Samaria and Jerusalem.

Heare all ye people, marcke this well o earth, and all that therin is : Yee the LORDE God himself be witnesse amonge you, euen ¥ LORDE from his holy temple. For why beholde, the LORDE shal go out of his place, g come downe, and treade vpon the hie thinges of the earth. The moitaynes shall consmne vnder him, ¥ the valleys shal cleue asunder: like as wax cosumeth at the fyre, g as ¥ waters runne downwarde. And all this shal be for the wickednesse of Iacob, and the synnes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wickednesse of Iacob? Is not Samaria? " Which are the hye places of Iuda? Is not Jerusalem? Therefor I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the feld, to laye aboute the vynyarde: hir stones shal I cast in to the valley, ¥ discouer hir foudacions. All hir ymage shal shalbe brokë downe ¥ all hir wyrmynyes shal be brenet in the fyre: yee all hir Idolës will ¥ destroye: for why, they are gathered out of the hyre of an whore, ¥ in to an whoes hyre shal they be turned agayne. Wherfore I wil mourne ¥ make lamentacion, bare ¥ naked will I go: ¥ must mourne like ¥ dragës, ¥ take sorow ¥ ¥ Estriches : for their wode is past remedy: And why ¥ it is come in to Iuda, ¥ hath touched ¥ porte of my people at Jerusalem allredy. Wepe not ¥ lest they at Geth perceau it.

Thou at Betaphra, walter thy self in the dust and asshes. Thou that dwellët at Sephir, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boost nomore for very sorowe ¥ why ¥ hir neigboure shall take from her what she hath. The rebellious cite hopeth, that it shal not be so euell: but for all that, the plage shall come from the LORDE, euen in to the porte of Jerusalem. ¥ The greate noyse off the charettes shall feare them, that dwell at Lachis, which is an occasion of ¥ synne of ¥ daughter of Sion, for in the came ¥ the wickednesse of Israel. Yee she sent hir courseris in to the londe of Geth.

The houses of lies will diseaue the kynges of Israel. And as for the (o thou that dwellest at Morassa) I shall brynge a possesioner vpon the, ¥ the plage of Israel shall reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde, and shawe the, because of thy tender children: Make the cleane balde as an Aegle, for they shalbe carried awaye captyue from the.

The ii. Chapter.

Of vnto them, that ymagyn to do harme, ¥ and deuyse vngraciousnesse vpon their beddes, to perffourme it ¥ cleare daye ¥ for their power is agaynst God. ¥ When they covet to haue londe, they take it by violence, ¥ they robbie men off their houses.

Thus they oppresse a man for his house, ¥ euery man for his heretage. Therefor thus sayeth the LORDE: ¥ Beholde, agaynst this householde haue I deuyse a plage, wherout ye shal not plucke youre neckes: ¥ ye shal nomore go so prouly, for it will be a perlous tyme. In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mournynge shal be made ouer you on this maner: We be vtterly desolate, the porcion off my people is translated. Whan wil he parte vnto vs the londe, that he hath taken from vs?

Neuerthelesse there shalbe no man to deuycde the thy porcion, in the congregacion off the LORDE. ¥ Tush, holde youre tunge (saye they) ¥ It shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confucion, sayeth the house off Iacob: Is the sprete off the LORDE ¥ so clene awaye ¥ or is he so mynded? ¥ Treuth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto them that lyue right: but my people doth the contrary, therefor must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both cote and cloke from the symple.

Ye haue turned youre selues to fight, the women off my people haue ye shot out fro their good houses, and taken awaye my excellent gifts from their children. ¥ get you hence, for here shall ye haue no rest.

Because off their Idolatry they are corrupte, and shall myserably perish. ¥f I were a fleshly felowe, and a preacher ofelyes and tolde them that they might syt bebbing and bollynge, and be drowcken: O that were a prophet for this people.

But I will gather the in desde (o Iacob) and dryue the remnant off Israel all together. I shall carry them one with another, as a flocke in the fold, and as the catell in their stales, that they maye be disquited of other men. Who so breaketh the gappe, he shall go before. They shall breake vp the porte, and go in and out at it. Their kyng shall go before them, and the LORDE shalbe vpon the heade of them.

The iii. Chapter.

HEARE, 0 ye heads of the house of Iacob, and ye leders of the house of Israel: 5 Shulde not ye knowe, what were lauffull and right? But ye hate the good, and loue the euell: ye plucke of mens skynnes, and the flesh from their bones: Ye eate the flesh of my people, 6 ad flay of their skynne: ye breake their bones, ye choppe them in peces as it were in to a cauldron, ad as flesh in to a pot. 7 Now the tymne shall come, that when they call vnto the LORDE, he shall not heare them, but hyde his face from them: because that thorow their owne ymaginaciōs, they haue dealte so wickedely.

And as concerngyne the prophets that disceane my people, thus the LORDE sayeth agaynst them: 8 When they haue eny thinge to byte vpon, then they preach that all shalbe well: but yf a man put not some thinge in to their mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst him.

Therefore youre vision shalbe turned to night, 9 youre prophecyeenge to darkenesse. The Sonne shall go downe ouer those prophets, 10 the daye shalbe darcke vnto them. Then shall the vision seers be ashamed, 11 saythsayers confounded: yee they shalbe fayne (all the packe of the) to stoppeth their mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. 12 As for me, I am full of strength, 13 of of sprete of LORDE, full of judgment boldnesse: to shewe the house of Iacob their wickednesse, 14 the house of Israel their synne.

O heare this ye rulers of the house of Iacob, and ye judges of the house off Israel: ye that abhorre the things that is lauffull, and warast asyde the things that is straight: 15 Ye that buyldke vp Sion with bloude, and Jerusalem with doynghe wronge. O ye judges, ye geue sentence for giftes: O ye preastes, ye teach for lucre: O ye prophets, ye prophecy for money. Yet wil they be takē as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the LORDE amonge vs? 16 Tush, there can no misfortune happen vs. Therfore shal Sion (for youre sakes) be plowed like a feldte: Ierusaleō shall become an heape of stones, and the hill of "

The iii. Chapter.

BUT in the latter dayes it wil come to passe, that 17 the hill off LORDES house shalbe set vp hyer the eny moūtaynes or hilles: Yee the people shall preesse vnto it, and the multitude off the Gentiles shal haist them thither, sayēge: Come, let vs go vp to the hill of the LORDE, q to the house of the God of Iacob: that he maye teach vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes.

7 For the lawe shall come out of Sion, αδ the worde of God from Ierusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multitude off the Heithen, and refourmme the people off farrer coutrees: so that of their swerdes shall they make plowshares, and sythes off their speares.

One people shall not lift vp a swerde agaynst another, 18 yee they shall nomore lerne to fight: but euery man shall svt vnder his vinyarde and vnder his fyge tre, and no man to fraye him awaye: for the mouth off LORDE of hoostes hath spoken it. Therfore, where as all people haue walked eueryman in name of his owne god, we will walke in the name of oure God for euer and euer. 19 At the same tymne (sayeth the LORDE) will I gather vp the lame and the outcastes, and soch as I haue chastened: and will geue yssee vnto the lame, and make of outcastes a greate people: 20 and the LORDE himself shal be their kyng vpon the mount Sion, frō this tymne forth for euermore. 21 And vnto the (O thou tower of Eder, thou stronge holde off the dother Sion) vnto the shal it come: euē the first lordshiphe and kyngdome of the dother Ierusaleo. Why the art thou now so heuy? is there no kyngye in the? are thy counclers awaye, that thou art so payned, as a woman in hir traueyle?

And now (o thou dother Sion) be sory, 22 let it greue the as a wife laboringe with chikle: for now must thou get the out off the cite, and dwell vpon the playne feldte: Yee vnto Babīlo shal thou goe, there shalt thou be delyuered, and there the LORDE shall loose the from the honde off thine enemies. *

Now also are there many people gathered together against the, sayenge: what, Sion is cursed, we shall se oure lust vpon her. But they knowe not the thoughtes off the LORDE, *they vnderstone not his counsell, that shall gather them together as the sheeues in the barme. Therefore get the vp (o thou daughter Sion) and thosse hee out the corne: For I wil make thy horne yron, and thy lawes brasse, that thou mayest gynde many people: their goodes shall thou appropriate vnto the LORDE, and their substance vnto the ruler off the whole worlde.

The b. Chapter.

After that shall thou be robbed thy self, o thou robbers daughter: they shall laye sege agaynst vs, and smyte the judge off Israel with a rokke vpon the chake. And thou Bethlehem Ephrata, "art little amonge the thousands off Iuda. Out of the shall come one vnto me, which shall be thy gouernoure i Israel: whose oungoinge hath bene from the begynnynge, and from euerlastinge. In the meane whyle he placheth them for a season, vntil the tymne that she (which shall beare) haue borne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethren be converted vnto thy children of Israel. He shal stonde fast, and gene fode in the strength of the LORDE, *and in the victory of the name of thy LORDE his God: and when they be converted, he shall be magnified vnto the farthest partes of the worlde.

Then shal there be peace, so that the Assirian maye come in to oure londe, and treade in oure houses. We shall brynge vp seuen shepherdes and viij. prynces vpó them: these shall subdue the londe of Assur with the swerde, and the londe of Nymrod with their naked weapons. *Thus shal he deluyer vs from the Assiriâ, when he commeth within oure lande, and setteth his fote within oure borders. And the remnaunt of Iacob shal be amonge the multitude of people, as the dew of the LORDE, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that tarieth for no man, and waiteth of no body. *Yee the residue of Iacob shalbe amonge the Gentiles and the multitude off people, as the lion amonge the beeestes of y wolde, and as the lyons whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: which (when he goeth thorow) treadeth downe, treadeth in peaces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne honde shalbe lift vp vpon thine enemies, and all thine adversaries shal perish.

The tyne shal come also (sayeth the LORDE) that I wil take thine horses from the, a destroye thy charettes. I will breake downe the cities off thy londe, and overthowe all thy stronge holdes. *All witchcraftes will I rote out of thy hande, there shall no mo soythsayenges be within the. Thine Idols and thyn ymages will I destroye out of y so that thou shalt nomore bowe thy self vnto the workes of thyn eowne hondes. Thy groues wil I plucke vp by the rotes, a breake downe thy cities. Thus will I be auëged also, vpon all Heithen that will not heare.

The bi. Chapter.

Herken now what the LORDEsayeth: Vp, reproue the mountaynes, *and let the hilles heare thy voyce. O Heare the punyshment of the LORDE, ye mountaynes, and ye mightie foundациoes of thy earth: for the LORDE wil reprooue his peple, a reason with Israel: O my peple, what haue I done vnto the? or wherin haue I hurt the? geue me answere. Because I brought the frō the londe of Eipige, and delyuered the out of the house of bondage? Because I made Moses, Aaron and Miriam to lede the? Remembre (o my peple) what Balach the kyng of Moab had ymagined agaynst the, a what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gae him, from Sethim vnto Galgal: ye ye maye knowe the loungye kyndnesses of thy LORDE.

What acceptabe thyngy shal I offre vnto the LORDE? shal I bowe my kne to the hye God? Shal I come befor him with brent offeringes, and with calues of a yeare olde? Hath the LORDE a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable streams of oyle? Or shal I geue my firstborne for myne offences, and the frute of my body for the synne of my soule? I wil shewe the (O man) what is good, and what the LORDE requyreth off the: Namely, to do right, to haue pleasure in loungye kyndnesse, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God: *that thou mayest be called a cite of the LORDE, a that thy name maye be rightuousnesse. Heare (o ye trybes) who wolde els geue you soch warnynge? a Shulde I not be displeased, for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is minished? Or shulde I justifie the false balancees and the bagge of discatfull weightes, amouge those that be full off riches vnrightuously gotten: where the citysyns deale with falsede, speake lyes, and haue discatfull tunges in their mouthes?

Therefore I will take in honde to punysh the, and to make the desolate, because of thy synnes. Thou shalt eate, y not haue ynoyng; yee thou shalt bringe thy selfe downe. b Thou shalt ffe, but not escape: ad those y thou woldest saue, wil I delyuer to the swerde. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olyues, y but oyle shalt thou not haue, to anoynte thy self withall: thou shalt tredde out sweeet must, but shalt drynke no wyne. c Ye kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, a all the customes of the house of Achab: ye folowe their pleasures, therfor wil I make the waist, a cause thy inhabiter to be abhorred, O my people: a thus shalt thou beare thine owne shame.

The viij. Chapter.

WO is me: I am become as one, that goeth a gleenyng in the haruest. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wolde I fayne (with all my herte) haue of the best frute. There is not a godly man vp5 earth, there is not one rightheous amõge me. They laboure all to shed bloude, every ma hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do well, when they do euell. As the prince wil, so sayeth the iudge: ÿ he maye do him a pleasure agayne. d The greate ma speaketh what his herte desyreth, ÿ he eareth alowe him. The best off the is but as a thistle, and the most rightheous of them is but as a brece in the hedges. But when the daye of thy preachers commeth, ÿ thou shalt be vysited: the shal they be waisted awaye. e Yet no man beleue his frende, ner put his confidece in a prince. Kepe the porre of thy mouth, from her ÿ lieth in thy bosome: f for ÿ sonne shal put his father to dishonoure, the daughter shal rysy agaynst her mother, ÿ daughter in lawe agaynst her mother in lawe: and a mants foes shalbe euyn they of his owne housholde.

Neuerthelesse I wil loke vp vnto ÿ LORDE, a I wil paciently abyde God my sauioure: my God shal heare me. O thou enemie of myne, rejoyce not at my fall, for I shal get vp agayne: a and though I syt in darknesse, yet ÿ LORDE is my light. I will beare the punishment of the LORDE (for why, I haue offended him) till he syt in judgment vpon my cause, and se that I haue righ. He wil bringe me forth to the light, and I shal se his righousnesse.

She that is myne enemie shall loke vpon it, a be confounded, which now saieth: f Where is thy LORDE God? Myne eys eal seholde her, when she shalbe troden downe, as the claye in the stretes. g The tyme wil come, that thy gappes shal be made vp, and the lawe shal go abrode: and at that tyme shal they come vnto the, from Assur vnto the strõge cities, and from the stronge cities vnto the ryuer: from the one see to the other, from the one mountayne to the other.

Notwithstandinge the londe must be waisted, because of them that dwell therin, and for the frutes of their owne ymaginacions. Therefore fede thy people with thy rode, the flocke of thine heretage which dwell desolate in the wodde: that they maye be fede vpon the mount of Charmel, Basan ÿ Galaad as afores tyme. Marvelous things will I shewe them, like as when they came out of Egipte. This shal the Heithen se, and be assuzhned for all their power: a so that they shal laye their honde vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. ÿ They shal liche the dust like a serpent, a as the wormes of the earth, ÿ tremble in their holes. They shalbe afrayed of the LORDE oure God, ÿ they shal feare ÿ.

Where is there soch a God as thou? that pardonest wickednes, and forguesse the offences of the remnante of thine heretage? He kepeth not his wrath for euer. And why? his delyte is to haue compassion: ÿ he shal turne agayne, ÿ be mercyfull to vs: he shal put downe oure wickednesses, ÿ cast all oure synnes in to the botomme of the see. Thou shalt kepe thy trust with Iacob, and thy mercy for Abraham, like as thou hast sworne vnto oure fathers longe agoe.

The first Chapter.

The LORDE is a gelous God, and a taker of vengeance: yee a taker of vengeaunce is the LORDE, and wrothfull. The LORDE taketh vengeance of his enemies, and reseueth displeasure for his aduersaries.

The LORDE suffreth longe, he is of greate power, so innocent, that he leaueth no man faultlesse before him. The LORDE goeth forth in tempest and stormy wether, the cloudes are the dust of his fete. Whē he reprooueth the see, he dryeth it vp, & turneth all the floudes to drye londe. Basan is desolate, Charmel and the pleasure of Libanus waisteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hilles consume. At the sight of him, the earth quaketh: yee the whole worlde, and all that dwell therin. Who maye endure before his wrath? Or who is able to abyde his gryme displeasure? His anger taketh on like fyre, and the harde rockes burst in sunder before him.

Ful gracious is the LORDE, and a stronge holde in tyme of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in hym: when the floude reneth ouer, and destroyeth the place, and when the darcknesse foloweth still vpon his enemies. What do ye ymagin then agaynst the LORDE on this maner? (Tush, when he hath once made an ende, there shal come nomore trouble.) For like as the thornes that stieke together, and as the drye strawe, so shal the dronekardes be consumed together, even when they be fulle. There come out of the soch as ymagin myschefe, and geue vngracious counsell agaynst the LORDE.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: Let the be as wel prepared, yee and as many as they can, yet shal they be hewen downe, and passe awaye. And as for the, I wil vexe the, but not vtherly destroie the. And now wil I breake his rodde from thy backe, and burst thy bondes in sonder. But the LORDE hath genen a commandement cοcernynge the, that there shall come nomore sede of thy name. The carued and casten ymages will I rote out of the house of thy god. Thy graue shal I prepare for the, and thou shalt be confounded.
The ii. Chapter.

Beholde, vpon the mountaynes come the fete of him, that bryngeth good tydinges, that preacheth peace. O Iuda, kepe thy holy dayes, performe thy promyses: for Belial shal come nomore in the, he is vitrally roted out.

The scaterer shall come vp agaynst the, laye sege to the castell. Loke thou wel to the stretes, make thy loynes stronge, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the LORDE shal restore agayne the glory of Iacob, like as glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them downe, marred the wyne branches. The shyldle of his giauntes glistere, his men of warre are clothed in purple. His charettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forwarde, his archers are wel decke trimmed. The charettes rolle vpon the stretes, welter in the hye wayes. They are to loke vpon like cresettes of fyre, and go swyftly, as the lightenyng.

When he doth but warne his giauntes, they fall in their arayre, haistely they clyme vp the walles: yee the engyns of the warre are prepared all ready. The water portes shall be opened, and the kynges palace shall fall. The quene her selfe shall be led awaye captuyne, and her gentilywomen shall mourne as the doves, gone within their hertes. Ninie is like a pole full of water, but then shal they beayne to fle. Stonde, stode, (shal they erie) there shal not one turne backe. Awayne with the syluer, awaye with the golde: for here is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multitude of all maner costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled, emptied clene striped out: that their hertes maye be melted awaye, their knees truble, all their loynes be weake, and their faces blace as a po.".

Where is nowe the dwellinge of the lyes, and the pasturage of the kynges shep? where the lyon and the lyonessse wente with the sheples, and no man frayed them awaye? But the lyon spoyled enoughe for his yonge ones, and deouured for his lyonessse: he filled his dennes with his præ, his dwelling place with that he had rauiynghe. Beholde, I wil vpon the (saieth the LORDE of hoostes) and wil saye vpon thy charettes, that they shal smoke withall, and the swerde shal deouure thy yonge lyons. I wil make an ende of thy spoylinghe from out of the earth, the voyce of thy messaungers shal nomore be herde.

The iii. Chapter.

Wo to that bloudthirsty cite, which is all full of lyes and robbery, will not leaue of from rauiynghe. There a man maye heare scourginge, ruzhinge, the noyse of the wheles, the criende of the horses, the rollinge of the charettes. There the horse men get vp with naked swordes, and glisternge speares: There lyeth a multitude slayne, and a greate heape of dead bodies: There is no ende of dead course, yee men fall vp upon their bodies: And that for the Greate and manyfolde whordome, of the fayre and beutiful harlot: which is a mastresse of wychcraft, yee and selleth the people thorow hir whordome, and the nacions thorow hir wychcraft.

B Beholde, I wil vpon the (saieth the LORDE of hoostes) and wil pull thy clothes ouer thy hede: that I maye shewe thy nakendes amonge the Heithen, and thy shame amongs the kingsdome. I wil cast dyrte vpon f, to make the be abhorred, and a gasynge stoke: Yee all they that loke vpon the, shal stark backe, Ninie is destroyed.

Who wil haue pyte vp shal I seke one to conforte the? Art thou better then the greate cite of Alexandre? that laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde aboute it: which was strongly fenced walled with the see? Ethiopia and Egypte were hir streth, that exceedinge greate aboue measure. Africa and Lybia were hir helpers, yet was she dryuen awaye, brought in to captuyne: hir yonge children were smytten downe at the heade of euery strete, the lottes were cast for the most awncient men in her, and all hir mightie men were bounde in chaynes. Euen so shalt thou also be droncken, and hyde thy self, and seke some helpe againste thine enemie. All thy stronge cities shal be like fyge trees with rype fyges: which wha mi shaketh, they fall in to the mouth of the eater.

* Beholde, thy people with in the are but women: the portes of thy londe shal be opened vnto thine enemies, and the fyre shal deououre thy barres. Drawe water nowe against thou be beseged, make vp thy ströge holdes, go in to the claye, tempe the morter, make

The first Chapter.

THIS is the heuy burthē, which the prophet Abacuc dyd se. "O LORDE, how longe shal I crie, ζ thou wilt not heare? How longe shal I complayne vnto the, suffrynge wronge, and thou wilt not helpe? Why lettest thou me se weerynesse and laboure? Tyraňy and violence are before me, power ouergoeth right: for the lawe is torne in pieces, and there can no right judgment go forth. And why? the vngodly is more set by then the rightuous: this is the cause, ζ wronge judgment procedeth. "Beholde amoung the Heithen, and loke wel: wondre at it, and be abasshed: for I wil do a thinge in youre tyme, which though it be tolde you, ye shal not beleue.

For lo, "I wil rase vp ζ Caldees, that byter and swifte people: which shal go as wyde as the londe is, to take possession of dwellinge places, that be not their owne. ζ A grymme ζ boysteous people is it, these shal syt in judgment ζ punyshe. Their horses are swifter then the cattes of the mountayne, ζ byte sorre then ζ wolues in ζ euemyng. ζ Their horse-men come by greate heapes from farre, they fle hastely to deouere as the Aegle. They come all to spoyle: out of them commeth an east wynde, which bloweth and gathereth..."
Because they shall mocke the kynges, and laugh the prynces to scorn. They shall not set by eyntyr stonge holde, for they shal laye ordinaunce against it, and take it. Then shal they take a fresh corage vnto them, to go forth & to do more euell, a so as erby that power vnto their God. But thou o Lorde my God, my holy one, thou art from the begynnyng, therefore shal we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordened them for a punshymet, and set them to reprooue the mightie. Thine eyes are elene, thou mayest not se euell, thou canst not beholde any thinge that is wicked. Wherefore then dost thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tunge, when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better the himself? Thou maketh men as the fish in the see, and like as the crepinge beastes, that haue no gyde. They take vp all with their angle, they catch it in their net, a gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therefore offre they vnto their net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that thorow it their porcion is become so fat, and their meate so plentiful. Wherefore they cast out their net agayne, a never cease to slaye the people.

The 11. Chapter.

I STODE vpon my watch, and set me vpon my bulwurke, to loke a se what he wolde saye vnto me, and what answere I shulde geue him. b reproueth me. But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision planely vpon thy tables, that who so commeth by, maye rede it: for y visio is yet farre of for a tyme, c but at y last it shal come to passe, a not fayle. And though he tary, yet wait thou for him, d for in very dede he wil come, and not be slake. Beholde, who so wil not beleue, his soule shall not prosper: but the iust shal lyue by his faith. e Like as the wyne disceaueth the dronckarde, euyn so the proude shal fayle a not endure. He openeth his desire wyde vp as the hell, a is as vnsciable as death. f All Heithen gathereth he to him, a heapep vnto all people.

But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe against him, and mocke him with a byworde, and saye: Wo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes? How longe wil he lade himself with thicke claye? f How sodenly wil they stonde vp, y shal byte the, a awake, that shal tears y in peces? yee thou shalt be their pray. g Seinge thou hast spoyled many Heithen, therefore shall the remnant of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, a for the错了 done in the londe, in the cite a vnto all them that dwel therin.

Wo vnto him, that couetousely gathereth euell gotten goodes in to his house: that he maye set his nest an hye, to escape from the power of myspfortune. h Thou hast deuysest y shame of thine owne house, for thou hast slayne to moch people, and hast wilfully offended: i so that the very stones of the wall shal cri out of it, and the tymbre that lieth betwixte the ioyntes of the byuyldinge shall answer. Wo vnto him, y byuyldeth the townes with bloude, and mayteneth y cite with vnrightousnes. Shal not the Lorde of hoostes bringe this to passe, that the labours of the people shal be bret with a greate fyre, and that the thinges wher vpone the people haue weereid them selves, shall be lost?

For the earth shalbe full of knowledge of the LORDES honoure, like as the waters that couer the see.

Wo vnto him that gyneth his neibbour C dryncke, to get him wrothfull displeasure for his dronckennes: that he maye se his preuytees. Wherefore with shame shal he be fylled, in steede of honoure. Dryncke thou also, till thou slombe withall: for the cuppe of the LORDES right hode shall compasse the aboute, and shamefull spewing in steade of thy worship. For the wroge that thou hast done in Libanus, shal ouerwhelme the, k and the wilde beastes shal make the afrayed: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the londe, in the cite, and vnto all soch as dwel therin.

What helpe than wil y ymage do, whom the workman hath fashioned? Or the vayne cast ymage, wherein because the craftesman putthe his trust, therfore maketh he domme Idols? Wo vnto him, that saith to a piece of wod: arise, and to a domme stone: stonde vp. For what instructio maye soch one geue? Beholde, it is layed ouer with golde and syluer, \(\textit{a}\) there is no breth in it. \(\textit{b}\) But the LORDE in his holy teple is he, whom all the worlde shulde feare.

\(\textit{The iiii. Chapter.}\)

A prayer of the prophet Abacuc for the ignoraunt.

A  LORDE, when I herde speake of \(\ddot{y}\), I was afrayed. The worke \(\ddot{y}\) thou hast taken in honde, shalt thou perfourme in his tyme, O LORDE: and when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth from Theman, and the holy one from the mount of Pharar. Sela.

His glory couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prays. His shyne is as \(\ddot{y}\) sonne, \(\ddot{y}\) beames of light go out of his hondes, there is his power hid. Destruccio goeth before him, and burnyngge cressettes go from his fete. He stondeth, \(\ddot{y}\) measureth the earth: He loketh, \(\ddot{y}\) the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of \(\ddot{y}\) worlde fall downe to powlder, and the hilles are fayne to bowe them selues, for his goinges are euerrlastinge and sure.

I sawe, that the pavilions of the Morians and the tentes of the londe of Madian were vexed for weerynesse. Wast thou not angric (o LORDE) in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? yes, whe thou sattest vpon thine horse, and when thy charlettes had the victory. Thou shewdest thy bowe opely, like as thou \(\textit{a}\) haddest promised with an ooth vnto the trybes. Sela.

B  Thou didest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes saw the, they were afrayed, \(\ddot{y}\) water streame wete awaye: the depe made a noyse at the liftinge vp of thine honde. \(\textit{c}\) The Sonne and Mone remayned still in their habitacion. Thine arowes wente out glisteringe, and thy speares as the shyne of the lightenyng. \(\textit{d}\) Thou trodest downe the londe in thine anger, and didest throsse the Heithen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thynge people, to helpe thync annynted. Thou smoytest downe the heade in the house of the vnsgodly, \(\ddot{y}\) discoveredest his foundacons, euene vnto \(\ddot{y}\) necke of hym. Sela.

Thou curseth his septers, the captayne of his men of warre: which come as a stormy wynde to scatre me abrod, \(\ddot{y}\) are glad when they maye eat vp \(\ddot{y}\) poore secretely. Thou makest a waye for thine horses in the see, euem in the mudde of great waters. Wh\(\ddot{e}\) I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at \(\ddot{y}\) voyce therof, my bones corruppe, I am afrayed where I stonde. O that I might rest in the daye of trouble, that I might go vp vnto oure people, which are alreadie prepared.

For the fyge trees shall not be grene, \(\ddot{y}\) the vynes shall beare no frute. The laboure of \(\ddot{y}\) olyue shalbe but lost, and the londe shall bringe no corne: the shepe shalbe taken out of \(\ddot{y}\) fold, and there shalbe no catell in \(\ddot{y}\) stalles. But as for me, I wil be glad in the LORDE, and will reioyce in God my Saviour. \(\textit{e}\) The LORDE God is my strength, he shall make my fete as the fete of hertes: \(\ddot{y}\) he which geueth \(\ddot{y}\) victory, shal bringe me to my hye places, synginge vpon my psalmes.

What Sophony conteyneth.

Chap. I.
He prophecieth of plagues for to come vpon Iuda.

He exorthe them to amende, that they may escape the wrath of God: and sheweth the Gentiles their punishement.

Chap. III.
Punishment because of the wickednesse of the Iewes: whom God therefore refused, and chose the Heithen.

The first Chapter.

THIS is the worde of the LORDE, which came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Gedolias, the sonne of Amarias the sonne of Hezechias: in the tyme of Iosias the sonne of Amon kinge of Iuda. *I will gather vp all thinges in the londe (saieth the LORDE) I wil gather vp man and beest: I wil gather vp the foules in the ayre, and the fysh in the see (to the greate decaye of the wicked) & wil vpperly destroye the men out of the londe, saieth the LORDE. I wil stretch out myne honde vpon Iuda, and vp on all soch as dwel at Jerusalem. Thus wil I rote out the remnaunt of Baal from this place, and the names of the Kemuryns and prestes: yee & soch as vpon their house toppes worship & bowe them selues vnto the hoost of heaven: which swear by the LORDE, *a and by their Malchom also: which starte a backe from the LORDE, and nether seke after the LORDE, ner regarde him.

*b Be still at the presence of the LORDE God, for the daye of the LORDE is at honde: yee the LORDE hath prepared a slayne offeringe, and called his gestes therto. And thus shall it happen in the daye of the LORDES a slayneofferinge: *I will vsethe the prynces, the kynges children, & all soch as weere straunge clotthinge. In the same daye also wil I vseth all those, that tredde over the threshold so proudly, which fyll their lوردes house with robbery and falsede. At the same tyme (saieth the LORDE) there shall be herde a greate crie from the fyshporte, and an howlinge from another porte, and a greate murthur from the hilles. Howle ye that dwel in the myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, and all they that were laden with syluer, are roted out.

*At the same tyme wil I seke thorow Jerusalem with lanternes, and vseth them that contynue in their dregges, and saye in their hertes: Tush, the LORDE wil do nether good ner euell. Their goodes shalbe spoyled, and their houses layed waist. They shall byylde houses, and not dwel in them: they shal plante vnyardes, but not drynke the wyne therof. *For the greate daye of the LORDE is at honde, it is harde by, & commeth on a pace. Horrible is the tydings of the LORDES daye, then shall the giaunte crie out: for that daye is a daye of wrath, a daye

The ii. Chapter.

COME together and gather you, O ye frauwerde people: or ẓ thinge go forth that is concluded, ẓ or the tyme be passed awaye as the dust: or the fearfull wrath of the LORDE come vpon you, yee or the daye of the LORDES sore displeasure come vpon you. ẓ Seke the LORDE all yee meke harted vpon earth, ye that worke after his iudgmenêt: seke rightouysnesse, seke lowlynesse: that ye maye be defended in the wrothfull daye of ẓ LORDE. ẓ For Gaza shall be destroyed, ẓ Ascalon shall be layed waist: They shall cast out Aszdod at the noone daye, and Accaron shall be pluckte vp by the rotes.

Wo vnto you ẓ dwel vpon the see coost, ye murthourous people: the worde of ẓ LORDE shal come vpon you. O Canaan thou londe of the Philistynes, I wil destroye the, so that there shal no man dwel in the eny more: ẓ as for the see coost, it shal be hyrdmens cottages ẓ shpe folds: yee it shalbe a porciou for soch as remayne of the house of Iuda, to fede ther vpon. In ẓ houses of Ascalon shal they rest towarde night: for the LORDE their God shal vyset thē, ẓ turne awaye their captiuyte. I haue herde the despite of Moab, ẓ the ẓ blasphemies of the children of Ammon: how they have shamefully intreated my people, and magnified them selues within the borders of their londe. Therfore as truly as I lyue (saith the LORDE of hooesthes the God of Israel) Moab shalbe as Sodome, ẓ Ammon as Gomorra: euyn drie thorne hedges, salt pittes and a perpetuall wyldernes. The residue of my folke shall spoyle them, the remaunt of my people shall haue them in possession. This shal happen vnto them for their pryde, ẓ because they have dealete so shamefully with the LORDE of hooestes people, and magnified them selues aboue them. The LORDE shal be grymme vpon them, and ẓ destroye all the goddes in the londe. And all the Iles of the Heithen shal worshippe him, euerie man in his place.

Ye Morăs also shal perish with my swerde: Yee he shall stretch out his honde over the north, and destroye Assur. As for Ninuie, he shal make it desolate, drye and waist. The flockes and all the beasts of the people shall lye in the myydest of it, pellicanes and storekes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shal synge in the wyndowes, and rauens shal syt vpon the balckes, for the bordes of Cedre shalbe ryued downe. ẓ This is the proude and carelessse cite, that sayde in hir herte: I am, and there is els none. ẓ O how is she made so waist, ẓ the beestes lye therin? Who so goeth by, mocketh her, and poynteth at her with his lynger.

The iii. Chapter.

WO to the abhominable, sylthie and cruell cite: which wil not heare, ner be reformed. Hir trust is not in the LORDE, nether wil she holde her to hir God. ẓ Hir rulers within her are as roaringe lyons: hir iudges are as wolues in the euennyge, which leaue nothing behynde them till the morow. Hir prophetes are light personnes and vnfaithfull men: hir prestes vnhalowe the Sanctuary, and do wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the just LORDE that doth no vnright, was amonghe them, euery mornynge shewinge them his lawe clearly, and ceassed not. But the vugdly will not lerne to be aszshamed. Therfore wil I rote out this people, and destroye their towres: yee and make their stretes so royde, that no man shall go therin. Their cities shal be brok'd downe, so that no body shal be left, ner dwel there euyn more.

I sayde vnto them: O feare me, and be cotent to be reformed. That their dwellinge shall not be destroyed, and that there shall happen vnto them none of these thinges, wherwith I shal vyset the. But neuertheles they stonde vp early, to folowe the filthynes of their owne ymage. Therefore ye shal waite vpon me (saith the LORDE) vntil the tyme that I stonde vp: for I am determed, to gather the people and to bringe the kingdomes together, that I maye poure out myne anger, yee all my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. *For all the worlde shalbe consumed with the fyre of my gelousy. And then wil I clesse the lippes of the people, that they maye euerychone call vpon the name of the LORDE, and serve him with one shulder. Soch as I haue subdued, and my children also whom I haue searted abrode, shal bryinge me presents beyonde the waters of Ethiopia.

In that tyme shal thy nomore be con-foundered, because of all thy ymage. wher thorow thou haddest offended me: *for I wil take awaye the proude boosters of thine honoure from the, so that thou shalt nomore tryumphe because of my holy hill. In the also wil I leaue a smal poore symple people, which shal trusted in the name of the LORDE. The remaunt of Israel shal do no wickednes, ner speake lyes: neither shal there any disceatful tunge be founde in their mouthes. For they shal be fed, and take their rest, and no man shal make them afrayed. Geue thanks o daughter Sio, be joyful o Israel: reioyce g be glad from thy whole herte, o daughter Jerusalem, for the LORDE hath taken awaye thy punishement, and turned backe thine enemies. The kinge of Israel, euene the LORDE himself is with the: so that thou nedest nomore to feare eny mysfortune.

In that tyme it shal be sayed to Jerusalem: *D feare not, and to Sion: let not thine hondes be slake, for the LORDE thy God is with the, it is he that hath power to saue: he hath a special pleasure in the, and a maruoules loue towards: yee he rejoyseth ouer the with gladnesse. Soch as haue bene in heynes, wil I gather together, and take out of thine congregacion: as for the shame and reprofe that hath bene layed vpon the, it shal be farre from the. And lo, in y tyme wil I destroye all those that vxe the: *I wil helpe the laime, and gather vp the cast awaye: yee I wil get them honoure and prayse in all lodes, where they haue bene put to shame. At y same tyme wil I bringe you in, and at the same tyme wil I gather you. I wil get you a name and a good reporte, amonge all people of the earth, when I turne backe youre captiuyte before youre eyes, saith the LORDE.
The Prophet Aggeus.

What Aggeus contrypeeth.

Chap. I.

He exorthe the people to buylde vp the temple, and reproueth their lose tariege.

Chap. II.

He geyneth the rulers a corage. Of the ornaments and glory of the second temple, wherby is understode the church of the faithfull.

The first Chapter.

In the seconde yeare of kyng Darius, in the vi. moneth the first dawe of the moneth, came the worde of the LORDE (by the prophet Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, pryce of Iuda, and to Iesua the sonne of Iosedec the hye prest, sayenge: Thus speaketh the LORDE of hooestes, and saith: This people doth saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the LORDES house. Then spake the LORDE by the prophet Aggeus saith: Ye youre selues can fynde tyne to dwell in syled houses, and shal this house lye wast? Considre now youre owne wayes in youre hertes (saieth the LORDE of hoostes) ye sowe moch, but ye bringe little in: Ye eate, but ye haue not ynoough: ye drinke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke youre selues, but ye are not warme: he yarneth eny wage, putteth it in a broken purse.

Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: Coidre youre owne wayes in youre hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetch wod, buylde vp the house: that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe nyne honoure, saieth the LORDE. Ye loked for moch, and lo it is come to litle: though ye brynge it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so, saieth the LORDE of hoostes? Euë because that my house lyeth so wast, and ye renne euery man vnto his owne house. Wherfore the heauen is forbyddë to geue you eny dew, and the earth is forbydden to geue you encrease. I haue called for a drouth, both vp the londe vp the mountaynes, vp corne, vp wyne vp oyle, vp euery thinge that the grounde byrnyth forth, vp men and vp catell, yee and vp all handy laboure.

Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, vp Iesua the sonne of Iosedec the hye prest with the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the LORDE their God, the wordes of the prophet Aggeus (like as the LORDE their God had sent hym) the people dyd feare the LORDE. Then Aggeus the LORDES angel sayed in the LORDES message vnto the people: I am with you, saieth the LORDE. So the LORDE waked vp the sprete of Zorobabel the prynce of Iuda, and the sprete of Iesua the sonne of Iosedec the hye prest, and the sprete of the remnaunt of all the people: they came and laboured, in the house of the LORDE of hoostes their God.

The 15. Chapter.

Upon the xxiiiij. daye of the sixte moneth, in the seconde yeare of kinge Darius, the xxiij. daye of the seuenthe moneth, came the wordes of the LORDE by the prophet Aggeus, sayenge: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prync of Iuda, and to Iesua the sonne of Iosedec the hye prest, and to the residue of the people, saith the LORDE of holostes, and do acordingly to the wordes (for I am with you), saith the LORDE of holostes like as I agreed with you, when ye came out of the londe of Egypte: my sprte shalbe amongst you, feare ye not.

For thus saith the LORDE of holostes: Yet once more will I shake heauen and earth, the see and the drye lode: Yee I will moue all Heithen, the comforte of all Heithen shall come, saith the LORDE of holostes, and do acordingly to the wordes (for I am with you), saith the LORDE of holostes. The syluer is myne, saith the LORDE of holostes.

Thus thy glory of the last house shalbe greater the the first, saith the LORDE of holostes: in this place wil I gue peace, saith the LORDE of holostes.

The xxiiiij. daye of the ix moneth in the seconde yeare of kinge Darius, came the wordes of the LORDE vnto the prophet Aggeus sayenge: Thus saith the LORDE God of holostes: Axe the prestes concernyng the lawe, saith the LORDE: If one beare holy flesh in his cote lappe, with his lappe do touch the bred, potage, wyne, oyle or any other meate: shall he be holy also? The prestes answered, saide: No. Then sayde Aggeus: Now yeone bynede defyled with a deed carcasse, touch any of these: shall it also be vnclene? The prestes gauue answere: yee, it shall be vnclene. The Aggeus answered, and sayde: Even so is this people: this nacion before me, saith the LORDE: and so are all the workes of their hodes, yee and all that they offer, is vnclene.

And now (I praye you) consider from this daye forth, and how it hath gone with you afoere: or euer there was layed one stone vpo another in the temple of the LORDE: that when ye came to a cornhe heape of xx. busheles, there were scarce ten: and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure out L. pottes of wyne, there were scarce xx. For I smote you with heate, blastinge and hale stones in all the labours of youre hondes: yet was there none of you, that wolde turne vnto me, saith the LORDE. Consider then from this daye forth and afoere, namely, from the xxiiiij. daye of the ix moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the LORDES temple was layed: Marck it well, Is not the sede yet in the barn? haue not the vynes, the fyte trees, the pomgranates and olye trees bene yet vnfrutefull? but fro this daye forth, I shal make them to prosper.

Moroner the xxiij. daye of the moneth came the wordes of the LORDE vnto Aggeus againe, sayenge: Speake to Zorobabel the prync of Iuda, and saye: I will shake both heauen and earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kyndomes, yee destroye the mightie kyndome of the Heithé. I wil ouerthrowe the charettes, and those that syt vpon them, so that both horse and man shal fall downe, euery man thorow his neighbours swerde. And as for the, o Zorobabel (saith the LORDE of holostes) thou sonne of Salathiel, my seruaunt: I wil take the (saith the LORDE) at the same tyme, and make the as a scale: for I haue chosen the, saith the LORDE of holostes.

The first Chapter.

In the eight moueth of the secōde yeare of kinge Darius, came the worde of the LORDE vnto Zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, the prophet, sayenge: The LORDE hath bene sore displeased at youre forefathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes. 'Turne you vnto me (saith the LORDE of hoostes) and I wil turne me vnto you, saieth the LORDE of hoostes. 'Be not ye like youre forefathers, vnto whom the prophetes cried a fore tyme, sayenge: Thus saieth the LORDE God of hoostes: "Turne you from youre euell wayes, & from youre wicked ymaginacions. But they wolde not heare, ner regarde me, saieth the LORDE. "What is now become of youre forefathers and the prophetes? are they yet still aluye? But dyd not my wordes & statutes (which I comanded by my seruantes) touch youre fore fathers? Vpo this, they gaue answere & sayde: like as  y LORDE of hoostes deuyed to do vnto vs, acordinge to oure owne wayes & ymaginacions, euen so hath he deale with vs.

Vpon the xxiiiij. daye of the xj. moneth (which is the moneth Sebat) in the seconde yeare of Darius, came the worde of the LORDE vnto Zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, sayenge: I sawe by night, and lo, there sat one vpon a reade horse, and stode still amonge the Myrte trees,  that were beneth vpon the grounde: and behynde him were there reade, spreckled and whyte horses.

Then sayde I: O my LORDE, what are these? And the angel that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amoyge the Myrte trees, answered & sayde: These are they, whom the LORDE hath sent to go thorow the worlde. And they answered the angel of the LORDE, that stode amoyge the Myrte trees, and sayde: We have gone thorow the worlde: and beholde, all the worlde dwell at ease, and are careless.

Then the LORDES angel gaue answere and sayde: O LORDE of hoostes, how longe wilt thou be vnmercifull to Iersale, and to the cities of Iuda,  with whom thou hast bene displeased now these lxx. yeares? So the LORDE gaue a louyng and a confortable answere, vnto the angel that talked with me. And the angel that comnomed with me, sayde vnto me: Crie thou, and speake, thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: I am exceddyngely gelsous over Iersalem and Sion, and sore displeased at the carelesses Heithen: for where as I was but a litlle angrie, they dyd their best that I might destroy them. Therfor eue therin.

The 16. Chapter.

I LIFT vp myne eyes agayne,  loketh: A and beholde, a man with a measure lyne in his honde. Then saide I: whether goest thou? And he sayde vnto me: To measure Iersalem, that I maye se how longe and how brode it is. And beholde, the angel that talked with me, wente his waye forth. Then wete there out another angel to mete him, sayde vnto him: Runne, speake to this yonge man, saye: Iersalem shall be inhabited without eny wal, for  y multituide of people y catell,  y shal be therin.  Yee I myself (saieth the LORDE) wil be vnto her a wall of fyre round aboute, wilbe honoured in her.

O get you forth, O fle from the londe of y north (saieth the LORDE) ye, whom I haue scatred in to the foure wyndes vnder heauye, saieth the LORDE. Saue thy self, o Sion: thou that dwellest with y daughter of Babilon, for thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: With a glorious power hath he sent me out to the Heith, which spoyled you: for who so toucheth you, shal touche the aple of his owne eye. Beholde, I will lift vp myne honde ouer them: so that they shal be spoyled of those, which afore serued them: ye shal knowe, that the LORDE of hoostes hath sent me.

Be glad, reioyce, daughter of Sion: for lo, I am come to dwell in the myndes of the, saith the LORDE. At the same tymne there shall many Heithen cleue to the LORDE, ye shal be my people. Thus wil I dwell in the myndes of the, thou shalt knowe, that the LORDE of hoostes hath sent me vnto the. The LORDE shall haue India in possession for his parte in the holy grounde, ye shal chose Jerusalem yet agayn. Let all flesh be still before the LORDE, for he is rysen out of his holy place.

The iii. Chapter.

And he shewed me Iesu ye hyme prest, standinge before the angel of the LORDE, and Satan stode at his right honde to resiste him. And the LORDE sayde vnto Satan: The LORDE reprophe the (thou Satan) ye saith the LORDE that hath chosen Jerusalem, reprophe the. Is not this a brancke out of the fyre? Now Iesu was clothes in vnclene rayment, and stode before the angel: which answered saitho ye, stode before him: take awaye foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayde: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from thee, wil decke the with chauncy of rayment. He sayde morouer: set a fayre myter vpon his heade. So they set a fayre myter vpon his heade, put on clothes vpon him, and the angel of the LORDE stode there. Then the angel of the LORDE testimonied vnto Iesu, spake, thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: If thou wilt walke in my wayes, kepe my watche: thou shalt rule my house, kepe my courtes, I wil geue the place amoge these that stonde here. Heare o Iesu thou hye prest, thou thy frenchelles that dwell before the, for they are woderous people. Beholde, I wil bringe forth the branche of the seruante: for lo, the stone that I haue layed before Iesu: vpon one stone shalbe vij. eyes. Beholde, I will hewe him out (saith the LORDE of hoostes) and take awaye the synne of that londe in one daye. Then shall euery man call for his neigbour, vnder the vnne vnder ye fyge tre, saith the LORDE of hoostes.

The iii. Chapter.

And ye angel that talked with me, came agayne, waked me vp (as a man that is rases out of his slepe) ye sayde vnto me: What seist thou? And I sayde: I haue lokked, and beholde: a candelsticke all of golde, with a boll vpon it his vij. lampes therin, vpon euery lampes vij. stalkes: And ij. oluye trees therby, one vpon the right syde of the boll, the other vpon the left syde. So I answered, spake to the angel ye talked with me, sayenge: O my lorde what are these? The angel that talked with me, answered ye vnto me: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayde: No, my lorde. He answered, ye vnto me: This is the worde of the LORDE vnto Zorobabel, sayenge: Neither thorow an hoost of men, ner thorow stregth, but thorow my sprete, saith ye LORDE of hoostes. What art thou (thou greata mountayne) before Zorobabel? thou must be made eauen. And he shal bringe vp the first stone, so that men shall crye vnto him: good lucke, good lucke.

Morouer, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: The hondes of Zorobabel haue layed ye foundacion of this house, his hondes also shal fynishe it: that ye maye knowe, how that the LORDE of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. For he that hath bene despyses a little season, shal reioyce, whiche seyth the tynne weight in Zorobabels honde. The vij. eyes are the LORDEs, which go thorow the hole worlde. Then answered I, ye vnto him: What are these two oluye trees vpon the right and left syde of the candilsticke? I spake morouer, ye vnto him: what be these ij. oluye branches which thorow ye two golden pipes emplie them selues in to the golde? He answered me, ye sayde: knowest thou not, what these be? And I sayde: No, my lorde. Then sayde he: These are the two oluye branches, that stonde before the ruler of the whole earth.

The b. Chapter.

So I turned me lifteyne vp myne eyes, and lokeked, beholde, a fyenge boke. And they and beholde: And it came to pass that the angel that talked with me, wente forth, and sayde vnto me: "Take lift vp thine eyes a se, what this is goeth forth. And I sayde: what is it? He answered: this is a measure goinge out. He sayde mororer: Even thus are they (as dwell vpoun the whole earth) to looke vpoun.

And beholde, there was lift vp a talent of leade: a lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde: This is vngodlynesse. So he cast her in to the myddest of the measure, threwe if rom of leade vp in to an hole.

Then lift if vp myne eyes, a loked: a beholde, there came out ij. women, a the wynde was in their wynges (for they had wynges like the wynges of a Storke) a lift vp the measure betwixte the earth a the heauen. Then spake if to the angel, if talked with me: whyther wil these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me: "I sayde: in to the londe of Synear, to buyld a house, when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

The vi. Chapter.

MOROUSER I turned me, liftynge vp myne eyes, a loked: a beholde, there came iiiij. charrettes out frò betwixte two hilles, which hilles were of brasse. In the first charret were reade horse. In the secord charret were blacke horse. In the thirde charret were whyte horse. In the fourthe charret were horses of dyuerse colours, a stronge. Then spake if, and sayde vnto the angel that talked with me: O lorde, what are these? The angel answered, a sayde vnto me: "These are the iiiij. wyndes of the heauen, which be come forth to stode before the ruler of all if earth. That with the blacke horse wente in to the londe of the north, if the whyte folowed the, and the sprekled horses wente forth toward the south. These horses were very stronge, a wente out: and sought to go and take their iourney over the whole earth. And he sayde: get you hence, and go thorow the worlde. So they wete thorow out the worlde. Then cried he vpon me, and spake vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, these that go towarde if north, shall still my wrath in the north countre.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Take of the presoners that are come from Babilon: namely, Heldam, Tobias and Idaia: a come thou the same daye, and go in to the house of Iosias the sonne of Sophony. Then take golde and syluer, and make crowne therof, and set them vpon the heade of Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, the hie prest, and speake vnto him: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: Beholde, the man whose name is the braunch: "a he that shall springe vp after him, shall buyld vp the temple of the LORDE: yee euen he shall buyld vp the temple of the LORDE. He shall beare the prayse, he shall syt vpon the LORDES trone, and haue the dominacion.

A prest shall he be also vpon his trone, a a peaceable councell shal be betwixte them both. And the crowne shall be in the temple of the LORDE, for a remembrance vnto Helen, Tobias, Idaia and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And soch as be farre of, shall come and buyld the temple of the LORDE: that ye maye knowe, how that the LORDE of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shal come to passe, yf ye wil herken diligently vnto the voyce of the LORDE youre God.

The vii. Chapter.

IT happened also in the fourth yeare of a kyng Darius, that the worde of the LORDE came vnto Zachary in the fourth daye of the ix. moneth, which is called Casleu: what tyme as Sarasar and Rogomelech and the men that were with them, sent vnto Bethel for to pryse before if LORDE: and that they shulde saye vnto the prestes, which were in the house of the LORDE of hoostes, and to the prophete: a Shulde I wepe in the fyfte moneth, and absteyne, as I haue done now certayne yeares? Then came the worde

* Apo. 4. b. 5. b. Psal. 109. a. Heb. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10.
* 4 Re. 25. b.
of the LORDE of hostes vnto me, sayenge:

S
defaynt to all the people of the londe, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned "in the v g viij. moneth (now this

lxx. yeares) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, dyd ye not eate and drinke for youre owne selues? Are not these the wordes, which the LORDE spake by his prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was yet inhabited and welthy, she and the cities

runde aboute her: when there dwelt me, both toward the south and in the playne
countrees?

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto

Zachary, sayenge: Thus saieth y LORDE of hostes: Execute true judgment: shewe mercy and louynge kyndnesse, & every man to his brother: Do the wydde, the fatherlesse, the straunger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagen euell against his brother in his hert. "Neuerthelesse they wolde not take hede, but turned their backes, and stopped their eares, that they shulde not heare, yee
they made their hertes as an Adamant stone,
lest they shulde heare the laxe g wordes, which the LORDE of hostes sent in his holie sprete by the prophetes afore tyme.

Wherefore the LORDE of hostes was very wrath at them. And thus is it come to passe, that like as he spake and they wolde not heare: euens so they cried, and I wolde not heare (saieth the LORDE of hostes) but sattered them amonge all Gentiles, whom they knewe not. Thus the londe was made so desolate, y there trauelled no man in it nether to ner fro, for that pleasant londe was vterly layed waist.

The viij. Chapter.

S

O the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thus saieth the LORDE of hostes: I was in a greate gelousey over Sion, yee I haue bene very gelouser ouer her in a greate displeasure. thus saieth the LORDE of hostes: I wil turne me agayne vnto Sion,
and wil dwel in the myddest of Jerusalem:
so that Jerusalem shalbe called a faithfull and true cite, the hill of the LORDE of hostes, yee an holy hill.

Thus saieth the LORDE of hostes:

There shall yet olde men and women dwel agayne in the stretes of Ierusalem: yee and such as go with staues in their hondes for very age. The stretes of the cite also shalbe full of yonge boyes and damselles, playnge vpon
the stretes.

Thus saieth the LORDE of hostes: yf
the residue of this people thynke it to be vnpossible in these dayes, shulde it therfore be vnpossible in my sight, sayeth the LORDE of hostes? Thus saieth the LORDE of hostes: Beholde, I wil delyuer my people from the londe of the east and west, and wil beryng them agayne: that they maye dwel at Ierusalem.

They shalbe my people, and I will be their God, in treueth and righteous-nesse. Thus saieth the LORDE of hostes:
let youre hondes be stronge, ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes, which be in these dayes that the foundacion is layed vpon the LORDE of hostes house, that the temple maye be bylued. For why? before these dayes nether men ner catel coude wynne eny thynge, nether might eny man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let euery man go agaynsto his neibour.

Neuerthelesse I wil now intreate the residue of this people nomore, as afore tyme saieth the LORDE of hostes) but they shalbe a sede of peace. The vynyarde shal geue hir frute, the grounde shal geue hir increase, and the heauens shal geue their dew: and I shal cause the remmaunt of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that like as ye were a curse amonste the Heithen (O ye house of Iuda and ye house of Israel) Euen so wil I delyuer you, that ye shalbe a blessynge: feare not, but let youre hodes be stronge.

For thus saieth the LORDE of hostes:
like as I deuyseyd to punyssh you, what tyme
as youre fathers prouoked me vnto wrath sayeth the LORDE of hostes) and spared not: Euen so am I determed now in these dayes, for to do wel vnto the house of Iuda and Ierusalem, theroafter feare ye not. Now the thinges that ye shal do, are these:
Speake euery man the treueth vnto his neibour, execute judgment truly and peaceably within

Your portes, none of you saymyn euell in his hert agaynst his neibour, and loue no false ooth: for all these are the things that I hate, sayeth the LORDE. And the worde of the LORDE of hoostes came vnto me, sayenge: thus sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fifth, the fast of the seuenthe, and the fast of the tenth, shal be ioye and gladnesse, a prosperous ye feastes vnto the house of Iuda: Only, loue the treuth and peace.

Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: There shall yet come people, and the inhabiteres of many cities: and they that dwell in one cite, shal go to another, sayenge: 'Ye, let vs go, and praye before the LORDE, let vs seke the LORDE of hoostes, I wil go with you. Yee much people and mightie Heithen shall come and seke the LORDE of hoostes at Jerusalem, and to praye before the LORDE. Thus saith the LORDE of hoostes: In that tyme shal ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gentiles) take one Iewe by the hemne of his garment, and saye: we wil go with you, for we haue herde, that God is among you.

The ix. Chapter.

THE worde of the LORDE shalbe receaued at Adrach, a Damascus shal be his offerynge: for the eyes of all me and of the trybes of Israel shalke vp vnto the LORDE. The borders of Hameth shal be harde therby, Tyrus also b Sidon, for they are very wise. c Tyrus shal make his selfe stronge, heape vp sylyuer as the sonde, and golde as the claye of the stretes. Beholde, the LORDE shal take her in, and haue her in possession: he shal smyte downe hir power in to the see, d and she shall consumed with fyre. This shal Ascalon se, and be afrayed. Gaza shalbe very sory, so shal Accaron also, e because hir hope is com to confucion. For the kinge of Gaza shall perish, and at Ascalon shal no man dwell.

Straunders shall dwel at Aszdod, g as for thy pryde of thy Philistynes, I shal rote it out. Their bloude will I take awaye from their mouth, and their abominaciouns from amonge their teth. Thus they shal be left for oure God, yee they shalbe as a prynce in Iuda, g Accaron like as Iebusi. And so will I com-pase my house rounde aboute with my men of warre, goinge to and fro: that no oppressoure come vpon them any more. For that haue I sene now with myne eyes.

Reioyce thou greatly, o daughter Sion: be glad, o daughter Jerusalem. f For lo, thy kinge commeth vnto the, euen the rightoues and Sanioure: Lowly and symple is he, he rydeth vpon an ass, and vp the foale of an ass. I wil rote out the charrettes fro Ephraim, g the horse from Jerusalem, the batel bowes shall be destroyed. He shal geue the doctryne of peace vnto the Heithen, h and his dominion shalbe from the one see to the other, i from the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also thorow the bloude of thy couen-aunt: k shal let thy presoners out of the pytte, wherein is no water. Turne you now to the stronge holde, l ye that be in preson, m longe sore to be deluyered: And this daye I bringe the worde, that I wil rewarde the dubble agayne. For Iuda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim haue I fyled.

Thy sonnes (o Sio) wil I rayse vp agaynst the Grekes, and make the as a giauntes swarde: the LORDE God shalbe sene aboue the, and his darters shall go forth as the lightenyng. The LORDE God shalbe the trompet, and shal come forth as a storme out of the south.

The LORDE of hoostes shall defende the, they shall consume and deouere, and subdue them with slynge stones. They shall drynke a rage, as it were thorow wyne. They shalbe fylled like v basens, g as v horns of a alter. The LORDE their God shal deluyer the in v daye, as the flocke off hys people: for the stones off his Sanctuary shalbe set vp in his lide. O how prosperous and goodly a thynge shalbe that be? The corne shall make the yonge men chearefull, and the new wyne the maydens.

The x. Chapter.

PRAYE the LORDE then by tymes to a geue you the latter rayne, so shall the LORDE make cloudes, b and geue you rayne ynowgh for all the increae off the felde. For rayne is the auers of Idols. The soyth-
Thus sayeth the LORDE my God: Fede the shepe of ✯ slaughter, which shalbe slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they ✯ sell the, saye: The LORDE be thanked, I am rich: Yee their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therfore wil I nomore spare those that dwell in the londe (sayeth the LORDE) but lo, I will deluyer the people, euery man in to his neighbours honde, and in to the hode of his kyng: that they maye snyte the londe, and out off their hondes wil not I deluyer them.

I myself fedde ✯ slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) ad, toke vnto me two stanes: the one I called louyng mekenesse, the other I called wo, and so i kepte the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I might not awaye with them, neither had they euery delyte in me. Then sayde I: I will fede you nomore, ✯ the thinges that dyeth, let it dye: and that wil perisse, let it perish, ✯ let the reynaunt eate, euery one the flesh of his nemboure. I toke also my lounyng meke staff, ad brake it, that I might disamill the conuenant, which I made with all people, And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore simple shepe that had a respecte vnto me, knewe therby, that it was the worde of the LORDE. And I sayde vnto them: yff ye thynke it good, brynge hither my prye: yf no, then leaue. So they wayed downe xxx. syluer pens, ✯ value that I was prysed at. ✯ And the LORDE sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly prye for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the xxx syluer pens, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORDE.

Then brake I my other staff also (namely wo) that I might lowse the brotherhead between Iuda and Israel. And the LORDE sayde vnto me: Take to the also the staff off a foolish shepheard: for lo, I will rayse vp a shepheard in the londe, which shal not seke after the thinges that be lost, ner care for soch as go astraye: he shall not heale the wounded, he shal not norishe the thinges that is whole: but he shall eate the flesh off soch as be fat, and teare their claws in peces.

O Idols shepheard, that leaueth the flocke. The swerde shal come vpon his arme and vpon his right eye. His arme shalbe clene dried vp, and his right eye shalbe sore blynded.
The 2nd. Chapter.
The heuy burthen which the LORDE hath denied for Israel.

A
THUS saith the LORDE, which spred the heauēs abrode, layde the foundations of the earth, and geneth man' breath of life: Beholde, I will make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfeit, vnto all the people y are rounde aboute her: Yee Iuda himself also shalbe in the sege agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme will I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that all soch as lift it vp, shalbe toarne and rëte, and all the people of the earth shalbe gathered together agaynst it.

In that daye (sayeth yt LORDE) I wil make all horses abasshed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wyttes. I will open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, ad smyte all the horses of the people by blundy-nesse. And the prynces of Iuda shall saye in their hertes: The inhabiteres of Ierusalem shall geue me consolacion in the LORDE off hoostes their God. In that tyme will I make the prynces of Iuda like an hote burnynge ouen with wodd, and like a cresshet off fyre amonge the strawe: so that they shal cōsume all the people roide aboute them, both vpon the rōnte and the left. Ierusale also shalbe inhabited agayne: namely, in the same place where Jerusalem stondeth.

The LORDE shall preserue the tentes off Iuda like as afore tyme: so that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the cyesyns of Jerusalem, shalbe but little regarded, in comparison off the glory off Iuda. In that daye shal the LORDE defende the cyesyns of Ierusalem: so that the weakest then amonge them shalbe as David: and the house of David shalbe like as Gods house, and as the angell off the LORDE before them.

At the same tyme will I go aboute to destroye all soch people as come agaynst Ierusalem. Moroner, vpon the house off David and vpon the cyesyns off Jerusalem, will I poure out the spreete of grace and prayer: so that they shal loke vpon me, whom they have pearsed: and they shall bewepe him, as men mourne for their only begotten sonne: Yee and be sorry for him, as men are sorry for their first childe.

I
Then shal there be a great mourninge at Ierusalem, like as the lamentacion at Adremnon in the felde off Maggadon. And the londe shall bewayle, euery kyndred by the selues: The kyndred off the house of David shalbe alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kyndred off the house of Nathan shalbe alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kyndred off the house of Leui the selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kyndred off the house of Semei the selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: In like maner, all the other generaciones, euerychone by them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues.

The 2nd. Chapter.
I
That tyme shall the house off Davuid and the cyesyns off Ierusalem haue an open well, to wash of synne and vnclennesse. And then (sayeth the LORDE off hoostes) I will destroye the names of Idols out off the londe: so that they shal nomore be put in remembrance.

As for the false prophets also and the vn clene sprete, I shall take them out of the londe: So that yf any off them prophesie euymore, his owne father and mother that begat hym, shall saye vnto hym: Thou shalt dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name off the LORDE: Yee his owne father and mother that begat him, shall wounde hym, when he prophesieyth. And then shall those prophets be confounded, euery one off his vision when he prophesieyth: nether shall they were sack clothes euymore, to diseasen mee with all. But he shall be payne to saye: I am no prophete: I am an husbond man, for so am I taught by Adam fro my youth vp. And yff it be sayde vnto hym: How came these wounds then in thine hondes? He shall answere: Thus am I wounded in the house off myne owne frenes. Arise (o thou swearde) vpon my shepheard, and vpon the prynce of my people, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes: Smyte the shepheard and the shope shalbe scatred abrode, and so will I turne myne hondo to the litle ones. And itschal come to passe (sayeth the LORDE) that in all the londe two partes shalbe roted out,

The 38th Chapter.

Behold, the day of the Lorde cometh, that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed: for I will gather together all the Heithen, to fight against Jerusalem: so that the cite shall be wonne, the houses spoyled, and the women defyled. The half of the cite shall go awaye in to captiuyte, and the residue of the people shall not be carried out of the cite.

After that shall the LORDE go forth to fight against those Heithen, as men vse to fight in the daye of batell. The shall his fete stode vp the mount oluyte, that lieth vpon the east syde of Ierusale: and the mount oluyte shal clewe in two, eastwarde and westwarde so there shall be a greate valley: the half mount shall remoue toward the north, and the other half toward the south.

And ye shall fle vnto the valleye of my hilles, for the valley off the hyles shall reach vnto Asal. Yec fle ye, like as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes off Osias kyng of Iuda. And the LORDE my God shall come, and all sanctes with him. In that daye shal it not be light, but colde and frost. This shalbe that speuyall daye, which is knowne vnto the LORDE: neither daye ner night, but aboute the enenyng tyme it shal be light.

In that tyme shall there waters of life runne out from Jerusalem: the half partes of them toward the east see, ad the other half toward the vtemost see, and shall continue both somer and wynter. And the LORDE himself shalbe kyngge ouer all the earth.

At that tyme shal ther be one LORDE only, and his name shalbe but one. Men shal go about the whole earth, as vpon a felde: from Gibea to Remmon, and from southe to Jerusalem. She shalbe set vp, and inhabited in her place: From Ben Iaminis porte,
The Prophet Malachi.

What Malachi containeth.

Chap. I.
The benefits of God, shewed specially vnto Israel before all other: Agayne, the punishment of the vntanfulnesse, vnafaithfulnessse and covetousnesse of the prestes and the people.

Chap. II.
He threatneth punishment and confucion vnto the prestes, and commaundeth men to loue their wyues.

Chap. III.
Of Christes commyng, and of him that maketh redy his wyse before him. Off the abrogacion of the olde leuiticall prestheade. Of the power of the judge for to come and of that fearfull daye.

The first Chapter.
The heuy burthen which the LORDE sheweth agaynst Israel by Malachy.

I have loued you, sayeth þ LORDE: ad yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Iacobs brother, sayeth the LORDE? yet haue I loued Iacob, and hated Esau: “Yee I haue made his hilles waist, and his heretag a wylderness for dragōs. And though Edom sayde: well, we are destroyed, we wil go buylde vp agayne the places that be waisted: yet (sayeth þ LORDE of hoostes) what they buylde, that brake I downe: so that it was called a cursed londe, and a people, whom the LORDE hath euer bene angrie withall.

Yowre eyes haue sene it, ad ye youre selues must confesse, that þ LORDE hath brought the londe of Israel to greate honoure. Shulde not a sonne honoure his father, and a seruaunt his master? Yf I be now a father, where is myne honoure? ‘Yf I be the LORDE, where am I feared? sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.

Now to you prestes, that despise my name. And yf ye saye: wherin haue we despised thy name? Yf in this, that ye offre vnclene bred vpō myne aulter. And yf ye wil saye: wherin haue we offred any vnclene thynge vnto the? In this that ye saye: the aulter of the LORDE is not to be regarded. Yf ye offre y blynde, is not ý euell? And yf ye offre the lame and sick, is not that euell? Yee offre it vnto thy prynce, shal he be cōtent with the, or accepthe thy persone, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes?

And now make youre prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for soch thinges haue ye done. Shal he regarde youre personnes (thynke ye) sayeth the LORDE of hoostes? Yee what is he amonoge you, that wil do so moch as to shut ý dores, or to kyndle ý fyre vpō myne aulter for naught? I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the LORDE off hoostes: and as for the meatofferinge, ‘I wil not accepthe it at youre honde. ‘For from the ryseinge vp of ý sonne vnto ý goinge downe of the same, my name is greate amonge the

The iiij. Chapter.

AND now (oye prestes) this commandement toucheth you: yf ye will not heare it, ner regard it, to geue the glory vnto my name (sayeth the LORDE off hoostes) I will sende a curse vpon you; I will curse youre blessinges: yee curse them will I yf ye do not take hede. Beholde, I shal corruppe youre sede, and cast donge in youre faces: euen the donge of youre solempne feastes, and it shal cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe, that I have sent this commandement vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Leui, might stonde, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.

I made a couenaunt of life and peace with him: this I gaue him, that he might stonde in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, ad had my name in reuerence. The lawe of treueth was in his mouth, and there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with me in peace ad equyte, and dyd turne many one awaye from their synnes. For the prestes lippes shulde be sure knowlege, that men maye seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messaunger of the LORDE of hoostes. But as for you, ye are gone clene out off the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. Therefore wil I also make you to be despised, and to be of no reputacion amonge all ye people: because ye haue not kepe my wayes, but bene parcell in the lawe.

"Haue we not all one father? Hath not one God made vs? why doth euery one off vs then despysse his owne brother, and so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Iuda offended: yee the abomination is done in Israel and in Jerusale: for Iuda hath defyled the Sacuary of the LORDE, which he loued, and hath keppe the daughter of a strange God. But the LORDE shal destroye the man that doth this (yee both the master & the scolar) out of the tabernacle of Iacob, with him that offreth vp meatofferynge vnto the LORDE off hoostes. Now haue ye brought it to this poynte agayne, that the aultur of the LORDE is couered with teares, wepynge and mournynge: so that I will no more regard the meatofferynge, nether wil I receaue or accepte any thing at youre hodes.

And yet ye saye: wherfore? Even because that where as the LORDE made a couenaunt betwixte you and the wife off thy youth, thou hast despysed her: Yet is she thyne owne compnyon and maried wife.

So dyd not the one, ye yet had he an excellent sprete. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promised of God. Therfore loke well to youre sprete, yf let no man despysse the wife of his youth. Yf thou hatest her, put her awaye, sayeth the LORDE God of Israel, and geue her a clathinge for the socne, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. Loke well then to youre sprete, and despysse her not. Ye geue the LORDE with youre wordes, and yet ye saye: wherwithall haue we greued him? In this, that ye saye: All that do euell are good in the sight of God, and soch please him. Or els where is the God that punisheth?

The iiij. Chapter.

BEHOLDE, I wil sende my messaunger, which shal prepare the waye before me: and the LORDE whom ye wolde haue, shal soone come to his temple, yee euene the messaunger of the couenaunt whom ye longe for.

Beholde, he commmeth, sayeth the LORDE. of hostes. But who maye abyde the daye of his commynyng? Who shalbe able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is like a golde-smythes fyre, ad like washers sope. He shall syt him downe to trye and to clense y syluer, he shall pourge the children of Leui, and purifie them like as golde and syluer: that they maye brynge meatofferinges vnto the LORDE in righteousnes. Then shall the offeringe of Iuda and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto the LORDE, like as from the begynninge in the yeares afore tyme. I will come a punysh you, a I my self wil be a swift wytnes agaynst the witches, agaynst the aduouteres, agaynst false swearsers: yee ad agaynst those, that wrōgously kepe backe the hyrelenges dewty: which vexe the wyddowes a the fatherlesse, a oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the LORDE of hostes. For I am the LORDE y chaunge not, a ye (o children of Iacob) wil not leauye of: a ye are gone awaye fro myne ordinaires, a sens y tyme of youre forefathers haue ye not kepte them.
'Turne you now vnto me, and I wil turne me vnto you, sayeth the LORDE of hostes. Ye saye: Wherin shal we turne? Shalde a man vse falsede and disceate with God, as ye vse falsede and disceate with me? Yet ye saye: wherin vse we disceate with the? In Tythes and haue offerynges. 'Therfore are ye cursed with penury, because ye dyssemble with me, all the sorte of you. Brynge euer Tythe in to my barne, y there maye be meat in myne house: and proune me withall (sayeth the LORDE of hostes) yf I wil not open the wyndowes of heauen vnto you, and poure you out a blessinge with plenteousnesse. Yee I shal reproue the consumer for youre sakes, so that he shall not eate vp the frute of youre grounde, nether shal ye vynyarde be baren in the felds, sayeth y LORDE of hostes: In so moche that all people shal saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shal be a pleaunant lōde, sayeth the LORDE off hostes.

Ye speak hard worde against me, sayeth the LORDE. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken against the? Ye haue sayed: It is but lost laboure, to serue God: a What profit haue we for kepyng his commandements, and for walkinge humbly before the LORDE off hostes? Therfore maye we saye, that the proude are happie, and that they which deale with vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But that they feare God, saye thus one to another: The LORDE cosidreth and heareth it. Yee it is before him a memoriall boke written for soch as eare the LORDE, and remembre his name. And in the daye that I wil make (saith y LORDE of hostes) they shalbe myne owne possession: and I will fa-uoure them, like as a man fauoureth his owne sonne, that doth him seruyce. Turne you therefore, and considire what difference is bet-xwte the rightuous and vngodly: betxwte him that serueth God, ad him that serueth him not.

For mark, the daye commeth that shall burne an oué; and all the proude, yee and all soch as do wickednesse, shalbe straw: and the daye that is for to come, shall burne the vp (sayeth the LORDE of hostes) so that it shal leauue them nether rote ner braunch. But vnto you that feare my name, shall the Sōne of rightuousnes aryse, a health shal be vnder his winges. Ye shal go forth, a multipli as y fat calues. Yee shal treade downe y vngodly: for they shalbe like the asshes vnder the soles of your fete, in the daye y I shal make, sayeth the LORDE of hostes.

Remembre the lawe of Moses my seruaunt, which I committed vnto him in Oreb for all Israel, with the statutes and ordinances. Beholde, a I will sende you Elias y prophet: before the came nyng of the daye of the great and fearfull LORDE. He shall turne the herties of the fathers to their children; and the herties of the children to their fathers, that I come not, and smyte the earth with cursynge.

The translatoure vnto the reader.

These bokes (good reader) which be called Apocrypha, are not judged amonge the doctours to be of like reputation with the other scripture, as thou mayest perceane by S. Jerome in epistola ad Paulinum. And the chefe cause therof is this: there be many places in them, that seeme to be repugnaunt vnto the open and manyfest trueth in the other bokes of the byble. Neuertheles I haue not gathered them together to the intent that I wolde haue them despyseyd, or little sett by, or that I shulde thinke them false, for I am not able to proue it: Yee I doute not verely, yt they were equally conferred with the other open scripture (tyme, place, and circumstauce in all thinges considered) they shulde nether seme contrary, ner be vntruly & peruersely aledged. Treuth it is: A mas face can not be sene so wel in a water, as in a fayre glasse: nether can it be shewed so clearly in a water that is stered or moned, as in a styl water. These & many other dare places of scripture haue bene sore stered and myxte with blynde and cuvetous opynions of men, which haue cast soch a myst afore the eyes of y symple, that as longe as they be not cõferrer with the other places of scripture, they shall not seme other wyse to be vnderstonde, then as cuvetousnes expoundeth them. But who so euer thou be that readest scripture, let the holy goost be thy teacher, and let one text expounde another vnto the: As for soch dreames, visions and darek sentences as be hyd from thy vnderstandinge, commytte them vnto God, and make no articles of them: But let the playne text be thy gyde, and the sprete of God (which is the author therof) shal lede the in all trueth.

As for the prayer of Salomô (which thou findest not herin) y prayer of Azarias, and the swete songe that he and his two felowes songe in the fyre: the first (namely the prayer of Salomon) readest thou in the eight chapter of the thirde boke of the kynges, so that it appeareth not to be Apocrypham: The other prayer and songe (namely of the thre children) haue I not founde amonge eny of the interpreters, but onely in the olde latyn texte, which reporteth it to be of Theodotios translacion. Neuertheles, both because of those y be weake and scrupulous, and for their sakes also that loue soch swete songes of thankesgeuinge: I haue not left them out: to the intent that the one shulde haue no cause to complayne, and that the other also might haue the more occasion to geue thankes vnto God in aduersite, as the thre children dyd in the fyre. Grace be with the. Amen.
The thirde boke of Esdras.

Chap. IX.
Of the counsell that was taken, as touchinge the vnclene mariage.

The first Chapter.

And Iosias helde the feast of Easter in Ierusalam vnto the LORDE, a and slewe y Passeouer the xiiij. daye of the first moneth. He set y prestes also in ordre (acordigg to their daylie courses) beyng arrayed in longe garnettes in the t[e]ple of the LORDE. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shulde halowe them selues vnto the LORDE, to set the holy arke of the LORDE, in the house that kyng Salomô the sonne of Dauid had buylde and sayde: Ye shal nomore beare the Arke vpon youre shoulدرs. Now serue youre LORDE, a take the charge of his people of Israel, after youre vyllagies and youre trybes: acordigg as kyng Dauid the kyng of IZrael hath ordenèd, a acordigg as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: Yee loke y ye all do seruyce in the temple, acordigg to the ordringe and distribucion of the pryncpall me which are appoynted out of the trybes, to do seruyce for the childe of Israel.

Ky·ll passeouer, a prepare offeringes for youre brethren, and do accordinge to the commande·ment of y LORDE, which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto y people y was soude, losias gaue xxx. thousande of shepe, lambes, kyddes and goates, a thre thousande oxe. These the kyngye (of his kyngly liberalite) gaue vnto the people, acordinge as he had promysed: a to the prestes (for the Passeouer) he gaue two thousande shepe a an hundrede oxe. Mor· ouer Iechonias a Semeia and Nathanael brethren, a Hasabias, Iehiel and Iosabad, gaue them to the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe and fyue hundrede bullockes.

And when these thinges were brought to passe, the prestes and the Leuites stode goodly in their ordre, and had the valueued bred thorow out y trybes. And after the ordrine of the pryncipall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the LORDE in the sight of the people, acordinge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses, b so they rosted the Easter·lambe as acordinge was. As for the thak offeringes a the other, they dight then in kett· tels a pottes, a sett them before the people with good will, and afterwarde before them selues and the prestes. For the prestes offered the fatt, vntyll the tyme was expyred, but the Leuites prepared for them selues a for their brethren the childe of Aaron. The syngers also a children of Asaph stode in their ordre, acordinge as David had deuyseyd. So dyd Asaph, Zachary a Iedithi, which were appoynted by the Lorde. Mor· ouer the porter· s a dorekepers stode by the dores a y diligent·ly, so y none wente out of his stondeinge a ser· uye: for their brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges per· formeyd, that belonged to the offeringe of the LORDE. In that daye they helde the Passeouer, a offerd thank offeringes beyside y sacrifice of y LORDE, acordinge to y com· maundemente of kyngye losias.

So the children of Israel which were the present helde an honorable Passeouer, a the feast of swete bred vij: dayes loge. Yee soch a Passeouer was not kepte in Israel, from y tyme of the prophet Samuel. And all the kyngyes of Israel helde not soch an Easter, as this which kyngye losias helde, a y prestes, y leuites, y Iewes a all Israel, of all the y were at Jerusalem. In y xiij: yare of y raigne of losias was this Passeouer kepte. And with a parfecte hert dyd kyngye losias ordre all his worikes (before y LORDE) a y things y were wyrtte of in tymes past, cocerynge those y synned a were wepyd agaynst y LORDE before all people, a y sought not the wordes of y LORDE vpon Israel. After all these actes of kyngye losias, Pharao a kyngye of Egipye wete vp, a came towarde a Carcamis by Euphrates, a losias wete to mete hi. Then sent the kyngye of Egipye vnto losias, sayenge: what haue I to do with y, o kyngye of Juda? I am not sent of y LORDE to fight agaynst y, for my warre is upo Euphrates, go thou y waye home agayne in all y haist. And losias wolde not tunye agayne vpon his charet, but vndertooke to fight agaynst him, a herkened not vnto y wordes of y prophet, which he tolde him out of the mouthe of God, but pitched a battaile agaynst him in y felde of Mageddo.

And the prynces pressaed to kyngye losias. Then sayde the kyngye vnto his seruaunte: a Cary me awaye out of the battayll, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes tok· e him awaye out of the fronte of the battayll. Then satt he vp vpon the seconde charrett, came to Jerusal· ed, dyed, a was buried in his fathers sepulcre. And in all Iewry they mourning for losias, yee the rulers also with their wyues mad· e lametacion for him vnto this daye: And this was done euer still in Israel.

These thinges are written in the boke of D the stories of y kyngyes of Iuda: namely, all the actes a worikes of kyngye losias, his kyngly power a majesty, his vnderstandinge in the lawe of God, a what he dyd, yee thinges which are not wyttet in the boke of the kyngyes of Israel a Iuda. a And y people toke Iechonias the sonne of losias, a made hym kyngye in y stead of losias his father, when he was xxxij: yare olde. And he raigned ouer Israel thr· e monethes. And the kinge of Egipye put him downe, y he shulde not raigne in Jerusal· e rayed vp a taxinge of the people: namely, an C. talentes of syluer a one tal Inter of golde. The kinge of Egipye also made Iochim his brother kyngye of Iuda a Jerusal·. As for the of the kinges concell with the kyng ye himself and Zaraccoes his brother, he toke the, a car· ried the awaye presoners into Egipye. Fyne for the house of the LORD, they brake it, and brake downe the walls of Jerusalem, set fire upon hir towres, destroyed all hir noble buildinges and brought them to naught, and the people that were not slayne with the swerde, they carried vnto Babilon.

Thus became they prisoners of the kynge of Babilon, tylly they were deliuered and rayned for them selves, when the words of the LORDE were fulfilled, which he promised them by the mouth of the prophet Ieremy, and tylly the londe had hir rest:

The ii. Chapter.

NOW wha kynge Cyrus raigned ouer the Persians, wha the LORDE wolde perfoure the worde he had promysed by the mouth of the prophet Ieremy: the LORDE rayzys vnp the sprete of Cyrus, the kynge of the Persiis, so he caused this wyrringe to be proclaimed throw ouht his whole realtime, sayenge: Thus sayeth the kynge of the Persians: The LORDE of Israel that hie LORDE hath made me kynge of the lode, and commanded me to buylde him an house at Jerusalem in Iewry. Yf there be eny now of youre people, the LORDE be with hym, and go vp with hym to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute y place, shal helpe the, whether it be with golde, with syluer, with gifts, with horses and necessary catell, and all other thinges that are brought with a fre wyll to the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem.

Then the pryncipall me out of the trybes and vylayges of Iuda and Ben Iamin stode vp: so dyd the prestes also the leuites (whom the LORDE had mouded) to go vp, and to buylde the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem. And they that were aboute them, helped them with all maner of golde, and syluer, and catell also and with many liberall gifts, and this dyd many one, whose mynde was stored vp there to. Kynge Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornamentes, that were halowed vnto the LORDE (which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon had caried awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his Idol and ymage) and deliuered them to Mithridatus his treasurer, and by him they were deluyer'd to Salmanasar by debyte in Iewry. And this was the nobre of them: Two thousande and iij. C. syluer boules, xxx. syluer basens, xxx. basens of golde, ij. M. and iij. C. vessels of syluer, and a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde and syluer were v. M. viij. C. and ix. These were nombred vnto Salmanasar, and them that were come agayne with him to Ieralus out of the captiuyte of Babilon. Now in the tyme of kynges Artaxerses the kyng of Persia, these men: Balemus and Mithridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius scribe, and other that dwelt in Samaria t in other places vnder by dominione therof. Wrote a letter vnto kynges Artaxerses, wherin they complain'd vnto the kynges of them in Iewry and Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner:

Syr, thy seruauntes Rathimus the story wryter, Sabellius the Scribe, & other judges of thy courte in Celsosyria and Phenices. Be it knowne and manifest to our lorde the kyng, that the Iewes which are come vp fro you vnto vs in to the rebellious and wicked cite, begynne to buylde it agayne, and the walles aboute it, and to set vp the tvelope of the new. Now ye this cite and the walles therof be set vp agayne, they shal not only refuse to geue trybutes and taxinges, but also rebell ytterly agaynst the kyng. And for so mouche as they take this in hande now aboute the temple, we thought it reason, to thinke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto our lorde the kyng, & to certifie him therof: to the intent ye if it please the kyng, he maye cause it be souene in the bokes of olde: and thou shalt fynde soch warnyng wrytten, and shalt vnderstonde, that this cite hath allwaye bene rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges and cities, and that the Iewes which dwell therin, haue euer bene a rebellious, obstinate, vnfaithfull and fightinge people, for the which cause this cite is waysted. Wherfore now we certifie oure lorde the kyng, that ye this cite be buylde and occupied agayne, & the walles therof set vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage in to Celsosyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus the story wryter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius scribe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Syria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epistle which thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaundd to make diligent search, and haue founde, that the cite hath euer resisted kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue cause of warre, & that mightie kynges haue raigned in Jerusalem, which also haue raysed vp taxinges of Syria and Phenices. Wherfor, I haue commaundd those people, that they shall not buylde the cite, that they make no more in it, and that they proced not futher with the buyldinge: for so mouche as it might be the cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kynges.

Now whan Rathymus and Sabellius the scribe and the rulers in the londe had red the wrytinge of kynges Artaxerses, they gatt them together, and came in all the haist to Jerusalem with an hoost of horsemen, and with mouche people of fote, and forbade them to buylde. And so they lef left of from buyldinge of the temple, vnto the seconde yeare of kyng Darius.

The iiij. Chapter.

KYNGE Darius made a greate feast vnto his seruaites, vnto all his courte, & to all the officers of Media and Persia, yee and to all the debytes of rulers that were vnder him, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundreth countrees. So whan they had eaten, and drunken beinge satisfied, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kyng wente in to his chambre, layed him downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre yonge men, that keppe the kynges persone, and watched his body, commoonded amonge them selues, and spake one to another: Let every one of vs saye some thinge, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto him shall kinge Darius geue greate gyftes, and clothie him with purple. He shall geue him vessels of golde to drinke in, clothes of golde and coueringe: he shall make him a costy charrett & a byrdle of golde, he shall geue him a bonet of whyte sylke and a chayne of golde aboute his necke: yee he shall be the seconde pryncipall nexte vnto kyng Darius, that because of his wysdomme, and shalbe called kynges kynsman.

So every one wrote his meaninge, sealed it.
and layed it vnder the kinges pelowe, and sayde: when the kynge arysth, we will geue him oure wrytinges: and loke whose worde the kynge and his chefe lorde judge to be the most wysely spoken, the same shall haue the victory. One wrote: wyne is a stronge thynge. The seconde wrote: The kynge is stryger. The thyrde wrote: women haue yet more strength, but aboue all thynge s trutheth beareth awaye the victory. Now whan the kynge was ryse vp, they toke their wrytinges and delyvered them vnto them, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to call all his chefe lordes, all the debytes s rulers of the countreys of Media and Persia. And when they were set downe in the counsell, the wrytinges were red before them. And he commanded to call for s yonge men: s they might declare their meanynges the selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, and came in, s kynge sayde vnto them: shew vs and make vs to undersode, what the thinges are that ye haue wrytten.

Then beganne the first (whiche had spok of the strenght of wyne) s sayde: O ye men, wyne is marvelous strege, and ouercome they drynke it: it disceaueth the mynde, s bryngeth both the poore man s kynge to dotage and vanite. Thus doth it also with the bondman and with the fre, with the poore s rych: it taketh awaye their understandinge, and maketh them careles and mery, so that none of them remembrith eny heuynys, dett or dewtie: It causeth a man to thynke also that s thinges which he doth, is honest and good; and remembrith not that he is a kynge, nor s he is in auctorite, s he ought not to do soch thinges. Morouer, when men are drynckinge, they forget all frendshepe, all brotherly faithfullnes and lone: but as soone as they are droncke, they drawe out the sworde s wil fight: s wha they are layed dounw fro the wyne, s so ryse vp agayne, they can not tell what they dyd. Judge ye now, Is not wyne the strongest? For who wolde els take in hande, to do soch thinges? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tongue.

The iii. Chapter.

THEN the seconde (which had sayde, s the kynge was stronger) beganne to speake, sayenge: O ye men, are not the the strongest s most excellent, s cõquerer the lord s the see, s all y is in y see s in the earth? Now is the kynge lorde of all these thinges, s hath dominion of the all: s loke what he cõmaundeth, it is done. Yf he sende his me forth a warfare, they go and breake downe hilles, walles s towers. They are slayne, s slaye (other men) them selues, s ouer passe not s kynes worde. Yf they get the victory, they brynge the kynge all the spoyle. Likewise, the other y medle not with warres and fightinge, but tyll the grounde: when they reape, they brynge trybute vnto s kynge. And yf s kynge alone do but cõmaund to kyll, they kyll: yf he cõmaunde to forgene, they forgene: yf he cõmaunde to smyte, they smyte: yf he byd drewe awaye, they druyue awaye: yf he comamunde to byulde, they byulde: yf he cõmaunde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he cõmaunde to plante, they plate. The commen people s s rulers are obedient vnto him. And s kynge in the meane season sytteth hi dounw, eatteth and drynketh, s taketh his rest: the kepe they watch roud e aboute s kinge, s not one of the darre get him out of s waye, to do his owne busynes, but must be obedieit vnto s kinge at a worde. Judge ye now o ye men, how shulde not he go farre aboue, vnto whom men are thus obedieit? And whan he had spok this, he helde his tongue. The thirde (whose name was Zorobabel, which had spok of women s of s trueth) begane to saye after this maner: O ye me, it is not s grete kyng, it is not the multitudes of me, nether is wine s excelleth: Who is it the, s hath s lordshipe ouer the? Have not wemen borne the kyng, s all s people s rule these thinges? Have not wemen borne the, s brought the vp, s planta the vynes, wherout s wyne côneth? They make garmettes for all me, they geue honour vnto all men, s with out wemen can not men lyue. Yf they gather golde s syluer s all precious thinges, s se a fayre s wel fauoured woma, they leane all together, and turne their eyes onely vnto the woman, s gape vpon her, s have more desyre vnto her, then vnto the syluer s golde, or eny maner of precious thinge. A ma leaueth his father, s brought him vp, he leaueth his owne naturall coûtre, and cleueth vnto the woman: yee he

Doth it greeue you? A man taketh his swerde and goeth his waye to steale, to kyll, to murther, to sayle vpon the see, seyth a lyon, and goeth in the darknes: and when he hath stollen, diseauned robbed, he bringeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wyfe better then father and mother: yee many one there be, that renne out of their wyttes become bondmen for their wyues takes: many one also haue perished, haue bene slayne, haue synned because of wemen.

And now beleue me, I knowe a kyng which is greate in his power, all lodes stode in awe of him, no man darre laye hande vpon him: yet dyd I se, Apame (daughter of the great kyng Barcatus) the kynges cocubine, satt besyde the kyng vpo the right hede, and toke of his crowne from his heade, and set it vpon his owne heade, and smote the kyng with hir left hande. Morover, the kyng loked vpo her with open mouth: yf she laughd vpon him, he laughd also: but yf she toke any displeasure with him, the kyng was fayne to flater hir, to geue her good words, till he had gotten hir favoure agayne.

O ye men, are not wemen then stronger? Greate is the earth, and hie is the heauen that doe these things. Then the kyng and the prynces loked one vpon another. So he beganne to speake of the trueth: O ye men, are not wemen stronger? Greate is the earth, hie is the heauen, swyft is the course of the Sonne, he compasseth the heauen rounde aboute, and fetcheth his course againe to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doth this? yee greater is the trueth, and stronger then all things. All the earth calleth vpon the trueth, the heauen prayseth it, all workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteousnes. Wine is vnrighteous, the kyng is vnrighteous, wemen are vnrighteous: all the children of men are vnrighteous, yee all their workes are vnrighteous, and there is no trueth in them, in their vnrighteousnes also shal they be destroyed and perish. As for the trueth, it endureth, and is alwaye strong: it lyueth, and coquereth for euermore worlde without ende.

The trueth accepteth no personnnes, it putteth no difference betwixte rych or poore, betwixte mightie or slyngle, but doth right vnto euery man: whether they be euel or good, all men are louemyly dealt withall in the workes of it. In the judgment of it there is no vnrighteousnes, but strength, kynsdome power and maiesty for euermor. Blessed be the God of trueth.

And with that he helde his toge, and all yf people cried: Greate is the trueth, and aboue all. Then sayde the kyng vnto hym: Axe what thou wilt, more then is appoynted in the wrytynge, and I shal geue it the, for thou art founde wyser then thyn companions: thou shalt sytt nexte me, and be my kynsman. Then sayde he vnto the kyng: Remembre thy promysse and vowe, which thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to the kynsdome) to buylde vp Ierusalem, and to sende againe all the vessels and Jewels, that were taken away out of Ierusaleme: which Cyrus separated, when he offered in Babilon, and wolde sende them agayne: And thy minde was to buylde vp the temple, which the Edomites brete, when Ierusaleme was destroyed by the Caldees. This onely (O kyng) is the thinge that I require, this is yf maiesty, which, I desire an axe of the: that thou perfourme the vowe, which thou with thine owne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heauen.

Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kyssed hym, and wrote a letter vnto all the debytes and shruees, to all yf lordes and nobles, they shulde conveye hym forth, all them wolde go vp with hym. He wrote a letter also vnto all yf shruees were in Celosyria Phenices, vnto Libanus, they shulde harle cedre trees from Libanus vnto Ierusaleme, to buylde vp cite withall. Moroner he wrote vnto all yf Iewes that were gone out of his realme in to Iewry because of the fredome, yf no officer, no ruluer ner shruee shulde come to their dores: and that all their londe which they had conquered, shulde be fre and not tributary: And that the Edomytes shulde geue ouer the citiies and vyllagies of the Iewes, which they had taken in: yee that they shulde yearly geue xx, taletes to buyldinge of the temple, vntill the tyme that it were fyshned: and to the daylie halowinge of the brent offeringes (as it is commanded) ten talentes yearly also: And \( \gamma \) all they which come from Babilon to buyld the cite, shulde have fre lybertie, they \( \tau \) their children, and all the prestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also, \( \tau \) commanded that the holy garmente shulde be geuen the, wherin they ministred: and wrote that commandementes shulde be geuen to the Leuites, vntill the daye, that the house were fynished and Ierusalem buylded vp: and commanded all that they watched the cite, shulde have their porcions and wages.

He gave ouer also all the vessell \( \gamma \) Cyrus had separated from Babilon: \( \tau \) all \( \gamma \) Cyrus had geuen in commandement, \( \gamma \) same charged he also, \( \gamma \) it shulde be done, \( \tau \) sent vnto Ierusalem. Now when this yonge man was gone forth, he turned his face towards Ierusalē, \( \tau \) prayed \( \gamma \) kinge of heauen, \( \tau \) sayde: Of \( \gamma \) cōmēth \( \gamma \) victory, of the cōmēth wyszdome \( \tau \) clearnesse, \( \tau \) I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou, which hast geuen me wyszdome: the wyll I praye, O LORDE, thou God of oure fathers.

And so he toke the letters, \( \tau \) wente vnto Babilon: And when he came there, he tolde this vnto all his brethren \( \gamma \) were at Babilo, \( \tau \) they prayed \( \gamma \) God of their fathers, \( \gamma \) he had geuen them refreszshinge \( \tau \) lybte to go vp, \( \tau \) to buyld Ierusalē \( \tau \) the temple (which is there called after the name of the LORDE) and they reioyzed with instrumentes \( \tau \) gladnesse, seuen dayes longe.

The v. Chapter.

AFTER this, were the prynciall me of all \( \gamma \) vyllages chosen in the trybes \( \tau \) kynreddes, that they shulde go vp with their wines and children, with their seruauntes and maydens, with all their catell \( \tau \) substauce. And Darius the kynge sent with them a thousande horsmen, to conveye them safely vnto Ierusalem: and their brethren were glad, playenge vpon instrumentes, and synginge.

And these are the names of the me, which wente vp out of the vyllages acordinge to the trybes. Of the prestes, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Aaron: Iesus the sonne of Iosedec, loachim the sonne of Zorobabel\( ^a \) the sonne of Salathiel (of the kynred of Daniūd, out of the kynred of Phares, of the trybe of Juda) which spake wonderfull thinges vnder Darius the kynge of Persia, in \( \gamma \) seconde yeare of his raigne in the first moneth of Nisan.

These also are they of Iewry, which came vp and turned Agayne vnto Ierusalem, out of the captuyte that Nabuchodonosor \( \gamma \) kynge of Babilon had brought vnto Babilon. And euery man sought his porcion agayne in Iewry, his cite, they that came with Zoro-babel, and with Iesus, Nehemia, Saraias, Raelaias, Elimeus, Emmanius, Mardocheus, Beelserus, Mechpsa, Rochor, Olorus, Emo-nias, one of their prynces.

The sons of the prestes that prayed God in the temple: The sons of Asaph, of whom there were an C. and xxvij. But the dore keepers were: The children of Esmonus: The children of Aser: The children of Amon: The children of Acuba, Topa: The children of Tobi: an C. and xxxix. in all.

The prestes that serued in the temple: The sons of Sel, the sons of Gaspia, the sons of Tobloc, the sons of Caria, the sons of Sub, the sons of Heliu, the sons of Labana, y sons of Armacha, y sons of Acub, the sons of Vha, the sons of Cetha, the sons of Aggab, the sons of Obay, the sons of Anani, the sons of Canna, y sons of Geddu, y sons of An, y sons of Radin, y sons of Desanon, the sons of Nechoba, the sons of Caseba, the sons of Goza, the sons of Ozul, the sons of Sinona, the sons of Atra, y sons of Hastem, y sons of Asiana, y sons of Manei, y sons of Nasisin, y sons of Accufa, y sons of Agista, y sons of Azui, y sons of Faunu, the sons of Phasalon, the sons of Meeda, the sons of Susa, the sons of Cared, y sons of Barcu, the sons of Sarea, y sons of Coesi, y sons of Nasit, y sons of Agista, the sons of Pedon: Salomon his sons, the sons of Asophot, the sons of Phazida, the sons of Celi, y sons of Dedon, the sons of Gaddahel, the sons of Zaphesus, y sons of Ag gia, the sons of Sacharet, y sons of Sabathè, the sons of Saroneth, y sons of Malasit, y sons of Ania, y sons of Susas, y sons of Addus, y sons of Suba, y sons of Eura, y sons of Rahotis, the sons of Phasphat, y sons of Malmon. All these ministred in the Sanctuary, y were seueranutes of Salomon: euen iiiij. C. and lxxxix.

These folowinge are they, y wete vp fro Chelmnellat Thelarsa (whose prynce were Carmelâ (C) Careth) y might not shewe forth their cities y kynredmes, how they were of Israel: The sons of Dalarus, y sons of Tubé, y sons of Nechodaicus. Of y prestes y executed y office of y prestode, y were not founde: The sons of Obia, y sons of Achisos, the sons of Addin, which maried one of y daughters of Phargeleu, y were named, after him. The writinge of y same kynred was sought in y register of their generacion, but it was not foude: and therefor were they forbidded to execute y office of y prestode. Vnto these sayde Nehemias and Astharas, y they shulde haue no porcion in y Sanctuary, tyll there rose vp an hie prest, y were well instructe in the playne cleares y truth. Of all Israel (besyde seruauntes y maydens) there were xlij. M. iiij. C. x xl. Now were there of seueranutes y maydens, viij. M. iiij. C. and xxxvj. Of synginge men were there iij. C. ixv. Foure hundreth x xxxv. Camels. Seuen thousande x xxxvj. horses. Two hundreth thousande x xlv. Mooles. Fyue thousande and xxxx. Asses.

Their heades also and the rulers in the trybes, when they came to Jerusalem, y wolde buyyle y sett vp y tèple of God againe in his place, they gane (after their abylite) vnto the tèple, to y treasure y to y seruyce of the Sanctuary, xij. M. poundes of golde, v. thousande of syluer, y an hundreth prestes garmeth. And so dwelt the prestes y the Leuites, y the people y wente out to Ierusale (y the crowne there aboute, the syngers also y the porters, euyry one of Israel in his owene lande.

So when the seuenthe moneth came, and when the childre of Israel were euer man at his busines, they came all with one coesent in to the courte, which was before y east dore. And there stode Iesua the sonne of Iosedee and his brethren y prestes, y Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his brethren, settinge vp an aultar, to offer brent sacrifices vpon it, as it is written in y lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other countrees, and the Heithen out of all londes set vp the aultur in his place, and offered sacrifices brent offeruynges vnto the LORDE in the mornynge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, as it is commanded in the lawe.
And daylie offred they as acوردinge was, and made the sacrifices appoynted, the offeringes also of the Sabbathes and of the new Moones, and all holy feastes. "And all they that vowed offerynes vnto the LORDE, beganne at the new Moone of y seueth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the LORDE was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto the Masons and Carpenters, mone, meate y drynke with carefulnesse. Vnto them of Sydon also and Tyre they gaue cartes, y they shulde cary Cedre trees from Libanus to be iestes and beames, and that they shulde make shippes in the hauen of Ioppa, acординge as it was appoynted and ordeyned, by Cyrus kyng of the Persians.

And in the seconde yeare they came in to the temple of God at Ierusalem. In the seconde moneth beganne Zorobabel4 the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and their brethren the preste and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto Ierusalem out of the captiuyte of Babilon, a layed the foundation of the temple, in the new Moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yeare y they were come in to Ierwry and Ierusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (that were aboue xx. yeare olde) vnto the servyce of the LORDE: so Iesua and his sonnes and his brethren all the Leuites stode together, and perfourmed the lawe y ordinaunce in the house of the LORDE.

And the preste stode and had their gaʁmentes y trompettes, y the Leuites, the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbals, geynyge thankes, and prayses vnto the LORDE, acordinge as Dauid the kyng of Israel had ordeyned." And the songe that they dyd syngge vnto the LORDE, was after this maner: O syngge vnto the LORDE,4 for he is gracious, and his goodnes vpston Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trompettes, and syngge with loude voyce, praysynge the LORDE together in the rearinge vp of the house of the LORDE. There came also from amonge the prestes and Leuites the rulers and elders, acordinge to the trybes and kynreds (such as had sene the house afore) to the buyldinge of this temple with great crye and greate mournyngye, many also with trompettes and greate foye: In so moch, that the trompettes might not wel be herde for the wepynge and mournyngye. For the comon people blew goodly vpɔ the trompettes.

Then came the enemies of the trybes of Iuda and Ben Iamin, to knowe what that trompettye and noyse of shawmes might be. And they perceaued y it was they which were come agayne out of captiuyte, y wolde buylde the temple a new vnto the LORDE God of Israel. So they wente to Zorobabel and Iesua and to the rulers of the vyllages, y sayde vnto them: Shall we buylde with you also? for we like wyse haue herde youre LORDE, y we walke after the same maner, from the daves of Aszbazareth the kinge of Assiria, which brought vs this hither. Then Zorobabel and Iesua and the rulers of the villages of Israel sayde vnto them: It is not mete, that ye shulde buylde the temple of oure God with vs: we oure selues alone wil buylde vnto the LORDE, like as Cyrus3 the kyng of the Persians hath commaundad vs.

But the Heithen in the londe layed them selues against those that were in Iewry, helde vp the buyldinge from them, layed wayte vpɔ them preuely, stopped soch as brought any thinge to them, forbad them to buylde, y lyndered those that made the passage, that the buyldinge shulde not be fynished: y this contynued so longe as kyng Cyrus lyued: y so they put of the buyldinge for the space of two yeare, vntill y raigne of kyng Darius.

The vi. Chapter.

NOT with stondinge, in the seconde yeare a of the raigne of Darius,5 Aggeus 5 Zachary the sonne of Addo prophecied vpon them in Iewry and Ierusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec stode vp,6 and beganne to buylde the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, when the prophetes of the LORDE helped them.

At the same tyme came Sysennes the vnder shreue in Syria and Phenices, with the landlordes and his companions, and sayde vnto them: Who hath byddyn y commaundad you to buylde the house? to make the rofe and all other thinges agayne? And who are the workemen, that buylde them? Neuer-

The elders of the Jews had such grace of the LORD, that they wold not be lett (though they were prouoked thereto) but buylded on still, vntill the tyme that kyng Darius were certified therof, and an answer receaued from him. The letter that these men sent vnto kyng Darius, was after this maner:

Syennes the vnder shreue in Syria and Phenices, and the land lorde with their cõpaniós, which are head rulers in Syria and Phenices, sende their salutation vnto Darius the kyng. We certifie oure lorde the kyngge, that we came in to the londe of Iewry, dyd, wente to Jerusalem: where we founde them buyldeinge the greate house of God and the teple, with greate costly fre stone and with goodly tymbre for the wallses: yee they make greate haist with the worke, helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, and with greate diligence worship is it made. Then axe we the elders, who had commaunded them to make vp the house and the buyldinge: and this we dyd, to intc that we might certify the perfectly, and wynte vnto the, the names of those were rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs this answere: we are the seruantes of the LORDE, which made heauen and earth: as for this house, it hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by the greate and mightie kyngge of Israel. But whan oure fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, synned agaynst the God of Israel, he gaue the ouer in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kyngge of Babylone the kyngge of the Caldees, which brake downe the house and brët it, and carried awaie the people presoners vnto Babylone.

Neuertheles, in the first yeaare that kyngge Cyrus reigned at Babylone, Cyrus the kyngge wrote and commaunded to buylde vp this house agaynse, and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonosor caried awaie from Jerusalem vnto Babylone, and appropriated vnto his owne temple: those brought Cyrus forth agaynse, and deluyered them to Zorobabel to Šalmanasar the vndershreue, commaundyme of Babylone, they shulde bryngge those same ornamentes agaynse to Jerusalem in to the teple, to begynne from the tyme forth, to buylde the teple agaynse in his owne place. Šalmanasar layed the foundation of the LORDES house at Jerusalem, and euer sence hauie they buylded, yet is it not ended. And therfore (O kyngge) if thou thinkest it good, let it be sought in the Lybraries rolles of kyngge Cyrus: if it be founde the, that it is done with the councell and cõsent of kyngge Cyrus, and yf oure lorde kyngge be so mynded, let him wynte vnto vs therof.

Then commaunded kyngge Darius, to seke in the Lybraries: and so at Egbaðani in a little cite in Media there was founde soch a wyntinge: In the first yeaare of the raigne of Cyrus, the same kyngge Cyrus commaunded, the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agaynse (odoures to be made there contynuallly vnto the LORDE) whose heyth shalbe ten cubites, breith lx. cubites square with thre hewen stones, with a loft of tymbre of the same coutrie, yee with a new loft, the expenses therof to be euene of the kyngge Cyrus. And the ornamëtes of golde, the kyngge Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem, shalbe set agaynse in the temple at Jerusalem, where they were afoare. Syennes also the vnder shreue in Syria and Phenices, prynees and their companions, and the other prynees and head rulers in Syria and Phenices, shall not medle ner hauie anye thinges to do with that place.

I Cyrus have commaunded also, that they shal buyld the house of the LORDE whole vp: haue ordeyned them, to helpe those of the be come out of captiuyte, till the house of the LORDE be finished: out of the try-bute and taxinge that is yearly raysed vp in Syria and Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe, to the offerynge of the LORDE: and the same to be delyueryed vnto Zorobabel the officer: that he therwithall maye ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes, corne, salt, wyne and oyle, and that contynuallly euery yeaare: after the expences which the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shew to be made daylie: this shalbe geuen vnto them without delaye, that they maye offer sacrifices daylie to the hyest God, for the kyngge and for his seruantes, and to praye for their lyues. Let it be proclaimed also on euery syde, that who so euer breaketh or despyseth this commaundement of the kyngge, shalbe hanged vpon a galow (made of his owne good) all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto \( \ddagger \) kyng. The LORDE therefore (whose name is there called vp) rote out and destroye all \( \ddagger \) kynges and people, that vnder take by violence to hynder the same, or to deale vncerteously with the house of the LORDE at Ie-rusalem. I Darius the kynge haue ordyned, that these thinges shalbe done with all diligence.

The viij. Chapter.

A THEN Sysennes \( \ddagger \) vndershreue in Ce-losyria and Phenices, and the other landlourdes with their companys, obeyed the thinges that kyng Darius had or- dred, were diligent in the holy workes, \( \ddagger \) were felow helpers with the olde rulers of the Iewes. And so the worke of the Sanctuary wente forth and prospered, when Aggeus and Zachi-charie prophesied. And they perforned all thinges thorow the commandement of the LORDE God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxers synges kynges of Persia.

And thus was oure house finished, vnto the xxiiij. daye of the moneth Addar in \( \ddagger \) vy.
year of kyng Darius. And the children of Israel the prestes \( \ddagger \) the Leuites, \( \ddagger \) the other that were come out of captiuyte, \( \ddagger \) such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd acordinge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And in the dedication of the temple they offred an hundredth oxen, an C. rammes, iiiij. C. lambes, \( \ddagger \) xij. goates for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after \( \ddagger \) nombre of the trybes of Israel. The prestes also \( \ddagger \) the Leuites stode arayed in the prestly garnettes, after \( \ddagger \) trybes, ouer all \( \ddagger \) workes of the LORDE God of Israel, acordinge to \( \ddagger \) boke of Moses, and the porters by all the dores.

B And the children of Israel (with those \( \ddagger \) were come out of captiuyte) helde the Passe-oyer the xiiij. daye of the first moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that came out of captiuyte, were not all sanctified together: but the Leuites were all sanctified together. And so all they that came out of captiuyte, kyld the easter lambe, for their brethr\( \ddagger \), for the prestes \( \ddagger \) for them selves. And the childre of Israel \( \ddagger \) came out of captiuyte, \( \ddagger \) escaped fro all \( \ddagger \) abominations of the Heith\( \ddagger \), sought the LORDE, and kepte the feast of vnleuended bred \( \ddagger \) daies longe, eatinge \( \ddagger \) drynkynge \( \ddagger \) were mery before the LORDE: \( \ddagger \) the LORDE had turned the deuyce of the kyng of Assiria, \( \ddagger \) comforted their handes to the workes of \( \ddagger \) LORDE

God of Israel.

The viij. Chapter.

AND after him, when Artaxerses the kyng of \( \ddagger \) Persi\( \ddagger \)s raigned,\( ^{\ddagger} \) there were vnto him Eszdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helech\( \ddagger \), \( \ddagger \) sonne of Sall\( \ddagger \), the sonne of Sadoc, \( \ddagger \) sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, \( \ddagger \) sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Bocceus, \( \ddagger \) sonne of Abisau, \( \ddagger \) sonne of Phineas, \( \ddagger \) sonne of Eleazar, \( \ddagger \) sonne of Aaron \( \ddagger \) first prest. This Eszdras wote vp from Babilou (for he had good vnderstandinge in \( \ddagger \) lawe of Moses, \( \ddagger \) was gen\( \ddagger \) of the LORDE God of Israel, to be taught \( \ddagger \) done in dede.) And \( \ddagger \) kyng fauoured him, \( \ddagger \) dyd hym greate worshippe and honoure, after all his desyres. There wete vp with him also certayne of \( \ddagger \) children of Israel, of the prestes, of \( \ddagger \) Leuites, of the syngers, porters, and mynisters of \( \ddagger \) temple at Ierusalem.

In the viij. yeare of the raigne of kyng Artaxerses, in the v. moneth, \( \ddagger \) is in the viij.
year of the raigne, they wete from Babilon in the newmoone of the v. moneth, \( \ddagger \) came the hye waye to Ierusale after his commandement, like as the LORDE had prospered their iourney. For in these Eszdras gat greate instruction, \( \ddagger \) he shulde leue none of \( \ddagger \) thinges behynde, which were in \( \ddagger \) lawe \( \ddagger \) comandementes of God. And he taught whole Israel all righteousnes \( \ddagger \) judgment.

Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerses, \( \ddagger \) deluyered \( \ddagger \) wrytinges (\( \ddagger \) were come fr\( \ddagger \) Artaxerses the kyng) to Eszdras the prest \( \ddagger \) reder of the lawe of the LORDE: And this is \( \ddagger \) copye of \( \ddagger \) letter: Kyng Artaxerses sendeth his greetinge vnto Eszdras the prest \( \ddagger \) reder of the lawe of \( \ddagger \) LORDE: Of frendshipe \( \ddagger \) good will I haue ordeyned and charged, \( \ddagger \) there be eny of the Iewes, of \( \ddagger \) prestes \( \ddagger \) Leuites in my realme, which de-syreth \( \ddagger \) is cont\( \ddagger \) to go with the vnto Ierusale, \( \ddagger \) he maye do it. Therfore \( \ddagger \) eny be mynded to beare the \( \ddagger \) company, let the come together, \( \ddagger \) go with the (like as I am cont\( \ddagger \) my vij. frendes my co\( \ddagger \)celers:) to se what they do at Ierusale \( \ddagger \) in Iewry, \( \ddagger \) kepe \( \ddagger \) thinges acord-inge as thou hast in thy lawe of the LORDE:

3 to bringe the giftes vnto God the LORDE:
of Israel, y I y my frendes have promised to Jerusalem, and all the syluer, golde, and comme, after Chap. 5.
Of Blessed together Eliphalam Syngers, and measures, golde to the him: soeuer after the LORDES temple at Jerusalem:
Yee that the same syluer, and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe and goates, and other that beloage to these thinges:
and that they maye offer sacrifices vnto the LORDE, vpon the aultre of their LORDE, which is at Jerusalem.

And what so euer thou thy brether wyly
do with the syluer and golde, do after thy mynde, and after the commandement of the LORDE
thy God: like wyse with all the holy vessels, ye are geue the for the servyce of the house of the LORDE thy God: all other thinges what soeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the temple, shall be geue the of the kynges treasure: loke what thou with thy brether wilt do with the golde and syluer, that do after thy wil of the LORDE. And I kynges Artaxerses haue commandeth the keepers of ytreasures in Syria and Phenices, that soeuer Eszdras the pretst and reder of the lawe of the LORDE doth wryte, it shalbe geuen him: thyll an C. talentes of syluer, and of golde in lyke maner: Of corne also an C.
measures, and thyll an hundreth vessels of wyne,
and other plenteous thinges without nombre.
Let all thinges be done after the lawe of thy yhyest God, that the wrath of God arynse not in the realme of the kyng, and of his sonnes.
I commande you also, that ye require no
taxinge nor tribute of the pretstes, Leuites, syngers, and mynisters of the temple, ner of the wryters: and that no man haue auctorite to medle any thinge against them. As for the (O Eszdras) set thu judges and arbitrers
in the whole lande of Syria and Phenices, after the wyssdome of God: and lerne all such as are ignoraunt in the lawe of God thy LORDE, and let all them that offende aynast the lawe, be punyshed: whether it be with death, with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banished.

Then sayde Eszdras thy wryter: Blessed be y God of oure fathers, that hath geuen so good a mynde and wyll in to the hert of the kyng, to magnifie his house y is at Ieru-salem, and hath made me to be accepted in the sight of kyng, of his counsell, of his frendes and of his nobles. And so I was sted-fast in my mynde, acordingly as the LORDE my God helped me, and I chose out men of Israel, to go vp with me. And these are the heads (after their kynredes of houses of their fatheres) that wente vp with me from Babilon, out of the kyngdome of Artaxerses: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersoniues. Of y sonnes of Siermarith, Amenues. Of the sonnes of Daud, Accus, the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zachary: and with him there turned agayne an hundreth and fiftie men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabilon, Zaraei, and with him ij. C. and
l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Ichonias Zecholi, and with him ij. C. and l. men. Of the sonnes of Salamaasias, Gotholie, and lxx.
with him. Of the sonnes of Zaphacia, Zarias Miheli, and with him lxxx. Of the sonnes of Iob, Abdias Ieheli, and with him ij. C.
and xij. men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimo the sonne of Josaphia, and with him an
C. and lx. men. Of the sonnes of Beer, Zachary Bebei, and with him ij. C. and vij.
men. Of the sonnes of Esead, Iohnnes Ezechan, and with him Cx. men. Of the sonnes of Adonic of those that were the last, and these are their names: Eliphalam y
sonne of Gebel and Semeias, with him lxx.
men. All these called I togethery by the water Thia, where we pitched oure tentes
three dayes, and there I mustered them.

As for the sonnes of the pretstes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I unto Eleazar, a Eccelom, and Masman, a Malobam, and Enathan, and Samea, and Ioribimathan, Eunagan, Zachary, Mosollamu
(these were the leders and men of experience)
y I sent them worde, that they shulde come unto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, commanded them that they shulde speake unto Loddeus and to his brethren a to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs soch me, as might execute the pretstes office in the house of the LORDE ofoure God. And with the mightie hāde of oure LORDE God, they brought vnto vs me of good experience, from amōge the sonnes of Moolius, the sonne of Leui, y sonne of Israel,
Sebebeiam a the sonnes a his brether Aszbin

*1 Esd. 8. a.

*1 Esd. 8. b.
Then commanded I a fastynge vnto ye yonge men before the LORDE, I might desyre of him a prosperous journey a good waye for vs, yee for vs, for our children and for the catell, because of the layenges awayte: I durst not require of the kynge men of horse for fote, to conveye vs safely agaynst oure enemies, for we had sayde vnto the kyngge, that the power of the LORDE oure God shulde be with them, that seke him with their whole hert. And therfore we besought God our LORDE earnestly because of these things, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and herd oure prayer. And I separted from amonge ye rulers of the people, ye prestes of ye temple xij. men, ye Sebeia ye Asania, ye ten men of the kynge brethren with them. And I weied the ye golde ye syluer ye all the prestly ornamentes of the house of oure God, which the kyngge his couceell, his prynces ye whole Israel had geue. And when I had weyed it, I gaue th' an Cl. taletes in syluer, an C. talentes of syluer vessell, an C. talentes of golde, ye golde vessell seuë tyymes twente, and vessels of other metal (yeu for good metal) xij. glisteringe as the golde, ye saide vnto th' ye are also holy vnto the LORDE, ye the vessells are holy, ye golde ye the syluer ye is promised vnto the LORDE the God of oure fathers. Be diligent now ye kepe it, vntill the tyme ye ye delieuer it to the rulers of the people, to ye prestes, to the Leuites ye to ye pryncipall me of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem, ye in the chambre of the house of oure God.

So ye prestes ye the Leuites which receaued of me the golde, ye the syluer ye the vessell, brought it to Ierusalam in to the telle of the LORDE. And from Thia we brake vp the xij. daye of the first moneth, tyll we came to Ierusalam. And when the third daye was past, the weyed golde ye syluer was deliuered in ye house of the LORDE the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Ior the prest, ye with him was Eleazar ye sonne of Phineas, and with the were Iosabudus ye sonne of Iesnet, Medias ye the sonne of Banus, ye certayne of the Leuites to the nombre ye to the waigethe: ye the waigethe of them was wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuyte, they offered sacrifice vnto the LORDE the God of Israel: euë xij. oxen for all Israel, lxxvij. rammes, lxxij. shepe, xij. goates for synte, xij. kyne for a thank-offeringe, all to the sacrifice of the LORDE. And ye kynges cõmission deliuered they vnto ye stewardest and debytes of the kyngge, and to the vndershreues in Celosyria and Phenices.

'Now whan these things were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generation of Israel, the prynces, ye prestes and Leuites, the strange people and indwellers of the londe, haue not put away the their vnclemnesse, from the Cananites, Hethites, Pheresites, from the Moabies, Egiptiçians ye Edomites. For both they and their sonnes haue mengled them selues with the daughters of them, ye the holy seide is mixte with the outlandish Heithen, ye sens the begynynge of their raigne haue the rulers and heades bene partakers of their wickednesse.

As soone as I had herd these things, immediately I rent my holy garmente, and pulled out ye hayre of my heade ye my beard, ye sat me downe soroufull ye heuy. So all they that were moued thorow the word of the God of Israel, came vnto me: and I sat still full of heines vntill the euencynge sacrifice. Then stode I vp fro fastinge, haunge rente clothes ye the holy garnet, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my hâdes vnto ye LORDE, ye sayde: O LORDE, I am confounded ye ashamed before thy face, for oure synnes are become many vpon oure heads, ye oure wickednesse are exalted vnto the heauë: for sens ye tyme of oure fathers we are in greate sinne vnto this daye. And for the synnes of vs ye oure fathers, we with oure brethren ye with oure prestes haue bene deliuered vnto the kings of the earth, in to the sword, ye in to captiuyte, ye became a spoyle with confucion ye shame vnto this daie. And now O LORDE God, how greate is the mercy ye we have gottë of the? in ye thou hast left vs a rote ye a name in the place of thy Sanctuary, to discouer oure light in the house of ¶ LORDE oure God, ¶ ye geue vs meate at all tymes of our ministracion. And when we were in captiuyte, we were not forsaken of the LORDE oure God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious ¶ fauourable vnto vs, so ¶ ye they gaue vs pytayles ¶ meate, yec ¶ leue to buylde vp the tæple of oure LORDE God agayne, to reypare the waisted places of Sion, and to dwell in Iewry ¶ Jerusalem. And now O LORDE, what shall we saye, haunyege all these thinges in possession? For we haue broken thy co-daunementes, whic hou guest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruauntes the prophets, sayenge: The londe ¶ ye go vnto, ¶ ye is geuen you for an heretage to haue in possessi on, is defyled with the vnclennes ¶ fylthynes of the Heithen, ¶ with their abhominacion haue they pouluted it al together. Therfore shall ye not ioyne* youre daughters vnto their sonnes, nor mary youre sonnes vnto their daughters: Morouer, ye shall never seke to make peace with them, ¶ ye ye maye increase ¶ eate the best in the lande, ¶ ye ye maye de-uyde ¶ inheritaunce of the londe vnto youre children for euermore. As for the thinge ¶ now happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all for oure wicked workes and greate synnes. yet hast thou geuen vs soch a rote, ¶ ye we are come againe in to oure owne londe: and we are so wicked, ¶ we we haue brokè thy statutes ¶ co-maunementes agayne, ¶ mengled oure selues with the vnclenes of the outlandish Heithen. O LORDE, art thou angrie with vs? wilt thou rote vs cleane out? ¶ ye oure rote ¶ name remayne nomore? O LORDE God of Israel, thou art true, for oure rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And beholde, now are we before ¶ in our synnes, now can we not stonde before the in them.

And when Eszdras with this prayer had knowleged the synne, weeping, ¶ lyège flatt vpon the grounde before the tæple, there gathered vnto him from Jerusalem a greate multitude of men ¶ wemen, of yonge men ¶ maydens, for there was a very wepteinge and mournynge in the cógregacion. So whan Iechonias the sonne Ieheli of the children of Israel cried, he sayde vnto Eszdras: we haue synned agaynst the LORDE, because we haue maried outlandish women of the Heithè. Now art thou ouer all Israel.

We wil sweare an ooth therfore vnto ¶ LORDE, ¶ we wel put awaye all oure wyues which we haue take of the Heithè, with their childre: like as it is appoynted the by oure fore elders. Stonde vp then, open thou it and declare it playnyly vnto vs acordighe to the lawe of ¶ LORDE: for the matter be-longeth vnto ¶ we wil helpe the, quyte thy self manly. So Eszdras arose, and toke an ooth of the rulers of ¶ prestes ¶ of ¶ Leuites ¶ of all Israel, to do after these thinges, and they sware.

THEN Eszdras stode vp from the courte of the tæple without, ¶ wente in to the chaber of Ionathas the sonne of Nasabus, ¶ remayned there, ¶ ate no meate ner dronke, for the multitude of the wickednes of the people. And there was made a proclama-cion in all Iewry ¶ at Jerusalem, for all soch as were gathered at Jerusalem out of capita-tuyte, ¶ who so euuer came not to Jerusalem with in two or thre days (acordighe to the judgment of the olde Lordes of councell) his goodes shulde be taken from him, ¶ he excluded from the cógregacion of the capita-tuyte. And in three days were all they of the trybe of Juda ¶ Ben Iamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the xx. daye of ¶ ix. moneth. And ¶ whole multitude sat trublinge in the courte of the temple, for it was wynter. So Eszdras arose vp, ¶ sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrighteously, in that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to maria-ghe, ¶ so to increase the synnes of Israel. And now knowlege the same, ¶ geue prasse vnto the LORDE God of our fathers, ¶ per-foure his wil, departinge from the Heithen of the londe, ¶ from the outlandish wyues. Then cried the whole multitude with loude voyce, ¶ sayde: like as thou hast spoke, ¶ so wil we do: But for so mach as the people are many, ¶ ¶ wynter here, we maie not stode without ¶ house: agayne, this werke is not a thinge, ¶ ¶ can be finished in a daye or two, for we be many ¶ ¶ haue synned in these thinges: Ordene therfore, ¶ the rulers of the multitude and all they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues, the prestes also and judges of euer place, maye stonde in the tyme appoynted. tyll they lowse vp the wrath of the LORDE in this busynes.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Ezelei, ε Ozias and Thecam recaeued y charge of this matter, ε Bozoramus, ε Leius and Sabatheus helped the therto. After this, all they stode vp y came out of captitiye. And Esdras the presc chose vnto him the pryncipall men from amongst the fathers according to their names, ε in the new moone of the tenth moneth they sat together, to examen this matter. And so the matter was a determynge (concernynge the men y had outlandish wyues) vntill the new moone of the first moneth. And of the pressthe y had mixte the selues with outlandish wyues, there were fouende: Of the sonnes of Iesu the sonne of Iosedec ε his brethren, Mazeas, Eleazer, Ioribus ε Ioadeus, which offered them selues to put awaye their wyues, ε to offere a ramme for their ignorance. And of the sonnes of Gemmcri, Masseas, ε Esses ε Ieelech Azarrias. Of y sonnes of Fosera, Limosias, Hismaen, Nathanea, Isses, Ieddas, ε Talsas. And of the Leuites, Iosadbus, Seneis and Coldis, Caletas, Pactoes, Colnas and Eliones. Of the syngers of the Sacuary, Eliarib, Zackarus. Of the porters, Sallumus ε Tolbanes. And of Israel, of the children of Foro, Osi ε Remias, ε Geddis, ε Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Ieemebias ε Bannas. And of the childder of Iolaman, Chaniais, Zachary, Ietzrelus, Ioddus, Erimoth ε Elias. And of y sonnes of Iathoim, Eliadas, Liasamus, ε Zochias, Larimoth, Sabdisk ε Tebedias. And of y sonnes of Zebes, Iohanis Amanias, Zabdis, ε Emeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olamus, McLhuchus, Ieddas, Iasub, Asabus ε Ierimon. And of y sonnes of Addin, Naatus ε Moosias ε Caleus ε Raanas Maasus, Mathathias, Besel, Bannus, and Manasses.

And of the sonnes of Naue, Nones, Afeas, Melchias, Sameas, Simo, Ben Iainam, Malchus ε Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Carianeus, Mathathias, Bannus, Elphilachal, Manasses, Semelis. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremym, Moodias, Abrams, Iohel, Baneas, Peliass, Iona, Marinuth, Elisesib, Mathaneus, Eliais, Orizas, Dielus, Semelins, Zambris ε Josep. Of y sonnes of Nebues, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadas, Zecheda, Sedmi, Iesseus, ε Baneas. All these had také outlardish wemen to mariage, ε they put the awaye with their childder.

The pressthe ε Leuites, ε all they y were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem ε thorow out all y londe, in the new moone of the seventh moneth, ε the childder of Israel were in their dwyllynge. And y whole multydtude came together vpon y floore at y east syde of the holy porte of y temple. And they spake vnto Esdras ε hie prest ε reder, ε y wolde brynge y lawe of Moses, which was geue of ε LORDE God of Israel. So Esdras the hie prest brought the lawe vnto the whole multydtude, to man and woman, ε to all pressthe, ε y they might heare the lawe, in the new moone of the seventh moneth. And he red in ε floore ε y is before ε holy porte of ε temple, from the mornyng early vntill the evynynge, before men ε wemen. And they applied their mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Esdras the prest ε reder of ε lawe stode vp vpon a scaffolde of wodd, which was made therfore: ε vpon his right hande there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Vrias, Ozechias, ε Bal-samus: vpon his lefte haide stode Faldeus, Misael, Malachias, Abusbus, Sabus, Naba-dias, ε Zachary. Then toke Esdras ε boke before the whole multydtude, for he was ε pryncipall and had in most honoure of ε all. And whan he had red out ε lawe, they stode all straight vp vpon their fete. So Esdras prayed the LORDE the most hye God, the Allmightie God of hoostes. And all ε people answered, Amen: ε helde vp their haides, fell downe flat vpon the earth, ε prayed ε LORDE: Jesus, Benezas, Sarebias, Iaddimus, Acembus, Sabbathes, Calithes, Azarias, Ioradus, Ananias, ε Phlias the Leuites which taught the lawe of the LORDE, ε red the lawe of the LORDE in the cogregacion, ε every man sett those before ε vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atharathus vnto Esdras the hye prest ε reder, ε to the Leuites ε they taunght the multydtude, sayenge: This daye is holy vnto the LORDE: ε all they ε had herde the lawe, wepte. So Esdras sayde: ε Departe youre waye then, ε eate the best, ε drynke the swetest, ε sende giftes vnto them ε haue nothinge: for this daye is holy vnto the LORDE, and be not ye sory. Then wente they their waye euerychone, ate and dronke and were mery, y sent rewardes vnto the y had nothinge, y they also might eate with gladnesse: for they were exceedingly reioysed, thorow the wordes that were red unto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the feast, acordinge to the couenaunt of lORDE God of Israel.

The first Chapter.

The second boke of the prophet Esdralas:

(Thy sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, thy sonne of Helchia, thy sonne of Sallû, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amerias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Sarahiash, the sonne of Vzi, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the trybe of Leui) which was presoner in the lande of the Meedes, in the raigne of Artaxerses kynge of Persia.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: "Go thy waye, shew my people their synfull dedes, their children their wickednesse, which they haue done against me, that they maye tell their children childe the same: for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they have forgotten me, they have offered vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he, that brought them out of the lande of Egypte, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, despysed my counsell. Pull thou out then the hayre of thy heade, and cast all euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernynge, nor toure. How longe shal I forbeare them, vnto whom I haue done so muche good? Many kynges haue I destroyed for their sakes: Pharaoh with his seruantes and all his power haue I smyttyned downe and slayne: All synnaces haue I destroyed and rote out before them, and in east haue I brought two landes and people to naught, euyn Tyre and Sydon, and haue slayne all their enemies. Speake thou therefore vnto them, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I led you thorow the see, and haue geuen you sure stretes sence the begynnynge. I gaue you Moses to be your captayne, and Aaron to be the prest: I gaue you light in a piler of fyre, a greate woders haue I done amoge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the allmightie LORDE: I gaue ye quales to eate, and tentes for youre succoure: Neuertheles ye murmure, and ascrybed not ye victory of youre enemies vnto my name: yee this same daie do ye yet murmoure. Where are the benefits, that I haue done for you? Whan ye were hongrie in the wildernes, dyd ye not criue vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs in to this wildernes, to kill vs? It had bene better for vs, to haue serued ye Egipcians, then to dye in this wildernesse. The had I pitie vpon youre mourninges, and gaue you Manna to eate. Ye ate angels fooe. Wha ye were thyrstie, dyd not I hew ye hardstone, caused water ynough to floue thereout? For the heate, I couered you with yea leaues of the trees. A good pleasant fayt londe gaue I you: I cast out the Cananites, the Pheresites and Philistynes before you. What shal I do more for you, saith the LORDE?

Thus sayeth the Allmightie LORDE: Whan ye were in the wildernes, in the water of the Amorites, beyng a thyrst glasphemyne my name, I gaue you not fyre for youre glasphemies, but cast a tre in to yea water, and made the ryuer swete. What shal I do vnto the, O Iacob? Thou Iuda woldest not obeye me. I wil turne me to another people, vnto those will I geue my name, that they maye kepe my statutes. Seinge ye haue forsaken me, I wil forsake you also. Whan ye desyre me to be gracious vnto you, I shal haue no mercy vpon you. Whan ye call vpome me, I wil not heare you. For ye haue defyled youre hâdes with bloude, and youre fete are swift to commytt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsaken me (in a maner) but youre owne selues, sayeth the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the Allmightie LORDE: I haue I not prayed you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her daughters, and as a norses hir yonge babes, that ye wolde he my people, and I shulde be youre God: that ye wolde be my children, and I shulde be youre owne father? I gathered you together, as an henne gathereth hir chekens vnder hir wynges. But now what shal I do vnto you? I shal cast you out fro my face. Whan ye offer vnto me, I shal turne my face from you: for your solemn feast dayes, youre new moones and youre circumcisiones haue I forsaken. I sent vnto you my seruaunte the prophetes, whom ye haue taken and slayne, and torne their bodies in peces, whose bloude I wyll require of youre handes, sayeth the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the Allmightie LORDE: youre house must be desolate. I wil cast you out as the wynde doth y strawe: youre children shal not be fruteful, for they haue despysed my commaundement, and done y thinge y is euell before me. Youre houses wil I geue vnto a people y shal come, and they y neuer herd me, shal beleue in me: they vnto whos I neuer shewed token, shal do the thinge y I commaunde the. They haue sene no prophetes, yet shal they call their synnes to remembrance, and knowle the. I reporte me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to come, whose children reioyse in gladnes: though they haue not sene me with bodely eyes, yet in sprete they beleue the thinges that I saye. And now brother, beholde what greate worshippe, and se y people that commeth from the east, vnto whom I wyll geue the dukedome of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, of Osea, Amos, and Micheas, of Joel, Abdy, Ionas, Naum and Abacuc, of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachery and Malachy, which is called also an angel (or messenger) of the LORDE.

Thus sayeth the LORDE: I brought this people out of bondage, I gaue the my commaundementes by my seruauntes y prophetes, whom they wolde not heare, but despysed my counsels. The mother that bare them, saye vnto them: Go youre wyse children, for I am a wyddow y forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse, but with sorrow and heuynes haue I lost you: for ye haue sune before the LORDE youre God, and done y thinges that is euell before him. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wyddow and forsaken: go youre wyse (o my children) and axe mercy of the LORDE. As for me O father, I call vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these childre, which wolde not kepe my couenaunte: y thou bryngge them to cofucion, and their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let their names be scatered abrode amonge the Heithen, let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thought scorn of my couenaunt.

Wo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest the vnrighhteous by the. Thou wicked people, remembre what I dyd vnto Sodom and Gomorre, whose land is turned to pitch and ashes. Euen so also wyll I do vnto all them, that heare me not, sayeth the Allmighty LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto Esydras: Tell my people, y I will geue them the kyngdome of Ierusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glory also wyll I take vnto me, and geue them the euerlastynge tabernacles, which I had prepared for those.

The tre of life shalbe vnto them a sweate smellynge oynment: they shal nether laboure ner be weery. Go ye youre wyse, y ye shall receaue it. Praye for youre selues a few dayes, that they maye dwell therin. Now is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watch. Take heauë and earth to wytnesse, for I haue broken the euell in peces, and created the good, for I lyue sayeth y LORDE. Mother embrace thy children, and brynge them vp with gladnes: make their fete as fast as a pilier, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORDE.

And those that be deed wyll I rayse vp agayne from their places, and brynge them out of y graues, for I haue knowne my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the children, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORDE. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruauntes Esay and Ieremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctified y prepared for the, xiij. trees with dyuerse frutes, and as many welles flowinge with mylek and hony, y seuen mountaynes, wheryp there growe roses and lilies, wherin I wyll fyll my children with ioye. Execute justice for the wyddowe, be judge for the fatherlesse: geue to y poore: defende the cofortlesse: clothe the naked: heale the wounded and sick: laugh not a lame man to scorne; defende the crepell, and let the blinde come in to y sight of my clearnes. Kepe the olde y younge within thy walles: where so euer thou fyndest the dead, tokè them, and brynge them, and I shal geue the the first place in my resureccion. Holde styll (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quyetes is come. Fede thy children O thou good norsse, stablish their fete: As for the seruauntes whom I haue geuen the, there shal not one of them perish, for I wyl seke the from thy nombre, vexe not thy self.

For whan the daye of trouble and heuynes commeth, other shal wepe and be sorowfull, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous. The Heithen shalbe gelous, but they shalbe able to do nothinge agaynst the, sayeth the LORDE. My handes shal couer the, so that thy children shal not se the fyre euerlastinge. Be joyfull O thou mother with thy childre, for I wyll deluyer the, sayeth the LORDE. Remembr e thy deed childre, for I shall brynge them out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull, sayeth the LORDE Almightie.

Embrace thy childre, vntyll I come and shew mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer, and my grace shal not fayle. I Esdras receauned a charge of the LORDE vpon the mount Oreb, that I shulde go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto the, they set me at naught, and despyed the commaundement of the LORDE. And therfore I saye vnto you O ye Heithen, that heare and vnderstonde: Loke for youre shepherde, he shal geue you euerlastinge rest: for he is naye at hande, that shal come in the ende of the worlde. Be ready to the rewarde of the kyngdome, for the euerlastinge light shall shyne vpon you for euermore. Fie the shadowe of this worlde, receaue the joyfulnes of youre glory. I testifie my sauioure openly: O receaue the gift y is gvene you, and be glad, geuyng heauenly kyngdome. Aryste vp, and stonde fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feast of the LORDE, which are departed from the shadowe of the worlde, and hane receauned glorious garmetes of the LORDE. Take thy nombre O Sion, and shutt vp thy purifed, which hane fulfilled the lawe of the LORDE. The nombre of thy children whom thou longedest for, is fulfilled: besoke the power of the LORDE, that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnynge, maye be halowed.

I Esdras sawe vpon the mount Sion a greete peole, whom I coude not nombre, they all praysed the LORDE with songes of thankesgeuynge. And in the myddest of the there was a yonge mû of an hye stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon every one of their heades he set a crowne, and was euere hygher and hygher, which I marueled at greatly. So I axed y angell, sayde: Syr, what are these? He answered and sayde vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortall clothinge and put on the immortall, and haue testified y knowelde the name of God. Now are they crowned, and receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the angell: what yonge personne is it, that crowneth them, y geuynge them the palmes in their handes? So he answered and sayde vnto me: It is y sonne of God, whom they haue knowelde in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to commende them, that stode so stilly for the name of the LORDE. And so the angell sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and tell my people, what maner of thinges and how great wonders of the LORDE thy God, thou hast sene.

The iii. Chapter.

In the thirtie yeare of the fall of the cite, I was at Babilon, laye troubled vpõ my bed, y my thoughtes came vp ouer my hert: for I sawe y desolacion of Sion, the plentifuls wealth of them dwelt at Babilon: y my sprete was sore moued, so that I begane to speake fearefull wordes to the most hyest, and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thou spakest at the begynnynge, when thou plantedst y earth, (and that thy self alone) and gaunest commaundement vnto y people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes, and hast brethed in him the breth of life: and so he lyued before the, and thou leddest him in to paradise, which gardè of pleasure thy right hande had planted, or euer the earth was made. And vnto him thou gaunest commaundement to loue y waye, which he transgressed, immediatly thou appoyntedest death in him, and in his generacions. Of him came nacions, trybes, people, kynredes ouer nombre. And erery people walked after their owne wil, and did nyce things before the: and as for thy commaundementes, they despyed them.

But in processe of tymne thou broughtest the water floude, vpon those that dwelt in the worlde, and destroyedest them. And like as the death was in Adam, so was the water

b Gen. 2. b.
c Gen. 6. b.
d Gen. 7. b.
floude also in these. Neuertheles one of them thou lestest: namely, Noe with his houselfe, of whom come all righteous mee. And it happened that, when they y dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiply, and had gotten many children, and were a great people, they be-ganne to be more wickedly then the first.

Now when they all lyued so wickedly before the, * thou didest chose the a man from amongeth them, whose name was Abram. Him thou loudest, and vnto him only thou shewedest thy wyl, and maydest an eueralasting ouenaunt with him, promisinge him, that thou woldest neuer forsake his sede. * And vnto him thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Iacob and Esau. As for Iacob thou didest chose him, and put backe Esau.

And so Iacob became a greate multitude.

And it happened that whan thou ledest
his sede out of Egipte, thou broughtest
the vp to the mount Sion, * bowinge downe
the heauen, settinge fast the earth, mounyng
the gronde, makynge the depths to shake, and troublynge the world: And thy glory wente
thorow foure portes of fyre, and earth quakes, and wyndes and colde: that thou mightest gewe the lawe vpnto the sede of Iacob, and dilligence vnto the generacion of Israel.

And yet tokest thou not awaye from the
that wicked hert, that thy lawe might bryng forth frute in them. For the first Adam bare a wicked hert, transgressed, and was overcome, and so be all they y are borne of him.

* Thus remayned weaknes with the lawe in the hert of the people, with the wickednesse
of the rote: so that the good departed awaye, and the euell abode still. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yeares were brought to an ende. * Then didest thou rayse the vp a servaunt called Dauid, whom thou commandesteto yeldke a cite vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacrifice vnto therin. This was done now many yeares.

Then the inhabiteurs of the cite forsake the,
and in all thinges dyd euë as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked hert. And so thou gauest thy cite over in to the handes of thine enemies. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous then thy people, y they shall therfore haue the domymon of Sion? For when I came there, and sawe their vngodlynes, and so greate wickednesse, that it could not be bobre: yee whan my soule sawe so many euell doers (in y xxx. yeares) my hert fayled me, for I sawe, how thou suffrest them in such vngodlynes, and sparedst y wicked doers:
but thine owne people hast thou roted out,
and preserued thine enemies, a this hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot perceane how this happeneth. Do they of Babilon then better, then they of Sion? Or is there eny other people, y knoweth the, sauyng the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so beleued y couenautes, as Iacob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not, and their laboure hath no frute. For I have gone here and there thorow the Heithë, a I se, y they be rych a wealthy, a thynke not upon y commandementes. Weye thou therfore oure wickednesse now in y balance, and theiris also that dwell in the worlde, and so shal thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, y hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so keped thy commandementes? Thou shalt fynde, that Israel by name hath keped thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heithen.

The iii. Chapter.

A ND the angell that was sent vnto me (whose name was Vriel) gave me an-swere, and sayde: Thy hert hath takë to moch vpon it in this worlde, and thou thinkest to comprehende the waye of the Hyest.
Then sayde I: yee my lorde. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sent to shewe
the thre wayes, and to sett forth thre symi-灯tudes before the: wherof yf thou canst declare me one, I wil shewe the also the waye, that thou desyrest to se, and I shal shewe the from whiche the wicked hert commeth. And I sayde: tell on my LORDE. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, weye me the weight of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What man borne is able to do that? Why requyreth thou soch of me? And he sayde vnto me:
Yf I shulde axe the, how depe dwellings are in the see? Or how greate water springes are vpon ý firmamet? Or how greate water sprynge in are in the begynnynge of the depe? Or which are the outgoings of Paradise? Peradventure thou woldest saye vnto me: I never wente dounne yet in to ý depe ner hell, neither dyd I ever dlymmme vp in to heauen. Neuertheles now haue I axed the but onely of fyre and wynde and of the daye, where thowry thou hast tranayled, and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou gen me no answere of them.

He sayde moroner vnto me: Thine owne things, and soch as are growne vp with ý, canst thou not knowe: how shulde thy vessel then be able to cowprehende the waye of the Hyest, and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde, to vnderstode the corrupcion ý is eydent in my sight? Thé sayde I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, the that we shulde lyue in wickednesse, and to suffre, and not to knowe wherfore. He answered me, and sayde: I wote in a wod, and the trees toke soch a deyuce and sayde: "Come let vs go, and fight agaynst the see, that it maye departe awaye before vs, and that we maye make vs yet more woddes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke this deyuce, and sayde: Come, let vs go vp, and fight agaynst the trees of the wodd, that we maye make our londe the wyder. The thought and deyuce of the wodd was but vayne and nothinge worth, for the fyre came, and consumed the wod: The thought of the floudes of the see came likewise to naught also, for the sonde stode vp and stopped them.

Yf thou were iudge now betwyxte these two, whom woldest thou iustifie, or whom woldest thou codemne? I answered and sayde: Verely it is a foolish thought that they both haue deuyed. For the gronde is geuen vpnto the wod, and the see also hath his place to beare his floudes. Then answered he me vp says: Thou haist geuen a right judgment, why iudgest thou not thy self also? For like as the gronde is geuen vpnto the wod, and the see to his floudes: euene so they that dwell vpon earth, maye vnderstonde nothinge, but that which is vpnto earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, maye onely vnderstode the things, that are aboue the hea-of the sedes is filthy in you: for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaunce: in measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme, and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, now are we all full of synne, and for oure sake peraduenture it is not, that the barne of the righteous shall not be fulfilled, because of the synnes of thee that dwell vpon earth.

So he answered me, and sayde: Go ye waye to a woman with childe, and axe her, when she hath fulfilled her ix. monethes, yf her childeszbed mayke ye byrth envy/loger within her. The sayde I: No LORDE, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secrete places of soules are like ye preuy chamber of a woman. For like as a woman that travayleth, maketh haist, whan the tyme necessite of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doth she haist to defyuer it that is commytted vnto her. Loke what thou desyreth to se, it shall shewe the from the begynnyng.

Then answered I and sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, and ye it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come thee is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he saide vnto me: Stonde vp vpó ye right syde, and I shal expounde the symlytude vnto the. So I stode, and beholde, an whote burnynge oue wente ouer before me: it happened ye when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had the vpver hande. After this there wete ouer before me a watery cloude, and send downe moch rayne with a storme: ye when the stormy rayne was past, the droppes remayned still. Then sayde he vnto me: like as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceedeth the smoke, euyn so ye measure of the thinges that are past, hath the vpper hande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: May I lyue (thynkest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me, and sayde: As for the tokës wherof thou axest me, I maye tell the of the in a parte: but as touchinge ye life, I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

The v. Chapter.

NEUERTHELESSE, as concernyng the tokens, mark this: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shalbe takë in a greate nombre, æ the waye of the trueth shalbe hyd, and the lëde shalbe baren from faith: but inquyyte shal haue the vpper hande, like as thou hast sene now, and as thou hast herde lëge agoo. And the londe that thou seist now to haue rule, shalt thou shortly se waist. But ye God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after ye thirde trompet, that the Sonne shal sodenly shyne agayyne in the night, and the Moone thre tymes in the daye, æ bloude shal droppe out of wodd, and the stone shal geue his voyce, and the people shalbe vnquyete: and euyn he shal rule, whom they hope not that dwell vpon earth, and the foules shal flyt, and the Sodomitysh see shal cast out his fish, and make a noyse in the night, which many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce therof.

There shalbe a cofucion also in many places, and the fyre shal be oft sent agayyne, and the wylde beastes shal go their waye, æ menstruous wemen shal beare monsters, and salt waters shalbe founde in the swete: one frende shal fight agaynst another: then shal all wyt and vnderstandinge be hyd and put asyde in to their secrete places, æ shalbe sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shal vrightnesses and volupitous haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One lande also shal axe another, and saye: Is rightnesses gone thorow the? And it shal saye: No. At the same tyme shal men hope, but nothinge optayne: they shal laboure, but their wayes shal not prosper.

To shewe the soche tokens I haue leue, and ye thou wylt praye agayyne, æ wepe as now, and fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater things. Then I awaked, and a fearfulness wente thorow all my body, æ my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almost swommen withall. So the angell that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, and sett me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde night it happened, æ Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me, sayenge: Where hast thou bene?

and why is the counentaunce so heuy? Knowest thou not, y Israel is committed vnto the, in the londe of their captuyte? Vp then, and eate, and forsake vs not, as the shepheard that leaueth his flock in the bandes of wicked wolues. Then sayde I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: & he herde it, and as I sayde, so wiste he his waye fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mourninge and wepyng, like as Vriell the angell commandaed me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that y thoughtes of my hert were very greuous vnto me agayne, & my soule receaued y sprete of vnderstandyng, & I begane to talke with the most hyest agayne, and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, of euery wod of y earth & of all the trees thereof, thou hast chosen y one onely vynyarde: & of all londes of the whole worlde thou hast chosen the one pytt: & of all florres of the groude thou hast chosen the one lylie: & of all the depths of the see thou hast filled the one ryuer: & of all builded cities thou hast halowed Sion vnto thy selfe: & of all y foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue: & of all the eateyll y are made, thou hast prouyded y one shepe: & amoge all y multitudes of folkes thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto this people whom thou louedest, thou gauest a lawe, y is proued of all.

And now O LORDE, why hast thou gené this one people ouer vnto many? & vpon the one rote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scatred y one onely people amongst many? which treads the downe, yee which haue euery withonde y promyse, & neuer beleued y coenautes? And though thou werest enemye vnto y people, yet shuldest thou punysh the with thine owne handes. Now whai I had spoké these wordes, the angell y came to me y night afore, was set vnto me, & sayde vnto me: Heare me, & herke to y thinge y I saye, & I shal tell y more. And I sayde: Speake on my LORDE. The sayde he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israel's sake. Louest thou y people better, then him y made them? And I sayde: No LORDE, but of very greffe & copassion haue I spoké. For my reynes payme me euery houre, because I wolde haue experience of the waye of the most hyest, and to seke out parte of his iudgment. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayest not.

And I sayde: wherfore LORDE? Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers childezbed then my graue? So had I not sene the mystery and trouble of Iacob, and the trauaule of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: Nobre me y things, y are not yet come: gather me together y droppes, that are scatred abrode: make me y floures grene agayne, y are wythered: opé me the thinge that is closed: and bringe me forth the wyndes, that are shutt vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, and then shal I declare the the thinge, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O LORDE LORDE, who maye knowe these thinges, but he that hath not his dwellynge with me? As for me, I am vn wise: how maye I the speake of these thinges, wherof thou axest me? The sayde he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of these thinges y I haue spoken of, Euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgment, or in the ende the loure that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde o LORDE, yet art thou nye vnto them that have no ende: and what shal they do that haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shal come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll lycken my iudgment vnto a rynge. Like as there is no slacknesse of the last, euen so is there no swiftnesse of the first. So I answered y sayde: Coudest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and that be now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou mightest shewe thy iudgment the sooner?

Then answered he me and sayde: The creature may not haist aboue the maker, nether maye the worlde holde the at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: How hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruuant, that thou louynge maker hast made the creature louynge at once, y the creature bare it? euen so might it now also beare them that be present, at once. And he sayde vnto me: Axe the childezbed of a woma, and saye vnto her: Yf thou bringest forth childre, why doest thou it not together, but one after another? Praye her therafore, to brynge forth ten children at once. And I sayde: she can not, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I genen a childezbed vnto the earth, for those that be sowne vpon it by processe of tyme. For like as a yonge childe maye not brynge forth the things that belonge to the aged, euyn so haue I ordened the werkde which I made.

And I axed and sayde: Seynge thou hast now geue me a waye, I wyl speake before y: for oure mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet yonge, and now she dreweth nye vnto age. He answered me, and sayde: Axe a woman that beareth children, she shal tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whom thou hast now brought forth) like those that were before the, but lesse of stature? And she shal answere the: They y be borne in the youth of strengthe, are of one fashion: and they that are borne in the tymge of age (when the child-eszbed fayleth) are other wyse. Cosidre now thy self, how that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and are they that come after you, lesse then ye, as the creatures which now begynne to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then sayde I: LORDE I beseeke the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, shewe thy seruant, by whom doest thou vyset thy creature?

The vi. Chapter.

And he sayde vnto me: In the begynnynge when the grounde was made, before the worlde stode, or euer y wynes blew, before it thondred and lightened, or euer the foundations of Paradise were layed, before the fayre fluorres were sene, or euer the moueable powers were stablished, before y innumerable multitudes of angels were gathered together, or euer y highnes of y ayre were fifted vp, afore y measures of the firmanent were named, or euer y chymneys in Sion were hote, and or the presente yeares were sought out, and or euer the invencions of them y now symne, were put asyde, before they were sealed that now gather faith for a treasure: then dyd I cosidre and pondre all these thinges, and they all were made thorow me, and thorow none other: by me also they were ended, and by none other.

Then answered I and sayde: which shalbe the partynge asunder of the tymes? Or whan shalbe the ende of the first, and the begynnynge of it that foloweth? And he sayde vnto me: From Abrahae vnto Isaac, wha Iacob a Esau were borne of him, Iacobs hande helde first the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Iacob is the begynynge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) axe thou not.

I answered then and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, I beseeke the, shewe thy seruant the ende of thy tokès, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last night. So he answered and sayde vnto me: Stode vp vpon thy fete, and hearre the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shal come a greate mocion, but y place where thou stodest shal not be moned. And therefore when thou hearest the wordes, be not azyred: for of the ende shal the worde and foundacion of y earth be vnderstone. And why? the wordes therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that wha I had herde it, I stode vp vpon my fete and herkened: and beholde, there was a voyce y spake, and the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde, y dayes come, y I wyl begynne to drawe nye, and to vyset them that dwell vp of earth, and wyl begynne to make inquisition of them, what they be y haue hurte equyte with vrighteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Sion shalbe fullfylled: and when the worlde, that shal banishe awaye, shalbe ouersealed, then wyl I do these tokens.

The bokes shalbe opened before the firmanent, and they shal se all together, the children of a yere olde shal speake with their voices: the womene with childe shal bryng forth vntymely children of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shal lyue, and be rayed vp: and sodely shal the sowne places appeare as the vnsowne, the full store houses shal sondenly be fonde emptie, and the trompett shal genue a sounde, which wha euery man heareth, they shalbe haistely azyred. At that tyme shall frendes fight one agaynst another like enemies, and the earth shal stonde in feare with them.

The sprynges of the welles shal stonde styll, and in thre houres they shal not renne. Who so euer remayneth from all these thinges that I haue tolde the, shal escape, and se my saluacion, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receaued, shal se it, they that have not tasted death from their birth:
and the heart of the indwellers shall be changed, and turned in to another meaning: for each shall be put out, and dissevered shall be quenched.
As for faith, it shall flourish,
corruption shall overcome: and the truth,
which hath been so long without fruit, shall be declared.
And it happened when he talked with me,
that I looked demurely upon him, before whom
I stode, and these words sayde he vnto me:
I am come to shewe you, the tyne of the night
for to come.
Yf thou wilt praye yet more, and fast soued
dayes agayne, I shall tel the more things, that greater then before: for thy voyce is herde
before the Hyest: for why? the Mighty hath sene thy righteous dealyng, he hath sene also thy chastite, which thou hast had euer sene
thy youth: and therfor hath he sent me to shewe
the all these things, and to saye vnto thee:
Be of good comforte, and feare not, and haist not with your tyne, that are past to thynke
vayne thinges, and make no haist of the latter tyne.
And it happened after this, if I wept
agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I might fulfill the the seuen, which he told me. In the eight night was my hert vexed within me agayne, and I beganne to speake before the Hyest: for my sprete was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distresse, and I sayde: O LORDE, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnyng (euen the first daye) and saydest: Let a heauen and earth be made, and thy word was a perfecte worie. And then was there the sprete, and the darkenesse were yet on euery syde, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Then commandest thou a fayre light to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke might appeare and be sene.
Vpon the seconde daye thou maydest
the sprete of the firmanent, and commandest it to parte asunder & to make a deuision be-twixte the waters, that the one partie might remaine aboue, and the other beneth. Vpon the thirde daye thou broughtest to passe, if the waters were gathered in the seuenthe partie
of the earth: Six partes hast thou dryed vp,
and kepe them, to the intet of men might sowe and occupie husbandrie therin. As soone as thy worde wente forth, the worke was mad6. For immediatly there was great in-umerable frute, & many dyuerse pleasures & desires of temptation, floure of chaungable coloure and smelle, and this was done the thirde
daye.
Vpon the fourth daye thou commandested that the Sonne shulde geue his shyne, and if Moone his hir light: the starres didest thou sett
in ordre, and gauest them a charge, to do seruice euene vnto man, 4 that was for to be made. Vp6 the fifth daye thou saydest vnto the seuenthe partie (where the waters were gathered) that they shulde bringe forth diuere beastes, foules and fishes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water and without soule, brought forth lyuynge beastes at the commandement of God, that all people might prayse thy wonderous worke. Then didest thou preserne two soules, 5 one thou calldest Enoch and the other Leuiathan, and didest seperate the one from the other: for the seuenthe partie (namely, where the water was gathered together) might not holde them both. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte, which was dryed vp the thirde daye, that he shulde dwell in the same partie, wherin are a thousande hilles. But vnto Leuiath6 thou gaised the seuenthe partie, namely the moyst, and hast kepe him to doeuure what thou wylt, and whan.
Vpon the sixte daye thou gauest commandement vnto the earth, that before the it shulde brynge forth beastes, catell and all thy crepe, besides this) Adam also, whom thou maydest lorde of all thy creatures: Of him come we all, and the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy self. All this haue I sayde now and spoken before the, that I might shewe, how that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adam, thou hast sayde that they are nothinge, but be like a spele, and hast lickened the abundance of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rofe of the house.
And now (O LORDE) the Heith6 which haue euere bene reputed as nothinge, haue begonne to be lordses ouer vs, and to doeuure vs: but we thy people (whom thou hast called off y first borne, thy only begotten, and thy faverlent lourer) are euene in to their handes and power. If the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in 4 Gen. 1. a.

5 Deu. 4. c.
And it happened after that I had spoken out these words, there was sent vnto me an angell (which had bene by me also the nightes afore) and he sayde vnto me: Vp Eszdras, and heare the worde that I am come to tell the. And I sayde: speake on LORDE my God. The sayde he vnto me: The see is sett in a wyde place, y it might be depe and greate: but the intrauce is narow and small like a ryuer. For who wolde go in to the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? Yf he wente not throu the narow, how might he come in to the brode?

Item, another. A cite is buylded and sett vpon a brode fulde, and is full of all goodes: the intrauce is narow and sodane, like as yf there were a fyre at the right hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onely one strate path betwixte the both, so small, that there coude but one man go there.

Yf this cite now were geuen to an heyre, y he never wente thorow this parlous waye, how wolde he receaue his inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so, LORDE. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a porcion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the world: y when Adam trasgressed my statutes, then was y thynge judged that was done. Then were y intracues of the worlde made narow, full of sorow and trauayle: They are but few y euell, full of pares and laboure. For the intracues of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall frute.

Yf they now which are entred in to this worlde, maye not comprehende these strayte and vayne thynge, moche lesse maye they comprehende and vnderstaynde the secrete thynge: Why disquiectest thou thy self then, seynge thou art but a corruptibill man? And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaue in to thine hert the thynge that is for to come, but that is present?

The sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast ordered in thy lawe, that the righteous shulde inheret these thynge, but that the vnfaithfull and vngeoedly shulde perishe. Neuer-

* Deut. 8. 9.*
Then sayde I: Abraham prayed first for the Sodomites,* x Moses for the fathers y synned in the wyldernes, x he y came after him for Israel, in y tyme of Acha and Samuel: and Dauid for y destruccion, and Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, x Helias for those that receaued rayne, and for the deed, that he might lyne: and Ezechias for y people in the tyme of Senacherib: x dynerse other in like maner, which have prayed for many.

Euæ so now, seynge y corrupte is growne vp, and wickednes increased, and the righteous have prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shal it not be so now also?

He answered me, and sayde: This present worlde is not y ende, there remayneth moch honour in it, therfore have they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme, and y begynnyng of the immortalite for to come, wherein all corrupcion vanysheth, all volupitousnes is loused, all myszbleuue taken away, righteoussnes growne, and the verite spong vp. Then shall no man be able to saue him that is destroyed, ner to oppresse him y hath gottë y victory. I answered the, x sayde: This is my first x last sayenge: y it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els when it was geue him, to kepe him that he shulde not synne. For what profit is it for men now in this present tyme to lyne in heuynes, x after death to loke for punysement? x thou Adæ, what hast thou done?

For though it was thou y synned, thou art not fallé alone, but we all y come of the. For what profit is it vnto vs, yf there be promised vs an immortal tyme, where as we indeled with deadly works? x that there is promised vs an euerlastinge hope, where as we oun selues are euell and vayne? x yere there are layed vp for vs dwellynge of health x fredome, where as we haue lyued euell? and that the worship of y Hyest is kepte to defende them, which haue led a pacient life, where as we haue walked in y most wicked wayas of all? and that there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose frute endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medycyne, where as we shall not go in? for we haue walked in vnpleasant places: And that the faces of them which have absteyned, shal shyne aboue the starrs, where as oun faces shalbe blacke and darche? for whyle we lyued and dyd vnrighteously, we considered not, that we shulde suffre therfore after death?

The answered he me, and sayde: This is the consideracion x thought of the battayl, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be overcome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But yf he gett, the victory, he shall receaue the thinge that I saye. For this is the life, wherof Moses spake vnto the people, whylhe he lyued, seynge: Chose the life, x that thou mayest lyue. Neuertheles they beleued him not, nether the prophets after him, No ner me which haue spoken vnto them, that heuynes shulde not reach vnto them to their destruccion, like as ioye is for to come ouer those, that haue suffre the selues to be enfiourmed in salvacion.

I answered then x sayde: I knowe LORDE, that the Hyest is mercyfull, in y he hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walke in his lawe: x and that he is pacient and longe sufferinge towards those that haue synned in their workes: and that he is liberer to geue where as it requyreth: and that he is of greate mercy, for he multipliceth his louyne kynnesses towards those that are present, and that are past, and to them which are for to come. For yf he multiplie not his mercies, the worlde shal not be made lyuynge, with those that dwell therin: He geueth also, for yf he gane not of his goodnesse, that they which haue done euell, might be eased, the ten thousande partes of men shulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the judge forgaine not those y bë healed with his worde, and yf he wolde destroye y multitude that stryuet, there shulde be very few left in an innumerable multitude.

And he answered me, sayenge: The most x hyest made this worlde for many, but the worlde to come for few. I wyl tell the a symilitude, Eszdras: As when thou axest the earth, it shal saye vnto the, that it geueth moch noule, wherof erthe vessels are made, but little of it y golde cömeth of.

* Rom. 2. a.
This is the begynnynge of the worde of Eszdras, before he was receaued: O LORDE, thou that dweltest in euerlastyngnesse, whose eyes are lift vp in the ayre, whose stol is exceeding hye, whose glory and maiesye maye not be comprehended, before whom the hoostes of heauen stonde with tremblinge, whose kepinge is turned in winde and fyre, whose worde is true, whose talkynge is stedfast, whose commandement is stronge, whose ordynaunce is fearfull, whose loke dryeth vp the depths, whose wrath maketh the moun- taynes to melt awaye, whose true bareth wytnes: O hear ye prayer of thy servaunt, and marc with thine eares the peticion of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wil speake: and so loge as I haue vnderstondinge, I will answere. O loke not vs the synnes of thy people, which serue ye in the trueth. Haue no respeyte vnto the wicked studies of the Heithen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thynke not vpon those that haue walked faynedly before the, but vpon them, which with wyll haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to destroye them, which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vpon them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, which are worse then beasts: but loue them, that allwaye put their trust in ye righteousnes and glory; for we and oure fathers haue all the same sicknes and disease, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercifull.

For ye thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercifull, where as we haue no workes of righteousnes: for ye righteous which haue layed vp many good workes together, shall out of their dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, that thou shuldest take displeasure at him? Or what is the corruptible mortall generacion, that thou shuldest be so rough towards him?

For of a trueth there is no man amonge them that be borne, but he hath dealt wickedly: and amonge the faithfull there is none, which hath not done amysse. For in this (O LORDE) thy righteousnes ye thy goodnes shalbe prayed and declared, ye thou be mercifull vnto them, which are not rych in good workes.

Euen so is it with the worke of this worlde. There be many created, but few shall be preserued. Then answered I sayde: Then swallow vnto the witt (thou soule) and devoure the vnderstondinge, for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare, and wyllinge to prophecie: for thou hast no longer space geuen the, but only to lyue. O LORDE, wilt thou not geue thy seruaunt leue, ye we maye praye before the, and that thou mayest geue sede vnto oure hert, and buyde oure vnderstondinge, that there maye come frute of it: and that euery one which is corrupte, and bereareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue?

For thou art alone, and we all are one workmanship of thy handes, like as thou hast sayde, and like as the body is fashioned now in the childezbed, and thou geuest the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyre and water: ix. monethes doth thy worke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thinge that preserueth and it ye is preserued, shal both be kepte together: when tyme is, the childezbeddel deluyereth ye thinge, which is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commanded the brestes to geue mylke vnto the frute, that the thinge which is created and fashioned, maye be nourished for a tyme: and then thou disposest and ordrest it with thy merc, bryngest it vp with thy righteousnes, nurturset it in thy lawe, and refourmest it with thy vnderstondinge, mortifiest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuyng as thy worke. Seinge then that thou destroyest him, which with so greate labours is created and fashioned thorow thy commandement, thou coudest lyghtly ordene also, that the thinge which is made, might be preserued.

And this I speake now of all men in generall, as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am sory: and of thy inheritance, for whose cause I mourne: and of Israel, for whom I am wofull: and for Iacob, for whose sake I am greued: therefore begynne I to praye before the, for my self and for them, for I se the fall of vs, euen of vs, that dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the swiftnes of the judge, which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and vnderstoide my wordes, and I shal speake before the.
Then answered he me and sayde: Some things hast thou spoken a right, and according vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wil not verelye cosidre the worke of them, which haue synned before death, before the judgment, before destruccio, but I will rejoyse ouer the worke and thought of y righteous. I wil remembre also the pilgrimage, the holymakynge and the rewarde. Like as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbade man soweth moch seede vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees, and yet allwaye the thinge that is sowe and plated is not all kepe safe, nether doth it all take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowe in the worlde, they shall not all be preserved.

I answered then y sayde: Yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake. Like as the husbade mans seede perisheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to moch rayne vpon it: Euen so perisheth man also, which is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thine owne ymage and thy self, for whose sake thou hast made all things, and likened him vnto the husbande mans seede. Be not wroth at vs (O LORDE) but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thine owne inheritance: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me and sayde: Things present are for the present, and things to come for soch as be to come. For thou wastest yet moch, seynge thou mayest loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft times drawne nye vnto the, but neuer to the vrighteous. In this also thou art maruelous before the Hyest, in that thou hast humbled thy self, as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thine owne self, y thou art had in soch honoure amonge the righteous. Therefore shal greate wrecchidnes and mysteries come vpon them, that in the latter tymes shal dwell in y worlde, for they have walked in great pryde.

But vnderstonde thou for thy self, and seke out glory for soch as be like the: for vnto you is paradise opened, the tre of life is planted, the tymes to come is prepared, plenteousnes made ready: a cite is builded for you, and a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wyszdome. The rote of euell is marked from you, the weaknes and moth is hyd from you, into hell flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulness. Sorowes are vanyshed awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalite. And therefore axe thou no more questions, cœernynge the multitude of them that perish: For they haue taken libertie, despyed the Hyest, thought soorne of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

Morouer, they haue troden downe his righteous, and sayde in their hert, that there is no God, yee and that wittingly, for they dye. For like as the thinge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Eue so is thyrst and payne prepared for them. For it was not his wil that man shulde come to naught: but they which be created, haue defyled the name of him that made them, and are vthankefull vnto him, which prepared life for them. And therfore is my judgment now at hande. These thinges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto few: namely, vnto the, and to soch as be like the.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde O LORDE, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wilt beginne to do at the last: but at what tymes and whan, thou hast not shewed me.

The 4r. Chapter.

E answered me then and sayde: Measure thou the tymes diligently in it self, when thou seist that one parte of the tokens come to passe, which I haue tolde y before: so shalt thou vnderstonde, that it is the very same tymes, wherin the Hyest wil beginne to vsit the worlde, which he made. And wha there shalbe sene earthquake and vprore of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou well vnderstonde, that the most hyest spake of those thinges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnynge.

For like as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnynge and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Euen so the tymes also of the Hyest haue playne begynnynge in wonders and signes, and the ende in workeynge and in tokens. And every one that shalbe saued, and shall be able to escape by his worke by faith (wherin ye haue beleued) shall be preserved from the saide parels, and shal se my saiuore in my londe and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefultnesse, which now have abused my waiies: and they that have cast them out despityefully, shall dwell in paynes.

For soch as in their life have receaued beneficiest, and haue not knowne me, and they that have abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they had yet open rowne of amendement and conversion, vnder-stode not, but despysed it: y same must knowe it after death in payne. And therefore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shalbe punished, so how the righteous shalbe saued, and whose the worlde is, and for whom the worlde, and when it is. Then answered I and sayde: "I haue talked before now I speake, and wyl speake also herafter, that there be many moo of them which perish, then shall be saued, like as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayenge: like as the felde is, so is also the sede: as the floures be, so are the colours also: soch as the workman is, soch is also y worke: and as the husband man is himself, so is his husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the的世界e was made, wher in they shulde dwel, then was there no man that withstode me.

Now whan euer one was, and the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe which is vnsearchable, their maners were corrupte. So I considered the worlde, and beholde, there was parell, because of y thoughtes that were come in to it. And I sawe, and spared the greatly, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plante from amonge many generaciones. Let the multitude perish the, which are growne vp inayne, and let my graue wynebery be kepte: euene my plante: for with great laboure haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles yf thou wilt take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but thou shalt not fast in them) go thy waye then in to y felde of floures, where no house is buylded, and eate onely of the floures of the felde, taist not flesh, drinke no wine, but eate floures onely. Praye vnto the Hyste contynually, so will I come, and talke with the.

So I wente my waye and came in to the felde which is called Ardhath (like as he commaunded me) and there I sat amongethe floures, and ate of the herbes of the felde, and the meat of the same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, y my hert was vexed within me like as afoure: and I opened my mouth, and beganne to talke before the Hyste, and saide: O Lorde, thou shewest thy self vnto vs, y thou hast declared and opened thy self vnto oure fathers in the wyldernes, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came out of Egipte, and thou spakest, sayenge: Heare me O Israel, and marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Beholde, I sove my lawe in you, and it shal brynge frute in you, as ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers which receaued the lawe, kepte it not, and obserued not thy ordinances and statutes, as the frute of y lawe was not declared: for it might not, for why? it was thine. For they that receaued it, perished, because they kepte not y thinges that was soone in them.

It is a custome when the gronde receauneth the sede, or the see a shipp, or a vessell meate and drynke, that, when it is broken or is broken wherein a thing is soone, or wherein any thing is put: the thinges also perishe. And as broken, which are soone or putt therin. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we y haue receaued the lawe, perish in syrne, and oure hert also which receaued the lawe: notwithstanding the lawe perishe not, but remayneth in his laboure.

And when I considered these thinges in my hert after this maner, I loked aboute me with myne eyes, and vpon the right syde I sawe a woman, which mourned sore: she made great lamentacion, and wepte with loud voice: her clothes were rent in peces, as she had aszhes vpon her heade.

The let I my thoughtes go, y I was in, turned me vnto her, sayde: wherfore wepest thou? why art thou so sorry and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me: Syr, let me bewaile my selfe: take yet more sorrowe: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, brought very lowe. And I said vnto her: what ayleth y? Or who hath done any thinge to y? Tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfrutefull and barren, and haue had an husband thirtie yeares. And these xxx. yeares I do nothinge els daye and night and all houres, but make my prayer to thy Hyest. After thirtie yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my misery, considred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husbhid also and all my neighbours, and we gaue greate honoure vnto thy Mightie. And I norished him with greate traualye. So when he grew vp, as came to the tymne, that he shulde haue a wife, I made a feast.

The r. Chapter.

And it happened that whan my sonne wente in to his chamber, he fell downe, and dyed: the ouerthrew we all the lightes, and all my neignbouris rose vp to conforte me. The toke I my rest vnto the seconde daye at night: as when they had all rested, they might conforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by night, and fled, and am come hither in to this felde, as thou seist: and am purposed not to come in the cite, but to remayne here, and nether to eate ner drynke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntill I dye.

Then let me my meditacions and thoughtes fall, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolish woman, seist thou not our heuyynes and mournynge, and what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion our mother is all wofull and sory, and how she is cleane brought downe and in misery? seinge we be all now in heuyynes, make oure mone (for we be all sorofull.) As for the heuyynes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, and she shal tell the, that it is she which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that grove vp vpon her. For from the begynnynge all men are borne of her, as other shal come: and beholde, they walke almost all in to destruction, and many of them shalbe rote out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hath lost so greate a multitude? and not thou, which art sory but for one. But yt thou wildest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not like the mournynge of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, which I bare with heuyynes: as for the earth, acordinge to the ordnance of thy earth onely, so that many are gone awaye in her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: like as thou hast borne with traualye sorowe, euen so the earth also from the begynnynge geneth hir frute vnto man, for him made her. And theryfore withold the thy sorowe and heuyynes by thy self, and loke what happeneth vnto ye, beare it strykly." For yt thou iudgest the marck of God to be righteous and good, and receauest his counsell in tymne, thou shalt be commended therin. Go thy waye then in to the cite to thy husbande.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I will not go in to the cite, but heare will I dye. So I commonth more with her, and sayde: Do not so, but be coueceled, and folowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seist that oure Sanctuary is layed waist, oure anlter broken, oure temple destroyed, oure playenge of instrumentes and syngeinge layed downe, the thankesgeuynge put to sylence, oure myrth is vanished awaye, the light of oure candle-stick is quenched, Arke of the covenaut is take from vs, all oure holy thinges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured, oure children are put to shame, oure prestes are brent, oure Luites are carried awaye in to captiuyte, oure virgins are defyled, and oure wyues rayshed, oure righteous men spoyled, and oure chidrede destroyed, oure yonge men are brought in to bondage, and oure strouge worthies are become weake: and Sion (which seale is ye greatest of all) is loused vp from hir worchse: for she is delinered in to the handes of them that hate vs.

And theryfore shake of ye greate heuyynes, and putt awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the Mightie maye be mercifully vnto the, and that the Hyest maye geue the rest from ye laboure and traualye. And it happened, that whan I was talkynge with her, her face dyd shynge, and gystere, so that I was afrayed of her, and mused what it might be. And immediately she cast out a greate vocye, very fearfull, so that ye earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a cite bylded, and a place was shewed from the gronde and foundacion.

Then was I afrayed, and cried with loude voice, and sayde: where is Vriel the angell, which came to me at the first? For he hath caused me to come in many consideracions and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corruption, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speaking these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene deed, and myne vnderstandinge was altered, and he toke me by the right hande, and comforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstandinge vexed? and the vnderstandinge of thy hert, and wherfore art thou sory? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken me: and I haue done acordynge vnto thy wordes," I wente in to the felde, and there haue I sene things, that I am not able to expresse. He saide vnto me: Stode vp and be manly, and I shal geue the exortacion.

Then sayde I: Speake on to me my LORDE, forsake me not, lest I dye in vyayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, & herde that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstandinge be deceauned, and my mynde? But now I besoke the, that thou wilt shewe thy servaunt of this woder. He answered me the & sayde: heare me, and I shall enfourne the, and tell the wherfore thou art afraied, for the Hyest hath opened many secrete thynges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy wyve is right, and that thou takest sorowe continuallly for thy people, and makest greate lamentacion for Sion: and theryfore vnderstanden the vision which thou sawest a litle while agoe after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourninge, and thou hast comforted her: Nevertheles now seist thou the lichtenes of the woman no more, but thou thoughtest there was a cote buylde: and like as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answere: The woman whom thou sawest, is Sion: and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thirtie yeares vnfrutefull and baren, those are the xxx. yeares, wherin there was no offeringe made in her.

But after xxx. yeares Salomon buylde her, and offrde, and then bare the baren a sonne. And where as she tolde thee, that she norished him with laboure, that was the dwellynge of Ierusalem. But where as the sonne dyed in hir chamber, that is the fall of Ierusalem. And thou sawest hir lickenesse, how she mourned for hir sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed thy.

And now God seyth, that thou art sory in thy mynde, and suffrest from thy hert for her: and so hath he shewed the hir clearnesse, and the fayrnes of hir bewyte.

And therfore I bad the remayne in the felde, where no house is buylded. For I knew the Hyest wolde shewe this vnto the, theryfore I commaundede the to go in to the felde, where no fundamental buyldinge is. For in the place where the Hyest wyll shewe his cite, there shall be no mans buyldinge. And theryfore feare not, and let not thine hert be afraied, but go thy wyve in, and se the glorious and fayre buyldinge, and how greate it is, and how greate thou thinkest it after the measure of thine eyes, and then shalt thou heare as much as thine eares maye comprehende. For thou art blessed aboue many other, and art called with the Hyest, as few. But tomorrow at night thou shalt remayne here, and so shal the Hyest shewe the visions of hye thinges, which he wyll do vnto them that dwell vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slepe the same night like as he commaundede me.

The ri. Chapter.

THEN sawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp from see an Aegle, which had xij. wynges and thre heades: And I sawe, and beholde, he spered his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, and out of his fethers there grew other little contrary fethers: the heades rested, the head in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Morouer I sawe, that the Aegle flew with his wynges, and raigned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwell vpon the earth: and I sawe all things vnder heavene were subiecte vnto him, and no man spake against him, no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sounde with his fethers, and a voyce sayenge after this maner: watch not all together, slepe euery ma in his owne place, and watch for a tyme, but let the heades be preserved at the last. Nevertheles I sawe, the voyce wente not out of his heades, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombrd his contrary fethers, and beholde, there were eight of them. And I loked, beholde, vpon the right syde there arose one fether, \( \alpha \) raigned ouer all the earth. And it happened, \( \gamma \) when it raigned, the ende of it came, \( \alpha \) the place therof appeared no more. So the nexte folowinge stode vp, \( \alpha \) raigned, \( \alpha \) had a grete tyme: \( \gamma \) it happened, \( \gamma \) when it raigned, the ende of it came also like as the first, so that it appeared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, \( \alpha \) sayde: Heare thou \( \gamma \) hast kepe in the earth so longe, this \( \alpha \) saye vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare nomore: There shall none after \( \gamma \) atteyne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thirde, \( \alpha \) raigned as the other afore, \( \alpha \) appeared nomore also. So wote it with all the residue one after another, so \( \gamma \) every one raigned, \( \alpha \) the appeared nomore. Thë I loked, \( \alpha \) beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers \( \gamma \) followed were set vp vpo the right syde, \( \gamma \) they might rule also: and som of the ruled, but within a while they appeared nomore: for some of the were set vp, but ruled not. After this \( \alpha \) loked, \( \alpha \) beholde, \( \gamma \) xij. fethers appeared nomore, and the two wynges: \( \alpha \) there was no more vpon the Aegles body, but two heades that rested, \( \alpha \) sixe fethers. Then sawe I also, \( \gamma \) the sixe fethers were parted in two, \( \alpha \) remayned vnder the heade, \( \gamma \) was vpon the right syde, for the foure cõtvyned in their place. So I loked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp them selues, and to have the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortly it appeared nomore, and the seconde were sooner awaye then the first. And I beholde, and lo, the two thought also by the selues to raigne: \( \alpha \) wha they so thought, beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myndest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled with him, and the heade was turned with them \( \gamma \) were by him, \( \alpha \) ate vp \( \gamma \) two vnder wynges, \( \gamma \) wold haue raigned.

But this heade put \( \gamma \) whole earth in feare, and bare rule in it, ouer all those \( \gamma \) dwelt vpon earth with moch laboure, and he had the gouernance of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this \( \alpha \) loked, and beholde, the heade that was in the middest, sodenly appeared nomore, like as \( \gamma \) wynges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, \( \alpha \) ouer those that dwelt therin. And I beholde, \( \alpha \) lo, the heade vpon the right side, devored it that was vpon the left syde. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and considre the thinge that thou seist. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a lyon that roareth, rennyng hyaistely out of \( \gamma \) wod, and he sent out a maus voyce vnto the Aegle, and sayde: Heare thou, I wyl talke with the, and the Hyest shal saye vnto the: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whom I made to raigne vpon earth and in my worlde, and that \( \gamma \) ende of their times might come thorow the?

And the fourth came, and ouerwanne all the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the worlde with greate fearfutnes, and ouer the whole compass of the earth with the most wicked laboure, and so longe time dwelt he vpon the earth with disceate, \( \alpha \) the earth hast thou judget not with trueth. For thou hast troubled the meke, thou hast hurte the peaceable and quyet, thou hast louted lyers, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forth frute, and hast cast downe the walles of soch as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongful dealeynge and blasphemy come vp vnto the Hyest, and thy pryde vnto the Mighty. The Hyest also hath loked vpô the proude tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and their abominacies are fulfilled. And therfore appeare nomore thou Aegle, and thy horrible wynges, and thy wicked fethers, and thy vngracious heads, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy wayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to herself, when she is deliuered from thy violeunce, and that she maye hope for \( \gamma \) judgment and mercy of him that made her.

The rii. Chapter.

And it happeneth wha \( \gamma \) Lyô spake these words vnto \( \gamma \) Aegle, \( \alpha \) heade \( \gamma \) afore had \( \gamma \) vpperhûde, appeared nomore: nether dyd \( \gamma \) foure wynges appeare any more, \( \gamma \) came to hi, \( \alpha \) were set vnto to raigne, \( \alpha \) their kyndome was small \( \gamma \) full of vproyre.

And I sawe, \( \alpha \) beholde, they appeared nomore, \( \alpha \) \( \gamma \) whole body of \( \gamma \) Aegle was brêt, \( \alpha \) the earth was in greate feare. Then awaked I out of the trauence of my mynde, and from greate feare, and sayde vnto my sprete: Lo, this hast thou geuen me, in \( \gamma \) thou searchest

* Rede, I sawe, and beholde, out the ways of the Hyst: lo, yet am I weery in my minde, and very weake in my spryte, and little strengthe is there in me, for the great feare that I recceaued this night. Therefore wil I now beseke the Hyst, \( \hat{y} \) he wyl conforte me vnto the ende, \( \alpha \) I sayde:

\[ \text{B LORDE LORDE} \]
\( \text{yf I haue founde grace before thy sight, and} \hat{y} \) I am justified with \( \hat{y} \) before many other, \( \alpha \) \( \hat{y} \)f my prayer be come vp before thy face, conforte me then, and shew me thy seruantaunt the interpretacion \( \alpha \) playne difference of this horrible sight, that thou mayest perfectly conforte my soule: for thou hast judged me worthy, to shew me \( \hat{y} \) last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretacion of this sight, The Aegle whom thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kyngdome which was sene in the vision of thy brother "Daniel, but it was no expounded vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto the.

Beholde, the dayes come, that there shal ryse vp a kyngdome vp\( \hat{y} \) earth, and it shal be feared above all the kyngdomes \( \hat{y} \) were before it. In the same kyngdome shal \( xij. \) kynges raigne, one after another. For the secode shal begynne to raigne, and shal have more tyme th\( \hat{y} \) the other, \( \alpha \) this do \( \hat{y} \) \( xij. \) wynges signifie, which thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heads but not from \( \hat{y} \) body, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of that kyngdome there shal arysse greate struyynes, and it shal stonde in parell of fallynge: neverthelesse it shal not yet fall, but shal be set in to his begynynge. And \( \hat{y} \) eight vnderwynges which thou sawest h\( \hat{y} \) vnto \( \hat{y} \) wynges of h\( \hat{i} \) betoke, \( \hat{y} \) in h\( \hat{i} \) there shal arysse eight kynges, whose tyme shalbe but small, \( \alpha \) their yeares swift, \( \alpha \) two of them shal beare. But when the middest tyme commeth, there shal be foure kepe in the tyme, when his tyme begynneth to come that it maye be ended, but two shal be kepe vnto \( \hat{y} \) ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heads restyng, this is the interpretacion: In his last shal the Hyst ryse vp thre kyngdomes, and call many agaynse in to the, \( \alpha \) they shal haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therin, with moche laboure above all those \( \hat{y} \) were before the. Therfore are they called \( \hat{y} \) heads of the Aegle: for it is they \( \hat{y} \) shal

bringe forth his wickednes agayne, \( \alpha \) \( \hat{y} \) shal perfourme \( \alpha \) fyndish his last. And where as thou sawest, that \( \hat{y} \) greate heade appeare no more, it signifieth, that one of them shal dye vp\( \hat{y} \) his bed, \( \alpha \) yet with payne, for the two that remayne, shalbe slayne with the swerde. For the swerde of the one shal denuoure the other, but at the last shal he fall thorow the swerde himself.

And where as thou sawest two vnderwynges vpon the heade that is on the right syde, it signifieth, that it is they, wh\( \hat{y} \) the Hyst hath kepte vnto their ende: this is a small kyngdome, \( \alpha \) full of trouble. The Lyon \( \hat{y} \) which thou sawest ryssinge vp out of the wodd and roaringe, and speakinge vnto the Aegle, and rebukynge him for his vnrighteousnesse, is the wynde, which the Hyst hath kepte for them and for their wickednesse vnto the ende: he shal reprove them, and rente them asunder before them. For he shal sett them lyyyng before the judgment, and shal rebuke them: for the residue of my people shal he deluyer with trouble, those \( \hat{y} \) be preserved ouer myne endes: and he shal make them joyfull vntyl the commynge of the daye of judgment, wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the begynnynge. This is the dreame that thou sawest, and this is the interpretacion. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the Hyst.

Therfore wyryte all these thinges \( \hat{y} \) thou hast sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teach the the wyse in the people, whose hertes thou knowest maye comprehende and kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here \( \hat{y} \) self yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, what so euer it pleaseth the Hyst to declare vnto the, and with that he wente his waye.

And when all the people perceaued, \( \hat{y} \) the seuen dayes were past, \( \alpha \) I not come agaynse into \( \hat{y} \) cite, they gathered them all together from the least vnto the most, \( \alpha \) came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? and what euell haue we done against the, \( \hat{y} \) thou forsakest vs, \( \alpha \) syyste here in this place? For of all people thou only art left vs, as a grape of the wyne, and as a candel in a dareke place, and as an hauen \( \alpha \) shippes preseruad from \( \hat{y} \) tepest. Haue we not els aduersite ynough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene brennt with Sion? For we are no better, then they \( \hat{y} \) dyed there:
and they wepte with loude voyce. Then answered I the ą sayde: Be of good côforte O Israel, ą be not heuy thou house of Iacob: for ą Hyest hath you in remembrance, ą ą Mighty hath not forgotte you in têtacio. As for me, I haue not forsake you, nether am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to praye, because of ą mystery of Israel, that I might seke mercy for ą lowe estate of youre Sactuary. And now go youre waye home euery mã, and after these dayes wyl I come vnto you. So the people wete their waye in to the cite, like as I commandeu them: but I remayned still in the felde seuen dayes, as ą angell bade me, and I ate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The iii. Chapter.

A ND it happened after the seuen dayes, ỳ I dreamed a dreame by night. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floures therof. And I loked, and beholde, the man was strong, and increased with the cloudes of heauen: and when he turned his countenaunce to cosider, all the thinges trembled that were sene under hym: and when the voyce wente out of his mouth, all they bren that herde him, like as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, ą beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of me out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heaué, to fight against ỳ man, that came out from ỳ see. And I loked, ą beholde, he graue himself a greate moultayne, and fiew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, wherout the hill was grauen, ą I coude not.

I sawe after these, ỳ all they which came to fight against him, were sore afraied, and yet durst they fight. Neuertheles when he sawe the fearsnesse and violence of the people, he nether lift vp his hande ner helde swerde, ner eny weapon: but onely (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of his lippes ỳ wynde of the flamme: and out of his toge he cast out sparkes and stornes, and they were all myte together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, and ỳ greate storne, ą fell with a russen vpon ỳ people, which was prepared to fight ą brêt the vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothinge sene, but onely dust ą smoke. When I saw this, I was afraied.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callinge vnto him another peaceable people: and there came noch people vnto hym: some were glad some were sorry, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I sick thorow greate feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed ỳ servaunt all ỳ wôders fro ỳ begynynge, ą hast counted me worthy, ỳ thou mightest receaue my prayer: shewe me now yet the interpreta- tion of this dreame. For thus I cosïdro in my vnderstandinge: Wo vnto them that shal be left in those dayes, ą moch more wo vnto the that are not left behynde: for they that were not left, were in heunyes.

Now vnderstonde I ỳ thinges that are layed vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behynde. Therfore are they come in to greate parells, and many necessities, like as these dreames declare. Yet is it easier, ỳ he which suffreth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of the worlde, and now to se ỳ thinges ỳ shal happen in ỳ last.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The in- terpretacion of the sight shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thinge ỳ thou hast requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are left behynde, and this is the interpreta- tion. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyne, hath kepte himself. They that be fallen in to harme, are soch as haue workes ą faith vnto the Most mightie. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behynde, are more blessed, then they that be deed. This is the meanyng of the vision. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from the depe of the see, ỳ same is he whom God the Hyest hath kepte a greate season, which by his owne self shal delyuer his creature, ą he shal ordre the that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest, ỳ out of his mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre and storme, ą how ỳ he lift vp nether swerde ner weapon, but ỳ the russen- inge in of him destroyed the whole multitude, ỳ came to fight against hym: it signifeth, that the dayes come, when God wyll delyuer the ỳ are vpon earth, ą in a trauance of mynde: he shall come vpon thè, ỳ dwell in the earth. And one shal vndertake to fight against gathered together, he shall defend his people that remaine, and then shall he shew them great wonders.

Then sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, shew me this: wherfore haue I sene the man commynge vp from the depe of the see?

And he sayde vnto me: Like as thou cast nether seke out ner knowe these thinges that are in the depe of the see, euyn so maist thou not se my sonne, or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretacion of the dreame which thou sawest, therforoue thou onely art here lightened: for thou hast forsaken thine owne lawe, and applied thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it. "Thy life hast thou ordred in wyszdome, and hast called vnderstanding thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the thy treasure of the Hyest. After three dayes I wil shew the more, and talke with the at more large, yee heuy and wonderous thinges wyl I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth in to the feld, geuyenge prayse and thanks greatly vnto God, because of his wonders which he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and soch as is in tyme, and there I satt thre dayes.

The riiij. Chapter.

Vpon the thirde daye I satt vnder an aoke tre, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, sayde: Eszdras, Eszdras. And I sayde: here I am LORDE, and stode vp vpon my fete. The spake he vnto me: "In the bush dyd I appeare vnto Moses, I talked with him, wha my people serued in Egypte, and I sent him, and led my people out of Egypte, I brought him vp to mount Sion, where I helde him by me a longe season, and tolde him my wonderous workes, and shewed hem thy secretes of the tymes, and the ende, and commaundéd him, sayëge: These wordes shalt thou declare, not hyde thë. And now I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thine hert the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions which I haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned and remayne with my counsell, and with soch as be like the, vntyll thy tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begynne to waxe olde.

For the tyme is deuyded in to twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of the tenth parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after y\textsuperscript{e} half of y\textsuperscript{t} tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and ordre thy house, and reforrne thy people: comforte soch of them as be in trouble; and tell now of the destruction: let go from the mortall thoughtes: cast awaye the burdenthes of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some place y\textsuperscript{t} thoughtes that are most heuy vpnto the, and haist the to flyt from these tymes: for soch seuell x\textsuperscript{t} wickednesse as thou hast now sene happē, shal they do yet moch worse. For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, the more shal a synne and wickednesse increase, in them that dwell vp\textsuperscript{o} earth. For the trueth is fled farre awaye, x\textsuperscript{t} lesynge is hard at hande. For now haisteth the vision to come, that thou hast sene.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde LORDE, I wyl go as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme the people which are present. But they y\textsuperscript{e} shall be borne afterwarde, who wyl exhorte or rebuke the? Thus the worlde is set in darcknes, and they y\textsuperscript{2} dwel therein, are without light: for thy lawe is kyndlyed, because no man knoweth the thinges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. Yf I haue fonde grace before the, sende the holy goost in to me, and I shall wryte all that hath bene done in the worlde sens the begynnynge, which was wrytten in thy lawe, that men maye fynde the path, and that they which wyl lyue in the latter dayes, may lyue.

And he answered me, sayege: Go y\textsuperscript{e} waye, gather thy people together, x\textsuperscript{t} saye vpnto the, that they seke the not for x\textsuperscript{l} dayes, but loke thou gather the many boxe trees, and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus and Asial, these fyue, which are ready to wryte swiftly, and come hither, and I shall light a cadle of vnderstondeinge in thine hert, which shal not be put out, tylly the thinges be perfourmed which thou shalt begynne to wryte. And then shalt thou declare some thinges openly vpnto the perfecte, and some thinges shalt thou shew secretly vpnto y\textsuperscript{w} wyse. Tomorrow this houre shalt thou begynne to wryte.

Then wete I forth (as he commaundde me) and gathered all y\textsuperscript{e} people together, and sayde: Heare these wordes o Israel: Oure fathers from the begynnynge were strauners in Egipt, from which they were delyuered, and receauned the lawe of life, \textsuperscript{5} which they kepe not, which ye also haue trasgressed after the. Then was this londe and the londe of Sion parted amōge you by the lot to possesse. But youre fathers and ye youre selues also haue done vnrighteousnes, x\textsuperscript{t} haue not kepe the wayes which the Hyest commaundde you. And for so moch as he is a righteous judge, he toke from you in tyme the thinges that he had genen you. And now are ye here and youre brethren amōge you. Therfore yf so be that ye wil subdue youre owne vnderstandinge, and reforme youre hert, ye shal be kepte alie, x\textsuperscript{t} after death shal ye opteyne mercy. For after death shall the judgment come, whan we shal lyue agayne: and then shall the names of the righteous be manifest, and y\textsuperscript{t} names of the vngodly with their workes shalbe declared. Let no mā therfore come now vnto me, ner axe any question at me these xl. dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaundde me) and we wente in to the feld, and remayned there. The next daye a voyce caale me sayenge: \textsuperscript{c} Eszdras, Open thy mouth, x\textsuperscript{t} drynke that I gene the. The opened I my mouth, x\textsuperscript{t} beholde, he reached me a full cuppe, which was full of water, but the colour of it was like fyre. And I toke it and dranke.

And whā I had dronken it, my hert had vnderstondeinge, and wyszdome grew in my brest: for my spryte was kepte in remembrance, and my mouth was opened and shut no more. The Hyest gaue vnderstondeinge vnto the fyue men, y\textsuperscript{t} they wrote y\textsuperscript{w} hye thiges of the night, which they vnderstode not. But in the night they ate bred: as for me, I spake in the daye, and belede not my tonge by night. In xl. dayes, they wrote two hundreth x\textsuperscript{t} foure bokes.

And it happened whā the xl. dayes were fulfilled, that the Hyest spake, sayenge: The first that thou hast wrytē, speake openly, y\textsuperscript{t} the worthy and vnworthy maye rede it. But kepe y\textsuperscript{x} lxx. last, y\textsuperscript{t} thou mayest shew it onely to soch as be wyse amongeth thy people. For in them is the sprynte of vnderstondeinge, the fountayne of wyszdome, and the streame of knowleage. And I dyd so.

The xv. Chapter.

BEHOLDE, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecie, which I will put in your mouth, saith the LORDE: and cause them to be written in a letter, for it is the truth. Fear not the imaginacions against thy, let not thine unfaithfulness of them trouble the, that speak against the. For all the unfaithfull shall dye in their unfaithfulness. Behold saith the LORDE, I will bring plagues upon the world: his sword, hunger, death and destruction, for wickednes hath the vpper hande in all thy earth, and their shamefull worke is fulfilled.

Therefore saith the LORDE: I will holde my tongue no more vnto their wickednesse, which they do so vngodly: nether wil I suffer them in the things, that they deal with all so wickedly. Behold, the innocent bloud of the troubled crieth vnto me, and the soules of the righteous complaineth continually: and therefore (saith the LORDE) I will surely auëge, and receive vnto me all the innocent bloud from amonge them.

Behold, my people, is as a flock of sheep to be slayne, I will not suffer them now to dwel in Egypte, but wil bryng them out with a mightie hande and a stretched out arme, and smyte it with plages as afore, and wil destroye all the londe off it. Egypte shall mourne, and the foundacions of it shall be smytten with the plague and punishment, God shall bryng ye vpon it.

They that tyl thy greuede, shall mourne, for their sedes shall be destroyed thorow the blasting and hale, and an horrible starre. Wo worth thy worlde and them that dwell therein, for thy sword their destruction draweth nye: one people shall stode up to fight against another, swordes in their hidas. For the shall be vnstedfast, and some shall do violence vnto other: they shall not regard their kyng and princes, the ways of their doings and hodelinges in their power. A man shall desyre to go in to the cite, shall not be able. For because of their pryde they cities shall brynge forth in feare, houses shall shake, and men shall be afraied. A man shall haue no pitie vpon his neigboure, but one shall prooke another vnto battayll, to spoyle their goodes because of the honger of bred, and because of the great trouble.

Behold, I gather all call together all the kynges of thy earth which are from the vprysinge, from the south, from the east and Liba-nus to turne vnto them, and restore the thinges that they haue geue them. Like as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wil I do also, and recouenpe the in their bosome. Thus sayeth thy LORDE God: My right hande shall not spare thy synners, and my swerde shall not ceasse over them, that shed the innocet bloud vpon earth. The feare is gone out fro his wrath, and hath consumed the foundacions of the earth, and the synners like the strawe that is kindled. Wo worth them that synne, and kepe not my commandementes, saith the LORDE. I wil not spare them. Go your waye ye children from violence, defyle not my Sanctuary: for the LORDE knoweth all the that synne agaynst him, and therefore deluyere the them vnto death and destruccion: For now are the plagues come vpon the worlde, ye shall remayne in the. For God shall not deluyer you, because ye haue synned agaynst him.

Behold, an horrible vision commeth fro the east, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of the Arabes with many charrettes, and the multitude of them shallbe as the wynde vpon earth, that all they which heare them ragynge in their wrath, maye feare and be afraied: and as the wylde bores out of thy wod, so shal they go out, and with greate power shal they come, and stonde fightinge with the, and shal waist the portion of the londe of the Assirians.

And then shal the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembrire their byrth, and shal turre aboute swearinge together in greate power, to persecute them. But these shalbe afraied, and kepe syence at their power, and shal fle: and one out of the londe of the Assirians shall beseege the, and consume one of the, and in their hoost shal be feare and drede, and strife amonge their kynges.

Behold, cloudes from the east, and from the north vnto the south, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and storme. They shal smyte one vpon another, and they shal smyte at thy great starre vpon earth and their starre, and the bloud shalbe from the swerde vnto the bely, and the smoke of ma vnto thy Camels lytter: And there shalbe greate fearfulness and tremlinge vpon earth, and they that se the wrath, shal be afraied, and a tremblinge shal come vpon them.
And then shal there come greate raynes from y south and from the north, and parte from the west, and from the stormy wynde from the east, and shal shutt them vp agayne, the cloude which he rayshed vp in wrath, and the starre to cause feare toward y east and west wynde, shalbe destroyed, the greate cloudes shalbe lift vp, and mightie cloudes full of wrath, and the starre, that they maye make all the earth afayed and the dwell therin, and that they maye pour out ouer all places an horrible starre, fyre and hale and fylenge swords, they shall breake downe the cities walles, mountayne and hylles, all trees, aod, and the grasse of the medowes, and all their frute. And they shall go stedfast vpnto Babilon, and make her afayed, they shall come to her and besiege her: the starre and all wrath they poure out vpnto her.

Then shal the dust and smoke go vpnto the heauen, and all that be aboute her, shal bewayle her: and they that remayne under her, shal do seruice vpnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia y cõfortest thyself also vpó the hope of Babilon, and art a worship of his persone: Wo be vnto the thou wretch, because thou hast made thyself like vpnto her, hast decte thy daughters i whordome, that they mighte tryumphe and pleasure thy lourers, which haue allwaye desyred to cõmytte whordome with the: thou hast followed the abominaile cite in all hir workes and invencions.

Therfore sayeth God: I wyl sende plages vpon the, wydowhode, pouerty, hõger, warres, and pestilence, to waist thy houses with destrucion and death, and the glory of thy power shalbe dryed vp as a flour, whan heate arysteth y is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be sick as a poore wife that is plaged a beate of women: so mightie and lourers shall not be able to receawe the. Wolde I so hate the saith the LORDE? Ye thou haddest not allwaye slayne my chosen, exaltinge the stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer their death, whan thou wast dronke: set forth the bewyte of thy countenaunce. The rewarde of thy whordome shalbe recompensed the in thy bosome, therfore shalt thou receawe * rewarde.

Like as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth the LORDE) eu en so shal God do vnto the, and shal delyuer the in to the plage. Thy chylde shal dye of honger, thou shalt fall thorrow swerde. Thy cities shalbe broken downe, all thine shal perish with the swerde in y felde. They be in y mouüaynes shal dyce of honger, eate their owne flesh, drinke their owne bloude for very hõger of bred and thyrst of water. Thou vnhaappe shal come thorow the see, receawe plages agayne.

In the passage they shal caste downe the slayne cite, shal rote out one parte of y londe, cõsume the portion of thy glory. They shal treade the downe like stubble, they shalbe thy fyre and shal consume the: thy cities and thy londe, thy wod and thy frutefull trees shal they burne vp with the fyre. Thy children shal they carry awaye captuye, and loke what thou hast, they shal spoyle it, and marre the bewtie of thy face.

The rvi. Chapptr.

W O vnto the Babilon i Asia, wo vnto y Egipte i Syria: gyrede youre selues with clothes of sack, hayre, and mourne for youre chylde, be sory, for youre destrucion is at honde. A swerde is sent vpon you, who wil turne it back? A fyre is kyndled amouge you, who wil quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, what is he that wyl dryue them awaye? Maye eny man dryue awaye an hõgric lyon in the wod? Or maye eny ma quench the fyre in the stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arowe, y is shot of a stronge archer? The mightie LORDE sendeth the plages, what is he that wil dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled gone forth in his wrath, and what is he that will quench it? He shall cast lightenynges, and who shall not feare? He shall thonder, and who shall not be afayed? The LORDE shal threaten, and who shall not ytterly be beaten to poulder at his presence? The earth quaketh, the foundacions therof: y see arysteth up with wavhes from the depe, and the floudes of it are vnquyete, the fishes therof also before the LORDE, before the glory of his power. For stronge is his right hande that holdeth the bowe, his arowes that he shuteth, are sharpe, shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shot in to y endes of the worlde.
Beholde, thy plagues are sent, that shall not turne agayn, till they come upon earth. The fyr is kyndled, they shall not be put out, till it consume the foundations of the earth. Like as an arrow which is shot of a mightie archer, returneth not bacwardes, euens so thy plagues shall be sent upon earth, shall not turne agayn. Wo is me, wo is me, who wyll deliuer me in these dayes? The begynnynge of sorowes is greate mourninge: the begynnynge of derth is greate death: the begynnynge of warres, the powers shal stonde in feare: the begynnynge of euels, they shall tremble every one. What shal I do in these things, when the plagues come? Beholde, hoger and plage, trouble and anguysh is sent, as scourges for amendement. But for all these things they shal not turne fro their wickednes, ner be allwaye myndedfull of thy scourges.

Beholde, vitayles shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, that they shal think the selues to be in good case: and euens then shall myschefe growe vpon earth, warres, derth and greate disquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perish of hoger, the other that escape the honger, shall the swerde destroye: the dead shalbe cast out as donge, that shalbe no man to contorte them. For ye earth shalbe waist, the cities shalbe cast downe: there shalbe no man left to tyll ye earth to sowe it. The trees shal gene frute, the who shall plucke the of gather them? The grapes shalbe ripe, who shall treade the? For all places shalbe desolate of me, so that one man shal dersyre to se another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole cite there shalbe ten left, two in the felde, which shall hyde the selues in the thickes buzzhes, in the clyffes of stones: like as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tre, or as when a vynyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes, of them that diligentely sought thorow the vynyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shalbe thre or foure left, for the shal seacure their houses with the swerde. And the earth shalbe left waiste, as the feldes theirf shall waxe olde: and their wayses and all their pathes shall growe full of thornes, because no man shal trauayle there thorow. The daughters shal mourn, hauinge no helpe of their brydegome. In the warres they shal be destroyed, their husbands shall perish of honger. O ye seruantes of the LORDE, heare these things, that marck the. Beholde, the worde of the LORDE, O receaue it: beholde, the plages drawe nye, are not slack in tarieng. Like as a traynyunge woman, which after ix. moneth brigheth forth a sonne, than the houre of the byrhth is come, an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpon the body, than the childde commeth to the byrhth, they tary not the twinklynge of an eye: Euue so shall not thy plages be slack to come vpon earth, the worlde shal mourn, the sorowes shal come vpon it on euery syde.

O my people, heare my worde, make you ready to the battayll: that in all euell be euens as pylgrems vpon earth. He thy sellyth, let him be as he that thyest his waye: that he thy byeth, as one that wil lese. Who so occupieth marshaucides, as he that wynneth not: as he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therein: he that soweth, as one that shall not reaphe: he that twysteth the vynyarde, as he that shal not gather the grapes: they that mary, as they that shall get no children: and they that mary not, as the wyddowes: they therefore they that mary, they laboure, laboure in vayne. For straungers shall reaphe their frutes, spoyle their goodes, ouer throwe their houses, take their childre captuyne, for in captiuyne that honger shal they get children. And they that occupie their marchaundies with robbery, how longe decke they their citiues, their houses, their possessuons? the more wil I punysh them for their synnes, sayeth the LORDE. Like as an whore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall righteousness hate iniquyte, when she decketh hir self, and shall accuse hir to hir face, when she commeth that defendeth, which shall make inquysition for all synne vpon earth. And therefore be not ye like there vnto, ner to the workes therof: for or euer it be longe, inquyte shalbe taken awaye out of the earth, and righteousness shal rainge amonige you.

Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyr shall burne vpon his heade, which saith before the LORDE God his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the LORDE knoweth all thy workes of men, their ymagniacions, their thoughtes their hertes. For he spake but the worde: let the earth be made, it was made: let the heauén be made, and it was made. In his worde were ray starres made, he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, the treasures thereof: he hath measured the see, and what it conteyneth. He hath shut the see in the myydest of the waters, and with his worde hath he hanged the earth upon the waters. He spreadeth out the heaven like a vowte, upon the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and drye wyldernes hath he made sprynges of water, and poles vpó the toppe of the mountaynes, the floudes might poure downe from stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, and put his hert in the myydest of his body, and gane him breath, life and understandinge, yee and the sprette of Allmightie God, which made all thinges, and hath searchéd the grotide of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth youre ymaginacions inuccions, and what ye thynke whan ye synne, he wolde hyde youre synnes. Therfore hath yer LORDE searched and sought out all youre workes, and he shal bewraye you all. And whan youre synnes are brought forth, ye shalbe ashamed before men, and youre owne synnes shalbe youre accusers in that daye. What wil ye do? Or how will ye hyde youre synnes before God and his angels? Beholde, God himself is the judge, feare him, leave of from \[\text{Gen. 1. a.}\]

youre synnes, and forget youre vnrighteous-nesses, and medle nomore with them: so shal God lede you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a greate mulctude is kyndled ouer you, and they shal take awaye certayne of you, and fede the ynge with Idols: and they that cosent vnto them, shal be had in derision, laughed to scorne, a trodden vnder fote.

For vnto the places there shalbe a place,
and in the next cities a greate insurreccion upon those that feare yer LORDE. They shal be like mad men, they shall spare no man:
they shall spoyle and wast sauch as feare the LORDE, their goodes shall they take from them, and shute them out of their houses.
Then shal it be knowne who are my chosen,
they shalbe tried as the golde in the fyre.

Hear ye my beloued, saith the LORDE: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at honde, but I wil delyuer you from the same. Be not ye afraied, dispayre not, for God is youre captayne.

Who so kepeth my cōmaundementes and preceptes (sayeth the LORDE God) let not youre synnes weye you downe, let not youre vnrighteousnesse bee lift vp. Wo be vnto the that are subdued vnto their synnes, and tangled in their wickednesses: like as a felde is hedged in with buszhes, and the path therof couered with thornes, no man maye trauayle thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and brent.

The first Chapter.

T OBIAS was of the trybe and cite of Nephtali, which lyeth in the hye countrees of Galile aboue Naason the waye towarde the west, haunyainge the cite of Sephet vpon the left syde.

Though he was taken presonner in the dayes of sSalmanasar kynge of the Assirians, neuertheles beynge in captiuyte, he forsoke not y waye of trueth: In so moch that what so euer he might gett, he parted it dailie with his fellow presonners and brethren, that were of his kynred. And though he were youger the all in the trybe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behave himself childishly in his workes. And whan all the other wente to the golde calues, which "Ieroobam the kynge of Israel had made,

he himself alone fled all their companies, and gat him to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the LORDE, and there worshipped \(^\) LORDE;
God of Israel, \(^\) faithfully offeringe all his first frutes and tithes, so that in the third yeare
he ministred all the tithes vnto the straungers and commerces. These and soch like thinges dyd he acordinge to the lawe of God, whan
he was yet but yonge.

But whan he was a man, he toke out of his owne trybe\(^a\) a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whom he called after his owne name, and taught him from his youth vp, to feare God, and to refraine from all synne.

Now whan he with his wife, his sonne and with all his kynred was come in captiuite vnto Niniue, what tyme as they all ate of the meates of the Heith\(c\), he \(^b\)kepte his soule, and was neuer defyled in their meates. And for so much as he was myndfull of the LORDE in all his hert, God gaue him fauoure\(^c\) in the presence of Salmanasar the kynge, which gaue him power to goe where he wolde, and so had he libertie to do what him list.

So wente Tobias vnto all them that were in preson\(^c\) and comforted them, and gaue them wholesome exortaciones. And whan he came rages a cite of the Medes, bauynge \(^\) ten tal\(c\)tes of syluer (of \(^\) thinges wherwith the kynge had honoured him) and sawe amonge
a great company of people of his kynred,
one Gabelus (which was of his owne trybe)
beynge in necessite, he gaue him the sayde weight of syluer vnder an handwritinge.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deed, and Sennacherib his sonne reigned in his steade, which hated the children of Israel, Tobias wente daylie thorow out all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue of his goodes to every one of the\(c\), as moch as he might: he fed the hongrie, clothed the naked, and buried the deed and slaine, and that diligently.

And whan Sennacherib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Iewry\(^c\), (what tyme as God punished him for his blasphemy) \(^g\) in his wrath slew many of the children of Israel, Tobias buried their bodies.\(^d\) But whan it was tolde the kynge, he commaunded to slaye him, and toke awaye all his goodes. Neuertheles Tobias with his sonne \(^\) with his wyfe fled his wayne, and was hyd naked, for there were many that loued him. But after xiv. dayes dyde the kynge was slayne of his owne sonnes.

Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restored vnto him.

The \(\) Chapter.

AFTER these thinges vpon a solenme
daye of the LORDE Tobias made a good feast in his house, \(^\) sayde vnto his sonne:
Go \(^\) wyfe \(^g\) bryinge bither some of oure trybe,
such as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And wha he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father, that one of the children of Israel laye slayne vpon the strete.
And immediatly he leape from his table, left
the feast, came fastinge to the deed coarse,
toke him \(^\) bare him preuely in to his house, \(^\) whan the Sonne was downe, he might safely burye him. And wha he had hyd the coarse, he ate his meate with mournynge and feare, remembrynge \(^\) wordes, that the LORDE
sayeth by the prophet Amos: \(\) youre hye
feastes shalbe turned to sorowe and heuynes.

But whan \(^\) Sonne was downe, he wente
his waye \(^\) buryed him. Then all his neighbours reprooved him, sayenge: It is not loge, sens it was commaunded to slaye the\(^d\) because of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buriest thou the deed againe? Neuertheles Tobias fearinge God more then the kynge, toke the bodies of the slayne, hyd them in his house, \(^\) buryed them
at myndnight.

It happened \(^\) a daye, that he had buried \(^\) deed, \(^\) was weery, came home, \(^\) layed im downe by the wall \(^\) slept. And whyle
he was a sleepe, there fell downe \(^\) his eyes warne donge out of the swallowes nest, so \(^\) he was blynde. 'This tentacion dyd God suffre to happen vnto him, that they which came after, might haue an example of his pacicke, like as of holy Iob. For in so moch as he ever feared God from his youth vp, \(^\) kepte his commandementes, he was not heuy

against God, that the plague of blindednesch was vnto him, but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thauked God all the dayes of his life.

For like as blessed Job was had in derision of kynges, even so was he laughed to sorne of his elders & kynsfolkes, which sayde vnto him: "where is thy hope, for which thou hast done allmes and buried the dead? But Tobias rebuked the, & spake: Saye not so for we are the children of holy men, & loke for the life, which God shal geue vnto them, that nowe turne their beleue from him. Anna his wife wente daylie to the weepyng worke, & loke what lyuinge she coude gete with the laboure of her handes, she brought it. And it happened she toke a kyd and brought it home.

And when hir husband herid it crie, he sayde: loke ye it be not stollen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not launfull for vs, to eate or to touch any thinges of theft. Then was his wife angrie, and sayde: "Now is thy hope become vayne openly, & thy allmes dedes are manifest. With these so chide thy wordes dyd she cast him in the tethe.

The iii. Chapter.

THEN Tobias toke it heuely, & with teares beganne to make his prayer, sayinge: O LORDE, thou art righteous, & all thy iudgments are true, yee all thy wayes are mercy, faithfullnes & iudgment. And now O LORDE be myndefull of me, & take no vengeance of my synnes, nether remembre my myszdedes nere, & myszdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obebied vnto thy comaunderementes, therfore are we spoyled, brought in to captiuyte, in to death, in to derision & shame vnto all naciones, amõge whõ thou hast seartred vs. And now O LORDE, thy iudgmentes are greate, for we haue not done acordige to thy comaunderementes, nether haue we walked innocently before thy: And now O LORDE, deale with me acordinge to thy will, & comaunde my sprete to be reeceaued in peace, for more expediet were it for me to dye, the to lyue.

At the same tyme it happened, that Sara the daughter of Ragnel at Ragie a cite of Medes was slaundred of one of hir fathers handmaydes, namely, that she shulde haue had seuen husbandes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto hir, were slayne of the deceall called Asmodeus. Therfore when she reproved the mayden for hir faute, she anuerde her, sayenge: God let vs neuer se soone ner daughter of the more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wilt thou slay me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce wete Sara in to an hye chamber of hir house, and thre dayes and thre nightes she nether ate ner drake, but coyntued in prayer, and besought God with teares, that he wole delyuer her from this rebuke.

Upon the thirde daye it chaunce, that when she had made an ende of hir prayer, she praysed the LORDE, sayenge: Blessed be thy name O God of oure fathers, which when thou art wroth, shewest mercy, and in the tyme of trouble thou forgueest the synnes of them, that call vpon the. Vnto the O LORDE turne I my face, vnto the lift I vp myyne eyes. I beseeke O LORDE, lowse me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me vttuely awaye fro of earth. Thou knowest LORDE, that I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnelenly lust. I haue not kepte company with those that passe their tyme in sporte, nether haue I made my self partaker with them that walke in lighte behounoure. Neuertheles a husbande haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture either I haue bene worthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happily hast kepte me to another husband. For why? thy counsell is not in thy power of man. But who so euer loueth the and serneth the a right, is sure, that yf his life be tempted and proued, it stãdeth in the tryenge: and yf he endure in patience, he shal haue a rewarde and be hylie crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doute) shal delyuer him: and yf his life be in chastenyng, that he shall haue leue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in our damb-nacion: why? after a storme thou makest y wether fayre and still: after weeping and heuenes thou guesst greate ioye. Thye name O God of Israel, be praysed for euer. At the same tyme were both their prayers herde in the sight of the majesty of the Hyst God.

And Raphael the holy angel of the LORDE was sent to helpe the both, whose prayers came together before God.

The iiiij. Chapter.

S O whi Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he might dye, he called vnto
him his sonne Tobias, & sayde vnto him:
My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and laye the in thine hert as a foudacion.
When God taketh awaye my soule, burie thou my body, & holde thy mother in honour all the dayes of hir life. For thou oughtest to remembre, what and how greate parels she suffered for y in hir woste. And whi she also hath fulfilled the tyme of his life, bury her bseyde me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy life, & beware, lest at any tyme thou cōsent vnto synne, and lest thou let slippe the commaundemētes of the LORDE oure God.

Geue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shal it come to to passe, that the face of the LORDE shal not be turned awaye from the. Be mercifull after y power. Yf thou hast moch, geue pλēteously: yf thou hast litle, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of that litle. For so gatherest thou thy self a good rewarde in the daye of necessite. For allmes deleyuereth frō death, suffreth not the soule to come in daarknes.
A greate confort is allmes before the hye
God, vnto all them that do it.

My sonne, kepe the well from all whorde,
and (besyde thy wife) se that no faute be knowne of the. Let neuer pryde hau rule in thy mynde ner in thy worde, for in pryde begunne all destrucion.

Who so euer worketh eny thinge for the, immediatly geue him his hyre, and loke that thy hyred seruaunte wagies remayne not by the ouer night. "Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thinge that thou woldest not another mā shulde do vnto the. Eate thy bred with the hongrie and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon the buryall of the righteous, and do not thou eate and drynke therof with the synners. Axe euer eounsell at y wyse.

Be allwaye thankfull vnto God, and beseke him, that he will ordre thy wayes, & that what so euer thou denuyest or takest in hande, it maye remayne in him. I certifie the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a bab)
I deleyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cite of the Medes, & his handwritinge haue I by me. And therefore seke some meanes, how thou mayest come by him, & receaue of him y sayde weight of syluer, and geue him his handwritinge agayne.

My sonne, be not afraied: trueth it is, we lede here a poore life: "but greate good shal we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do well.

The v. Chapter.

THEN answered Tobias his father, &
sayde: father, all that thou hast commaundde me, wil I do, and that diligently.
But how I shal require this money, I can not tell. Nether doth he knowe me, ner I him.
What token shal I geue him? And as for the waye thither, I neuer knew it. Then his father answered him, and sayde: I haue his handwritinge by me, which whan thou shewest him, immediatly he shal paye the. But go thy waye now, & get the some faithfull man to go with y for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue
y money, whylere I am yet luyynge.

Then wente Tobias out, vpon the strete
he founde a fayre yonge man stondings, cyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knew not that it was an angell of God, but saluted him, and sayde:
From whence art thou, thou good yonge man?
He answered: Of the children of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto him: knowest thou
the waye, that ledeth vnto the countre of y Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with oure brother Gabelus, that dwelthis in Rages a cite of y Medes, which lyeth vpon the mount Egbatanis. Tobias sayde vnto him: I praye the, tary for me, tyll
I haue tolde my father these thinges. Then wete Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At y which his father marueled, & prayed, that he wolde come in vnto him.

Now whan the angell came in, he saluted him, and sayde: ioye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias saide: what ioye can I haue, that sith here in darknes, se not the light of heauen? The yonge man sayde vnto him: Be of good cheare, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto him: Canst thou brynge my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cite of Rages in Media? And when thou commest agayne, I shal paye the thy hyre. And the angell sayde vnto him: I shal lede thy sonne, and brynge him to the agayne. Then Tobias answered him: Tell me I praye the, of what house, or of what trybe art thou?

The angell Raphael sayde vnto him: Axest thou after the kynred of an hyrelinge, or sekest thou a gyde for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of great Hananias. And Tobias answered: Thou art come of a grete kynred, but I praye y, be not displeased, that I desyred to knowe thy kynred. The angell sayde vnto him: Thy sonne shal I lede forth safely, and brynge him whole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias, and sayde: well, go on youre waie, and God be in youre journey, and his angell beare you company. So when they had prepared all thinges, they wolde take with them in their journey, Tobias had his father his mother fare well, and they wente on their waye both together. Now whan they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: "The staff of oure age hast thou taken away, and sent him from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent him awaie. Yf we had bene content with oure pouerte, this had bene grete riches vnto vs, that we sawe oure sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, thine eyes shall se him. For I trust, that y good angell of God shall beare him company, and ordre well all the thinges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother left of frô wepynge, helde hir tonge.

The vi. Chapter.

So Tobias wente on his waie, and a dogg followed him, and y first night they abode by the water of Tigris. Then wente he out to wash his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horrible fish to deoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayed, and cried with a loude voyce, sayenge: LORDE, he commeth vpon me. And the angell sayde vnto him: Take him by the cheke blade, and drawe him to the. And he dyd so, and drew him vpô the londe, and the fish beganne to leape at his fete.

Thê sayde the angell vnto him: Take out the bowels of this fish, and as for the hert, the gall and the leuer, kepe them by the. For these thinges are necessary and good for medycyne. Tobias dyd so, and rosted the fish, and they toke him with them in their journey: the residue they salted, as much as was sufficient for them, till they came to Rages. Then Tobias axed the angell, and sayde vnto him: I praye y brother Azarias, tell me, wher to are these thinges good of the fish, that thou hast bydden me kepe?

The angell answered him and sayde: Yf thou layest a pece of the hert vpon the coales, the smoke therof dryueth awaie all maner of euell spretes, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thence forth they shall come nomore vnto them. The gall is good to anoynote or to strake y eyes withall, where as there is eny blemish in them, so shall they be whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wilt thou that we remayne? The angell answered and saide: Here is a nye kinsman of thine, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, hath nether sonne ner daughter but her. All his good belôgeth vnto the, and thou must marie his daughter: and therfore desyre her at her father, and he shal geue her the to wife. Then answered Tobias sayde: As I vnderstone, she hath bene maried vnto seuen husbandes, and they all are deed: and I haue herde saye, that the deuell slewe them. I am afrayed therfore, lest soch thinges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seinge I am the onely sonne of my father and my mother) I shulde bryng the in their age with sorow to their graues.

Then sayde y angell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, and I will tell the, what they be of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of soch a fashiô, that they shut God out from the and from their

The yonge man no answere, the angell sayde vnto hym: Feare not to gene him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wife, therofore might none other have her.

The sayde Raguel: I doute not, but God hath accepted my prayers and tears in his sight: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intent, that this daughter of myne might be married in hir owne kynred, acordinge to the lawe of Moses. And now dowte thou not, but I wil weue her vnto the:

So he toke the righthe of his daughter, and gaue her in to the right hade of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abrahā, the God of Isaac and the God of Iacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfill his blessynge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytynge of the mariage. And then made they mery, and prayed God. And Raguel called Anna his wife vnto him, and had her prepare another chamber, and thither he brought Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of goode cheare my daughter, the LORDE of heauen geue the ioye, for the heunynesse that thou hast suffred.

The viii. Chapter.

NOW after y they had supped, they brought the yonge man in to her. The thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the angell, and toke oute of his bagge a pece of the leuer of the fish, and layed it vpon the hote coales. So the angell Raphael toke holde of the deuell, and sent him awaye, and bounde him in the wyldernes of the hyer Egipte. Thē spake Tobias vnto the virgin, and sayde: Vp Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, tomorrow, and ouermorow: for these thre nightes wil we reconycle oure selues with God: and when the thirde holy night is past, we shall ioyne together in y deuty of mariage. For we are the children of holy men, and we maye not come together as the Heithen, y knowe not God.

Then stode they vp both together, and besought God earnestly, y he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O LORDE God of oure fathers, praysed be thou of heauen earth of the see, welles, floudes, of all the creatures that be therin. Thou maydest Adam of the moulde of the earth, gauest him Europa for an helper. And now LORDE, thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousness, that I take this sister of mine to wyfe, but only for the love of children, in whom thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayde: haue mercy vpon vs (O LORDE) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde to a good age.

And aboute the cocke crowe, it happened, that Raguel called his seruauntes, and they wete with him, to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced vnto him peraduenture, as it dyd vnto the other seuen men, that wente in vnto her. Now wha they made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydes, to loke vff he be deed, that I maye burye him afore it be light daye.

So she sent a mayden to se, which when she came in to the chamber, she founde them whole and sounde, slepyngge togethre. And so she came agayne, she brought good tidinges.

Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe prayes vnto LORDE, and sayde: Prayesed be thou O LORDE God of Israel, For it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast deale mercifully with vs, and put awaye from vs the enemie that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto yonder two beloued. O LORDE, cause the to magnifie the more perfectly, and to offre the the sacrifice of thy praye, and of their health: that all people maye knowe, the thou onely art God in all the earth.

And immediately Raguel commanded his seruauntes, to fyll the graue, that they had made, with earth, afore it was light: and bade his wyfe prepare a feast, to make ready all thinges that were necessary for meate, to soch as wente by waye. He caused two fett kyne also and foure wethers to be slayne, meates to be prepared for all his neighbours and frendes.

And Raguel charged Tobias, to remayne with him two wekes. As for all the good he had, he gave Tobias one half of it, and made his wrytinge, that the half which remayned, shulde fall vnto Tobias after their death.

The ir. Chapter.

THEN Tobias called vnto him the angell, whom he thought to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto him. Brother Azarias, I praye the herké vnto my wordes: Yf I shulde geue myself to be seruaunt, I shal not deserne thy prouydence. Neuertheyes I besekte the, that thou wylt take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the cite of the Medes, and deluyen him his handwrytynge, and receaue the money of him, and praye him to come to my mariage. For thou knowest thyself, that my father telleth the dayes: and yf I tary one daye to longe, he wyl be sory in his mynde. Now seist thou how earnestly Raguel hath required me, so that I can not saye him nay.

Then take Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two Camels, and wente vnto Rages the cite of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gave him his handwrytynge, and receaue all his money. He tolde him also of Tobias sonne of Toby, how all thinges had happened, caused him to come with him to his mariage. Now when he came in to the house of Raguel, he feigned Tobias syttinge at the table: he leape vp, he kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayes God, and sayde: the blessynge of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right verteuous man, of one thereof God, greate and almes. And blessynge haue thy wyfe, and youre elders, that ye maye se your children, and youre chylde, vnto the thirde and fourth generacion, and that youre sede maye be blessed of the God of Israel, which reigneth worlde without ende. And when they all had sayde Amen, they wente to the feast, but with the feare of the LORDE held the they the feast of the mariage.

The r. Chaptr.

NOW whyle ygoe Tobias made longe tarienghe by reason of his mariage, his father was full of care and heuynes, and thought: what shulde be the cause, that my sonne tarieth so longe? Or why shulde he be kepe so longe there? Peraduenture Gabelus is deed, and no man wyl geue him the money. Thus begane he to be very sorowfull, he Anna his wyfe with him, begane to wepe both together, because their sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother, she wepte with discomfortable teares, and sayde: Wo is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye into a straunge countre, thou light of our eyes, thou staff of our age, thou comforte of our life, "thou hope of our generacion? Seinge all thinges that we haue are onely in the, we shulde not haue sent the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and be not discomforted, our sonne is whole and sounde: the man ye we sent him withall, is faithfull yonge. Neuertheles she might in no wyse be conforted: but daylie wente out, loked aboute, and wente aboute all the stretes, whereby she thought he shulde come againe: that (if it were possible) she might se him comminge afarre of.

But Raguel saide vnto his sonne i lawe: O tary here, and I shall sende a messaunger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell him thy thou art in good health. Tobias sayde vnto him: I am sure, that my father and my mother counte everie daye, and that their hertes are sory.

Só when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, sa he wolde in no wyse heare him, he deluyered Sara vnto him, the half parte of all his good: in seruauntes and handymade, in shepe, in camels, and in kyne and mone, and so sent him awaye from him with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holy angell of the LORDE be with you in your iourney, and brynge you forth safe sounde, that ye maye fynde all thinges in good case with youre elders, and that myne eyes maye se youre children, asore I dye.

So the elders embraced their daughter, kyssed her, and let her goe, exorting her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to love her husbande, to rule well her hussholde, to kepe her house in good ordre, and to shew her selfe faultlesse.

The xi. Chapter.

NOW as they were goinge homewarde againe, vpon ye xi. daye they came to Charras, which lyeth in the half waye towards Nimioe. And the angell sayde: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father: therfore ye it please the, we two will goe before, and let the husholde with thy wife and ye catell come soft farly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shulde goe before, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, and they wente their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat daylye by the waye syde vpon ye toppe of an hill, from whence she might se farre aboute her.

And whyle she was waynteinge there for his comminge, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceaued his sonne comminge, and ranne and tolde his husbande, sayenge: beholde, thy sonne commeth. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest in to the house, immediatly worship the LORDE thy God, and geue thanks vnto him: then goe to thy father, and kyse him. And strake his eyes over with the gall of ye fish, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure, that his eyes shal straight waye be opened, and thy father shal se the light of heauen, and shal rejoys in the sight of the. Then the dagg that had bene with them in their iourney, ranne before, and came as a messaunger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

So ye blinde father arose, and beganne to renne, and stumbled with his fete, and gane a seruaunt his hande, ranne to mete his sonne, receaued him, and kyssed him, he and his wife, and beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshipped ye thanked God, they sate downe. Then toke Tobias of the fishes gall, and anoynted his fathers eyes: and taried half an houre, and then beganne the blemyshe to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene the wyte szkynne of an egg: which Tobias toke and drew from his eyes, and immediatly he receaued his sight.

Then they prayed God, he and his wife, and all they that knew him. And Tobias sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, I geue the prayse and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wife also whole and sounde with all ye houesholde and catell, with camels and mone of his wyues, and with the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde his father and his mother all the benefites, which God had done for him, by the man that led him. Achior also and Nabath Tobias sister sonnes came and were glad, ye rejoysed with him, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto him.

And so for ye space of seuen dayes they made mery, and were right joyfull euerichone.
The rii. Chapter.

THE Tobias called his sonne vnto him and trembled, and fell downe vpon their faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the angell: Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene with you, it is the will of God, gene prayse and thankes vnto him.

* You thought that I dyd eate and drinke with you, but I vse meate that is invisible, and drynke that can not be sene of men.

Now thercfor is y tyme that I must turne agayne, vnto him that sente me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his won-derous workes.

And whan he had spoken these worsdes, he was taken awaye out of their sight, so y they sawe him nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces by the space of three houres, and prayesed God: and when they rose vp, they tolde all his wodorous workes.

The rii. Chapter.

T HEN olde Tobias opened his mouth, and prayesed the LORDE and sayde: Greate art thou o LORDE for euermore, and thy kyngdome worlde without ende: for thou scourgest and heolest, thou ledest vnto hell, and bryngest out agayne, and there is none tyme escape thy hande. O gene thankes vnto LORDE ye children of Israel, and prayesem in the sight of the Heithi. For amonge the Heithen which knowe him not hath he scatered you, to the intet that ye shulde shew forth his maruelous workes: a cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God allmightie but he. He hath chast-ened vs for oure myszyedes, and for his owne mercy sake shal he saue vs.

Considre then, how he hath dealt with you, t prayse him with fearde and drede, and magnifie the everlastinge kyngye in your workes.

I wil prayse him euin in the londe of my captiuyte, for he hath shewed his majesty vnto a synfulte people. Turne you therfore O ye symeres, and do righteouues before God, and be ye sure, that he wyl shew his mercy vpon you. As for me t my soule, we wil reioyse in God. O prayse the LORDE all ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnessse, and be thankfull vnto him. O Jerusalem thou cite of God, the LORDE hath punyshed the for the workes of thine owne handes. O praysse the LORDE in thy good things, geue thanks to the euerlastinge God, that he maye builde vp his tabernacle agayn in ÿ, that he maye call agayne vnto the, all soch as be in captiuyte, and that thou mayest haue ioye for euermore. a With a faire light shalt thou shyne, ÿ all ÿ ends of ÿ worlde shal honour the. b The people shal come vnto the from farre, they shal bringe giftes, and worshippe ÿ LORDE in the, and thy londe shal they have for a Sanctuary, for they shal call vpon the greate name in the.

Cursed shal they be that despyse the, ÿ all they that blaspheme the, shall be condempned: but blessed shal they be, ÿ buyld the vp. As for the, thou shalt receyse in ÿ childre, for they all shalbe blessed, and gathered together vnto the LORDE. Blessed are they all ÿ loue ÿ, and be glad of thy peace. Praye thou the LORDE o my soule, for the LORDE our God hath deluyered his cite Jerusalem from all hir troubles. I wil counte my self happie, yf my sede remayne to se ÿ clearnes of Jerusalem.

The gates of Jerusalem shalbe buylded with Saphyre and Smaraged, and all the cõpase of hir walles with precious stones. All hir stretes shalbe paneed with whyte Marble stone, and in all hir stretes shal Alleluia be sung. Prayed be ÿ LORDE, which hath exalted her, ÿ his kyngdome maye be vpon her for euermore, Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

The riij. Chapter.

AND after that Tobias had gotté his sight agayn, he lyued two and xl. yeares, ÿ sawe his childers children. Now when he was an hundreth and two yeare olde, he dyed, ÿ was buried honorably in Ninie. For when he was sixe and fiftie yeares of age, he lost the sight of his eyes, and wha he was thre score yeare olde, he gat his sight agayne. The residu of his life led he in ioye, and increased well in the feare of God, and depar ted in peace.

But in ÿ houre of his death he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, and seven yonge springaldes his sonnes children, and sayde vnto them: The destruccion of Ninie is at hande, for the word of the LORDE can not fayle, and oure brethren that are searted out of the londe of Israel, shal come thither agayne. And the whole londe of it that hath bene waist, shalbe fylled: if and the house of God that was brent in it, shalbe byylded againe, ÿ all soch as feare God shall returne thither: the Heithen also shal forsake their Idols, ÿ come to Jerusalem, and dwell there, and all the kynges of the earth shalbe glad of her, and worship the LORDE God of Israel.

And therfore my children, heare youre father: Serue the LORDE in faithfulnes, seake after his will, and do the thinges that pleaseth him. Commande youre children ÿ they do right, gene allmes, be myndful of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto him in trueth and with all their power. Heare me therefore my childre, and abyde not here: but in what daye so euer ye haue buried youre mother besyde me, gett you from hence. For I se, that the wickednes of it shal brynge it to destruccion and ende.

After ÿ death of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Ninie, with his wife and children, and with his childers children, ÿ came agayne to his father and mother in lawe, and founde them whole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes, and was heyre vnto all Raguelues goodes, and sawe the fift generacion and childers childre. And whan he was xei. yeare of age, he dyed in the feare of the LORDE, and his kynsfolkes buried hym. And all his posterite continued in a good life, and holy conversacion: so that they were loued ÿ accepted both of God and men, and of all the people of the londe.

The first Chapter.

ARCHAXAT the kyng of the Medes subdued many people vnto his dominion, and buyled a noble stronge cite, which he called Egballanias. The walles of it made he of fre stone, foure squared, seuestie cubites hie, and thirtie cubites brode. He made towres therevpon of an hundred cubites hye. But vpon the foure corners euery syde was twentie fote brode. He made the portes in the heith, like as the towres. This kyng trusted in his mightie hoost, and in his glorious charrettes.

So in this twelfte yeare of his raigne it happened, that Nabuchodonosor kyng of the Assirians (which raigned in the greate cite of Niniu) fought agaynst Archaxat, and overcame hi in a greate felde called Ragan, by syde Ephrathes and Tigris and Iadason in the felde of Eritho the kinge of the Elikes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his hert was lift vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damaschus, in Libanus, and vnto the Heithen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to soch as dwelt in Galile in the greate felde of Esedrelo, to all them that were in Samaria, and beyond the water of Iordane vnto Ierusalem and the whole londe of Iesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assirians sende messauengers. But they all with one consent wolde not agree vnto him, and sent the messauengers agayns ephemt and put the awaye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng toke indignacio at all those londes, and sware by his trone that his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all these countrees.

The iiij. Chapter.

IN the xiiij. yeare of kyng Nabuchodonosor, vpon the xxij. daye of his first moneth, it was deuyed in the courte of Nabuchodonosor kyng of the Assirias, that he wolde defende himself. So he called vnto him all his elders, all his capitaynes and men of warre, and shewed them his secrete counsell, and tolde them, that his purpose was, to bryngye the whole earth vnder his domyion. Now when they were all content with this sayenge, Nabuchodonosor the kyng called Holofernes the chefe capitayne of his warres and saide vnto him: Go thy waye forth against all the kyngdomes of the west and specially against those that haue despysed my commandement. Thou shalt spare no realme, all stronge cities shalt thou bryngye in subieccion vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the capitaynes and rulers of all the power in Assiria, and mustred the soulyers vnto the hoost (like as the kyng commaundered him) namely, an hundred and twentie thousande fightinge men vpon fote, and twolue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordunaunce sent he before with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the hoost was well prouyded for with oxen, and small catell, and wytho without nombre. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his hoost. Moch golde and syluer also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and all his hoost, with charrettes, horsmen, and archers: of whom there were so many, that they covered the grounde of the lande, like the gres-hoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assirians, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Ange, which lyte vpon the left syde of Celicia: and so he wente vp in to all their castels, and wanne euery stronge holde. As for the welthie citie of Melothus, he brake it downe, spoyled all the childre of Tharsis and the Ismaelites, which laye towarde the wyldernes and vpon the south syde of the londe of Chelon. He went ouer Ephrathes also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hye cities that were there, from the broke of Mambre till a man come to the see: and he toke the borders in from Celicia vnto the coastes of Iaphe towarde the south. He caried awaye all the Madianites and spoyled all their goothes: who so euer withstande him, he slewe them with the swerde. After this he wente downe in to the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, and brenp vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cutt downe. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dwelt in earth.

The iiij. Chapter.

SO the kynges and prynces of all cities and Londes sent their Embassitours: namely, they of Syria and Mesopotamia, Syria Sobal & Lybia & Celicia, which came to Holofernes, as said: Let thy wrath cease towards us; it is better for vs to serve the great kyng Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be substicke vnto the, then that we shulde dye and be sleyn, and receaue greater hurte. All oure cities and possessions, all mountaynes and hilles, all feldes, great and small catell, shepe, goates, horses, and camels, all oure goodes and housholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subieccion be it alltogether. We oure selues also and oure children wylbe thyne owne, come vnto vs a peecable lorde, and vse oure seruyce at thy pleasure.

Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with horsemé & greate power, and conquered all stronge fensed cities, and all that dwelt in the londe. And out of all cities he toke stronge men, soch as were mete for ý warre, to helpe him. There came soch a feare also vpon those countree, that the indwellers of all the cities, the prynces and rulers the people together, wete forth to mete him as he came, receaued him honorably with garlandes & torches, with daunses, tabrettes and pipes.

Neatherthles though they dyd this, yet might they not swage his rigorous stomak: but he destroyed their cities, & hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the kyng had commanded him, that he shulde rote out all the goddes of the londe: to ý intent that he onely might be called and taken for God, of the nacions which Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wente he thorow Syria Sobal, and thorow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, came to the Idumeans in the lode of Gabaa and Septopol, and toke their cities, and remayned there thirte dayes, wherein he caused all the whole multitude of his host to be gathered together.

The iii. Chapter.

WHAN the children of Israel ý dwelt in Ivery herde this, they were sore afrayed of him. There came soch tremblinge also and feare vpon them, that they sorrowed he shulde do vnto the cite of Jerusalem and the temple of the LORDE, as he had done to other cities & their temples. So they sent in to all Samaria roide aboute vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, made fast the townes with walles, and prepared forre them agaynst the battayll.

Eliachim also ý prest wrote vnto all the that dwelt towards Esdrelon (which lyeth ouer agaynst ý greate felde by Dotha Im) vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wherby there might be eny waye and passage to Jerusalem, ý they shulde holde diligent watch, where eny strate waye was betwixte ý mountaynes. And the children of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the prest of the LORDE had commanded them. And all the people, cried earnestly, and humbld their soules with fastinges and prayers, they and their wyues. The prestes put on hayrie clothes, and layed the yonge babes before the temple of the LORDE, and covered the aulter of the LORDE with an hayrie clothe. And with one acorde cried they vnto the LORDE God of Israel, that their children shulde not be geuen in to a pray, and their wyues in to a spoyle, ý their cities shulde not be layed waist, ý ý their Sanctuary shulde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the Heithen.

Then Eliachim the hye prest of the LORDE wente rounde aboute all Israel, and spake vnto them, sayenge: Be ye sure, ý the LORDE wil heare youre petitions, ý ye constynue stedfast in fastinges and prayers in ý sight of the LORDE. Remembre Moses the seruaunte of the LORDE, which ouerthrew ý Amalechites (that trusted in their might ý power, in their host, in their shildes, in their charettes ý horsmen) not with weapons, but with holy prayers. Euen so shal all the enemies of Israel be, ý ye constynue in this worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpone this exortacion they contynued in prayer before the LORDE: In so much that they which offred brent sacrificies vnto the LORDE, offred the offeringes vnto ý LORDE, beyng arayed in hayrie clothes, and had aszhes vpon their heads. And they all besought God from their whole hert, ý he wolde vyset his people of Israel.

The vi. Chapter.

AND worde came to Holofernes the prynces of the warres of the Assyrias, ý the childrē of Israel prepared them selues to make resistance, & how they had stopped the wayes betwixte the mountaynes. Then was he exceeding wroth, & called all the prynces of Moab, ζ the captyanes of Ammon, ζ sayde unto them: Tell me, what people is this, y kepeth in the moūtaynes? Or what maner of cities are they? What is their power? Or what maner of hoost haue they? Who is their captayne? And why do they despisyse vs (more than then all those that dwell in the east) and come not forth to mete vs, y they might receaue vs with peace?

Then Achior the captayne of all the Am-onites answered, and sayde: Syr, yf it please the to heare me, I wil tell the trueth before the concernyng this people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shal no lye go out of my mouth.

This people is of the generacion of the Caldees, they dwelt first in Mesopotamia, for they wold not folowe y goddes of their fathers that were in the londe of the Caldees, ζ so forsoke they the customes of their fore fathers (which had many goddes) and worshipped one God, that made heauē and earth: which also commanded them that they shulde go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Now whan there came a derth in to y whole londe, they wente
downe to Egipte, ζ there they dwelt foure hundred yeares, in y which they multiplied so greatly, that their hoost might not be nombred.
And whan the kyng of Egipte oppresed them, And subdue the in byuyldinge of his cities with makynge of claye ζ brick, they cried vnto God their LORDE, which punished the whole londe of Egipte with dyuerse plages.

Now whan the kyng of Egipte let the go their waye, ζ the plage ceasėd, ζ then folowed
after the, to take the, ζ to bryngē the agayne
in to his seruyc, whyle they were flyenge awaye, the God of heauē opened y see, so y
the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wall, ζ these were thorow the botome of the see drye shod, In the which place whan an numerable people of the Egipcians folowed upon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters, that there remayned not one, to tell the that came after, how it happenēd.

So whan this people was passed thorow the reed see, they came in to the wildernes of the mount Synaï, where neuer man might dwell afure, ζ where the sonne of mā had neuer rested. ζ There were y better waters made swete for the, that they might drynyke, ζ xl.
years had they meate from heauē. Where sor euer they wente (without bowe ζ arowe, without bukle or swerde) their God fought for the, ζ caused the to haue the victory. Yee no man was able to hurte this people, excepte it were so, y they departed vnfaithfully from y worshippinge of the LORDE their God. But as oft as they worshippēd ζeny other besyde their God, he gau their ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, ζ to be put to confusion.
Neuertheles as oft as they were sory for departyng from the worship of their God, the same God of heauen gaue them power ζ strength to withthest their enemies.

Mororor they slew the kyngye of the Cana-mites, Iebusites, Pherezites, Ethites, Euites, ζ ζ Amorites, ζ ζ all y mightie in Hesebon, ζ take their lodes ζ cities in possession: and so longe
as they synned not in y sight of their God, it were well with them, for their God hateth ynrightousenesse. For in tynes past whan they went out of y waye, ζ which God had geuen them, y they shulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuerse battayles of many nations, ζ many of them shal be caried awaye prisoners into a straunge coutre. But now lately they haue turned the selues agayne vnto
the LORDE their God, ζ are come together agaynē out of the countrees where they were seartred abrode: and thus haue they coyquered these mountaynes ζ dwell therin: ζ as for Jerusalem where their Sanctuary is, they haue
it againe in possession.

And therfore my lorde, make diligēt inquisicion, yf this people have done wickednesse in the sight of their God, then let vs go vp agaynst them, for doubts their God shall de-lyuer them in to thy handes, ζ subdue them vnto y power. But yf this people haue not displeased their God, we shall not be able to withstande them, for their God shall defende
the, ζ so shall we be a shame to all y worlde.

Now whan Achior had spoken out these worde, all the prynces of Holofernes were wroth, thought to slaye him, sayde one to another: what is he this, which darre saie, why childre of Israel are able to withstode Nabuchodonosor the kynge his hoost? where as they are an vnwapened people, without streth or vnderstoldinge of fettes of warre? That Achior thercfore maye knowe, he hath diseaced vs, we wil go vp in to thy mouthe: when the mightie men of the are taken, he also shalbe stickte with the swerde, all people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the eart, and that there is none other without him.

The vi. Chapter.

So when they had left of speakeinge, Holofernes toke sore indignacion, sayde vnto Achior. For so moch as thou hast prophesied vnto us, sayenge: that the people of Israel "shalbe defended of their God, I will shew the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yee when we shalbe all as one man, thou also shalbe perish with them thorow the swerde of the Assirians, all Israel shall be destroyed with the, shal thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the LORDE of the whole eart. Thal shall the swerde of my knyghthode go thorow thy sydes, thou shalt fall downe stickte amounge the wounded of Israel, shalt not come to thy self agayne, but be vterly destroyed with the. But yf thou thinkest thy prophecye to be true, why dost thou then chaunge thy coloure? why art thou afrayed? Thinkest thou that my wordes are not able to be perfourmed? But that thou mayest knowe, that thou shalt fele these things with the, beholde, from this house forth yll I sende the vnto yonder people, that thou the punishement of my swerde (which they haue witherly undesere) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punyshed with them.

So Holofernes commaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, to eary him vnto Bethulia, and to deluyer him in to the handes of the children of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke him, were thorow the playne felde. But when they drew nye vnto the mountayne, the slynge casters came out agaynst them: Neuertheles they gat them awaye by the syde of the mountayne, bounde Achior hand fote to a tre, so left him bounde with wythies, turned agayne vnto their lorde.

Notwithstondinge the children of Israel wente downe fro Bethulia, came vnto him, lowed him, brought him to Bethulia, set him in the myddest of the people, and axed him what the matter was, that the Assirius had left him bounde.

Osius the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Symeon, Charim (which is also called Gothoniel) were the principall rulers at the same tyne. Now when Achior stode in the myddest of the Senatorues, before the all, he tolde them, what answere he gau Holofernes, to the thinges that he axed him, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slaye him for so sayenge, how Holofernes himself was wroth, commaundde him for the same cause to be deluyered vnto Israelites: that when he overcome the childre of Israel he might commaunde Achior also to be put to death with dyvers torments, because he sayde: the God of heauen is their defender.

And wha Achior had playned tolde out all these thinges, all the people fell downe vpon their faces, praysinge the LORDE, and poured out their prayers together vnto the LORDE, with a generall complayne sayde: O LORDE God of heauen eart, beholde their prye, loke vpon oure lowlynes, considre how it standeth with they sayntes, make it to be knowe, thou forsaketh not those, which holde them fast by the, how thou bringest the lowe, presume of the selues, make their boaste in their owne strength. So when the wepyng and prayer of the people (which they had made the whole daye longe) was ended, they coforted Achior, sayenge: the God of oure fathers, whose power strength thou hast praysed, shall so rewarde the, thou shalt rather se their destruccion. Whan thou LORDE of God then shall geue his seruauntes this liberte, God be with the also amongs vs: so it if it please thou with thynye mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Osias had ended the counsell, he toke him in to his house, and made a great supper, called all the elders to it, so they refresshed them selues after the fastinge. And afterwaide was all the people called togethe, which made their prayers all the night longe in the congregacion, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The bij. Chapter.

The next daye Holofernes commanded his hoste, to go vp agaynst Bethulia. There were an. C. xx. thousande fightinge men on fote, a two a twentie thousande horsmē, besyde the prepartyng of them ye were wonne, a came to them on euery syde out of the countreys a cities which he had takē. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayll agaynst the Israelites, and came on by the hyll syde, vnto the topp that loketh ouer agaynst Dothanim, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelemon ye lyeth towardes Esdrelon.

Now when the childē of Israel sawe so greate a multitude of the Assirians, they fell downe flat vpon ye grounde, stroewed aszshes vpon their heads, a prayed with one acorde, ye the God of Israel wolde shew his mercy vpon his people. And so they toke their weapons, a sat betwixte the mountaynes in ye narow place, a kepte the waye daye a night. But whyle Holofernes was goinge aboute, he founde the water springe, which from the south syde was conveyed in to the cite by a conyde: this commaunded he to be directe another waye, a to cut their condite in sunder. There were welles also not farre from the walles, which they used secretly, more for pleasure then for necessite.

Then wente the Ammonites a the Moabites vnto Holofernes, and sayde: The children of Israel trust nether in speare ner arowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hilles. That thou mayest overcomen them therfore without ye strykynge of eny battayll, sett me to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them: so shalt thou destroye the without swerde, or at the least they shall be so feble, that they must be fayne to gene ouer the cite, which they thinke not able to be wone, for so moch as it lieth in the mountaynes. These wordes pleasèd Holofernes well and all his men of warre, and he set an hundrēth men at euery well rounde aboute.

And when this watch had endured twentye dayes, the Cisternes and all that had water, fayled them that dwelt in the cite of Bethulia, so that in ye whole cite they had not drynke ynough for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylie in a measure. Then came the men and women, yonge personnes and children all vnto Osias, and sayde all with one voyce: God be judge betwixte vs and the, for thou hast dealt euell with vs: thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kyng of the Assirians, therfore hath God solde vs in their handes, and there is no man to helpe vs, where as we are brought downe before their eyes in thriste and greate destruccion. Therfore gather now together all the people that be in the cite, that we maye all yelde our selues willingly vnto ye people of Holofernes: for better it is ye we be captuye and praye the LORDE with oure lyues, then to be slayyne and perishe, and to be laughed to scorne a shamed of euery man when we se oure wyues and children dye before oure eyes. We take heauen a earth this daye to recorde, and the God of oure fathers (which punysheth vs acordinge to the deserynge of oure synnes) and gene you warnynge, ye ye gene vp the cite now in to ye power of Holofernes hoost, that oure ende maye be shorte with the swerde, which els shall endure longe for wante of water and for thirst.

When they had spooke out these wordes, there was a greate wepynge and howlynge in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God with one voice, sayenge: we haue synned with oure fathers, a we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly. Thou ye art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punysh oure vrrighteousnes with thine owne scourge, and gene not those ouer that knowe the, vnto a people which knoweth the not, lest they saye amonge the Heithen: where is their God?

And when they were so weery with this crieinge and wepynge, that they helde their tunges, Osias stode vp with watrye eyes, and sayde: O take good hertes vnto you (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyue herties vnto you (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyue herties: for mercy of the LORDE: peraduenture he shal cut awaye his indignacion, and gene glory vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not whan these fyue herties are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

AND it happened when these words came to the eares of Judith a wydow, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idox, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Osias, the sonne of Elaï, the sonne of Iammon, the sonne of Iedon, the sonne of Raphom, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchias, the sonne of Euam, the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the sonne of Symon, the sonne of Ruben. And his husbande was called Manasses, which dyed in the daies of the barlye haruest. For whyle he was byndinge sheeucers together in the feld, the heate came vpon his heade, and he dyed at Bethulia his cite, and there was he buried beside his fathers. Now was Judith his desolate wydow thre yeares six monethes. And in the hyer partes of his hir house she made herselfe a prey chambre, where she dwelt, beyng closed in with hir maydés. She were a smock of hayre, and fasted all the daies of his life, escepte the Sabathes, and new moons, the solemnne daies that the people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayre and beutyfull personne. Hyr husbande also had lefte her greate riches, a plenteous householde, greate vnmoveable possessions and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a very good reporte with euery one, for she feared the LORDE greatly, and there was no body that speake an euell worde of her.

Whā this Judith herde, how Osias had promised the people, "that after the fyfte daie he wolde gene vp in the Assirians, she sent for the elders Chambri and Charmin: and whan they came to her, she seide: what thinge is this, wherin Osias hath consented, if that God helpe not within fyve daies, he wil gene ouer the cite to the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempte the LORDE? This deuyce optayneth no mercy of God, but proouketh him vnto wrath and displeasure. Wyl ye set the mercy of the LORDE a tyme, appoynte him a daie after youre will?"

Neuertheles for so moche as the LORDE is pacient, let vs rather amend oure selues, pouringe out teares, and beseykyng him of grace. "For God threateneth not as a mā, nether will he be prooukod vnto wrath as the children of men. And threfore let vs hertely fall downe before him, and serue him with a meke sprete, and with wepyng eyes saye vnto the LORDE, that he deal with vs accordyng to his owne will and mercy: that like as oure hert is now vexed, brought lowe thorow the pryde of them, it maye so be comforted thorow his grace: in so moche as we folowe not the synnes of oure fathers, which forsoke their God, worshipped other goddes; for the which synne they perished with the swerde, were spoyled brought to shame of all their enemies. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onely him, for whose cōforte let vs tarry with mekenesse. He shall require and make "inquisition for oure bloude, from the vexacions of oure enemies: he shal brynge downe all the Heithen, that rysse vp agaynst vs, and put them to dishonoure, euc the LORDE oure God.

Therfore deare brethren, seinge ye are the honorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all ye people haue respecte, and vpon whom the life of the people stondeth, lift vp their hertes with youre exortacion, if that maye call to remembrance, how oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, if they might be proued, yeft they worshipped their God a right. They ought to remembre, if how oure father Abraham beinge tempted, and tryed thorow many tribulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Iacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, beinge tryed thorow many troubles, were fōde stedfast in faith. Agayne, they that receaued not their tentacions with the feare of God, but put the selues forth with vnpatience and murruryng agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of serpentes. And threfore shulde not we vnertake to be auenged, for the thinge that is done vnto vs: but to considre, that all these punishedes are farre lesse then oure synnes of myszydes: Beleuyng also, that this correccion commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendment, and not for oure destruccions.

Then sayde Osias the elders vnto Judith: All that thou speakes, is true, and no mā can reproue thy worde. Praise thou for vs now thigere vnto God, for thou art an holy womā, and fearest God. And Judith sayde vnsto them: Seynge ye knowe, that my words are of God, then proue my counsell and deuice, yt it be of God: and besoke God, that he wil I bryngye my counsell to a good ende.

Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shal stode this night before the porte, and I wil go forth with Abra my mayde: Praye ye therfore vnsto God, that he wyll graciously remembre his people of Israel within fyue daies, as ye haue sayde. As for the thinge that I go in hande withall, axe ye no questions of it, tyll I open it vnsto you my selfe: do ye nothing els, but praye vnsto the LORDE youre God for me. Then Osias the prync of the people of Juda sayde vnsto her: Go thy waye in peace, the LORDE be with the, that we maye be auenged of our enemies, And so they wente from her agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

NOW whā they were gone their way, Judith wente in to hir oratory, put on an hayre smock, strowed asazhes vpon hir heade, fell downe before the LORDE, and cryed vnsto hym, sayenge: O LORDE God of my father Symeon, which gauest him a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemies, that vsed violence and wilfulnes, and that raueshed y vyrgin and put her to dishonesty. Thou that gauest their wives in to a praye, and their daughters in to captiuyte, and all their praye for a spoyle vnsto thy seruaantes, which bare a zele vnsto the, helpe me wyddow, O LORDE my God, I besoke y. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnynge, and loke what thou hast taken in hande and deuysed, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, thy judgmentes are done in thy everlastinge fore knowlege. O loke now vpon the arrayes of the Assirians, like as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpon the hoost of the Egyptians, when they beynge weaped, persectuyd thy seruauntes, put their trust in their charettes, horsmen, and in the multitude of their men of warre. But thou lokedest vpon their hoost, castinge a thick darcknes before them: and when they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Euē so LORDE let it go with these, that trust in the power and multitude of their men of warre, in their charettes, arowes g speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art oure God, which destroyest warres from the begynnynge, and that thou art the LORDE. O lift vp thine arme now like as euer from the begynnynge, and in thy power bryngye their power to naught, cause their might to fall in thy wrath. They make their boast, they they wyll halowe and defyle thy Sanctuary, and to waist the tabernacle of thy name, and to cast downe the horne of thine aultur with their swerde. Brynge to passe (O LORDE) the pryde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his owne swerde: that he maie be taken with the snare of his eyes in me, and thou mayest smyte him with the lippes of my loun. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyse him and his strength, and that I maye destroye him.

This shal bryngye thy name an euermore remembrance, yt the hande of a woman ouerthowe him. For thy power (O LORDE) stondeth not in thy power of men, nether hast thou eny pleasure in the streth of horses. There was neuer proude persone that pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meke hath thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heavenes, thou maker of the waters, and LORDE of all creatures, heare me poore woman, calryinge vpon the, and puttynge my trust in thy mercy. Remembre thy saneanaut O LORDE, and mynister wordes in my mouth, stabylsh this deuyce in my hert, that thy house maye contynue still in holynes, and that all the Heithen maye knowe and vnderstode, that thou art God, and that there is none other but thou.

The y. Chapter.

AND when she had left of cryenge vnsto the LORDE, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before the LORDE, and called hir mayde, wente downe in to hir house, layd y hayrie cloth from her, put of the garmentes of hir wyddowhode, waszshed hir body, anoyned hir self with precious thinges of sweate sauour, broyded and platted hir hayre, sett an hooze vpon hir head, and put on such apparel as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slippers vpon hir fete, arnemettes, spanges, earynges, fyngere rynges, and deckte herself with all hir best araye.

The LORDE gaue her also a speciall beutye and fayrenesse (for all this deckinge of hir self was not done for eny voluptuousnesse and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discretion and vertue, therefore dyd the LORDE increase hir bewtye) so that she was excedinge amiable and wellauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue hir mayde also a bottell of wyne, a pot with oyle, pottage, cakes, bred of chee, and wente hir waye.

Now when she came to the porte of the cite, she founde Osias and the elders of the cite waitinge there. Which when they sawe her, they were astonnyed, she marueled greatly at her bewty, nevertheles they axed no question at her, but let her go, sayenge: The God of our fathers geue his grace, and with his power perfourme all the deuyce of thy hert: that Ierusalem maye reioyse over the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy righteous. And all they were there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made hir prayer vnto the LORDE, she wente out at the porte, she her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happeneth that aboute the spryng of the daye, the spyes of the Assirians met with her, and toke her, sayenge: whence commest thou? Or whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shalbe geue vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought soorne to yelde the selues vnto you, that they might fynde mercy in youre sight. Therfore haue I deuyed by my self after this maner: I wyll go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell him all their secretes, and wyll shew him, how he maye come by them, and wynde them, so that not one man of his hoost shall perish.

And when these men had herde hir wordes, they considered hir fayre face, they were astonnyed (for they wondred at hir excellent bewtye) she sayde vnto her: Thou hast sauued thye thie by fyndinge oute this deuyce, thou woldest come downe to oure lorde: be thou sure, that whan thou commest vnto him, he shall intreate the well, thou shalt please him at hert. So they brought her in to Holofernes paulyon, and tolde him of her. Now when she came in before him, immediatly he was ouercome and taken with hir bewtye. Then saide his seruauntes: who wolde despyse people of Iews, haue so fayre wemen? Shulde we not by reason fight against the for these? So wha Judith sawe Holofernes sytinge in a canape, was wrought of purple, sylke, golde, Smaragde and precious stones, she loked fast vp hir, fell downe vp the earth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke hir vp agayne, at their lorde commandement.

The ri. Chapter.

THEN sayde Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thine hert, for I neuer hurte man, that wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kyng. As for thy people, if they had not despyed me, I shulde not haue lift vp a speare agaynst the. But tell me now, what is the cause thou art departed from them, and wherfore art thou come vnto vs?

And Judith sayde vnto him: Syr, vnderstone the wordes of thy handmayden: for if thou wilt do after wordes of thy handmayden, the LORDE shall bryng thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the londe lyueth, as truly as his power lyueth, which is in the to the punishement of all men that goe wronge, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the, but all the beasts also of felde. For all people speake of thy prudet actiuyte, and it hath euuer bene reported, how thou onely art good and mightie in all his kyngdome, and thy discretion is commended in all londes.

The thinges is manifest also, that Achior spake, and it is well knoune, what thou commandest to do vnto him. For this is plaine and of a suretye, that oure God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hath shewed by his prophetes vnto the people, how that for their synnes he wyl deluyer them ouer vnto the enemie. And for so moch as the children of Israel knoue that they haue so displeased their God, they are sore afrayed of the. They suffre great honger also, for want of water, they are deed now in a maner. Morover, they are appoynted to slaye all their catell, that they

maye drynk the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamentes of their God (which he hath forbyddē the to touch) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seinge now that they do these things, it is a playne case, ſey they must nedes be destroyed. Whiche when I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, and the LORDE hath sent me vnto 2, to shew the these things. For I thy handmayden worshipe God euen here now besyde the, and thy honde mayden shal go forthe, and I wil make my prater vnto God, and he shal tell me, when he wyl rewarde the their synne: then shal I come and shew the, 3 brynge the thorow the myndest of Ierusaleym, so that thou shalt hawe all 2 people of Israel, as the shepe without a shepheard: there shal not so moke as one dogg barck against the, for these things are shewed me by the prouynedence of God: and for so much as God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to tell the the same.

These wordez pleased Holofernes and all his seruauntes, which marueled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not soch a woman vpon earth, in bewtye and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hither before thy people, that thou mayest geue them in to oure handes. And for so moch as thy promysye is good, 4 thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shal be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and great in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shalbe spoken of in all the londe.

The rij. Chapter.

THEN commanded he her to go in, where his preciouse laye, and charged that she shulde haue hyr dwellyng ther, and appoynted, what shulde be geuen frō his table. Judith answered him, and sayde: "As for the meate that thou hast commanded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but wyl eate of such as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: Yf these things that thou hast brought with the payle, what shal we do vnto the? And Judith sayde: As truly as thou lyest my lorde, thy hande mayden shal not spende all this, tyll God haue brought to passe in my hande, the things that I haue deuyed.

So his seruauntes brought her in to the tent, where as he had appointed. And as she was goinge in, she desyred that she might haue leue to go forth by night 3 before daye, to hir prayer and to make intercession vnto the LORDE. Then commanded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and in at hir pleasure, to praye vnto hir God those thre dayes.

And so in the night season she wete forth in to the valley of Bethulia, and wassshed himself in the well water. Then wente she vp, and besought the LORDE God of Israel that he wolde prosper hir waye, for the deluyeraunce of his people. And so she wente in, and remayned cleane in hir tent, till she toke hir meate in the enenyng.

Vpon 4 fourth daye it happened, 5 Holofernes made a costly supper vnto his seruauntes, and sayde vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and councell this Hebruesse, that she maye be wylynyge to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assirians, that a woman shulde so laugh a man to scorne, that she were come from him vnmeddel withall.

Then wente Vagao vnto Judith, and sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayed, to come in to my lorde, that she maye be honoure before him, that she maye eate and drylke wyne, and be mery with him. Vnto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shal do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shal I thinke well done, as long as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and deckte hirself with hir apparell, and wente in, and stode before him. And Holofernes hert was whole moued, so that he brent in desyre toward her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: drylke now and sytt downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde favoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wil drylke, for my mynde is meryer to daye, than euer it was in all my life. And she toke and ate and dranke before him, the things that hir mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranke more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his life.

* Gen. 34. f.
The Lord hath performed his word, and shewn his might in the eyes of the heathen: the Lord hath performed his word, and shewn his might in the eyes of the heathen. Therefore shall the heathen know that thou, O Lord, didst it; and the children of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God, from that time forth.

And the children of Israel served the Lord forty years.

And their clothes did wax old upon them in the wilderness.

And the children of Israel came into the wilderness of Zin unto Kadesh. And Miriam died there, and was buried in Kadesh. And Aaron served in the wilderness forty years among the children of Israel. And they took up arms, and fought against Amalek, and smote them.

And they came to Mount Hor: and the Lord said unto Aaron, my servant, take this man Moses my servant, and thou shalt come up in the mount unto me: and Aaron shall come up, and Moses shall be not die: only take this Caleb the son of Jephunneh, who was yet in my sight, and shall come up with thee, and shall give theeas an outline of the text:

threatened with destruction, sayenge: "when the people of Israel is take, I shall cause the also to be stickte with the swerde. When Achior sawe Holofernes heade, he fell downe vp on his face to the grounde for very anguish fear, so y’ he swooned withall. But after that he was come agayne to himself, he fell downe before her y’ prayed her, sayenge: Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Iacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall prays the God of Israel because of the.

The xxxii. Chapter.

IUDITH saieth vnto all the people: Brethren heare me, Styeke vp this heade vpon oure walles, and when the Sonne aryseth, take euery man his weape, and fall out violently: not as though ye wolde go besyde them, but to renne vp on them with violence. When the spies in the têttes se this, they shall of necessite be copelled to fle bacwarde, and to rayse vp their captayne to the battyll. So wha their captaynes come in to Holofernes paylion, and fynde the deed body wrapped in the bloude, fearfulnes shall fall vp on them: and when ye perceau that they fle, folowe them without all care, for God shall delyuer them vnto you, to be destroyed.

Then Achior seyng the power of God which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his Heithenish beleue, and put his trust in God, and let him selfe be circumcicde: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israel, and he all his posterite vnto this daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they stickete vp Holofernes heade vpon the walles, and euery man take his weape, and so they vnto out with an horrible crye. Whan the spies sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the têt, came before his chamber, and made a greate russzinge to wake him vp, because they thought with the noyse to haue raised him. For there durst not one of the Assirians knocke, go in, ner to open.

But whan the captaynes and pryncees and all the chefe in the kyng of the Assirians hoost came together, they saieth vnto the chamberlaynes: Go youre waye in, and wake him vp, for the myse are crepte out of their holes, and darre prouoke vs vnto battayll.

Then wente Vagao in to his chamber, stode before the bed, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had bene slepyng with Iudith.

But wha he had herkened perfectly with his eares, and coude perceau no sterynge, he wente nyer to the bed, and lift it vp, and then sawe he the deed body of Holofernes lyenge there without a heade, weltrid in his bloude vpon the earth. Then cried he with loude voyce, and with wepyngent rent his clothes, and wente in to Iudith’s tent, and founde her not: And so he leppte out vnto the people, and sayde: one woman of y’ Iewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame.

For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde, and hath no heade.

Whan the chefe of the assirians hoost herde that, they rennte their clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and tremblinge vpon them, so y’ theyr myndes were sore afayed. And there was an excedadnyge greate crye in the whole hoost.

The xxx. Chapter.

NOW whan all the hoost herde that Holofernes was headed, their mynde and counsell fell from them: and soch a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by flyenge awaye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe their heads, left all behynde them, and made haist to escape from the Hebrues: for they herde, that they were haistinge to come after with their weape, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldes, and thorow all the fote pathes of the dales.

And whan y’ children of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowde vpon them, and wente downe with tröpettes, blowinge and makynge a greate crye after the. As for the Assirians, they had no ordre, and keppee not the selues together, but fled their waye. Neuerthelesse the children of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ordre, and discomfited as many as they might gett. And Osias sent messaungers vnto all the cities and coûtrees of Israel.

So all the regions and euery cite sent out their best men after them in harness, smote them with the sword, till they came to the utmost part of their borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came in to the têtes of the Assirians, and toke all that they which were fled, had left behinde them, and so they founde great good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from the battayll, toke with them soch thinges as had bene theirs: there was no nòbre of the catell, and of all costly Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hyest, they were all made riche of the spoyles of them. And Ioachim the Hye prest at Ierusale, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they might se Iudith.

Now whan she came out vnto them, they begane all to prayshe her with one voyce, sayenge: thou worshiphe of the cite of Ierusale, thou ioye of Israel, thou honour of oure people, thou hast done manly, and thy hert is comforted, because thou hast loued elenlynes and chastitye, hast knowne no man but thine owne husbande: therfore hath the hôte of the LORDE comforted the, and blessed shal the be for euer. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In thirtie dayes coude the people of Israel scare gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had bene his specially, (whether it were of golde, of syluer, precious stones, clothinge and all ornamentes) they gane it vp Iudith. And all the people rejoysed, both women, maydens, and yonge people, with pipes and harpes.

The 16th Chapter.

THEN sange Iudith this songe vnto the LORDE: Begynne vnto the LORDE vpon the tabrettes, singe vnto the LORDE vpon the cymbals. O syngne vnto him a new songe of thankesgivinge, be joyfull and call vpon his name. It is the LORDE that destroyeth warres, euyn the LORDE is his name. Which hath pitchted his tentes in the mynddest of his people, that he might deluyer vs from the hande of all oure enemies. Assur came out of the mountaynes in the multitude of his strength. His people stopped the water brokes, and their horses couered the valleys.

He purposed to haue brêt vp my londe, and to slaye my yonge men with the sword.

He wolde haue caried awaye my children and virgins in to captiuyte, but the allmightie LORDE hurte him, and deleyuered him in to the handes of a woman, which brought him to confucion. For their mightie was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Titan that slew him, nether haueth the greate gauntes set them selues agaynst him: but Iudith the daughter of Merari with her fayre bewythe hath descomfite him, and brought him to naught. For she layed awaie her widdowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnesse in the reioysinge of the children of Israel. She anoynted hir face, and bounde vp hir hayre in an hooue, to begyle hime. Hir slippers rauished his eyes, hir bewythe capituated his mynde, with the sworde smote she of his neck. The Persians were astonnyed at hir stedfastnesse, and the Medes at hir boldnes. Then howled the armyes of Assirians, when hys symple appeared, drye of thyrst. The sonnes of the daughters haue pearsed them thorow, and slayne them as fugitive childre: they pershyed in the battayll, for the very feare of the LORDE my God. Let us syng a songe of thakesgeuynge vnto the LORDE, a new songe of prayshe wyl we syng vnto our God. LORDE, LORDE, thou art a greate God, mightie in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the, for thou spakest but the word, they were made: thou sente thy sprete, they were created, and no man maye withstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shal moue from the foundacions with the waters, the stony rockes shal melt before the like waxe. But they that feare the, shal be greate with the in all thinges. Wo vnto the people that ryse vp against my generacion, for the allmightie LORDE wyl Iueneg he selfe of them, in the dayes of iudging wyl he vsyt them. For he shal geue fyre and worms in to their flesh, that they maye burne and fele it for euermore.

After this it happened, that after the victory all the people came to Ierusale, to geue prayshe and thankes vnto the LORDE. And wha they were purifid, they offred all their brelt sacrificies and their promysed offerynges.

So after these dayes euery man wente home agayne, and Judith was in greate reputacion at Bethulia, and right honorably taken in all the londe of Israel. Vnto hir vertue also was chastite ioyed, so y after hir husbonde Manasses dyed, she neuer knew man all the dayes of hir life. Vpon the hye solempne dayes she wente out with greate worshipe. She dwelt in hir husbandes house an hundreth and fyne yeare, a left hir honde mayden fre, and dyed, and was buried beside hir husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes.  b So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeares also after hir death.

The daye wherein this victory was gotten, was solemnly holden, and rekened of the Iewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and is yet greatly holden of the Iewes enuer sence, vnto this daye.

The xi. Chapter after the Latyn.

In this chapter is descriyde the dreame of Mardocheus.

A Mardocheus the sonne of Iair, the sonne of Semei, c y sonne of Cisei of y trybe of Ben Iamin a Jew: which had his dwellynge in Susis, a man of greate reputacion, a excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges courte (Neuerthelesse he was one of the presoners, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon had caried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilon with Iechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the seconde yeare of the raigne of greate Artaxerses in the first daye of y moneth Nisan, had this Mardocheus soch a dreame: He thought he herde a greate tepest, horrible thondereclappes, erthquakes, a greate vprour in y londe: a y he sawe two greate dragos, ready to fight one agaist another. Their crye was greate. At the which roaringe and crye all Heithen were vp, to fight agaynst y righteous people. And y same daye was full of darknes a very vncleare, full of trouble a anguysh, yee a greate fearfulnes was there in all the londe. The righteous were amased, for they feared y plage a euell y was deuyed ouer the, a were at a poynte with them selues to dye. So they cried vnto God, and while they were cryenge, the little well grew in to a greate ryuer a in to many waters. And with y it was daye, a the sonne rose vp agayne. And y lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorious and proude.

Now whan Mardocheus had sene this dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his hert, what God wolde do: and so he desyred to knowe all the matter, and his mynde was there vpon vntyll the night.

The xij. Chapter.

In this chapter is declared, how Mardocheus vttreth the treason of the two seruauntes agaynst the kynge, and therfore doth the kynge rewarde him.

At the same tymne dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Thares the kynge chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he herde their deuyce, and had diligently considered their ymaginationes, he perceaued that they wente aboute, to laye their cruell randes vpon the kynge Artaxerses: and so he certified the kynge therof. Then cause the kynge to examen y two gelded with tormentes. And when they had granted it, they were put to death.

This the kynge caused to be put in y Cronicles for an euerylasting remembrace, and Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kynge commanded, that Mardocheus shulde do seruyce in the courte, and for this faithfulnessse of his, he gaue him a rewarde. But Aman the sonne of Amadahu the Agagite, which was holde in great honour and reputacion in the kynes courte, vnder-toke to hurte Mardocheus in his people, because of the two chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The xiiij. Chapter

The copie of the commandement, which kige Artaxerses (by the entisinge of Amâ) sent out in to all countrie, for the destruction of the Iewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

The greate kynge Artaxerses which reigned from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundredthe and seuen and twentie londes, sendeth his friendly saluation vnto all the prynces and debytes of the countrees, which be subiecte vnto his dominion. When I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my dominion, my mynde was not with cruelte and wronge to exile myself by the reason of my power: but purposed with equyte allwaye and gentynles, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction, and wholly to set them in a peaceable life, and therby to brynyge my kyngdome vnto tranquylite, that men might safely go thorow on euer syde, and to renue peace agayne, which all men desyre. Now when I axed my councelers, how these thinges might be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellët in wysdome, whose good wyll, trueth x faithfulness hath oft bene shewed x proued (which was also x princippal x next vnto x kige) Amâ by name, which certified vs, how x in all lodes there was crepente in a rebellious folk, x made statutes x lawes agaynst all other people, x haue allwaye despyes the proclaimed commandementes of kynge: and how that for this cause it were not to be suffed, that soch rule shulde contynue by you x not to be put downe. Seinge nowe we perceau the same, that this people alone are contrary vnto euer man, vseynge straunge and other manner of lawes, x withstondeoure statutes and doinges, and go aboute to stablish shrewd matters, that oure kyngdome shulde never come to good estate and stedfastnes: Therfore haue we commanded, that all they that are appoynted in wyrtinge and shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordened and set ouer all oure busynes, and the most princippall next vnto the kynge, and in maner as a father) shal with their wyues x children be destroyed and roted out with the swerde of their enemies and aduersaries: x x there shalbe no mercy shewed, x no man spared. And this shalbe done x xijij daye of the moneth called Adar) of this yeare, that they which of olde (and now al.so) haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye with violence be thrust downe in to the hell, to the intët that after this maner, oure empyre maye haue peace and tranquylite.

But Mardocheus thought vpon all the workes and noble actes of x LORDE, x made his prayer vnto him, sayenge: O LORDE LORDE, thou valeaunt and allmichtie kynge (for all thinges are in thy power, and ye thou wilt helpe and deluyer Israel, there is no man that can withstode ner lett the: for thou hast made heauen x earth, and what wonderous thinges so euer is vnder the heauen: thou art LORDE of all thinges, and there is no man, ye can resist the O LORDE) Thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest LORDE, that it was nether of malyce, ner presumpcion, ner for eny desyre of glory, that I wolde not bowe downe myself ner worship yeonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene cõtent, and ye with good wyll, ye it might haue done Israel eny good, to haue kyst euë his fotesteppe) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not sett the honoure of a mâ in the steade of the glorye of God, and because I wolde worshippe none but onely ÿ my LORDE. And this haue I done in no pyder ne presumpcon.

And thereafter O LORDE thou God and kinge, haue mercye vpon thy people for theyymagyn how they maye bringe vs to naught, yee their mynde and desyre is to destroye and to ouerthrowe the people, that hath euere bene thine inheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy porcio, which thou hast deluyered brought out of Egipte for thine owne self. Heare my prayer, and be mercifull vnto thy people, who thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thyself. Turne oure complaynte and sorow in to ioye, that we maye lyue O LORDE, and praysye thy name. O LORDE, suffer not ÿ mouthes of them that praise the, to be destroyed.

All ÿ people of Israel in like maner cried as earnestly as they coude vnto the LORDE, for their death and destruction stode before their eyes.

The viiiij. Chapter.

Of the sorowe, complaynte and prayer of queue Hester.

QUENE Hester also beyenge in the battayll of death, resorted vnto the LORDE, layed awaye hir glorious apparell, and put on the garmetes that sereued for sighinge and mournyng. In the steade of precious oymant, she scatred ashes and doge vpon hir heade: and as for hir body, she humbled it, and brought it very lowe, All the places where she was vste to haue ioye afore, those fyllad she with ÿ hayre, ÿ she ploxte out hirself. She prayed also vnto the LORDE God of Israel with these wordes:

O my LORDE, thou onely art oure kyenge, helpe me desolate woman, which haue no helper but ÿ, for my miserye and destruction is harde at my hande. Fro my youth vp I haue herde "out of the kynred of my father, that thou toxeste Israel from amôge all people (and so haue oure fathers of their fore elders) that they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, and loke what thou didest promise ðe, thou hast made it good vnto ðe.

Now well LORDE, we haue synned before the, therefore hast thou geuen vs in to the hâdes of oure enemies, because we worshipped their goddes. LORDE thou art righteous. Neuertheles it satisfieth ðe not, that we are in bytter and heuy captiuyte and oppressed amongethe, but thou hast layed their hondes vpon the hondes of their goddes: so that they begynne to take awaie, the thinge that thou with thy mouth hast ordened and appoynted: to destroye thyne inheritaunce, to shut and to stoppe ÿ mouthes of them that praysye the, to quech the glory and worship of thy house and thine altar, and to open the mouthes of the Heithen, ÿ they maye praysye the power ð vertue of the goddes, and to magnifie the fleschly kyngge for euere.

O LORDE, geue not thy ccepter vnto the that be nothinge, lest they laugh vs to scorne in oure misery and fall: but turne their deyuce vpo them selues, and punysh him, that hath begonne the same ouer vs, and set him to an example. Thinke vpon vs O LORDE, and shew thy self in ÿ tyme of oure distres and of oure trouble. Strengthe me O thou kyngge of goddes, thou LORDE of all power, geue me an eloquêc and pleaunaut speach in my mouth before the Lyon. Turne his hert in to ÿ hate of oure enemie, to destroye him, and all soch as consent vnto hym. But de-luyer vs with thy hande, and helpe me desolate woman, which haue no defence ner helper but onely ÿ. LORDE thou knowest all things, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worshipse of the vnrighteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vnircyceded and of all Heithen.

Thou knowest and wotest my necessite, ÿ
I hate the token of my preemynence ð worshippe, which I beare vpon my heade, what tyme as I must shew my self and be sene, ð that I abhorre it as an vnclene cloth, and that I were it not whi I am quyete and alone by my self. Thou knowest also that I thy honde mayden haue not eaten at Amas table, and that I haue had no pleasure ner deleyte in the kynges feast, that I haue not dronke the drynkofferinges, and that I thy honde mayden haue had no ioye sens ÿ daie that I was brought hither vnto this daye: but onely in the O LORDE. O thou God of Abrahum, O thou mightie God aboue all, heare the voyce of them, that haue none other hope, and delyuer vs out of the hande of y wicked, α delyuer me out of my feare.

The 17th Chapter.

Quene Hester appareth before the kyng, with an heuy hert for the trouble of hir people, and God turneth the kynges hert.

AND vpon y thirde daye it happened, that Hester layed awaye y mournyng garmetes, and put on hir glorious apparell, and dexte hirself gladly (after that she had called vpon God, which is the beholder of all things) toke two maydes with her: upon the one she leaned hir self, as one y was tender: the other followed her, and bare the trayne of hir vesture. The shyne of hir bewtyle made hir face rose coloured. The similitude of hir face was chearful and amayle, but hir hert was sorouful for great feare. She wente in thorow all the dores, and stode before the kyng. The kyng sat vpon the trone of his kyngdome, and was clothed in his goodly arraye, all of golde, and sett with precious stones, and he was very terryble. He lift vp his face, that shone in the clearnes, and loaked grumly vpon her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and fastyn, leaned hir self vpone the heade of the mayde that wente with her.

Neuertheles God turned y kynges mynde, that he was gentle, that he leape out of his seate for feare, and gat hir in his armes, α helde hir vp tylly she came to herself agayne. He gaue her louynge wordes also, α sayde vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye: for oure commandement toucheth the comons, not the. Come nyc. And with that he helde vp his golden wande, and layed it vpon hir neck, and embraced her hirself, and sayde: talke with me. Thē sayde she: I sawe the (O lorde) as an angell of God, α my hert was troubled for feare of thy masyestie and clearmesse. For excellent and wonderfull art thou (O lorde) and thy face is full of anyte. But as she was thus speakynge vnto him, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the which cause the kyng was afrayed, and all his seruauntes comforted her.

The 18th Chapter.

A copye of the commandement, which kinge Artaxerxes caused to be proclaimed in all the countreys of his domynion, for the wealth of the Iews.

THE greate kyng Artaxerxes, which a raigneth fro India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and xxvij. londes, sendeth vnto the pryynces α rulers of the same londes, such as loute him, his frendly salutation. There be many, that for the sondry frendshipes and benefits which are diuersely done vnto them for their worship, be euer y more proude and hye mynded, and vndertake not only to hurte oure subjectes (for plentuous benefits maye they not suffre, and beygne to ymagyn some thing agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all vnthankfulnes awaye fro men) but in pryde and presumpcion (as they that be vmynedefull and vnthakfull for the good dedes) they go aboute to escape the judgment of God, y seyth all things, which (judgment) hateth α punysheith all wickednes. It happeneth oft also, y they which be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the busynes and causes of the subjectes are comytted to be handled, waxe proude, and defyle the selues with sheddynge of innocent bloude, which bryngeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and disceatfull wordes and with lyenge tales, diseaue and betraye the innocent goodnes of prynces.

Now is it profitable and good, that we take hede, make search therafter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of old, but the shamefull, vnhoneste, and noysome things, that the debites haue now taken in hande before oure eyes: and therby to bewarre in tyne to come, that we maye make the kyngdome quyete α peaceable for all men, and that we might some tyne drawe it to a change: and as for y things that now is present before oure eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

What tyne now as Aman the sonne of Amadathu y Macedonian (a stranger verely of the Persians bloude, and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amođe vs as an aleaunt, and had optayne the frendshiphe that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hys honoure of euery man, as the next and pryncipall vnto the kyngye, he coude not forbeare him self from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to robe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure life.

With manyfolde discate also hath he deyred to destroye Mardocheus oure helper and preseruer, which hath done vs good in all things: and innocent Hester the like partaker of oure kyngdome, with all hir people. For his mynde was (whan he had takè them out of the waye, and robed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians vnto thè of Macedon. But we fynde, that the Iewes (which were accused of y wicked, y they might be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vs reasonable y right lawes, and that they be the children of the most Hye lyuyng God, by whom the kyngdome of vs and oure progenitours hath bene well orde red hither to. Wherfore, as for the letters and comaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shal do well, yf ye holde them of none efficte: for he that set them vp and inuented thè, hangeth at Susis before the porte, with all his kinred, and God (which hath all thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruyng.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp the copy of this letter in all places, that the Iewes maye frely and without hinderance holde them selues after their owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpò y xiiij. daye of y xiiij. moneth Adar they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of their anguysh and trouble wolde haue oppressed thè. For the God that gourmeth all thinges, hath turned to ioye, the daye wherein y chosen people shulde haue perished.

Mouer, amòge the hys solemne dayes that ye haue, ye shal holde this daye also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembranc to good, for all soch as loue the prosperite of the Persians: but a remembranc of destruccion to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and lôdes that do not this, shal horribly perish and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be no more inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of y Wilde beasts y foules.
The boke of Wyszdome.

What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. I.
An exortacio for judges and rulers to loue wyszdome. The sprete of wyszdome hateth falsede, dissimulacion and Ypocrystie, rebuketh vnrighteousnesse and abborreth wicked doers.

Chap. II.
The ymaginaciō and thoughtes of the vngodly, how they geue the selues ouer vnto synne, and persecute all vertue and trueth.

Chap. III.
The felicite and health of godly people, though they be put here to trouble and heuynesse: Agayne, what sorowe shall happen to the vngodly and their children.

Chap. IIII.
To lyue chaist a godly withall, is cômendable. A dispraye of the wicked. The honoure of vertue age. The shamefull death of the vngodly.

Chap. V.
How the iust men shal stode against the wicked, that haue put them here to trouble a what sorowe shall come vpon the vngodly. Agayne, what ioye shal happen to the righteous, which haue God himselfe for their defece.

Chap. VI.
An exortacion vnto soich as he in rule and auctorite, to receaue wyszdome. A commudacion of wyszdome.

Chap. VII.
All men haue like intrauce in to the worlde: yet who so calleth vpon God for wyszdome, shal haue his desyre. The profit that cômeth by wyszdome passeth all other thinges.

Chap. VIII.
Wiszdome shulde be receaued in youth. He that marieth himselfe vnto her, shal optayne loue of God and men.

Chap. IX.
A prayer vnto God for the gift of wyszdome.

Chap. X.
What profit and good came by wyszdome in the olde tyme.

Chap. XI.
How wiszdome ledeth the righteous, a how the vngodly are punyshed thorow the mightie hande of God.

Chap. XII.
God is mercifull and suffreth longe, to the intent that synners shulde amende.

Chap. XIII.
Vayne are they that haue not the knowlge of the lyuyngge God, but turne vnto the creatures: vnhappie are they that honoure ymages.

Chap. XIIIII.
The worshippinge of ymages. The power of God. Punishment of them that make ymages, and of soch as worshipe them. How ymages came vp first. The honouringe of ymages is the cause, begynnynge, and ende of all myschefe.

Chap. XV.
The faithfull haue respecte vnto God and not vnto ymages.

Chap. XVI.
God punisheth the wicked, but defendeth the godly, a that by great wondres.

Chap. XVII.
Of the greate darknesse in Egipte, and blyndnesse of the vngodly.

Chap. XVIII.
How God destroyed the firstborne of Egipte. Gods people eate the easter lambe joyfully, the Egiptians mounre. God punysheth the synners in the wilderness. Moses intreateth for the people.

Chap. XIX.
Like as the wicked are ever synnynge more and more, so doth the wrath of God neuer ceasse, tyll they be destroyed. Of them that were punyshed in the tyme of Loth.
O SET youre affection vpô wyszdome, ye that be idues of the earth: Threfore Deut. 1. seke him in the synglenesse of hert. For he will be foud of them that tempte him not, and appareth vnto soch as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertue (yf it be allowed,) refourmeth y vnwyse. And why? wyszdome shalborn entre in to a frowarde soule, ner dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy goost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, withdraweth himself from thoughtes that are without vnderstandinge: where wickednes hath the vpper hade, he flieth from thence. For the sprete of wyszdome is louinge, gentle and gracious, and wil haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euell with his lippes. For God is a wittis of his reynes, a true searcher out of his hert, and an heers of his tonge. For the sprete of the LORDE fylleth the rounde compasse of the world, and y same that vpholdeth all thinges, hath knolwge also of the voyce. Therfore he that speaketh vnrighteous thinges, can not be hydd, nether maye he escape the judget of reprofe. And why? inquysicion shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shal come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punished. For the eare of gelousy heareth all thinges, and the noyse of the grudginges shal not be hydd. Therfore beware of murmuringe, which is nothinge worth, and refrayne youre tonge from slaunder. For there is no worde so dace and secrete, that it shall go for naught: and the mouth that speaketh lynes, slayeth the soule. O seke not youre owne death in errore of youre life, destroye not youre selues thorow the workes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made death, nether hath he pleasure in the destruccion of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they might haue their beyJge: yee all the people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue health, that there shulde be no destruction in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vpon earth (for righteousnesse is euerlastinge and immortall, but vnrighteousnes bringeth death.) Neuerthlessse, the vngodly call her vnto them both with wordes & worke, & whyle they thinke to haue a frend of her, they come to naught: for the vngodly that are confedarete with her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

FOR y vngodly talke y imagin thus amongeth them selues (but not right:) The tyme ofoure life is but short y tedious, & when a man is once gone, he hath nomore joye ner pleasure, nether knowe we eny man that turneth agayne from death: for we are borne of naught, & we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breth is as a smoke in our nostrils, y wordes as a sparc to moue our herte. As for our body, it shalbe very assshes y are queched, y soule shal vanish as y soft ayre. Our life shall passe awaye as y trace of a oule, y come to naught as y myst y is dryne awaye with the beames of y Sunne, y put downe with the heate thereof. Oure name also shall be forgotten by litle litle, & no man shal hame oure worke in remembrance.

For oure tyme is a very shadow y passeth awaye, & after oure ende there is no retourynge, for it is fast sealed, so y no mame cometh agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enjoye y pleasures y there are, & let vs soone vse y creature like as in youth. We will fyll oure selues with good wyne & oyntment, there shall no floure of the tyme go by vs. We will crowne oure selues with roses afore they be wythered. There shall be no fayre medowe, but oure lust shal go thorow it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure volupteouses.

For opresse the poore righteous, let vs not spare the wyddowe ner olde man, let vs not regard y heads y are gray for age. Let y lave of vnrighteousnesse be oure auctorite, for y thinges y is feble is nothinge worth. Therfore let vs defraude the righteous, & why? he is not for oure profit, yee he is cleane cötry to oure doings. He checketh vs for offendinge agaynst y lave, a

The righteous shall shine as the sparks by renne thorow the rede bushe. They shall judge the nations, and dominion over the people, their LORDE shall reign for ever. They put their trust in him, shall understand the truth, and so shall be faithful, will agree unto him in loue: for his chosen shall haue gifts of peace. But the vngodly shall be punished accordyng to their aweyne imaginations, for they haue despysed the righteous, forsaken the LORDE.

Who so despyseth wyszdome and nortoure, he is vn happie, and as for the hope of soch, it is but vayne, their labours vnprofitable, and their workes vnprofitable. Their wyues are vn discrete, and their childre most vngodly. Their creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the baren, vndefyled, which hath not known the synfull bedde: she shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, which with his handes hath wrought no vnrighteousnesse, nor ymagned wicked things against God. For vnto him shall he be geuen a speciall gift of faith, and the most acceptable porcion in his temple of God. For glorious is the frute of good labour, the rote of wyszdome shall never fade away. As for the childre of aduoturers, they shall come to an ende and the seeds of an vnrighteous bedd shall be roted out. And though they lyue lõge, yet shall they be nothing regarded, their last age shalbe without honoure. Yf they dye hastily, they haue no hope, neither shal they be spoken to in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnrigh-eous.

The iiiij. Chapter.

O HOW fayre is a chaist generacion with a vertue? The memorialis thereof is immortal, for it is knowne with God and men. When it is present, me take ex ample thereat: and yf it go awaye, yet they desyre it. It is alwaies crowned holden in honoure, wynned the reward of the vndefyled battayll. But the multitude of vngodly childre is unprofitable, and the thinges are planted with whor dome, shal take no depe rote, ner laye eny fast foundation: Though they be grene in the braunches for a tyme, yet shal they be shake with the wynde: for they stonde not fast,

Rom. 8. c. 2 Cor. 5. a. 4 Matt. 13. c. 1 Cor. 15. c. Matt. 19. e. 1 Cor. 6. a. 1 Matt. 25. d. a. 2 Esd. 56. b. 1 Iere. 17. b. Mal. 1. a. Mat. 7. c. or the vehemence of the wynde they shalbe roted out. For the vnparfecte branches shalbe broken, their frute shalbe vnprofitable & sower to eate, yee mete for nothinge.
And why? all the children y are borne of the wicked, must beare recorder of the wickednesse agaynst their fathers mothers, when they be axed. But though the righteous be overtaken with death, yet shal he be in rest.

Age is an honorable thing: neuertheless it standeth not only in the lenth of tyme, ner
in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wyszdome is the graye hayre, and an vndefyled life is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amóge synnes, he trislated him. Yee sodely was he taken awaye, to the intent y wickednesse shuld not alter his vnderstödinge, & y
y pocrisye shuld not begyle his soule. For y craftie bewitchinge of lyes make good things darek, & vnsetedfastnesse also wickednes of voluptuous desire, turne asyde vnderston-dinge of y symple. Though he was soone deed, yet fulfilled hee monch tyme. For his soule pleased God, therfore haisted he to take him awaye frô amóng y wicked. This the people se, & vnderstondid it not: they laye not yf soch thinges in their hertes, how yf y louyngge favoure in mercy of God is vpô his saintes,
yf y he hath respecte vnto his choosen.

Thus yf righteous y is deed, códemneth the vngodly which are lyuinge: & yf youth y is soone brought to an ende, yf lóge life of yf vngodly. For they se yf ende of yf wyse, but they vnderstöde not what God hath deuyed for him, & wherfore yf LORDE hath taken him a waie. And why? they se him yf despisy he, therfore shall God also laugh
the to scarce: So yf they the selues shall dye
here after (but without honoure) yee in shame amonge yf deed for euermore. For without enoy voyce sha he burst those yf be puf at vp,
yf remoue the fro yf foundacions, so yf they shalbe laied waist vnto the hyest. They shal mourne, and their memoriaill shall perisse. So they beynguy afrayed shall remembre their synnes, and their owne wickednesse shal bewayre the.

The b. Chapter.

THEN shal yf righteous stondue in greate stedfastnesse agaynst soch as haue dealt extremely with the, & také awaye their labours.
When they se it, they shalbe vexed with horrble feare, & shall wonder at the haistynes of yf sodane health: groning for very distresse of mynde, & shal saye within them selues (hauyngue inwarde sorow, and mour-yng for very anuyaghsh of mynde):

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, & iested vpô. We foole thought their life very madnesse, & their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are counted amonge the children of God, & their porcion is amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred from the waye of truthe, & light of righteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, and the Sone of vnderstödinge rose not vp vpô vs. We haue weereid oure selues in yf waye of wickednesse & destrucccion. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the LORDE, we haue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pryde done vnto vs? Or,
what profit hath the pompe of riches brought vs? All those things are passed awaye like a shadowe, & as a messaunger reu-nynge before: as a shippe yf passeth ouer the wawes of the water, which when it is gone by,
the trace therof can not be founde, nether yf path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde yf flyeth thowre yf ayre, & no man can se eny token where she is flouen, but only heareth
the noyse of hir wynges, beatinge the light wynde, partinge the ayre thorow the vehemee
de hir goinge, & flyeth on shakyngir hir wynges, where as afterwaide no toké of hir wynee can be fonde. Or like as whé an arowe is shott at a marck, it parteth the ayre, which immediatly cometh together agayne, so that a man can not knowe where it wente thorow. Even so we in like maner as soone as we were borne,
beganne immediatly to dwawe to oure ende:
& haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure owne wickednesse.

Soch wordes sha they that haue synned,
speak in the hell: for the hope of the vngodly is like a drye thistill floure (or dust) that is blowne awaye with the wynde: like as thynne scornme yf is scatred abrode with the storme:
like as yf smoke which is dispersed here the there with the wynde, & as yf remembranuce of a stranger yf tarieth for a daie, the departeth.

But yf righteous shal luye for euermore:

a Heb. 11. a.  b Matt. 19. c.  c Sap. 3. a d 1 Par. 30. c. Sap. 2. b.  e Pro. 30. b.
  f Psal. 39. a.
their reward also is with the LORDE, their remembrance with the Hyest. Therefore shall they receive a glorious kyngdome a beutiful crown of the LORDES hande: for with his right hande shall he couer thē, with his owne armes shall he defende thē. His gelousy also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall wape thē creature to be aneged of thē enemies. He shall put on rightounses for a brest plate, take sure judgament in stede of an helmett. The invyncible shylde of equite shall take his, his cruell wrath shall he sharpe for a speare, thē whole compele of the worlde shall fight with him agaynst thē.

Thē shall the thonder boltes go out of thē lighteninges, come out of the rayne bowe of the clouds to the place apoynted: out of the hard stony indignacion there shall fall thick hales, thē water of thē see shall be wroth agaynst thē, thē the floudes shall renne roughly together. Yee a mightie wynde shall stode vp agaynst them, a storme shall seater thē abrode. Thus the vnrighteous dealinge of thē shall bringe all the lode to a wyldernes, wickednes shall overthrowe the dwellings of the mightie.

The 27. Chapter.

WYSZDOME is better then strenght, a made of vnderstandinge is more worth thē one y strēge. Heare therefoure (O ye kings) vnderstonde: O lerne ye y be judges of the endes of the earth. Genee eare ye y rule y multitudes, delite in much people. For the power is genē you of the LORDE, a the strēght from the Hyest: which shall trie youre workes and search out youre ymaginationes: How that ye beyne officers of his kyngdome, haue not executed true judgament, haue not kepeth the lawes of righteousnes, ner walked after his will. Horribly thē that right soone shall he appare vnto you: for an harde iudgment shal they haue y beare rule. Mercy is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auntorite shalbe sore punyshed. For God which is LORDE ouer all, shal excepte no mās personne, nether shall he stande in awe of eny mans greatnes: for he hath made thē small and greate, careth for all alyke. But the mightie shal haue y sorer punyshmeth.

Vnto you therefoure (oye kings) do I speake, y ye maye lerne wyszdome and not go amyse: for they y kepe rightounses shalbe rightounsly judged: and they y are lerned in rightounse things, shal finde to make answere. Wherefore set youre lust vpon my wordes, lone thē, so shal ye come by nurtoure. Wyszdome is a noble thinge, thē neuer faydeth awaie: yee she is easily senē of thē that loue her, thē founde of soch as seke her. She preuethem y desire y her, y she maye first shewe herself vnto thē. Who so awaketh vnto her by tymes, shal haue no greate trauayle, for he shal fynde her sittinge ready at hym dores. To thinke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandinge: thē who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe, thē that soone. For she goeth aboute, sekynge asch as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherfully vnto them in their goynes, meteth them with all dilligēe. For y vnfained desire of reformacion is hir begynnyng: to care for nurtoure is lone, and thē lone is the kepynge of hir lawes. Now the kepynge of y lawes is perfection thē an vn corrupte life, thē an vn corrupte life maketh a man familiari with God. And so the desire of wyszdome ledeth to thē kyngdome euerlastinge. If yone delyte be thē in royall seates thē cepters (oye kynges of the people) set youre lust vpō wyszdome, y ye maye raigne for euer more. O lone the light of wyszdome, all ye y be rulers of the people. As for wyszdome, what she is, and how she came vp, I wil tell you, and will not hyde the misteries of God from you: but wil seke her out from y begynnyng of the natuyte, and brynge the knowlege of her in to light, and wil not kepe back the trueth. Nether will I haue to do with cosumynyng envye, for soch a man shal not be partaker of wiszdome. But the multitude of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kynge is the vholding of the people. O receaunecourtoure then thorow my wordes, and it shal do you good.

The 28. Chapter.

I MYSELF also am a mortall man, like as all other, am come of y earthly generacio of him y was first made, in my mothers wōbe was I fashioned to be flesh: In the tymes of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude thorow the sede of man, the comodious appetitie of slepe. When I was borne, I receauned like aye as other men, WYSZDOME reacheth frō one ende to another mightily, α longly doth she ordre all thinges. I haue loued her and laboured for her euē frō my youth vp: I dyd my diligēce to mary my self with her, soch loue had I vnto her beutey. Who so hath αexpérience of God, cōmēdeth hir nobilitye, yee the LORDE of all thinges himselfe loueth her. For she is αsolemnasse of αnorture of God, α yOther out of his worikes. Yf a man wolde desire riches in this life, what is richer then wiszdome, yf worketh all thinges? (Thou wilt saye:) vnderstādinge worketh. What is it amōge all thinges, yf worketh more the wiszdome? Yf a man loue vertue αrighteousnes, let him laboure for wyszdome, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth soverneres αprudence, righteousnes αstrēgh, which are soch thinges as αme may haue nothinge more profitable in their life. Yf a mā desire moch knowleghe, she cā tell yf thinges yf are past, αdiscerne thinges for to come: she knoweth α soltities of worde, α cā expondē darke sentēces. She can tell of tokēs αwōderous thinges, or euer they come to passe, α the endes of all tymes a ages. So I purposed after this maner: I will take her vnto my copany, a comó lougly with her: no doute she shal geue me good coecell, a speake confortably vnto me in my carefulnes a grefe. For hir sake shal I be well and honestly taken amóge the comós a lordes of ý counsell. Though I be yonge, yet shal I haue sharpe vnderstondinge: so ý I shal be marvelous in ý sight of greate mc, a ý faces of prynces shal woder at me. Whà I holde my toge, they shal byde my leysure: whà I speake, they shal loke vpó me: ý if I talke moch, they shal laye their handes vpó their mouth. Morover, by the meanes of hir I shal optayne immortalite, and leaque behinde me an euerlastinge memoriall, amóge the ý come after me. I shal set ý people in ordre, and the nacions shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tyranautes shal be afrayed, when they do but heare of me: a the multitude I ame to be counted good, ý mightie in battayll. Whà I come home, I shal fynde rest with her: for hir copany hath no bytternes, a hir felashipe hath no tediousnesse, but myrth a loye.

Now when I cosidered these thinges by myself, a pondered them in my hert, how ý to be ioyned vnto wyszdome is immortalite, a greate pleasure to haue hir frendshiphe: how ý in the worke of hir handes are infinite riches: how that, who so kepeth compny with her shalbe wyse: and that which talketh with her, shal come to honoure: I wente aboute sekynge, to getther vnto me. For I was a ladd of a rype wyt, and had a good vnderstondinge.

But when I grewe to more vnderstádinge, I came to an vndefyled body. Nevertheles when I perceived that I coude not kepe myself chaist, excepte God gaue it me (a ý was a poynte of wyszdome also, to knowe whose gift it was) I stepte vnto the LORDE, and besough him, and with my whole hert I sayde after this maner:

The 7th Chapter.

GOD of my fathers, a LORDE of mercies, (thou ý hat made all thiges with thy worde, a ordeyned ma thorow thy wyszdome, ý he shulde hathe dominó over ý creature, which thou hast made: ý he shulde ordre ý workde acordinge to equite a righteousnes, a execute judgmet with a true hert) geue me wyszdome, which is euer aboute thy seate,a put me not out fro amóge thy children; for I thy seruant a sonne of thy handymayde, a am a feble persone, of a shorte tyme, and to yóge to the vnderstondinge of judgment and ý lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfacte amongst the children of men, yet ýf thy wyszdome be not with him, he shal be nothinge regarded. ''But thou hast chosen me to be a kynge vnto thy people, and the judge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast cômaund me to byylde a tempel vpon thy holy mount, a an auler in the cite wherein thou dwelllest: a licknesse of thy holy tabernacle which thou hast prepared fro the beginnynge, and thy wyszdome with ý, which knoweth thy worke: which also was with ý when thou maydest ý worle, a knew what was acceptable in thy sight, a right in thy commandementes. Ô sende her out of thy holy heauens and from the trone of thy majesty, that she maye be with me, a laboure with me: that I maye knowe, what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstondeth all thinges: and she shal lede me soberly in my workes, and preserue me in hir power. So shal my workes be acceptable, a then shal I gouerne thy people righteously, a be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. 'For what man is he, that maye knowe the coun cel of God? Or, who can thinke what the will of God is? For the thoughtes of mortall men are miserable, a oure forecastes are but vncertayne. 'And why? a a mortall and corruptible body is heuy vnto the soule, and the earthie manshon kepeth downe the vnderstondinge ý museth vpon many thinges. Very hardly can we discerne the thinges that are vpon earth, and greate laboure haue we, or we can fynde the thinges which are before oure eyes: Who will then seke out the gróude of the thinges that are done in heaué? Oh LORDE, who ca haue knowlege of thy vnderstondinge and meaninge, excepte thou geue wyszdome and sende thy holy goost fro aboue? that the wayes of them which are vpon earth maye be réfourned: ý men maye lerne ý thinges that are pleasanta vnto the, and be preserued thorow wyszdome.

Chap. xi.  The boke of Wyszdome.

WYSZDOME preserved ý first mā, who God made a father of the worlde, whā he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, toke him out of the moulde of ý earth, ñ gau e him power to rule all things. When the vurighteous wente awaye in his wrath from this wyszdome, ý brotherheade perished: û thorow ý wrath of murthur. A-gayne, whā ý water destroyed ý whole worlde, wyszdome preserved the righteous thorow a poore tre, wherof she was gouernesse herself. Morouer whā wickednes had gotten ý upper-hande, so ý the nacions were puff vp with pryde, ñ she knewe ý righteous, preserved him faultlesse vnto God, and layed vp sure mercy for his children. ñ She preserved the righteous, when he fled from the vnfaithfull vnto God, and layed vp sure mercy for his children. ñShe preserved the righteous, when he fled from the vngodly ý perished, what tyne as ý fyre fell dowe vpon ý v. cities: Like as yet this daye the vnfruitful, waist and smokynge lyde geneth testimony of their wickednesse: yee the vuripe and vntymely frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a tokë of a remembraunce of the vnfaithfull soule, there standeth a plier of salt. For all soch as regarded not wyszdome, gat not only this hurte, that they knewe not the things which were good, but also left behinde them vpó mō, a memoriaall of their foolishnes: so ý in the things wherein they synned, they coude not be hydd. But as for soch as take hede vnto wyszdome, she shal deluyer them from sorowe.

When the righteous fled because of his brothers wrath, wyszdome led him the right waye, shewed him ý kyngdome of God, gau e him knowlege of holy thinges, made him rich in his labours, and brought to passe the things that he wente aboute. In ý discatfulness of soch as defrauded him, she stode by him, ñ made him ryche. She saued him from the enemies, and defended him from ý diseaneurs. She made him stronge in battayll, and gau e him the victorie, ý he might knewe, how that wyszdome is stronger then all thinges.

When the righteous was solde, she forsoke him not, but deluyer him fro synners. She wente dowe with him in to the doungeon, and fayled him not in the bandes: tyll she had brought him the cepter of ý realme, and power agaynst those that oppressed him. As for them that had accused him, she declared them to be lyers, ñ brought him to perpetuall worship.

She deluyer the righteous people and faultlesse sede, from the nacions that oppressed them. She entred in to the soule of the seruant of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynst the horrible kyngye. She gau e ý righteous the rewarde of their labours, ñ led them forth a maruayle waye: on the daye tyne she was a shadowe vnto them, and a light of starres in the night season. ñ She brought them thorow the reed see, and caried them thorow the greate water. She drowned their enemies in the see, and brought them out of the depe. So the righteous toke the spoyles of the vngodly, and ñ prayed thy holy name (o LORDE) and magnified thy victorious hād with one acorde. For wyszdome openeth the mouth of ý domme, ñ maketh ý tonges of babes to speake.

SHE ordeed their worke in the hādes of the holy prophet: so ý they wente thorow ý wyldernes ý was not inhabited, ñ pitched their tētes in ý waist deserte. They stode agaynst their enemies, ñ were auenged of their adversaries. ñ Whā they were thirstie, they called vpo ý, ñ water was gēcē them out of ý rok, ñ their thirst slēckēned out of ý harde stone. For by ý thinges, where thorow their enemies were punished, were they helped in their nede. For vnto the enemies thou gauest mās bloude in steade of lyuynge water. And where as they had scarcenesse in ý rebuke when the children were slaye, thou gauest vnto thine awne a plenteous water vnloked for: declaringe by the thyst ý was at that tyne, how thou woldest bringe thine awne vnto honoure, ñ slaye their adversaries.

For when they were tryed ñ nourtured with fatherly mercy, ñ they knowledg how the vngodly were judged, and punished thorow ý wrath of God. These hast thou exorted as a father, ñ proued thē: but vnto ý other thou hast bene a boysteous kyngye, layed hard to their charge, & condemned the. Whether they were absent or present, their punyshmēt was alyke. For their grefe was dubble: namely, mournynge, and ye remembranc of things past. But wha they perceaved ye their punishmetes dyd the good, they thought vpon the LORDE, & wondered at ye ende. For at the last they helde moch of him, of who in ye outcastinge they thought scornee, as of an abiecte. Neuerthelesse ye righteous dyd not so when they were thirstie: but euyn like as ye thoughtes of ye foolish were, so was also their wickednes.

Where as certayne me now (thorow erreoure) dyd worshippe domme "serpentes ye vayne beastes, thou sendest a multitude of domme beastes vpon them for a vengeance: ye they might knowe, that loke where withal a ma synymeth, by the same also shal he be punyshed. For vnto thy allmighty hande, that made the worlde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende amonge them an heape of "Beeres, or woode lyōs, or cruel beastes of a strange kynde, soch as are vnknowne, or spoute fyre, or cast out a smoking breth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes: which might not only destroye them with hurtinge, but also kyll them with their horrible sight. Yee without these beastes might they have bene slayne with one winde, byenge persecuted of their aynw workes, and scattered abrode thorow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheles thou hast ordred all things in measure, nobre ye weight. For thou hast euere had greate stregh ye might, e who maye withstode ye power of thine arme? And why like as ye small thynge ye ye balancce weyeth, so is ye worlde before ye: yee as a droope of ye morninge dew, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: and makest the as though thou sawest not the sinnes of me, because they shulde amend. For thou louest all the things that are, and hatest none of the who thou hast made: neither didest thou ordene or make any thinge of euell will.

How might eny thinge endure, ye it wer not thy will? Or how coude eny thinge be preserved, excepte it were called of ye? But thou sparest all, for all are thine, o LORDE, thou louer of soules.

The rj. Chapter.

LORDE, how gracious ye swete is thy sprete in all things? Therfor chastenest thou the meaurerly that goe wroge, and warnest them, concernynge the things wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them (o LORDE) and exertest the to leuie their wickednes, and to put their trust in the. As for those olde "inhabiters of thy holy londe, thou mightest not awaye with them, for they committed abominable worke against the: as wytchcraft, sorcery and Idolatry: they slew their owne children without mercy: they ate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the bloude: Yee because of soch abominationis, myszybles ye offeringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the hands of oure fathers: that ye londe which thou louest aboue all other, might be a dwellinge for the childre of God.

Neuertheles thou sparedest the also (as me) ye sendest ye forerunners of thyne hoost, euch hornettes to destroye the out by lytle ye little. Not ye thou wast vnable to subdue ye vngodly vnto ye righteous in battayll, or with cruell beastes, or with one rough worde to destroye the togetherto: But thy mynde was to dryue the out by lytle ye little, yeeinge the time ye place to amend: knowinge well, ye it was an vnrighteous nacion ye wicked of nature, ye ye their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a cursed seade from ye begynynge, ye feared no ma: Yet hast thou pardoned their synnes. For who wyl saye vnto the: why hast thou done ye? Or who wyl stode against thy judgmet? Or who will come before thy face an auëger of vnrighteous me? Or who wil blame ye, ye ye people perish, who thou hast made? For there is none other /God but thou, ye carest for all things: ye thou mayest declare how ye thy judgmet is not vnright. There dare nether kige, ner tyræut in thy sight requyre accōptes of them, who thou hast destroyed.

For so much the as thou art righteous thy self, thou ordrest all thiages righteously, ye punishest euch hi ye hath not deserved to be punyshed, ye takest him for a stranguer ye an alleuyn in ye lofe of thy power. For thy power is ye beginnyng of righteounes: and because thou art LORDE of all things, therfore art thou gracious vnto all. Whan men thinke þy not to be of a full strenght, thou declarest thy power: þe boldly deluyest thou them ouer þy knowe þy not. But thou LORDE of power judgest quyntely, and ordrest us with great swape, for thou mayest do as thou wilt.

By socch workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a man also shulde be iust and louynge: and hast made thy chylde to be of a goode hope: for euyn when thou judgest, thou guenst rowme to amende from synnes. For in so much as thou hast punyshed, and with socch diligence deluyed þy enemies of thy seruauntes, which were warthy to dye (where thorow thou gauest þe thyne þa place of amendeþ þy they might turne fro their wickednes) with howe great dilegence they punyshest thou thine awne chylde, vnto whose fathers thou hast sworn þe made conuenaites of good promises? So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest oure enemies dyuerse wyues: to þy intet þe war we punysh, we shulde remembre thy goodnesse: þa when we oure selues are punyshed, to put oure trust in thy mercy.

Wherefore where as men haue lyued igno-rautly æ vanrighteously, thou hast punyshed the sore, euè thorow þy same things that they worshipped. For they wente astraye very lyge in þy waye of errore, æ helde þy beestes (which euè their enemies despysed) for goddes, lyuyng as children of no vnderstandinge. Therefore hast thou sent a scornful punishment amongst them, as amongst the chylde of ignoraunce. As for socch as wolde not be reforme by those scornes æ rebukes, they felt the worthy punishment of God. For þy things þy they suffred, they bare þe vnpacietly, begin not contéct in them but vn wyllinge. And when they peryshed þy same things that they toke for goddes, they knowelged then, that there was but one true God, whom aforo they wolde not knowe: therefore came þy ende of their dampnacion vpon them.

The riiij. Chapter.

VAYNE are all men, which haue not þy knowleage of God: as were they that out of the good things which are sene, knewe not hym, that of himself is everlastinge.

Nether toke they so muche regarde of the workes that are made, as to knowe, who was the crafteaman of them: but some toke the fyre, some the wynde or ayre, some þy course of þy stars, some þy water, some toke Sonne and Moone, or the lightes of heaven which rule þy earth, for goddes. But though they had socch pleasure in their beuty, that they thought them to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowne, how much more fayrer he is that made them. For the maker of beuty hath ordened all these things. Or þy they maruede at the power and worke of the, they shulde haue perceaued the, þe he which made these things, is mightier then they.

For by the greatnesse æ beuty of the creature, þy maker therof maye playnely be knowen. Notwithstandinge they are the lesse to be blamed, that sought God æ wolde haue founde hym, and yet myssed. And why? for so much as they were aboute in his worcke and sought after them, it is a tokè, that they regarded and helde mocch of his worke ðy are sene: howbeit they are not wholly to be excused. For þy their vnderstandinge and knowledge was so great, þy they coude discerne the worlde and þy creatures, why dyd they not rather fynde out þy LORDE therof?

But vnhappie are they, and amonge the deed is their hope, that call þe God which are but the worke of mens handes: golde, syluer and the thinge, that is found out by connynge, the similitude of beastes, or eny vayne stone that hath bene made by hande of olde. æ Or as whan a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the wodd, and parent of the barck of it connyngle: and so with the one parte maketh a vessell to be vsed, and dighteth meate with the residue. As for the other parte that is left, which is profitable for no thinge (for it is a coked pece of wodd and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow his vanite, and (acordinge to the knowleage of his connyng) he gueithe it somme proportion, fashioneth it after the similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beest, straketh it ouer with reede and paynteth it, and loke what foule spot is in it, he casteth some coloure vpon it. Then maketh he a conueniënt tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wall and maketh it fast with yron, prouydinge so for it, lest it happē to fall: for it is well knowne, that it can not helpe it self: And why? it is but an ymage, and must of necestsite be helped.

Then goeth he and offereth of his goodes vnto it for his children and for his wife: he seeketh helpe at it, he axeth counsell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it ſy hath no soule: for health, he maketh his peticion vnto him that is sicke: for life, he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not able to helpe him self: ſe sendeth a good iourneye, he prayeth him that maye not go. And in all the thinges ſy he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne any thinge or to worke) he prayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

The viij. Chapter.

A GAYNE, another mā purposinge to sayle ſe beginnynghe to take his iourney thorow ſy ragenge see, calleth for helpe vnto a stock, ſy is farre weaker, the ſy tre ſy beareth him. For as for it, courteousnesse of moneye hath founde it out, ſy ſy craftesmā made it with his connyng. But thy prouynce (O father) gourneth all thinges frō ſy begynnynge, for thou hast made a waye in ſy see, ſe a sure path in the myddest of ſy wawes: deelaringe therby, ſy thou hast power to helpe in all thinges, yee though a man wente to the see without shippe. Neuerthelesse, ſy ſy worke of thy wysdome shulde not be vaine, thou hast caused an arke to be made: ſe therefore do men commynte their lyenes to a small pece of wood passinge ouer the see in a shyppe, ſe are saued.

For in the olde tymē also whā the proude giauntes perished, he (in whō the hope was left to increase ſy worlde) werte in to the shippe, which was gouerned thorow thy hande, and so left sede behinde him vnto ſy worlde. For happie is ſy tre where thorow righteousness cometh: but cursed is the ymage of wod, ſy is made with hades, yee both it ſe he ſy made it: He, because he made it: ſe it, because it was called God, where as it is but a frayle thinge. For the vngodly ſe his vngodlynes are both like abhominable vnto God. Even so ſy worke ſe he ſy made it also shal be punyshed together. Therfore shal there a plage come vpon the ymages of the Heithen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwyse. And why? the sekinge out of ymages is the beginnynghe of whordome, and the bringinge vp of them is the destruction of life. For they were not from the begynnynge, nether shall they cōtinue for euere. The welthy ydylines of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therefore shal they come shortly to an ende. Whē a father mourning for his sonne ſy was taken awaye frō him, he made him an ymage (in all ſy haist) of his deed sonne: ſe so begane to worshiphe him as God, which was but a deed mā ſe ordered his seruauntes to offre vnto him. Thus by processe of tymē ſe thorow loge custome, this erroure was kepte as a lawe, ſe tyrantēs copelled mē by violēce to honoure ymages. As for those ſy were so farre of, ſe mē might not worshippe them presentely, their picture was brought frō farre (like the ymage of a kyngge who they wolde honoure) to the intent that with greate diligence they might worshiphe him which was farre of, as though he had bene present.

Agayne, the syngynl connynghe of the craftesman gaue the ignoraunce also a great occasiō to worshippe ymages. For the workman wyllinge to do him a pleasure that sett him a worke, laboured with all his connynghe to make the ymage of the best fashion. And so (thorow the beuty of the worke) the comon people was diseaune, in so much that they toke him now for a God, which a little afore was but honored as a man. And this was the erroure of mans life, whan men (ether for to serue their owne affeccon, or to do some pleasure vnto kinges) ascyrbe vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man. Moroner, this was not ynoogh for them that they erred in the knowlge of God: but where as they lyued in the great warres of ignoraunce, those many and great plages called they peace. For either they slawe their awne children and offered them, or dyd sacrifice in the night season, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepe neither life nor mariaghe cleane: but ether one slawe another to death maliciously, or els greued his hegnibour with aduotrie. And thus were all thinges myxte together: bloude, manslaughtur, Chap. rvi. The boke of Wysdome. Jo. lxxviii.

The rvi. Chapter.

BUT thou (Ooure God) art swete, longe sufferinge and true, and in mercey ordrest thou all thinges. Though we syne, yet are we thine, for we knowe thy strength. Yf we syne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the, is parrfecte righteousnes: Yee to knowe thy righteousnes and power, is the rote of immortallitie. As for the thinges that men haue found out thorow theyr euell science, it hath not diseauned vs: as the payntinge of the picture (an unprofitable laboure) and carved ymage, with diuerse colours, whose sight entiseth the ignoraunt: so that he honoureth and loueth the picture of a deed ymage, that hath no soule.

Neuertheles, they that loute soche euell thinges, are worthy of death: they that trust in them, they that make them, they that loute them, and they that honour them. The potter also taketh a tempereth soft earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashion of a vessell, what so euer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some cleane vessell for seruice, and some contrary. But where to euer vessell serueth, that knoweth a potter himself. So with his yvne laboure he maketh a god of the same claye: this doth euen he, which a little afore was made of earth himself, and within a little whyle after (whan he dyeth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithstandinge, he careth not y more because he shall laboure ner because his life is shorte: but stryue to excelle gold-smythes, y syluer smythes a copper smithes, and taketh it for an honour to makewayne thinges. For his hert is ashes, his hope is but vaine earth a his life is more yyle then claye: for so moche as he knoweth not his awne maker, that gaue him his soule to worke, and brethed in him the breth of life. They counte oure life but a pastyne, and oure conversacion to be butt a market, and that men shulde euer be gettinge, yee and that by euell meanes. Now he y of earth maketh frayle vessell and ymages, knoweth himself to offende aboue all other.

All the enemies of thy people and y holde them in subieccion, are vnwyse, vnhappie and exceedinge proude vnto their owne soules: for they judge all the Idols of the Heith to be goddes, which nether haue eyesight to se, ner noses to smell, ner eares to heare, ner fingers of handes for to grope: a as for their fete, they are to slowe to go. For man made them, and he that hath but a borrowed sprete, fashioned them. But no man can make a God like vnto him: for seinge he is but mortall himself, it is but mortall that he maketh with vrighteous handes. He himself is better then they whom he worshippeth, for he lyued though he was mortall, but so dyd neuer they. Yee they worshipppe beestes also, which are most miserable: for compare thinges that can not fele vnto them, a they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beestes, that with his sight a beholde any good thinge, nether haue they geuen prayse ner thanks vnto God.

The rvi. Chapter.

FOR these and soch other thinges haue they suffered worthy punishment, a thorow a multitude of beestes are they ruted out. In stead of the which punishmentes thou hast graciously ordred thine awne people, a geuen them their desyre that they loked for: a new a strange taist, preparinge them a qualles to be their meate: to the intent y (by the thinges which were shewed and sent vnto them) they y were so greedy of meate, might be with-

The rbiij. Chapter.

NEUERTHELES thy saynetes had a very greate light (and the enemies herde their voyce, but they sawe not the figure of them.) And because they suffred not thy same thynge, they magnified the: and they were vexed afore (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and besought thy (o God) there might be a difference. Therfore had they a burnyng pilere of fyre to lede them in the vnknowne waye, thou gauest them the Sonne for a fire gift without eny hurte. Reason it was, that they shulde want light to be put in the preson of darknes, which kepeth thy chylde in captiuyte, by whom the vnconrpyte light of the lawe of the world was for to be geuen. When they thought to slaye the babes of the righteous (one beinge laied out, and yet preserued to be leder vnto the other) thou broughtest out the whole multitude of the children, and destroysted these in the mightie water. Of that night were oure fathers certified a fore, that they knowynge vnto what oothes they had geuen credence, might bee of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued thy health of the righteous, but the vngodly were destroied. For like as thou bast hurte oure enemies, so bast thou promove then whom thou calledest a fore. For the righteous children of the good men offered secretly, and ordred the lawe of righteousnes vnto vniite: this good and euell in like maner, singinge prayses vnto thy father of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconvenient voyce of the enemies, a piteous cri for chylde that was bewayled.

The master and the seruailet were punished alike, the meane man and the kyng sufitted in like maner. For they all together had innumerble that dyed one death.

Nether were thy lyuinge sufficient to bury thy deed, for in thy twinklinge of an eye, the noblest nacion of the was destroyed. As oft as God helped the afore, yet wolde it not make the beleue: but in thy destruccion of thy first borne they knowledged, that it was thy people of God. For whyl all things were still, wha thy night was in thy mydest of hir course, thy Allmightie worde (o LORDE) leapt downe fro heauë out of thy royall trone, as a rough mæ of warre, in \( y \) myddest of \( y \) londe \( y \) was destroyed: \( y \) sharpe swerde perferred thy straite commaundement, standinge \( y \) fyllinge all thinges with death: yee it stode vpo \( y \) earth \( y \) reached vnto the heauen. Then the sight of the euell dreames vexed them sodenly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawarres.

Then laye there one here, another there half deed half quyck, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed the, shewed the these thinges afore: so that they were not ignoraunt, wherfore they perished.

The tentacion of death touched the righteous also, and amonge the multitude in the wyldernesse there was insurreccion, but thy wrath endured not longe. For the faultlesse man wente in all the haist, and toke the battayll vpon him, brought forth the weaph of his ministracion: euen prayer and \( y \) cesours of recocolinge, set himself against \( y \) wrath, and so brought the misery to an ende: declaringe therby, that he was thy seruaunt. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodely power, ner with weaphës of might: but with the worde he subued him that vexed him, puttinge the in remembrance of the ooth \( x \) couenauët made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, and parted \( y \) waye vnto the lyuyng. And why? in his longe garnët was all the beautie, and in the foure rowes of the stones was the glory of the fathers grauc, and thy majesty was written in the crowne of his heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place, and was afraied of them: for it was onely a tentacion worthy of wrath.

The rix. Chapter.

As for the ungodly, the wrath came vpo them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew before what shulde happë vnto them: how that (when they had coesented to lett them go, and had sent them out with greate diligence) they wolde repente, folowe vpon them. For when they were yeu mourninge and makinge lametacion by the graves of the deed, they deuyed another foolishnes: so that they persecuted them in their fliege, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessite also brought them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thinges \( y \) happened vnto them afore. But the thinges that was wantynge of their punishiment, was requisite so to be fulfilled vpon them with tornëtes: that thy people might have a marvelous passage thorow, and that these might fynde a strange death.

Thë was euery creature fashioned agayne of the new accordinge to the wyll of their maker, obeyenge thy commaundementes, \( y \) thy children might be kepë without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, \( y \) thy drye earth appeared, where afore was water: so \( y \) in the reed see there was a waye without impediment, and the greate depe became a grene felde: where thorow all \( y \) people wente that were defended with thy hande, seinge thy wonderous \( y \) marvelous workes. For as \( y \) horses, so were they fedd, \( y \) leapt like labes, praying the (o LORDE) which haddest deluyed them. And why? they were yet myndfull of the thinges, that happened wyhle they dwelt in the londe: how the grounde brought forth flyes in stead of catell, and how \( y \) ryuer scrauled with the multitude of fropges in stead of luysshes.

But at the last they sawe a new creacion of byrdes, what tyme as they were *disceaued with lust, and deysed delicate meates. For when they were speakeinge of their appetite, the quaules came vp vnto them from the see, and punishementes came vpon \( y \) synners, not without the tokës which came to passe afore by the vehement of \( y \) streams: for they suffered worthely accordinge to their wickednesse, they dealt so abominably \( y \) churlishly with strangers. Some receaued no vt-knowne gestes, some brought the strauengers in to bondage that dyd them good. Besyde all these thinges there were some, that not only receaued no strangers with their wylles, but persucceted those also, and dyd the moë euell, that receaued \( y \) gladly. Therfore were they punyshed with bylynnesse, like as they that were couered with sodane darkenesse at the dores of the righteoues: so \( y \) euery one sought \( y \) intrauce of his dore.

Thus the elementes turned in to them selues, like as when one tune is chanuaged vpon an instrument of musick, and yet all
The residue kepe their melody: which maye easely be perceaued, by the sight of the thinges that are come to passe. The drye lode was turned in to a waterye, & suche thinge that afore swamme in the water, wente now upon the drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his awne vertue) and the water forgott his awne kynde to quench.

Agayne, the flammes of the nysome beastes hurte not the flesh of them that wete with them, nether melted theye the yse, which els melteth lightly. In all thinges hast thou pro\n\mod thy people (o LORDE) and brought them to honoure: thou hast not despyed them, but allwaye and in all places hast thou stonde by them.

The ende of the boke of wisdome.

Ecclesiasticus called Jesus Syrac.
The prologue of Jesus the some of Syrac \nto his boke.

MANY and greate may haue declared wysdome vtnto vs out of y lawe, out of y prophets: out of other that folowed the. In the which thinges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wisdome: Therfore they that haue it y reade it, shulde not onely the selues be wyse there thorow, but serue other also with teachinge and wrytinge.

After that my grandoather Jesus had gemy diligence labouroure to reade the lawe, the prophets and other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had wel exercised himself therein: he purposed also to wryte some thinge of wysdome and good maners, to the intet that they which were wyllinge to lerne and to be wyse, might haue the more understandinge, and be the more apte to lede a good conversacion.

Wherfore I exorte you to receaue it louungly, to reade it with diligence, and to take it in good worth: though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thinge that is wryttin in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well when it is traslated in to another speache. Not only this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the prophets, and other bokes sounde farre other wyse, than they do, when they are spoken in their awne language.

Now in the XXXVIII. yeare whan I came in to Egipte in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerges, and continued there all my life, I gat libertie to reade and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and travauelle to interprete this boke. And consideringe that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, and to brynge it vnto light: that the straungers also which are disposed to lerne, might applye them selues vnto good maners, y lye according to y lawe of y LORDE.
What this boke conteyneth.

Chap. LI.
A prayer of Iesus Sync. Wyszdom calleth the ignoraunt vnto her.

The first Chapter.

ALL wyszdom cōmeth of God" the LORDE, & hath bene euer with him, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred thy soule of the see, thy droppes of the rayne & the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the heyth of heauē, thy breth of the earth & the depenesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wyszdom, which hath bene before all thinges? Wyszdom hath bene before all thinges, and the vnderstandinge of prudence from euerlastinge. (Gods wortes in the heyth is the well of wyszdom, and the euerlastinge comandementes are the intranunce of her.) Vnto whom hath thy rote of wyszdom bene declared? Or who hath knowne hir wyt? Vnto whom hath the doctrine of wyszdom bene discovered and shewed? And who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entrancie of her?

There is one: euē the Hyest, the maker of all thinges, & Allmightie, kyngye of power (of whom men ought to stonde greatly in awe) which sytteth vpon his trone, beinge a God of dominion: He hath created her thorow thy holy goost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her: He hath poured her out vpon all his worke, and vpon all flesh accordinge to his gift: he geueth her richely vnto them that love him. The feare of the LORDE is worshipe and triumphe, gladnesse & a joyfull crowne. The feare of the LORDE maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe life. Who so feareth the LORDE, it shal go well with him at the last, & in the daye of his death he shal be blessed.

Chap. iii.

Ecclesiasticus.

Jo. rei.

thou desyre wiszdome, kepe the commandement, and God shal geue her vnto the: for the feare of the LORDE is wiszdome, & nuture, he hath pleasure in faith and lounge meneckese, and he shal fyll the treasures thereof. Be not obstinate and vnaughtfull of the feare of the LORDE, and come not vnto him with a double hert. Be not an ypocrates in the sight of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marck well these things, lest thou happen to fall and brynte thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discover thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacion: because thou woldest not receaue the feare of God, and because thy hert is full of faynednes and disceate.

The iiij. Chapter.

ty sone, ye thou wilt come in to thy seruyce of God, stonde fast in righteousnes and feare, arme thy soule to tentacion: sattle thine hert, and be paciët: bowe downe thine eare, receaue the wordes of vnderstondinge, and shreencke not awaye, whan thou art entysed. Holde the fast vpon God, ioyne thy self vnto him sufter, that thy life maye encrease at the last. What so euer happeneth vnto the, receaue it: suffer in heuynesse, and be pacient in thy trouble. For like as golde and syluer are tredy in the fyre, euene so are acceptable men in the fornece of aduersite. Beleue in God, and he shal helpe the: ordre thy waie a right, and put thy trust in him. Holde fast his feare, and growe therin. O ye ye feare the LORDE, take sure holde of his mercy: shreencke not awaye fro him, that ye fall not. O ye ye feare ye LORDE, beleue him, and youre rewarde shall not be emptye. O ye ye feare ye LORDE, put youre trust in him, merci shall come vnto you for pleasure. O ye ye feare ye LORDE, set youre loue vpó him, youre hertes shall be lightene.

Consider the olde generacions of men (o ye children) and marck them well: was there euer eny one confounded, that put his trust in the LORDE? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsaken? Or whom dyd he euer despuye, that called faithfully vpó him? For God is gracious and mercifull, he forgeuen synnes in thy tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them ye seke him in trueth. Wo be vnto him that hath a doubll hert, wicked lippes and euell occupied handes, to the synner goeth two maner of waies. Wo be vnto them that are lowse of hert, which put not their trust in God, and therefore shal they not be defended of him. Wo be vnto them that haue lost pacience, forsaken the right waies, and are turned back in to frowarde waies. What wyly they do, whan the LORDE shal beginne to vystem the?

They that feare ye LORDE, wil not mistrust his worde: and they that loue him, ye kepe his commandement. They that feare the LORDE, wyly seke out ye things that are pleasant vnto him: and they that loue him, shal fulfill his lawe. They that feare ye LORDE wil prepare their hertes, and humble their soules in his sight. (They that feare the LORDE, kepe his commandementes, and wil be pacient, tylly they se himself) sayenge: better it is for vs to fall in to the handes of ye LORDE, then in to the hades of men: for his mercy is as greate as himself.

The iiij. Chapter.

THE children of wiszdome are a congrecacion of the righteous, and their exercice is obedience and loyce. Heare me youre father (o my deare children) and do ther after, that ye mae be safe. For the LORDE wil haue the father honoured of the children, and loke what a mother commandeth her children to do, he wil haue it kepte. Who so honoureth his father, his synnes shall be forgyue him: and he that honoureth his mother, is like one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shal haue iooye of his owne children: when he maketh his prayer, he shal be herde. He that honoureth his father, shall haue a longe life: he that is obedient for ye LORDES sake, his mother shall haue iooye of him.

He that feareth the LORDE, honoureth his father and mother, and doth them seruyce, as it were vnto the LORDE himself. Honoure thy father in deede, in word and in all pacience, that thou mayest haue his blessing: for the blessing of ye father buyldeth vp the houses of the children, but the mothers curse roseth out the foundacions. Rewyse not whan thy father is reproved, for it is no honoure vnto the, but a shame. For the worshippe of a mans father is his awne worshippe, and where the father is without honoure, it is the dishonesty of the soone. My sonne, make moch of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he lyueth. And yt his undersstandinge fayle, haue pacience with him, \( \sigma \) despyse him not in thy strength. For the good deede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgotten: and when thou thy self wantest, it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed with good, yee it shall be founded for the in righteousnes) and in the daye of trouble thou shall he remembered: thy synnes also shall melt awaye, like as the yse in \( \tilde{y} \) fayre warme

He \( \tilde{y} \) forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that defyeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, perfourme thy worke with louynge mekenesse, so shalt thou be loned aboue other men. \( * \) The greater thou art, the more hũble thy self (in all things) and thou shalt fynde favoure in the sight of God. For greate power belongeth onely vnto
God, \( \tau \) he is honoured of the lowly.

\( \alpha \) Seke not out the things that are aboue thy capacite, and search not the grounde of soch things as are to mightie for the: but loke what God hath commaunded the, \( ^{7} \) thinke vpon that allwaye, and be not curios in many of \( * \) his worke. For it is not nedefull for the, to se with thine eyes, \( \tilde{y} \) things \( \tilde{y} \) are secrete.
Make not thou to moch search in superfuous things, and be not curios in many of his worke: for many things are shewed vnto the,
allready, which be aboue \( \tilde{y} \) capacite of men.
The medlinge with soch hath begyled many a man, and tangled their wyttes in vanite.
Now he that loueth parell, shal perish therin.

D
An harde herte shal fyare euell at \( \tilde{y} \) last (an hert that goeth two wayes, shal not prosper): \( \alpha \) he that is frowarde of hert, wyll euer be the worse and worse.) A wicked hert shall be ladẽ with sorowes, and \( \tilde{y} \) vngodly sinner, wyl heape one synne vpon another. The controuell of the proude hath no health, for \( \tilde{y} \) plante of synne shal be rotted out in thẽ.
The hert of him \( \tilde{y} \) hath vnderstandinge, shal perceau hye things, and a good eare wil gladly herken vnto wyszdome. An hert that is wyse: \( \tau \) hath vnderstâdinge, wyl abstayne from synnes, and increase in the worke of righte-ousnes. \( \ast \) Water quencth burnynge fyre, \( \tau \) mercy reconcyleth synnes. God hath respecte vnto him \( \tilde{y} \) is thankfull: he thinketh vpon him agaynst the tyme to come: so that whan
he falleth, he shal fynde a stronge holde.

The iiiij. Chapter.

M Y sonne, defraude not the poore of his ahmes, and turne not awaye thine eyes from him that hath neede. Despiete not an hongrie soule, and defye not the poore in his necessite: greue not the hert of him that is helplesse, and withdrawe not the gift from \( \tilde{y} \) nedefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, and turne not awaye thy face from the nedy. Cast not thine eyes asyde to speake euell of the. For \( \tilde{y} \) he complayne of \( \tilde{y} \) in the byternes of his soule, his prayer shal be herde: eue \( \tilde{y} \) made him, shal heare him.

Be curteous vnto \( \tilde{y} \) company of the

bowe downe thy heade to a man of worshipe.
Let it not greue the to bowe downe thine eare
vnto the poore, but paye thy dett, and geue

es as a father, \( \alpha \) be in steade of an husbâde vnto their mother: so shal thou be as an obedient sonne of \( \tilde{y} \) Hyest, and he shal loue the more thee thy mother doth. Wiszdome bretheth life in to hir children, receaueth the \( \tilde{y} \) seke her, \( \alpha \) wyll go before thẽ in \( \tilde{y} \) waye of righteusousnes. \( \tilde{y} \) lothur her, lothur life: \( \alpha \) they \( \tilde{y} \) seke her diligetly, shal haue greate ioye.
They \( \tilde{y} \) kepe her, shal haue the heretage of life: for where she entreth in, there is the blessinge of God. They that honour her, shal be \( \tilde{y} \) seruantes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God.
Who so gueueth care vnto her, shal judge the shall dwell safely.

all. Feare, drede and tentacion shal she bringe vpon him, and trye him in hir doctrine: yll she haue so proued him in his thoughtes, that he comitit his soule vnto her. Thel she stablish him, bringe the right wyye vnto him, make hi a glad ma, shewe him hir secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowledge, vnderstandinge and rightenousnes. But yl he go wronge, she shall forsaie him, and geue him ouer in to the handes of his enemie.

"My sonne, make mouch of the tyme, eschuie the thinge y is euell, and for thy life shame not to saye y trueth. For there is a shame y bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth worshipe and fauoure. Accepte no person after thine owne will, that thou be not confounded to thine owne deceaye. Be not ashamed of thy neibour in his aduersite, kepe not back thy counsell whai it maye do good, nether hyde thy wyszdome in hir beuty. For in the toge is wyszdome knowne, so is vnderstandinge, knowlege and lernynge in the talkinge of the wyse, stedfastnesse in y workes of rightenousnes. In no wise speake agaynst the worde of treuth, but be ashamed of the lyes of thine owne ignoraunce. Shame not to confesse thine errore, and submitt not thyself vnto euery man because of synne. Withstande not y face of the mightie, and stryue not agaynst the streame. But for the treuth streue thou vnto death, and God shal fight for the agaynst thine enemies. Be not haystie in thine tonge, nether slack and negligent in thy workes. Be not as a lyon in thine owne house, destroyinge thy housholde folkes, and oppressinge them y are vnder the. Let not thine haunde be stretched out to receaue, and shutt whan thou shuldest geue.

The b. Chapter.

TRUST not vnto thy riches, and saye not: tush, I haue ynowe for my life. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeauce and temptacjon.) Folowe not the lust of thine owne hert in thy strength, and saye not: tush, how shulde I, or who wal cast me downe because of my workes? for doultles God shal auenge it. And saye not: I haue committed me synnes, but what euell hath happened me? For the Allmightie is a pacient rewarder. Because thy synne is forgone y, be not therfore without feare, nether heape one synne vpo another. And saye not: tush, the mercy of the LORDE is greate, he shal forgeue my synnes, be they neuer so many. For like as he is mercifull, so goeth wrath from him also, and his indignacion cometh downe vpon synners.

Make no tariège to tume vnto y LORDE, put not of fro daye to daie: for sodenly shal his wrath come, in the tyme of vengeauce he shal desstreie y. Trust not in wicked riches for they shal not helpe in the daye of punishment and wrath. Be not caried aboute to euery wynde, and go not in to euery wyve: for so doth the synner that hath a dubble tonge (Stonde fast in y wyve of y LORDE) be stedfast in thy vnderstandinge, abhye by thy worde, and folowe the worde of peace and rightenousnes. Be gete to heare y worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, and make a true answere with wyszdome. Be swift to heare, but slowe and pacient in geuinge answere. Yf thou hast vnderstandinge, shappe thy neibour an answere: Yf no, laye thine hede vpo thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vnacausate worde, y so stoppewed. Honour y worshippe is in a mas wyse talkinge, but y toge of y vnacausate is his owne distrucio. Be not a preuy accuser as long as thou lyuest, and vse no slaughter with thy tonge. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the thefe, and an euell name ouer him that is dubble tonged: but he that is a preuy accuser of other men, shalbe hated envied and confounded. Se that thou justifie the small and great alyke.

The vi. Chapter.

B Be not thy neibours enemye for thy fredes sake: for who so is euel shal be y heyre of rebuke y dishonoure, who so euer beareth enyve and a dubble toge, offendeth. Be not proude in the deuye of thyne owne vnderstandinge, lest thy leaues wyther, and thy frute be destroyed, so thou be left as a drye tre. For a wicked soule destroyeth him that hath it, maketh him to be laughed to scorn of his enemies, (and bringeth him to

And there is some frende that turneth to enemyte, and taketh parte agaynst the: and yf he knowe eny hurte by the, he telleth it out. Agayne, some frendes is but a companyon at the table, and in the daye of nede he contynueth not. But a sure frende wil be vnto y even as thyne owne self, and deale faithfully with thy householde folke. Yf thou suffere trouble and adversite, he is with the, and hydeth not him self from the. Departe fro thine enemies, yee and beware of thy frendes.

C 31. "A faithful frende is a stronge defence: who so findeth soch one, findeth a noble treasure. A faithfull frende hath no peare, the weight of golde and sylver is not to be compared to the goodnesse of his faith. A faithfull frende is a medycyne of life, a they feare the LORDE, shal fynde hym. Who so feareth the LORDE, shal prosper with frendes: and as he is himself, soshal his frende be also. My sonne, receaue doctrine fró thy youth vp, so shal thou fynde wyszdome tyll thou be olde. Go to her as one that ploweth, and soweth, and wayte pacietyl for hir good frutes. For thou shalt haue but little laboure in hir worke, but thou shalt cate of hir frutes right soone. O how excedeinge shapere is wyszdome to underned men? an vnstediasd body wyf not remayne in her. Vnto soch she is as it were a twichstone, he casteth her from him in all the haist: for wyszdome is with him but in name, there be but few y haue knowelge of her. (But with them that knowe her, she abydeth eué vnto y appearinge of God.)

D 32. "Geue eare (my sonne) receaue my doctrine, and refuse not my counsell. Put thy fote in to hir lynches, and take hir yock vpon thy necke: bowe downe thy shulder vnder her, beare hir paciently, and be not weery of hir bandes. Come vnto hir with thy whole hert, and kepe hir wayes with all thy power.

Seke after her, and she shalbe shewed the: and whā thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shal be turned to thy greate ioye. Then shal hir fitters be a stronge defence for the, a hir yock a glorious rayment. For the bawte of life is in her, and hir bandes are the coupleinge together of saluation. Yee a glorious rayment is it, thou shalt put it on, and the same crowne of ioye shalt thou weere.

My sonne, yf thou wilt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstadinge: and yf thou wilt applye thy mynde, thou shalt be wyse. Yf thou wilt bowe downe thine eare, thou shalt receaue doctrine: and yf thou delyte in hearinge, thou shalt be wyse. Stonde with y multitude of soch elders as haue vnderstandinge, and consente vnto their wyszdome with thine hert: that thou mayest heare all godly sermons, and that the worthy sentences escape the not. And yf thou seist a man of discrete vnderstandinge, gett the soone vnto him, and let thy fote treade vpon the steppes of his dores. Let thy mynde be vpon the commaundementes of God, and be earnestly occupied in his lawes: so shall he stablish thy hert, and gene y wyszdome at thine owne desyre.

The vij. Chaptr.

D 33. "O no euell, so shall there no harme happen vnto the. Departe awaye from the thinges that is wicked, and no mysfortune shal medle with the. My sonne, sowe no euell things in the forowes of vnrighteousnes, so shal thou not repe the sevenfolde. Laboure not vnto man for any lordishpe, nether vnto the kyngye for the saete of honoure. Justifie not thy selfe before God (for he knoweth the hert) and desyre not to be reputed wyse in the presence of the kyngye. Make no laboure to be made a jude, excepte it so were, y thou coudest mightely put downe wickednes: for yf thou shuldost stode in aoe of y presence of the mighte, thou shuldest faile in geuyngye sentence. Offende not in y multitude of the cite, and put not thyself amonge the people. Bynde not two synnes together, for in one synne shaldest thou not be vnpunished. Saye not: rash, God wil loke vpon the multitude of my oblaciones, and whan I offre to the hyest God, he wyll accepte it.

Be not saynt hartaed when thou makest thy prayer, neither slack in geuinge of allmesse. Laugh no man to scorne in the heyneness of his soule, for God (which seyth all things) is he that can bringe downe, and set vp agayne. Accepte no lesyne agaynst thy brother, nether do the same agaynst thy frende. Vse not to make any maner of lye, for the custome thereof is not good. Make not many wordes, whan thou art amonge the elders: and whan thou prayest, make not moch babblinge. Let no laborious worke be tedious vnto the, nether the husbandrie which the Allmightie hath created. Make not thy boast in the multitude of thy wickednes, but humble thy self even from thine hert: and remembre that the wrath shall not be longe in tarieenge, and that the vengeaunce of the flesh of \( \frac{1}{2} \) ungodly is a very fyre and worme. Gene ouer thy frende for eny good, ner thy faithfull brother for the best golde.

Depart not from a discrete and good woman, that is fallen vnto the for thy porcion in the feare of the LORDE, for \( \frac{1}{2} \) gift of hir honesty is aboue golde. Where as thy seruaunt worketh truly, intreate him not euell, ner the Hyrelinge that is faithfull vnto the. Loue a discrete seruaunte as thine owne soule, defraade him not of his libertie, nether leaue him a poore man. Yf thou haue catell, loke well to them: and yf they be for thy profit, kepe them. Yf thou haue sones, brynge them vp in nurtoure and lernynge, \( \frac{1}{2} \) holde the in awe from their youth vp. Yf thou haue daughters, kepe their body, \( \frac{1}{2} \) shew not thy face cherefull to warde the. Marye thy daughter, and so shalt thou perfourme a weightie matter: but geue her to a man of vnderstandinge. Yf thou haue a wife after thine owne mynde, forsake her not: (but comitte not thy self to the hatefull.)

\( \frac{1}{2} \)honoure thy father from thy whole herte, and forgett not the sorowfull traualie that thy mother had with the: remembre that thou wast borne thorow them, and how east thou recopesse them the thinges that they have done for the? Feare the LORDE with all thy soule, \( \frac{1}{2} \) honoure his ministers. \( \frac{1}{2} \)Loue thy maker with all thy streng, and forsake not his seruauntes. Feare the LORDE with all thy soule, \( \frac{1}{2} \)honoure his prestes. Gene the their porcion of the first frutes and increase of \( \frac{1}{2} \) earth, like as it is commaunded the: geue the \( \frac{1}{2} \) shulders, and their appoynted offeringes, and firstlinges. Reache thine hande vnto the poore, that God maye blesse the with plenteousnes. Be liberall vnto all men luyynge, yet let not but do good euene to them that are deed.

Let not them that wepe be without comfort, but mourne with soch as mourne. Let it not greue the to vyste the sick, \( \frac{1}{2} \)for that shall make the to be loued. What so euer thou takest in hande, remembre the ende, and thou shalt neuer do amysse.

The viii. Chapter.

STRYUE not with a mightie man, lest thou charne to fall in to his hades. Make no variaunce with a riche m\( \frac{1}{2} \), lest he happen to bryng vp an harde quarell agaynst \( \frac{1}{2} \). For golde \( \frac{1}{2} \) siluer hath vndone many a man, yee eu\( \frac{1}{2} \) hertes of kynges hath it made to fall. STRYUE not with a m\( \frac{1}{2} \) that is full of wordes, \( \frac{1}{2} \) laye no stickes vpon his fyre. Kepe no company with the vnlerned, lest he geue thy kynred an euell reporte. Despyse not a man that turneth himself awaye from synne, and cast him not in the teth withall: but remembre \( \frac{1}{2} \) we are freezly everychone. Thyne scorne of no m\( \frac{1}{2} \) in his olde age, for we waxe olde also. Be not glad of the death of thine enemie, but remembre that we must dye all the sorte of vs (and fayne wolde we come in to ioye.) Despyse not the sermons of soch elders as haue vnderstandinge, but acquaunte thy self with the wyse sentences of them: for of them thou shalt lerne wyszdom and the doctrine of vnderstandinge, and how to serue greate men without complaynte.

Go not from \( \frac{1}{2} \) doctrine of the elders, for they have lerned it of their fathers. For of them thou shalt lerne vnderstandinge, so \( \frac{1}{2} \) thou mayest make answere in \( \frac{1}{2} \) tyme of nede. Kyndle not \( \frac{1}{2} \) coales of synners, lest thou be brent in the fyrie flammes of their synnes. Resist not the face of the blasphemer, that he laye not wayte for thy mouth. Lende not vnto him that is mightier then thyself. \( \frac{1}{2} \) Yf thou lendest him, counte it but lost. Be not suertie aboue thy power: yf thou be, then thynke surely to paye it. Go not to lawe with the judge, for he wyl judge acordinge to his owne honour. Trauyale not by the waye with him y is a branelesse, lest he do the cuell: for he foloweth his awne wilfulnes, y so shalt thou perish thorow his foly.

C Stryue not with him that is angrie and cuell, and go not with him in to y wyldernes: for bloude is nothing in his sight, and where there is no helpe, he shal murthyr y. Take no counsell at fools, for they loue nothing but the thinges that please themself. Make no coiincell before a straungers, for thou canst not tell what wyll come of it. Opé not thine hert vnto every man, lest he be vnthâfull to the, and put the to reprofe.

B E not gelous ouer y wyfe of thy bosome, y she shew not some shrewed poynte of wicked doctrine vpö the. Geue not the power of thy lyfe vnto a woman, lest she come in thy strength, and so thou be confounded. Lyke not vpon a womâ that is desyrous of many men, lest thou fall in to his snares. Vse not the company of a womâ that is a player and daûser, y hère hir not, lest thou perish thorow hir entysinge. Beholde not a mayde, that thou be not hurt in hir bewyte. Cast not thy mynde vpon harlottes in any maner of thinge, lest thou destroye both thy self and thine heretage. Go not aboute gasinge in euery layne of the cite, nether wâdre thou abrode in the stretes thereof. Turne awaye thy face from a beautyfull woman, and lyke not vpon the fayernes of other.

Many a man hath perished thorow the bewty of women, for thorow it the desyre is kyndled as it were a fyre. (An aduotous woman shalbe trodden vnder fote as myre, of euery one that goeth by the waie. Many a man wonderinge the bewtye of a straunge woman, haue bene cast out, for hir wordes kyndle as a fyre.) Sytt not with another mans wyfe by eny meanes, lyke not with her vpon the bedd, make no wordes with her at y wyne: lest thine hert consent vnto her, y so thou with thy bloude fall in to destruccion.

Forsake not an olde frende, for the new shal not be like him.

A new frende is new wine: let him be olde, y thou shalt drynke him with pleasure. Desyre not y honoure and riches of a synner, for thou knowest not what destruccion is for to come vpon him. Delyte not thou in the thinges that the vnGodly haue pleasure in: beinge sure, that the vnGodly shall not be accepted vntyll their graue.

Kepe the from the man that hath power to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayed of death. And yf thou commest vnto him, make no fawte, lest he happen to take awaye thy life. Remembre that thou goest in the mynddest of snares, and vpon the bulworke of y cite. Bewarre of thy neibour as nye as thou canst, and mmedle with soche as wyse and haue vnderstandinge. Let just men be thy gestes, let thy myrth be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy mynde, and let all thy talkynge be in the commandementes of the Hyest. In the handes of craftesmen shall the worke be commended, so shal the princes of the people in the wysdome of their talkynge. A man full of wordes is perlous in his cite: and he that is temerarious and past shame in his talkinge, is to be abhorred.

A WYSE judge wil ordre his people with a discretion, and where a man of vnderstandinge beareth rule, there goeth it well. As the judge of the people is himselfe, eué so are his officers: and lyke what maner of man the ruler of the cite is, soche are they that dwell therin also. An vnwise kinde destroyeth his people, but where they that be in auctorite are men of vnderstandinge, there the cite prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God, and whan his tyme is, he shal set a profittable rulr vpon it. In the hande of God is the power of man, and vpö the scrybes shal he laye his honour. Remembre nó wronge of thy neibour, and 'medle thou with no vnrighteous worke. Pryde is hatefull before God and men, and all wickednes of the Heathen is to be abhorred. "Because of vnrighteous dealinge, wronge, blasphemies and diverse dissease, a realme shal be traslated fro one people to another.

There is nothinge worse then a cuvetous man. What prydest thou the, o thou earth and aszhes? There is not a more wicked thinge, then to loue moneye. And why? soch one hath his soule to sell: yet is he but fylthie doge whyle he lyueth.

And though the phisician shewe his helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusio it goeth after this maner: to daye a kynge, to morrow deed. For whan a man dyeth, he is the heyre of serpentes, beasts and wormes. The begynnynge of mans pryde, is to fall awaye from God: and why? his hert is gone from his maker, for pryde is the origenall of all synne. Who so taketh holde therof, shalbe fyllde with cursinges, and at y last it shal ouer throwe him. Therfore hath the LORDE brought the cregogacions of the wicked to dishonoure, and destroyed them vnto the ende.

God hath destroyed the seates of proude prynces, and set vp the meke in their stede. God hath wythered the rotes of the proude Heithen, and planted the lowly amonge them. God hath ouerthrowne the londes of the Heithen, and destroyed them out of the gronde. He hath caused them to wyther awaye, he hath brought them to naught, and made the memoriall of them to cease from out of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of y humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, nether wrothfulness for mens children. The sede of men that feareth God, shalbe brought to honoure: but y sede which transgresseth the commandementes of y LORDE shalbe shamed. He y is the ruller amonge brethren, is holde in honoure amouge them, and he regardeth soch as feare the LORDE.

The glory of the riche, of the honorable and of the poore is the feare of God.

Despyse not thou the lust poore man, and magnifie not y rich vngodly. Greate is the judge and mightie in honoure, yet is there none greater, then he y feareth God. Vnto y y seruaunt that is discreete, shall the fre do seruoye. He that is wyse and well nur-some man is slouthfull, hath none of helpe, wāteteth streth, and hath greate pouerete, and Gods eye loketh vpon him to good, setteth him vp from his lowe estate, and lifteth vp his heade; so that many men maruell at him, and geue honoure vnto God.

Prosperite and aduersite, life and death, pouerete and riches come all by the LORDE. (Wyssdome, nourtoure and knowlge of lawe are with God: loue and ways of good are with him. Erroure and darcknes are made for synners: and they that exalte them selues in euell, waxe olde in euell.) The gift of God remayneth for the rightoues, and his good wyl shal geue prosperite for euer, Some man is rich by lyuyng nygardyly, and is the porcioun of his worde, in that he sayeth: now haue I gotten rest, and now wyl I cate and drynke of my goodes myself e alone. And yet he considereth not, that the tyme draweth nye, he must leaue all these thinges vnto other men, and dyde himself. Stonde thou fast in thy covenaut, and exercise thy selue therin, and remayne in the worke vnto thy age. Continuue not in the worke of synners, but put thy trust in God, and byde in thine estate: for it is but an easy thicke in your sight of God, to make a poore man riche, and that sodenly. The blessinge of God haisteth to vour rewarde of the rightoues, and maketh his frutes soone to flourish and prosper. Saye not: what helpeth it me? and what shal I haue whyle? Agayne, saye not: I haue yough, how can I wante? When thou art in welfare, forget not aduersite: and whan it goeth not well with the, haue a good hope, that it shal be better. For it is but a small thicke vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euery man accordin to his wayes. The aduersite of an houre maketh one to forgett all pleasure, and whan a man dyeth, his worke are discovered. Prayse no body before his death, for a man shalbe knowne in his children.

Bringe not every man in to thine house, for the disceatfull layeth wayte dyuersely. Like as a partrich in a maude, so is the hert of the proude: and like as a spye, that loketh vp on the fall of his neigneour. For he turneth good vnto euell, and slandreth the chosen. Of one sparck is made a greate fyre, an vnghodly ma layeth wayte for bloude. Bewarre of the disceatfull, for he ymagnieth wicked things, to bringe y in to a perpetuall shame. Yf thou takest an alecta vnto y, he shal destroye the in vnquietnes, and dryue the from thine owne wayes.

The rj. Chapter.

WHAN thou wylt do good, knowe to whom thou doest it, a so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefites. *Do good vnto the rightoues, and thou shalt fynde greate rewarde: though not of him, yet (no doute) the LORDE him self shal rewarde the. He stodeth not in a good case, that is allwaye occupied in euell, a geueth no almes: for the Hyest hateth the synners, and hath mercy vpon them that shew the works of repentance. Geue thou vnto such as feare God, and receaue not a synner: As for the vnghodly and synners, he shall recompense vengeance vnto them, and kepe them to the daye of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good, and receaue not the synner: do well vnto him that is lowly, but geue not to the vnghodly. Let not the bred be geuen him, that he be not mightier then thy self therin. For so shalt thou receaue twayne as moch euell, in all the good that thou doest vnto him: And why? the Hyest hateth synners, and shal rewarde vengeance to the vnghodly.

In prosperite a frende shal not be knowne, a in aduersite an enemy shal not be hyd. For when a ma is in wealth, it greueth his enemies: but in heuynes and trouble a man shal knowe his frende. Trust neuer thine enemy, for like as an yron rusteth, so doth his wickednes. And though he make moch crouchinge and knelinge, yet kepe well thy mynde, and beware of him. Sett him not by y, nether let him sytt at thy right hade: lest he turne him, gett in to thy place, take thy rowme and seke thy seate, and so thou at the last remembre my wordes, and be pricked at my sayenges.

Bynde not two synnes together, for there shal not one be vnpunyshed? Who wil haue pite of the charmer, that is stinged of y serpēt, or of all soch as come nyc y beasts? Eue so is it with him y kepeth cópany with a wicked ma, a lappeth him self in his synnes. For a season wil he byde with the, but yf thou stumbles, he tarieth not. An enemy is swete in his lippes, "he can make many wordes a speake many good things. Yee he can wepe with his eies, but in his herte he ymagineth, how to throwe the in to the pytte: a yf he maye fynde opportunytie, he wil not be satisfied with bloude. Yf aduersite come vpon the, thou shalt fynde him there first: a though he pretende to do y helpe, yet shalt he vndermyne y. He shall shake his heade, a clape his handes ouer y for very gladnes, a whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall dys-guye his countenaunce.

The iiij. Chapter.

WHO so toucheth pitch, shalbe fyled withall: a and he that is familiari with y proude,shal clothe himself with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon him, that accompanyeth a more honorable man then him self. Therefore kepe no familiarite with one that is richer than thy self. How agree the ketelle a the pott together? for yf y one be smyten against the other, it shall be broke. The rich dealeth vnrighteously, a threateneth withall: but y poore being oppressed and wrongeously dealt withall, suffreth scarenesse, a gueth fayre wordes. Yf thou be for his profit, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothinge, he shal forsake the. As longe as thou hast any thinge of thine owne, he shal be a good felowe with thee: Yee he shal make the a bare man, and not be sory for the. Yf he haue need of the, he shal defraude the: a (with a preuy mock) shal he put the in an hope, and guee the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shal he shame y in his meate, vntill he haue suppe the cleane vp twysye or thrysye, and at the laste shal he laughe the to scoone. Afterwaerde, whan he seyth that thou hast nothinge, he shal forsake the, and shake his heade at the.

Beware, that thou be not disceuaded and brought downe in thy skewlenesse. (Be not to humble in thy wyszdome, lest whan thou art brought lowe, thou be disceuaded thorow foolishnes.) Yf thou be called of a mightie man, absent thy self, so shal he call the to him the more oft. Preasse not thou vnto him, that thou be not shott out: but go not thou farre of, lest he forgett the. Withdrawe not thy self frô his speach, but beleue not his many wordes. For with moch communieacion shall he tempte the, and (with a preuy mock) shall he question y of thy secretes. The vnmerifull mynde of his shal marck thy wordes, he shal not spare to do y hurte a to put y in preson. Beware, a take good heed to thy self, for thou walkest in parell of thy over-throwinge.

(Now whâ thou hearest his wordes, make c the as though thou werest in a dreame, a wake vp. Loue God all thy life longe, a call vpon him in thy neede.) Every beast loueth his like, euen so let every man loue his neiboure. All flesh wil resorte to their like, and every man will kepe company with soch as he is himself. But as y wolf agreeith with the lambe, so doth the vngodly with y righteous. What felishippe shulde an holy man haue with a dogge? How can the rych and the poore agree together? The wilde asse is the lyons pray in the wyldernes, euen so are poore men the meate of the rych. Like as the proude maye not awaye with lowlynes, euen so doth the riche abhorre the poore. Yf a rich man fall, his frenedes sett him vp agayne: but whan the poore falleth, his frenedes forsake him. Yf a rich ma fall in to an errore, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men justifie him.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is punished: yee though he speake wisely, yet can it haue no place. Whan the riche man speaketh, every body holdeth his toge: and loke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto the clouds. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? and yf he do amysse, they shal destroye him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouerthe is a wicked thinge in the mouth of the vngodly. The hert of man chaungeth his countenaunce, whether it be in good or euell. A chessfull countenaunce is a tokâ of a good hert, for els is it an harde thinge to knowe the thought.

The viij. Chapter.

BLISSED is the man, that hath not fallen a with y worde of his mouth, a and is not pricked with the conscience of synne. Happie is he that hath had no heuynes in his mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becometh not a cuvetous man and a nygarde, to be rych: and what shulde a nygarde do with him self, how shulde he be goode vnto other mè? How can soch one haue any pleasure of his goodes? There is no thinge worse, then when one disfavourith himself, x this is a rewarde of his wickednes. Yf he do eny good, he doth it not knowinge therof, and agaynst his will, and at the last he declareth his vngraciousnes. A nygare hath a wicked eye, he turneth awaye his face, and despyseth his owne soule. "A conteous man ey hath good to thy self of y thou hast, x geue y LORDE his due offeringes. Remembre y death tarieth not, x how y the covenante of the grane is shewed vnto the: (for the covenante of this worldeshal dye the death.) 'Do good vnto thy frende before thou dye, and acord-inge to thy abylite reache out thine hande, and uyales and labours vnto other men? In the deuyldinge of the heretage geue and take,

and sanctifie thy soule. Worke thou righteoussnes before thy death, for in y hell there is no meate to fynde. 'All flesh shal fade awaye
like grasse, x like a florishinge leaf in a grene
tre. Some growe, some are cast downe :
euen so is y generacion of flesh and blode :
one commeth to an ende, another is borne.

All transitory things shall fayle at the last,
and the worker therof shal go vthall. Eueru chosen worke shall be justified, and he y medlieth withall, shal haue honoure therein.
Blessed is the man y kepeth him in wysz dome, and exercyseth himself in vnderstand-inge, x with discerion shal he thinke vpon standinge in hir secretes, goeth after her (as one that seketh hir oute) x contynueth in hir wayes. He loketh in at hir windowes, x herkeneth at hir dores: He taketh his rest besyde hir house, x festenheth his stake in hir walles: He shall pitch his tent nye vnto hir hande, and in his tent shal good things rest for evermore: He shal sett his chyldren vnder hir coursering, x shal dwell vnder hir braunches. Vnder hir coursering shal he be defended from the heate, and in hir glory shall he rest.

The xvi. Chapter.

E that feareth God, wil do good: and x
who so kepeth the lawe, shal optayne wyszdome. As an honorable mother shal she mete him, and as a vyrgyn shal she receaue
him. "With y bred of life and vnderstandinge shal she fede him, and geue him the water of wholsome wyszdome" to drynke. Yf he be constant in her, he shall not be moued: and yf he holde him fast by her, he shal not come to cofusion. She shall brynge him to honoure amongethe his neighbours, and in the myndset of the congregacion shal she open his mouth. With the sprete of wyszdome and vnderstaundinge shal she fyll him, and clothte him with the garment of glory. She shal heape the treasure of myrth x ioye vpò him, and geue him an euerverlasting name to heretage. Foolish men wyll not take holde vpon her, but soch as haue vnderstandinge, wyl mete her, for she is farre from pryde and disceate. Men that go aboute with iyes, wil not remembre her: (but men of trueth shall be founde in her, euen vnto the beholdinge of God.) Prayse is not semely in the mouth of y vngodly, for he is not sent of y LORDE.
For of God commeth wyszdome, x the prayse shall stonde by the wyszdome of God, and shal be plenteous in a faithfull mouth, and the LORDE shal geue her vnto him.

Saye not thou: It is the LORDES faute that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do y thinge that God hateth. Saye not thou: he hath caused me to go wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodly. God hateth all abhominacion of errourre, x they that feare God wyl loue no soch. f God made man from the begynnynge, x left him in the hande of his councell. He gane him his commandeementes and preceptes: yf thou wilt observe the commandementes, x kepe acceptable faithfulnes for euer, they shal preserue y. He hath set water and fyre before the, reach out thine hande vnto which thou wilt. Before man is life and death, good and euell: loke what him liketh, shalbe geuen him. For the wysside of God is great and mightie in power, and beholdeth all men continuall. The eyes of the LORDE are vpon them that feare him, and he knoweth all the workes of man. He hath commaundid no man to do vngodly, nether hath he geuey eny man leue to synne.

The 7th. Chapter.

ELYTE not thou in the multitude of vngodly children, and haue no pleasure in them, if they feare not God. Trust not thou to their life, and regarde not their labours: for one sonne ye feareth God is better, the a thousande vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye without childr, then to leaue behynde him soch children as are vngodly. For by one ye hath vnderstandinge, maye a whole cite be vpolden, but though the vngodly be many, yet shall it be waysted thorow them. Many soch thinges hath myne eye sene, and greater thinges then these haue I herde with myne eares. In the congregacion of the vngodly shal a fyre burne, amonge vnfaithfull people shal the wrath be kyndled.

The olde giautes optayned no grace for their synnes, which were destroyed, trustinge to their owne streth. Nether spared he them, amoge whom Loth was a straunger: but smote them and abhorred them because of the pryde of their wordes. He had no pitie vpó them, but destroyed all the people, that were so stoute in synne. And for so moch as he ouersawe not the sixe hundreth thousande, that gathered them selues together in hardnes of their hert: it were maruell yf one beynge hardnecked, shulde be fre. For mercy x wrath is with him: he is both mightie to forgeue, and to poure out displeasure. Like as his mercy is greate, euery so is his punyshment also, he judgeth a man accordeinge to his workes. The vngodly shal not escape in his spoyle, and the longe pacience of him that sheweth mercy, shal not byde behynde. All mercy shall make place vnto euery man accordeinge to the deseruynge of his workes, (and after the vnderstandinge of his pilgrimage.)

Saye not thou: I wyl hyde my self from God, for who wyl thinke vpon me from aboue? I shal not be knowne in so great a heape of people, for what is my soule amongeth so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yee the heauen of heavens, the depe, the earth and all that therin is, shall be moued at his presence: the mountaynes, the hilles and the foundations of the earth shal shake for feare, when God vysiteth them. These thinges doth no hert vnderstandowe, but he vnderstandeth euery hert, and who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seyth his storme, and the most parte of his workes are secreete. Who wil declare the workes of his righteounesnes? Or who shal be able to abyde them? for the covenants is farre from some, and the tryenge out of men is in the fulfillyng. He that is humble of hert, thinketh vpon soch thinges: but an vnwyse and erreoneous man casteth his mynde vnto foolish thinges.

My sonne, herken thou vnto me, lerne vnderstadinges, and marck my wordes with thine hert: I wyl geue the a sure doctrine, planely shal I enstrucke the. God hath set his workes in good ordre from the begynninge, and parte of them hath he sundered from the other. He hath garnished his workes from euerylasting, and their begynnynges accordeinge to their generacions. None of the hyndered another, nether was eny of them dishebed vnto his worde. After this, God lokid vpó the earth, and fylled it with his goodes. With all maner of luyinge beastes hath he coverid the grounde, and they all shalbe turned vnto earth agayne.

The 8th. Chapter.

GOD shope man of the earth, and turned him vnto earth agayne. He gaue him the nombre of dayes and certayne tyme, yee and gaue him power of the thinges that are vpó earth. He clothed him with strength, and made him after his owne lycenes. He made all fleshe to stonde in awe of him, so that he had the dominion of all beastes x foules. He made out of him an helper like vnto him self, and gaue them discretion and tounge, eyes and eares, and a hert to vnderstande, and

Chap. 23.

They are ever with him, and are not hid from his eyes. He hath set a ruler upon every people, but Israel is the Lord's portion. All their works are as the Sonne of man in the sight of God, and his eyes are allways looking upon their ways. All their vnighteousnesse is manifest vnto him, and all their wickednesse is open in his sight. The mercy is a man sheweth is as it were a purse with him, and a mans good deed preserueth him as the apple of an eye. At the last shall he awake, and reward every man vpon his head as he hath deserved, and shall turne them together in to the nethermost parts of the earth. But vnto them that will repent, he hath given the waye of righteousnesse. As for soch as be weake, he comforteth them, and sendeth them the porcion of his verite. O turne vnto the Lord, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the Lord, do the lekke offence, turne agayne vnto the Lord, forsake thine vnrighteousnes, be an utter enemy to abomination (lerne to knowe the righteousnesse and judgmentes of God, stonde in the porcion that is sett forth for the in the prayer of the most hie God. Go in to the porcion of the holy world, with soch as be luyinge and geue thanks vnto God.)

Who will prayse the Lord in the hell? Abye not thou in the erroure of the vn-godly, but geue him thakes before death. As for thy deed, thankfulness preserueth from him as nothinge. Gene thou thanks in thy life, yee while thou art luyinge whole shalt thou geue thanks, and prayse God and reioysse in his mercy. O how greate is the louynge kyndnese of the Lord, and his mercifull goodnes vnto soch as turne vnto him? For all thinges maye not be in man: why? the sonne of man is not immortall, and he hath pleasure in the vanye of wickednes. What is more cleare then the Sonne? yet shal it fayle. Or what is more wicked, then the thinges that flesh and blood hath imaginad? and that same shall be reproved. The Lord seythe the power of the hie heaven, and all are but earth and asshes.

The 23rd. Chapter.

He that luyeth for evermore, made all things together. God only is righteous, and remayneth a victorious kyngge for euer. Who shalbe able to expresse the worke of him? Who hath sought out the grounde of his noble actes? Who shal declare the power of his greatnesse? Or, who will take vpon him to tell out his mercy? As for the wondering worke of the Lord, there maye nothinge be taken from them, nothinge maye be put vnto them, nether maye the grounde of them be founde out. But when a man hath done his best, he must beginne agayne: and when he thinketh to be come to an ende, he must go agayne to his labour. What is man? Wherto is he worth? What good or euell can he do? If the nombre of a mans dayes be almost an hundred yeare, it is mouch.

Like as the droppes of rayne are vnto the see, and as a grauell stone is in comparison of the sonde: so are these few yeares to the dayes euerlastinge. Therfore is the Lord pacient with them, and poureth out his mercy vpon them. He sawe and perceaued the thoughtes and ymaginacions of their harte, that they were euell: therefor he heaped vpon his mercifull goodnes vpon them, and shewed them the wae of righteousnesse. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neighbour: but the mercy of God is vpon all flesh. He chasteneth, he teacheth and nourtureth: yee euens as a shepheard turneth agayne his flocke, so doth he all them that receaueth chastenyng, norture and doctryne. Mercifull is he vnto them, that stonde in awe of his judgmentes.

My sonne, when thou doest good, make no grudginge at it: and what so euer thou geuest, speake no discomfortable wordes. Shal not the dew coole the heate? Even so is a worde better then a gift. Is not a friendly worde a good honest gift? but a gracious man geueth them both. A foole shall cast a man in the tethe, and that roughly, and a gift of the nygarde putteth out thy eyes. Get the righteousnes before thou come to judgment: Lerne before thou speake, and go to phisick or euer thou be sick: examine and judge thy self, before the judgment come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the sight of God. Humble thy self afore thou be sick, and in tyme of thy disease shewe thy conversacion. Let not to praye alwaye, and stonde not in feare to be reformed vnto death, for the rewarde of God endureth for euer. Before thou prayest, prepare thy soule, and be not as one tempteth God. Thynke vpon the wrathfull indignacion that shalbe at the ende, and the houre of vgeaunce, wha HE shal turne aweie his face. Whan thou hast ynowgh, remembre the hymne of honger: and when thou art rych, thynke vpon the tymne of pouerete and scarceenesse.

From the mornyng vntyll the euengeyng the tymne is chaunged, and all soch thynges are soone done in thy sight of God. A wyse man feareth God in all thynges, and in the dayes of transgression he kepeth himself from synne. A discrete man hath pleasure in wyszdome, and he that fyndeth her, maketh much of her. They that haue vnderstandinge, haue dealt wysely in worde, haue vnderstonde the trueth and righteousnes, and haue sought out wyse sentences and iudgmentes.

Folowe not thy lustes, but turne thy soule from thine owne will. For ye thou geuest thy soule hir desyres, it shal mak thine enimies to laugh the to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in great voluptuousnes, medle not to moch withall. Make not to great cheare of the thinge that thou hast womie by avantage: lest thou fall in to pouerte, and haue nothynge in thy purse.

LABOURYNGE man that is geuen vnto dronckennes, shall not be riche; and he that maketh not moch of small thynges, shal fall by little and little. Wyne and women make wyse men rengates, and put men of vnderstandinge to reprofe: and he that accompanyeth aduouterers shal become a wicked man. Mothes and wormes shall haue him to heretage, yee he shall be sett vp to a greater example, and his soule shalbe roted out of the nombre.

He that is haistie to geue credeence, is light mynded, and doth agaynst himself. Who so reioyseth in wickednes, shal be punished: he that hateth to be reformed, his life shalbe shortened: and he that abhorreth bablinge of worde, quencheth wickednes.

Rehearse not a wicked and churilous worde twysy, and thou shalt not be hyndered. Shew thy secretes nether to frende nether foo, if thou hast offended, tell it not oure. For he shal herken vnto the and marek the: and whan he fyndeth opportunyte, he shal hate the. If thou hast herde a worde agaynst thy neibbour, lett it be deed within the: and be sure, thou shalt haue no harme therby. A foole travaileth with a worde, like as a woman that is payned with bearing of childe. Like as an arowe shott in a dogges thye, so is a worde in a fooles hert. Tell thy frende his faute, lest he be ignorante, and saye: I haue not done it, or ye he haue done it, that he do it nomore. Reproue thy neibbour, that he kepe his tonge: and ye he haue spok, that he saye it nomore.

Tell thy neibbour his faute, for oft tymes an offence is made, and geue not credence to every worde. A man falleth somtyyme with his tonge, but not with his will. For what is he, if he hath not offended in his tonge? Geue thy neibbour warnyng, before thou threaten him, and geue place vnto the lawe of the LORDE. The feare of God is all wyszdome, he that is a right wyse man kepeth the lawe. As for the doctrine of wickednes, it is no wyszdome, and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandinge: it is but wickednesse and abhominacion a blasphemynge of wyszdome. A symple man of small vnderstandinge that feareth God, is better then one that hath mocch wyszdome, and transgresseth the lawe of the Kyest.

A craftye sotell man can be wyse, but he is runrighteous, and with gifthes he warysteth the open and manyfest lawe. A wicked man can behauve himself humbly, and can douke with his heade, and yet is he but a disceauer within. He hydeth his face, and disgruyseth it: t because he shulde not be knowne, he preuenteth the.

And though he be so weake that he can do the no harme, yet when he maye fynde opportunyte, he shall do some euell. A man maye be knowne by his face, and one that hath vnderstandinge, maye be perceayned by the loke of his countenaunce. A mans garment, laughter, yoigne, declare what he is.

The rr. Chapter.

Some man reprooneth his neghbour of tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some man holdeth his tonge, and he is wyse and discrete. It is mouch better to geue warnynge and to reprooue, then to beare euell will: for he that knowlegheth him self openly, shalbe preserued from hurt and destruction.

Like as when a chamberlayne thorow desyre and lust defyleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that vseth violence and vnrighteousnes in lawe: (O how good a thinge is it, a man y is reprooned, to shewe openly his repentance? for so shal thou escape wyfylfull synne.)

Some man kepeth sylence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdehis tonge, because he hath not the vnderstandinge of the language: and some man kepeth sylence, waytinge a conuenent tyme. A wyse man wyll holde his tonge tyll he se opportune, but a wanten and an vn discrete body shal regard no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shal hurte his owne soule: and he that taketh auctorite vpo him vnrighteous, shalbe hated.

Some man hath oft tymes prosperite in wicked thinges: Agayne, some man getteth mocch, and hath harme and losse. There is some gift that is nothing worth: Againe, there is some gift, whose rewarde is dubble. Some man getteth a fell for bryyne to prioude, and some commeth to worship from lowe estate. Some man bieth mocch for a little priyte, and must paye for it seuenfolde.

A wyse man with his wordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fatours of foole shalbe poured out. The gift of the vn wyse shal do the no good, for his eyes are seuen folde. He he shal geue little, and saye he gaue mocch: he openeth his mouth and crieth out, as it were one that crieth out wyne. To daye he lendeth, tomorow he axeth it agayne, and sych a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yee euen they that eate my bred, speake no good of me. O how oft, and of how many shal he be laughted to scorne? He taketh a more perlous fall by soch wordes, than ye he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shal the fallles of wicked men come haistely.

In the mouth of him that is vntauketh, are many vnconuenient and vnumet wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be aowled at the mouth of the foole, for he speakeith it not in due season.

Some man synneth not, because he hath not therwithall, and in his rest he shall be stynged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwyse bodyes sake destroiehyt he it, (and with acceptance of personnes shal he vnwyse himself.) Some man promiseth his frende a gift for very shame, and getteth an enemye of him for naught. A lye is a wicked shame in a man, yet shal it be euere in the mouth of the vnwyse. A thefe is better, then a man that is accustomed to synne, but they both shal haue destruccion to heretage. The conditions of liers are vnhonest, and their shame is euere with them.

A wyse man shall brynge himselfe to honoure with his wordes, and he that hath vnderstandinge shall be sett by amonge great men. He that tylleth his lorde, shal increase his heape of corne: he that worketh righteousnes, shall be exalted, he that pleaseth great men, shall escape mocch euell. Rewards and gifthes blynde the eyes of the wyse, and make him domme, that he can not tell.

mē their fautes. Wyszdome that is hyd, and treasure that is hoorded vp,* what profit is in them both? Better is he that kepeth his ignorance secrete, then a man that hydeth his wyszdom.

The rii. Chapter.

A MY sonne, yf thou hast synned, do it no more: but praye for thy foresynnes, that they maye be for genen the. Fle from synne, euuen as from a serpent: for yf thou commest to nye her, she wyll byte the. The teth thereof are as the teth of a lyon, to slaye the soules of men. The wickednes of man is as a sharpe two edged swerde, which maketh soch wounds that they can not be healed.

Stryfe and wrongeous dealinge shall waist awaye a mans goodes, & thorow pryde a rich house shalbe brought to naught: so the riches of the proude shalbe roted out. The prayer of the poore goeth out of the mouth, and commeth vnto the eares, and his vengeance (or defence) shall come, and y haistely. Who so hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodly persone: but he that feared God, wyll remembre himself. A mightie man is knowne afrar of by his tongue, but he that hath vnderstandinge, perceaueth that he shal haue a fall.

B Who so buyldeth his house with other mens cost, is lyke one that gathereth stones in wynter. The congregacion of the vngodly is like stubble gathered together, their ende is a flamme of fyre. The waye of the vngodly is sett with stones, but in their ende is hell, darknes, and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyll holde fast the vnderstandinge thereof, and the ende of the feare of God is wyszdom. He that is not wyse, wyll not be taught in good: but the wyszweyse man aboundeth in wickednes: and where byternes is, there is no vnderstodinge. The knowlege of the wyse shall flowe like water that rennethe over, and his counsell is like a fountayne of lyfe.

C The hert of a foole is like a broke vessell, he can kepe no wyszdom. Whan a man of vnderstandinge heareth a wyse worde, he shall commende it, and make moch of it. But yf a volupteous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behinde his back. The talkynge of a foole is like an heuy burthen by the waye: but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doite is in the congregacion, it is axed at the mouth of the wyse, and they shal pondre his wordes in their hertes. Like as a house that is destroyed, euuen so is wyszdom vnto a foole: As for the knowlege of the vnwyse, it is but dack wordes. Doctryne is vnto him y hath no vnderstandinge, euuen as fetters aboute his fete, and like mannieles vpon his right hande. A foole lifteth vp his voyce with laughther, but a wyse man shal scarce laughthe secretly.

Lernynge is vnto a wyse man a lewel of golde, and like an armlett vp hys right arme. A foolish mans foote is soone in his neighbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the persone of the mightie. A foole wyll pepe in at y wyndow in to the house, but he that is well nourtured, wyll stonde without. A foolish man stondeth herkenynge at the dore, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The lippes of the vnwyse wylbe tellynge foolish things, but y wordes of soch as hauo vnderstandinge, shalte weyed in the balane. The hert of fooles is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in their hert. Whan the vngodly curseth the blashphemers, he curseth his owne soule. A preuy acusser of other men shal defyle his owne soule, and be hated of every man: (but he that kepeth his tongue and is discrete, shall come to honoure.)

The rii. Chapter.

A SLOUTHFULL body is moulded of a stone of claihe: he that toucheth him, must wash his handes agayne. A mysnurtoed sonne is the dishonoure of the father. A foolish daughter shalbe lithe regarded. A wyse daughter is an heretage vnto hir husbande: but she that commeth to dishonesty, bringeth hir father in heuynes. A daughter that is past shame, dishonesture both hir father and hir husbande: the vngodly shal regarde her, but they both shal despise her. The playenge of Musick is not mete where heuynes is, euuen so is the correccio of doctryne of wyszdom euer vnpleasaunt vnto fooles.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euene as one that gleweth a potsherde togethe: as one that telleth a tayle to him that heareth him not,
and as one that rayseth a mā out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wyszdome, is euhen as a man, which speakeeth to one yntax is a slepe. Whā he hath tolde his tayle, he sayth: what is the matter? Whā one dyeth, lamentacion is made for him, because the light fayleth him: euë so let mē mourne ouer a foole, for he wanteth understandinge. Make but litle weepinge because of the deed: for he is come to rest: but the life of the foole is worse then the death.

*Seuen dayes do men mourne for him that is deed, but the lamentacion ouer the vnye and vngodly shulde endure all the dayes of their life.

E Talk not moch with a foole, and go not with him that hath no vnderstandinge. Bewarre of him, lest it turne the to trouayle, $a$ thou shalt not be defyled with his synne. De- parte from him, and thou shalt fynde rest, $a$ shalt not be drawē back in to his foolishnes. What is heuyer then leade? And what shulde a foole be called els, but leade? $b$ Sōde, salt $a$ a lōpe of yron is easier to beare, than an vnye, foolish, and vngodly man. Like as the band of wodd bounde together in the foundacion of the house can not be lowsed, euē so is it with $ɔ$ hert $ɔ$ is stablished in $ɔ$ thought of couell. The thought of the wyse, shal nether feare ner be offended at eny tyme.

D Like as a fayre playstrd wall in a winter house, $a$ an hye buyldinge, maye not abyde $ɔ$ wide $ɔ$ storme: euē so is a fooles hert aeraied in his ymaginacion: he feareth at every thing, and can not endure. He that nypeth a mans eye, byryng forth teares: and he that pricketh the hert, bringeth forth $ɔ$ meanynge $a$ thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them awaye: $a$ he $ɔ$ blasphemeth his frēde, breaketh $ɔ$ fredship, though thou drewest a swerde at thy frende, yet dispayre not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frende. $ɔ$ If he speake sowerly, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together agayne: excepthe it be so that thou blaspheme him, dyszdayne him, opē his secretes and wounde him tratorously: for all soch things shal dryne awaye a frende.

E Be faithfull ynto thy neigboure in his pouer, that thou mayest reioyse with him also in his prosperite. $a$ abyde stedfast ynto him in $ɔ$ tyme of his trouble, that thou maist be heyre with him in his heretage. Like as the vapor and smoke goth out at the ouen before $ɛ$ fyre, euē so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudsheddinge. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from him, though he shulde do me harme. Who so ever heareth it, shal beware of him. Who shal set a watch before my mouth, $ɔ$ a sure seale vpon my lippes, $ɔ$ I fall not with the, $ɔ$ $ɔ$ my tongue destroye me not?

The riiij. Chapter. O LORDE, father and gouvernoure of my life, leane me not in their ymaginaciō $a$ councell. Oh let me not fall in soch reprof. Who wyll kepe my thought with $ɔ$ scoure, and the doctrine of wyszdome in myne herte? that he spare not myne ignoraunce, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignoraunces increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and that my synnes exceede not: lest I fall before myne enemyes, and so my adversayr reioyse. O LORDE, thou father $a$ God of my life, leane me not in their ymaginaciō.  $ɔ$ let me not haue a proude loke, but turne awaye all volupteousnes fro me. Take fro me the lustes of the body, let not the desyres of vncleennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer in to a vnshamefast and obstinate mynde.

Heare me (o ye children) I will gene you a doctrine, how ye shall ordre youre mouth: who so kepeth it, shal not perish thorow his lippes, ner be hurt thorow wicked workes (As for the synner, he shalbe taken in his owne vanite: he that is proude and cursed, shalt fall therin.)  $a$ Let not thy mouth be accustomed with swearinge, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namynge of God be continually in thy mouth: for like as a seruauant which is oft punyshed can not be without some sore, euē so what so euer he be $ɛ$ sweareth and nameth God, shal not be cleane pourged frō synne. A man that seceth moch swearinge, shalbe fylled with wickednes, and the plage shall neuer go from his house. $ɔ$ If he begyle his brother, his fante shalbe vpon him: $ɔ$ he knowlege not his synne, he maketh a dubble offence: and $ɔ$ he sweare in vayne, he shal not be founde righteous, for his house shalbe full of plages.

The wordes of $ɔ$ swearer bringeth death $a$

Remembre thy father and thy mother, wha thou art set amonge greate men: lest God forget y in their sight, and lest thou dotinge in thy custome, suffre rebuke, and wyshe not to haue bene borne, and so curse the daye of thy natuitle. The LORDE God knowe all thinges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon them all. The same mashal be openly punishedy in y stretes of y cite, and shalbe chased abrode like a yonge horse foale: and when he thinketh least vpon it, he shalbe také, Thus shal he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstonde the feare of the LORDE. And thus shal it go also with euery wyfe y leaueth his husbande, y getteth enheternace by a straunge mariage. First, she hath bene vnfaithfull vnto the lawe of y Hyest: Secondly, she hath forsaken his owne husbande: Thirdly, she hath played y whore in aduotyue, y gotté his childrë by another man. She shalbe brought out of y corgregacion, and his childrë shalbe lokéd vpó. Hir childrë shal be not take rote: y as for frute, hir braûches shal brige forth none. A shamefull reporte shal she leauë behynde her, y hir dishonoure shall not be put out. And they y remayne, shal knowe, y there is nothinge better, then the y feare of God: y y there is nothynge sweeter, then to take hede vnto the commaundemente of the LORDE, A greate worshippe is it to folowe y LORDE, for longe life shalbe receaun of him.

The rurij. Chapter.

YSZDOME shal praysye himsel, a be a honoured in God, a reioyse in y myddest of his people: In the corgregacions of the Hyest shal she open hir mouth, a tryumpe in y beholdinge of his power: In y myddest of hir people shal she be exalted, a wondred at in the holy fulnesse: In the multitude of the chosen shal she commend, a amonge soch as be blessed she shalbe prayed, a shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of y Hyest, first borne before all creatures. I caused y light y fayleth not, to aryse in the heauen, a covered all the earth as a cloude. My dwellinge is aboue in y heyth, a my seate is in the piler of the cloude. I my selfe alone have gone rounde aboute the compass of heauen, a pearde the grounde of y depe: I haue walked in the floudes of y see, a haue stonde in all landes: my domynion is in euery people and in euery nacion, a with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of all, both hye and lowe.

In all these thinges also I sought rest, a a dwellinge in some enheternace. So y creator of all thinges gace me a commaundement: a he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and saide vnto me: Let thy dwellinge be in Iacob, and thy inheritance in Israel, a rote thy selfe amõge my chosen. a I was created from the begynninge and before the worlde, a shal not leauë vnto the worlde to come. A in the holy habitation haue I serued before him, and so was I stablished in Sion. In y holy cite rested I in like manner, a in Ierusalem was my power. I toke rote in an honouurable people, euën in the porcion of y LORDE a in his heretage, a kepe me in y fulnes of the sayntes. I am sett vp an hye like a Ceder vpó Libanus, a as a Cypers tre vpon the mount Hermon: I am exalted like

<td>a palme tre in Cades, τ as a rose plated in Ieronico: As a faire olyue tre in the feldre, τ am exalted like as a plantayne tre by the water syde. I have geuen a smell in the streetes, as ɣ Cynamon and Balme, that hath so good a saouare: yee a swete odoure have I geuen, as it were Myrre of the best. I have made my dwellings to smell as it were of rosyn, Galbanum, of Clowes and Incense, τ as Libamus whom it is not hewde downe, τ mine odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Terebynte haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are the braunches of honour and lounyge saouare. ɣ As ɣ vyne haue I brought forth frute of a swete saouare, and my floures are ɣ frute of honoure and riches. I am the mother of bewayte, of loue, of feare, of knowledge and of holy hope. In me is all grace of life and truth: ɣ In me is all hope of life and vertue. O come vnto me, all ye that be desyrous of me, and fyll youre selues with my frutes: for my sprete is sweeter then hony, τ so is my inheritance more then the honie combe: the remembrance of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me, shal haue the more honer: and they that dryke me, shal thyrste the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shal not come to confusion: and they that worke in me, shal not offende. They that make me to be knowne, shal haue euerrlasting life. All these things are the boke of life, the counaunt of the Hyst, and the knowlefe of the trueth. ɣ Moses commanded the lawe in the preceptes of righteousnes for an heretage vnto the house of Iacob,τ and committeth ɣ promyses vnto Israel (Out of David his seruant HE ordeneth to raise vp a most mightie kinge, syttinge in the seate of honoure for euermore.) ɣ This fylleth like with wyszdome as the floude of Phisyon, τ as ɣ floude of Tigiris, when the new frutes are a growinge. This bringeth a plenteus vnderstondinge, like Euprates: γ fylleth it vp, as Iordan in the time of haruest. This maketh nortoure to breake forth as the light, τ as the water Gihon in ɣ haruest. The first hath not knowne her perfectly, nomore shall the last seke out ɣ grounde of her. For hir thought is fuller the the see, and hir counsell is profounder then the greate depe. I wyszdome haue cast out floudes. I am as a greate waterbroke out of ɣ riuer. I am as the ryuer Dorix, and as a water condyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I wyel water the garden of my yonge plantes, and fyll the frute of my byrth. So my waterbroke became exceddinge greate, and my ryuer approched vnto the see. For I made doctryne to be vnto all me as light as the fayre mornynge, and I shall make it to be euery the clearer. (I will pearse thorow all the lower partes of the earth, I wyll loke vpon all such as be a slepe, and lighten all the that put there trust in the LORDE.) I shal yet pour out doctrine, like as prophecy, and leue it vnto such as seke after wyszdome, and their generacions shal I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerrastinge worlde. APPJIE is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nobre of his yeares shalbe dubble. An honest woman maketh hir husbande a joyfull man, she shall fyll yeare of his life in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gift, which shalbe geuen for a good porcion vnto such as farea God. Whether a man be rich or poore, he maye haue euer a mery hert, a chearful countenaunce. There be three thinges I my hert feareth, and my face is afrayed of the fourth. Treason in a cite, a sediciouse people, and noysome tonges, all these are heuyer then the death. But whan one is gelous ouer his wyfe, he brynygeth payne and sorowe vnto the hert: and a woman that telleth out all thinges, is a soucre of the tonge. Whan one hath an euell wyfe, it is euene as whan an unlike pare of oxen must drawe together: he that getteth her, getteth a scorpion. A dronken woman is a greate plage, for she can not couer hir owne shame.

The whordome of a woman maye be knowne in the pryde of hir eyes and ey-lyddes. Yf thy daughter be not shamefast, holde her straitly, lest she abuse herself thorow ouermoch libertie. Bewarde of all the dishonesty of hir eyes, and maruell not if she do agaynst the. Lik as one that goeth by the waye and is thirsty, so shall she open hir mouth, and drynke of euery nexte water that she maye gett.

By euery hedge shall she say her downe, opทำ hir quyuer against euery arowe. A louyng wyfe relowseth hir husbande, and fedeth his bones with hir wyszdome. A woman of few wordes is a gift of God, and to a well nurtured mynde maye nothing be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyft aboue other gifts, and there is no wyght to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it self. Like as the Sonne when it ayseth, is an ornament in the hye heauen of LORDE, so is a vertuous wife bewyte of all hir house. Like as the cleare light is vpon ṭ holy cædelstick, so is the bewyte of the face vpon an honest body. Like as the golde pilers are vpon the sockettes of syluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a costant mynde. (Perpetuall are the fouductions that be laied vpon a whole stonye rocke, so are the commandements of God upon an holy woman.

There be two thinges in Greene my hert, and in the thirde is a displeasure came upon me. When an experte man of warre suffrith searsones and pouerite, Whan men of understandinge and wysedome are not set by: And when one departeth from righteousnes vnsto synne. Who so doth soch, the LORDE hath prepared him vnto the swerde. There be two manneres of thinges, which me thynek to be herde and perylous. A marchaunt can not lightly kepe him from wronge, nether a tauerne himselfe from synne.

The 12th Chapter.

Because of pouerite haue many one offended: and he that seketh to be riche, turneth his eyes aside. Like as a nale in the wall sticketh fast betwixte two stones, even so doth synne sticke betwixte thy byer and the seller. Yf he holde him not diligently in yeare of the LORDE, his house shall soone be ouerthrownne. Like as when one sifeth, the fythymes remayneth in the syue: So, remayneth there some vnclaene thinges in the thought of man. The ouen proueth the potters vessell, so doth a tentacion of trouble trye righteouse men. The tre of the feld is knowne by his frute, so is the thought of mans hert knowne by his wordes. Praye no man excepte thou haue harde him, for a man is knowne by his wordes. Yf thou solowest righteousnes, thou shalt get her, and put her vpon thy as a fayre garment. (And thou shalt dwell with her, and she shall defende the for euer, and in thy daye of knowlege thou shalt fynde stedfastnesse.) The byrdes resorte vnto their like, so doth the truest turne vnto them that be occupied withall. The Lyon waytet for thy praye: so do the synnes lurke vpon the workes of wickednes. The talkinge of him that feareth God, is nothing but wysedome: as for a foole, he chaunge with Moore. Yf thou be amonge the vndiscrrete, kepe thy worde to a conuenient tyme, but amonge such as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkinge of foole is abominacion, and there sporte is voluptuousnesse and mynsurtoure. Moch swearynge maketh the hayre to stonde vp, and to stryue with soch, stoppeth the cares.

The stryfe of the proude is bloudshoddynge, a their blaspheyme is heuy to heere. Who so discouere thueth secretes, leseth his credence, and fyndeth no frende after his will. Loue thy frende, and bynde thyselfe in faithfulness with him: but yf thou bewrayest his secretes, thou shalt not get him agayne: For like as the mai is that destroyeth his enemie so is he also that dealeth falsly in the frendship of his neibour.

Like as one that letteth a byrde go out of his honde, can not take her agayne: Even so thou, yf thou gene ouer thy frende, thou canst not get him agayne: Yee thou cast not come by him, for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roo escaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for wounds, they maye be bounde vp agayne, and an euell worde maye be reconeyled: but who so bewrayeth the secretes of a frende, there is no more hope to be had vnto him.

He that wycketh with the eyes, ymagineth some euell, and no man shall take him from it. Whan thou art present, he shal hylie commende and praye thy wordes: but at the last he shall turne his tayle, and slaider thy sayenge. Many things haue I hated, but nothinge so euell, for the LORDE himself also abhorreth soch one.

Who so casteth a stone an hye, it shal fall vpon his owne heade: and he that smyte with gyle, woundeth himself. Who so diggeth a pytt, shal fall therin: and he that layeth a snare, shal be taken in it himself. Who so gueeth a wicked noyse, counsell, it shal come vpon himself, and he shall not knowe from whiche. The proude blaspheyme and are scornewfull, but vengeaunce lurketh for them as a Lyon. They that rejoyse at the fall of a righteous, shall be taken in thy snare, anguyshe of hert shall consume them before they dye. Anger and rigorousnes are two abominable thinges, and yngodly hath them both vpon him.

The 13th Chapter.

He that seketh vengeaunce, shal fynde vengeance of the LORDE, which shall surely kepe him his synnes. Forgeue

A Deut. 32. c. Rom. 12. c.
Mat. 5. b. 6. b. 18. b.
thou neibour the hurt that he hath done the, and so shalt thy synnes be forguelen the also, when thou prayest. A man that beareth hatred against another, how darre he desire forgueleness of God? He that sheweth no mercy to a mâ which is like himself, how darre he axe forgueleness of his synnes? Yf he that is but flesh, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wil intreate for his synnes? Remember the ende, let enmytes passe, which seketh death and destruction, and abyde thou in thy commandementes. Remember thy commandement, so shalt thou not be rigorous over thy neibour. Thyne vpó the couenaunt of Hyest, and forgive thy neibours ignoraunce.

B Beware of strife, and thou shalt make thy synnes fewere. For an angrie man kyndleth varlaunce, and the vngodly disquyeteth fredes, and putteth discorde amonge them that be at peace. The more wodd there is, the more vehement is the fyre: and the mightie yt men be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer the strife endureth, the more it burneth.

C An haistie brawlinge kyndleth a fyre, and an haistie strife sheddeth bloude. Yf thou blowe the sparke: it shal burne: Yf thou spytt vpó it, it shal go forth, and both these go out of thy mouth. The slaunderer and dubble tògued is cursed, for many one that be frendes setteth he at variance. The thirde tongue hath disquieted many one, and dryuen them from one londe to another. Stronge cities hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowne the houses of greate men. The thirde tòghe hath cast out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their labours. Who so harkeneth vnto soch, shall neuer fynde rest, and neuer dwell safely. The stroke of rod maketh yeddres, but the stroke of the tongue smyteth the bones in snder. There be many that haue perished with the swerde, but many mo thorow the tongue.

Wel is him that is kepe fróm an euell tongue, commeth not in th anger therof: which draweth not the yock of soch, and is not bùde in the bondes of it. For the yock therof is of yron, and the bonde of it of stèle. The death therof is a very euell death: hell were better for one, then soch a tongue. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that fear God, and the flamme therof maye not burne the. Such as forsake the LORDE, shal fall therin: and it shal burne them, and no man shall be able to quench it. It shal fall vpon thè as a Lyb, and deouer them as a leparde. Thou hedgest thy goodes with thornes: why doest thou not rather make dores and barres for thy mouth? Thou weiest thy golde and syluer: why doest thou not weye thy wordes also vpon the balance? Bewarre, that thou slyde not in thy tongue, and so fall before thine enemies, that laye wayte for the.

The verr. Chapter.

WHO so wil shewe mercy, let him lende vnto his neiboure: and he that is able, let him kepe the commandement. Lende vnto thy neiboure in tyme of his neede, and paye thou thy neiboure agayne in due season. Kepe thy wordes, deale faithfully with him, thou shalt allwaye fynde the thinge that is necessary for the. There haue bene many, that when a thinge was lent them, rekuend it to be founde: and made them travaile and laboure, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue any thinge, they kyse the handes of soch as gene them, and for their neibours good they hubble their voyce. But when they shulde paye agayne they kepe it back, and gene euell wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the tyme: though he be able, yet geneth he scarce the half agayne, and rekueneth other to be founde. And if he witholde not his moneye, yet hath he an enemie of him, and that vnbesered.

He payeth him with cursinge and rebuke and geneth him euell wordes for his good dede. There be many one which are not glad for to lende, not because of euell, but they feare to lese the thinges that they lende. Yet haue thou pacience with the symple, and witholde not mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commandementes sake, and let him not go emptie from the because of his necessite. Lese thy money for thy brother and neibours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, wher it rusteth and corruppeth. Gather thy treasure after the commandement of Hyest, and so shal it bringe the more profit thè golde. Laye vp the allmes in the hande.
of the poore, and it shal kepe the from all euell." (A mans allmes is as a purse with him, and shall kepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye: and afterwade shall it aryse, ζ paye euery man his rewarde vpon his heade.) It shal fight for the agaynst thine enemies, beter then the shylde of a giaunnte, or speare of the mightie.

C A good honest mā is suertye for his neigboure, but a wicked person letteth him come to shame. Forget not the frendshiphe of thy suertye, for he hath geue his soule for ſ. The vngodly despyseth ſ good dede of his suertye, ζ the vnhankfull and ignoraunt leaneth his suertie in daunger. (Some man promyseth for his neigboure: ζ when he hath lost his honesty, he shall forsake him.) Suerstiphe hath destroyed many a ryche man, ζ remoued them as the wawes in ſ see. Mighty people hath it dryuen awaye, and caused thē to wandre in strauge countrees. An vngodly man transgres sung the com maundement of the LORDE, shal fall in to an euell suertishe: and though he force himself to get out, yet shall he fall in to judgment. Helpe thy neigboure out after thy power, and beware, ſ thou thy self fall not in soch det. Š The chefe thinges that kepeth in the life, is water and bred, clothinges and lodginge, to couer the shame.

D Better is it to haue a poore luyngye in a mans owne house, ſ the delicate fayre amoyge the straunge. Be it litte or moch ſ thou hast, holde the contē withall (ζ thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabounde:) for a myserable life is it, to go from house to house: and where a mā is fremde, he darre not opē his mouth. Though one be lodged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vnworthy, ζ heare many better rough wordes, namely thus: Go thou waye thou straunger, and preparre a table (for thy self) and fede me also of that thou hast. Awayne thou straunger (so, that he regardeth his honoure nomore) my brother commeth in to my house, ζ so he tellleth him the neccessite of his house. These thinges are heuy to a man that hath understandinge: namely, the forb yi dinge of ſ house, ζ that the lēder casteth him in the teth.

The 377. Chapter.

Who so loueth his childe, holdeth him still vnder correccion, ζ that he maye haue ioye of him afterwarde (and that he grope not after his neighbours dores.) Ζ He ſ teacheth his sonne, shall haue ioye in him, ζ nede not be ashamed of him amōge his aquantaince. Who so enfourned ζ teacheth his sonne, greueth ſ enemie, and before his frendes he maye haue ioye of him. Though the father dye, yet is he as though he were not deed: for he hath left one behynde him that is like him. In his life he sawe him, ζ had ioye in him, ζ was not sory in his death, (nether was he ashamed before ſ enemies.) For he left behinde him an attenger against his enemies, and a good doer vnto the frendes. For the life of children shal binde the wounds together, and his hert is greued at every crye. An vntamed horse wyllbe harde, and a wanton childe wyllbe wylfull. Yf thou brynge vp thy sonne delicately, he shall make ſ afrayed: and yf thou playe with him, he shall bryngye the to heuynes. Laugh not with him, lest thou wepe with him also, and lest thy teth be set on edge at the last.

Geue him not libertie in his youth, ζ excuse not his folly, ſ Bow downe his necke whyle he is yonge, hytt him vpon the sydes whyle he is yet but a childe, lest he waxe stubborne, ſ geue no more force of ſ (and so shalt thou haue heuynes of soule.) Ζ Teach thy childe, ζ be diligēt therin, lest it be to thy shame. Better is the poore beynde whole ζ stronge, thē a man to be riche, ζ not to haue his health. Health and welfare is aboue all golde, and an whole body aboue all treasure. There is no riches aboue a sounde body, ζ no ioye aboue the ioye of the hert. Death is better then a wretched life, or contynuall sicknes. The goodes ſ are put in a close mouth, are like as when meate is layed vpon ſ graue.

What good doth the offeringe vnto an Idol? ζ For he can nether eate, taist nor smel. Eue so is it also with the riche, whom God maketh seke: he seth it with his eyes, ζ groneth thereafter, and is euon as a gelded man, that lyeth with a virgyn and sygheth. ζ Geue not ouer thy mynde in to heuynes, τ, vexe not thy self in thine owne councell. The ioye τ earnefulness of the hert is the life of man, and a mans gladnes is the prolonginge of his dayes. Looke thine owne soule, and conforte thine hert: as for sorow and heuynes, dryue it farre from τ, for heuynes hath slayne many a man, and bryngeth no profit. Zeale and anger shorten the dayes of the life: carefulnes and sorow bryng age before the tyme. Vnto a mery hert euery thing hath a good taist, that he eateh.

The xxxiv Chapter.

TRAUAYLE and carefulnes for riches taketh awaye the slepe, and τ maketh the flesh to cōsume. Whan one lyeth and taketh care, he wakeh euere vp, like as greate sickness breakeh the slepe. The rich hath greate labore in gathering his riches togethe, and then with the pleasure of his riches he taketh his rest τ is refreshed. But who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: and though he leaue of, yet is he a begger. He that loueth riches, shall not be justified: and who so foloweth corruptiō, shal hauene enough thereof. "Many one are come in greate mysfortune by the reason of golde, τ hauë founde their destrucion before them. It is a tre of falluyne vnto them that offer it vp, and all soch as be foolish fall therin. Blessed is the rich, which is founde without blemish, and hath not gone after golde, ner hoped in money and treasures. Where is there soch one? and we shal commende him, and call* him blessed, for greate thinges doth he amonge his people. Who so is tryed, τ founde perfecte in soch thinges, shalbe commended and praised. Who might offende, τ hath not offended? Who could do euell, and hath not done it? Therfore shal his good be stablished, and the whole congregacion shal declare his allmesse. "Yf thou stytt at a greate mans table, open not thy mouth wyde vpun it, and make not many wordes. Reembre, that an euell eye is a shrew.

What thinge created is worse then a wicked eye τ therfore wepeth it before euery mans face? Laye not thine hand vpon euery thinge that thine eye see, and stryue not with him in the dyshe." Ponder by thy self what thy neighbour wolde payne haue, τ be descreete in euery paynte. Eate the thinges that is set before the, manerly, as it becometh a man: and eate not to moch, τ lest thou be abhorred. Leaue thou of first of all because of nortour, lest thou be he whom no man maye satisfe, which maye turne to thy decaye. Wha thou syttest amongst many men, reach not thine haide out first of all. O how well contėt is a wyse man with a little wyne? so τ in slepe thou shalt not be seke therof, ner fele eny payne. A swete wholsome slepe shal soch one haue, and fele no inwarde grefe. He ryseth vp by tymes in τ mornyngynge, and is well at ease in him self. But an vnsciable eater slepeth vnquyetly, and hath ache and payne of the body. Yf thou felest that thou hast eaten to moch, arysy, go thy waye, cast it of thy stomach, and take thy rest.

My sonne, heare me, and despyse me not: and at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue told the. In all thy worke be diligent and quycke, so shal there no sicknes happen vnto the. "Who so is liberal in dealynghe out his meate, many men shall blesse him and praye him with their lippes: and the same is a sure token of his loue and faithfulnes. But he τ is vnfaithfull in meate, the whole cite shall complayne of him: and that is a sure experience of his infidelye and wickednes. "Be not thou a wine bebber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fyre proueth τ hard yron, euen so doth wyne proue the hertes of the proude, when they be droncken.

Wyne soberly droncken, quyckeneth the life of ma." Yf thou drynkcast it measurably, thou shalt be temperate. What life is it, τ maye continue without wyne? Wyne was made from the begynnynge to make men glad (and not for dronkennes.) Wyne measurably dronkē is a reioysinge of the soule and body. But τ it be dronken with exesse, it maketh bytternes and sorowe vnto the mynde. Dronkēnes fylleth the mynde of the foolish with shame and ruyne, mynisheth the strēth, and maketh woundes. "Rebuke not thy neigbour at τ wyne; and despyse him not in his myrrth. Geue him no despytefull wordes, and preasse not vpon him with contrary sayenges.

\[ F \] thou be made a ruler, pride not thy self therin, \textit{a} but be thou as one of the people. \textit{b} Take diligent care for them, and loke well therto: and when thou hast done all thy dewtie, syt the done, that thou mayest be mery with them, and receaue a crowne of honour. Talk wysely \textit{c} honestly, for wyszdome becommeth the right well.

Hynder not musyk. Speake not, where there is no audyence; \textit{d} and poure not forth wyszdome out of tyme, at an importunyte. Like as the Carbuncle stone shyneth, that is set in golde, so doth a songe garnyysh the wyne feast: and as \textit{L} Smaragde that is set in golde, so is the sweotes of Musyck by \textit{v} myrth of wyne.

Thou yonge mă, speake that becommeth the, \textit{g} that is profitable, and yet scarce when thou art twyce axed. Comprehende moch with few worde. In many thinges be as one that is ignorant, geue eare, and holde thy tonge withall. \textit{Y} thou be amonge men of hyer auctorite, desyre not to compare thy self vnto them: and whi an elder speaketh, make not thou many worde therin. Before the thonder goeth lightenyng, and before nurtoyre and shamefastnesse goeth loue and faoure. \textit{Stō} vp by tymes, and be not the last: but get the home soone, \textit{q} there take thy pastyme, \textit{q} do what thou wilt: so \textit{v} thou do no euell, and defye no mă. But for all thinges geue thankes, vnto him that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

Who so feareth the LORDE, \textit{w}yl receaue his doctryne: and they that get them to him by tymes, shal fynde grace. \textit{He} that secheth the lawe, shall be fylled withall: As for him \textit{y} is but fayned, he wyl be offended therat. They that feare the LORDE, shal fynde the judgment, \textit{q} their righteousnes shalbe kyndled as a light. An vnsgodly man will not be re tourned, but can helpe himself with the example of other in his purpose. A man of wnderstondinge despyseth no good counsell: but a wylye and proude body hath no feare. My somne, do nothynge without advisement, so shal it not repyt the after \textit{y} debe. Go not in the waye where thou mayest fall, ner where thou mayest stumle against the stone.

Gene not thy self in to a labiorious slypery waye, and beware of thine owne children. In all thy workes put thy trust in God from thy whole hert, for that is the kepinge of the commandementes. Who so beleueth Gods worde, taketh hede to the commandementes: \textit{g} he that putteth his trust in \textit{y} LORDE, shal wante nothynge.

The 112. Chapter.

THERE shall no euell happen vnto him \textit{a} that feareth God: but whan he is in tentacion, the LORDE shall deluyer him. A wyse man hateth not \textit{v} lawe, but an ypocryte is as a shyp in a ragynge water. A man of wnderstondinge geueth credence vnto the lawe of God, and \textit{v} lawe is faithfull vnto him. Be sure of the matter, then talke therof: Be first wel instructe, the maiest thou geue answere. The hert of \textit{v} foolish is like a cartwhyle, and his thoughtes renne aboute like the axell tre. Like as a wylde horse that nyyeth vnder euery one \textit{y} sytteth vpon him, so is it with a scorne d full frende. Why doth one daie excell another, seynge all the daies of the yeare come of the Sonne? The wyszdome of the LORDE hath so parted them a sulnder, and so hath he ordened the tymes and solempne feastes. Some of them hath he chosen and halowed before other daies. And all men are made of the grounde, \textit{q} out of the earth of Adam.

In the multitude of scyence hath \textit{y} LORDE sundered them, and made theire wayes of dyverse fashions. Some of them hath he blessed, made moch of them, halowed them, \textit{q} claymed them to himself. But some of the hath he cursed, brought the lowe, \textit{q} put the out of their estate. \textit{L}ike as \textit{y} claye is in the potters hande, \textit{q} all the ordryng therof at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him \textit{y} made the, so that he maye geue them as it liketh him best. Agaynst euell is good, and agaynst death is life: so is the vngodly agaynst soch as feare God. Beholde thus all the workes of the Hyest, \textit{q} there are euery \textit{*} two agaynst two, and one set agaynst another. I am awaked vp last of all, as one that gathereth after in haruest. In the giftes of God and in his blesynge I am increased, \textit{q} haue fylded my wyne presse, like a grape gatherer. \textit{B}eholde,

I. Heare me O ye great men of the people, that harken with your eares ye rulers of your congregation. Geue not thy sonne a wyle, thy brother a frende power ouer the, whyle thou lyuest: geue not awaye thy substauence and good to another, lest it repent the: thou beayne to begg theerfore thy self. As longe as thou lyuest hast breth, let no man chauenge the: For better it is thy children to praye the, then thou shuldest be feyne to loke in their handes. In all thy workes be excellent, that thy honoure be never stained. At the tyme whan thou shalt ende thy dayes, and fynish thy life, distribute thine inheretauce. The foder, the whyppe, and the burden belongeth vnto the Asse: Meate, correction, and worke vnto the seruaunt.

II. Yf thou set thy seruaunt to labore, thou shalt fynde rest. But yf thou let him go ydel, he shal seke libertye. The yock and the whypp bowe downe the neck, but tame thou thy euel seruaunt with bodes a correction. Sende him to labore, that he go not ydle: For Idynesse byngreth mouch euell. Sett him to worke, for that belongeth vnto him and becometh him well. Yf he be not obedient, bynde his fete: but do not to moch vnto him in any wyse, without discrecon do no thinge. Yf thou haue a (faithfull) seruaunt, let him be vnto the as thine owne soule, for in bloude hast thou gotten him. Yf thou haue a seruaunt, holde him as thy self, for thou hast nede of him as of thy self. Yf thou intrestenest him euell, and kepest him harde, and makest him to be proude, and to renne awayne from thee, thou canst not tell, what waye thou shalt seke him.

3. VNWYSE people begyle them selues with vayne and deceitfull hope, and fooles trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames, is like him that wil take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after the wynde: Even so is it with the appearinges of dreames. Before the face is the licknes of a face. Who can be clensed of vneclene? Or what trueth can be spoken of a Iyar? Soythsayenge, witchcraft, sorcery, and dreaminge is but vanye: like as when a woma trauyleth with chylde, and hath many fantasies in hir herte. Where as soch visions come not of God, set not thine herte vpon them: For dreames haue diseaued many a man, and they sayled, that put their trust therin.

The lawe shalbe fulfilled without lyes, wysdome is sufficient to a faithfull mouth. A wyse man is well instructe, vnderstonedeth moch: he hath good expericence, can talke of wysdome. He hath no expericence, knoweth litle: he err eth, causeth moch wickednes. When I was yet in errore, I learned moch also: yee I was so lerned, that I coude not expresse it all, and came oft in parell of death therouer, tyll I was deluyered from it. Now I se, that they which feare God, haue the right sprete: for their hope stodeth in him, that can helpe the. Who so feareth the LORDE, stodeth in aw of no man, and is not afrayed, for the LORDE is his hope and comforte.

Blessed is the soule of him that feareth the LORDE: In wha putte he his trust? who is his streth? For the eyes of the LORDE haue respecte vnto them, that loue him. He is their mighty proteccion, strege grounde: A defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote noone daye, a sucore for stomblyng, an helpe for fallynges. He seteth vp the soule, and lighteneth ye eyes: He geueth health life, and blesynge. He that geueth an offeringe of vnrighteous good, his offerynge is refused: and the scornefull dealinges of the vnurighteous please not God. God hath no delyte in the offerynge of yngodly, nether maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so byngreth an offerynge out of goods of poore, doth euene as ynde kylleth y sonne before y fathers eyes.

The bred of the nedefull is the life of the poore: he defraudeth him therof, is a man, of bloude. Who so robbeth his neigbour of his luyinge, doth as greate synne as though he slew him to death. He that defraudeth the laborer of his hyre, is a bloude shedder. Wha one byulde, and another breaketh downe, what profit haue they then but labore? When one prayeth, another curseth, whose voyce wyl the LORDE heare? He that waszshingheth himselfe because of a deed body, then toucheth the deed agayne, what doth his waszshinge? So is it with a man that fasteth.

for his synnes, and doth them agayne: who will heare his prayer? Or what doth his fastynge helpe him?

The 1176. Chapter.

WHO so kepeth the lawe, bryngeth offeringes ynowe. He that holdeth fast the commaundement, ofreth the right healthoffrynge. He thy is thankfull a recompensth, ofreth fyne floure. Who so is mercifull a geueth allmes, thy is the right thank offrynge. God hath pleasure, wha one departeth fro synne: a to forsake vnrighteousnes recocileth vs with him. Thou shalt not appeare emptye before y LORDE, for all soch is done because of y comaundermêt. The offeringe of thy righteous maketh thy alter fatt, a a swete smell is it before y Hyst. The offeringe of the righteous is acceptable vs God, and shal never be forgette. Geue God his honoure with a chearfull eye, a kepe not backe the firstlinges of thy handes. In all thy giftes shew a mery countenance, a halowe thy tithe vs God with gladnes. Geue vs God, acordinge as he hath enriched a prospered the: a looke what thine hande is able, y geue with a chearfull eye: for the LORDE recompensth, a geueth y seué tymes as moch againe.

Geue no vnrighteous giftes, for soch wil not he receaue. Bewarre of wrongeofferynges, for y LORDE is a righteous judge, a regardeh no mans personne: He accepteth not the persone of the poore, but he heareth thy prayer of thy oppressed. He despyseth not thy desire of thy fatherles, ner thy wyddow, when she poureth out her prayer before him. Doth not God se thy teares, y renne downe ye chekes of the wyddow? Or heareth he not the complaynte, ouer soch as make to her wepe? Who so serueth God after his pleasure, shalbe accepted, a his prayer reacheth vs the cloudes.

The prayer of him y humbleth himself, goeth thorow y cloudes, tyll she come nye. She wyll not be comforted, ner go hir waye, tyll y hyest God haue respecte vs her, geue true sentece, a perfourme y judgmeot. And y LORDE wil not be slack in comyng, ner tary longe: tyll he haue smytte in sonde y backes of y vunmercystull, a aunged himself of y Heithen: tyll he haue take away y multitude of y cruell, a broke the cepter of the vnrighteous: tyll he geue every man after his workes, a rewarde them as they haue deserued: tyll he haue deluyered his people, mayntened their cause, and rejoysed them in his mercy. O how fayre a thinge is mercy, in the tyme of anguys y trouble? It is like a cloude of rayne, y cōmeth in y tyme of a drouth.

The 1176. Chapter.

HAEVE mercy vpon vs O LORDE, thou a God of all things. Haue respecte vnto vs (shew vs the light of thy mercies, a sende thy feare amōge thee) a straigers, which seke not after thee: a thy maye knowe, how thy there is no God but thou, and a they maye shew thy wonderous workes.) Lift vp thine hande ouer the outladish Heithen, they they maye lerne to knowe thy might a power. Like as thou art halowed in vs before them, so brynge to passe, y thy mayest be magnified also in them before vs: a they maye knowe the, like as we knowe the. For there is none other God, but onely thou O LORDE. Renue the tokens, a chaunge the wonderous workes. Shewe thine hâde and thy right arme gloriously. Rayse thy indignacion, a poure out thy wrath. Take awaye the adversary, a smyte the enemye. Make y tyme shorte, remembre thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous workes maye be praysed. Let the wrath of the fyre consume them, that lyue so careles: and let them perish, that do thy people hurte. Smyte in sonder the head of the prynce, that be oure enemies, and saye: there is none other but we.

Gather all y trybes of Iacob together againe, B y they maie knowe, how y there is none other God but onely thou, a they maie shew thy wonderous workes, and be thy people a heretage, like as from the begynnyinge. O LORDE haue mercy vpon the people y hath thy name, a vp̋ Israel, whom thou hast lickened to a first borne sonne. O be merciful vnto Ierusalē the cite of thy Sanctuary, y cite of thy rest. Fyll Sion with thy venpeake able vertues, a thy people with thy glory. Geue wytnes vnto thy creature, whom thou mayest from the begynnyinge, and rayse vp the prophecies y haue bene shewed in thy name. Rewarde them y waye for the, y
Axe no coëcell at him, ý suspecketh ý for an enemie, a hyde thy counsell from soch as hate ý. Axe no counsell at a woman, co-cernythe ý thinges ý she logeth for: ner at a fearful a fayntharted body, in matters of warre: or at a marchaunt, how deare he wil cheape thy wares towarda his: or at a bye, of sellynge: Or at an enyvous man, of thanksegeunye: Or at the vnmercifull, of lonlynge kindnes: Or at ý slouthfull, of waringe: Or at an hyrelynge which hath no house, of profit or wealth. (An ydle body wolde not gladly heare speake of moch la-boure.) Take no soch folkes to coëcell, but be diligent to seke coëcel at a vertuous man, ý feareth God, soche one as thou knowest to be a keper of ý cómaundemétes, which hath a minde after thine owne minde, ý is sory for ý why thou stôblest.

And holde thy counell fast in thine hert; for there is no man more faithful to kepe it, then thou thy self. For a màs mynde is som-tyme more disposed to tell out, then seuan watchemen that sytt aboue in an hye place lokynge aboute them. And aboue all this praye the Hyest, that he wil lede thy waye in faithfulnes a trueth. Before all thy workes axe counell first: and or euere thou doest eny thinge, be well adysed. There be foure things that declare a chaunget hert, wherout there springeth euell a good, death a life, a masterfull tongue that bableth moch. Some man is apte and well instructe in many thinges, and yet very vnprofitable vnto him-self. Some man there is, that can gene wyse and prudent counsell, and yet is he hated, a contymeth a begger: for that grace is not geue him of God, to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wisdome, yet is he wise vnto himself, and the frute of vnderstodinge is faithfull in his mouth.

A wyse man maketh his people wyse, a ý frutes of his wisdome fayle not. A wyse ma shall be pleteously blessed of God: a all they that se him, shal speake good of him. The life of man stondeth in ý nobre of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable. A wyse man shal opteyne faithfulnes a credence amongste his people, a his name shalbe perpetuall. My some, prove thy soule in thy life: a yf thou se eny euell thinge, geue it not vnto her. *For all thinges are not profitable for all men, neither hath every soule pleasure in every thinge. Be not greedy in every eat-ynge, and be not to haistye vpó all meates. For "excesse of meates bryngeth siknes, and glotony commeth at the last to an vnmeasurabte heate. Thorow glotony haue many one perished: but he that dyeteth him self temperatly, prolongeth his life.

The rrvbij. Chapter.

HONoure the Phisician: honoure him because of necessete. God hath created him (for of the Hyest commeth medecyne) and he shal receaue gifts of the kynge.
The wiszdome of the phisician bryngeth him to greate worship, 1 in the sight of the greate men of this worlde, he shalbe honorably taken.
The LORDE hath created medecyne of the earth, and he that is wyse, wyl not abborre it.
2 Was not wy byter water made swete with a tre? that men might lerne to knowe the vertue thereof. The LORDE hath gemen men wyszdome 3 vnderstandinge, 4 he might be honoured in his woderous workes. With soch dothe he heale men, 5 taketh awaye their paynes: Of soch dothe the Apotecary make a confeccion, yet can no man perfurme all his workes.
For of his LORDE commeth prosperus wealth over all his earth.

My sonne, despyse not this in thy siknes:
but praye vnto the LORDE, 6 he shall make the whole. Leaue of from synne, ordre thy handes a right: clese thine hert from all wickednes. Geue a swete saoured offrynge, that fynye floure for a token of remembraunce:
make the offrynge fett, as one that geueth
the first frutes, geue rowme to the Phisician.
For his LORDE hath created him: let him go not from the, for thou hast nede of him.
The houre maye come, 7 the seke maye be helped thorow them, when they praye vnto his LORDE, he male recouer, get health to lyue longer. He that synneth before his maker, shall fall in to the handes of the Phisician.

My sonne, brynge forth thy teares over the deed: and begynne to mourne, as ye thou haddest suffred greater harme thy self: th cover his body after a conuenient maner, despyse not his buryall. Enforce thy self to wepe, prouoke thy self to mourne, make lamentacion expediently, 8 and a daye or two, lestaw be euell spoken of: then coforte thy selfe because of the heuynes. For of he-yynes cometh death, 9 the heuynes of thy hert breaketh strength. Heuynes and poueret Grueth the hert in tentacion offence. Take no heuynes to hert, dryue it awaye, and remembre the last things. Forget it not, for there is no turnyng agayne. Thou shalt do him no good, but hurte thy selfe. Remembre his iudginet, thine also shalbe likewyse: vnto me yesterdaie, vnto the to daye. Let the remembrance of the deed cease in his rest, and coforte thy selfe agayne ouer him, 10 seyne

his sprete is departed from him.

The wyszdome of the serybe is at con-unyent tyne of rest: he ceaseth from exercyse laboure, shalbe wyse. He that holdeth thy plough, hath pleasure in proddynge dryuynge oxen, goeth aboute with soch worke, he can speake of oxen. He setteth his hert to make forowes, is diligent to geue kyne fodder. So is euer carpenter also a work master, that laboureth still night a daye:
he canueth, graueth cutteth out, his desire is in sondrye connynge thinges, and his hert ymagineth, how he maye conynge cast an ymage, his diligence also is watchinge perfourmuth the worke. The yronsmith in like maner bydeth by his stythie, doth his dil-gence to laboure the yron. The vapooure of the fyre brenmeth his flesh, and he must fight with the heate of the fornace. The noyse of the Hammer soundeth euere in his eares, and his eyes loke still vpon the thynge 6 he maketh.
He hath set his minde there vpon, that he will make out his worke, and therfore he watcheth, how he maie set it out, and brynge
it to an ende.

So doth the potter syt by his worke, he turneth 7 whele aboute with his fete, he is diligent a carefull in all his doynge, 8 his laboure and worke is not without nombre.
He fashioneth the claye with his arme, and with his fete he tapeth it. His hert ymagineth how he maye make it pleasaunt, 9 his dil-gence is to clese the ouen. All these hope in their hades, every one thinketh to be connynge in his worke. Without these maye not the cities be manteyned, inhabited nor occupied: yet come they not hye in the congregacion: they vnderstande not the coue-naunt of y lawe: they can not declare equyte of judgment: they can not fynde out the darck sentences: but thorow them shal the creature of y worle be manteyned: their prayer concerneth onely the worke of coninge.

The 1111. Chapter.

BUT he y applyeth his mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God, doth diligently seke out y wyszdome of them of the olde tyme, e exercyseth him self in the prophetes. He kepeth y sayenges of famous men, and preaseth to the vnderstandinge of darck sentences of wyszdome. He seketh out y mysterye of secrete sayenges, and exercyseth him self therin cotynually. He doth servyce amonge greate men, e appeareth before the prynces. He goeth in to a strangue countre, e trouaileth thorow it: loke what good or cuell is amoue men, he proueth it e seketh it out. He purposeth in his hert, to resorte erly vnto the LORDE, e made him, e to praye before the hyest God. He opneth his mouth in prayer, e prayeth for his synnes.

When the greate LORDE wil, he shalbe filled with the sprete of vnderstadinge, e he maie then poure out wyse sentences, e geue thanks vnto the LORDE in his prayer. He shal ordre his deuyce, and lede his knollawe aright, e geue him vnderstandinge of secrete things. He shal shew forth the sciene of his lerninge, e reioyce in the covenant of the lawe of the LORDE. The whole congregation shal comende his wyszdome, e it shal neuer be put out. The remembrance of him shal neuer be forgotten, e his name shal contynue from one generation to another. His wyszdome shalbe spoken of, e the whole congregation shal openly declare his prayse. Whyle he lyeth, he hath a greater name then a thousande besyde: e after his death, the same name remayneth vnto him. Yet wyll I speake of no men of vnderstandinge, for I am full as the Moone.

Herké vnto me (ye holy vertuous childre) bryngge forth frute, as the rose that is planted by the brokes of the felde, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. Florish as the rose garden, synge a songe of prayse. O geue thakes vnto God ouer all his worke. Gene glory and honoure vnto the LORDE, shew his prayse with youre lippes. Yee euuen with the songe of youre lippes, with harpes and playenge, and in genynge thanks vnto him, saye after this maner: 4 All y worke of the LORDE are excedinge good, and all his commandemente are mete and conuenient in due season.

A mà nede not to saie: what is y? what is that? for at time conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commandemente y water was as a wall, e at the worde of his mouth y waters stode still. In his commandemente is euery thinge acceptable and reconeyed, and his health can not be misshened. The worke of all flesh are before him, e there is nothing hyd from his eyes. He seth from euervalinge to euervalinge, and there is nothing to wonderfull or hye vnto him. A man nede not to saye then, what is this, or that? For he hath made all thinges to do good vnto man. His blessynge shall reme ouer as the streame, and moysture the earth like a floude of water. Like as he maketh the water for drouth, so shall his wrath fall vpon the Heithen.

His wayes are playne and right vnto y just, but the vngodly stombale at them. For the good are good thinges created from the begynnynge, and euell thinges for the vngodly. All thinges necessary for the life of man are created from the begynnynge: water, fyre, yron and salt, meel, wheate and honie mylke and wyne, oyle and clothinge. All these thinges are created for the best to the faithfull: But to the vngodly shall all these thinges be turned to hurte and harme. There be spretes that are created for vengeaunce, and in their rigorousnes haue they fastened their tormentes. In the tyme of the ende they shal poure out their strêght, and pacifie y wrath of him that made them. Fyre, hayle, honger and death: all these thinges are created for vengeaunce.

The teth of wylye noysome beestes, the scorpion, serpent, and the swerde are created also for vengeaunce, to the destrucction of the vngodly. They shall be glad to do his commandemente: and whan nede is, they shalbe ready vpon earth: and whan their houre is come, they shall not ouerpasse the commandement of the LORDE.

Therefore haue I taken a good corage vnto me from the begynnynge, and thought to put these things in wyrtinge, and to leave the beyynde me. "All thy workes of the LORDE are good, and he geventh euer one in due season, and whan nede is. So that a man nede not to saye: this is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasant and good: And therefore prayse the LORDE with whole hert and mouth, and gene thankes vnto his name.

The 1. Chapter.

A GREATE travaile is created for all men, and an heuy yock vpon all mens children, from the daye that they go out of their mothers wombe, tyll they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thinges: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginaciones, feare of the hert, counsell, meditations, longinge and desyre, the daye of death: from the hyest that seteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most symple vpon the earth: from him that is gorgiously arayed, and weereth a crowne, vntyll him that is but homely and symple clotted. There is nothinge but wrath, zele, fearfulnes, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rigorous anger and stryfe. And in the night when one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaungeth his understandinge and knowle: A little as nothinge is his rest, in y slepe as well as in the daie of laboure.

B He feareth and is disquyted in the vision of his hert, as one that renneth out of a battayl: and in the tyme of health he awaketh, and marueleth that the feare was nothinge. Soch thinges happen vnto all fleshe, both man and best: but seuenfolde to the vngodly. Morouer death, bloudeheddinge, strife, swerde, oppression, honger, destruccion and punishment: these thinges are all created against the vngodly, and for their sakes came the floude also. All that is of the earth, shal turne to earth agayne: and all waters ebb agayne in to the se. All brybes and vnrighteousnes shalbe put awaye, but faithfulnes and trueth shal endure for euer. The substaunce and goodes of vngodly shalbe dried vp and syncke awaye as a water floude, and they shall make a sounde like a greate thonder in the rayne.

Like as the righteous rejoyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the trasgressors be fynte, when their goodes vanish and consume awaye. "The children of the vngodly shal not optayne many braunches; and the vnclene rotes vpo the hye rockes shalbe roted out before the gras by the water syde vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increase and blessynge of God, is like a paradise garden of pleasure: soch mercy also is kindnes endureth for euer. "To laboure is to be content with that a man hath, is a sweate pleasant life: that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget children and to repayre the cite, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth the they both. Wyne and mynstralye rejoys the hert, but the loue of wysdom e is above them both.

Pypinge and harpinge make a sweate noysse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thine eye desyreth fauour and bewtie but a grene sede tymne rather the they both. A frende and companyon come together at opportunitie, but aboue them both is a wife that agreeth with hit husbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but allines shal deliuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good companell is more pleasant then they both. Temporall substance and strength lift vpon the mynde: but the feare of the LORDE more then they both. The feare of the LORDE wanteth nothinge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the LORDE is as a pleasant gardene of blessynge, and nothinge so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers life, for better it were to dye the to begg. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne lyuynge how to vpholde his life, for he fedeth himself with other mens meate. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll beware therof. Beggyne is sweate in the mouth of the vnshamefast, but in his bely there burneth a fyre.

The 116. Chapter.

O DEATH, how bitter is the remembrance of thee, to a man that seeketh rest and comforthe in his substance and riches, vnto the man that hath nothinge to vexe him, and that hath prosperite in all thinges, yee vnto him that yet is able to receaue meate? O death, how acceptable and good is thy judgment vnto the nedefull, and vnto him whose strength faileth, that is now in his laste age, and that in all thinges is full of care and fearfulness; vnto him also that is in dispayre, and hath no hope ner pacience? Be not thou afrayed of death: remembre them vhy haue bene before the: and vhy come after vhy: this is the iudgment of vhy LORDE over all flesh. And why woldest thou be against this pleasure of vhy Hiest? Whether it be ten, an hundred, or a thousande yeares: death axeth not how longe one hauë lyued.

The children of the vngodly are abominable children, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. The inheretaunce of vngodly children shall come to naught, and their posterite shall haue perpetuall shame and confucion. The children complayne of an vngodly father: and why? for his sake they are rebuked and despyesed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue forsaken the lawe of vhy hyest God: Yf ye be borne, ye shall be borne to cursynge: vhy ye dye, vhy curse shall be youre porcion.

All that is of vhy earth, shall turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodly also out of vhy curse in to destruction. The sorrow of men is in their body: but vhy name of the vngodly shall be put out, for it is nothinge worth. Laboure to get the a good name, for that shall continue surer by the, then a thousande greate treasures of golde. A good life hath a nobre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

My children, kepe wyszdome in peace: for wisedome that is hyd and a treasure that is not sene, what profit is in the both? A man that hydeth his foolishnes, is better then a man that hydeth his wyszdome. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good, in all thinges and allwaie to be ashamed. True faith must prowe and measure it. Be ashamed of whordome before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynghe before the prynce and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the judge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacion and people: Of vnrrighteousnes, before a companyon and frede: Of theft, before vhy neighbours. As for the truthe of God and his councuant, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bred: Be ashamed to loke vp6 harlottes: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take vhy not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, and to make manytryfinge wordes with her mayden, or to stonde by hir bedsye. Be ashamed to vpbrade thy frede: and when thou geuest eny thynge, cast him not in the teth withall.

REHEARSE not a thinge twysse, and disclose not the wordes, that thou hast herde in secrete. Be shamefast vhy well manered in dede, so shall euery man fanoure the. Of these thinges be not thou ashamed, and acpente no persone to offende. Namely, of these thinges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the councuant, of iudgment: to brynge the vngodly from his vngoldines vnto righteousnes, and to make him a good man: to deale faithfully with neigboure vhy companyon: to distribute the heretage vnto vhy frendes: to be diligent to kepe true measure and weight: to be content, whether thou gettest moch oder litle: to deale truly with temporall goodes in byenghe and sellynge: to brynge yp children with diligence: to correcke an euell seruanct: to kepe that thine is frô an euell wife: to set a lock where many handes are: what thou delyuerest and geuest out to be kepte, to tell it, and to weye it: to wryte yp all the out geuesthe and receaunge: to enfourme vhy ynlerned and vnwyse: Of the aged, that are judged of the yonge. Yf thou be diliget in these thinges, truly thou shalt be lerner and wyse and accepted of all men.

The daughter maketh vhy father to watch secretly: and the carefullnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yee in the youth, lest she shulde ouergrowe him: And when she hath an husbande, lest she shulde be hated: lest she shulde be defyled or raueshed in hir virgynetye, or gotten with childe in hir

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wife. I wyll remembre the workes of the Lorde, and declare the thinge I have sene. In wordes of Lorde are his worke. The Sone ouerloketh all thinges with his shine, all his worke are full of clearense therto. Hath not the Lorde brought to passe, that his sayntes shulde tell out all his worderes worke, which the allmightie Lorde hath stablyshed? All thinges endure in his glory. He seketh out the grounde of the depe and the hert, and he knoweth all their imagynacion wysdom.

For Lorde knoweth all seyence, and he loketh in to token of the time. He declareth the thinges are past and for to come, discloseth thinges that are secrete. No thought maye escape him, nether maye any worde be hyd from him. He hath garnished the hye excellent worke of his wysdom, and he is frō euerlastinge to euerlastinge. Vnto him maye no thinge be added nether can he be mynished, he hath no nede also of any counsell. O how amiable are all his worke, as a sparke to loke vpon? They lyue all, and endure for euer: and whan so euer nede is, they are all obedient vnto him. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothinge that hath faute or blemish. He hath stablyshed the goodes of everychone: and who maye be satisfied with his glory, whan he seth it?

The glory of the heythe, is the fayre and cleare firmanement, the bewtwe of the heaven in his glorious clearnes. The sonne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in y goeinge out of it, a maruelous worke of the Lorde. At noone it burneth y earth, and who maye abyde for the heate therof? Who so kepeth an ouen whan it is hote, thre tymes more doth the Sonne burne vpon y mountaynes, whan it bretheth out the fyrie beames and shyneth: with the brightnes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Greate is the Lorde that made it, and in his commaundement he causeth it to renne haustely.

The Moone also is in all, and at conuenient season it sheweth the tymes, and is a token of the tyme. The token of the solemne feaste is taken of the Moone, a light that mynisheth and increaseth againe. The Moneth is called after the Moone, it groweth wondersons in hir channinge.

The armeye of heaven also is in the Heith, in the firmanement of heaven it geneth a cleare and glorious shyne. This is the clearnes of the sterres, the bewtifull apparell of heaven, the apparell that the Lorde lightethen in the heythe. In his holy worke they continue in their ordre, and not one of them frayleth in his watch. Loke vpon y rayne bowe, and prayse him that made it: very bewtifull is it in his shyne. He compasseth the heaven aboute with his clearnes and glory, the handes of the Hyset haue beded it. Thorow his commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thonder of his judgment to smyte hastely. Thorow his commaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes fle as the foules. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and brokē the hayle stones.

The mountaynes melt at y sight of him, the wynde bloweth accordinge to his wyll. The sounde of his thonder beateth y earth, and so doth the storme of the north: the whirle wynde also lighteth downe as a fethered foule, casteth out and spreeth the snowe abrode: and as the gresshoppers that destroie all, so falleth it downe. The eie marueleth at y bewtwe of the wythenesse therof, and the hert is afraied at the raine of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth, like salt, and when it is frozen, it is as sharpe as the prycke of a thistle.

Whan the colde northwynde bloweth, hardre Christall commeth of the water. He lighteth downe vpon all the gatheringes together of water, and putteth on dwell waters as a brest plate. He deuoureth the mountayne, and burneth the wyldernesses: and loke what is grene, he putteth it out like fyre. The medynce of all these is, when a cloude commeth hastely: and when a dew commeth vpon the heate, it shalbe resfreshshed agayne.

(In his worde he stylleth the wynde,) In his councell he setteth the depe, and (the LORDE) Iesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of his parles and harms: and when we heare it with oure eares, we manuell therat. For there be straunge wonderos workes, dyuerse maner of nyce beestes and whall fishes. Thorow him are all thinges set in good orde and perfourmed, £ in his worde all thinges endure.

I speake moch, but I can not sufficiently atayne vnto it, for he himselfe onely is the perfeccon of all wordes. We shulde prayse the LORDE after all oure power, for he is greate in all his workes. "The LORDE is to be feared yee very greate is he, and maruelous is his power. Praye the LORDE, and magnifie him as moch as ye maye, yet doth he farre farre exceade all prayse. £ magnifie him with all youre power, and laboure earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able sufficiently to prayse hym. ^ Who hath sene him, that he might tell vs? Who can magnifie him so greatly as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thinges the these be: as for vs, we haue sene but few of his workes. For the LORDE hath made all thinges, and geuen wyszdome to soch as feare God.

The xliiiij. Chapter.

A commendacion of the olde vertuous fathers.

LET vs commend the noble famous men, and the generacion of oure forefathers and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the LORDE done, and shewed his greate power euer sens £ begynnynge. The noble famous men raigne in their kyngdemes, and bare excellent rule. In their wyszdome and vnderstandinge, they folowed the councell shewed in the prophecies. £ They led the folke thorow the councell and wyszdome of the srybes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in their instruccion.

They sought the sweetenes and melody of Musick, and brought forth the pleasaut songs in scripture. They were riche also, £ coude comfortable and pacifie those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honorable men in their generacions, and were well reported of in their tymes. These haue left a name behynde them, so that their prayse shal allwaye be spoké of. Afterwarde there were some, whose remembrance is gone. £ They came to naught and perished, as though they had neuer bene: and became as though they had neuer bene borne, yee £ their children also with them.

Neuertheles these are louyng men, whose righteousnes shal neuer be forgotten, but contynue by their posterite. Their children are an holy good heretage: Their sede endured fast in £ couenaunt. For their sakes shal their childre £ sede contynue for euer, £ their prayse shal neuer be put downe. Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name lyueth for euermore. The people can speake of their wyszdome, £ the congregacion can talkle of their prayse. £ Enoch walked right £ acceptably before the LORDE: therfore was he translated for an example of amendemént to £ generacions. £ Noe was a stedfast £ righteous man: £ in the tyme of wrath he became a recócyinge. Therfore was he left a remnaut vnto the earth, when the floude came. £ An euerlasting couenaunt was made with him, that all flesh shulde perishe nomore with £ water.

Abraham was a greate father of many people," in glory was there none like vs to him. He kepe the lawe of the Hyest, £ came in to a couenaunt with hym. He set the couenaunt in his flesh, £ and whan he was tempted, he was founde faithfull. Therfore swore God vnto hym with an ooth, that he wolde blesse all people in his sede, that he wolde multipule and increase hym as the dust of the earth, and to exalte his sede as the starres: yee and that his sede shulde haue £ possession and inheretance of the londe from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto £ borders of the londe.

With Isaac £ dyd he stablish £ same couenaunt, for Abráhá his fathers sake. Yee £ gracious blessyng and health of all men, and couenaunt dyd he stablysh with Isaac, and made it to rest upon the head of Jacob. He knew him, that he prospered him so well and richely, and gane him an heretage, and sundered his portion by it self, and parted it amonge the twelve trybes. Mercifull men brought he out of him, which founde fauoure before all flesh.

The rthe Chapter.

Moses beloved of God and me, whose remembrance is in hie prayse: his hath the LORDE made like in the glory of the sayntes, and magnified him so that the enemies stode in awe of him, thorow his wordes he dyd greate wonders. He made him greate in the sight of kynges, gaue him commandement before his people, and shewed him his glorious power. He stablyshed him with faithfulness and mekenes, and chose him out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and led him in the darte cloude, and there he gaue him the commandements, yee the lawe of life and wysdome, that he might teach Iacob the couenaunt, and Israel his lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of the trybe of Leui, exalted him, made him soch like. An everlastinge couenaunt made he with him, and gaue him the presthode in the people. He made him glorious in beftwfull arraye, and clothed him with the garment of honour. He put perfecte joye vpó him, and gyrded him with strength. He decke him with syde clothes and a tunycle, with an over-body cote also and gyrdle. Rounde aboute made he him belles of golde, and that many; that when he wente in, the sounde might be herde, that they might make a noyse in the Sanctuary, and geue the people warnyng. The holy garment was wrought brodered with golde, yalo walke and purple. And in the brestplate there was a goodly worke, wherin was fastened light and perfectnesse.

Vpon the same also there was a worke fastened and set with costly precious stones, all bounde with golde; and this he brought in his mynistracion. The stones also were fastened for a remembrance, after the twelue trybes of Israel. Vpon his mytre there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes, a famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasanta to loke vpon. Before him were there sene no soch fayre ornamentes, and these it behoued hi allwaye to vse: There might none other put them on, but onely his children and his childers children perpetually.

This was now confirmed him with an everlastinge couenaunt, and to his sede, as of days of beaute: namely, that his childre shulde allwaye myniste before him, and perfourme the office of the presthode, and wysh the people good in his name. Before all men lyuynghe chose he him, that he shulde ofre before the LORDE, and make odours for a swete sanoour and remembrauce, that he shulde reconycle the people of the LORDE with him agayn. He gaue him auctorite also in his commandementes and in the couenaunt, that he shulde teach Iacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enroumre Israel in his lawe.

Therfore there stode vp certayne agaynst him, and had envye at him in the wyldernes: namely, they that were of Dathan and Abirams syde, and the furious congregació of Chore. This the LORDE sawe, and it displesed him, and in his wrothfull indignacion were they consumed. A greate wonder did he vpon them, and consumed them with the fyre. Besydes this, he made Aaron yet more honorable and glorious. He gaue him an heretage, and parted the first frutes vnto him. Vnto him specially he appoynted the bred for sustenaunce (for the prestes ate of the offerynes of the LORDE) this gaue he vnto him his sede. Els had he no heretage ner porcion in his londe and with the people. For the LORDE himself is his porcion and en-heritaunce.

The thirde noble and excellent me is Phineas the sonne of Eleazer, which pleased the God of Israel, because he had zele of the LORDE. For when the people were turned back, he put him self forth right soone, that with a good wyll, to pacifie the wrath of the LORDE towards Israel. Therfore was there a couenaunt of peace made with him, that he shulde be the principall amonge the righteous and the people, that he and his posterity shulde haue the office of the presthode for euer (Like as there was made a covenaut with David of the tryble of Iuda, that fro amonge his sones oneely there shulde be a kyng: And that Aaron also his sede shulde be the heretage, to geue vs wysszdome in oure hert, to iudge his people in righteousnes: that his goodes shulde not come in to forgetfulness, and that their honour might endure for euer.

The rlvii. Chapter.

MANLY ζ stronge in battaill was Iesus ψ sonne of Naue, which in stead of Moses ψ prophet was geuen to be captayne of the people (which acordinge vnto his name was a greate sauioure vnto the electe of God) to punyssh the enemies, that rose vp agayns Israel, ψ Israel might optayne their inheritance. O how greate, noble and excellent was he, when he lift vp his hande, and drew out his swerde agaynst the cities: Who stode so manly before him? For the LORDE himself brought in the enemies. Stode not the Sonne styll at his commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two? He called vp the Hyest ζ most mightie, wha ψ enemies preassed vp him on euery syde: and the LORDE herde him with the hayle stones. They smote ψ Heithenish people mightely, in fallinge downe they slew all ψ aduersaries, so that the Heithē knewe his hoost, and all his defence, that the LORDE himself fought against them, for he folowed vp the mighty men of them.

In the tyme of Moses also he and Caleb the sonne of Iephune, dyd a good worke, which stode agaynst the enemies, withelde the people from syne, and styled ψ wicked murmurynge. And of sixe hundreth thousande people of fote, they two were preserved, when they were brought in to the heretage, namely, a londe that floweth with mylke ψ hony. The LORDE gauε strength also vnto Caleb, which remayned with him vnto his age: so that he wente vp in to the hye places of the londe, and his sede conquered the same for an heretage: that all the childre of Israel might se, how good a thing it is, to be obedient vnto the LORDE. And the iudges or rulers (euer one after his name) whose hert wente not a whoringe, ner departed from ψ LORDE, and that forsoke not the LORDE vnfaithfully, whose remembrance hath a good reporte: Yee their bones florish out of their place, and their name shal never be chaunged.

Samuel the prophet beloued of the LORDE, ordyned a kinge, and anoynted the prynces ouer the people. In the lawe of the LORDE ruled he, and iudged the congregacion, ψ the LORDE had respecte vnto Iacob. The prophet was founde diligent in his faithfulnes: yee in his faithfulnes was the faithfulnes of the vision knowne. He called vp ψ LORDE the mightie, ψ the enemies pressed vp him on euery syde, what tyne as he offered the suckynge lambes. And the LORDE thondred from heauen, and mayde his voyce to be herde with a greate noyse. He discomfitted the prynces of Tyre, ψ all the rulers of the Philistynes. Before his last ende he made protestacion in the sight of the LORDE ψ his anoynented, that he toke in euery man, no not so much as a shue: ψ no man might accuse him. After this he tolde, that his ende was at honde, and showed the kyngsys also his ende and death: ψ from ψ earth lift he vp his voyce in the prophecie, ψ the vngodly people shulde perishe.

The rlvii. Chapter.

AFTERWARDE in the tyne of kyngye A David, ψ there rose vp a prophet called Nathan: For like as the fat is taken away from the offrynge, so was David chosen out of the childre of Israel. He toke his pastyme with the lyons as with kyddes, and with beares like as with lambes. Sleu he not a giaunte when he was yet but yonge, ψ toke awaye the rebuke from his people? what tyne as he toke the stone in his hande, ψ smote downe proude Goliath with the slynge? For he called vp the hyest LORDE, which gauε him strength in his right hande, so that he ouerthrew the mightie giaunte in the battayll, that he might set vp the horne of his people agayne.

Thus brought he him to worshippe aboue all prynces, and made him to have a good reporte in the "prayse of the LORDE, ψ he shulde were a crowne of glory. For he destroyed

the enemies on every syde, unto brake their horse in sunder, like as it is broke yet this daye. In all his workes he prayed to Hyest, to Holiest,
(2) aseryed the honoure vnto him. With his whole hert dyd he prayse and loue him that made hym. He set syngers also before the aulter, and in their tune he made swete songes.
He ordeyned to kepe the holy dais worship-fully, and that the solemn feastes thorow
the whole year shuld be honorably holden, with praysinge the name of the LORDE, in Synginge by tymes in the mornyng in the Sanctuary.

C The LORDE toke awaye his synnes, and exalted his horne for euer. He gave him as couenaunt of the kyngdome, and the trone of worshipes in Israel. After him there rose vp the wyse sonne called Salomon, and for his sake he droue his enemies awaie farre of. This Salomon reigned with peace in his tyme (for God gaue him rest from his enemies on every syde, that he might buyde him an house in his name, to prepare the Sanctuary for euer)
ilke as he was well iструте іn his youth q fyll with wyszdome and understodinge, as it were with a water froude. He couered and fylld
the whole londe with similitudes and wyse prudent sentences.

D His name wente abrode in the Iles, because of his peace he was beloued. All londes maruede at his songs, prouerbes, symilitudes, and at his peace, and at the name of the LORDE God, which is called the God of Israel. He gathered gold as tynne, q he had as mouch yluer as lead. He was moued in vrodnard loute towarde we men, andwas ouer come in affection. He stayed his honoure and worship, yee his posterie defyled he also,
in bringinge the wrath of the LORDE vpon
his children, and sorowe after his iove: so
(3) his kyngdome was deuyded, q Ephraim became an vn faithfull q an vn constant kingdome. Neuertheles God forsoke not his mercy, (4) nether was he utterly destroyed because of his workes, (5) he shulde leaue him no posterie.

As for y hye syde came vpon hym (which he loued) he brought it not vyterly to naught, but gaue yet a remnaunt vnto Iacob, and a rote vnto Daviud out of him. Thus rested Salomon with his fathers, and out of his sede
he left behynde him a very foolishnes of the people, and soch one as had no understodinge:
(6) namely, Roboa which turnede awaye the people
thorow his counsell, and Ieroboom y sonne of Nabat, which causes Israel to synne, and shewed Ephraim the waye of vngodlynes: In so much that their synnes q myszedles had the vpper hande so sore, that at the last they were dryuen out of the londe for the same:
Yee he sought out q brought vp all wickednes,
yll the vengeance came vpon them.

The 1h. Chapter.

THEN stode vp Elias the prophet as a fyre, and his worde brght like a creshett,
He brought an hower vpon the and in his zele he made them few in nombre. (For they might not awaye with the commandementes of the LORDE.) Thorow the worde of the LORDE he shut the heauen, and three tymes brought he the fyre downe. Thus became Elias honorable in his wonderous dedes. Who maye make his boost to be like hym? One that was deed raysted he vp from death, q in the worde of y Hyest he brought him out of the graue agayne. He cast downe kynges and destroyed them, and the honorable from their seate. Vpon the mount Syna he herde the punishment, q vpon Horeb the judgemet of the vengeance. He prophesied recompensyenge vnto kynges, and ordeyned prophets after him.
He was taken vp in the storme of fyre, in a charette of horses of the LORDE. He was ordeyned in the reprouynges in tyme, to pacifie the wrath, to turne y herites of the fathers vnto the children, q to set vp the trubes of Iacob agayne. Blessed were they that saw the, and were garnished in loute: for we lyue in life.

Elias was covered in the storme, but He-Lisous was fylld with his mouth. Whyle he lyued he was afrayed of no prynce, and no man might ouer come hym. There coude no wordre disceane him, q after his death his body prophecied. He dyd wonders in his life, q in death were his workes marvelous. For all this, the people amended not, nether departed they from their synnes: yll they were caried awaye presoners out of the londe, and were

Jeremiah euell, which neuertheles was a prophet orderned from his mothers wombe, that he might rote out, breake of, and destroye: that he might buyde vp, and plante agayne. Ezechiel sawe the glory of the LORDE in a vision, which was shewed him upon the charet of the Cherubins. For he thought upon the enemies in thy rayne, to do good vnto soch as had odered their wayes a right. And the bones of the twelue prophets florish from out of their place: for they gaue comforte and consolation vnto Iacob, and deluyerd the faithfully. How shall we prayse Zorobabel, which was as a ringe in the right hande?

So was Iesus also the sonne of Iosedec: these men in their tymes buylded the house, set vp the Sanctuary of thy LORDE agayne, which was prepared for an everlastinge worshippe. And Nehemias is allwaye to be commended, which set vp for vs the walles of broken downe, made the portes barres agayne, and buylded our houses of the new.

But vp on earth is there no man created like Enoch, for he was taken vp from thy earth. And Ioseph, which was lorde of his brethren, the vpholder of his people: His bones were covered kepe. Seth Sem were in greate honour amonst thy people: and so was Adam above all the beasts, wha he was created.

The 1. Chapter.

SYMON the sonne of Onias the hye prest, in his dayes made fast the temple. The heyth of thy temple also was founded of him, the double buyldinge, thy hye walles of the temple. In his dayes the welles of water flowed out, and were exceedinge full as the see. He toke care for his people, and deluyerd them from destruction. He kepte his cite made it stronge, that it shulde not be beseged. He dwelt in honour and worshippe amonst his people, and enlarged the intrame of the house and the courte. He gaueth light as the mornynge starre in the myndest of the clouds, and as thy Moone when it is full. He shyneth as the Sonne in the temple of God. ryuers of water: Like as the branches vpon the mount Libanus in tyme of Sommer: as a fyre incense is kyndled: Like as an whole ornament of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones: and as an olyue tre that is frutefull: as a Cypres tre which groweth vp an hye.

When he put on the garment of honour, was clothed withall bewyte: when he wente to the holy altare, to garnynsh the courynge of the Sanctuary: when he toke portions out of the prestes hande, he himselfe stode by the herth of the altare, and his brethren rounde aboute in orde. As the branches of Cedre vpon the mount Libanus, so stode they round aboute him. And as the branches of the olyue tre, so stode all y sonnes of Aaron in their glory. And he might sufficiently performe his seruyce vpon the altare, garnynsh the offrynge of the hyest God, he stretched out his hande and toke of the drynkofferynge, poured in of the wyne: so he pourde vpon the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyest prynce.

Then beganne y sonnes of Aaron to syne, and to blowe with trompettes, to make a greate noyse, for a remembrance prayse vnto the LORDE. Then were the people agrayed, fell downe to the earth ypo their faces, to worship the LORDE their God, to geue thankes to Allmightie God. They sunge goodly also with their voyces, so that there was a pleasaunt noyse in y greate house of the LORDE. And the people in their prayer besought the LORDE the hyest, that he wolde be mercyyfull, tyll the honour of LORDE were perfourmed. Thus ended they their mynistracion and seruyce.

Then wente he downe, and stretched out his handes over the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shulde geue praise thankes out of their lippes vnto LORDE, and to rejoyse in his name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he might openly shew the thankessegyenge before the Hyest, namely thus: O geue prayse thankes (ye all) vnto the LORDE oure God, which hath euer done noble and greate thinges: which hath increased oure dayes from oure mothers wombe, and dealt with vs acordinge to his mercy: that he wyl geue vs the ioyfulnes of hert, peace for oure tymes in Israel. Which faithfully kepayth his mercy for vs euermore, allwaye deluyereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people, that I abhorre fro my hert: as for the thirde, whom I hate, it is no people: They that syt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistynes, the foolish people that dwell in Sichimis. I Iesu the sonne of Sirac Eleazarus of Jerusalem, haue tokened vpon these informations and documetes of wyszdome and ynderstadinge in this boke, and poured out the wyszdome out of my hert. Blessed is he that exerciseth him self therin: and who so taketh soch to hert, shal be wyse. If he do these thinges, he shall be stronge in all. For the light of the LORDE ledeth him.

The li. Chapter.

A prayer of Iesu the sonne of Sirac.

I THANKE the O LORDE and kyng, and praise the O God my Saviour. I wil yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper, hast preserued my body from destruction, from snare of tyrannous tōges, and from the lippes that are occupied with leyes. Thou hast bene my helper, from soch as stode vp agaynst me, and hast deluyered me after the multitude of thy mercy, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast deluyered me from the roaringe of them, that prepared them selues to deououre me, out of handes of soch as sought after my life: from the multitude of them troubled me, went aboue to set fyre vpon me every syde, so I am not brent in the myddest of the fyre: From the depe of hell, from an vnicleane tōge, from lypenge wordes, from the wicked kyngye, and from an vnrighteous tonge. My soule shall prayse LORDE vnto death, for my life drew nye vnto hell.

They copasde me rounde aboue on every syde, there was no mā to helpe me. I lokked aboue me, if there were any man that wolde socoure me: but there was none. Then thought I vp thyn mercy O LORDE, and vp thyn actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, thou deluyerest soch as putt their trust in thee, and rydest them out of handes of the Heithen. Thus lift I vp my prayer from the earth, and prayed for deluyerance from death. I calle vp the LORDE my father, that he wolde not leue me without helpe, in the daye of my trouble.
t in the tyme of the proude. I pryased thy name continually, yeldinge honoure and thakes vnto it: and so my prayer was herde. Thou sauedest me from destruction, and de-lyueredest me frō your righteous tyme. Therefore wil I aknowlege and praise the, and magnifie thy name of the LORDE.

Whi I was yet but yonge, or euer I wete astraye, I desyred wyssdome openly in my prayer. I came thercfore before the temple, sought her vnto the last. Then flourished she vnto me, as a grape that is soone rype. My hert reioysed in her, then wente my fote the right waye, yee from youth vp sought I after her: I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me moch wyssdome, and prospered greatly in her. Therfore will I ascrybe the glory vnto him, that geueth me wyssdome: for I am aduysed to do therafter. I will be gelous to cleue vnto the thinge yous is good, so shal I not be cofounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue bene diligent to be occupied in her. I lift vp myne handes an hye, then was my soule lightened thorow wyssdome, that I knowleged my foolishnes. I ordred my soule after her, she g I were one hert from the begynninge, and I founde her in clennesse. And therfore shal I not be forsaken.

My hert longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thorow her LORDE hath geuen me a new tongue, wherwith I wil praise him. O come vnto me ye vn lerned, dwell in wyssdome: withdrawe not youre selues from her, but talke comon of these things, for youre soules are very thristie. I opened my mouth, and spake: O come vp wyssdome without money, bowe downe youre neck vnnder hir yock, and youre soule shall receaue wyssdome. She is harde at hande, yous is content to be founde. Beholde with youre eyes, how that I haue had but little laboure, and yet haue founde much rest. O receaue wyssdome, and ye shall have plenteousnes of syluer and golde in possession. Let youre mynde reioyse in his mercy, yous be not ashamed of his prayse. Wyrke his worke by tymes, yous be shal geue you youre rewarde in due tyme.

The prayer of Azarias
and the songe of their children

after Theodotus translacion: which wordes are wryten in y' thirde chapter of Daniel after the olde text in Latyn.

AND they walked in the myddest of the flame, praysyne God and magnificenge ý LORDE. Azarias stode vp, and prayde on this maner, Euen in the myddest of the fyre opened he his mouth, ý saide: Blessed be thou (o LORDE God of oure fathers) right worthy to be praysed and honoure is ý name of thine for evermore: for thou art righteous in all ý things ý thou hast done to vs: Yee fafaithfull are all thy worke, thy wayes are right, ý thy judgmëtes true. In all ý things ý thou hast brought vp vn, ý vpon the holy cite of oure fathers (euen Ierusalem) thou hast executed true judgment: Yee according to right and equyte hast thou brought these things vpon vs, because of oure synnes.

For why? we haue offended, ý done wickedly, departynge from the: In all things haue we trespassed, ý not obeyed thy commaundementes, ner kepe the, nether done as thou hast bydden vs, ý we might prosper. Wherefore, all ý thou hast brought vp vn vs, ý every thing ý thou hast done to vs, thou hast done them in true judgment: As in deluyeringe vs in to the hondes of oure enemies, amoge vngodly ý wicked abominations, ý to an vnrighteous kinge, yee ý most frowarde vpó earth. And now we maye not opé oure mouthes, we are become a shame ý reprofe vnto thy seruauntes, ý to the ý worshiphe the. Yet for thy names sake (we beseeke the) gene vs not vp for euer, breake not thy couenuant, ý take not awaye thy mercy from vs, for thy beloued Abrahams sake, for thy seruaunt Isaacs sake, ý for thy holy Israelss sake: to whom thou hast spoken ý promysed, ý thou woldest multiply their sede as ý starres of heauen, ý as the londe ý lieth vpon ý see shore. For we (o LORDE) are become lesse the eny people, ý be kepte vnder this daye in all the worlde, because of oure synnes: So that now we haue nether prynce, duke, prophet, burntofferynge, sacrifice, oblacion, incëse ner Sanctuary before the.

Neuertheless, in a contrite herte and an humble sprete let vs be receaued, ý we maie opteyne thy mercy. Like as in the burntofferynge of ramnes ý bullockes, and like as in thousandes of fat lambes: so let oure offrynge be in thy sight this daye, ý it maye please ý, for there is no cofucion vnto them, ý put there trust in the. And now we folowe the with all oure hert, we feare the, ý seke thy face. Put vs not to shame, but deale with vs after thy louynge kyndnesse, ý accordinge to the multitude of thy mercies. Delyner vs by thy miracles (o LORDE) ý get thy name an honoure: that all they which do thy seruauntes euell, maye be confouded. Let them be ashamed thorow thy Allmightie power, and let their strength be broken: that they maye knowe, how that thou only art the LORDE God, ý honoure worthy thorow out all the worlde.

And the kynges seruauntes ý put them in, ceassed not to make the ouen hote with wydle fyre, drye strawe, pitch ý fagottes: so that the flame wente out of the ouen vpon a xl. cubites: yee it toke awaye, ý brent vp those Caldees, ý it gat holde vpon besyde the ouen. But the angel of the LORDE came downe in to the ouen to Asarias and his felowes, ý smote ý flame of the fyre out of the ouen, ý made the myddest of the ouen, as it had bene a coole wynde blowinge: so that the fyre nether touched them, greued them, ner dyd them hurte. Then these thre (as out of one mouth) praysed, honoure, and blessed God in the fornace, sayenge:

'Blessed be thou, o LORDE God of oure fathers: for thou art prasse ý honoure worthy,'

The story of Susanna,
Which is the riiij. chapter of Daniel after the Latyn.

THERE dwelt a man in Babilo, called Ioachim: he take a wife, whose name was Susanna, (she daughter of Helchias) a very fayre woman, as one as feared God. His father, his mother also, were godly people, and taught their daughter according to the law of Moses. Now Ioachim (his huszonde) was a great and rich man, and had a fayre orchardioyninge unto his house. And to him resorted the Lawes commonly, because he was a man of reputation among them. The same yeare were there made two judge, with the stewardship: All the wickednesse of Babilon, Cometst by the elders (which is) from the judges, which seene to rule the people. These came of to Ioachims house, and all soch as had any thing to do in the lawe, came thither unto them.

Now when the people came agayne at after noone, Susanna wente into the orchard, to walke. The elders seyne this, that she wente in daylifly: they burned for lust to her, yee they were allmost out of their wittes, cast downe their eyes, that they shulde not see heauie, nor remembre, she had a righteous judge. For they were both woode with the loue of her, nether durst one shewe another his greave. And for shame, they durst not tell her their inordinate lust, they wolde fayne haue had to do with her. Yet they layed waye for her earnestly from daye to daye, that they might (at the least) haue a sight of her. And the one sayde to the other: Vpon, let vs go home, for it is duner tyme. So they wente their waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enqueringe out that matter betwixte them selues; yee the one tolde the other of his wicked lust. The apoynted they a tyme, when they might take Susanna alone.

It happened also they spied out a convenient tyme, when she wente forth to walke (as her maner was), with no body with her, but two maydes, and thought to wash her selfe in the garden, for it was an hote season: And there was not one person there, except the two elders, hyd them selues, to beholde her. So she sayde to hir maydens: Go se me a while, and shut the orchard doore, I maye wash me. And they dyd as she bad them, shut the orchard doore, wente out thenselues at a backe doore, and shut the thinge she had commaunded: but Susanna knewe not, that elders laie there hyd within. Now when the maydens were gone forth, wente to the elders, gat them vp, ranne vpon her, sayenge: now, the orchard doore is shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therfore consent vnto vs, and yhe with vs.

If thou wilt not, we shall bringe a testimoniall against the: that there was a young felowe with the, and that thou hast sent away thy maydens from the for the same cause. Susanna sighed, and sayde: Alas, I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it will be my death: and ye consent not vnto you, I can not escape youre hondes. Wel, it is better for me, to fall in to youre hondes without the dede doinge, then to synne in the sight of the Lord: and with that, she cried out with a loude voyce: the elders also cried out against her.

Then ranne there one to the orchard doore, smote it open. Now when the seruauntes of the house herde she, she criè in ye orcharde, they rushshed in at the bakke doore, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruauentes were greatly ashamed, for why, there was neuer soth a reporte made of Susanna. On the morow after came the people to Ioachim hir houszbone, and they two elders came also, full of myscheuous ymaginations agaynst Susanna, to bringe her vnto death, she spake thus before the people: Send for Susanna y daughter of Helchias, Ioachims wife. And immediatly they sent for her. So she came with her father y mother, hir children y all hir kyntrede. Now Susanna was a tender person, and maruellous fayre of face. Therfore the wicked men combound to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered) y at the leest, they might so be satisfied in hir beaute. Then hir frades, yee y all they y knewe, begaine to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people," y layed their hondes vpon y head of Susanna: which wepte, and loked vp toward heauen, for hir herte had a sure trust in the LORDE. And the elders sayde: As we were walkinge in the orcharde alone, this woman came in with hir two mydes: whom she sent awaye from hir, y sparrowed y orcharde dores. With that, a yonge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto hir, y laye with hir. As for vs, we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And wha we sawe this wickednes, we rane to hir: y pereceaued, y they had medled together. But we conde not holde him, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened y doore, y gat him awaye. Now wha we had takyn this woman, we axed her, what yonge felowe this was: but she wolde not tell vs. This is y matter, y we be witnesses of y same.

The commone sorte beleued them, as those y were the elders z judges of the people, y so they condemned her to death. Susanna cried out with a loude voyce, y sayde: O euerlastinge God, w thou sercher of secretes, thou y knowest all things afore they come to passe: thou wost, y they haue borne false wytnes agaynst me; y beholde, I must dye, where as I neuer dyd eny soch things, as these men haue maliciously inuentaed agaynst me. And y LORDE herde hir voyce. For wha she was led forth to death, y LORDE raised vp y preste of a yonge childe, whose name was Daniel, which cried with a loude voice: 'I am clene fro this bloute. The all y people turned the towarde him, y sayde: What meane these wyords, y thou hast spoke? But Daniel stode in y myddest of the, y sayde: Are ye soth fooles (O ye chyldre of Israel) y ye cai not discerne? Ye haue here condenea a daughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the trueth wherfore: Go syt on judgment agayne, for they haue spoken false witnesse agaynst her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haist. And the elders (that is, the principall heades) sayde vnto him: come sit downe here amonge vs, and shewe vs this matter, seynge God hath geuen the as great honoure, as an elder. And Daniel sayde vnto them: 'Put these two aside one from another, and shal I heare them. When they were put a sunder one from another, he called one of them, and sayde vnto him: O thou olde canckerde carle, that hast vsed thy wickednesse so longe: thine vngracious dedes which thou hast done afore, are now come to light. For thou hast geuen false iudgmentes, thou hast oppressed the innocent, and letten the giltie go fre, where as yet the LORDE saieth: The innocent and righteous se thou slaye not. Wel than, yf thou hast sene her, tel me, vnder what tre sawest thou them talkynge together? He answered: Vnder a Wolbergy tre. And Daniel sayde: very wel, Now thou leist euyn vpon thynke heade. Lo the messenger of the LORDE hath receaued the sentence of him, to cut y in two.

Then put he him aside, and called for the other, and sayde vnto him: O thou seide of Cannaan but not of Iuda: Faynrese hath diseaued the, and lust hath subuered thine herte. Thus deale ye afore with the daughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolde not abyde youre wickednesse. Now tell me than, vnder what tre didest thou take them speakinge together? He answered: vnder a pomgranate tre. Then sayde Daniel vnto him: very wel, now thou leyst also euyn vpö thine heade. The messenger of the LORDE stondeth waytinge with the swerde, to cut the in two, and to slaye you both.

With that, all the whole multitude gaue a greate shoute, and praysed God, which all-

The story of Bel, which is the riiij. Chapter of Daniel after the Latin.

There was at Babilon an ymage, called Bel: and there were spent vpon him euery daye, xij. cakes, xl. shepe, and sixe great pottes of wine. Him dyd the kynge worshippe himself, and went daylie to honoure him: but Daniel worshippe his owne God. And the kynge sayde vnto him: Why dost not thou worshippe Bel? he answered and sayde: Because I maye not worshippe thinges, that be made with hondes, but the lyuynge God, which made heauen and earth, and hath power vpon all flesh. The kynge sayde vnto him: thinkest thou not, Ṣ Bel is a lyuynge God? Or seist thou not, how moch he eateth and drynketh euery daye? Daniel smyled, and sayde: O kynge, disceaeu not thyselfe: This is but made of claye within, and of metall without, nether eateth he euuer any thinge.

Then the kynge was wroth, and called for his prestes, and sayde vnto them: Yf ye tell me not who this is, that eateth vp these expenses, ye shal dye: But yf ye can certifie me, that Bel eateth them, then Daniel shall dye, for he hath spoken blasphemy agaynst Bel. And Daniel sayde vnto the kynge: let it so be, acordinge as thou hast sayde. The prestes of Bel were lxx. byside their wyues and children. And the kynge wente with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bel prestes sayde: Lo, we wil go out, Ṣ set thou Ṣ meate there (O kynge) Ṣ pour in the wyne: then shutt the dore fast, and seale it with thine owne signet: and tomorrow when thou commest in, yf thou fyndest not, that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wil sufre death: or els daniel, that hath lyed vp on vs. The prestes thought them selues sure nough, for vnder Ṣ alte they had made a preuy in- trauance, Ṣ there wente they in euers, and ate vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kynge set metes before Bel. Now Daniel had commaundd his seruauntes to bringe aszshes and these he sifted thorow out all the temple, that the kynge might se. Then wente they out, Ṣ sparde the dore, sealinge it with Ṣ kynges signet, and so departed. In Ṣ night came the prestes with their wyues and children (as they were wonte to do) and ate and dronke vp all. In the mornynge be tymes at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, Ṣ

Daniel with him. And the kynge sayde: Daniel, are the seales whole yet? He answered: Yee (o kynge) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened the dore, the kynge loked vnto ¥ altare, and cried with a loude voyce: Greate art thou o Bel, and with the is no disceate. Then laughed Daniel, and helde the kynge, that he shulde not go in, and sayde: Beholde the pauenent, marcke well, whose fotesteppes are these? The kynge sayde: I se the fotesteppes of men, women and children.

Therefore the kynge was angrie, and toke the prestes, with their wyues and childre, they shewed him ¥ preuy dores, where they came in, ¥ ate vp soch thinges as were vpon ¥ altare. ¥ For the which cause ¥ kynge sleewe them, ¥ deliuered Bel in to Daniels power, which destroyed him and his temple.

And in that same place there was a greate dragon, which they of Babilon worshipped. And ¥ kynge sayde vnto Daniel: sayest thou, ¥ this is but a god of metall also? lo, he liueth, he eateth ¥ drinketh: so ¥ thou cast not saye, that he is no Iyuinge God, therefore worshippe him. Daniel sayde vnto ¥ kynge: I wil worshippe the Lorde my God, he is ¥ true Iyuinge God: as for this, he is not the God of life. But geue me leaue (o kynge) ¥ I shal destroye this dragon without swearde or staff. The kynge sayde: I geue ¥ leaue. Then Daniel toke pitch, fatte, and haire woll, and did seth them together, and made lompes therof: this he put in ¥ Dragōs mouth, and so ¥ dragon barst in sonder: and Daniel sayde: lo, ther is he whom ye worshipped.

When they of Babylon herde that they toke greate indignacion, and gathered them together agaynst the kynge, sayenge: The kynge is become a Iewe also, he hath destroyed Bel, he hath slayne ¥ Dragon, and put the prestes to death. So they came to ¥ kynge, ¥ sayde: let us haue Daniel, or els we will destroye the and thine house.

Now whan ¥ kynge sawe, that they rushed in so sore vpon him, ¥ that necessite constrained him, ¥ he deliuered Daniel vnto them: which cast him in to the lyons denne, where he was sixe dayes. In the denne there were seuen lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodies and two shepe: which then were not geue them, that they mighte deuoure Daniel.

There was in Iewry a prophet called Abacuc, which had made potage, and broken bred in a depe platter, and was goinge in to the felde, for to bynge it to ¥ mowers. But the angell of the Lorde sayde vnto Abacuc: go cary the meate that thou hast in to Babilon, vnto Daniel, which is in ¥ lyos denne. And Abacuc sayde: Lorde, I neuer sawe Babilon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. ¥ Then the angell of the Lorde toke him by the toppe, and bare him by the hayre of the head, and (thorow a mightie wynde) set him in Babilon vpon the denne. And Abacuc cried, sayenge: O Daniel thou seruant of God, haue, take the breakfast, ¥ God hath sent ¥. And Daniel saide: O God, hast thou thought vpon me? wel, thou neuer faylest them that loue the. So Daniel arose, ¥ ate: and the angell of the Lorde set Abacuc in his owne place agayne immediatly.

Vpon the seuenth daye, the kynge wente to bewepe Daniel: and when he came to the denne, he loked in: and beholde, Daniel sat in the myddest of the lyons. Then cried ¥ kynge with a loude voyce, sayenge: Greate art thou, o Lorde God of Daniel: ¥ he drewe him out of the denne. As for those that were ¥ cause of his destrucctio, ¥ he dyd cast the in to the denne, and they were devoured in a moment before his face.

After this, wrote the kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges, that dwelt in all countrees, sayenge: peace be multiplied with you. My commandement is, in all the dominyons of my realme: that men feare and stonde in awe of Daniels God, for he is the lyuynge God, which endureth euver: his kynge-dome abyeth vnccorrupte, and his power is euerrlasting. ¥ It is he that can deliuyer and saue: he doth wonders and maruelous works in heaven and in earth, for he hath saue Daniel from the power of the Lyons.

The first Chapter.

AFTER that Alexander the sonne of Philip, kyng of Macedonia wente forth of the londe of Cethem, and slew Darius kyng of the Persiæs and Meedes: It happened, that he toke greate warres in honde, wanne very many stronge cities, and slew many kinges of \( \dot{y} \) earth: going throew to \( \dot{y} \) endes of the worlde, and gettinge many spoyles of the people: In so moch, \( \dot{y} \) the worlde stode in greate awe of him,\( \dagger \) therfore was he proude in his herte. Now whě he had gathered a mightie strōge hoost, \( \dagger \) subdued \( \dot{y} \) lodes and people with their prynces, so that they became tributaries vnto hi; he fell sick. And whě he perceaued that he must nedes die, he called for his noble estates (which had bene brought vp with him of children) \( \dagger \) parted his kyngdome amongethem,\( \dagger \) whyle he was yet ayrue. So Alexader raygned \( \dot{y} \) yeare, and then dyed.

After his death fell the kyngdome vnto his prynces, and they optayned it euerie one in his rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: and so dyd their childre after them many yeares, \( \dagger \) after the kyngdom of the worlde increaseth. Out of these came \( \dot{y} \) vngracious rote, noble Antiochus \( \dot{y} \) sonne of Antiochus \( \dot{y} \) sonne of Antiochus the kyng\( C \) (which had bene a pledge at Rome) \( \dagger \) he raygned in \( \dot{y} \) Cxxxvij. yeare of the raigne of the Grekes.

In those dayes wete there out of Israel wicked men, which mowed moch people with their counce\( C \) say\( C \)enge: Let vs go \( \dagger \) make a couenaunt with the Heithen, \( \dot{y} \) are rounde aboute vs: for sence we departed from them, we haue had moch sorow. So this deuyce pleased them well, and certayne of \( \dot{y} \) people toke vpon the for to go vnto \( \dot{y} \) kyng, which gane them licencie to do after the ordinauce of the Heithen.\( \dagger \) Then set they vp an open scote (at Jerusalem) of the lawes of the Heithen, and were nonore circumcised: but forsoke \( \dot{y} \) holy Testamente, and joyned them selues to \( \dot{y} \) Heithé, \( \dagger \) they were cleane solde to do myselfe.

So when Antiochus beganne to be mightie in his kyngdome, he wente aboute to optayne \( \dot{y} \) londe of Egipte also, that he might haue dominion of two realmes. Vpon this entred he in to Egipte with a stronge hoost, with charrettes, elephantes, horsmen \( \dagger \) a greate nombre of shippes, and beganne to warre against Ptolomy the kyng of Egipte. But Ptolomy was afraied of him, and fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wâne many strōge cities, and toke awaye great good out of the londe of Egipte.

And after that Antiochus had smytt\( C \) Egipte, he turned agayne in the Cxliij. yeare \( \dagger \) wente towarde Israel, and came vp to Ierusalem with a mightie people: and entred proudly into \( \dot{y} \) Sanctuary, and toke awaye the golden altare, the candalstickes and all \( \dot{y} \) ornamentes thereof: the table of the shewbred the pouringe vessel, the chargers, the golden spone, the vale, the crownes and golden apparel of the temple, and brake downe all. He toke also the syluer and golde, the precious Jewels, and the secrete treasures that he foùde. And when he had taken awaye alltogether, caused a greate murthr of men, and so fulfilled his malicious pryde, he departed in to his owne londe.

Thus there arse greate heuninesse and misery in all the londe of Israel. The prynces and the elders of the people mounded, the yôge men and the maydens were defyled, and the fayre beuty of women was chandged: the brydegrome and the bryde toke them to mournyuge: the londe and those that dwelt therin, was moued: for all the house of Iacob was brought to confucion.

After two yeares the kyng sent his chefe treasurer vnto the cities of luda, \( \dagger \) which came to Jerusalem with a greate multitude of people, speakinge peaceable wordes vnto the, but all was disceate: for when they had geuen him credence, he fell sodelie vpon the cite, and smote it sore, \( \dagger \) and destroyed moch people of Israel. And when he had spoyled the cite, he set fyre on it, castinge downe houses and walles on euery syde. The women \( \dagger \) their children tooke they capture, and led awaye their catell. Then byulded they the castel of Dauid with a greate and thickne wall, and with mightie towres, and made it a stronge holde for them. Beside all this they sett wicked people and vngodly men to kepe it, stored it with weapons and vytalys: gathered the goodes of Jerusalem, and layed thē vp there: thus became it a theyuysh castell.

And this was done to laye waite for the people that wente in to the Sanctuary, and for the cruell destruccion of Israel. Thus they shed innocent bloud on every syde of the Sanctuary, and defyled it: In so much that the citesyrs were fayne to departe, and the cite became an habitacion of straungers, bynge desolate of hir owne sede, for hir owne natyues were fayne to leaue her. Hir Sanc tuary was clene waisted, she holy dayes were turned in to mournyng, hir Sabbathes were had in derision, and hir honoure brought to naught. Loke how great hir glory was afore, so greate was hir confucion, and hir ioye turned in to sorrow.

Antiachus also the kyng sent out a commi ssion to all his kyngdome, that all the people shulde be one. Then they left every man his lawe, and all the Heithen agreed to the commaundement of kyng Antiachus: Yee many of the Israelites consented there vnro, offerynge vnro Idols, and defylinge the Sab-bath. So the kyng Antiachus sent his messaungers with his commaundement vnto Jerusa-lem, and to all the cities of Iuda: that they shulde folowe their lawes of the Heithen, and for- bad ether burtofferynge, metatofferynge, or peaceofferynge to be made in the temple of God, that there shulde no Sabbath ner hye feast daye be kepte: but commaunded, that the Sanctuary and the holy people of Israel shuld be defyled.

He commaunded also that there shulde be set vp other altares, temples and Idols: to offer vp swynes flesh and other vnclene beasts: that men shulde leaue their children vn circumcised, to defyle their soules with all maner of vnclennesse abominacidns: that they might so forget the lawe, and change the holy ornamences of God: and that who so here wolde not do acordynge to the commaundament of kyng Antiachus, shulde suffer death. In like maner commaunded he thorow out all his realme, and sett rulers over the people, for to compell them to do these thynges, commaundinge the cities of Iuda to do sacrifice vnro Idols.

Then wente the people vnro the Heithen by heapes, forsoke the lawe of the LORDE, and committed moch euell in the londe: yee and chaced out the secrete Israelites, which had hyd them selues in corners and preuy places. The xv. daye of the moneth Caslen, in the Cxlv. yeare, set kyng Antiachus an abominable Idol of desolacion vpon the altar of God, and they byyled altares thorow out all the cities of Iuda on every syde, before the dores of the houses, and in the stretes: where they brent incense, and dyd sacrifice. And as for the bokes of the lawe of God, they brent them in the fyre, and rente them in pices. What so euer he was that had a boke of the Testament of the LORDE founde by hym, yee who so euer endeuored himself to kepe the lawe of the LORDE, the kynges commaundement was, they shulde put him to death. And thorow his auctorite they executed these things euery moneth, vpon the people of Israel that were founde in the cities.

The fyve and twentieth daye of the moneth what tymne as they dyd sacrifice vpon the altar (which stode in the steade of the altar of the LORDE) acordinge to the commaundament of kyng Antiachus, they put certayne women to death, which had caused their children to be circumcised: Not only that, but they hanged vp the children by the neckes thorow out all their houses, and slewe the circumcisers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Israel, which determed in them selues, that they wolde not eate vnclene thinges: but chose rather to suffre death, then to be defyled with vnclene meates. So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this greate tyranny increased very sore vpon the people of Israel.

The ii. Chapter.

In those dayes there dyd stode vp one Mathathias the sonne of Symeon the prest (out of the kyngred of Ioaris) frō Jerusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Modin, and had his sonnes: Ishō called Gaddis: Symon, called Thasi: Judas, other wyse called Machabeus: Eleazer, other wyse called Abaron: and Ionaðas, whose surname was Apphus. These sawe the euell, y was done amonge the people of Iuda and Jerusalem. And Mathathias sayde: Wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this misery of my people, and y pi strucctio of the holy cite: ζ thus to syt so styll, it beyng delyuered in to the hondes of the enemies, ξ Hir Sanctuary is come in to the power of straungers, hire temple is, as it were a man ὃ hath lost his good name. Hir precious ornamentes are caried awaye captuy, hire olde men are slayne in the strectes, and hire yonge men are fallen thorow the swearde of the enemies.

What people is it, that hath not some possession in hire kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of hire spoyles? All hire glory is taken awaye. She was a Quene, and now she is become an handmayde. Beholde our Sanctuary, our bwyte and honoure is waisted awaye, and defyled by the Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Matathias rente his clothes, he and his sonnes, and put sackcloth vpon them, ζ mourned very sore.

Then came the men thither which were sent of kyng Antiochus, to compell sauch as were fled in to the cite of Modin, for to do sacrifice and to burne incense vnto Idols, and to forsake the lawe of God. So, many of the people of Israel consented and enclyned vnto them, but Matathias and his sonnes remayned stedfast. Then spake the commissioners of kyng Antiochus, ζ sayde vnto Matathias: Thou art a noble man, of hye reputacion and great in this cite, hauinge fayre children and brethren. Come thon therfore first, and fullfull the kynges commandement, like as all the Heithen haue done, yee and ζ men of Iuda, and soch as remayne at Jerusalem: so shalt thou and thy children be in ζ kynges fauoure, and enriched with golde, syluer and great rewards.

Matathias answered, and spake with a loude voyce: Though all naciones obeye the kyng Antiochus, and fall awaie every man fr̲̲ kepynge ζ lawe of their fathers: though they consente to his commandementes, yet wil I ζ my sonnes and my brethren, not fall from the lawe of oure fathers. God forbid we shulde: that were not good for vs, that we shulde forsake the lawe and ordinances of God, ζ and to agree vnto the commandement of kyng Antiochus. Therfore we will do no soch sacrifice, nether breake the statutes of oure lawe, to goe another waye. And whe he had spoken these wordes, ζ there came one of the Lewes, which openly in the sight of all, dyd sacrifice vnto the Idols vpon the aultern in the cite of Modin, according to the kynges commandement.

When Matathias sawe this, it greueld him at the herte, so that his raynes shoke withall, and his wrath kindled for very zeale of the lawe. With that he gaue a szkippere forth, and ykkeld the Iewe besyde the aultern: ζe and slewe ζ kynges commisioner, that coipel him to do sacrifce, ζ destroyed the aultern at the same tyme: soch a zeale had he vnto the lawe of God, like as ζ Phinees dyd vnto Zambri the sonne of Salomi. And Matathias cried with a loude voyce thorow ζ cite, sayenge: Who so is fervent in the lawe, ζ will kepe ζ couenaut, let him followe me. So he and his sonnes fled in to the mountaynes and left all that euer they had in ζ cite. Many other godly men also departed in to the wylderness with their children, their wyues and their catell, and remayned there: for the tyranny increaced so sore vpon them.

Now when the kynges seruantes and the hoost, which was at Jerusalem in the cite of Dauid herde, that certayne mē had broken the kynges commandement and were gone their waye to the wylderness in to secrete places, and that there were many departed after them: they followe vpon them to fight against them in the Sabbath day, and sayde: Wyll ye yet rebell? Get you hence ζ do the commandement of kyng Antiochus, and ye shall lyue. They answered: We wil not go forth, nether wil we do the kynges commande- ment, to defyle ζ Sabbath daye. Then beganne they to fight against them nevertheless they gaue them none other answer, nether cast they one stone at them, ner made fast their preyes places, but sayde: We wil dye all in our innocency, heauen ζ earth shal testifie with vs, that ye put vs to death wrothefully. Thus they fought against them vpon the Sabbath, ζ slewe both men and catell, their wyues and their children, to the nombre of a thousande people.

When Matathias and his frends herde this, they mourned for them right sore, and sayde one to another: Υf so be that we all do as oure brethren haue done, and fight not for oure lyues ζ for oure lawes against the Heithen: then shall they the sooner rote vs out of the earth. So they conclude amonst theselues at the same tyme, sayenge: What soeuer he be that cómeth to make battayll with us vpon the Sabbath daye, we wyll fight agaynst hym, and not dye all, as oure brethern y were murdered so hauously. Vpô this came the Synagoge of the Iewes vnto the: strong men of Israel, all sooch as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucion, came to helpe them, and to stonde by them: In so moch that they gathered an host of men, and slewe the wicked doers in their gelousy, and the vngodly men in their wrath. Some of the wicked fled vnto the Heithen, and escaped.

Thus Matathias and his freundes wente aboute, and destroyed the aulters, and circumcised the children, that had not yet receaued circumcission: as many as they founde within y coasts of Israel: and followed mightely vpon the children of pryde, and this acte prospered in their hondes: In so moch, that they keppe the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentiles and the kynges, and gaue not ouer their dominion vnto wicked doers.

After this when the tyme drewe on fast, that Matathias shulde dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Now is pryde and persecucion increased, now is the tyme of destruccion and wrathfull displeasure: Wherfore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and ioperde youre lyues for the Testament of the fathers: call to remembrance what actes oure fathers dyd in their tyme, so shall ye receaue greate honoure and remayned out of the fyre. In like maner Daniel beyng vngiltie, was saued from the mouth of the Lyons.

And thus ye maye considre thorow out all ages sens the worlde beganne, that who so euer put their trust in God, were not ouer come. Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly man, for his glory is but dongs and wormes: to daye is he set vp, and to morowe is he gone: for he is turned in to earth, and his memoriall is come to naught. Wherfore (o my sonnes) take good hertes vnto you, and quyte youre selues like men in the lawe: for ye do the thinges that are commaundded you in the lawe of the LORDE youre God, ye shal optayne greate honoure therin.

And beholde, I knowe that youre brother Symon is a man of wyszdome: se that ye geue care vnto him allwayes, he shall be a father vnto you. As for Iudas Machabeus, he hath euer bene mightie and storge from his youth vp: let him be youre captayne, and ordre the battayll of you people: Thus shall ye brynge vnto you all those that faioure the lawe, and se that ye auenge the wronge of youre people, and recom pense the Heithen agayne, and applie youre selues whole to the commaundement of the lawe. So he gaue them his blessinge, and was layed by his fathers: and dyed in the Cxlv. yeare at Modin, where his sonnes buried him in his fathersones sepulcre, and all Israel made great lamentacion for him.

The iii. Chapter.

THEN stode vp Iudas Machabeus in his fathers stead, and all his brethren helped him: and so dyd all they that helde with his father, and fought with cherefulness for Israel. So Iudas gat his people great honoure: He put on a brest plate as a gaiante, and arayed him selfe with his harnesse, and defended the hoost with his swarde. In his actes he was like a lyon, as a lions whelp roaringe at his praye. He was an enimie to the wicked, and hipted them out: and brent vp those, that vexed his people: So that his enemies fled for feare of him, and all the workers of vngodlynnes were put to trouble:
soch lucke and prosperite was in his honde. This greued dyuere kynges, but Iacob was greatly reioysed thorow his actes, and he gat him self a greate name for euer.

He wente thorow the citiies of Iuda, des-stroyenge the vngodly out of them, turnynge awaye the wrath from Israel, and receanyng soch as were oppresséd: and the fame of him wente vnto the vttemost parte of ý earth. Then Appollonius (a prync of Syr) gathered a mightie greate hoost of the Heithen out of Samaria, to fight agaynst Israel. Which when Iudas perceaued, he wente forth to mete him, fought with him, slewe him, and a greate multitute with him: the remnaunte fled, and he toke their substauence. Iudas also toke Appollonius owne swearde, and fought with it all his life longe.

Now when Seron (another prync of Siria) herde saye, that Iudas had gathered vnto him the congregacion and church of the faithfull, he sayde: I will get me a name and a prayse thorow out the realme: for I will go fight with Iudas and them that are with him, as many as haue despised the kynges commandement. So he made him ready, and there wente with him a greate mightie hoost of the vngodly, to stonde by him, and to be aneged of the childre of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Iudas wente forth agaynst them with a small company. And when his people sawe soch a greate hoost before thê, they sayde vnto Iudas: How are we able (beyng so fewe) to fight agaynst so greate a multitute and so stronge? seigne we be so weery, and haue fasted all this daye?

But Iudas sayde:" It is a small matter for many to be ouer come with fewe: Yee there is no difference to the God of heauen, to deluyer by a greate multitute or by a small company: for the victory of the battell stondeth not in the multitute of the hoost, but the strength commeth from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs with a presumptuous and proude multitute: to destroye vs, oure wyues and oure children, and to robbe vs. But we will fight for oure lyues and for oure lawes, and the LORDE himself shall destroye thê before oure face: therfore be not ye afraied of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leapted sodenly vpon thê. Thus was Seron smyttten, and his host put to flight, and Iudas folowed vpon them beyonde Bethoron vnto

Chap. iii. The i. boke of the Machabers. thê playne felde: where there were slayne eight hundreth men of them, and the residue fled in to the londe of the Philistynes. Then all the Heithen on euyry syde were afraied for Iudas and his brethren: so ý the rumoure of him came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentiles coude tell of the warres of Iudas.

So whan kyng Antiochus herde these tidinges, he was angrie in his mynde: wherfore he sente forth and gathered an hoost of his whole realme, very stronge armes: and opened his treasury, and gaue his hoost a yeares wagies in honde, commaundynge them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuerthelesse when he sawe, that there was not moneye ynoth in his treasuries, and that thorow the discorde and persecucion, which he made in ý londe (to put downe ý lawes that had bene of olde tyme) his customes and tributes of the londe were mynisshed: he feared that he was not able for to bare the costs and charges eny lenger, ner to haue soch giftes, to geue so liberally as he dyd a fore, more thn the kynges that were before him.

Wherfore he was heuy in his mynde, and thought to go in to Persides, for to take tributes of ý londe, and so to gather molch moneye. 'So he left Lysias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouersse the kynges businesse, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egipte: and to kepe well his sonne Antiochus, till he came agayne.

Morouer, he gaue him half of his hoost and elaphantes, committet vnto him euyry thinge of his mynde, concernyng those which dwelt in Iuda, and Jerusalem: that he shulde sende out an army agaynst them, to destroye and to rote out the power of Israel and the remnaunt of Jerusalem: to put out their memoriall from that place, to set strangers for to inhabit all their quarthers, and to parte their londe amoné them. "Thus the kynges take the other parte of the hoost, and departed from Antioch (a cite of his realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundreth and xlvij. yeare, and wente thorow the hye countrees.

And Lysias chose vnto him Ptolomy the

some of Dorimius, Nycanor and Gorgias mighty men, and the kynge frendes. These he sent with xl. thousande fote men and vij. thousande horsmen, for to go in to the lande of Iuda, and to destroye it, as the kynge commanded. So they wente forth with all their power, and came to Emmaus in to the playne feld. When the marchauites berde the rumoure of them, they and their seruauntes toke very much silver and golde, for to bye the children of Israel to be their bonde men. There came vnto them also yet moo men of warre on euery syde, out of Syrie and the from the Palestynes.

Now when Judas and his brethren sawe that trouble increased, and that the hoost drew nye vnto their borders: consideringe the kynge words which he commanded vnto the people: namely, that they shulde utterly waist and destroye them: They sayde one to another: Let vs redresse the decaye of oure people, let vs fight for oure folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregacion were soon ready gathered to fight, to praine and to make supplication vnto God for mercy and grace.

"As for Ierusalem, it laye voyde, and was as it had bene a wylderness. There wente no man in nor out at it, and the Sanctuary was troden downe. The aleauntes kepte the castell, there was the habitation of the Heithen. The myrth of Iacob was taken awaye, the pype of the harpe was gone from amonge them.

The Israelites gathered them together, and came to Maspha before Ierusalem: for in Maspha was the place where they prayed afore tyme. "So they fasted that daye, and put sackclothes vp o them, cast aszhes vpon their heads, rente their clothes, and layde forth the bokes of the lawe (wherout the Heithen sought the liknesse of their ymages) and brought the prostes ornamentes, the firstlinges and the Tythes. They set there also the absteyners (which had fulfilled their days) before God, and cried with a loude voyce towards heaven, sayenge: what shal we do with these? and whither shall we carry them awaye?

For thy Sanctuary is troden downe and defyled, thy prestes are come to henynesse and dishonoure: and beholde, the Heithen are come together to for to destroye vs. Thou knowest what thinges they ymagny against vs. How maye we stonde before them, except thou (o God) beoure helpe?

They blew out the trompettes also with a loude voyce. Then Judas ordained captayynes ouer the people: four thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten. But as for soch as byyled them houses, maried wynes, planted them vynyards, and those that were fearfull: he commanded them euery man to go home, acordinge to the lawe. So the hoost removed, and pitched vpon the South syde of Emmaus.

And Judas sayde: Arme youre selues, be stronge (o my children) make you ready against tomorrow in the mornynge, that ye maye fight with these people, which are agreed together to destroye vs and oure Sanctuary. Better is it for vs to dye in battayll, then to se oure people and oure Sanctuary in such a miserable case. "Neuerthelesse, as will is in heauen, so be it.

Then toke Gorgias fyue thousande men of fote, and a thousande of the best horsmen: and removed by night, to come nye where the Iewes hoost laye, and so to slaye them sodeny. Now the men that kepeth the castell, were the coueyers of them. Then arose Judas to smyte the chefe and pryncippal of the kinges hoost at Emmaus, for the army was not yet come together. In the meane season came Gorgias by night in to Judas tentes: and when he founde no man there, he sought them in the mouitaynes, and thought they had bene fled awaie because of him. But when it was daie, Judas shewed himself in the feld with thre thousande men only, which had nether harnesse nor sweardes to their myndes.

But on the other syde, they sawe that the Heithen were mightie and well harnessed, and their horsmen aboute them, and all these wel experte in fettes of warre. Then sayde Judas to the men that were with him: "Faire not ye the multitude of them, be not aóryed of their violente runnyng: remembre how oure fathers were delynyed in thereed see, when Pharao threatned them with a greate hoost.

•Euen so let vs also cry now towarde heauen:
and the LORDE shall haue mercy vpon vs,
and remembre the couenuant of our fathers,
yee and destroye this hoost before oure face
this daye: And all Heithen shal knowe, that it is God himself, which deuyuereth and saueth Israel.

Then the Heithen lift vp their eyes: and when they sawe that they were commynyng agaynst them, they wente out of their tentes in to the battayll: and they that were with Iudas, blew vp the trompettes. So they buckled together, and the Heithen were discomfited, and fled ouer the playne felde: but the hynmost of them were slayne. For they folowed vpon them vnto Assaremoth, and in to the feldes of Idumea towarde Azot and Iamnia: so that there were slayne of them vypon a thre thousande men. So Iudas turned agaynyse with his hoost, and sayde vnto the people: Be not gredy of thy spoyles, we haue yet a battayll to fight: for Gorgias his hoost are here by vs in the mountaynes, but stonde ye fast agaynst oure enemies, and ouercome them: then maye ye safely take the spoyles.

As Iudas was speaking this words, there appeared one parte of them vpon the mount.
But when Gorgias sawe that they of his partie were fled, and the tentes brent vp (for by the smoke they might vnderstonde what was done) they perceaynyng this, were very sore afrayed: and when they sawe also that Iudas and his hoost were in yy felde ready to stryke battayll, they fled euerychone in to the londe of the Heithen.

So Iudas turned agaynyse to spoyle the tentes, where they got make golde and syluer, precious stones, purple greate riches. Thus they wente home, and sung a Psalme of thankesgeuyng and prayed God in heauen:
for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer: And so Israel had a greate victory in that daye.

Now all the Heithen that escaped, came and tolde Lysias euerie thinge as it happened.
Wherfore Lysias was sore afrayed and greued
in mynyde, because Israel had not gottè
soch mysfortune as he wolde they shulde, other as the kyng e commanded. The nexte yeare folowinge, gathered Lysias thre score thousande chosen men of fote, and fyue thousande horsmen, to fight agaynst them.

So they came in to Iewry, and pitched their tentes at Bethoron, where Iudas came agaynst them with ten thousande men. And when he sawe so greate mightie an hoost, he made his prayer and sayde: Blessed be thou (o sauioire of Israel) which diddest destroye
the violent power of the giaunte, in the honde of thy seruaunt Dauid, and gauest the hoost
of the Heith in to the honde of Ionathas
(the sonne of Saul) and of his weapon bearer.

Put this hoost now in to the honde of thy people of Israel, and let them be confounded in their multitude and horsmen. Make them afrayed, 9 discomfite the boldnes of their strength, 9 they maye be moued thorow their destrucc: Cast them done thorow the swarde of thy louers, then shall all they that knowe thy name, prayse the with thankesgeuyng.

So they stroke the batell, and there were slayne of Lysias hoost, fyue thousande men.
Then Lysias seynge the discomfytynge of his men, and the manlynnesse of the Iewes, how they were ready, ether to lyue or to dye like men: He wente vnto Antioche and chose out men of warre: that when they were gathered together, they might come agayne in to Iewry. Then sayde Iudas and his brethren:
beholde, oure enemies are discomfited: Let vs now go vp, to clese and to repayre the Sanctuary.

Vpon this, all the hoost gathered them together, and wente vp vnto mount Sion.
Now when they sawe the Sanctuary laied waist, the aulters defyled, the dores brent vp,
the shrubbes growinge in the courtes, like as in a wod or vpon mountaynes, yee and that the prestes Celles were broken downe: They rrente their clothes, made greate lamentacion,
cast ashes vpon their heades, fell downe flat to the grounde, made a greate noyse with the trompettes, and cried toward heauen.

Then Iudas apoynted certayne men to fight against those which were in the castel, till they had clensed the Sanctuary. So he chose prestes 9 were vndefyled, soch as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clensed the Sanctuary, 9 bare out the defyled

...stones in to an vnuncleane place. And for so much as the aultor of burntofferinges was vnhalowed, he toke aduysement, what he might do withall: so he thought it was best to destroie it (lest it shulde happen to do them any shame) for the Heithen had defyled it, therfore they brake it downe. As for the stones, they layed them vp vpon the mountayne by the house in a conuenient place: till there came a prophet to shewe, what shulde be done with them.

So they toke whole stones acordinge to the lawe, and buylde a new aultor soch one as was before, and made vp the Sanctuary within and without, and halowed the courtes. They made new ornamentes, brought candystickes, the aultor of incense, and the table in to the temple. The incense layed they vpon the aultor, lighted the lampes which were vpon the candystickes, that they might burne in the temple. They set the shewbred vp on the table, and hanged vp the vale, and set vp the temple, as it was afore. And vpon the xxv. daye of the ix. moneth (which is called the moneth of Casleu) in the C.xlvij. yeare: they rose vp by tymes in the mornynge for to do sacrifice (acordinge to the lawe) vpon the new burnt offrynge aultor, that they had made: after the tyme and season that the Heithen had defyled it. The same daye was it set vp agayne, with songs pipes, harpes and cymbales.

And all the people fell vp vpon their faces, worshippynge and thankynge the God of heauen, which had geuen them the victory.

So they kepte the dedicacion of the aultor viij. dayes, offerynge burnt sacrifices and thankofferings with gladnesse. They deckte the temple also with crownes and shylde of golde, and halowed the portes and celles, and hanged dores vp on them. Thus was there very greate gladnes amonge the people, because the blasphemy of the Heithene was put awaye.

So Iudas and his brethren with the whole congregacion of Israel, ordened, that the tyme of the dedicacion of the aultor shulde be kepte in his season from yeare to yeare, by the space of viij. dayes, from the xxv. daye of the moneth Casleu: yee and that with myrth and gladnesse.

And at the same tymne buylde they vp mount Sion with hye walles and strong towres rounde aboute: lest Gentiles shulde come and treade it downe, as they dyd afore. Therfore Iudas set men of warre in it, to kepe it: and made it strong, for to defende Bethsura: that the people might haue a refuge agaynst the Edomites.

The b. Chapter.

It happened also that when Heithen A rounde aboute herde, how that the aultor and the Sanctuary were set vp in their olde estate: it displeased them very sore, wherfore they thought to destroye the generacion of Iacob that was amonge them: In so much that they beganne to slaye and to persecute certayne of the people. Then Iudas fought against the children of Esau in Idumea, and agaynst those which were at Arabathane (for they dwelt rounde aboute Israelites) where he slewe spoyle a greate multitude of the. He thought also vp on the malice and unfaithfulness of the children of Bean, how they were a snare and stoppe vnto people, and how they layed waite for them in the hie waye: wherfore he shut them vp in to towers, and came vnto them, condemned them, and burnt vp their towres, with all that were in them.

Afterwarde wente he agaynst the children of Ammon, wherof he founde a mightie power and a greate multitude of people, with Tymothy their captayne. So he stroke many battayls with them, which were destroyed before him. And when he had slayne them, he wanne Gazer the cite, with the townes belonginge therto, and so turned agayne in to Jewry. The Heithen also in Galaad gathered them together, agaynst the Israelites that were in their quarters, to slaye them: but they fled to the castel of Datheman, and sent letters vnto Iudas and his brethren, sayenge: The Heithen are gathered agaynst vs on euery syde, to destroye vs, and now they make the for to come and laye sege to the castel, whervnto we are fled. Timothy is the captayne of their hoost: come therefoire, and deluyer vs out of their handes: for there is a greate multitude of vs slayne all ready. Yee and our brethren that were at Tubin, are slayne and destroyed (wel nyce a thousande... men) and their wyues, their children and their goodes have the enemies led awaye captuye.

Where these letters were yet a readinge, beholde, there came other messagers from Galilee, with remorse clothes: which tolde euen the same tydlinges, and sayde, that they of Ptolomais, of Tirus and of Sidon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galilee was fyllied with enemies to destroye Israel. When Iudas and his people herde this, they came together (a great congreagation) to deuise, what they might do for their brethren, that were in trouble and besieged of their enemies. And Iudas sayde vnto Symon his brother: chose ye out certayne men, and go deluyer thy brethren in Galilee: As for me and my brother Ionathas, we wyl go in to Galaadithim. So he left Iosephus ye sonne of Zachary, and Asarias, to be captaynes of the people and to kepe the remnant of the hoost in Iewry, a commanded them, sayenge: Take the ouersight of this people, and se that ye make no warre agaynst the Heithen, vntill the tyme that we come agayn. And vnto Simon he gave thre thousande men for to go in to Galilee, but Iudas himself had eight thousande in to Galaadithim.

Then wente Symon in to Galilee, and stroke dyuerse batels with the Heithen: whom he discomfited, and folowed vpon them vnto the porte of Ptolomais. And there were slayne of the Heithen allmost iij. thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and caryed awaye the Israelites (that were in Galilee and Arbatis) with their wyues, their children and all that they had, and brought them in to Iewry with greate gladnesse. Iudas Machabeus also and his brother Ionathas, wente ouer Iordane, and trauayled iij. dayes iourney in the wyldernesse: Where the Nebuthees met them, and receaued them louungly, and tolde the every thing that had happened vnto their brethren in Galaadithim, and how that many of them were besieged in Barasa, Bosor, Almis, Casphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all these are stronge walled and mightie greate cities) and ye they were kepeth in other cities of Galaad also: and todaye to day tomorrow they are appoynted to bryngye their hoost vnto these cities, to take them and to wynnynge them in one daye.

So Iudas and his hoost turned in all the haist in the wildernesse towarde Bosor, and wanne the cite, slewe all the males with the swerde, toke all their goodes, and set fyre vpon the cite. And in the night they toke their iournye from thence, and came to the castell. And by tymes in the mornynge when they loked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearyng laders and other instrumentes of warre, to take the castell and to ouer come them.

When Iudas sawe that the battayll beganne, and that the noyse thereof wente vp and range in to the Heaven, and that there was so greate a cry in the cite: He sayde vnto his hoost: fight this daye for your brethren. And so came behynde their enemies in thre companies, and blew vp the trompettes, and cried in their prayere to God.

But as soone as Tymothis hoost perceaued that Machabeus was there, they fled from him, and ye other slewe them downe right sore: so that there were kylled of them that same daye, allmost eight thousande men. Then departed Iudas vnto Maspha, layed sege vnto it and wanne it, slewe all the males in it, spoyled it, and set fyre vpon it. From thence wente he and toke Casbon, Mageth, Bosor and the other cities in Galaad.

After this gathered Timothy another hoost, which pitched their tentes before Raphon beyonde the water. Iudas sent to spye the hoost, and they brought him worder againe, sayenge: All the Heithens that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto him, and the hoost is very greate: Yee they have hyred the Arabians to helpe them, a haue pitched their tentes beyonde the water, and are ready to come and fight agaynst the. So Iudas wente on to mete them.

And Timothy sayde vnto the captaynes of his hoost: when Iudas and his hoost come nyne the ryuer: ye he go ouer first, we shall not be able to withstande him: for why, he wil be to stronge for vs. But ye he darre not come ouer, so that he pitch his tentes beyonde the water: then will we go ouer, for we shallbe stronge ynough against him. Now as soone as Iudas came to the ryuer, he appoynted certayne scrybes of the people, and commaundeth them, sayenge: se that ye leaue non behynye vpon this syde of ye ryuer, but let euery man come to the battayl. So he wente first ouer vnto them, and his people after him.

And all the Heithen were discomfited before him, and let their weapons fall, and ranne in to the temple that was at Carnaim. Which cite Iudas wanne, and brent the temple with all ʒ were in it: So was Carnaim subdued, and might not withstande Iudas. Then Iudas gathered all the Israelites that were in Galaadithim, from ʒ leest vnto the most, with their wyues and their children (a very greate host) for to come in to the londe of Iuda.

So they came vnto Ephron, which was a mightie, greate and stronge cite, and laye in their waye. For they coude not go by it, neither of the right bonde ner of the left, but must go thorow it. Neuerthelesse they that were in the cite, wolde not let them go thorow, but walled vp the portes with stones. And Iudas sent vnto thc with peaceable wordes, sayenge: Let vs passe thorow youre londe, that we maye go in to oure owne coittr: there shal no body do you harme, we wil but only go thorow. But they wolde not let them in.

Werfore Iudas commanded a proclamacion to be made thorow out the hoost, that euery man shulde kepe his ordre: and so they dyd their best like valeuant men.

And Iudas besieged the cite all that daie and all that night, and so wanne it: where they slewe as many as were males, and destroyed the cite, and spoyled it, and wete thorow all the cite ouer them that were slayne. Then wente they ouer Iordane in to the playne felde before Bethsan. And Iudas helped those farwarde that came behynde, and gane the people good exortacion all ʒ waye thorow, till they were come in to the londe of Iuda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mount Sion, where they ofred with myrth and thankesgeuynge: because there were none of them slayne, but came home agayne peaceably.

Now what tyne as Iudas and Jonathas were in the londe of Galaad, and Symon their brother in Galilee before Ptolomais: Then Iosephus the sonne of Zachary and Asarias the captaynes, hearinge of the actes that were done and of the battels that were stoken, sayde: Let vs get vs a name also, and go fight agaynst the Heithen that are rounde aboute us.

So they gane their hoost a commandemente, and wente toward Iammia. Then came Gorgias and his men out of the cite, to fight agaynst them: Iosephus also and Asarias were chased vnto ʒ borders of Lewry, ʒ there were slayne ʒ daye of ʒ people of Israel ij. M. men: so ʒ there was a greate misery amōde ʒ people, ʒ all because they were not obediënt vnto Iudas ʒ his brethren, but ʒ thought they shulde quyte them selues manfully. Neuerthelesse they came not of the sede of these men, by whome Israel was helped. But the men that were with Iudas, were greatly commended in the sight of all Israel and all Heithen, where so euer their name was herde vpō, and the people came vnto them byddinge them welcome.

After this wente Iudas forth with his brethren, and fought agaynst the children of Esau, in the londe ʒ lieth towarde the south where he wanne the cite of Hebron and the townes that lye besyde it: and as for the walles and towres rounde aboute it, he brent them vp. Then remoued he to go in to the lode of the Philistines, and wente thorow Samaria. At the same tyne were there many prestes slaine in ʒ battayll, which wilfully ʒ without advysemement wente out for to fight to get them honour. And when Iudas came to Azot in the Philistynes londe, he brake downe ʒ alaere, ʒ brent the nymes of their Idoles, spoyled the cities, and came agayne in to the londe of Iuda.

The vi. Chapter.

NOW when kyntg Antiochus trauayled a thorow the hye countrees, he herde that Elmas in Persia was a noble and plentuous cite in siluer and golde, ʒ that there was in it a very rich temple: where as were clothes, cote armoure and shyldes of golde, which Alexander the sonne of Philippe kyng of Macedonia had left behynde him. Werfore he wente aboute to take the cite and to spoyle it, but he was not able: for ʒ citistes were warned of it, ʒ fought with him. And so he fled, and departed with greate heuynesse, ʒ came agayne in to Babilon. Morouer there came one which brought him tidinges in Perside, ¹ his hoostes which were in the londe of Iuda, were dryuen awaye, and how that Lysias wente forth first with a greate power, and was dryuen awaye of the fewes: how they had wonne the victory, and gotten greate goodes out of the hoostes that perished: how they had broken downe the abhominacion, which he set vp vpon the altare at Jerusalem,² and fenced the Sanctuary with hye walles, like as it was afore: yee and Bethsura his cite also.

So it channed, that when the kynge had herde these wordes, he was apprized and greued very sore. Wherfore he layed him downe vpon his bed, and fell sicke for very sorowe: and all because it had not happened as he had deuysed. And there continued he longe, for his grefe was euer more and more, so he saw he must nedes dye. Therfore he sent for his frendes, a sayde vnto them: ye slepe is gone fro mine eyes, for ye sorowe and vexacio of herte ye haue. For when I considere in my mynde ye greate aduersitie ye I am come vnto and the houdes of heuynesse which I am in, where as afore tyme I was so merry, and so greatly set by (by reason of my power) Againe, consideringe ye euell ye I haue done at Jerusalem, from whence I toke all ye riches of golde and syluer ye were in it, a sent to fetch awaye the inhabitours of Jewry without eny reason why: I kno, ye these troubles are come vpon me for the same cause. And beholde, I must dye with greate sorow in a straunge londe.

Then called he for one Philippo a frende of his, whom he made rulder of all his realme and gaue him the crowne, his robe and his ryngge: that he shulde take his sonne Antiochus vnto him and brynge him vp, till he might raigne himselfe. ³ So the kyng Antiochus dyed there, in the Cxlix. yeare. When Lysias knewe that the kyng was deade, ⁴ he ordered Antiochus his sonne (whom he had brought vp) to raigne in his fathers steade, and called him Eupator. Now they that were in the castell (at Jerusalem) keppe in the Jewes rounde aboute the Sactuary, and sought euer styll to do them harme, for the strengtheynge of the Heithen. Therfore Judas thought to destroye them, and called all the people together, ⁵ they might laye sege vnto them. So they came together in the Cl. yeare, and besieged the layenge forth their ordinance and instruments of warre. Then certayne of them ⁶ were besieged wente forth (vnto whom some vngodly men of Israel loyned the selues also) and wente vnto the kyng, sayenge: How longe wil it be, or thou punysh and avenge youre brethren? We haue bene euer mynyed to do thy father seruice, to walke in his statutes, and to obeye his commaundementes: Therfore oure people fell from vs, and where so euer they founde eny of vs, they slewe them: and they haue not only meddled with vs, but with all oure countrees: and beholde, this daye are they beseginge the castell at Jerusalem, and haue made vp the stronge holde in Bethsura: ⁷ And if thou doest not preuente them right soone, they wil do more these, and thou shalt not be able to overcomme them.

When the kyng herde this, he was very angrie, and called all his frendes, the captaynes of his fote men and of all his horse men together. He hyred men of warre also out of other realmes and out of the Iles of the see, which came vnto him. And the nombre of his hoost was an hundrith thousande fote men, and twentre thousande horsmen, ⁸ Elephantes ⁹ exercised to battayll. These came thorow Idumea vnto Bethsura, and besieged it a longe season, and made dyuerse instrumentes of warre agaynst it. But the Jewes came out and brent them, and fought like men. Then departed Judas from the castell at Jerusalem, and remoued ⁵ hoost towards Bethzazar to agaynst the kynges armaye.

So the kyng arose vnto the daye, and brought the power of his hoost in to ⁵ waie to Bethzazar, where the hoostes made them to the battayll, blowynge the trompettes. ⁶ And to prouoke the Elephantes for to fight, they shewed them the sappe of reed grapes and molberries. And deuyed the Elephantes amongethe hoost: so that by euery Elephante there stode a M. men wel harnessed, and helmettes of stele vpon their heads: Yee vnto euery one of the Elephantes also, were ordened v. C. horsmen of the best, which waited of the Elephante, goinge where so euer he wente, and departed not from him. Every Elephante was couered with a stræge tower of wod, where vp on were xxxix. va-leaunt men with weapons to fight, * within it was a man of Inde to rule the beest. As for the remaunt of the horsmen, he set them vp on both the sydes in two partes with trompettes, to prouoke the hoost, and to stere vp soch as were slowe in the armye. And when the Sonne shone vp on their sylydes of golde and stele, the mountaynes glistered agaynct at them, * were as bright as the cresseshettes of fyre. The kynges hoost also was deuyded, one parte vp on the hie mountaynes, the other lowe beneath: so they wente on, takyng good hede, and kepinge their ordre. And all they that dwelt in the londe, were afrayed at the noyse of their hoost, when the multitude wente forth, and when the weapons smote together, for the hoost was both greate and mightie. Iudas also and his hoost entred in to the battayll, and slewe vj. C. men of the kynges armye. Now when Eleasar the Sonne of Saura dyd se one of ý Elyphantes deckte with the kynges badge, and was a more goodly beest the other: He thought ý kynge shulde be vpó him, and ioperde himself to delyuer his people, and to get him a perpetuall name. Wherefore he ranne with a corage vnto the Elephante in the myddes of the hoost, smyttinge them downe of both the sydes, and slewe many aboute him. So wente he to the Elphantes fete, and gat him vnder him, and slewe him: then fell the Elephante downe vp on him, and there he dyed. Iudas also and his men seimge the power of the kynge and the mightie violence of his hoost, departed from them. And the kynges armye wente vp agaynst them towards Jerusalem, and pitched their tentes in Iewry besyde mount Sion. Morouer the kyngge toke truce with them that were in Bethsura. * But when they came out of the cite (because they had no vytales within, and the londe laye vntylled) the kyngge toke Bethsura, and set men to kepe it. * turned his hoost to the place of the Sanctuary, and layed sege to it a greate whyle. Where he made all maner ordinaunce: handbowes, fyre darts, rackettes to cast stones, scorpiones to shute arowes, and slynges. The Iewes also made ordinaunce agaynst theirs, and fought a longe season. But in the cite there were no vytales, for it was the seventh yeare of the warres, and those Heithen that remayned in Iewry had eaten vp all their stoare. And in the Sanctuary were few men lefte, for the hunger came so vp on them, that they were scattered abrode every man to his owne place. So when Lysias herde, that Phillippe (whom Antiochus the kyngge whyle he was yet lyuinge, had ordened to bringe vp Antiochus his sonne, that he might be kyngge) was come agaynct out of Persia and Media with the kynges hoost, and thought to optayne the kyngdome: He gat him to the kyngge in all the haist and to the captaynes of the hoost, and sayde: we decrease daylie, and oure vytales are but small: Agaynct the place that we laye sege vnto, is very strong, and it were oure parte to se for the realme. Let us agree with these men and take truce with them, and with all their people, and graunte them to lyue after their lawe, as they dyd afore. For they be greued and do all these thinges agaynst vs, because we haue despysed their lawe. So the kyngge and the prynces were content, and sent vnto them to make peace, and they receaued it. Now whye the kyngge and the prynces had made an ooth vnto them, they came out of the castel, and the kyngge wete vp to mount Sion. But when he sawe that ý place was wel fenced, he brake the ooth that he had made, and commaunded to destroye the wall rounde aboute. Then departed he in all the haist, and returned vnto Antioche, where he founde Phillippe hauynge dominion of the cite. So he fought agaynst him, and toke the cite agaynct in to his hondes. The Chapters.

IN the Clj. yeare came * Demetrius ý sonne of Seleucus from ý cite of Rome with a small company of men, vnto a cite of the see coast, and there he bare rule. And it chaunnced, that when he came to Antioch the cite of his Progenitours, his hoost toke Antiochus and Lysias, to brynge them vnto him. But when it was tolde him, he saide: let me not se their faces. So the hoost put them to death. Now when Demetrius was set vpon the trone of his kyngdome, there came vnto him wicked and vngodly men of Israel: whose captyane was Alcimus, that wolde have bene made hye prest. These men accused the people of Israel vnto the kyngye, sayenge: Judas and his brethren haue slayne thy frendes, and dryuen vs out of oure owne londe. Wherefore sende now some man (to whom thou genest credence) that he maye go and se all the destruccion, which he hath done vnto vs and to the kynges londe, and let him be punished with all his fredes and fauvurers.

Then the kyngye chose Bachides a frende of his, which was a man of greate power in the realme (beyonde the greate water) and faithfull vnto the kyngye: and sent him to se for the destruccion, which Iudas had done. And as for that wicked Alcimus, he made him hye Prest, and comanded him to be auenged of the children of Israel. So they stode vp, and came with a greate hoost in to y londe of Iuda, sendinge messaungers to Iudas to his brethren, speakinge vnto them with peaceable wordes: but vnder disceate. Therfore Iudas tolde his people beleued not their saigfe, for they sawe y they were come with a greate hoost.

After this came y scribes together vnto Alcimus to Bachides, trustinge the best vnto them. And first, y Assydiens requyred peace of them, sayenge: Alcimus y prest is come of the sede of Aarō, how can he disceauen vs? So they gaue them louihe wordes, tolde vnto them, and sayde: we wil do you no harme, nether youre frendes: and they beleued them. But the very same daye toke they lx. men of them, tolde hem that hee would come to y them wordes, accordine to y wordes of Alcimus. They haue cast y flesh of thy sanctes, shed their bloute roode aboute Ierusale, there was nomā y wolde bury the.

So there came a greate feare and drede amonge the people, sayenge: there is nether treueth nor rightoussenesse in them, for they haue broke the appoyntment and ooth that they made. And Bachides removed his hoost from Ierusale, and pitched his tente at Bethzechα: where he sent forth, and toke many of them that had forsaken him: He slewe many of the people also, and cast them in to a greate pytt. Then committed he the londe vnto Alcimus, and left men of warre with him to helpe him, and Bachides himselfe wente vnto the kyngye. And thus Alcimus defended his hie presthode, and all such as vexed Israel, resorted vnto him: In so muche that they optayned the lode of Iuda, and dyd moch euell vnto the Israelites.

Now when Iudas sawe all the myschefe that Alcimus and his company had done (yee more then the Heithē them selues) vnto the Israelites: He wente forth rounde aboute all the borders of Iewry, and punysheuyd those vndisloyal renegates, so that they came no more out in to the countre. So whē Alcimus sawe, that Iudas and his people had gotten the vpper-hande, and that he was not able to abyde them: he wente agayne to the kyngye, and sayde all the worst of them that he coude. Then the kyngye sent Nicanor, one of his chefe pryncees (which bare euell wyl vnto Israel) and commaundedy him, that he shulde vterly destroye the people.

So 'Nicanor came to Ierusale with a greate hoost; and sent vnto Iudas and his brethren with frendly wordes (but vnder disceate) sayenge: there shal be no warre betwixte me and you: I wil come with a few men, to se how ye do, with freuynynge. Vpon this he came vnto Iudas, and they saluted one another peaceably: but the enemies were appoynted to take Iudas by violence. Neuertheles it was tolde Iudas, y he came vnto him but vnder disceate: wherfore he gat him awaie from him, and wolde se his face nomore. When Nicanor perceaued y his counsell was bewrayed, he wente out to fight agaynst Iudas, besyde Capharsalama: Where there were slayne of Nicanors hoost, v. M. men: the residue fled vnto the castell of Davuid.

After this came Nicanor vp vnto moūt Sion: and the prestes with the elders of the people wente forth to salute hym peaceably, tolde hem y burnt sacrifices tolde hem were offered for the kyngye. But he laughed the to scorne, mocked the, defyled their offeringes, and spake disdainedly, yee and swore in his wroth, sayenge: If Iudas and his hoost be not deluyered now in to my hondes, as sooone as euer I come agayne (and fayre well) I shal burne vp this house. With that, wente he out in a greate anger. Then the prestes came in, and stode before the aultre of the tēple, weepinga sayenge: For so much as thou (o LORDE) hast chosen this house, that thy name might be called vpon therin, and y it shulde be an house of praire and peticion vn to thy people: Be avenged of this ma g his hoost, and let them be slayne with y swearde: remembere the blasphemies of them, g sufre them not to continue eny longer.

When Nicanor was gone from Ierusalem, he pitched his tente at Bethoron, and there an hoost met hi out of Siria. And Iudas came to Adarsa with iiij. M. mo, g made his prayer vnto God, sayenge: O LORDE, because the messangers of kyng Senacherib blasphemed the, the angel wente forth, and slewe an Clxxxi. thousande of them: Euen so destroye thou this hoost before vs to daie that other people maye knowe, how that he hath blasphemed thy Sanctuary: and punish him, acordlinge to his malicionsnesse.

And so the hoostes stroke the feld, the thirtente daye of the moneth Adar: and Nicanors hoost was discomfited, and he himself was first slayne in the battayll. When Nicanors men of warre sawe that he was kylled, they cast awaye their weapons and fled: but the Iewes followed vpoun them an whole dayes iourney, from Adazer vnto Gazar, blowinge with the trompettes, and makinge tokens after them. So the Iewes came forth of all the townes there abounde, and blew out their horns vpoun them, and turned againstst them: Thus were they all slayne, and not one of them lefte.

Then they toke their substance for a pray, and smote of Nicanors heade g his right honde (which he helde vp so proudely) and brought it with them, and haged it vp afore Ierusalem. Wherofore the people were exceedingely rejoyseed, and passed ouer that daye in greate gladnesse. And Iudas ordened, that y same daye (namely the xij. daye of y moneth Adar) shulde be kepte in myrth euery yeare. Thus the londe of Iuda was in rest a litte while.

The viij. Chapter.

IUDAS herde also the fame of the Ro-maynes, that they were mightie and valaunt men, agreeable to all things that are requyred of them, g make peace with all men, which come vnto them, and how they were doughty men of strength. Besydes that, it was tolde him of their battayls g noble actes which they dyd in Galacia, how they had conquered them and brought them vnder tribute: and what greate things they had done in Spayne, how that with their wyszdome and sober behauoure they had wonne the Mynes of syluer and golde that are there, and op-tayned all the londe, with other places farre from thë: how they had discomfited and slayne downe the kynges that came vpoun them from the vtemost part of the earth, and how other people geue them tribute euery yeare: How they had slayne and overcume Philippe and Perses kyngye of Cethim and other mo (in battayll,) which had brought their ordinaunce agaynst them: how they discomfited greate Antiochus kyngye of Asia (that wolde nedes fight with them) haunyge an hundreth and xx. Elephants, with horsmen, charettes, and a very greate hoost: how they toke him selfe aluye, and ordened him (with such as shulde raigne after him) to paye the a greate trybute, yee and to fynde thë good suerties and plege: Besydes all this, how they had takë from him India, Media and Lydia (his best londes) and geuen them to kyngye Eumenus. Agayne, how they perceauyng y the Grekes were comyngye to veexe them: sent against thë a captaine of an hoost which gaue thë battayll, slewe many of thë, led awaye ther wyues and children captuye, spoyled thë, toke possession of their londe, destroyed their stronge holds, and subdued thë to be their bonde men vnto this daye: Morover, how y as for other kyngdomes g Iles, which somtyyme withstode thë, they destroyed them, and brought them vnder their dominion: But helped euer their owne frendes and those y were conferedate with them, g conquered kyngdomes both farre g nye: y who so euer herde of their renowne, was afrayed of them: for whom they wolde helpe to their kyngdomes, those raigned: and who it lyked not them to raigne, they put hym downe: And how they were come to greate preeminence: haunyge no kyngye amonge thë, nether eyn man clothed in purple, to be magnified there thorow: but had ordened thë selues a parlament, where in there sat iii. C. and xx. Senatours daylie vpon the counsell, to dispatch euer the busynesse of the people, and to kepe good ordre: And how y euyer yeare they chose a Mayre, to haue the governaunce of all their londe: to whom euery man was obiedient, and \( \checkmark \) there was nether euell will ner discencion amonge them.

Then Iudas chose Eupolemus the sonne of Iphon the sonne of Iacob, \( \checkmark \) Iason the sonne of Eleazar, \( \checkmark \) sent the vnto Rome for to make frendshepe \( \checkmark \) a bonde of loure with them: \( \checkmark \) they might take fr\( \checkmark \) them the bondage of \( \checkmark \) Grekes, for \( \checkmark \) Iewes sawe \( \checkmark \) the Grekes wolde subdue the kyngdome of Israel. So they wete vnto Rome (a very greate jorney) \( \checkmark \) came in to \( \checkmark \) Perlamet, \( \checkmark \) saide: Iudas Machabeus with his brethren \( \checkmark \) the people of \( \checkmark \) Iewes hath sent vs vnto you, to make a bonde of frendshepe \( \checkmark \) peace with you, \( \checkmark \) ye to note vs as youre louers \( \checkmark \) frendes. And \( \checkmark \) matter pleased \( \checkmark \) Romaines right well, wherfore it was writt vp: of \( \checkmark \) which \( \checkmark \) Romaines made a wryttinge in tables of Late \( \checkmark \) sent it to Ierusalem: \( \checkmark \) they might haue by the\( \checkmark \) a memoriall of \( \checkmark \) same peace \( \checkmark \) bode of frendshepe, after this maner: God saue \( \checkmark \) Romaines \( \checkmark \) people of the Iewes both by see \( \checkmark \) by lode, \( \checkmark \) kepe \( \checkmark \) swarde enemy fr\( \checkmark \) the for euermore. Yf there come first eny warre vpo \( \checkmark \) Romaines or eny of their fredes thorow out all their dominy\( \checkmark \) peole of \( \checkmark \) Iewes shal helpe the\( \checkmark \) as \( \checkmark \) tyme requireth \( \checkmark \) with all their hertes. Acordinge to these articles, the Romaines made the bonde with the Iewes. Now after these articles (sayde they) yf eny of the parties will put to them, or take eny thinge from them: they shal do it with the consente of both: and what so euer they adde then vnto them or take from them, it shal stonde fast. And as touching the euell that Demetrieus hath done vnto the Iewes, we haue wryttne vnto him, sayenge: Wherfore layest thou thy heuy yocke vpon the Iewes ouere frendes and louers? Yf they make eny complaynte of the agayne vnto vs, we shall defende them, and fight with the by see and by londe.

The ir. Chapter.

IN \( \checkmark \) meane season a that Nicanor \( \checkmark \) his hoost was slayyne in the feld, he proceded further to sende Bachides and Alcimus againe in to Iewry, and those that were in the right wyne of his hoost, with them. So they wete forth by the waye that ledeth vnto Galgala, and pitched their tenetes before Mesaloth which is in Arbellis, and wanne the cite, and slewe much people. In \( \checkmark \) first moneth of the Clij. yeare, they brought their hoost to Ierusalem, and rose vp and came to Berea, with xx. M. fote men, and ij. M. horsmen.

Now Iudas had pitcht his tente at Laisa, with thre thousande chosen men. And when they sawe the multitude of the other army \( \checkmark \) it was so greate, they were sore afraied, \( \checkmark \) many conveyed them selues out of the hoost, In so mouch \( \checkmark \) there abode no mo of them but viij. C. men. When Iudas sawe that his hoost fayled him, and that he must nedes fight: it brake his herte, \( \checkmark \) he had no tyne to gather them together: wherfore the man was in extreme trouble. Neuertheless he sayde vnto them, \( \checkmark \) remayned with him: Vp, let vs goe agaynst our enemies, peraduanture we shall be able to fight with them. But they wolde haue stopped him, sayenge: we shall not be able, therfore let vs now saue oure lynes, and turne agaynse to oure brethren, and then wil we fight agaynst the, for we are here but fewe. And Iudas sayde: God forbys, that we shulde fle from them. Wherfore yf oure tyne be come, let vs dye manfully for oure brethren, and let vs not stayne oure honour. Then the hoost remonned out of the tenetes, \( \checkmark \) stode agaynst them. The horsmen were deuyded in two partes: the slynge casters and the archers wente before the hoost, and all the mightie men were for mest in the feld. Bachides himself was in the right wyne of the batell, \( \checkmark \) the hoost drewe nyc in two partes, and blew the trompettes. They of Iudas syde blewe \( \checkmark \) trompettes also, \( \checkmark \) the earth shoke at the noyse of the hoostes, and they stroke a feld from the morow till night. And when Iudas sawe \( \checkmark \) Bachides hoost was strongest of the right syde, he toke with him all the hardy me, and brake

the right wyng of their ordre, and followed vpon them vnto the mount Azot.
Now when they which were of the left wyng, sawe that the right side was discomfited, they persecuted Iudas and them that were with him. Then was there a sore battayll, for many were slayne and wounded of both the parties, Iudas also himself was kylled, and the remaunt fled. So Ionathas and Symon toke Iudas their brother, and buried him in his fathers sepulcre in the cite of Modin. And all the people of Israel made greate lamentacion for him, and mourned longe, sayenge: Alas, that this worthy shulde be slayne, which delueryed y people of Israel. As for other things pertayninge to y battayls of Iudas, the noble actes that he did and of his worthynesse: they are not wriiten, for they were very many.

And after the death of Iudas, wicked me came vp in all the coastes of Israel, and there arose all soch as worke vnghostynesse. In those dayes was there a greate derth in the londe, and all the countre gaue ouer them selues to theirs vnto Bachides. So Bachides chose wicked men, and made them lordes in the londe. These sought out and made search for Iudas frendes, and brought them vnto Bachides: which auenged himself vpon them with greate despite. And there came so greate trouble in Israel, as was not sens the time that no prophet was sene there.

Then came all Iudas frendes together, and sayde vnto Ionathas: For so moche as thy brother Iudas is deed, there is none like him to go forth agaynst oure enemies, agaynst Bachides, and soch as are aduersaries vnto oure people. Wherefore this daye we chose the for him, to be oure prynce and captayne to ordre oure batell. And Ionathas toke the gouernaunce vpon him at the same tyme, and ruled in steade of his brother Iudas. When Bachides gat knowlege thereof, he sought for to slaye him: But Ionathas and Symon his brother, perceavynge that, fled in to y wildernesse of Thecu with all their company, and pitched their tentes by the water pole of Asphar.

Which when Bachides vnderstode, he came ouer Iordane with all his hoost vpon y Sabbath daye. Now had Ionathas sent his brother Ihon (a captayne of the people) to praye his frendes the Nabuthites, y they wolde lende them their ordunaunce, for they had moch. So the children of Iambry came out of Madaba, toke Ihon all y he had, and wente their waye withall. Then came worde vnto Ionathas y Symon his brother, y the children of Iambri made a greate mariage, brought y bryde from Madaba with greate pompe: for she was daughter to one of the noblest prynees of Canaan. Wherfore they remembered the bloude of Ihon their brother, and wente vp, and hyd them selues vnder the shadowe of the mountayne.

So they lift vp their eyes, and loked: and beholde, there was moch a doo, greate repaye: for the brydegrome came forth, his frédes and his brethren met them with tympanyes, instrumentes of musick, and many weapes. Then Ionathas and they that were with him, rose out of their skoukinge places against them, and swee many of them. As for the remaunt, they fled in to y mountaynes, and they toke all their substaunce. Thus the mariage was turned to mournynge, and y noyse of their melody in to lamentoyn. And so when they had auenged the bloude of their brother, they turned agayne vnto Iordane.

Bachides hearinge this, came vnto y very border of Iordane with a greate power vpon the Sabbath daye. And Ionathas sayde to his company: let vs get vp, fyght agaynst oure enemies: for it stondeth not with vs to daye, as in tymes past: Beholde, oure enemies are in oure waye, y water of Iordane vpon the one syde of vs, with banekes, fennes and woddles of y other syde, so y there is no place for vs to departe vnto. Wherfore crie now vnto heauen, that ye maye be delueryed from the power of youre enemies. So they stroke the batell. And Ionathas stretched out his honde to smyte Bachides, but he fled bacwarde. Then Ionathas and they were with him leape in to Iordane, swymmed ouer Iordane vnto him, there were slayne of Bachides syde that daye, a thousands men. Therfore Bachides with his hoost turned againe to Jerusalem, byoute vp y castels strange holds that were in Ierowy, Iericho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethel, Thànata, Phara Thopo, with hye walles, with portes with lockes: set men to kepe them, y they might vse their malice vpon Israel. He walled vp Bethsura, Gazara & the castell at Jerusale also, & prouyed them with men & vytales:
He toke also the cheifest mens sonnes in the countre for pledges, and put them in the castel at Jerusalem to be kepte.
Afterwarde in the C.lxij, yeare in the seconde moneth, Alcimus commaunded, that y wallace of the ymmost Sanctuary shulde be destroyed, & the buyldinges of y prophetes also. And when he beganne to destroye thē,
y thinges y hē wēte aboute, were hyndered:
for he was smyttyn with a palesey, & his mouth
shutt, so y he coude nomore speake ner commaunde eny of his house cócerninge his businesse. Thus dyed Alcimus in greate misery at the same tyme. And whē Bachides sawe y Alcimus was deeed, he turned agayne to y kynge, & so the londe was in rest ij. yeares.
Then all the vngodly men helde a councell, sayenge: Beholde, Ionathas & his cópany are at case, & dwell without care. Wherfore let vs brynye Bachides lither, & he shall take them all in one night.
So they wēte y gaue Bachides this councell,
which arose to come with a greate hoost, & sent letters prynuely to his adherentes which were in Iewry, to take Ionathas & those y were with him: but they might not, for the other had gotten knowleage of their deuyce.
And Ionathas toke L. men of the countre (which were the ryngleders of them) & slewe them. Then Ionathas and Symon with their cópany departed vnto the cite Bethbessen, which lieth in the wyldernesse, and repayred the decaye therof, & made it stronge. When Bachides knewe this, he gathered all his hoost, and sent worde to them that were of Iewry. The came he and layed sege to Bethbessen, and fought against it a longe season, and made instrumentes of warre.
Now Ionathas lefte his brother Symon in the cite, and wente forth into the countre,
and came with a certayne nombre, and slewe Odares and his brethren and the children of Phaseron in their tentes: so y he beganne to be stronge, & to increase in power.
As for Symon and his company, they wente out of the cite, and brēt vp the instrumêtes of warre, and fought agaynst Bachides, and discôfited him. And Bachides was sore vaxed, because his councell and trayayle was

...they dyd. As for the Heithen that were in castels which Bachides had made vp, they fled: so that euery man left the place, and wote in to his owne countre. Onely at Bethsura remayned certayne of the Iewes, which had forsaken the lawe and commandements of God, for Bethsura was their refuge.

Now when kyng Alexander herde of \( \tilde{y} \) promises \( \tilde{y} \) Demetrius had made vnto Ionathas, and when it was tolde him of \( \tilde{y} \) batels and noble actes, which he and his brethren had done, and of the greate trauayles that they had taken: he saide: where shall we fynde soch a man? wel, we will make him oure frende, \( \tilde{y} \) be confederate with hym. Vpon this he wrote a lettre vnto hym, with these words: kyng Alexander saluteth his brother Ionathas. We haue herde of the, \( \tilde{y} \) thou art a valeaunt man, \( \tilde{y} \) mete to be oure frende: wherfore this daye we ordene the to be the hye prest of thy people, and to be called the kynges frende. (Vpon this, he sente hym a purple clothinge \( \tilde{y} \) a crowne of golde) \( \tilde{y} \) thou mayest consider what is for oure profit, \( \tilde{y} \) kepe frendshipe towarde vs.

So in the viij. moneth of the C. ix. yeare vpon the solempne feast daye of the tabernacles, Ionathas put the holy rayment vpon hym. Then gathered he an host, \( \tilde{y} \) made many weapés. Which when Demetrius herde, he was maruelous sory, \( \tilde{y} \) sayde: Alas, what haue we done, \( \tilde{y} \) Alexander hath preuented vs in gettinge the frendship of the Iewes, for his owne defence? Yet wil I wryte louingly vnto them also, yee \( \tilde{y} \) promise them dignities \( \tilde{y} \) rewardes, \( \tilde{y} \) they maye be of my syde. Wherupon he wrote vnto thes these words: Kyng Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto \( \tilde{y} \) people of the Iewes. Where as ye haue kepeth youre courteounaunt versus, \( \tilde{y} \) continuèd in oure frendship, not enclyninge to oure enimies we were glad, when we herde therof. Wherfore remayne still \( \tilde{y} \) be faithfull to vs: \( \tilde{y} \) we shal wel recèpse you for the thinges, \( \tilde{y} \) ye haue done on oure partie: we shall release you of many charges, and geue you rewardes.

And now I discharge you \( \tilde{y} \) all \( \tilde{y} \) Iewes from tributes, I forgeue you the customes of salt, and release you of the crowne taxes, of the thirde parte of sede, and half of the frute of trees, which is myne owne dewty. These I leve for you, from this daye forth: so that they shall not be taken of the londe of Iuda...

Chap. r.

Then wrote kyng Alexander vnto Iona-thas, that he shulde come and mete hym. So he wente honorably vnto Ptolomais, & there he met the two kinges, and gawe them greate presentes of golde and syluer, & founde fra-uoure in their sight. And there came together agaynst Ionathas certayne wicked men and vngracious persones of Israel, makyng com-playntes of him, but the kyng regarded them not. As for Ionathas, the kyng commanded to take of his garments, and to clothe hym in purple: and so they dyd. Then the kyng appoynted hym to syt by hym, and sayde vnto his prynce: Go with hym in to the myddest of the cite, and make a proclamation, that no man complayne agaynst hym of any matter,

and that no man trouble hym for any maner of cause.

So it happened that when his accusers sawe
the worshippe which was proclaimed of hym, & ye was clothed in purple: they fled ever-ychone. And the kyng made moch of hym, wrote hym amonge his chefe frenedes, made him a duke, and partaker of his dominion.

Thus Ionathas wente agaynst to Jerusalem with peace and gladnesse. In the Cxv.

yeare came Demetrius the sonne of Demetrius from Creta in to his fathers londe:
wherof when Alexander herde tell, he was right sory, and returned vnto Antioche. And Demetrius chose Appollonius (which had the gouernaunce of Celosyria) to be his captayne.

So he gathered a great hoost and came vnto Iamnia, and sende worde vnto Ionathas
the hye prest, sayenge: Darrest thou with-stonde vs thy self alone? As for me, I am but laughed to score and shamed, because thou prouest thy strength agaynst vs in the mountaynes. Now therfore, ye thou trustest in thyne owne strength, com downe to vs in to the playne felde, and there let vs prooue oure strength together: thou shalt fynde, that I haue valeaunt men of warre with me: and shalt knowe who I am, the other that stonde

by me.

Which saye, that your fote is not able to stonde before oure face, for thy fathers haue bene twayne chaced in to their owne londe.
And now, how wylt thou be able to abyde so greate an hoost of horsmen and fote men in the felde, where as is nether rocke, stone ner place to fle vnto?

that they haue in my realme, shalbe fre. For the buyldinge also repayringe of the worke of the Sanctuary, expenses shalbe geuen out of the kynges Checkere: Yee and for the makinge of the walles rounde aboute Jerusalem, for the breakinge downe of the olde, and for the setting vp of the stronge holdes in Iewry, shal ye costs and charges be geuen out of the kynges Checkere.

"But when Ionathas and the people herde
these wordes, they gawe no credence vnto them, nether receaued them: for they re-membred the greate wickednesse that he had done vnto Israel, and how sore he had vexed them. Wherfore they agreed vnto Alexander, for he was a pryncell that had dealet friendly with them, and so they stode by him allwayes.
The gathered kyng Alexäder a greate hoost,
and brought his armie agaynst Demetrius.
So ye two kynges stroke battayll together, but Demetrius hoost fled, and Alexander folowed after and fell vpon them. A mightie sere felde was it, continuyng to the Sone wente
downe, and Demetrius was slayne the same daye.

And Alexander sente embassitours vnto Ptolomy the kyng of Egipte with these worde, sayenge: For so moch as I am come agayne to my realme, and am set in the trone of my progenitours, and haue gotten the dominion, ouer come Demetrius, conquered the londe, and striken a felde with hym, so that we haue discomfitted both hym and his hoost, and syt in the trone of his kyngdome: Let vs now make frenshep together, geue me thy daughter to wife: so shall I be thy sonne
in lawe, and both geue the rewardes, and hir greate dignite. Ptolomy the kyng gaue answere, sayenge: Happy be the daye wherein thou art come agayne to the londe of thy progenitours, and set in the trone of their kyngdome. And now will I fulfil thy wrtynghe: but mete me at Ptolomais, ye we maye se one another, and that I maye marie
my daughter vnto the acordinge to thy dosyre.
So Ptolomy wete out of Egipte with his doughter Cleopatra, ye came vnto Ptolomais in ye Cxij. yeare: where kyng Alexäder met him, he gaue Alexander his daughter Cleopatra, and maried them at Ptolomais with greate worshippe, like as the maner of kynges is to be.

* Josephus cap. 6. lib. 13. Antiq.  * 1 Mac. 3. a.
When Ionathas herde the wordes of Appollonius, he was moued in his myynde: wherfore he chose x thousande men and wente out of Jerusalem, and Symon his brother met him for to helpe him: And they pitched their tentes at Ioppa, but the cite kepe him forth, for Ioppa was an holde of Appollonius. Then Ionathas layed sege to it, and they that were in the cite, for very feare let him in: and so Ionathas waunne Ioppa. Appollonius hearinge of this, toke thire thousande horsmen, with a greate howst of fote, and wonte as though he wolde go to Azotus, & came Imediatly in to the playne felde: because he had so many horsmen, and put his trust in the. So Ionathas folowed vpon him to Azotus, & there they stroke the battayll. Now had Appollonius left a M. horsmen behynde them pruely in the tates. And when Ionathas knewe that soch waite was layed behynde them, they wete rounde aboute the enemies howst, and shot darters at the people from the mornyng to the evenyng. As for Ionathas people, they kepe their ordre as he had commanded them.

Then brought Symon forth his howst, and set them againste the fote men. For the horsmen were weery allready. So he disconfitid them, and they fled. And they that were scatred in the felde, got them to Azotus, and came in to the temple of Dagon their Idol, & they might there saue their lyues. But Ionathas set fyre vpon Azotus and all the cities rounde aboute it, & toke their goodes, & bréth vp the temple of Dagon with all them that were fled in to it.

Thus were slayne and bréth well nye viij. thousande men. So Ionathas remooued the howst from thence, and brought them to Ascalon: where men of the cite came forth, and met him with greate worship. After this wonte Ionathas and his howst agayne to Jerusalem, with greate substancye of good. And when kyngge Alexander herde these things, he thought to do Ionathas more worship, & sent him a colar of golde, as the vse is to be geuen vnto soch as are of the kynges nexte bloute. He gane him also of Accaron (with the londes belongyngge therto) in possession.

The ri. Chapter.

And hee kyngge of Egypte gathered an howst, (like the sondé lieth vpon the see shore) and many shippes: and wente aboute thanowe discarate to optayne kyngdome of Alexander, & to ioyne it vnto his owne realme. Upon this he toke his hownye in to Syria, he was sette in to the citemen, and me came forth to mete him: for kyngge Alexander had commaunded them so to do, because he was his father in lawe. Now when Ptolomy entred in to eny cite, he lefte me of warre to kepe it, and this he dyd thorow out all the cities. And when he came to Azotus, they shewed him the temple of Dagon and Azotus that was brennt vp, with the other things which were destroyed, the deed bodies cast abrode, & granes that they had made by the waye syde, for soch as were slayne in the felde: And tolde the kyngge that Ionathas had done all these things, to the intét they might get him euell will. But the kyngge sayde not a worde therto.

And Ionathas met the kyngge with greate honour to Ioppa, where they saluted another, and toke their rest. So when Ionathas had gone with kyngge, vnto the water that was calleed Eleutherus, he turned agayne to Jerusalem. Now Ptolomy had gotten the dominion of the cities vnto Seleucia vpon the see coost, ynaigynynge wicked counceuls agaynst Alexander, & sent embassitours vnto Demetrius, sayenge: Come, let vs make a bonde betwixte vs, so shall I geue the my daughter that Alexander hath, and thou shalt raigne in thy fathers kyngdome. I repente that I geue Alexander my daughter, for he goeth aboute to slaye me. And thus he slaundred Alexander, because he wolde have had his realme.

Thus he toke his daughter from him, geue her vnto Demetrius, and forsoke Alexander, so that his malice was openly knowne. And Ptolomy came to Antioche, where he set two crownes vpon his owne head: the crowne of Egypte and of Asia. In the meanye season was kyngge Alexander in Cilicia, for they that dwelt in those places, had rebelled agaynst him. But when Alexander herde of this, he came to warre agaynst him. So kinge Ptolomy brought forth his howst and met him with a mightie power, and chaced him awaye. Then fled Alexander in to Arabie, there to be defended, and kyngge Ptolomys honour increased. And Zabdiel the Arabian smote of Alexanders heade, and sent it vnto

Ptolomy. But the thirde daye after, died kyng Ptolomy himself: and they whom he had set in the stronge holdes, were slayne of those that were within y cities. And Demetrius raigned in y hundredth and seuen and sixtie yeare.

At the same tyme gathered Ionathas them that were in Iewry to laye sege vnto the castell which was at Ierusalem, and so they made many instrumentes of warre agaynst it. Then wente there certaine vngodly persone (which hated their owne people) vnto kyng Demetrius, and tolde him, that Ionathas beseged y castell. So when he herde it, he was angrie, and Immediatly came to Ptolomais, and wrote vnto Ionathas, that he shulde not laye sege to the castell, but come and speake with him in all the haist. Neuerthelesse when Ionathas herde this he commanded to besiege it. He chose also certayne of the elders and prestes of Israel, and put him self in the parell, and toke with him golde, sylver, clothinge and diverse presentes: and wente to Ptolomais vnto the kyng, and founde him gracius.

And though certayne vngodly men of his owne people made complayntes vpon him, yet the kyng intreated him, like as his predecessors had done before: and promoted him in the sight of all his frendes, confirmed him in the hye presthode with all the worship he had afore, and made him his chefe frende. Ionathas also desyred the kyng that he wolde make Iewry fre, with the three head cities of Samaria and the londes pertayneinge therto: vpon this dyd Ionathas promyse him thre C. talentes. Where vnto the kyng consented, and gaue Ionathas wrytynge of the same, conteyninge these wordes: kyng Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto his brother Ionathas and to the people of y Iewes. We sende you here a copyre of the lettre which we dyd wryte vnto our elder Lasthenus, concerninge you, that ye shulde knowe it.

Kyng Demetrius sendeth gretinge vnto Lasthenus his elder. For the faithfullnes that oure frendes the people of the Iewes kepe vnto vs, and for the lounyge kyndnesse which they beare towarde vs: we are determed to do them good. Wherfore we ordene all y coostes of Iewry with the thre cities, Lyda and Ramatha (which are added vnto Iewry from Samaria) all y lodes pertayninge there vnto, to be frely separated for such as do sacrifice in Ierusalem: both concerninge the paymeetes which the kyng toke yearly afore tyne, y frutes also of the earth. As for other tithes and tributes belongs vnto vs, we discharge the therof from this tyne forth. In like maner we grainte vnto the all the customes of salt and crowne taxes, which were brought vnto vs. And this redome shal they haue firme stedfast, fro this tyne forth for euermore. Therefore se ye make a copy of these oure letters, and deluyer it vnto Ionathas: that it maye be kepte vpon y holy mount in a cōuenient place.

After this, when Demetrius the kyng sawe that his londe was in rest, and that no resistance was made him: he sent awaye all his hoost every man to his owne place, excepte an armye of straungers, whom he brought from the iles of the Heithen, wherefore all his fathers hoost had euellyll at him. Now was there one Triphon (that had bene of Alexanders parte afore) which when he sawe that all the hoost murmured against Demetrius: he wente to Emalceul the Arabian (that brought vp Antiochus the soune of Alexander) and laye vpon him, to deluyer him this yonge Antiochus: that he might raigne in his fathers stede. He tolde him also what great euell Demetrius had done, how his minde of warre loued him not: so remayned there a longe season.

And Ionathas sent vnto kyng Demetrius, to druye them out which were in the castell at Ierusalem and in the other refugyes, for they dyd Israel greate harme. So Demetrius sent worde vnto Ionathas, sayenge: I wil not only do these thinges for the and thy people, but at tyme conueniet I wil do both the thy people greate worshippe. But now thou shalt do me a pleasure, yt thou wilt sende me men to helpe me: for all myne armye is gone fro me. So Ionathas sent him iij. M. stronge men vnto Antioche, and they came vnto the kyng, wherfore the kyng was very glad at their commynge. But they that were of the cīte (even an Cxx. thousande me) gathered them together, and wolde haue slayne the kyng, which fled in to his courte: the cītesyns kepte the stretes of the cīte, and beganne to fight.

* 1 Ma. 10. b.
* 1 Ma. 10. d.
* 1 Mac. 12. e.
Then the kyng called for the Iewes helpe, which came vnto him all together, & went abrode thorow the cite, and slewe the same daye an C. M. men: set fyre vpon the cite, gat many spoyles in that daye, and deleyuered § kyngge. So when the citesyns sawe that the Iewes had gotten their wyll of the cite, and they them selues dispoyned of their purpose: they made their supplication vnto the kyngge, sayde: Graunte vs peace, and let the Iewes cease from troubling vs and the cite, and vpon this they cast awaye their weapons. Thus they made peace, and § Iewes gat greate worshippe in the sight of the kyngge, and in the sight of all that were in his realme, and were spoken of thorow out the kyngdome: and so they came agayne to Ierusalem with greate goodes.

So the kyngge Demetrius sat in the trone of his kyngdome, and had peace in his lode. Neuertheles he dyssembled in all that euer he spake, & with drewe himself from Ionathas, neither rewarded him acordinge to the benefites which he had done for him, but troubled him very sore. After this came Triphon agayne with yonge Antiochus, which raigned § crowned kyngge. Then there gathered vnto him all § men of warre, who Demetrius had put awaye: these fought againste Demetrius, which fled § turned his backe. So Triphon toke the Elephantes, § wanne Antioche. And yoge Antiochus wrote vnto Ionathas, sayenge: I confirme the in thy presthode, § make § ruler of iiiij. countrees, § thou mayest be a frende of § kinges.

Vpon this he sent him golden vessel to be serued in, and gave him leue to drynke in golde, to be clothed in purple, and to weare a colar of golde. He made his brother Symon also captayne, from the coostes of Tyrus vnto the borders of Egipte. Then Ionathas toke his iourney, § went thorow § cities beyonde the water (of Iordane) and all the men of warre of Syria gathered the vnto him for to helpe him. So he came vnto Ascalon, and they of the cite receaoned him honorably: § from thence wente he vnto Gaza, but they wolde not let him in: wherfore he layed sege vnto it, burnynge vp and spoylinge the places that were aboute the cite.

And the citesyns of Gaza submytted the selues vnto Ionathas, which made peace with them, but toke of their sonnes to pledge, sent the to Ierusalem, § wente thorow the countre vnto Damascus. Now when Ionathas herde that Demetrius princes were come in to Cades (which is in Galilee) with a greate hoost, pursinginge to put Demetrius out from medlinge in the realme: he came agaynst them, and lefte Symon his brother in the londe: which came to Bethsura, and layed sege to it a longe season, and discomfitted them. So they desyre to haue peace with him, which he graunted them, § afterwarde put them out from thence, toke the cite, and set men to kepe it. And Ionathas with his hoost came to the water of Genesar, § by tymes in the morninge gat them to the playne fielde of Azor.

And behelde, the hoostes of the Heithen met the in the fielde, § layed watch for the in the mountaynes: so § when Ionathas came agaynst the, the other (which were layed to watch) rose out of their places, § fought, § they that were of Ionathas syde, fled euery man: § there was not one of the left, excepte Matathias the sonne of Absalomus, and Iudas the sonne of Calphi the captayne of the hoost. The Ionathas rente his clothes, layed earth vp his heade, made his prayer, § turned agayne to thè in § fielde: where they fought together, and he put them to flight. Now when his owne men § were fled, sawe this: they turned agayne vnto him, § helped him to folowe vpon all their enemies vnto their tentes at Cades. So there were slaye of the Heithen the same daye, iiij. M. men, § Ionathas turned agayne to Ierusalem.

The rii. Chapter.

IONATHAS seyenge that § tyme was mete for him, chose certayne men and sent them vnto Rome for to stabilish § to reuene the freudshiphe with thè. § He sent lettres also vnto Sparta, and to other places in like maner. So they wete vnto Rome and entred in to § councell, § sayde: Ionathas § drye prest § the people of the Iewes sent vs vnto you, for to reuene § old freudshiphe and bonde of loue. Vpò this § Romaynes gauè the fre pasportes, § me shuld lede the home in to § lode of Iuda peaceably. And this is § copy of the lettres that Ionathas wrote vnto the Spercians:

I onathas § drye prest with § elders, prestes, § the other people of § Iewes, sende gretinge Cfte departinge and losephus Joes to meth 5 made vnto hode.
and helpe and foughten ceassynge and forably, wrytynge, vnto vs vnto chose brethren, shewed we Arius Arius Antipater Abraham. And we haue had helpe frō heaué, so that we are deluyered, and oure enemies subdued. Wherfore we chose Numenius the sonne of Antiochus and Antipater the sonne of Iason, and sente them vnto the Romaynes, for to renue the olde bonde of frendshipes and loue with them. We commaunded them also to come vnto you, to saluate you, and to deluyer you oure lettres, concerninge the renuacion of oure brotherhode. And now ye shal do right wel, to geue vs an awnsere there vnto.

And this is the copy of the wryntinge, which Arier the kyng of Sparta sente vnto Onias: Arier kinge of the Sparcians sendeth greytynge vnto Onias the hye prest. It is founde in wryntynge, that the Sparcians and Iewes are brethren, and come of the generacion of Abraham. And now for so much as this is come to oure knowlge, ye shal do wel, to wryte vnto vs of youre prosperite. As for vs, we haue wrytten oure mynde vnto you: Oure catell and goodes are yours and yours, ours. These thinges haue we commaunded to be shewed vnto you.

When Ionathas herde, that Demetrius prices were come forth to fight against him with a greater hoost thē afore, he wente frō Jerusalem, thē met thē in the lode of Hemath, for he gane them not space to come in to his owne countrie. And he sent spies vnto their tentes, which came agayne and tolde him, that they were appoynted to come vpo him in the night season. Wherfore when the Šone was gone downe, Ionathas cômaundd his men to watch all thē night, thē to be ready with weapons for to fight; and set watchmen rounde aboute the hoost. But when the aduersaries herde that Ionathas was ready with his men to the battayll, they feared thē were afayed in their hertes, thē kyndled fyres in their tentes, brake vp, and gat them awaye. Neuertheles Ionathas and his company knewe it not till the morninge, for they sawe the fyres burnynge.

Then Ionathas folowed vpon thē, but he might not ouertake them, for they were gone ouer the water Eleutherus. So Ionathas departed vnto thē Arabiās (which were called Zabadei) slewe them, thē toke their goodes. He proceded furthur also, and came vnto Damascus, thē wente thorow all that countrie. But Simon his brother toke his iourney and came to Ascalon and to the nexte stronge holdes: departinge vnto Ioppa, and wanne it. For he herde, that they wolde stonde of Demetrius partie: wherfore he sent me of warre in the cite, to kepe it. After this came Ionathas home agayne, thē called the elders of the people together: and deuyed with thē for to byulde vp the stroge holdes in Iewry, and the walles of Jerusalem, to set vp an hye wall betwixte the castell and thē cite, for to separate it from the cite, that it might be alone, and that men shulde nether bye nor sell in it.

Vpo this they came together for to byulde vp the cite: and for so much as the wall vpō the broke of the west syde (called Caphetheta) was fallen downe, they repayred it. And Symon set vp Adida in Sephela, and made it stronge, settinge portes thē lockes vpō it. "Now when Triphon purposed to raigne in Asia, to be crowned, and to slaye the kyng Antiochus: he was afrayed that Ionathas wolde not suffre him, but fight against him. Wherfore he wente aboute to take Ionathas, and to kyll him. So he departed, and came vnto Bethsan. Then wente Ionathas forth against him to the battayll with fourtye thousande chosen men, and came vnto Bethsan also. But whē

Triphon sawe that Ionathas came with so great an host to destroye him, he was afraied: and therefor he receaved him honorably, commended him vnto all his frendes, gaue him rewardes, and commaunded his men of warre to be as obediënt vnto him as to himself.

And saide vnto Ionathas: why hast thou caused this people to take soch tranayle, seynge there is no warre betwixte vs? Therfore sende them home agayne, suche chose certaine men to waite vpon the, suche come thou with me to Ptolomais: for I wil gene it the, with the other stròge holds, men of warre and their officers: As for me, I must departe, this is only suche cause of my comynge. Ionathas beleued him, and sayde, puttinge awaye his host, which wente in to y londe of Iuda. He kepte but iiij. M. by him, wherof he sente ij. M. in to Galilee, suche one M. wente with himself.

Now ys soone as Ionathas entred in to Ptolomais, the citesyns spurreth the gates of the cite, and toke him, and slewe all them with the swerde, that came in with him. Then sent Triphon an host of fote suche and horsmen in to Galilee and in to the greate playne felde, to destroye all Ionathas company. But when they knew that Ionathas was taken, and all they slayne that wayted vpon him: they toke counsell together, and came forth ready to the battayll. So when they which folowed vpon them, sawe, that it was a matter of life, they turned backe agayne. As for the other, they wente in to y londe of Iuda peaceably, suche bewayled Ionathas, suche them that were with him right sore. And Israel made greate lamentacion. Thé all the Heithen y were rounde aboute them, sought to destroye the. For they sayde: now haue they no captayne, nor ey man to helpe them. Therfore let vs overcome them, and rote out their name from amongst men.

The riiij. Chapter.

NOW when Symon herde that Triphon gathered a greate host, to come in to y londe of Iuda, and to destroye it: and sawe y the people was in greate fearfulness and care: He came vp to Jerusalem, and gathered the people together, y gaue the exortacion, sayenge: Ye knowe what greate battayls I and my brethren y my fathers house haue stryken for the lawe y the Sactuary, and what maner of troubles we haue sene: thowr ocasion wherof, all my brethren are slayne for Israels sake, and I am left alone. And now let not me spare myne owne life in eyny maner of trouble, for I am no better then my brethren: but wil avenge my people and the Sanctuary,oure children and oure wyues: for all the Heithen are gathered together, to destroye vs of very malice.

At these wordes the hartes of the people were kyndled together, so that they cried with a loude voyce, sayenge: Thou shalt beoure captayne in stead of Iudas y Ionathas thy brethren, ordre thou oure batell, suche what so euer thou commandest vs, we shall do it. So he gathered all the men of warre, makinge haist to fynish all the walles of Jerusalem, which he made stronge rounde aboute. Then sent he Ionathas the sonne of Absalomus with a fresh host vnto Ioppa, which drue them out y were in the castell, and remayne there himself. Triphon also remoued from Ptolomais with a greate armeye, to come in to the londe of Iuda, and Ionathas with him in ware. And Simon pitched his tentes at Addas before the playne felde.

But when Triphon knewe that Symon stode vp in stead of his brother Ionathas, and that he wolde warre agaynst him: he sent messaungers vnto him, sayenge: Where as we haue kepe Ionathas thy brother, it is for money that he is owinge in the kynges accompte, concernynge the busynesse y he had in honde. Wherfore sende now an C. talètes of syluer and his two sonnes for suertie, that when he is lette forth he shal not forsake vs: and we shal sende him agayne. Neertheless Symon knewe, that he dyssembled in his wordes: yet commaunded he the money y children to be delyuered vnto him: lest he shulde be the greater enimye agaynst y people of Israel, and saye: because he sent him not the money and the children, therefore is Ionathas deed.

So Symon sent him the children and an hundreth talentes, but he dyssembled, suche wolde not let Ionathas go. Afterwarde came Triphon in to the londe, to destroye it, and wente rounde aboute by the waye, y ledeth vnto Ador. But where so euer they wente, thinther wente Symon and his host also. Now they that were in the castell, sent messaungers vnto Triphon, that he shulde make haist to come by the wyldernesse, and to sende them vytales: And Triphon made ready all his horsmen to come that same night. Nethertheless it was a very greate snowe, so that he came not in Galaadithim. And whē he drewe nye Baschama, he slewe Ionathas and his sondres there, and then turned for to go home in to his owne londe.

The sente Symon for to fet his brothers deed coarse, and buried it in Modin his fathers cite. So all Israel bewayled him with greate lamentacion, and mourned for him very longe. And Symon made vpon the sepulcre of his father and his brethren a buyldinge hye to loke vnto of fre stone behynde and before: and set vp seuen pilers, one agaynst another (for his father, his mother and foure brethren) and set greate pilers rude aboute, with armes vpon them for a perpetuall memory, and cardned shippes besyde the armes: y they might be sene of me saylinge in the see. This sepulcre which he made at Modin, stondeth yet vnto this daye.

Now as Triphon wente forth to walke with y yege kyng Antiochus, he slewe him trayerously, and raigned in his steade, crowned himself kyng of Asia, and dyd moch euell in the londe. Symon also buylte vp the castels in Iewry, makynge them stronge with hye towres, greate walles, portes and lockes, and layed vp vytales in the stronge holds. And Symon chose certayne men, and sente them to kyng Demetrius: to desyre him, y he wolde discharge the londe from all bondage, for Triphon had spoyled it very sore. Where vpon Demetrius the kyng answered him, y wrote vnto him after this maner:

Demetrius y kige sendeth gretinge vnto Symon the hye prest his frende, with the elders and people of the Iewes. The golden crowne and precious stone y ye sente vnto ys, hane we receaued: and are ready to make a stedfast peace with you, yee and to wryte vnto oure officers, for to release you, concernynge the thinges wherin we made you fre: and the appoyntment y we make with you, shalbe firme and stable. The stronge holds which ye haue buylded, shalbe youre owne. As for eny ouer sight or fawte committed vnto this daye, we forgeue it, and the crowne taxe that ye ought vs also. And where as was eny other tribute in Jerusalem, it shal now be no tribute: and loke who are mete amonge you to be in oure courte, let them be written vp, that there maye be peace betwixte vs.

Thus the yock of the Heithen was taken from Israel, in the hundrith and seuententh yeare. And the peple of the Iewes beganne to write in their letters and actes on this maner: *In y first yeare of Symon the hye prest, and prynce of the Iewes. In those dayes wente Symon vnto Gaza, and beseged it rounde aboute, where he set vp ordinaunce of warre. And wanne a towre, which he toke. So they that gat in to the towre lepte into the cite, which was in a greate feare: In so mouch that the people of the cite rente their clothes, and clymmed vp vpon the walles with their wyues and children, besekynge Symon to be at one with them, sayenge:

O rewarde vs not after oure wickednes, but be gracious vnto vs, and we shal do y seruycye. Then Symon for very pite, wolde fight no more agaynst them, but put them out of the cite, and caused the houses (wherin the ymages were) to be clensed: and so entred the cite with Psalms of prayse, ginge thankes vnto the LORDE. So when he had cast all abhominacioes out of the cite, he set soch men in it as kepte the lawe of God, and made the cite stronge, and builded a dwellinge place for himself. Now when they in the castell at Jerusalem were kepe so strately, that they coude not come forth ner in to countrie, and might nether bye ner sell: they were very hungrie, and many of them famished to death: In so mouch that they besought Symon to be at one with them, which he graunte them. So he put them out from thence, and clensed the castell from fylthinesse. And vpon the xxiiij. daye of the seconde moneth in the Clxij. yeare they entred in to it with thankesgeyunge and braunches of palm trees, with harpes, crowdes, cymbals, and luttes, synginge psalmes and songes of prayse vnto God, for that the greate enemy of Israel was ouer come. And Symon ordered that the same daye shulde be kepe every yeare in gladnesse, and made stronge the hyll of the temple that was besyde the castell, where he dwelt him self with his company. Symon also perceauynge that Ihon his sonne was a mightie man of armes, made him captayne of all the hoostes, and caused him to dwell at Gaza.

The riiij. Chapter.

I

N the Clxixij. yeare gathered kynge Demetrius his hoost, and departed vnto Media, to gett him helpe for to fight agaynst Triphon. Now when Arsaces the kyng of Persia and Media herde, that Demetrius was entred within his borders: he sente one of his prynces to take him alyue, and to brynge him vnto him. So he wente and slewe Demetrius hoost, toke himselfe, brought him to Arsaces, which kepte him in warde. And all the londe of Iuda was in rest, so longe as Symon lyued: for he sought the wealth of his people, threfore were they glad to haue him for their ruler, and to do him worship allwaye.

Symon wanne the cite of Ioppa also for an hauen towne, and made it an intrance in to the Iles of the see. He enlarged the borders of his people, and coquered them more londe:

He gathered vp many of their people that were presoners: he had the dominio of Gaza, Bethsura and the castell, which he clensed from fylthines, and there was no mā that resisted him: So that euer man tydled his grounde in peace, the londe of Iuda and the trees gaue their frute and encrease. The elders sat all in judgment, and toke their deuyce for the wealth of the londe: the yonge men put on worship and harnesse vpon them. He prouyded vyttayles for the cities, and made goodly stronge holdes of them: so that the fame of his worship was spoken of vnto the ende of y world. For he made peace thorow out the londe, and Israel was full of myrth and ioye.

Euerly mā sat vnder his vyne a fyge trees and there was no man to fray them awaye. There was none in y londe to fight agaynst them, for then the kinges were ouer come. He helped those that were in aduersite amonge his people, he was diligent to se y lawe kepte: as for soch as were vngodly and wicked he toke thē awaye. He set vp y Sanctuary, a encreased the holy vessels of the temple.

When y Romaynes and Sparciens had gotten worde, y Ionathas was deyd, they were right sory. But when they herde y Symon his brother was made hye prest in his stede, and how he had wonne the londe agayne with the cities in it: they wrote vnto him in tables of laton, to renue the frendishipe vpon the of londe, which they had made afofe with Iudas y Ionathas his brethren. Which writings were red before the congregacion at Jerusalem.

And this is the copy of the lettres, that the Sparciens sent: The Senatours and citesyns of Sparta sende gretinge vnto Simó y greate prest with the elders, prestes, a y other people of the Iewes their brethren: Whē youre embassitours that were sente vnto oure people, certified ys of youre worships, honoure and prosperous wealth: we were glad of their kommenge, and haue written the earande which they spake before the councell of the people: namely, that Numenius the sonne of Antiochus, and Antipater the sonne of Iason the Iewes embassitours are come vnto vs, for to renue the olde frendishipe with ys. Vpon this the people consented, that the men shulde be honorably intreated, and that the copy of their earande shulde be written in the speciall bokes of the people, for a perpetuall memory vnto the Sparciens: yee and that we shulde sende a copy of the same vnto Symon the greate prest.

After this dyd Symon sende Numenius vnto Rome, with a golden shylde of a thousande pounde weight, to confirme the frendishipe with them: which when the Romaynes vnderstode, they saide: what thēkes shal we recompence agayne vnto Symon a his childeren? For he hath established his brethren, and ouer come the enemies of Israel. Wherfore they graunityed him to be fre. And all this wrote the Iewes in tables of laton, and naled it vnto the pilers vpon the mount Sion. The copy of the writinge is this:

The xviij. daye of y moneth Elul in the Clxixij. yeare in the thirde yeare of Symon the hye prest, in the greate congregacion of y prestes, rulers of the people, and elders of the countre at Asaramel, were these wordes openly declared:

For so much as there was moch warre in oure londe, theryfore Symon y sonne of Mata-thias (come of the children of Iareb) and his brethren, put them selues in parell, and resisted the enemies of their people: that their Sanctuary and lawe might be mainteyned, and dyd their people greate worshepe. Ionathas in like maner, after that he had gouerned his people and bene their hye preste: dyed, and lyeth buried byside his elders.

After that wolde their enemies haue trodden their holy thinges vnder fote, destroyed their londe, and ytterly waisted their Sanctuary. Then Symon withdoste them, and fought for his people, spent much of his owne money, weapaned the valeaunt men of his people, gaue them wages, made stronge y cities of Iuda, with Bethsura that lieth vppon the borders of Iewry, (where the ordinaunce of their enemies laye somtyme) & set Iewes there for to kepe it.

F He made fast Ioppa also, which lieth vppon the see, and Gaza that bordreth vpon Azotus, (where the enemies dwelt afore) and there set Iewes to kepe it: and what so euer was mete for the subduyng of the adversaries, that layed he therin. Now whē the people sawe the noble actes of Symon, and what worshepe he purposed to do for them, his godly behauoure, and faithfullnesse which he kepe vnto them, & how he sought by all waies y wealth of his people, because he dyd all this, therfore they chose him to be their prynce & hye preste. And in his tyme they prospered wel by him, so y the Heithē were take out of their londe: & they also which were in the cite of Danid at Ierusalem in the castell (where they wente out and defiled all thinges that were aboute the Sanctuary, and did greate harme vnto clenlynes) & Symon put men of the Iewes in it, for the defence of the londe and the cite, and set vp the walles of Ierusalem.

S And kynge Demetrius confirmed him in his hye presthode, made him his frende, and dyd him greate worshepe. For he herde that the Romayns called y Iewes their frendes, louers and brethren: how honorably they receaued Symons embrassitours: how y Iewes and prestes consented that he shulde be their prynce and hye preste perpetually (till God rayes vp the true prophet) and that he shulde be their captayne, to care for the Sanctuary, and to set officers vpnon the workes therof, ouer the londe, ouer the weapons, ouer the houses of defence, to make prouysion for the holy thynges, and to be obeyed of every man, and all the wrtynges of y londe to be made in his name: that he shulde be clothed in purple and golde, and that it shulde be laufull for none of the people nor prestes to breake eny of these thynges, to withstonde his wordes, ner to call eny congregacion in the londe without him: that he shulde be clothed in purple, and were a colar of golde: And yf there were eny which disobeyed or brake this ordinaunce, that he shulde be punyshed.

So all the people consented to alowe Sy- mon, and to do acordynge to these wordes. Symon also himself toke it vpnon him, and was contente to be the hye preste, the captayne and prynce of the Iewes and prestes, and to gouerne them all. And they com- maunded to make this writinge in tables of laton, and to fasten it vnto the compass of the Sanctuary in an open place: and to laye vp a copy of the same in the treasury, that Symon and his posterite might haue it.

The rv. Chapter.

MOROUER, kynge Antiochus the sonne of Demetrius sente letters from the Iles of the see, vnto Symon the hye preste and prynce of the Iewes, and to all the people, conteyninge these wordes: Antiochus the kyng senteth gretinge vnto Symon the hye preste and to the people of the Iewes. For so much as certayne wicked men haue gotten the kyngdome of our progenitours, I am purposed to chalenge the realme agayne, and to restore it to the olde estate.

Wherfore I haue gathered a greate boost and made shyppes of warre: that I maye go thowre the countre, and be auenged of them which have destroyed oure londe, and waysted many cities in my realme. And therfore now I make the fre also from all the tributes, wherof all kynges my progenitours haue discharged the, and from other customs (wher from they haue released the) what so euer they be: Yee I geue the leaue to smyte money of thine owne within thy londe. As for Ierusalem, I wil that it be holy and fre: and all the weapons and houses of defence which thou hast buylded and kepest in thine hondes, shal be thine. Where as any thyng is or shall be owynge vnto the kyng, I forgoe it the, from this time forth for euermore. And when we haue optayned oure kyngdome, we shal do the, thy people and the temple greate worshipe: so that youre honoure shal be knowne thow out ÿ whole worlde.
In the Clxixiiij. yeare wente Antiochus in to his fathers londe, and all the men of warre came together vnto him, so that fewe were left with Triphon. So the kyng Antiochus folowed vpon him, but he fled vnto Dora, which lieth by the see syde: for he sawe ÿ
there was myschefe comminge vnto him, and that his hoost had forsaken him. Then came Antiochus vnto Dora with an hundreth ÿ twentytye thousande men of armes vpon fote, and eight thousande horsmen. So he compassed the cite rounde aboute, and ÿ shippes came by the see. Thus they vexed the cite by londe and by water, in so moch that they suffered no man to goe in nor out.
*In the meane season came Numenius (ÿ they that had bene with him) from the cite of Rome, haunuye letters writte vnto the kynges and prouincies, wherin were conteyned
these worde: Lucius the Mayre of Rome
sendeth gretinge vnto Ptolomy the kyng.
The embassitours of the Iewes oure frédes beinge sent from Symon the hye prest and from the people of the Iewes, came vnto us, for to reuene the olde frendishpe and bonde of loue, and brought a shylde of golde weyenge
a thousande pounde, which we were contente to receaue of them. Wherefore we thought it good to wryte vnto the kynges ÿ prouincies, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynst the, their cities ner countreys nether to mayntene their enemies against them.
Yf there be eny wicked personnes therefore fled from their countre vnto you, deluyer them
vnto Symon the hye prest, ÿ he maye punysh them acordinge to their owne lawe.
And of euery lettre they sent a copy to Symon
the hye prest and to the people of the Iewes. So Antiochus the kyng brought his host vnto Dora the seconde tyne, to take it:
where he made diuerse ordainace of warre,
and kepte Triphon in, ÿ he shulde not come forth. Then Symon sent Antiochus two thousande chosen men to helpe him with golde, syluer and other plenteous geer: Neuerthelesse he wold not receaue them, but brake
all ÿ couenaunt which he made with Symon afore, ÿ withdrew himself fro him.
He sent Athenobius also a frende of his vnto Symon, for to reason with him, sayenge: Ye witholde fro me Ioppa and Gaza (with the castell that is at Ierusale) which are cities of my realme, whose borders ye haue destroyed, and done greate euell in the londe, hauynge the dominacio in many other places of my kyngdome. Wherefore deluyer now ÿ cities which ye haue takè, with ÿ tributes of ÿ places ÿ ye haue rule vpon without the borders of Iewrye: Or els geue me fyue hundreth talentes of syluer, yee and for the harme that ye haue done in the cities and for the tributes of the same, other fyue hundred talentes. ÿf
no, we shal come and fight agaynst you.
So Athenobius the kynges frende came to Ierusale, and when he sawe ÿ greate worshipe and honour of Symô in golde, syluer and so greate plenty of ornamentes: he marveiled, and tolde Symon as the kyng commaundad
him. Then answered Symon and saide vnto him: 5 As for vs, we hauete nether taken other mè londe, ner witholdè them, but only oure fathers heretage, which oure enemies had vrnighteously in possession a certayne tyne.
This heretage of oure fathers haue we chalenged in processe of tyne. And where as thou cóplaynest concernynge Ioppa and Gaza, ye dyd greate harme to oure people and in oure londe, yet wyll we geue an ÿ talentes for them.
Neuertheles Athenobius answered him not one worde, but turned agayne wrothfull vnto
ÿ kyng, and tolde him all these wordes, and the greate dignite of Symon with all that he had sene, and the kyng was very angrie. In the meane tyne fled Triphon by shippe vnto Orthosaida. Then the kyng made Cendebeus captyane of the see coost, ÿ
gae him an hoost of fote men and horsmen, cóaundinge him to remove ÿ hoost towarde Iewry, ÿ to buylde vp the cite of Cedron, to make vp ÿ portes, ÿ to warre agaynst ÿ people of the Iewes. As for the kyng he him selfe, he followed vpon Triphon. So Cendebeus came vnto Iamnia, ÿ beganne to vexe ÿ people, to treade downe Iewry, to take the people prisoners, to slaye the to buylde vp Cedron: where he set horsmē other men of warre, that they might come forth and go thorow the stretes of Iewry, like as the kyngye had commanded him.

The 1st. Chapter.

THEN came Ihon vp from Gaza, and tolde Symon his father, what Cendebeus had done amongst their people. Vpon this called Symon two of his eldest sonses, Judas x Ihon, and sayde vp to them: I and my brethren x my fathers house, have euere from oure youth vp vntil this daye, foughten agaynst the enemies of Israel, x God gane vs good fortune to deluyer Israel oft tymes. And now for so much as I am olde, be ye in steade of me x my brother, to go forth x fight for oure people, x the helpe of God be with you. So he chose xx. M. fightinge men of the countre, with horsmen also, which wente forth agaynst Cendebeus and rested at Modin.

In the mornynge they arose, x wete in to x playne felde: and beholde, a mightie greate hoost came agaynst the, both of fote men x horsmen. Now was there a water broke betwixt them, x Ihon remoued the hoost towards them. And when he sawe that the people was afraied to go ouer x water broke, he wente ouer first him self: and the men seyenge this, followed him.

Then Ihon set his horsmen x fote men in ordre, the one by the other, for their enemies horsmen were very many. But when they blewe vp the prestes trumpettes, Cendebeus fled with his hoost, wherof many were slayne, and the remauntau gat them to their stronge holde. Iudas also Ihos brother was wounded at x same tyme. And Ihon folowed still vp x enemies, till he came to Cedro which he byulde. The enemies fled also vp to the towres x were in x fieldes of Azotus, x those dyd Ihon burne vp. Thus there were slayne ij. M. men of them, x Ihon turned agayne peaceably in to Iewry.

And in the felde of Iericho was Ptolomy the sonne of Abobus made captayne: which because he had abundance of syluer x golde, (for he had maried the daughter of Symon the hye prest) waxed proude in his mynde, x thought to conquer the lode, ymageminge falsed agaynst Symō x his sonses, to destroye the. Now as Symon was goynge aboute x thorow the cities, x were in x coutre of Iewry, and carynge for them: he came downe to Iericho, with Mathathias x Judas his sonses, in the Clxxvij. yeare, in x xij. moneth called Sabat. Then Ptolomy x sonne of Abobus receaued them (but with disceate) in to a stronge house of his called Doch, which he had byulded, where he made them a bancket.

So when Symon x his sonses were mery x had drunken well, Ptolomy stode vp with his men (whο he had hyd there) x take their weapons, entred in to the bancket house, x slewe Symon with his two sonses, x certayne of his seruaites. Soch greate vnfaithfulnesse dyd Ptolomy in Israel, and recopensed euell for good. Then wrote this Ptolomy x same vp to kyngge Antiochus, requyringe him that he shulde sende him an hoost to helpe him: x so shulde he deluyer him the londe, with the cities x tributes of the same. He sent other men also vp to Gaza, for to take Ihon: x wrote vp to the captaynes to come to him, x he shulde geue them syluer, golde and rewardes. And to Jerusalem he sent other, to take it and the Sanctuary.

The ranne there one before, x tolde Ihon in Gaza, that his father x his brethren were slayne, and how that Ptolomy had sent to slaye him also. Whē Ihon herde this, he was sore abaszshed, and layed hodes of them that were come to destroye him, and slewe them: for he kneue, that they wente aboute to kyll him.

As for other thinges concernyng Ihon: of his warres, of his noble actēs (wherin he behaued him self manfully) of the buyldinge of walles which he made, and other of his dedes: They are written in the cronicles of his presthode, from the tyme forth x he was made hye prest after his father.

The first Chapter.

The brethren of the Jews which be at Jerusalem &c. the Lord be gracious vnto you, there those brethren of the Jews which are thorow Egypte: good fortune, health and peace.

God the Lord be gracious vnto you, and ye maye loue and serue him, yee and performe his will with an whole herte and of a wyllinge mynde: He opè ye hertes in his lawe and in his commandementes, sende you peace: heare you prayers, be at one with you, and never forsake you in tymes of trouble. This is heare oure prayer for you.

What tymes as Demetrius raigned, in the Clxix, yeare, we Jews wrote vnto you in trouble and violence that came vpon vs. In those yeares after that Jason departed out of the holy londe and kyngdome, they brent vp the porties, and shed innocent bloude. Then made we oure prayer vnto the Lord, and were herde: we offred, and lighted the candelis, setting forth cakes and bred. And now come ye vnto the feast of tabernacles in the moneth Casleu.

In the Clxxxvii, yeare the people was at Jerusalem and in Iewry, the councell and Iudas him self, sent this wholsome salutaci vnto Aristobulus kyng the Ptolomyes master, which came of the generation of the anoynted prestes: and to the Jews that were in Egypte: In so much as God hath deluyered vs from greate pares, we thanke him hylie, In that we resisted so mightie a kyngye. And ywhy? he brought men out of Persi by heapes, to fight agaynst vs and the holy cite. For as he was in Persi (namely, captayne with the greate hoost) he perished in the temple of Naneas, bynye diseauned thorow the deuyce of Naneas prestes. For as he was purposd to haue dwelt there, Antiochus his fredes came therit, to receaue much moneye for a dowry. So whè Naneas prestes had layed forth moneye, he entred with a small company in to the compasse of the temple, and so they shut the temple.

Now when Antiochus entred by openynge the preu inctrance of the temple, prestes stoned captayne to death, hewed the in peces that were with him, smote of their heads, and threw them out. In all things God be praysed, which hath deluyered the wicked in to oure hondes.

Where as we now are purposed to kepe the purificacion of the temple vpon the xxv. daye of the moneth Casleu, we thought necessary to certifie you therof: that ye also might kepe the tabernacles feast daye, the daye of the fyre, which was geuen vs when Nehemias offered, after that he had set vp a temple the aulter. For what tymes as oure fathers were led awaye vnto Persi, prestes (which then sought the honoure of God) toke fyre priuely from the aulter, hyd it in a valley, where as was a depe drye pyt: therin they keeped it, because the place was ymknowne to euery man. Now after many yeares when it pleased God, Nehemias shulde be sent from the kynge of Persia: he sent the children of those prestes (which had hyd the fyre) to seke it. And as they tolde vs, they founde no fyre, but thicke water.

The commaunded he them to drawe it vp, to brynge it him, offerynge withall. Now when sacrifices were layed on ordred, the prest Nehemias commaunded to sprenkle them the wod with the water. Whè this was done, the tymes come Sonne shone, which afore was hyd in the cloudes: there was a greate fyre kyndled, In so much euery man manured. Now all the prestes prayed, while the sacrifice was a makynge. Jonathas prayed first, and the other gaue answere.

And Nehemias prayer was after this maner: O Lord God maker of all things, thou fearfull stronge, thou righteous mercifull, thou art onely a gracious kyngye, onely lyberall, onely just, Allmightie and everlastinge, thou dost Israel from all trouble, thou hast chosen the fathers abhorred, the Heithys knowe se, how thou art oure God: Punyshe them oppressed, and proudly put vs to dishonoure. Set thy people at aygne in thy holy place, like as Moses hath spokè.

a Deut. 30. b. b Leui. 23. f. c Leuit. 6. a. 10. a. 16. c. d Deu. 30. a.
And the prestes songe Psalms of thanksgivinge, so stode as the sacrifice endured. Now when the sacrifice was brent, Nehemias commanded the greate stones to be sprented with the residue of the water. Which when it was done, there was kyndled a flamme of the also: but it was consumed thorow the light, by shyned from the aulter. So whē this matter was knowne, it was tolde the kynge of Persia, that in the place where the prestes (which were led awaye) had hyd fyre, there appeared water in stede of fyre, that Nehemias his company had purified the sacrifices withall. Then the kynge considerynge matter diligently, made him a temple, to prove the thinges done. And whē he founde it so in dede, he gau the prestes many giftes dyuerse rewardes: yee he toke them with his owne hōde, he gau the. And Nehemias called the same place Nephthar, which is as much to saye as a clensynge: but many men call it Nephthar.

The iij. Chapter.

IT is founde also in the wringings of Ieremy the prophet, y he commanded them which were caried awaye, to take fyre, as it is sayde afore. He commanded them also, y they shulde not forget the lawe commandements of the LORDE, y they shulde not errre in their myndes, whē they se ymages of syluer golde with their ornamentes. These such other thinges commanded he them, heejected them, that they shulde not lett the lawe of God go out of their hertes. It is wrytten also, how the prophet (at commandement of God) charged them, to take the tabernacle the arke with them: he wente forth vnto the mountaine, where Moses clymmed vp, saw the heretage of God. And when Ieremy came there, he founde an ouene cave, wherein he layed the tabernacle, arke the aulter of incense, so stopped the hole. There came certayne men together also folowinge him, to mare the place, but they coude not fynde it. Which when Ieremy perceaved, he reprowed then, sayenge: As for that place, it shalve vknowne, vntil y tyme that God gather his people togethher againe, then shal God shewe them these things, the majesty of the LORDE shall appeare, the cloude also, like as it was shewed vnto Moses: like as when Salomon desyred the place might be sanctified, it was shewed him.

For he byenge a wyse man, handled honyerably and wysely: offerynge vnto God in th halowinge of the temple, when it was fyndshed. And like as when Moses prayed vnto the LORDE, the fyre came downe from heauen, consumed the burntofferinge: Euen so prayed Salomon also, the fyre came downe from heauen, consumed the burntofferinge. And Moses sayde: because the synofferynge was not eaten, therfore it is consumed. In like maner Salomon kepte the dedicacion (or halowynge) eight daies.

In Annotacions wrytynges of Ieremy, were these thinges put also: he made a lybrary, how he gathered out of all countrees the bokes of the prophets, of Daud, the epistes of the kynes, and of the presents. Euen so Iudas also, looke what he lerned by experience of warre, such thinges as hath happened vnto vs, he gathered the all together, so we haue them by vs. Yf ye now desyre to haue the same, sende some body to fetch them vnto you. Where as we the are aboute to celebrate the purificacion, we haue written vnto you. Therfore ye shall do well, yf ye kepe the same daies. We hope also, that the God (which delueryed his people, gaue them all the heretage, kyngdome, presthode the Sanctuary he promised them in the lawe) shal shortly haue mercy vpo vs, gather vs together from under the heaué in to his holy place: for he hath saued vs fro greate parels, hath clensed the place.

As concernyng Iudas Machabeus his brethren, the purificacione of the greate temple, the dedicacion of the aulter, yeer of the warres the comainaring noble Antiochus and Eu-tator his sonne, of the shyninges he came downe from heauen vpon those, which manfully defended the Iewes. (For though they were but fewe, yet defended they the whole londe, drove awaye enemies host, recovered agayne the temple, was spoken of thorow out all the worlde, delueryed the cite, doyng their best the lawe of the LORDE which was put downe, might with all tranquilithe be restored agayne vnto the LORDE, y was so mercifull vnto the. As touchinge Iason also of Cyren, we haue vndertakè copiously to bryngge in to one boke, the things y were coprehended of him in ryue. For we cossideringe the multitude of the bokes, and how harde it shulde be for them y wolde medle with stories and actes (and that because of so dyuerse matters) haue vnder taken so to com-prehende the stories: that soch as are disposed to reade, might haue pleasure and pastyme therin: and that they which are diligent in soch things, might the better thinke vpon them: yee and that who so euere red them, might haue profit therby.

Neuerthelesse we oure selues that haue medled with this matter for the shornynge of it, haue taken no small laboure, but greate diligence, watchynges and traualye. Like as they that make a feast, wolde fayne do other men pleasure: Euen so we also (for many mens sakes) are very wel contente to take the laboure, where as we maye shortly comprehede, the thynges that other men haue truly wrytten.

For he y buyldeth an house a new, must prouyde for many thynges to y whole buyl-dinge: but he that payneth it afterwardes, seketh but only what is comly, mete and convenient to garnysh it withall. Euen so do we also in like maner. And why? He that begynmeth to wryte a story for the first, must with his vnderstandinge gather the matter together, set his wordes in ordre, and dili-gently seke out every parte: But he that afterwardes wyl shorten it, vseth few wordes, and toucheth not the matter at the largesit. Let this be sufficient for a prologue, now wyl we begynne to shew the matter: for it is but a foolish thinge to make a longe prologue, and to be shorte in the story it self.

The iij. Chapter

What tyme as the holy cite was inha-bited in all peace and wealth, a when the lawes were yet very well kepte. (For so was it ordened by Onias the hye prest and other godly men, that were enemies to wick-ednesse:) It came thereto, that euens the kynges and *prynces the selues dyd the place greate worship, and garnyshed y temple with greate giftes: in so moch that Seleucus kyng of Asia of his owne rentes bare all the costes *belonginge to the seruycye of the offerynges. Then Symon of the trybe of Ben Iamin, a ruler of the temple, laboured to worke some myschefe in the cite: but the hye prest resisted him.

Neuerthelesse when he might not ouercome Onias, he gat him to ' Appolonius the sone of Thersa (which the was chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) and tolde him, y the treasury in Jerusalem was full of innumerable money, and how that the comons goodes (which belonged not vnto the offerynges) were excceedinge greate also: yee and how it were possible, that all these might come vnder the kynges power.

Now when Appollonius had shewed the kynges of the moneye, as it was tolde him: y kinge called for Heliodorus his stewarte, and sent him with a commandement, to bryngge him the sayde money. Immediatly Helio-dorus take his journey, but vnder a coloure, as though he wolde go thorow Celosyria and Phenices to vset the cities, but his purpose was to fulfill the kynges pleasure. So when he came to Jerusalem, and was louyngly receaued of the hye prest in to the cite: he tolde what was determed concernyng the moneye, and shewed the cause of his com-myng: he axed also, yf it were so in dede. Then the hye prest tolde him, that there was soch money layed vp for the vpholdinge of weddowes and fatherlesse childre, and how that a certayne of it belonged vnto Hyrcanus Tobias a noble man: and that of all the moneye (which that wicked Symon had bwarayed) there were iiiij. hundreth talents of syluer, and ij. hundreth of golde: yee g that it were vnpossible for those mens meaninge to be disceaued, that had layed vp their moneye in the place and temple (which is had in worshipe thorow the whole worlde) for the mayntenance and honoure of y same. Whervnto Heliodorus answered, y the kynghe had commaundcd him in eny wyse, to bryngge him the moneye.

So at the daye appoynted, Heliodorus entred in to the temple to ordre this matter. But there was no small feare thorow out the whole cite. The prestes fell downe before the aulters in their vestimentes, and called vnto heauen vpon him, which had made a lawe concernyng sute genen to kepe, that they shulde be safely preserued, for soch as comitte them vnto kepynge. Then who so had loked the hye prest in the face, it wolde hawe greued his herte: For his countenance and the chaunginge of his colour, declared the inwarde sorowe of his mynde. The mā was all in heynynesse, and his body in feare: wherby they that loked vpon him, might perceave the grege of his herte. The other people also came out of their houses by heapes vnto the comon prayer, because the place was like to come in to confucion. The women came together thorow the stretes, with hayric clothes aboute their brestes.

The virgins also that were kepte in, ranne to Onias, some to the walles, other some loked out at the wyndowes: yee they all helde vp their sondes towards heauen, & prayed. A miserable thynge was it, to loke vpon the comon people, the hye prest beynge in soch trouble. But they besonght Almighty God, that the goodes which were committed vnto the, might be kepte whole, for those that had deliuered them vnto their kepynge. Neuertheles the thynge that Heliodorus was determed to do, that perfourmed he in the same place, he him self personally beynge aboute the treasury with his men of warre. But the sprete of Almightie God shewed him self openly, so that all they which presumed to obeye Heliodorus, fell thorow his power of God in to a greate fearfulness & dred. For there apeare vnto them an horse, with a terrible man syttinge vpon him, deckte in goodly araye, and the horse smote at Heliodorus with his fore fete. Now he that sat vpon this horse, had harness of golde vpon him.

Morouer there apeare ij. fayre and beutifull yonge men in goodly araye, which stode by him, scourged him of both the sydes, & gau him many stripes without ceassinge. With that, fell Heliodorus sodenly vnto the grounde. So they toke him vp (beynge compassed aboute with greate darknesse) and bare him out vpō a beare. Thus he that came with so many runners and men of warre in to this sayde treasury, was borne out, where as no man might helpe him: and so the power of God was manifest and knowne. He laye still domme also by the power of God, destitute of all hope and life. And they prayed the LORDE, that he had shewed his power vpon his place and temple, which a little afore was full of feare & trouble: and that thorow the reuelacion of the Allmichtie LORDE it was fylled with joye and gladnesse. The certaine of Heliodorus fredes prayed Onias, that in all haist he wolde call vpon God, to graunte him his life, which was geuyng vp the goost. So the hye prest considered the matter, and lest the kyngye shulde suspecte that the Jewes had done Heliodorus some euell: he offerd an healthofferynge for him. Now whē the hye prest had opteyned his peticion, the same yonge mē in the same clothinge apeare, stode besyde Heliodorus, sayenge: Thanke Onias thine prest, for for his sake hath thine LORDE granted the thy life: therfore seyenge thine God hath scourged thine, gene him prayse thankes, and shewe every man his might power. And whē they had spoken these wordes, they apeared nomore. So Heliodorus offred vnto God, made greate vowes vnto him which had granted him his life, thaketh Onias, toke his hoost, vnto againe to the kinge. The testified he vnto euery mage, of greate workes of God, y he had sene with his eyes. And whē the kyngye axed Heliodorus who were mete to be sent yet once agayne to Jerusalem, he sayde: Yf thou hast eny enemy or aduersary vnto thy realme, sende him thither, thou shalt haue him punished, yf he escape with his life: for in his place (no doute) there is a speciall power of workinge of God. For he that dwellith in heauen, yvseth his defendeth his place: all come to do it harme, he punishe eth defender of the cite of his people: yee so feruent in the lawe of God. But when the malice of Symon increased so farre, thine thorow his frendes there were certayne manslaughters committted:
Onias considered the parell y might come thorow this strife, and how that Appollonius (namely the chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) was all set vpon tyranmy, and Symons malice increased the same: He gat him to the kynde, not as an accuser of the citesyns, but as one that by him self intended the comon wealth of the whole multitude.
For he saw it was not possible to lyue in peace, nether Synon to leaue of from his foolishnesse, excepte the kynde dyd lyke therto.

But after the death of Seleucus, when Antiochus (which is called the noble) toke
yth kyndome: Iason the brother of Onias laboured to be hye prest: For he came vnto
the kynde, and promised him thre hundred
lx. talentes of syluer, x of the other rētes xxxx. talentes. Besydes this he promised him yet an C. x L., yf he might haue y. scole of y.
children, and that he might call them of Jerusalem Antiochians. Which when the kynde had graunted, a he had gotten the superiorite: he begane immediately to drawe
his kismen to the custome of the Heithen, put downe the things, that the Iews had set vp of loue, by Ihon the father of Eupolemies (which was sent embassioture vpnto Rome, for to make the bondes of frendshiphe and loue.)
He put downe all the Lawes Lyberties of the Iews, and set vp wicked statutes. He durst make a fightinge scolde vnder y. castell, and set payre yonge men to lerne the maners
of whores and brodels.

This was now the begynnynge of the Heithenish scorne of cōurse, brought in thorow the vngracious and vnherde wickednesse of Iason (which shuld not be called a prest, but an vngodly personne.) In so moch, that the prestes were now nomore occupide aboute the seruyce of the aultar, but despysed
the temple, regarded not the offrynge: yee gane their diligēce to lerne to fight, to wistle, to leape, to daunc, x to put at y. stone: set nayng by y. honoure of y. fathers, but liked y. glory of the Grekes best of all: for the which they stroue perlosely, and were gredy to folowe their statutes, yee their lust was in all thynge to be like the, which aforo were their enemies destroyers. Howbeit to do wickedly agaynst y. lawe of God, shal not escape vnpunyshed: but of this we shall spake here after.

What tyme as the *Olympiades sportes were played at Tyrus (the kynde him selfe beinge presente) this vngracious Iason sent wicked men, bearinge from them of Jerusalem (which now were called Antiochians) ij. C. drachmas of syluer for an offerynge to Hercules. These had they that caried them, deseryd vnder soch a fashio, as though they shulde not haue bene ofrffered, but bestowed to other vses. Neuertheles he that sent them, sent them to the intent that they shulde be offered vnto Hercules. But because of those that were present, they were geuen as to the makyng of shippes. And Appollonius the some of Nesteus was sent in to Egipte, because of the noble men of kynde Ptolomy Philometer. Now when Antiochus perceaued
yth. he was put out from medlinge in the realme, he sought his owne profitt, departed from thence, came to Ioppa, x then to Jerusalem: where he was honorably receaued of Iason the cite, x was brought in with torche light and with greate praye: and so he turned his hoost vnto Phenices.

After ij. yeare Iason sent Menelaus (the tore sayde Symons brother) to beare the money vnto y. kynde, x to bringe him answere of other necessary matters. But he (when he was pryazed of y. kynde for magnifiege of his power) turned y. hye presthode vnto him self, layenge vp iij. C. talētes of syluer for Iason. So whē he had gotten cōmamdementes from y. kynde, he came, hauninge nothinge becometh a prest, but bearinge y. stomach of crul rytauntē, x the wrath of a wyde brute beest. Then Iason (which had diisceuad his owne brother) sayng y. he him selfe was begyled also, was fayne to fely in to y. lode of
y. Ammonites, x Menelaus gat y. dominio.
But as for y. moneye y. he haue promisad vnto
the kynde, he dyd nothinge therin, when Sostratus the ruler of y. castell requirad it of him. (For Sostratus was the mans, y. gathered
y. customes) wherofe they were both called before the kynde. Thus was Menelaus put out of y. presthode, x Lysimachus his brother came in his steade. Sostratus also was made lorde of the Cyprians.

It happenad in y. meane season, y. y. Tharsians x Malliocians made insurrecio, because

* These were kepte every fift yeare.
they were guen for a present vnto kynge Antiochus conuicybe. Then came y kinge in all y haist, to still them agayne and to pacifie the matter, leauyng Andronicus there to be his debye, as one mete therefore. Now Menelaus supposinge that he had gotten a right convenient tyne, stole certayne vessels of golde out of the temple, and gane thè to Andronicus for a present: and some he solde at Tyrus and in the cities therby.

Which when Onias knewe of a suertye, he reprooued hym: but he kepte him in a sainctuary besyde Daphnis, that lyeth by Antioche. Wherfore Menelaus gat hym to Andronicus, and prayed hym that he wolde slaye Onias. So when he came to Onias, he counseled hym curtaly to come out of the sainctuary, geuyng hym his hone with an ooth (how be it he suspecte hym) and thè he slew Onias, without eyg rearde of rightuousnesse. For the which cause not only the Iewes, but other nacions also toke indignacion, and were displesed for the vnrighetous death of so godly a man.

And when the kynge was come agayne from Cilicia, the Iewes and certayne of the Greces wente vnto hym, complayninge for the vnrighetous death of Onias. Yee Antiochus himself also was sory in his mynde for Onias, so y it pitied hym, and he wepte, remembreng his sobernesse and manerly behauoure. Wherfore he was so kyndled in his mynde, y he commaunded Andronicus to be striped out of his purple clotheinge, æ so to be led thorow out all the cite, yee and æ vngracious man to be slayne in æ same place, where he committed his wickednes vpyn Onias. Thus æ LORDE rewarded hym his punyshment, as he had deseryed. Now when Lysimachus had done many wicked dedes in æ temple thorow the councell of Menelaus, and the voyage came abrode: the multitude gathered thè together agaynst Lysimachus, for he had carried out now moch golde.

So when the people arose and were fylde of displeasure, Lysimachus armed iij. M. vntirithes to defende him: a certayne tyraunte beyng their captayn, which was growen both in age æ woodnesse. But when the people vnderstode the purpose of Lysimachus, some gat stones, some good strong clubbes, æ some cast asshes vpyn Lysimachus. Thus there were many of the wounded, some beyng slayne, æ all the other chaced awaye. But as for æ wicked churchrobber himself, they kylded him besyde the treasury. Of these matters therfore there was kepte a courte agaynst Menelaus.

Now when æ kinge came to Tyrus, they made a coplaynte vnto hym of Menelaus, concerninge this busynesse, æ æ embassitours were thre. But Menelaus went æ promised Ptolomy to geue hym moche money, æ he wolde persuade the kynge. So Ptolomy waete to the kynge in to a courte (where as he was set to coole him) æ brought hym out of æ mynde. In so moch æ he discharged Menelaus from æ accusacions, æ not withstandinge was cause of all myscheve: and those poore men (which æ they had tolde their cause, yee before the Scythians, they shulde have ben judged innocent) thè he condenced to death. Thus were they soone punyshed, which folowed vpæ æ matter for æ cite, for æ people, æ æ holy vessell. Wherfore they of Tyrus toke indignacion, æ buried thè honorably. And so thorow æ covetousnesse of them that were in power, Menelaus remayned still in authoritie, increasinge in malyce, to the hurte of the citesyns.

The v. Chapter.

At æ same tyme Antiochus made hym æ ready to go againe in to Egipte. Thè were there sene at Jerusalem (xl. dayes lõge) horsmen runninge to and fro in the ayre, which had rayment of golde, æ speares. There were sene also whole hoostes of mè weaped, æ horses runnynge in an ordre, how they came together, how they helde forth their shildes, how æ harnessed men drew out their speardes, æ shot their darte. The shyne of æ golde weapes was sene, æ of all maner of armure. Wherfore every ma prayed, æ those tokens might turne to good. Now whè there was gone forth a false rumoure, as though Antiochus had bene deed: Jason toke a M. mè, æ came sodely vpæ æ cite. The citesyns râne vpnto æ walles, æ last was æ cite taken, and Menelans fled in to the castell.

As for Jason, he spared not his owne citesyns in the slaughter, neither considered he what greate euell it were, to destroy æ prosperite of his owne kynsmen: but dyd as one that had gotten the victory of his enemies, and not of his frendes. For all this gatt he not the superiorite, but at the last receaued confucion for his malicie, and fled agayne like a vagabonde in to the londe of the Ammonites. Fynally (for a warde of his wickednesse) he was accused before Aretha the kyng of the Arabians: In so much that he was sayne to fle from cite to cite, beyng despyed of euery man as a forsaker of the lawes, and an abominable persone. And at last (as an open enemy of his owne naturall countre and of the citasyns,) he was dryuen in to Egipte.

Thus he afore put many out of their owne natuye londe, perished from home him self. He wente to Lacedemon, thinkinge there to haue gotten succoure by reason of kynred. And he that afore had casten many one out vnburied, was throwen out himself, no man mounnyng for him, ner puttinge him in his graue: so that he nether enjoyed buriall of a straunguer, nether was he par	aker of his fathers sepulcre.

Now when this was done the kynge suspecte, the Iewes wolde haue fallen from hym: wherfore he came in a great displeasure out of Egipte, to take the cite by violence. He comaunderd his men of warre also, that they shulde kyll all that were not spare, but slaye downe soch as with stode them, or clymmed vp vpov they houses. Thus was there a great slaughter of yonge men, olde men, women, children and virgins. In ij. dayes were there slayne lxxx. M. foutry thousande put in preson, no lesse solde. Yet was he not content with this, but durst go in to the most hote temple (Menelaus that traytoure to cf. lawes to his owne naturall countre, beyng his gyde) with his wicked hones toke holy vessell, which other kynges cities had genen thither for garnishinge honoure of place: the toke he in his hodes unworthy, defyled them.

So mad was Antiochus, that he considered not, how that God was a little wroth for the synnes of them that dwelt in the cite, for the which soch confucion came vpov that place. And why? if it had not happened them to have bene lapped in many synnes, this Antiochus (as soone as he had come) had sodenly bene punished, and shot out for his presumpció: like as Heliodorus was, whom Seleucus the kyngge sente to robb ey treasury. Neuertheles God hath not chosen the people for the places sake, but the place for the peoples sake: and therfore is the place become partaker of the peoples trouble, but afterward shall it enjoye the wealth of them. And like as it is now forsaken in the wrath of allmighty God, so when the greate God is reconclyed, it shal be set vp in hye worship agayne.

So when Antiochus had taken a M. and viij. C. talentes out of the temple, he got him to Antioche in all the haist, thinkinge in his pryde, that he might make me sale vpov the drye londe, and to go vpov ey see, soch an hye mynde had he. He lefte debites there to veex the people: At Jerusalem left he Philippe a Phrygian, in maners more cruel the himself set him there: At Garisim he left Andronicus Menelaus, which were more greuous to the citasyns then other. Now as he was thus set in malyce against ey Iewes, he sent Appollonius an hated prynces, with xxij. M. comaunderg him to slaye all those of were of perfecte age, and to sell the womé, maydes children. When he came now to Jerusalem, he fained peace, kep he still vntil Sabbath daye. And then he comaunderd his men to take them to their weapens (for ey Iewes kep holy daye) and so he slewe all them were gone forth to the open playe, runnyng here and there thorow the cite with his men wapened, and murthered a great nombre. But Iudas Machabeus which was the tenth, fled in to the wylderness, led his life there with his company amonge the wyld beestes and vpov the mountaynes: dwelinge there and eatinge grasse, lest they shulde be partakers of the fylthynesse.

The vi. Chapter.

NOT longe after this, sent the kyngge a messaunger of Antioche, to compell ey Iewes to atte ordinaunces of ey fathers the lawe of God, to defyle the temple was at Jerusalem, to call it the teple of Jupiter Olimpious: ey they shulde be in Gazarim, as those which dwell at place of Jupiter the harboreus. This wicked sediciió ey vngodly was heuy vpov all ey people: For ey temple was full of voluptuousnes babbage bollinge of ey Heithi, of ribaudes harlottes together. The womé wente in to ey holy place, bare the boke of the Machabees.

Chap. vi.

In that was not laufull. The altar also was full of vnaulfull thinges, which ye lawe forbiddeth to laye vppe it. The Sabbathes were not kepte, the other solempne feastes of ye londe were not regarded. To be plaine, there durst no man be a knowne that he was a Jewe.

In the daye of the kynges byrth they were compelled perforce to offere: a when ye feast of Bacchus was kepte, they were csotrayned to weere garlandes of yven, and so to go aboute for the honoure of Bacchus.

Morouer throw the councell of Ptolomy, there wente out a commaundement in ye nexte cities of the Heithen, they should intreate the Jewes in like maner: namely, to copen the for to do sacrifice after ye lawes of Gentiles: and who so wolde not, to put them to death. A piteous thing was it to se. There were ij. women accused to haue circuemicid their sones, whom when they had led rounde aboute the cite (the babes hangleinge at their brestes) they cast them downe headlinges over the walles. Some ye were crepte in to dennes and had kepte the Sabbath, were accused vnto Philippe, and brest in the lyre: because that for the fear of God they kepte the commaundement so stiffly, and wolde not defende them selues.

Now I beseke all those which reade this boke, that they refuse it not for these falles of aduersite: iudge the thinges (ye are happened) for no destrucion, but for a chastenynge of oure people. And why? Whene God suffreth not synners longe to folowe their owne mynde, but shortly punysheth them, it is a toké of his greate louyng kyndnes. For this grace haue we of God more then other people, ye he suffreth not vs longe to synne vnpunyshe as other naciones, that when the daye of judgment commeth, he maye punysh thē in the fulnes of their synnes. Ye we synue, he correkesth vs, but he neuer withdraweth his mercy frō vs: ye though he punysh with aduersite, yeth doth he neuer forsake his people. But let this that we haue spokē now with fewe wordes, be for a warninge exortaciō of ye Heithē. Now wil we come to the declareinge of the matter. Eleazar one of ye principall scribes, an abed man a of a wel-fauored couteinance, was csotrainde to gape with opē mouth a to cate swynes flesh. But be desyringe rather to dye gloriously thē to live with shame, offred himself willingly to ye martirdome. Now whē he saue ye he must nedes go to it, he toke it paciētly: for he was at a poynte with himself, ye he wolde consente to no vnaulfull thyng for any pleasure of life. They ye stode by beyng moued with pyte (but not a right) for ye olde frendshipe of the man, toke him asyde priuely, and prayed him ye he wolde let soch flesh be brought him as were laulfull to caye, ye thē to make a couteinance as though he had eaten of ye flesh of ye sacrifice like as the kynges commaundede, for so he might be deluyere from death: ye so for the olde frendshipe of ye man, they shewed him this kindnes. But he beganne to consider his discrete and honorable age, his noble and worshipfull stocke, and how ye frō his youth vp he had bene of an honest and good concueracon, yee ye how constantly he had kepte ye ordinances and lawes commaundede by God, wherfore he gaue them this answere, and sayde:

Yet had I rather first be layed in my graue. For it becommeth not myne age (sayde he) in eny wyse to dyssemble, wherby many yonge persons might thinke, that Eleazar being lxxx. yere olde and ten, were now gone to a straunge life: and so thorow myne ypoerisy (for a litel lyne of a transitory life) they might be diseauned: by this means also shulde I defyle myne age, ye make it abhominable. For though I were now deluyere from the tormentes of men, yet shulde I not escape the honde of allmightie God, nether alyue ner deed. Wherfore I wil dye manfully, ye do as it becommeth myne age: Wherby I maie peraduenture leve an example of stedfastnesse for soch as be yonge, ye I with a ready mynde ye manfully dye an honest death, for the most worthy and holy lawes.

When he had sayde these wordes, immediatly he was drawn to the tornēte. Now they that led him and were mynde a little afore, beganne to take displeasure, because of the wordes ye he sayde: for they thought he had spokē them of an hye mynde. But whē he was in his martirdome, he mournde and sayde: Thou (O LORDE) which hast the holy knowlege, knowest openly: that where as I might be deluyere frō death, I suffre these sore paynes of my body: but in my mynde I
I am well contente to suffer them, because I fear the. Thus this man dyed, leauynge ë memoriall of his death for an example, not only vnto yonge men, but vnto all ë people, to be stedfast and manly.

The viij. Chapter.

It happened also that there were viij. brethren (with their mother) taken, ë compelled by the kyng e agaynst the lawe, to eate swynes flesh: namelye with scourges and lethren whippes. And one of them which was ë chefe, sayde: What sekest thou, and what requyrest thou of vs? As for vs, we are ready rather to suffer death, than to offende the lawes of God and the fathers. Then was the kyng e angrie, and had heate cauldrons and brasen pottes. Which when they were made hote, immediatly he commandwed ë tonge of him that spake first, to be cut out, to pull the skyynne ouer his heade, to payre of the edges of his handes and fete: yee and that in the sight of his mother and the other of his brethren. Now when he was cleane marred, he commandwed a fyre to be made, ë so (whyle there was eny breath in him) to be fryed in the caudron. In the which when he had bene longe payned, the other brethren with their mother exeorted him to dye manfully, sayenge: The LORDE God shall regarde the treuthe, and comforte vs, like as Moses testifieth and declareth in his ë songe, sayenge: and he wyl haue compassion on his seruauntes.

So whë the first was deede after this maner, they brought the seconde to haue him in derision, pullyne the skyynne with the hayre ouer his heade, and axed hym, if he wolde eate swynes flesh, or he were payned in ë other membres also thorow out his body. But he answered boldly, and sayde: I will not do it. And so was he tormented like as ë first. And whë he was euë at ë geuynge vp of ë goost, he sayde: Thou most vngracious personne puttest vs now to death, but the kyng e of ë worlde shall rayse vs vp (whiche dye for his lawes) in ë resurreccion of euerlastinge life.

After hym, was the thirde had in derision: and when he was requyred, he put out his tonge, and that right soone, holdinge forth his hondes manfully, and spake with a stedfast faith: These haue I of heauë, but now for the lawe of God I despise them: for my trust is, that I shall receaue them of him agayne. In so moch that the kyng e and they which were with him, marueled at the yonge mans boldnesse, that he nothinge regarded the paynes.

Now when he was deed also, they vexed the fourth with tormentes in like maner. So when he was now at his death, he sayde: It is better that we beynge put to death of me, haue oure hope and trust in God, for he shal rayse vs vp agayne. ë As for the, thou shal haue no resurreccio to life.

And when they had spoken to the fift, they tormëthed hym. Then lokèd he vp to ë kinge, ë sayde: Thou hast power amõge me (for thou art a mortall man also thy self) to do what thou wilt, but thinke not, ë God hath forsaken oure generation. Abye the, tary styll a while, ë thou shalt se the greate power of God, how he wil punysh the ë thy sede.

After him they brought the sixte, which beynge at the poynte of death, sayde: Be not diseauned (o kyng e) for this we suffer for oure owne sakes, because we haue offended oure God, ë therfore marvelous thinges are shewed vpone vs. But thinke not thou (which takest in honde to stryue agaynst God) that thou shalt escape vnpunyshed.

This excellent mother (worthy to be well reported of, and had in remembrance) sawe her seuen sones dye in one daye, and suffred it paciëtly, because of the hope that she had in God: Yee she exeorted euery one of them in especiall, and that boldly and stedfastly, with parfite wyszdome, wakyng keppe they thought with a manly stomacke, and sayde vnto them: I can not tell how ye came in my wombe, for I neither knew you breth ner soule, no ner life. It is not I ë ioyned ë mëbers of youre bodies together, but ë maker of ë worlde, which fashioned ë byrh of më, ë begane all thinges. Euen he also of his owne mercy shall geue you breath and life agayne, like as ye now regarde not youre owne selues for his lawes sake.

Now thought Antiochus that she had despysed hym, therafore he let her go with hir reproues, and beganne to exorte the yongest sonne (which yet was left) not only with wordes

Leit. 11. a. Deut. 32. c. Ioh. 5. c.
but swore vnto him with an ooth, y he shulde make him a rich wchly man (yf he wolde forsake y lawes of his fathers) yec and y he shulde geue him, what so euer were necessary for him. But whc the yonge man wolde not be moued, for all these thinges, he called his mother, a councelde hir to saue hir sonnes life. And when he had exorted her with many wordes, she promised him, that she shulde speake vnto hir sonne. So she turned her vnto him (laughtinge y cruelly tyraunte to scorn) a spake with a bolde voyce: O my sonne, haue pite vpon me, y bare y ix. monethes in my wombe, that gau the sucke, norished the and brought the vp vnto this age. I besoke the (my sonne) loke vpon heauen and earth and all that is therin, and considere, that God made them and mans generacion of naught: so shalt thou not feare this hangman, but sufere death stedfastly, like as thy brethren have done: that I maye receaue the agayne in the same mercy with thy brethren.

Whyle she was yet speakinge these worde, the yonge man sayde: Whom loke ye for? Wherfore do ye tary? I wil not obeye the kynges commandement, but the lawe that God gaue vs by Moses. As for the that ymageynest all myschefe agaynst the Iewes, thou shalt not escape the honde of God: for we sufere these thinges, because of oure synnes.

And though God be angrie vs a litle whyle (for oure chasteninge a reformacion,) yet shal he be at one agayne with his seruantes. But thou. (O shame full a most abominable personne.) Pryde not thy self thorowayne hope, in beyng so malicious vpon y seruantes of God: for thou hast not yet escaped the iudgment of the God, which is all mightie, a seith all thinges. My brethren y haue suffered a litle payne, are now vnder the coenaunt of euerylasting life: but thorow the iudgment of God, thou shalt be punished righteously for thy pryde.

As for me (like as my brethren haue done) I offre my soule a my body for y lawes of oure fathers, callinge vpon God, y he will soone be mercifull vnto oure people: yee a with payne a punishement to make the graunte, a y he only is God. In me now a in my brethren y wrath of allmightie God is at an ende, which righteously is fallu vpon all oure people. Then y kyng beyng kyndled in anger, was more cruell vpon hym then vpon all y other, a toke indignacio, y he was so lightly regarded. So this kyng ma dyed vndefiled, a put his trust stil in y LORDE. Last of all after y sonnes, was y mother put to death also. Let this now be ynow spoken, concernynge y offringes, a extreme cruellnesse.

HEN Iudas Machabeus and they y were with him, wete pruely in to y townes, called their kinsfolkes a frendes together, toke vnto them all soch as contynued yet in the faith and lawe of y Iewes, and brought forth yj. M. men. So they called vpon the LORDE, y he wolde haue an eye vnto his people, which was trodd downe of euery ma: to be gracious vnto y tycle, y was defyled of the vngodly: to haue compassion vpon y destruction of the cite, (which was shortly like to be laied waist) to heare y voyce of y bloude y cried vnto him: to remembre y most vnrighteous deaths of yonge innocent children, the blasphemies also done vnto his name, a to punysh the. Now whc Machabeus had gathered this multitude together, he was to mightie for the Heithen (for y wrath of y LORDE was turned in to mercy) he fell vpon the townes and cities vnawares, brent them, toke the most comodious places, a slewe many of the enemies. But specially he made soch chases by night, in so mocch that his manlynesse was spoken of by euery were.

So when Philippe sawe that the man increased by litle and litle, and that the matter prospered with him for the most parte: he wrote vnto Ptolomy (which was a captayne in Celsorxia a Phenices) to helpe him in y kynges busynes. Thc sent he Nicanor Patrocli (a speciall frende of his) in all y haist, a gaue him of y comon sorte of the Heithen no lesse than xx. M. harnessed men, to rote out y whole generacion of the Iewes, haunge to helpe him one Gorgias a man of warre, which in matters concernynge battayls had greate experience. Nicanor ordered also the tribute (which the Romaynes shulde haue had) to be geuen vnto the kyng, out of the captiuyte of the Iewes, namely, yj. M. talentes. And immediatly he sent to y cities of y see coost, requyrringe thē for to bye Iewes to be their seruauntes τ, bonde men, promysyng to sell them lxx. and ten for one talente: but he considered not the wrath of allmighty God, y, was to come vpon him.

C. When Iudas knewe of this, he tolde the Iewes y were with him, of Nicanors cómyngye. Now were there some of them fearefull, not trystinghe vnto the rightrounes of God and fled their waye. But the other y remayned, came together τ, besought the LORDE, to deluyer thē frō y wicked Nicanor, which had solde thē or euer he came nyne them: and though he wolde not do it for their sakes, yet for the couenaunt that he made with their fathers, τ because they called vpon his holy τ, glorious name. And so Machabeus called his men together, namely aboute vi. M. exortinge them not to agree vnto their enemies, nether to be afrayed for π multitude of their adversaries cómyngye agaynst them vnrighteously: but to fight manly, consideringe y reprofe that they had done to the holy place without cause, how they had despyed and oppressed the cite, yee and destroyed y, lawes of the fathers. For they (sayde he) trust in their weapons and boldnesse, but oure confidence is in the allmighty LORDE, which in the twiinkelinge of an eye maye both destroye them that come agaynst vs, and all the worlde.

D. He exorted them also to cally to remembrance the helpe, that God shewed vnto their fathers: "as whē there perished an C. τ, lxxv. M. of Sennacheribs people: So he set vpon euery copāny a captayne, one of his owne brethren: Simon, Ioseph and Ionathas: géynghe eche one xv. C. men. He caused Eszdras also to reade the holy boke vnto them, and to geue them a token of the helpe of God.

Then he himselfe beinge captayne in y, fore front of the battayll, buckled with Nicanor.

And God was there helpe, in so much that they slewe aboue ix. M. mē τ, compelled y, more parte of Nicanors hoost to fle, they were so wounded and feable. Thus they toke the money from those that came to bye thē, and folowed vpon them on euery syde. But whē the tyme came vpon them, they returned, for it was the Sabbath, and therfore they folowed nonmore vpon them. So they toke their weapons and spoyles τ, kepte the Sabbath, géynghe thankes vnto the LORDE, which had deluyered them that daye, and shewed them his mercy. After the Sabbath they distributed the spoyles to the sicke, τ to y, fatherlesse, and to wyddowes, and the residue had they them selues with theirs. Whē this was done, and they all had made a generall prayer: they besought the mercifull LORDE to be at one with his seruauntes.

Of those also that were with Timotheus and Bachides, which fought agaynst them, they slewe xx. M. wanne hye and stronge holds, and deuided moo spoyles: euery géynghe an equall porcion vnto y, sicke, to y, fatherlesse, to wyddowes τ, to aged persons. And when they had diligently gathered their weapēs together, they layed them all in convenient places, τ the remnaunt of y, spoyles brought they to Jerusalem. They slewe Philarches that wicked persone, which was with Timotheus, and had vexed many Iewes. And when they helde the thankesgéynghe at Jerusalem for the victory, they brent those that had set fyre on the portes of the temple: namely Calisthenes, which was flied in to an house: and so they gat a worthy reward for their wickednesse. As for that most vngracious Nicanor, which had brought a thousande marchaūtes, to bye the Iewes, he was thorow y, helpe of the LORDE brought downe, euyn of them whom he regarded not: in so much that he put of his glorious raymēt, fled by see, and came alone to Antioche with greate shame τ, dishonoure, which he gat thorow the destruccion of his hoost. Thus he y, promysed the Romaynes to paye thē their tribute, when he toke Jerusalem: beganne now to saye planely, that God was y, defender of the Iewes, τ therfore not possible to wounde them, because they folowed y, lawes which God had made.

The 4. Chapter.

The same tyme came Antiochus agayne, with "dishonoure out of Persis." For when he came to Persepolis, and undertooke to robbe the temple and to subdue the cite, the people ramm together and defended them selues, in so moch that he and his were favoure to fle with shame. And so after that flight, it happened, that Antiochus came agayne with dishonoure. But when he came to Egpathana, he gat knowlege what was happened vnto Nicanor \( \ast \) Timotheus. Now as he was auauncinge himself in his wrath, he thought he was able to avenge the injury that was done to them, vpon the Iewes: and therefore commaunded to make ready his charret, haisstinge on his journey without ceasinge: the iudgment of God prouokynge him, because he had spoké so proudly, that he wolde come to Jerusalem, and make it a graue of the Iewes. But the LORDE God of Israel,\( \ast \) that seith all things, smote him with an invisible plage, which no man coude heale.

For as soone as he had spoken these wordes, there came vpon him an horrible payne of his bowels, a sore grefe of the tharmes. And he was but right: for he had martiried other mens bowels with dyuers and straunge tormentes, how be it he wolde in no wyse ceasse from his malice. Yee he was yet the prouder, and more malicious agaynst the Iewes: But whyle he was commaundinge to make haist in the matter, it happened he fell downe violentely from the charret, so it brused his body, \( \ast \) dyd he gretame payne.

And so he that thought he might commaunde \( y \) floudes of the see (so proude was he beyonde the condicio of man) and to waye the hye mountaynes in a payre of scoales, was now brought downe to the grounde, caried vpon an horsezlytter, knowlgyng \( y \) manyfest power of God vpon him: so that \( y \) wicked body of his was full of wormes, which in his payne fell quyck out of his flesh: In so moch \( y \) his hoost was greued with the smell and stynecke of him. Thus he that a little afore thought he might reach to the starres of heauen, him might no man now abyde nor beare, for the vehemence of stynecke.

Therefore he beyngle brought from his greate pryde, begane for to come to \( y \) know-after me, whom I oft commended to many of you, when I was in the hyer kyngdomes, and haue wrytten vnto hym as it foloweth herafter.

Therefore I praye you and requyre you, to remembre the benefites that I haue done vnto you generally and in especciall. For I hope that he shall be of sober g louynge behauoure, and ye he folowe my deuycye, he shal be indifferent vnto you.

"Thus that murtherer and blasphemer of God was sore smyttē: and like as he had intreted other men, so he dyed a myserable death in a straungre countrē vpon a mountayne. And his body dyd Philippe (that wete with him) cary awaye: which fearynge the sonne of Antiochus, wente in to Egipte to Ptolomy Philemter.

The 7. Chapter.

MACHABEUS now g his company (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) wanne the temple and the cite agayne, destroyed the aulters and chapels that the Heithē had buylded thorow the strectes: clensed the temple, made another aulter of bricke stone, and after ij. yeares they offered sacrifices, set forth the incense, the lightes and shewe bred. When that was done, they fell downe flat vpon the grounde, and besought the LORDE, that they might come nomore in to soch trouble: but ye they synned eny more agaynst hym, he hym selfe to chasten them with mercy, and not to come in the hondes of those auluntes and blasphemous men.

Now vpon the same daye that y straungers poluted the temple, it happened that on the very same daye it was clensed agayne: namely, the xxij. daye of the monethe called Casleu. They kepte viij. dayes in gladnesse, like as in the feast of the tabernacles: remem-brynge that not lone afore, they helde the feast of y tabernacles vpon the mountaynes and in dennes like beastes. And to y same token they bare grene bowes, braunches and palmes before him that had greuen them good fortune to clense his place. They agreed also together, and made a statute, y every yeare those dayes shulde be solemnly kepte of all the people of the Iewes.

How Antiochus then (that was called the noble) dyed, it is sufficiently tolde. Now wil we speake of Nicanor the sonne of that wicked Antiochus, how it happened with him: and so with few words to comprehende the aduersite that chaummed in y warres.

When he had taken in the kyngdome, he made one Lysias (which had bene captayne of the hoost in Phenices and Syria) ruler ouer the matters of the realme. For Ptolomy that was called Macron, bynyng a ruler for the Iewes (and specially, to sty in judgment for soch wronge as was done vnto them) vndertooke to deale peacably with them. For the which cause he was accused of the frendes before Eupator: and when he was suspecete to be a traytoure (because he had left Cypers, that Philometor had committted vnto hym: and because he departed from noble Antiochus, that he was come vnto) he poysomed himself, and dyed.

Now when Gorgias was governoure of the same places, he toke straungers and vndertooke oft tymes to warre with y Iewes. Morouer the Idumeans that helde the strōge holdes, receaued those that were dryuen from Ierusalem, and toke in honde to warre also. But they that were with Machabeus, besought and prayed vnto the LORDE, that he wolde be their helper: and so they fell in to the stronge holdes of the Idumeans, 7 wanne many places by strength: Soch as came agaynst them they slew, and kylded no lesse (of all together) then twentye thousande. Neuerthelesse some (no lesse then nyne thousande) were fled in to two strange towres, haunyng all maner of ordin masse to withstande them.

Then Machabeus leauynge Symon, Iosephus, Zachaus and those that were with then, (which were very many) wente to besoge the, and to fight where most noede was. Now they that were with Symon bynyng led with coutesnusnesse, were intreted for money, thorow certyane of those that laye in the towers: toke lx. M. drachmas, 7 let some of them escape. But when it was tolde Machabeus what had happened, he called y captaynes of the people togethder, accusynge those persones, that they had solde the brethren for money, and let their enemies go. So he swele those traytours, 7 immediatly wente in honde with the ij. towers. And when they had ordred them selues manly with their weapons 7 hondes, they swele in y two castels moo the twctie thousande.

a Dan. 8. c. b 1 Mac. 4. c. c Exo. 20. d. d 1 Mac. 4. f. e 1 Mac. 5. a.
Now Timotheus whom the leues had overcome afore, gathered a multitude of straunge people, brought an host also of horsemen of the Asians, to wynne Iewry by strength. But when he drewe nye Machabeus and they that were with him fell to their prayer, sprenced aszshes vpon their heads, beyng gyrded with hayrie cloth aboute their loines, fel downe before LORDE that he wolde be mercifull to them, but an enemie vnto their enemies, and to take parte agaynst their aduersaries, accordinge as it is promised in the lawe. So after the prayer, they wente on further from the cite: and when they came nye the enemies, they prepared them selves agaynst them.

And by tymes in the mornynge at breake of the daye, both the hoostes buckled together. The one parte had the LORDE for their refuge, which is the geyer of prosperite, strength and victory. The other had a maly stomach, which is a captayne of warre.

The battayl now beynge greate, there appeared vnto the enemies from heauen v. men, vpon horszbacck with byrdels of golde, ledyng the leues, and two of them haunyng Machabeus betwixte them, kepe him safe on every syde with their weapēs, but shot dartes and lighteninges vpon the enemies, where thorow they were confounded with blyndnesse and so sore afrayed, that they fell downe. There were slayne of fote men twenty thousande and fynie hundred, and sise hundreth horsmen. As for Timotheus him self, he fled vnto Gazar a very stronge holde, wherein Cereas was captayne. But Machabeus and his company layed seige to it cherfully iii. dayes. Now they that were within, trustinge to the strength of the place, cursed and banned excedingly, and made greate crakynge with wicked wordes. Nenerthelesse vpon the fift daye in the mornynge, xx. yonge men of Machabeus company, beyng set on fyre in their mynydes because of the blasphemy: came manfully vnto the wall, and with bolde stomakes they and their other companie chymned vpon the towres, undertakynge to set fyre vpon the portes, to burne those blasphemyous personnes quycke. Two dayes were they destoyenge the castell, which when they founde Timotheus (that was crepte in to a corner) they kylléd him, and slewe Cereas his brother in like maner with Apolloniphans. When this was done, they sete Psalmses, with prayses and thankesgeuynges vnto the LORDE, which had done so greate things for Israel, geuen them the victory.

The ri. Chapter.

NOT longe after this, Lysias the kynges stawe and a kyneman of his, (which had the gouernance of his matters,) took sore displeasure for the thinges that had happened: and when he had gathered lixxx. M. men of fote with all the hoost of the horsmen, he came agaynst the leues, thinkynge to wynne the cite, to make it an habitacion for the Heithen, and the temple wolde he haue to be an house of lucre, like as the other goddes houses of the Heithē are, to sell y prestes office euery yeare: Not considering the power of God, but was wyde in his mynde, trustinge in multitude of fote me, in thousandes of horsmen, and in his lixxx. Elephants.

So he came in to Iewry then wente to Bethsura (a castell of defence lyenge in a narrow place, v. furlonges from Ierusale) and wanne it. Now when Machabeus and his company knew that the stronge holde were taken, they felled to their prayers with wepyng and teares before the LORDE: and all the people in like maner besought him, that he wolde sende a good angell to delyner Israel. Machabeus him self was the first that made him ready to the battayl, exortyng the other that were with him, to ioperde themselfes and to helpe their brethren. And when they were goyenge forth of Ierusale, together with a ready and wylllyng mynde, there apeare before the vpon horszbacck a mā in whyte clothinge with harnesse of golde, shakinge his speare. Then they prayes y LORDE all together, which had shewed them mercy, and were conforted in their mynydes: in so much that they were ready, not only to fight with men, but with y most cruell beastes, yee and to runne thorow walles of yron.

Thus they wente on wyllingly hauynge an helper from heauen, and the LORDE mercifull vnto them. They fell mightely vpon their enemies like lyons, brought downe xij. M. fote men, xvj. C. horsmen, put all y other to flight, many of them beyning wounded, and some gat awaye naked. Yee Lysias himself was fayne to ffe shamefully, and so to escape. Neuerthelesse the man was not without understandinge, but considered by himself that his power was mynished, and pondred how y Iewes beyning defended by the helpe of Almightie God, were not able to be ouercome: wherfore he sent them worde, and promised, that he wolde consente to all things which were reasonable, and to make the kynge their frde. To the which prayer of Lysias Machabeus agreed, sekyng in all things the commen wealth: and what so euer Machabeus wrote vnto Lysias cocernynge the Iewes, the kynge graunted it. For there were lettres writte vnto y Iewes from Lysias conteynynge these worde:

Lysias sendeth gretinge to the people of the Iewes. Ihon and Absalon which were sent from you, deluyed me wrytinges, and required me to fulfill the thinges conteynynge their earande. Therfore loke what might be graunted, I certifie y kynge therof: and what so euer was convenient, I agreed thereto. Yf ye now wyll be faithfull in the matters, I shal endeuer my self herafter also to do you good. As conteynynge other thinges by every article therof: I haue committed them to youre messauyngers, and to those whom I sent vnto you, to comon with you of the same, fare ye well. In the hundreth and xlviij. yeare, the xxiiiij. daye of the moneth Dioscorinthius.

Now the kynges lettre conteyned these wordes: Kyng Antiochus sendeth gretinge vnto his brother Lysias. *For so much as youre father is now deede, youre wyll is, that they which are in youre realme, lyue without eny insurreccion, and euer man to be diligent in his owne matters. We vnderstande also, that the Iewes wolde not consent to youre father, for to be brought vnto the custome of the Gentiles, but stiffly to kepe their owne statutes: for the which cause they require of vs also, to let them remayneste still by their owne lawes.

Wherefore oure minde is, that this people shalbe in rest: we haue concluded and determed also, to restore them their temple agayne: that they maye lyue acordinge to the vs of a custome of their forefathers. Thou shalt do vs a pleasure therfore, yf thou sende vnto them y great with them: that when they are certified ofoure mynde, they maye be of good chere, and loke to their owne wealth.

And this was the lettre, that the kynge wrote vnto the Iewes: Kyng Antiochus sendeth gretinge vnto the counsell and the other people of the Iewes. Yf ye fare well, we haue our desire: as for vs, we are in good health. Menelaus came and tolde vs, how y youre desire was to come downe to youre people, which are with vs.

Wherefore those that wyll come, we geue them fre liberte, vnto the xxx. daye of the moneth of April, that they maye vse y meates of the Iewes and their owne lawes, like as afore: and none of them by eny maner of wayes to haue harme, for thinges done in ignorance. Menelaus whom we haue sent vnto you, shal comon with you at large, fare ye well. In the Cxviij. yeare, the xv. daye of the moneth of April.

The Romaynes also sent a lettre, conteynynge these wordes: Quintus Mennius y Titus Manlius embassadours of the Romaynes, sende gretinge vnto the people of the Iewes. Loke what Lysias the kynges kynsman hath graunted you, we graunte you the same also. But as conteynynge the thinges which he referred vnto the kynge, sende some with speeke: and podre the matter diligently amonget youre selues, that we maye cast y best to youre profite, for we must departe now vnto Antioche. And therfore wyrie shortly agayne, that we maye knowe youre mynde. Fare well. In the hundreth xlviij. yeare, y xv. daye of the moneth of April.

* When these couenauntes were made, A Lysias wente vnto the kynge, and y Iewes tyld their grounde. But Timotheus, Appollonius the some of Gemei, Jerome and Demophon y prowde, Nicanor y captayne of Cypers, and they that laye in those places: wolde not let them lyue in rest and peace. They of Ioppa also dyd euen soch a shamefull dede: They prayed y Iewes that dwelt amouge them, to go with their wyues and children in to the shippes which they had prepared, dyd with them, as though they had ought no euell wyll. For so moch then as there was gone forth a general proclamation thorow y citle because of peace, they consented thereto, and suspecte nothinge: but when they were gone forth in to the depe, they drowned no lesse then ij. C. of them.

Whiche Iudas knew of this cruelte shewed vnto his people, he commanded those that were with him to make them ready, exorting them to call vpon God the righteous judge: wete forth agaynst those murthrers of his brethren, set fyre in y hauen by night, brent vp y shippes, and those that escaped from the fyre, he slewe with the swearde. And when he had done this, he departed as though he wolde come agaynse, and rote out all them of Ioppa. But when he had gott wordes that the Iammites were mynded to do in like maner vnto yfewes which dwelt amonge them, he came vpon the Iammites by night, and set fyre in the hauen with the shippes: so that the light of the fyre was sene at Jerusalem, vpon a ij. C. x l. furlonges.

Now when they were gone from thence ix. furlonges, in their iournye towards Timotheus: v. thousande men of fote and v. hundreth horsemen of the Arabians fought with him. So when the batell was earnest, and prospered with Iudas thorow the helpe of God: y residue of the Arabians beyng overcomen, besought Iudas to be at one with them, and promised to geue him certayne pastures, to do him good in other thinges. Iudas thyngynge that they shulde in dede be profitable concernyng many thynge, promised them peace: wherypon they shooke hondes, and so they departed to their tentes. Iudas wente also vnto a cite, which was very fast keppe with brydges, fensed rounde aboute with walles, y dyuerse kyndes of people dwellinge therinne, called Caspin.

They that were within, put soch trust in the strength of the walles, in their stoare of vytales: that they were the slacker in their doynges, cursinge and reuylinge Iudas with blasphemies, and speakyngse socwrdes as it becommeth not. But Machabeus callynge vpon the greate prynce of y worlde (which without any battayll rammes or ordinaunce of warre, dyd cast downe the walles of Iericho, in the tyme of Josue) fell manfully vpon the walles, toke the cite, and (thorowing the helpe of the LOyDE) made an excydinge greate slaughter: In so moch that a lake of ij. furlonges brode which laye therby, semed to flowe with the bloude of the slayne.

Then departed they from thence vij. C. and L. furlonges, and came to Taraca vnto yfewes that are called Tubiane. But as for Timotheus, they coude not get him there: for (not one matter dispatched,) he was departed from thence, and had lefte certayne men in a very stronge holde. But Dositheus and Sosipater which were captaynes with Machabeus, slewe those y Timotheus had lefte in the house of defence, euen x. M. men. And Machabeus prepared him with yvj. M. men y were aboute him, set them in ordre by companies, and wente forth agaynst Timotheus, which had with him an C. and xx. M. men of fote, ij. M. and v. C. horsem.

When Timotheus had knowlege of Iudas commynge, he sent the women, children and the other baggage vnto a castell called Carnion. (For it coude not be wonne, a was harde to come vnto, the wayes of the same places were so narow) and when Iudas coperie came first in sight, the enemies were smytten with feare, thorow the presence of God, which seyth all thinges: In so moch they thyngynge one here, another there, were rather discomfitte of their owne people, a wouded with the strokes of their owne swearde. Iudas also was very earnest in folowinge vpon them and punyshinge those vngodly, and slewe xxx. M. men of them. Timotheus also himself fell in to the hondes of Dositheus a Sosipater, whom he besought with many prayers, to let him go with his life: because he had many of the fewes fathers and brethren in preson, which (if they put him to death) might be disapoynted. So when he had promised faithfully to delyuer them agaynse accordinge to the condicion made, they let him go without harme, for the health of y brethren. And when Iudas had slayne xxv. M. he wente from Carnion.

Now after y he had chased awaye and slayne his enemies, he remoued the hoost towarde Ephron a stræge cite, wherein dwelt many dyuerse people of the Heithen, and y stronge yonge men kepe the walles, defendinge the mightily. In this cite was moch ordinaunce, and prouysion of darters. "But when Iudas and his company had called vpon Allmighty
God, (which with his power breaketh the strength of the enemies) they wanne the cite, and slew xxv. M. of them y were within. From thence wente they to the cite of the Seythians, which lieth vj. C. furlonges from Jerusalem. But when y Iewes which were in the cite testified, that the citemen deale loungly with them, yee and intreated them kyndly in y tyre of their aduersite, Iudas and his company gane them thankes, desyringe them to be frendly still vnto them: and so they came to Jerusalem the hye feast of the wekes beyng at honde. And after the feast they were forth agaynst Gorgias the gouernoure of Idumea, with iij. M. men of fote and iiiij. C. horsme. Which when they met together, it chaunced a few of the Iewes to be slayne.

And Dositheus one of the Bachenors a mighty horsma toke holde of Gorgias, and wolde haue taker him quyke. But an horsma of Thracia fell vpon him, and smote of his arme, so that Gorgias escaped and fled in to Moresa. When they then that were of Gorgias syde, had fowghte longe and were weyry: Iudas called vpon the LORDE that he wolle be their helper, y captayne of the felde: and with that, he begane with a manly voyce to take vp a songe of prayse, and a cry: In so moch that he made the enemies aftyred, and Gorgias men of warre to take their flight. So Iudas gathered his hoost, and came in to y cite of Odolla. And when the seventh daye came vpon them, they clensed them selues (as the custome was) y kepeth the Sabbath in the same place. And vpon the daye folowinge, Iudas y his company came to take vp the bodies of them that were slayne, and to bury them in y fathers graves. Now vnder y cotes of certayne Iewes which were slayne, they founde Iewels that they had taken ouer of the temple and from the Idols of the Janniters: which thinge is forbydden the Iewes by the lawe. Then euery man sawe y this was the cause, wherfore they were slayne.

And so euery man gaue thankes vnto the LORDE for his righteous iudgmet, which had opened the thinge that was hyd. They fell downe also vnto their prayers, and besought God, that the fawte which was made, might be put out of remembrance. Besydes that, Iudas exorted y people earnestly, to kepe them selues from soch synne: for so much as they sawe before their eyes, y these men were slayne for the same offence. So he gathered of euery one a certayne, in so moch that he brought together* two thousand drachmas of syluer, which he sent vnto Jerusalem, y there might a sacrifice be offerd for the myszyde. In the which place he dyd well y right: for he had some costeracion y pondring of y life y is after this tyre. For yf he had not thought y they, which were slayne, dyd yet lyue, it had bene superfluous and vayne, to make any vowe or sacrifice, for the y were deed. But for so moch as he sawe, that they which dye in the fauoure y beleue of God, are in good rest y ioye, he thought it to be good y honorable for a reconcylinge, to do the same for those which were slayne, that the offence might be forgenen.

The viij. Chapter.

IN the Cxlix. yeare gat Iudas knowlese, ἵνα Ἀντιοχοῦς Εὐπατορὸς commyngye with a great power in to Iewry, ἡ Λύσις the stewartes ἡ rular of his matters with him: haungye an C. and x. M. men of fote, ν. M. horsmen, xxij. Elephantes, and iij. C. carentes. Menelaus also ioyne with them (but with great discate) ἡ spaye fayre to the kyngye, not for eny good of ἡ coitire, but because he thought to haue bene made some great man of auctorite. But the kyngye of kynges moued Antiochus mynde agaynst this vnjoyly persone, ἡ Λύσις inffourned the kyngye, that this Menelaus was the cause of all mysche: so that ἡ kyngye commanded to take him, and (as ἡ maner of them is) to put him vnto death in the same place.

There was also in the same place a tower of L. cubites hye, heaped with azshes: but aboue it was so made, that men might loke downe on euery syde. Where in to the kyngye commandde that shamefull person to be cast amonge the azshes, as one that was cause of all vngraciousnesse. And reason it was, ἵνα vngrift shulde dye soch a death, and not to be buried: for he had done moch mysche vnto the aulter of God (whose fyre and azshes were holy) threfore was it right, ἵνα he him self also shulde be destroyed with azshes.

But the kyng was woode in his mynde, that he came to shewe him selfe more cruelly vnto the Iewes, then his father was. Which when Iudas perceaued, he commanued the people to call vpon the LORDE night and daye: that he wolde now helpe them also, like as he haad done allwaye: (For they were afrayed to be put from their lawe, from their naturall countre and from ÿ holy temple:) and not to suffre the people (which a little whyle afore beganne to recover) to be subdue agayne of ÿ blasphemous nacions.

So when they had done this together, and besought the LORDE for mercy, with wepeinge and fastinge three dayes longe, flat vpon the grounde: Judas exorted them, to make them selues ready. But he and the elders together deuysed, to go forth first with their people, afores the kyng brought his hoost in to Jewry, and afores he besieged the cite, to so to commite the matter vnto God. Wherefore he ascerbyed the power of all things vnto God the maker of ÿ world, exortinge his people to fight manfully, (yea euen vnto death) for ÿ lawes, the temple, ÿ cite, their owne natuye countre, to defende ÿ citesyns: set his hoost before Modin. He gaue them also ÿ were with him, a token of ÿ victory of God, choisinge out the manlyest yonge men, wente by night in to the kynges puyylon, to the hoost xiiij. M. men, and the greatest Elephanthes, with those that sat vpon them.

Thus when they had brought a greate feare ÿ rumoure amonge ÿ tentes of their enemies, and all thinges were prosperously with them, they departe in the breake of ÿ daye, God beyng their helper ÿ defender. Now when the kyng perceaued the manlynesse of the Iewes, he wente aboute to take the stronge places by craft, remoued his hoost vnto Bethsura, which was a wele keppe house of defence of the Iewes: but they were chaced awaye, hurt and discomfited. And Iudas sent vnto them that were in it, such thinges as were necessary. In the Iewes hoost also there was one Rhodocus, which tolde the enemies their secretes: but they sought him out, and when they had gotten him, they put him in preson. After this dyd the kyng comon with them that were in Bethsura, tooke truce with them, departe, and stroke a battayll with Iudas, which overcame him.

But when he vnnderstode, that Philippe (whom he had left to be overseer of his businesse at Antioche) begane to rebell against him, he was astonied in his mynde: so that he yielded himselfe to the Iewes, and made them an ooth, to do what so euery thought right. Now when he was reconcilied with them, he offered, made moch of the temple, gaue greate gyftes vnto it, embraced Machabeus, makynge him captayne and gouernoure from Ptolomais vnto ÿ Gerrenes.

Neuerthelesse when he came to Ptolomais, the people of the cite were not content with that bonde of frendshipe: for they were afrayed, that he wolde breake the couenaunt. Then wente Lysias vp in to the seate, and enfromured the people, shewed the cause why, and pacified them. So he came agayne to Antioche. This is now the matter concernyng ÿ kynges journey, and his returne.

The iiiij. Chapter.

AFTER three yeares was Iudas infourned, A show that Demetrius the sonne of Seleucus was come vp with a greate power and shippes, thorow the hauen of Tripolis (to take certaine commodious places and countrees) against Antiochus and his captayne Lysias. Now Alcimus (which had bene hye prest, and willfully defyled himselfe, in the tyme of the myxtinge) seyyng that by no meanes he coude be helped, ner haue any more intrauence to the altaire: he came to kyng Demetrius in the hundreth and one and fiftie yeare, presenting vnto him a crowne of golde, a palme and an olyue tre: which (as men thought) belonged to the temple, and that daye he helde his tounge.

But when he had gotten opportunite for his madnesse, Demetrius called him to couicell, and axed him, what thinges or counseles the Iewes leaned vnto? He answered: The Iewes that be called Assidei (whose captayne is Iudas Machabeus) maynteyne warres, make insurreccions, and wyl not let the realme be in peace.

For I beyng depreuyd of my fathers honoure (I meane the hye presthode) am come hither: partly because I was faithfull vnto the kyng, and partly because I sought the profit of the citesyns. And why? all our people (thorow the wickednesse of them) are not a little troubled. Wherfore I beseeke the (o kyng) considre all these thinges diligently, and then make some prouyssion for the londe and the people, acordinge to the kyndnesse that thou hast ofred vnto them. For as longe as Judas hath the vpper hande, it is not possible that men can lyue in peace.

When he had spoken these wordes, other frendes also hauynge euell will at Iudas, set the kyngg Demetrius on fyrre agaynst him. Which immediatly sent Nicanor (ruler of ÿ elephantes) a captayne, in to Iewry: commuanded him, to take Iudas himselfly alyue, but to slaye them that were with him, and to make Alcimus hye prest of the temple.

Then the Heithen which fled out of Iewry from Iudas, came to Nicanor by flockes, thinkynge the harme and decaye of the Iewes to be their welfare. Now whē the Iewes herde of Nicanors commyngge, they "spreckled them selues with earth, and besought him (which made them his people, and eer defended his owne porcion with eydent tokens) that he wolde preserre them still. So at the commuandement of the captayne, they removed from thence, and came to a towne called Dessasan. And Symon Iudas brother fell in honde with Nicanor, but thorow the sodane commyngge of the enemies, he was afrayed.

Neuertheles Nicanor hearinge the manlynes of them that were with Iudas, and ÿ bolde stomacches that they had to fight for their natural countrie, durst not proue the matter with bloomsheddinge. Wherfore he sent Possidonius, Theodocius ζ Mathias before, to gene and to take peace. So when they had taken longe advisement there vpon, and the captayne shewed it vnto the multitude: they were agreed in one mynde, to have peace. And they appoynted a daye to syt vpon these matters quetyly amonste them selues, ÿ stoles also were brought and set forth. Neuerthelesse Iudas commaundde certaine men of armes to waiue in conueniët places, lest there shulde sodenly arysse eny euell thorow the enemies. And so they commoned reasonably together.

Nicanor, whyle he abode at Ierusalem, ordred himself not vnreasonably, but sent awaye the people that were gathered together. He loued Iudas euer with his hert, and favoured him. He prayed him also to take a wyfe, and to bryng forth children. So he maried, lyued in rest, and they led a common life. But Alcimus perceauynge the loue that was betwixte them, and how they were agreed together, came to Demetrius, and tolde him that Nicanor had taken straunde matters in honde, and ordened Iudas (an enemy of the realm) to be the kynges successoure. Then the kynge was sore displeased, and thorow the wicked accusations which Alcimus made of Nicanor, he was so prouoked, that he wrote vnto Nicanor, sayenge: that he was very angrie for the frendshiphe and agrement, which he had made with Machabeus. Neuertheles he commannde him in all the haist, that he shulde take Machabeus presoner, and sende him to Antioche.

Which letters when Nicanor had sene, he was at his wittes ende, and sere greuned, that he shulde bryeke the thinges, wherin they had agreed: specially, sayinge Machabeus was the man, that neuer dyd him harme. But because he might not withstoande the kyngge, he sought opportune to fulfill his commuandement. Notwithstandinge when Machabeus sawe that Nicanor beganne to be churlish vnto him, and that he intreated him more rughly then he was wonte, he perceaued that soch vnkyndnes came not of good, and therefore he gathered a few of his men, and withdrew himself fro Nicanor. Which when he knewe that Machabeus had manfully prevented him, he came in to the greate and most holy temple: and commannde the prestes (which were doynghe thei vsuall offeringes) to deluyer him the man. And when they swere that they coude not tell, where the mā was whē he sought, he stretched out his honde, and made an oath, sayenge: Yf ye wyll not deluyer me Iudas 4 captuye, I shall remoue this temple of God in to the playne felde, I shal breake downe the alnter, and consecrate this tēple vnto Bacchus. After these wordes he departed.

Then the prestes lift vp their hondes to warde heauen, and besought him that was euer the defender of their people, sayenge:

1 Mac. 7. e.

Thou o LORDE of all, which hast nede of nothinge, woldest that the temple of thy habitation shulde be amonge vs. Therfore now (o most holy LORDE) kepe this "house euer vndefyled, which lately was clenased. Now was there accused vnto Nicanor, one Razis an Alderman of Jerusalem, a louver of the whole cite, and a man of good reporte: which for the kynde hert that he bare vnto the people, was called a father of y Iewes. This man oft tymes (when the Iewes were mynded to kepe them selues vndefyled) defended and deluyed them, beynge content stedfastly to spende his body and his life for his people.

So Nicanor wyllinge to declare the hate, that he bare to the Iewes, sent fyue hundred men to take him: for he thought, yf he gat him, he shulde brynge the Iewes in greate decaye. Now when the people beganne to ruszshe in at his house, to breake the dores, and to set fyre on it: he beynge now taken, wolde haue defended himself with his swearde: chosinge rather to dye manfully, then to yelde himselfe to those wicked doers: and because of his noble stocke, he had rather haue bene put to extreme cruelte. Notwithstandinge what tyme as he myssed of his stroke for the multitute fell in violently betwixte the dores: he ranne boldly to y wall, y cast himselfe downe manfully amongethe heape of them, which gaue soone place to his fall, so that he fell vpon his bely. Neuerthelesse whyle there was yet breath within him, he was kyndled in his mynde: and whyle his bloude guszshed out exceedingly (for he was very sore wounded) he ranne thourw the mynddest of y people, and gat him to the toppe of a rocke. So when his bloude was now gone, he toke out his owne bowels with both his hondes, and threw vpon the people: callinge vpon the LORDE of life and sprete, to rewarde him this agayne, and so he dyed.

The 9th. Chapter.

Now when Nicanor knewe that Iudas was in the countrey of Samaria, he thought with all his power to strike a falde with him vpon a Sabbath daye. Neuerthelesse the Iewes that were compelled to go with him, sayed: O do not so cruelty and vnkyndly, but halowe y Sabbath daye, and worshiphe him that seyth all things. For all this, yet sayed the vngracious persone: Is there a mightie one in heauen, that commanded the Sabbath daye to be kepte? And when they sayde: yee the lyuyng God, the mightie LORDE in heauen commanded the seventh daye to be kepte, he sayde: And I am mightie vpon earth, to comainde them for to arme them selues, and to perfore the kynges busynesse. Notwithstandinge he might not haue his purpose.

Nicanor had deuyed with greate pryde to overcome Iudas, and to brynge awaye y victory. But Machabeus had euer a last confidéee and a parfecte hope in God that he wolde helpe him, and exorted his people, not to be aforayed at the conmynghe of the Heithen: but allwaye to remembre the helpe that had bene shewed vnto them from heauen, yee and to be sure now also, y Allmightie God wolde geue them the victory. He spake vnto them out of the lawe and prophetes, puttinghe them in remembrance of the battayls, that they had striken afore, g made them to be of a good corage.

So when their hartes were plucte vp, he shewed them also the discetfullnesse of the Heithen, and how they wolde kepe no couenaunt ner ooth. Thus he weaponed the not with the armoure of shylde and speare, but with wholsome wordes and exortacions. He shewed them a dreame also, wherthorow he made them all glad, which was this: He thought that he sawe Onias (which had bene hye prest, a vertuous y louynge man, sad, and of honest conversacion, well spoken, and one that had bene exercised in godlynes fró a childe) holdinge vp his hodes towards heauen, and prayenge for his people. After this there aparend vnto him another mà, which was aged, honorable and glorious. And Onias sayde: This is a louer of the brethren, and of the people of Israel. This is he that prayeth moch for the people, and for all the holy cite: Jeremey the prophet of God. He thought also y Jeremey helde out his right hode, and gane him (namely vnto Iudas) a swearde of golde, sayenge: Take this holy swearde, a gift from God, wherwith thou shalt snyte downe the enemies of the people of Israel.

And so they were wel comforted thorow the words of Iudas, and toke corage vnto the, so that the yonge men were determed in their myndes to fight, a to byde stylyf at it: In so much that in the thinges which they toke in honde, their boldnesse shewed the same, because the holy cite and the temple were in parell: for the which they toke more care, then for their wynes, children, brethren and kynsfolkes. Agayne, they that were in the cite, were most carefull for those which were to fight. Now when they were all in a hope that the judgment of the matter was at hode, and the enemies drew nye, the hoost beyng set in araye, the Elephantes and horsmen euery one standinge in his place: Machabeus considered the commynge of the multitude, the ordainance of dyvers wepons, the cruelnesse of the beeses, and helde vp his hondes towarde heauen, callinge vpon the LORDE that doth wonders, which geyeth not the victory after the multitude of wepons and power of the hoost (but to them that please him) accordinge to his owne will. Therfore in his prayer he sayde these wordes:

"O LORDE, thou that diddest sende thine angell in the tym of Ezechias kyng of Iuda, and in the hooste of Sennacherib slewest an hundreth and fyue and foure score thousande: sende now also thy good angell before vs (o LORDE of heauens) in the fearfulnesse and drede of thy mightie arme, that they which come agaynst thy holy people to blaspheme them, maye be afrayed. And so he made an ende of his wordes. Then Nicanor and they that were with him, drew nye with shawmes and songes: but Iudas and his company with prayer and callinge vpon God.

With their hondes they smote, but with their hertes they prayed vnto the LORDE, and slewe no lesse then xxxv. M. me: For thorow the present helpe of God they were gloriously comforted.

Now when they left of, and were turninge agayne with ioye, they understande that Nicanor himself was slayne with the other. Then they gane a greate shoute and a criye, praysinge the allmighty LORDE with a loude voyce. And Iudas (which was ener ready to spedde his body and life for his citesyns) comanded to smyte of Nicanors heade, with his arme and honde, and to be brought to Jerusalem. When he came there, he called all the people, and the prestes at the aultar with those that were in y castell, and shewed them Nicanors heade, and his wicked honde, which he had presumptuously holden vp agaynst the temple of God. He caused y tongue also of that vngodly Nicanor to be cut in litle peces, and to be cast to the foules, and the cruell mans honde to be hanged vp before the temple.

So euery man gau thankes vnto y LORDE, saienge: blessed be he, that hath kepe his place vndefyled.

As for Nicanors heade, he hanged it vp vp the hye castell, for an euident and playne token of the helpe of God. And so they agreed al together, to kepe that daye holy: namely y xij. daye of y moneth Adar, which in y Syrias language is called y nexte daye before Mardocheus daye. Thus was Nicanor slayne, and from that tyme forth the Iewes had the cite in possession: And here wil I now make an ende.

The first Chapter.

And after the captiuyte of Babylon, Iechonias begat Salathiel: Salathiel begat Zorobabel:

Zorobabel begat Abiud: Abiud begat Eliachim: Eliachim begat Azor: Azor begat Sadoc: Sadoc begat Achin: Achin begat Eliud: Eliud begat Eleasar: Eleasar begat Matthan: Matthan begat Iacob: Iacob begat Joseph the husbande of Mary, of whoso was borne that Jesus, which is called Christ.

All the generacions from Abrahâ to Dauid are fourtene generacions: From Dauid vnto the captiuyte of Babylon, are fourtene generacions. From the captiuyte of Babylon vnto Christ, are also fourtene generacions.

The byrth of Christ was on thyss wyse:

When his mother Mary was married to Joseph *before they came together, she was foude with chylde by thy holy goost. But Joseph her husbande was a perfect man, and wolde not bringe her to shame, but was mynded to put her awaie secretly. Neuerthelesse whyle he thus thought, beholde, the angell of the LORDE appered vnto him in a dreame, sayenge: Ioseph thou sonne of Dauid, feare not to take vnto the Mary thy wyfe. For that which is coceaued in her, is of thy holy goost. She shall bryng forth a sonne, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: For he shall saue his people from their synnes.

All this was done, thy the thinge might, be fulfilled, which was spoken of the LORDE by the Prophet, sayenge: Beholde, a mayde shall be with chylde, and shall bryng forth a
The Gospell of S. Mathew.

Chap. ii.

I. Then was Joseph waken at Bethleem in Iury, in the tyme of Herode the kyng. Beholde, there came wyse men from the east to Jerusalem, sayinge: Where is the new borne kyng of the Iues? We haue sene his starre in the east, and are come to worship him.

When Herode kyng had herde thys, he was troubled, and all Ierusalem with hym, and he gathered all the hye Prestes and Scribes of hym people, and axed of them, where Christ shulde be borne. And they sayde vnto hym: at Bethleem in Iury. For thus it is written by the Prophet: And thou Bethleem in the londe of Iury, art not the leest amongst the Princes of Iuda. For out of y shall come vnto me the captayne, that shall gourner my people Israel.

Then Herod preuently called the wyse men, and diligently enquyred of them, what tyme the starre apperred, and sent them to Bethleem, sayenge: Go, and seche diligently for the chylde. And when ye haue founde hym, bringe me worde agayn, that I maye come and worshippe hym also.

When they had heard the kyng, they departed: and lo, the starre which they sawe in the east, went before them, tyllyt it came, and stode ouer the place where the chylde was. When they sawe the starre, they were maruellous glad: and went into the house, and founde the chylde with Mary his mother, and kneeled downe and worshipped hym, y opened ther treasures, and offred vnto hym gyftes: gold, frankynesse and myrre. And after they were warned of God in a dreme, that they shulld not go againe to Herod, they returned into their owne countre another waye.

When they were departed: beholde, the angell of the LORDE appereed to Joseph in a dreme, sayinge: aryse, and take the chylde and his mother, and flye into Egypte, y and abyde there tyllyt I brynge the worde. For Herod wyll seke the chylde to destroye hym. Tho he arose, and toke the chylde and his mother by night, and departed into Egypte, and was there vnto y deeth of Herod, that the thinge might be fulfilled which was spokene of the LORDE, by the Prophet, which sayeth: out of Egypte haue I called my sonne.

Then Herod perceauynge y he was discouened of the wyse men, was excedyng wroth, and sent forth, and slue all the chyldren that were in Bethlem, and in all the coastes there of, as many as were two yer oyled and vnder, accordynge to the tyme which he had diligently searched out of the wyse men.

Then was y fulfilled which was spoken by y Prophet Ieremy sayinge: y On y hilles was a voyce herde, greate mourninge, wepynge, lamentacion: Rachel wepynge for her chyldren, and wolde not be comforted, because they were not.

When Herod was deed: beholde, an angell of the LORDE appered in a dreme to Joseph in Egypte, sayinge: arise and take the chylde and his mother, and go in to y londe of Israel. For they are deed, which sought the chylde's life. And he arose vp, and toke y chylde and his mother, y came into the londe of Israel. But whan he herde that Archelaus did raygne in Iury, in y rowme of his father Herode, he was afrayde to go thither. Notwithstandinge after he was warned of God in a dreme, he turned aspyde into the parties of Galile, and went and dwelt in a cite called Nazareth, to fulfill y which was spoken by the Prophetes: he shalbe called a Nazarite.

Chap. iii.

In those dyes Iohn the Baptyst came and preached in the wildernes of Iury, sayenge: Amode youre selues, the kyngdome of heuen is at honde. This is he, of whom it is spokene by y Prophet Esay, which sayeth: The voyce of a cryer in y wyldernes, prepare the LORDES waye, and make his pathes straight.

This Iohn had his garment of camels heer, and a lether gerrdell aboute his lornes. Hys meate was locustes and wylde hony. Then went out to hym Jerusalem, and all Iury, and all the region rounde about Iordan, and were baptised of him in Iordan, cōfesynge their synunes.

"Now when he sawe many of the Pharisees and of ḥ Saduces come to his baptism, he sayde vnto them: ye generacie of vipers, who hath certified you, that ye shall escape ḥ vengeaunce to come? Beware, bryngeth forthe frutes of pennaunce. Thynke not now, to saye in your selues, we haue Abraham to our father. For I saye vnto you, that God is able of these stones to rayse vp children vnto Abraham. Even now is the axe put vnto ḥ yde of the trees: thefore ḥ euery tre which bringeth not forth good frute, shalbe hewed downe, and cast into the fyre."

I baptise you with water to repentsance: but he that cometh after me, is myghtiher the I, whose shues I am not worthy to beare.

He shall baptise you with ḥ holy goost ḥ with fyre: which hath also his fan in his hond, and will pougre his floore, and gadder the wheed into his garner, ḥ will burne ḥ chaffe with vnquentcheable fyre."

Then came Jesus from Galile to Iordan, vnto Ihon, to be baptised of hym. But Ihō forbade hym, saynge: I haue nede to be baptysed of the: and commeth thou to me? Jesus answered ḥ sayd vnto hym: Let it be so now. For thus it be commeth vs to fullfyll all rightousnes. Then he suffered hym. "And Jesus asonne as he was baptised, came straight out of the water. And lo, heuē was opē ouer hym: and Ihon sawe the spirite of God descende lyke a doue, and lyght vpon hym. And lo, there came a voyce frō heuē sayng: "Thys ys that my beloued sonne, in whom is my delyte.

The iiii. Chapter.

THEN was Jesus ledd awaye of the spirite in to wildernes, to be tempted of the deuyll. And when he had fasted fourety dayes and fouryte nightes, he was afterward an hungred. "And the tēpter came to him and sayde: ḥ thou be the sonne of God, commande, that these stones be made breed. He answered ḥ sayde: ḥ is wrytė: 'Man shall not lyue by bred onlye, but by euerie worde that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Then the deuyll toke hym vp into the holy cite, and set hym on a pynacle of the temple, and sayde vnto hym: 'thy soume of God, cast thy sylle downe. "For it is wrytten: he shal geue his angels charge ouer the and with their handes they shal holde the vp, that thou dashe not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Jesus sayde vnto hym: it ys wrytten also: 'Thou shalt not tempte thy LORDE God.

Agayne, the deuyll toke hym vp and led hym in to an excendyng hye mountayne, and shewed hym all the kyngdomes of the worlde, and all the glorie of them, and sayde vnto hym: all these wil I geue the, ḥ thou wilt fall downe and worship me. "Then sayde Jesus vnto hym: Auoyde Satā. For it ys wrytė: thou shalt worship the LORDE thy God and hym onely shalt thou serue.

Then the deuye left hym, and beholde, the angels came and ministred vnto hym.

"When Jesus had herde that Ihon was taken, he departed into Galile and left Nazareth, and went and dwelt in Capernaum, which is a cite apon the see, in the coostes of zabulon and Neptalim, ḥ the thinges might be fulfilled whiche was spoken by Esay the Prophete, saynge: "The londe of zabulon and Neptalim, the waye of the see beyonde Iordan, and Galile of the Gentyls, the people which sat in darknes, sawe a greate lyght, ḥ to them which sat in the region ḥ shadowe of death, lyght ye begone to shyne.

From that tyme forth begane Jesus to preach, and to saye: Amende youre selues, ḥ kingdome of heauen is at honde.

As Jesus walked by the see of Galile, he sawe two brethren: Simon which was called Peter, ḥ Andrew his brother, castynge a net into ḥ see, for they were fisshers, and he sayde vnto them: folowe me, ḥ I will make you fisshers of me. "And they strayght waye lefte their nettes, and folowed hym.

And when he wēt forth from thence, he sawe other two brethren, Iames the sonne of zebede, and Ihon his brother, in the ship with zebede their father, mendynge their nettes, and called them. "And they without tarynge lefte ḥ shyp and their father, and folowed hym.

And Jesus wente aboute all Galile, teaching in their synagoges, and preachynge the gospel of the kyngdome, and healed all maner of sicknes, all maner dyseases amonge the people. And his fame spred abrode through out all Siria. And they brought vnto hym all sick people, that were taken with diuers diseases and gripinges, and the were possessed with deuils, those which were lunatyke, and those that had the palsie: he healed the. And ther folowed hym a greate number of people, from Galile, from the ten cities, and from Ierusalem, and from the regions that lyce beyonde Iordan.

The b. Chapter.

When he sawe the people, he went vp into a mountayne: and when he was set, his disciples came to hym, and he opened his mouth, and taught them, sayinge: °Blessed are the poore in spryte: for theirs is the kyngdome of heuē. Blessed are they that mournye: for they shalbe comforted. °Blessed are the meke: for they shall inheret the ertz.
°Blessed are they which honger and thyst for rightewenes: for they shalbe filled. Blessed are the mercifull: for they shall obtayne mercy. Blessed are the pure in herte: for they shall se God. Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shalbe called the chyldren of God. Blessed are they which suffre persecucion for rightewnes sake: for theirs is the kyngdome of heuen. °Blessed are ye when men reuyle you, and perseceute you, and falsly say all manner of yuell saynges against you for my sake. °Reioyce and be glad, for greate is youre warde in heuē.

For so persecuted they the Prophetes
which were before youre dayes.

Ye are °salt of the earth, but and ye the salt haue lost his saltines, °what can be salted therewith? It is the more forth good for nothynge, but to be cast out, and to be trodden vnder fote of men. Ye are the light of the worlde. A cite that is set on an hill, can not be hid: nether do men lyght a candell,
and put it vnder a buschel, but on a candel-
stick; and it lighteth all that are in the house.
Let youre light so shyne before men, °that they may see youre good workes, and glorify youre father which is in heauen.

Thinke not, that I am come to destroye
the lawe, or the Prophetes: °no, I am not come to destroye them, but to fullfil them.
For truly I saye vnto you: till heauen and dearth, periszhe, one iott or one tyttle of the lawe shall not escape, till all be fulfilled.

°Whosoeuer breaketh one of these least comaundermentes, and teacheth me so, he shalbe called the least in the kyngdome of heauen. But whosoeuer observeth and teacheth the same shalbe called greate in the kyngdome of heauen.

For I saye vnto you: excepte youre rightewenes exceede the rightewenes of the Scribes and Pharisses, ye can not entre in to the kyngdome of heauen.

Ye haue herde, how it was sayde to the of the olde tyne: °Thou shalt not kyll. For whosoeuer kylleth, shall be in daunger of judgement. But I saye vnto you: whosoeuer is angrie with his brother, is in daunger of the judgement. Whosoeuer sayeth vnto his brother: Racha, is in daunger of °coisell.
But whosoeuer sayeth: thou foole, is in daunger of hell fyre.

°Therefore when thou offerest thy gift at the altere, and there remembrest that thy brother hath ought agaynst the: leaue there thyne offrynge before the altere, and go thy waye first, and reconcyle thy selfe to thy brother, °then come and offre thy gyfte.

°Agre with thine adversary quickely, whyle thou art in the waye with hym, lest that adversary deliuer the to the judge, and the judge deliuer the to the minister, and then thou be cast in to preson. I saye vnto the verely: thou shalt not come out thence, till thou haue payed the vtmost farthinge.

Ye haue herde, how it was sayde to them of olde tyne: °Thou shalt not committe aduontrie. But I saye vnto you, that whosoeuer loketh on a wife lustinge after her, hath committed aduontrie with hir already in his hert.

Wherefore ye thy righte eye offende the,
pluche hym out, and cast him from the.
°Better it is for the, that one of thy membre perishe, then that thy whole body shulde be cast in to hell. Also ye thy righte honde offende the, cut hym of, and cast him from the. Better yt is that one of thy members perish, the ye all thy body shulde be cast in to hell.

It is sayde: "whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe, let hym geue her a testimonyall of the deuorcmet. But I saye vnto you: "whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe (except it be for fornicacio) causeth her to breake matrimony. And whosoeuer maryeth her that is deuorsed, breaketh wedlocke.

Agayne, ye haue herde, how it was sayde to the of olde tyme: "Thou shalt not foresware thy selfe, but shalt perforn thy ooth to God. But I saye vnto you: sweare not at all, nether by heau, for it is Godis seate: nor yet for his fote stote: nether by Jerusalem, for it is the cyte of greate kinge: nether shalt thou sweare by thy heed, because thou canst not make one heer whyte or blake: But your communicacion shalbe, yee, yee: nay, nay.  For what soeuer is more then that, commeth of euel.

Ye haue herde howe it is sayde: An eye for an eye, a toth for a toth." But I saye vnto you: that ye resist not eueull. But whosoeuer geceth the a blowe on thy right cheke, turne to him the other also. And ye euy man will sue the at the lawe, g take awaye thy coate, let him haue thy cloake also. And who so compelleth the to go a myle, go with hym twayne. Geue to hym that axeth: and from hym that wolde borowe, turne not away.

Ye haue herde, howe it is sayde: "thou shalt loue thyne neibour, g hate thyne enemy. But I saye vnto you: loue youre enemies: Blesse thee that cursse you: "Do good to the that hate you: Praye for thee which do you wronge and persecute you, that ye maye be the chyldren of youre father which is in heauen: for he maketh his sonne to aryme on the euel and on the good, and sendeth his rayne on the iust and vniuste. "For ye ye loue them which loue you, what rewarde shall ye haue? Do not the Publicans also lyke wyse? "Ye shall therefor be perfecte, even as youre father in heauen is perfecte.

The bi. Chapter.

TAKE hede to youre almes, that ye geue it not in the syght of men, to the intent that ye wolde be sene of them: or els, ye get no rewarde of youre father which is in heauen.

When soeuer therfore thou geuest thine almes, thou shalt not make a trompet to be blowen before the, as the ypocrites do in the synagoges and in the stretes, for to be prayed of m. Verely I saye vnto you: they haue their rewarde. But whē thou doest almes, let not thy lyfte hande knowe, what thy righte hande doth, that thine almes maye be secrete: and thy father which seith in secrete, shall rewarde the openly.

"And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as g ypocrites are. For they loue to stode and praye in the synagoges, and in the corners of the stretes, to be sene of men. Verely I saie vnto you: they haue their rewarde. "But when thou prayest, entre in to thy chamber, and shut thy dore to the, g praye to thy father which is in secrete: and thy father which seith in secrete, shall rewarde the openly.

And when ye praye, bable not moch, as g Hethen do: for they thinke that they shalbe herde, for their moch babylines sake. Be not ye lyke them therfore. "For youre father knoweth where of ye haue nede, before ye axe of him. After thys maner theryfore shall ye praye:

"Ooure father which art in heauen, halowed be thy name. Thy kyngdome come. Thy wyll be fulfilled vpoun earth as it is in heauen. Geue vs this daye oure dayly bred. And forgue vs oure dettes, as we also forgue oure detters. And lede vs not in to temptacion: but deluyer vs from euel. For thine is the kyngdome, and the power, and the glorye for euer. Amen. For ye ye forgue other men their trespases, youre heauenly father shall also forgue you. "But and ye wyll not forgue me their trespases, nonome shall youre father forgue youe youre trespases.

Moreouer when ye fast, be not sad as y ypocrtyes are. For they disfigure their faces, that they myght be sene of men to fast. Verely I saye vnto you: they haue their rewarde. But thou, whiche thou fastest, annoynte thyne hede, and wash thy face, that it appeare not vnto men, that thou fastest: but vnto thy father which is in secrete: and thy father which sethy in secrete, shal rewarde the openly.

Se that ye gather you not treasure vpon the earth, where rust and mothes corrupte, and where theues breake through and steale. But gather you treasure together in heauen, where nether rust nor mothes corrupte, and where theues nether breake vp nor yet steale. For where youre treasure is, there is youre herte also.

The eye is the light of the body. Ye thyne eye then be syngle, all thy body shal be ful of light: But and ye thyne eye be wycked, all thy body shalbe full of darckenes: Wherfore ye the light that is in the, be darckenes, how greate then shall that darckenes be?

No man can serve two masters. For eithe he shall hate the one and love the other: or els he shall leane to the one, and despise the other: Ye can not serve God and mammon. Therfore I saye vnto you: be not ye carefull for youre lyfe, what ye shall eate, or what ye shall drinke: nor yet for youre body, what ye shall put on. Ye not the lyfe more worth the meate, and the body more of value then raymët? Beholde the foules of the ayer: for they sowe not, nether reepe, nor yet carry in to the barnes: and yet youre heauenly father fedeth the. Are ye not much better then they?

Which of you (though he toke thought therfore) could put one cubit vnto his stature? why care ye then for raymët? Consider the lylies of the fefde, how they growe. They laboure not, nether spynne. And yet for all that I saye vnto you, that euen Salomon in all his royalte was not arayed lyke vnto one of these. Wherfore ye God so cloth the grasse, which is to daye in the felden, and to morowe shalbe cast in to the fornace: shal he not much more do the same vnto you, ye of lylte fayth?

Therfore take no thought, sayinge: what shall we eate, or what shall we drinke? or where with shall we be cloathed? After all soch thynges do the heithen seke. For youre heauenly father knoweth, that ye haue neede of all these thynges. Seke ye fyrst the kyngdome of heauen and the righteounes thereof, so shal all these thynges be ministrd vnto you.

Care not then for the morow, for the morow shall care for it self: Every daye hath ynoogh of his owne trauayll.

The vii. Chapter.

JUDGE not, that ye be not judged: For as ye judge, so shall ye be judged. And with what measure ye meete, with the same shall it be measured to you agayne. Why seist thou a moate in thy brothers eye, and perceauest not the beame ys yn thine awne eye? Or why saiest thou to thy brother: holde, I wil pluckle the moate out of thyne eye, and beholde, a beame is in thyne awne eye. Ypocryte, fyrst cast out the beame out of thyne awne eye, and then shalt thou se clearly, to pluckle out the moate out of thy brothers eye.

Geeue not that which is holy, to dogges: nether cast ye youre pearles before swyne, lest they treade them vnder their fete, the other turne agayne and all to rente you.

Axe, and it shalbe geeuen you: Seke, and ye shall fynde: knocke, and it shalbe opened vnto you. For whosoever axeth, receaueth: and he that seketh, fyndeth: and to hym which knocketh, it shalbe opened. Ys there eny man amonge you, which yf his sonne axed hym bred, wolde offer him a stone? Or yf he axed fyshe, wolde he proffer hym a serpent? yf ye then which are euell, can geeue youre chyldren good gyftes: how moche more shall youre father which is in heauen, geeue good thynges to them that axe hym?

Therfore what soeuer ye wolde that mene shulde do to you, euë do ye to them. This ys the lawe and the Prophetes.

Enter in at the straute gate: for wyde is the gate, and broade is theayne, that leadeth to destruction: a many there be, which go in therat. But straute is the gate, and narowe ys the waye, which leadeth vnto lyfe, and fewe there be that fynde it.
Beware of false Prophets, which come to you in shapenes clothinge, but inwardly they are rauenynge wolves. Ye shall knowe them by their frutes. Do men gather grapes of thornes? or figges of thistles? Euen so euery good tree bryngeth forth good frute. But a corruppte tree, bryngeth forth euyl frute.

A good tree can not bryngeth forth bad frute: nother can a rotten tre bringe forth good frute. Euery tre that bryngeth not forth good frute, shall be hewen downe, and cast into the fyre. Wherfore by their frutes ye shall knowe them.

Not all theye that saye vnto me, LORDE LORDE, shall enter in to the kyngdome of heauen: but he that doth the will of my father which ys in heauen.

Many shall saye to me in that daye: LORDE, LORDE: haue we not prophesied in thy name? Haue we not cast out devyels in thy name? Haue we not done many greate dedes in thy name? And then will I knowelege vnto them: 'I neuer knewe you. Depart fro me, ye workers of iniquite.

Whosoeuer therefore heareth of me these sayinges, and doeth the same, I will lycke hym vnto a wyse man, which buylty hys house vpon a rokke: Now whan abundaunce of rayne descended, and the wyndes blew and bet vpon that same house, it fel not, because it was grounded on the rokke. And whog so euery heareth of me these sayinges, doth thene not, shall belycke vnto a folysh ma, which buyltyt his housses upon the sonde:

Now whan abundaunce of rayne descended, the wyndes blew, and bet vpon y housse, it fell, and great was the fall of it.

And it came to passe, that when Jesus had ended these sayinges, the people were astonmyed at hys doctrine. For he taught them as one hauynge power, and not as the Scribes.

The viij. Chapter.

WHEN he was come downe from the mountayne, much people followed him. And lo, there came a leper, and worshipped him, sayinge: LORDE, yf thou wylt, thou canst make me cleane. And Jesus put forth hys honde, and touched him, sayinge: I wyl, be thou cleane: and immediately his leprosie was clensed? And Jesus sayde vnto hym: Se thou tell no ma, but go and shewe thy selfe to the prest, and offer the gyfte that Moses comandeth, in witnesse to them.

When Jesus was entred into Capernaum, there came vnto him a Captayne, and besought hym, sayinge: Syr, my seruaunt lyeth sicke at home of the palsyse, and ys greuously payned. Jesus sayd vnto hym: I wil come yheale him. The Captayne answered and sayde: Syr, I am not worthy, that thou shuldest come vnder my rofe, but speake the worde only, and my seruaunt shalbe healed. For I my selfe also am a ma subject to yuctorite of another, haue sowdiers vnder me. Yet wha I saye to one: go, he goeth, and to another: come, he commeth: ye to my seruaunt: do this, he doeth it. When Jesus hearde that, he marueled, and sayde to them that followed hym: Verely I saye vnto you: I haue not founde so greate sayfeth: no not i Israel. But I saye vnto you: Many shall come from the east and west, and shall rest with Abraham, Isaac and Iacob in the kyngdome of heauen: and the chyldren of the kyngdome shalbe cast out in to vitter darcknes: there shal be weeping, and gnashing of teth. And Jesus sayd vnto y Captayne: go thy waye, and as thou beleuest, so be it vnto the. And his seruaunt was healed the same houre.

And Jesus went in to Peters house, and saw hys wyues mother lying sicke of a feuer: so he touched her haunde, and the feuer left hir: and she arose, and ministred vnto them.

When the euyn was come, they brought vnto him many that were possessed with devylls. And he cast out y spirites with a worde, and healed all that were sicke, that y thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoken by Esay the Prophet, sayinge: He taketh on him oure infirmitie, and bare oure sickenesse.

Whiche Jesus sawe much people about him, he commanded to go ouer the water. And there came a scribe and sayde vnto hym: master, I wyll folowe the, whethyr so euery thou goest. And Jesus sayde vnto hym: the foxes haue holes, and the byrddes of the ayer haue nestes, but why some of ma hath not wherons to rest his heede." Another that was one of his disciples, sayde vnto hym: Syr,

geo me leu eyrst, to go a burye my father.
But Jesus sayde vnto him: folowe thou me,
and let the deed breie their deed.

And he entred in to a shappe, & his disciples folowed him. And beholde, there arose a greate tempest in the see, in so moch that the shippe was couered with wavses, & he was a slepe. And his disciples came vnto him, and awoke hym, sayinge: LORDE, saue vs,
we perishe. And he sayde vnto them: why are ye fearfull, o ye of lytell faite? Then he arose, and rebuked the wyndes and the see," & there folowed a greate calme. And the men marueyled and sayde: what ma is this, that both wyndes and see obey hym?

And when he was come to a other syde,
in to the coutre of the Gergesites, there met him two possessed of deyls, which came out of the graues, and were out of measure fearce, so that no man myght go by that waye. And beholde, they cryed out sayinge: Oh Jesu thou sonne of God, what haue we to do with the?" Art thou come hyther to torment vs, before the tyme be come? And there was a good waye of from them a greate heerd of swyne syeinge. Then the deyls besought him, sayinge: yf thou cast vs out, suffre vs to go ooure waye in to the heerd of swyne. And he sayde vnto them: go youre wavses. Then went they out, and departed in to the heerd of swyne. And beholde, why hoole heerd of swyne was caried with violee headlinge in to the see, and persished in the water. The heerdmens fled and wente their wayes in to the cyte, and tolde euery thing, & what had fortuned vnto the possessed of the deyls.
And beholde, all the cyte came out and met Jesus. And when they sawe hym, they be-sought hym, for to departe out of their coostes.

The 7r. Chapter.

THEN entred he in to a shipp, and passed ouer and came in to his awne cite. And lo, they brought vnto him a man sicke of why palsie, lyinge in his bed. & when Jesus sawe the faith of thhe, he sayde to the sicke of why palsie: my sonne, be of good cheare, thy sines are forgeue the. And beholde, cer-teyne of the scribes sayde in them selues:

this man blasphemeth. But when Jesus sawe their thoughtes, he sayde: wherof dar think ye euill in youre hertes? Whether ys it easier to saye: thy synnes be forgeue why, or to saie:
raise and walke? But that ye maye knowe, that the sonne of man hath power to forgeue sinnes in earth, the sayde he vnto the sicke of why palsie: why, take vp thy bed, and go home. And he arose and wente home. When why people sawe it, they marueyled, & glorified
God, which had gene soch power vnto men.

And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he sawe a man syt a receyuinge of custome, named Mathew, & sayde vnto hym: folowe me.
And he arose, and folowed him. And it came to passe as he sat at meate in the house: be-holde, many publicans and synners came and sat downe also with Jesus and hs disciples.

When the Pharisys sawe that, they sayde to hs disciples: why eateth youre master with publicans and synners? When Jesus herde that, he sayde vnto them: The whole nede not why phisici, but they that are sicke. Go and learne, what that meaneth: I haue pleasure in mercy, and not in offerynge." For I am not come to call the righteous, but why synners to repentauence.

Then came the disciples of Ihon to hym sayinge: why do we why Pharisys fast so oft:
and thy disciples fast not? And Jesus sayde vnto thhe: Can the weddynge chylde mourne as lode the bridegrome is with them? The tyme will come, when the bridegrome shalbe taken from them, and thhe shall fast. No man pecteth an olde garment with a pece of newe clothe. For then taketh he awaye the pee agayne from the garment, & the rent ys made greater. "Nether do men put newe wynye
in to olde vessels, for then the vessels breake,
and the wynye runneth out, why vessels peryshe,
But they poure newe wynye in to newe vessels,
and so are both samed together.

Whyle he thus speake vnto them, beholde
there came a certayne ruler," and worshipped him, sayinge: My daughter is euene now deceased, but come and lay thy honde on her, and she shall liue. Jesus arose and folowed hym with hs disciples." And beholde, a woman which was diseased with an issue of bloude xij. yeres, came behynde hym, and touched the hem of his yreste. For she sayde in her sylfe; yf I maye touche but euen his yreste only, I shalbe safe. Then Iesus tourned him aboute, and behelde her, sayinge:

Doughter be of good conforte, thy faith hath made þ safe. And she was made whole, euen that same houre.

And when Iesus came into the rulers house,
and sawe the minstrels and the people ragine,
he sayde vnto them: Get you hēce, for þ mayde is not dead, but slepeth. 6 And they laughed hym to scorne. But whan the people were put forth, he went in, and toke her by the honde, and the mayde arose. And this was noysed through out all that londe.

And as Iesus departed thence, two bl(y)de mē folowed sayn: cryinge and sayinge: O
thou sonne of Daulid, haue mercy vpon vs.
And when he was come home, the bl(y)nde came to hym, And Iesus saynde vnto them Beleue ye, that I am able to do thys? And they saynde vnto hym: yee, LORDE. Then touched he their eyes, sayinge: acordinge to your faith, be it vnto you. 7 And their eyes were opened. And Iesus chargd the, sayinge: Se that no mā knowe of it. But they departed, 8 spred abroade his name through out all the londe.

Whan these were gone out, 9 beholde, they brought to hym a domme man possessed of a deuyl. And whan the deuyl was cast out, the domme spake: And the people murmured sayinge: it was neuer so sene in Israel. But yf Pharises sayde: he casteth out deuyls, thowre the chiche deuyl.

And Iesus wente aboute in all cities and townees, teacheinge in their synagoges 10 preachyng þ gospel of þ kyngdome, 11 healeinge all maner sicknes 12 all maner desease amōge
the people. 13 And when he sawe the people, he had compassion on þe, because they were pyned awaye, and scattered abroade, euen as shepe hauinge no shepherd.

Then saynde he to his disciples: 14 her est greate, but 15 laborers are fewe. Whorefore praye the LORDE of the haruest, 15 to sende forth laborers into hys haruest.
But when they deluyer you vp, take no thought how or what ye shall speake, for ye shalbe gemen you, euyn in that same houre, what ye shall saye. For it is not ye that speake, but the prete of your father which speaketh in you.

The brother shalbe deluyer the brother to deeth, and the father the sonne. And the children shall arysse agaynst their fathers a mothers. a shal helpe them to deeth; a ye shall be hated of all men for my names sake. But he y endureth to the ende, shalbe sauc.

When they persecute you in one cite, b flye in to another. I tell you for a treute, ye shall not fysshee all the cities of Israel, ytt the sonne of man come. The disciple is not above the master, nether the seruantaunt above the LORDE. It is ynoough for the disciple, to be as his master, and the seruanunt as his LORDE. If they have calld the good man of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his housholde so? Feare them not therfore.

There is nothing hyd, that shall not be openly shewed: and nothing secrete, that shall not be known. What I tell you in darcknes, that speake ye in light: and what ye heare in the eare, that speache ye vpon the house toppes.

And feare ye not them that kyll the body, and be not able to kyll the soule. But rather feare he, which is able to destroye both soule and body in to hell. Are not two sparowes solde for a farthinge? Yet doth there none of the light vpon the groude without your father. And now are all y hayres of youre head tolde. Feare ye not therfore: ye are of more value then many sparowes.

Therfore whosoeuer knowlegeth me before me, him wil I knowlege also before my father which is in heauen. But who soeuer denyeth me before me, him wil I also denye before my father which is in heauen.

Thynke not that I come to sende peace vpon earth. I came not to sende peace, but a sworde. For I come to set a mæ at variance agaynst his father, and the daughter agaynst her mother; a the daughter in lawe aegynst her mother in lawe: and a mans foes shalbe they of his owne housholde.

Who so loueth father and mother more then me, is not mete for me: and he that loueth some or daughtuer more then me, is not mete for me. And he y taketh not his crosse and folowethe me, is not mete for me. Who so fyndeth his life, shal lose it: m and he that loseth his life for my sake, shal fynde it.

He that receaueth you, receaueth me: a who so receaueth me, receaueth him y sent me. He that receaueth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receau a prophets rewarde. He y receaueth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, shall receau a righteous mans rewarde: And who soeuer geueth vnto one of the least of these a cuppe of colde water onely to drinke, in y name of a disciple, verely I saie vnto you: he shall not lose his rewarde.

The ri. Chapter

And it came to passe, wha Iesus had made an ende of commandinge his twelue disciples, he departed thence, to teach and to preach in their cities.

Whan Ishone beinge in preson5 herde of the workes of Christ, he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto hym: Art thou he y shal come, or shal we loke for another? Iesus answered and sayde vnto the: Go youre waye and tell Ishone agayne, what ye se and heare. The blynde se, and the lame go: 7 the lepers are cleesned, and they deaf heare: the deed arysse agayne, and the gospel is preached to the poore: and bessed is he, that is not offended at me.

Whan they wente their waye, Iesus beganne to speake vnto the people, concernynge Ishone: What are ye gone out for to se in the wyldernes? Wolde ye se a rede shaken with the wynde? Or what are ye gone out for to se? Wolde ye se a man clothed in soft rayment? Behold, they that weare soft clothinge, are in kinges houses, But what are ye gone out for to se? A prophet? Yee I saie vnto you, and more the a prophet. For this is he, of Verely I saye vnto you: Amonge thy children of wemen arose there not a greater then Ihon the baptiste. Not withstandinge he that is lesse in the kyngdome of Heauen, is greater then he. From the tyne of Ihon baptiste hither to, thy kyngdome of heauen suffreth violence, and the violent plucke it vnto them. For all the prophete and the lawe prophecied vnto Ihon. Also yf ye wil receaue it, this is Helias, which shulde come. Who so hath cares to heare, let hi heare.

But where vnto shal I lикě this generation? It is like vnto childrė which sỹt in the market, and call vnto their felowes, σ saye: we hane pypped vnto you, and ye wolde not daunse: We haue morned vnto you, ὑ ye wolde not wepe. For Ihon came nether eatinge nor drynkinge, a they saye: he hath the deuyll. The sonne of man came eatinge and drynkinge, τ they saye: lo what a glutton and wyne bebeer this ἐ mă is, and a companyon of pub-licans σ synners? And wiszdome is justified of his children.
Then beganne he to vpbrade the cities, in the which most of his miracles were done, δ because they amended not. Wo vnto the Chorasin, Wo vnto the Bethsaida: for yf the miracles which haue bene shewed amőge you, had bene done in Tyre and Sidon, they had repented longe aγo in sackcloth and ashes. Neuertheles I saye vnto you: It shall be easier for Tyre and Sidon in the daye of iudgment, then for you. And thou Capernaum which art lift vp vnto heauen, shalt be brought downe vnto hel. For yf the miracles which haue bene done in the, had bene shewed in Sodom, they had remained vnto this daye. Neuertheles I saye vnto you: It shall be easier for the londε of Sodome in the daye of iudgment, δ for the.
At y heartyme Jesus answered, and sayde: 'I prophēte the (Ὁ father and LОРΕ of heauen and earth) that thou hast hid these things from the wyse and prudent, and opened the vnto babes. Enen so father, for so it pleased the. 'All things are geuen ouer vnto me of my father: and no mă knoweth the somne, but the father: nether knoweth eny man the father, saue the somne, and he to whom the somne wil open it. Come vnto me all ye that laboure and are laden, and I wil ease you. Take my yock vpon you, and lerne of me, for I am meke and lowlye of hert, γ ye shal fynde rest vnto youre soules: δ for my yock is easy, and my burden is light.

The rij. Chapter.

Α At the same tyme wēte Jesus thorow the corne vpon the Sabbath, and his disciples were hongrie, and beganne to plucke of the eares of the corne, and to eate. When y Pharies sawe that, they sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy discipules do that, which is not laufull to do vpon the Sabbath. He sayde vnto them: haue ye not red what David did, when he was hongrie, γ they also y were with him? How he entred in to the house of God, σ ate the shew bredes which were not laufull for him to eate, neither for the y were with him, but onely for the prestes? Or haue ye not red in the lawe how that the prestes in the temple breake the Sabbath, and yet are blamelesse? But I saye vnto you: Ϗ here is one greater then the temple. ἐ But γ ye wyst what this were (I haue pleasure in mercy, and not in offeringe) ye wolde not haue condemned innocentes: For the sonne of man is LОРΕ euен ouer the Sabbath.

And he departed thence, and wente in to their synagoge: and beholde, α there was a mă which had his hāde dryed vp. And they axed him, sayenge: Is it laufull to heale, vpon the Sabbath? α because they might accuse him. But he sayde vnto the: Which of you is it, yf he had a shepe fallē in to a pytte vpon the Sabbath, that wolde not take him, γ and lift him out? And how moch is a man better then a shepe? Therefore it is lefful to do good vpon the Sabbath. Then sayde he to the mă: Stretch forth thine hande. And he stretched it forth: and it was whole agayne like vnto the other.

Then wente the Pharises out, δ and helde a counsell agaynst him, how they might de-stroye him. But wha Jesus knew therof, he departed thence, a moch people folowed him: and he healed them all, and charged them, they shulde not make him knowne: that the thinge might be fulfiled, which was spoken by Esay the prophet, which sayeth: "Beholde, this is my seruanunt, whom I haue chosen: and my beloved, in whom my soule delyeth: I wil put my sprete vpon hi, and he shal shewe judgement vnto the Heithc. He shal not stryue, nor crye, nether shal eny man heare his voyce in the stretes. A broded rede shal he not brake, and flux that beginneth to burne shal he not quench, tyl he sende forth judgment vnto victory. And in his name shal the Heithen trust.

Then was there brought vnto him one possessed (of a deuill) the which was blynde and domme, and he healed him: in so moch y y blynde and domne both spake and sawe. And all the people were amased, and sayde: Is not this the sonne of Dauid? But when the Pharises herde that, they sayde: He dryneth the deuyls out none other wyse, but thorow Beelzebub the chefe of the deuyls. Neuertheles Iesus knew their thoughtes, and sayde vnto them: Every kyngdome deynded within itself, shalbe desolate: and euery coute or house deuyded in it self, maye not continue. So yf one Satan cast out another, the is he at variance within him selfe: how maye then his kyngdome endure? But yf I cast out deuils thorow Beelzebub, thorow whom do youre childre cast them out? Therfore shal they be youre judges. But yf I cast out the deuyls by the sprete of God then is the kyngdome of God come vpon you. Or how ca a man entre in to a stonge mans house, and violently take awaye his goddes, excepte he first bynde the stonge man, the spoyle his house? He that is not with me, is agaynst me: he shall gathereth not with me, scatereth abrode. Therfore I saye vnto you: All synne and blasphemy shalbe foruen vnto men, but the blasphemy agaynst the sprete shal not be foruen vnto men: And whosoener speaketh a worde agaynst the sonne of man, it shalbe foruen him. But whosoener speaketh agaynst the holy goost it shal not be foruen him, nether in this worlde, ner in the worlde to come.

Then answered certayne of the scribes and Pharises, and sayde: Master, we wolde faynye se a tokē of the. And he answered and saide vnto the: This euell and aduoterous generacion seketh a token: and there shal no token be generacion, but the token of the prophete Ionas. For as Ionas was thre dayes and thre nightes in the Whalles bely, so shal the sonne of mā be thre dayes and thre nightes in the hert of the earth. The men of Ninyue shal ryse in the last judgment with this generacion, and shal condeine it: for they dyd pénace to agree with the preachinge of Ionas. And beholde, here is one greater the Ionas. The quene of the south shal aryse in the last iudgment with this generacion, and shal condene it: for she came from the vttmoste partes of the earth, to heare wyyszdome of Salomon: And lo, here is one greater then Salomon.

When the vnclene sprete is gone out of man, 'he walketh thorow drye places, sekinge rest, y fyndeth none. Thē saith he: I wil turne agayne in to my house, fro whences I wete out.' And when he coeth, he fyndeth it emptye, swepte and garnyshed. Then goeth he his waye, a taketh vnto him seuen other spretes worse then him selfe: and when they are entred in, they dwell there: And the ende of that man is worse then the begynnynge. Euen so shal it go with this euell generacion.

Whyle he yet talked vnto the people, beholde, his mother y his brethren stode without desyringe to speake with him. Then sayde one vnto him: Beholde, thy mother and thy brethren stonde without, \( \frac{7}{7} \) wolde speake with the. Neuertheles he answered \( \frac{7}{7} \) sayde vnto him that tolde him: Who is my mother? \( \frac{7}{7} \) who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hande ouer his disciples, \( \frac{7}{7} \) sayde: Beholde my mother and my brethren. For \( \frac{7}{7} \) who soeuer doth \( \frac{7}{7} \) my fader which is in heauen, the same is my brother, sister and mother.

The \( \frac{7}{7} \) Chapter.

A

THE same daye wente Iesus out of \( \frac{7}{7} \) house, \( \frac{7}{7} \) and sat by the see syde, \( \frac{7}{7} \) much people resorted vnto him: so \( \frac{7}{7} \) he weote in to a shyppe and satt him downe, and all the people stode vp\( \frac{7}{7} \) shore. And he spake many thinges vnto the\( \frac{7}{7} \) in symilitudes, sayenge: Beholde, The sower wente forth to sowe: and as he sowed, some fell by the waye syde: Then came the foules, \( \frac{7}{7} \) ate it vp\( \frac{7}{7} \). Some fell vpon stonye grounde, \( \frac{7}{7} \) anone it spronge vp\( \frac{7}{7} \), because it had no depth of earth: But when the Sonne arose, it caught heate: and for so much as it had no rote, it withered away. Some fell amoge the thornes, \( \frac{7}{7} \) gaue frute: some an hundreth folde, some sixtie folde, some thirtie folde. Who so hath eares to heare, let hi heare.

And the disciples came vnto him, and sayde: 'Why speakest thou to\( \frac{7}{7} \) by parables? He answered and sayde vnto the: Vnto you it is geuen to knowe the \( \frac{7}{7} \)mystery of the kyngdome of heauen, but vnto them it is not geuen. For whoso hath, vnto him shall be geue, and he shall haue abundance. But who so hath not, from him shalbe taken away, euen that he hath. Therfore speake I vnto the\( \frac{7}{7} \) by parables, for with seyngye eyes they see not, \( \frac{7}{7} \) with heareinge eares they heare not, for they vnderstonde it not. And in them is fulfilled \( \frac{7}{7} \) prophecie of Esay, which sayeth: 'Ye shall heare in dede, and shal not vnderstonde: and with seinge eyes shal ye se, and not perceave. For \( \frac{7}{7} \) hert of this people is waxed grosse, \( \frac{7}{7} \) their eares are thick of heareinge, \( \frac{7}{7} \) their eyes haue they closed, lest they shulde once se with \( \frac{7}{7} \) eyes, \( \frac{7}{7} \) heare with the eares, \( \frac{7}{7} \) vnderstonde with the hert, \( \frac{7}{7} \) turne, that I might heale them.

But blessed are youre eyes, for they se: \( \frac{7}{7} \) youre eares, for they heare. Verely I saye vnto you: \( \frac{7}{7} \) Many prophets \( \frac{7}{7} \) righteous men haue deseryed to se \( \frac{7}{7} \) thinges that ye se, and haue not sene the: and to heare the thinges that ye heare, and haue not herde the. Heare ye therfore the parable of the kyngdome, and vnderstondethe it not, the euell \( \frac{7}{7} \) cõmeth, and plucketh it awaye that is sowne in his hert:\( \frac{7}{7} \) this is he \( \frac{7}{7} \) is sowne by the waye syde. But he \( \frac{7}{7} \) is sowne in the stoney grounde, is this:\( \frac{7}{7} \) wha one heareth the worde, \( \frac{7}{7} \) anone with ioye receauneth it: neuertheles he hath no rote i him, but endureth for a season: wha \( \frac{7}{7} \) trouble \( \frac{7}{7} \) persecution ayrseth because of the worde, immediatly he his offended. As for him that is sowne amoung \( \frac{7}{7} \) thorns, this is he: Wha one heareth the worde, \( \frac{7}{7} \) the carefullnes of this worlde, \( \frac{7}{7} \) the disseetfullnes of riches choke the worde, \( \frac{7}{7} \) so he becometh vnfrutefull. But he \( \frac{7}{7} \) is sowne in the good grounde, is this:\( \frac{7}{7} \) when one heareth the worde, and vnderstondethe it, and bringeth forth frute: and some geueth an hûdredth folde, some sixtie folde, and some thirtie folde.

Another parable put he forth vnto the, \( \frac{7}{7} \) sayde: 'The kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a man, \( \frac{7}{7} \) sowed good sede in his felde. But while he slept, there came an enemye, and sowed tares amoung \( \frac{7}{7} \) wheate, \( \frac{7}{7} \) wente his waye. Now wha the blade was spröge vp\( \frac{7}{7} \) brought forth frute, the \( \frac{7}{7} \) tares appeared also. Then came the seruaîtes to \( \frac{7}{7} \) housholder, \( \frac{7}{7} \) sayde vnto him: Syr, sowdest not thou good sede in thy felde? Frô whece the hath it tares? He sayde vnto the: that hath the enemye done. The\( \frac{7}{7} \) sayde \( \frac{7}{7} \) seruaîtes: wilt thou then \( \frac{7}{7} \) we go \( \frac{7}{7} \) wede the out? He sayde: No, lest while ye wede out \( \frac{7}{7} \) tares, ye plucke vp the wheate also with the. Let the both grewe together yyll the haruest, and in tym of haruest I wil saye vnto the reapers: Gather \( \frac{7}{7} \) tares first, \( \frac{7}{7} \) bynde the in sheeuhes to be breç: but gather the wheate in to my barne.

Another parable put he forth vnto the, and sayde: The kyngdome of heauen is like vnto a *grane of mustarde sede, which a man toke, and sowed it in his feld. Which is the least amonge all sedes. But when it is growne, it is the greatest amonget herbes, and is a tre:

so that the byrdes vnder the heauen come and dwell in the branches of it.

Another parable spake he vnto thē: The kyngdome of heauen is like vnto leuē, which a woman toke, and myxte it amonget three peckes of meele, tyll all was lenended.

* All soch things spake Iesus vnto *y people by parables, * without parables spake he nothinge vnto thē: * the thinge might be fulfilled, which was spoke by * prophet, say-enge: * I wil open my mouth in parables, and * spake out the secrets from the begin-ynynge of the worlde.

Then sent Iesus the people away, and came home. And his disciplices came vnto hī, and sayde: Declare vnto us * parable of * tares of * feld. Iesus answered, and sayde * vnto them: He that soweth the good sede, is * the sonne of man: the feld is the worlde: * good * sede are the childre of the kyngdome:
The tares are the children of wickednes: * enemeye
* that soweth thē, is the dewell: * har-* nest is the ende of the worlde: * reapers are * * angels. * For like as * tares are weded out, * and brest in the fyre, euē so shal it go in * * ende of this worlde.
The sonne of man shal
sende forth his angels, * they shal gather out of his kyngdome all thinges * offende, * thē * do iniquyte, * shal cast thē in to a fornace of fyre, thēr shalbale waylinge and gnaszhinge of teth. * Thē shal the righteous shyne as the Sonne, in the kyngdome of their father,
Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

Agayne, the kyngdome of heauen is like
vnto a treasure hyd in the feld, which a mā founde and hid it, and for ioye therof he wēte * solde all * he had, and bought * feld.

Agayne, the kyngdome of heauen is like
vnto a marchaüt, * sought good pearles: * wha
* he had founde a precious pearle, * he * wete
* and solde all that he had, * bought it.

Agayne, * kyngdome of heauen is like vnto
a nett cast in to * see, wherwith are takē all maner of fyshes: * whā it is ful, mō drāwe it * out vnto * shore, * sytt * gather * good * to the vessels, but cast the bad awaye. * So shal it be also in * ende of * worlde. The angels shal go out, * seuer the bad frō the * righteous, * shal cast thē in to a fornace of fyre, * thare shalbale waylinge * gnaszhinge

of teth.

And Iesus sayde vnto them: Haue ye vnderstōde all these thinges? They sayde:
* Yee LORDE. Then sayde he vnto thē:
Therfore every scribe taught vnto * kyngdome of heauen, is like an housholder, which byrnyteh out of his treasure thinges new and olde.

And it came to passe whē Iesus had ended these parables, he departed thence, and came in to his owne coītre, and taught thē in their synagoges: in so moch, that they were aston-nied and sayde: Whēce cōmeth soch wyszddome * power vnto him? * Is not this the carpēters sonne? * Is not his mother called Mary? * and his brethre Iames * Joses, and Symon and Iude? * And are not all his sisters here with us? * Whence hath he thē all these things? * And they were offended at him.
But Iesus sayde vnto thē: * A prophet is nowhere lesse sett by, thē at home * amonget his owne. And he dyd not many miracles there, because of their vnbeleue.

The *yiii. Chapter.

A T that tymē Herode * Tetrarcha herde A of * fame of Iesus, * sayde vnto his sinauaes: This is Iōhō * baptist. He is rysen agayne frō the dead, therfore are his dedes so mightie. * For Herode had takē Iōhō bounđe hī, * put him in preson for Herodias sake his brothers Phillips wife. For Iōn sayde vnto him: * It is not lauffull for * to haue her. And AYnē wolde he haue put him to death, but he feared the people, because they helde him for a Prophet.

But whan Herode helde his byrhthe daye, the doughter of Herodias daunced before thē, and that pleased Herode well, wherof he promessed her with an ooth, * he * wolde geeue * whateoer she wolde axe. And she (beynge instructe of hir mother afore) sayde: geeue me Iōn baptismes heade in a platter. And the kyngne was sory. Neuertheles for * ooth sake, * * sit with him at * table, he cōmaundèd it to be geuen her, t sent, a be-heeded Iohn in the preson. And his heed was brought in a platter, and geuen to the damsell, a she brought it vnto her mother. Then came his discipes, and toke his body, and buried it, and wente and tolde Iesus.

Whan Iesus herde ‹y›, he departed thence by shippē in to a desert place alone. And wha the people herde therof, they folowed him on fote out of ‹y› cities. And Iesus wete forth, and sawe moch people, and had pytie vpon them, and healed their sicke. But at euen his discipes vnto him, s saide: This is a deserte place, and ‹y› night falleth on: let ‹y› people departe from the, that they maye go in to the townes, and bye them vptyayles. But Iesus sayde vnto them: They nede not go awaye, geue ye the to eate. 'The saide they vnto him: We haue here but fyue loaues and two fyshes. And he sayde: bringe the hithe. And he cōmaunde ‹y› people to syt downe vpon the grasse, and toke ‹y› fyue loaues and two fyshes, and lokèd vp toward heauen, and gaue thanges, and brake and gaue the loaues vnto the discipes, and the discipes gaue them to the people. And they all ate, and were suffised. And they gathered vp of the broken meate that remayned ouer, twoblade baszkettes full. And they ‹y› ate, were aboute a fyue thousande men, besyde wemen and children.

And straight waye Iesus made his discipes to ente in to a shippē, a to go ouer before hi, tyll he had sent ‹y› people awaye. And when he had sent the people awaye, he wēte vp in to a mountayne alone, to make his prayer. And at euen he was there him self alone. And ‹y› shippe was alreadelys in ‹y› myddest of the see, ‹y› was tost with wasves, for the winde was contrary. But in ‹y› foureth watch of ‹y› night Iesus came vnto ‹y›, walkinge vpone the see. And when his discipes sawe him goinge vpon the see, they were afraied, sayenge: It is some spretē, and cried out for feare. But straight waye Iesus spanke vnto them, and sayde: Be of good cheare, it is I, be not a floraied.

Peter answered him, s saide: LORDE, ‹y› it be thou, byd me come vnto the vpon ‹y› water. And he sayde: come on thy waye. And Peter stepte out of the shippe, a wēte vpon the water, to come vnto Iesus. But when he sawe a mightye wynde, he was atraied, a begüne to sytke, a cried, sayenge: LORDE, helpe me. And ubyte Iesus stretchēd forth his hande, a caught him, a sayde vnto him: O thou of little faith, wherfore doute thou? And they wente in to the shippe,
Then answered Peter and said unto him: Declare unto us this parable. And Jesus said unto them: Are ye yet therefore without understanding? Percease ye not, what souter goeth in at the mouth, and deseth down in to the belly, is cast out in to the draught? But the thing that proceedeth out of the mouth cometh from the hert, that defyleth the mouth. For out of the hert come euell thoughts, murther, breakynge of wedlocke, whordome theft, false witness, blasphemy. These are euell things that defyle a man. But to eate with vnwaschen hondes, defyleth not a man.

And departed in to the coastes of Tyre and Sidon. And beholde, a womā of Canaan wete out of the same coastes, criéd after him, sayenge: O LORDE, thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon me. My daughter is sore vexed with a denell. And he answered her neuer a worde. The came his disciples vnto him, and besought him, sayenge: Seede her awaye, for she crieth after us. But he answered, and said: I am not sent, but vnto the lost shepe of the house of Israel. Notwithstanding she came and fell downe before him, and said: LORDE, helpe me. He answered, and said: It is not good, to take the childrens bread, and cast it vnto dogges. It is true that LORDE (sayde she) Neuertheless the hooldes eate of the crampedes, that fall fro their lorde table. Then answered Jesus and said vnto her: O womā, greate is thy faith be it vnto the, euē as thou desyretest. And hir hird was made hole at the same houre.

And Jesus departed thence, and came nyce vnto the see of Galile, and went vp in to a mountayne, and sat downe there, and there came vnto him moch people, haunging with them, lame, blinde, dorne, crepel, and other many, and cast them downe at Iesus fete. And he healeth them, in so much that the people warded, to see the doome speake, the crepel whole, the hult to go, and the blinde to se. And they prayed the God of Israel.

And Jesus called his disciples vnto him, and said: I haue compassion vpon the people, for they haue cōtyned with me now three dayes,

|=| haue notinge to eate, g I wil not let the departe fastynge, lest they perishe in the waye. And his disciples sayde vnto him: Whence shulde we get so much bred in the wyldernes, that we might satisfie so much people? And Jesus sayde vnto the: How many loanes haue ye? They sayde: seue, x a few little fyshes. And he commaunded they people to syt downe vpon the ground, and toke they seue loanes, the fyshes, x gaunt thankes x brake the, gaunt the to his disciples, x they discipled gaunt the vnto the people. And they all ate, x were suffisid. And they toke yp of the brokemeat was left, seuen baszkettes full. And they x ate, were foure thousande men, besides women and children. And when he had sent awaye the people, he went in to a shippe, and came in to the parties of Magdala.

THEN came the Pharises and Saduces vnto him, and tēpted him, requyringe him to shewe the a toke from heauc. But he answered, and said: At euē ye saye: It wil be fayre wedder, for the szkye is reed. And in the mornynge, ye saye: It wil be foule wedder to day, for the szkye is reed, x gloometh. O ye ypoercytes, ye can discerne the fashion of the szkye: can ye not ther diserne the tokēs of these tynes alas? This euell and aduouterous generacion seketh a toke, x there shall no tokē be genē the, but the tokē of the prophet Jonas. So he left the, and departed.

And whā his discipled were come to the other syde of the water, they had forgotten to take bred with them. Jesus sayde vnto the: Take hede x beware of the leue of x Pharises and the Saduces. x Ther thought they in the selues, sayenge: We haue takē no bred with us. Whē Jesus perceaued, he sayde to the: O ye of little faith, why are ye combred (in youre minde) because ye haue takē no bred with you? Do ye not yet perceau? Remembre ye not those fyue loanes, whē there were fyue thousande men, how many baszkettes toke ye vp? Neither x senē loanes when there were foure thousande men, x how many baszkettes toke ye vp? Why perceau ye not then, why x speake not to you of bred, whē I saide: beware of the leue of x Pharises and of x Saduces?

Then came Jesus to the coasts of the cite Cesarea Philippi, and asked his disciples, saying: Whosoever doth me see, he sonne of man is? They said: Some saye, thou art Ihô the baptist. Some thou art Elias, Some thou art artery, or one of thou prophets. He said to them: But who saie ye thou am? The answered Symô Peter and said: Thou art Christ, thou sonne of thou lyuinge God. And Jesus answered, thou saide vnto thou: Blessed art thou Symô thou sonne of Ionas, for flesh thou bloude hath not opened thou vnto the, but my father thou is in heauê. And I saie to thou: Thou art Peter, thou vps this rocke wil I builde my congregacion: and thou gates of hell shal not prægnayle agaynst it. And the keyes of heauen wil I geue vnto the: Whosoever thou shalt bynde vpon earth, shalbe bounde also in heauê: who whatsoever thou shalt loose vpon earth, shalbe lowed also in heauê. Then charged he his disciples, that they shulde tell no mā that he was Jesus Christ.

From that tymeforth begane Jesus to shew vnto his disciples, how that he must go vnto Ierusalem, and suffer many thinges of the elders, and of the hye prestes, and of the scribe, and be put to death, and ryse againe the third daye. But Peter toke him asyde, and begane to rebuke him, sayenge: Lorde, fauoure thy self, let not this happen vnto the. Nevertheles he turned him aboute, thou sayde vnto Peter: Aooyde fro me Sathā, thou hindrest me, for thou savourest not thy thinges that be of God, but of men. Then said Jesus vnto his disciples: If any man wil folowe me, let him forsake himself, thou take vp his crosse, and folowe me. For who so wil saue his life, shal lose it: but who so loseth his life for my sake, shal fynde it. What helpeth a man though he wanne the whole worlde, and yet suffere harme in his soule? Or what can a man geue, to redeem his soule withall? For it wil come to passe, that the sonne of mā shal come in the glory of his father with his angels, and then shal he rewarde euery one acordinge to his dedes. Verely I saye vnto you: There stonde here

Some, which shal not taist of death, tyll they se thou sonne of mā come in his kingdome.
rebuked him, and he:
and
child was healed, even that same hour.

Then came the disciples unto Jesus secretly,
and sayde: "Why could not we cast him out?
Jesus sayde unto them: Because of youre vn-believe. For I saye verbely unto you: "Ye who have faith as a grane of mustarde sede, ye may saye vnto this mountayne: Remoue therefore to yeronder place, and he shall remoul-e, nether shall any thing be vnpossible vnto you.
Howbeit this kinde goeth not out, but by prayer and fastynge.

Wylle they occupied in Galile, Jesus sayde vnto them: it will come to passe, that the somme of man shalbe deluyered in to the hondes of men, and they shall kyll him, and the thirde daye shall he arisse agayne. And they were very sory. Now wha they were come to Capernaum, they that receaue the tribute money, came to Peter, and sayde:
Doth youre master paye tribute? He sayed:
yee. And when he was come home, Jesus preuented him, and sayde: What thinkest thy Synamon? Of whom do the kynges of the earth take toll or tribute? Of their children, or of straugers? Then sayde Peter to him: Of straugers. Jesus sayde vnto him: Then are ye children fre. Neuer-theles lest we offende them, go thy waye to the see, and cast thine angle, and take the fish that first cometh vp, and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt fynde a pece and twenty pens, take that, and geue it them for me and the.

The r8ij. Chapter.

AT the same tyme came the disciples vnto Jesus, and sayde: "Wli is the greatest in the kyngdome of heauen? And Jesus called a child vnto him, and set hym in the myndest amonste them, and sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: Excepte ye turne and become as children, ye shall not entre in to the kyngdome of heauen. Whoseouer therfore humbleth hym selve as this child, is the greatest in the kyngdome of heauen.
And who so receaueth such a child in my name, receaueth me. But who so offendeth one of these little ones which beleue in me, it were better for him, that a mylstone were hanged

aboute his neck, and he drowned in the depth of the see.

So vnto the worlde because of slaunder.
"Yee there must slaunder come: but wo vnto that man, by whom slaunder commeth. But yf thy hande or thy fote offende the, cut him of, and cast him from the. It is better for yf to ente in vnto life lame or crepell, the yf thou shuldest haue two hodes or two fete, and be cast in to euerlastinge fyre. And yf thyne eye offende the, plucke it out, a cast it from the. Better it is for the to ente in vnto life with one eye, the to have two eyes, and to be cast in to hell fyre.

Take heed, ye despyse not one of these little ones. For I saye vnto you: their angels do alwaye beholde the face of my father which is in heauen: for the somme of man is come to saue that which is lost. How thinke ye? "Yf a man haue an hundreth shpe, and one of the be gone astraye, doth not he leue
the nyentie and nyene in the mountaynes, and goeth, and seeketh that one which is gone astraye? And yf it happen that he fynde it, verely I saye vnto you: he reioyseth more ouer it, then ouer the nyentie and nyene which were not astraye. Euen so is it not the will before youre father in heauen, that one of these little ones shulde pershe.

"Yf thy brother trespace agaynst the, go and tell him his faute betwene the and him alone. Yf he heare the, thou hast wone thy brother. But yf he heare the not, then take yet with the one or two, that in the mouth of two or thre wytnesses, every matter maye be stablyshed. Yf he heare not them, tell it unto the congregacion. Yf he heare not the congregacion, holde him as an Heithen and Publican. Verely I saye vnto you: what souere ye shal ynde vpon earth, shalbe boide also in heauen: what souere ye lose vpon earth, shalbe lowesd also in heaue.
Agayne, I saye vnto you: Yf two of you shal agree vpon earth (for what thinge souere it be yf they wolle desyre) they shall haue it of my father which is in heaue. For where two or thre are gathered together i my name, there am I in the myndest amonste them.

Then came Peter vnto him, a sayde,
LORDE, how oft shal I forgeue my brother,
The gospel of S. Mathew.

Chap. xir.  The gospel of S. Mathew.

The gospel of S. Mathew.

1 For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and cleave unto his wife: and they two shall be one flesh. Now are they not twain, but one flesh. Let not man therefore put a sunder, yea which God hath coupled together.

2 Then sayde they: Why dyd Moses then commaunde to geue a testimoniall of deuorsement, to put her away? He sayde vnto the: Moses (because of thy hardnes of youre hertes) suffred you to put awaye youre wyues: Neuertheles fro the begynnyng he hath not bene so. But I saye vnto you: Whosoever putteth awaye his wyfe (excepte it be for fornicacion) and marie anothr, breaketh wedlocke. And who so marie heth y se is deuorued, commytteth adultrye.

Then sayde his disciples vnto him: Yf y matter be so betwene man and wife, the is it not good to mary. But he sayde vnto them: All mæ can not cöprehende y sayenge, saue they to who it is gene. For there be some gelded, which are so borne from their mothers wombe: and there be some gelded, which are gelded of men: th there be some gelded, which have gelded the selues for the kyngdome of heauens sake. He that can cöprehende it, let him comprehende it.

4 Then were brought vnto him yóge children, y he shulde put his hondes vpon the, & praye. And y disciples rebuked them. But Jesus sayde: Suffre y childræ, for they the not to come vnto me, for vnto soch belogeth the kyngdome of heauen. And wha he had layed his hodes vpö the, he departed thence.

And beholde, one came vnto him, and sayde: 'Good master, what good shall I do? I maye have the euer lastinge life? He sayde vnto him: Why callest thou me good? there is none good, but God onely. Neuertheles ye thou wilt entre in to life, kepe y cómàudeomètes. Thé sayde, he vnto him: Which? Jesus saide: Thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not breake wedlocke: thou shalt not steale: thou shalt have no false wytneys: Honour father and mother: and thou shalt loue thy neighboyr as thy self. Then sayde the yonge mæ vnto him: All these have I kepte fro my youth vp: what lack I yet? Jesus sayde vnto him: Ye thou wilt be perfecte, go thy waye and sell that thou hast, and take it vnto the poore, and thou shalt haue a treasure in heauen, and come and folowe me. Whan thon man herde thy wordes, he wente awaye sory, for he had greate possessiouns.

Iesus sayde vnto his discipules: Verely I saye vnto you: it shalbe harde for a rich man to entrie in to the kyngdome of heauen. And morover I saye vnto you: It is easier for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a needle, then it is for a rich man to entrie in to the kyngdome of heauen. Whan his discipules herde that, they were exceedingly amased, and sayde: Who can thē be saued? Neuertheles Iesus behelde them, and sayde vnto them: With men it is vnpossyble, but with God all thinges are possyble.

Then answered Peter and sayde vnto him: Beholde, we have forsakē all, and followed the: What shal we haue thervore? Iesus sayde vnto thē: Verely I saye vnto you: that when the sonne of man shal sytt in the seate of his māieste, ye which haue folowed me in the new byrth, shal syt also vpon twolue seates, and judge twolue trybes of Israel. And who so euer forsaketh houses or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or londes, for my names sake, the same shal receaue an hundred fold, and inheret euerverlasting life. But many that be the first, shalbe the last: and the last shal be the first.

The 17. Chapter.

THE kyngdome of heauen is like vnto an housholder, which wête out early in the mornynge, to hyre labourers in to his vynyarde. And whai he had agreed with the labourers for a peny a daye, he sent thē in to his vynyarde. And aboutī thīre houre he wenē out, and sawe other stondinge ydle in the market place, and sayde vnto them: Go ye also in to my vynyarde, as what so euer is right, I wil geue it you. And they wete their waye. Agayne, he wete out aboute the sixte and nyenth houre, and dyd likenewe, and aboute the eleuenth houre he wete out, and founde other stodynge ydle, and sayde vnto them: Whyn stonde ye here all the daye ydle? They sayde vnto hym: because no man hath my left, is not myne to geue, but vnto the for who it is prepared of my father."

\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} When the ten herde that, they dislayned at the two brethren. But Iesus called them vnto him, and sayde: Ye knowe that \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} prynces of the worlde haue domynacion of the people, and the greatest exercise power amonge the. It shal not be so amonge you.
But who so euer wyl be greate amonge you, let him be youre mynister: \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} who soeuer wyl be chefe, let him be youre servaunt: Euen as the sonne of man came, not to be serued, but to do seruyce, and to geue his life to a redemption for man.

\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} And when they departed from Iericho, moch people folowed him: and beholde, two blynde men sat by the waye syde: And when they herde that Iesus passed by, they cried \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} sayde. O LORDE, thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy vpon vs. But \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} people rebuked the,
that they shulde holde their peace. Neuer-theles they cried the more, \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} sayde: O LORDE, thou sonne of Dauid, haue mercy pon vs. And Iesus stode styll, and called them, and sayde: What wil ye, \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} I shal do vnto you? They sayde vnto him: LORDE, that oure eyes maye be opened. And Iesus had compassion vpon them, and touched their eyes: \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} immediatly their eies receauned sight.
And they folowed him.

The \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} Chapter.

\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} NOW whan they drew nye vnto Ierus-salem,\textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} and were come to Bethphage vnto mount Oliuete, Iesus sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go in to the towne that lyeth before you, \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} anone ye shal fynde an Asse bounde, and hir foale with her:
lowse them, and brynge the vnto me. And \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} eny man saye ought vnto you, saye ye: the LORDE hath nede of the. And straight waye he wil let them go. But all this was done, that the thinge might be fulfyllen,
which was spoken by the prophet, sayenge: \textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} Tell the daughter of Sion: beholde, thy kyng commeth vnto \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} meke, syttinge vpon an Asse and a foale of \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} Asse vset to the yoke. The disciples wente, and dyd as Iesus commaned them, and brought the Asse and the foale, \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} layed their clothes vpon them, and set him theron. But many of the people spred their garments in the waye: other cut downe branches from the trees, and strawed them in the waye. As for the people that wente before and that came after, they cryed and sayde: Hosanna vnto the sonne of Dauid, \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} Blessed be he that commeth in the name of the LORDE, Hosanna in the height.

\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} And whan he was come in to Ierusalem, all the cite was moued, and sayde: \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} Who is this? And the people sayde: This is Iesus \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} prophet of Nazareth out of Galile. And Iesus wente in to the temple, and cast out all them that bought and sold in the temple, and ouerthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seates of them that solde
dones, and sayde vnto them: It is wrytr:
\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} My house shalbe called \textdagger{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} house of prayer,
but ye haue made it a denne of murtherers.
The blynde also and \textdagger{} lame came vnto him
in the temple, and he healed them.

\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} But whan the hye prestes and the scrybes sawe the wonders that he dyd, and the children cryenge in the temple and sayenge: Hosanna vnto the sonne of Dauid, they dislayned, and sayde vnto him: Hearest thou what these saye?
Iesus sayde vnto them: Yee. Hane ye neuer red: \textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} Out of the mouth of very babes and sucklinges thou hast ordeyned prayse? And he left them there, \textdagger{} and wente out of the cite vnto Bethania, and there abode ouer night.

\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} But in the mornynge as he returned in to the cite, he hugred. And in the waye he sawe a fygge tre, and came vnto it, and founde nothinge theron, but leaues onely,\textdagger{} and sayde vnto it: Neuer frute growe on the from hence forth. And immediatly the fygge tre wythred awaye. And whan his discipes sawe that, they maruened, and sayde. How is \textdagger{} fygge tre wythred awaye so soone? Iesus answered cand sayde vnto them: Verely I saye vnto you:
\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} Ye ye haue faith \textdagger{} doubt not, ye shal not onely do this with the fygge tre, but \textdagger{} ye shal saye vnto this mountayne: Avoyde, and cast thy self in to the see, it shal be done.
\textit{\textdagger}{\textcyrillic{\textemdash}} And what soeuer ye axe in prayer, ye ye belieue, ye shal receaune it.
And when he was come in to the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came vnto him (as he was teachinge) & sayde: 'By what auctorite doest thou these things? and who gaue the this auctorite? Jesus answered and sayde vnto them: I wil axe a worde of you also: which ye ye tell me, I in like wyse wyll tell you, by what auctorite I do these things. The baptisme of Ioh, whiche was it? from heuan, or of men? Then thought they amoge them, & sayde: If ye saye it was from heuan, then shal he saye vnto us: Why dyd ye not then beleue him? But if ye saye it was of men, then feare we the people: For 4 every man helde Iohon for a prophet. And they answered Jesus, & sayde: We can not tell. Then sayde he vnto them: Neither tell I you, by what auctorite I do these things. But what thinke ye? A certaine man had two sones, & came to the first, & sayde: Go thy waye my sonne, & worke to daye in my vynyarde. He answered & sayde: I wil not, but afterwarde he repented, & wente. He came also vnto the secunde, & sayde likewise. & He answered & saide: I wil syr. And wiste not. Whether of them twayne dyd the wil of the father? They sayde vnto him: the first. Jesus sayde vnto the: Verely I saye vnto you: The publicans & harlottes shal come in to the kynodome of God before you. 'For Iohn came vnto you, & taught you thy right waye & ye beleued him not: but the publicans & harlottes beleued hi. As for you, though ye save it, yet were ye not moued with repenteance, that ye might afterwarde hauue beleued him.

Heare another parable. There was a certaine housholder which planted a vynyarde, & hedged it roude aboute, & dydged a wyne presse in it, & built a tower, & let it out vnto huszbandmen, & wente in to a straunge country. Now wha the tyne of the frute drew neare, he sent his seruauntes to the huszbandmen, to receaue the frutes of it. Then the huszbandmen caught his seruauntes: one they bett, another they kyllde, the thirde they stoned. Agayne, he sent other seruauntes, moo then the first, & they dyd vnto them in like maner. At the last he sent his owne sonne vnto them, & sayde: they wyl stode in aue of my sonne. But wha the huszbandmen sayde the sonne, they sayde amoge the selues: This is the Heyre, come, let us kyl hym, & take his inheritance vnto oure selues. And they caught him, & thrust him out of the vynyarde, & shewed him. Now wha the lord of the vynyarde commeth, what wyl he do with those huszbandmen? They sayde vnto him: He wyl cruelly destroye those euell personnes, & let out his vyniarde vnto other huszbandmen, which shal delyuer him the frute at tymes conuenient.

Jesus sayde vnto the: Dyd ye neuer rede in the scriptures: The same stone which the buyliders refused, is become the head stone in the corner? This was the LORDES doyenge, & it is marueles ioure eyes. Therefore I saie vnto you: The kynodome of God shalbe taki fro you, & shalbe geue vnto the Heithi, which shal brynge forth frutes of it. And who so falleth vp this stone, shalbe broke in peces: & loke vp whom it falleth, it shal grynde him to pouder. & When the hye prestes & Pharises herde his parables, they perceaued, that he spake of them. & they wente aboute to take him, but they feared them people, because they helde hi for a prophet.

The yriij. Chapter.

And Jesus answered, and spake vnto the agayne by parables, & sayde: The kynodome of heauen is like vnto a kynge, which married his sonne. And sent forth his seruauntes, to call the gestes vnto the mariage, & they wolde not come. Agayne, he sent forth other seruauntes, & sayde: Tell the gestes: Beholde, I haue prepared my dynner, myne oxen & my fed catel are kylded, & all things are reade, come to the mariage. But they made light of it, & wente their wayes: one to his huszbandrye, another to his marchaundise. As for the remnaunt, they toke his seruauntes, & intreated the shamefully, & sley the. When the kynge herde that, he was wroth, & sent forth his warriers, & destroyed those murthurers, & set syre vpon their cite. Then sayde he vnto his seruauntes: The mariage in dede is prepared, but the gestes were not worthy. Go youre waye out therfore in to the yhe wayes, and as many as ye fynde, byd them to the mariage. And the seruayntes wete out in to the yhe wayes, and gathered together as many as they could fynde, both good and bad, and the tables were all full. Then the kyngesse wete in, to se the gestes, and spyed there a man that had not on a weddymge garment, and sayde vnto hym: Frende, how camest thou in hither, hast not on a weddymge garment? And he was euen spechless. Then sayde the kyngesse vnto his seruayntes: Take and bynde him hande and fote, cast him into the yther darcknes: there shall be waylinge and gauashinge of teth. For many be called, but few are choosë.

Then wente the Pharises, and toke counsell, how they might tangle him in his wordes, and sent vnto him their disciples with Herodes officers, and sayde: Master, we knowe that thou art true, and teacast the ywaye of God truly, and carest for no ma; for thou regarest not the outwarde appearance of me. Tell us therfore, how thinkest thou? Is it laufull to geue tribute vnto the Emperour, or not? Now wha Iesus perceaued their wickednes, he sayde: O ye ypcrites, why tete ye me? Shewe me yf tribute money. And they toke hí a peny. And he sayde vnto the: Whose is this ymage and superscription? They sayde vnto hym: The Emperours. Then sayde he vnto them: Gene therfore vnto the Emperour, that is the Emperours: and geue vnto God, that which is Gods. When they herde that, they marueyled, and left hym, and wete their waye.

The same daye there came vnto him the Saduces (which holde that there is no resurrection) and axed him, and sayde: Master, Moses sayde: Ye a man dye, haungye no children, his brother shall mary his wife, rayse vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there with us seue brethren. The first maried a wife, and dyed: for somch as he had no sede, he left his wife vnto his brother. Like wyse the seconde, and thirde vnto the seconth. Last of all the woman dyed also. Now in the resurrection, whose wife shal be of the seuen? For they all had her. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Ye erre, and vnderstode not the scripture, nor the power of God. In the resurrection they shall nether mary, nor be married, but are as the angels of God in heauen.

As touchinge the resurrection of the dead, haue ye not red, what is spoken vnto you of God, which sayeth: I am the God of Abraham, and y God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob? Yet is not God a God of the dead, but of the lyuynge. And when the people herde that, they were astonnyed at his doctrine.

When the Pharises herde, that he had stopped the mouth of the Saduces, they gathered them selues together. And one of them (a Scribe) tetept him, and sayde: Master, which is the cheuest commaundement in the lawe? Iesus saide vnto hym: Thou shalt loue the LORDE thy God, with all thy hert, with all thy soule, and with all thy mynde: this is the pryncipall and greatest commaundement. As for the seconde, it is like vnto it: Thou shalt loue thy neibbour as thy self. In these two commaundementes hange all the lawe and the prophets.

Now whyle the Pharises were gathered together, Iesus axed them, and sayde: What thinke ye of Christ? Whose sonne is he? They saide vnto hym: Dauids. He sayde vnto them: How then doth Dauid in prete, call him LORDE, sayenge: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: Syt thou on my right honde, tylly make thine enemies thy fote stole. Yf Dauid now call him LORDE, how is he then his sonne? And no man coude answere him one worde, nether durst eny man axe him eny mo questios, fro that daye forth.

THE 111. Chapter.

THEN spake Iesus vnto the people and to his disciples, and sayde: The scrybes and Pharises are set downe vpon Moses seate. Therfore what soever they bid you observe, that obserue and do; but after their workes shall ye not do, for they saye do not. For they bynde heuy and intollerable burthenes, and laye them vpon mens shuldres: But they them selues wil not heauen at them with one of their fylgers. All their worke do they to be sene of men. They set abrode their Philateries,* and make large borders upon their garments, and loute to syt vppermost at the table, and to have the chafe seates in the synagoges, and loute to be saluted in the market, and to be called of me Rabbi.

*But ye shall not sytte youre selues to be called Rabbi, for one is youre master, euens Christ, and all ye are brethren. And call no man father vpon earth, for one is youre father, which is in heauen. And ye shall not sytte youre selues to be called masters, for one is youre master, namely, Christ. He that is greatest amoge you, shalle youre seruant.

*For who so exalteth himself, shalle be brought lowe; and he that humbleth himself, shalle exalted.

Wo vnto you Scrybes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes, that shut vp the kyngdome of heauen before men: Ye come not in youre selues, nether sytte ye to enter, that wolde be in.

Wo vnto you Scrybes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes, that deoure wyddowes houses, and that vnder the cultoure of praegyene longe prayers, therfore shalle ye receaue ye greater damnacion.

Wo vnto you Scrybes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes, which compasse see and lode to make one Prospelyte: and when he is become one, ye make of him a childe of hell, two fold more then ye youre selues are.

Wo vnto you blynde gydes, which saye: Who so euere sweareth by the temple, that is nothinge: but who so euere sweareth by the golde of the temple, he is gilte. Ye fooles and blynde, whether is greater? the golde, or the tèple that sanctifieth the golde? And who so euere sweareth by the altaire, that is nothinge: but who so euere sweareth by the offeringe that is vpó it, he is gilte. Ye fooles and blynde, whether is greater? the offeringe, or the altaire that sanctifieth the offeringe? Therfore who so sweareth by the altaire, sweareth by the same, and by all that is theron: and who so sweareth by the temple, sweareth by the same, and by him that dwelleth therein. And who so sweareth by heauen, sweareth by the seate of God, and by him that syteth thron.

Wo vnto you scrybes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes, which tythe Myut, Anyse and Commyn, and leue the weightier matters of the lawe behynde: namely, judgment, mercy, and faith. These ought to have bene done, and not to leue the other behynde. O ye blynde gydes, which strayne out a gnat, but swalowe vp a Camell.

Wo vnto you scrybes and Pharises, ye Ypocrytes, which make cleane the vpper syde of the cuppe and platter, but within are ye full of robberye and excess. Thou blynde Pharise, clense first the in syde of the cuppe and platter, that the out syde may be cleane also.

Wo vnto you scrybes and Pharises, ye Ypocrytes, which be like vnto paynted Sepulcres, that appeare beutyfull outwarde, but within they are full of deed mens bones and all fythines. Euen so are ye also: Outwarde ye appeare righteous vnto men, but within ye are full of ypocrisye and iniqyte.

Wo vnto you scrybes and Pharises, ye ypocrytes, which buyde the tombes of the prophets, and garnyshe the sepulcres of the righteous, and saye: Yf we had bene in oure fathers tyme, we wolde not hane bene partakers with them in the bloude of the prophets. Therfore ye be wytnesses vnto youre selues, that ye are the children of them, which slew the prophets. Go to, fulffyl ye also the measure of youre fathers. O ye serpentes, O ye generacion of vypers, how wyf ye escape the damnacion of Hell?

Therfore behold, I sende vnto you prophetes and wyse men, and scrybes, and some of them shal ye kyll and crucifie, and some of them shal ye scourge in youre synagoges, and persecute them from cite to cite: that vpou you maye come all the righteous bloude which hath bene shed vpon ye earth, from the bloude of righteous Abel, vnto ye bloude of Zachary ye sonne of Barachias, whom ye swe wete between the temple and the altaire. Verely I saye vnto you: All these thinges shall light vpó this generacion. O Ierusalam Ierusalam, thou that slayest the prophetes, and stonest Chap. xiii.  The gospell of St. Mathew.

AND Jesus went out and departed from the temple, and his disciples came vnto him, to shew him the buyldinge of the temple. But Jesus sayde vnto them: Se ye not all these things? Verely I saye vnto you: there shall not be left here one stone vpon another, but all shall be cast downe. And as he sat vpon the mount Oliuete, his disciples came vnto him secretly, and sayde: Tell us, whé shal these things come to passe? and whé shall be the token of thy comyngne, and of the ende of the worlde? Jesus answered and sayde vnto them: Take hede, that no man disceane you. For there shall many come in my name, and saye: I am Christ, and shall disceane many.

Ye shal here of warres, and of ſe noyse of warres: take hede, and be not ye troubled. All these things must first come to passe, but the ende is not yet. For one people shall ryse vp agaynst another, and one realme agaynst another: and there shalbe pestiléce, honger, and earthquake here ſe there. All these are the begynnynge of sorowes. Then shall they put you to trouble, ſe shall kyll you, and ye shall hate of all people for my names sake. Thé shall many be offended, and shal betraye one another, and shal hate one the other. And many false prophete shall aryse, and shall disceane many: and because iniquyte shall haue the vpper hande, the lone of many shal abate. But whoso endureth vnto ſe ende, ſe same shall be saved. And this gospell of the kyngdome shalbe preached in all the worlde for a wyntnes vnto all people, and then shall the ende come.

Whan ye theryore shal se the abomination of desolacion (wher of it is spoken by Daniel the prophet) stonde in the holy place (who so reade it, he let marke it well) then let the which be in Iewry, fyle vnto ſe moutaynes:

and let him which is on the house toppe, not come downe to fet any thinge out of his house: and let him which is in ſe felde, not turne back to fetc his clothes. But wo vnto them that are with childe, and to them that gene suck in those dayes. But pray ye, that youre flight be not in ſe wynter, ner on the Sabbath. "For then shal there be greate trouble, soz was not from the begynnynge of the worlde vnto this tyme, ner shalbe. Yee and excepte those daies shulde be shortened, there shulde no flesh be saued: but for ſe choesens sake those daies shalbe shortened.

"Then yf eny man shal saye vnto you: Io, here is Christ, or there, beleue it not. For there shal aryse false Christes and false prophete, andshal do greate tokés and wonders: In so mocch, that (yf it were possible) the very chosen shulde be brought in to errour. Beholde, I have tolde you before. Wherefore yf they shal saye vnto you: Beholde, he is in the wildernes, go not ye forth: Beholde, he is in the chamber, beleue it not. For like as the lightenyng goeth out from the East, and shyneth vnto the west, so shal the comynge of the sonne of man be. For where so euer a deed carcase is, yere wyl the Aegles be gathered together.

Immedicatly after the trouble of the same tyme, shal the Sonne and Moone lose their light, and the starres shal fall from heauen, and the powers of heauen shal mowe: and then shal appeare the token of the sonne of man in heauen: and then shal all the kynredes of the earth mourne, and they shal se the sonne of man 'come in the cloudes of heauen with greate power and glory. And he shal sende his angels with ſe greate voyce of a trompe; they shal gather together his chosen from the foure wyndes, from one ende of the heauen to the other.

Lerne a symilitude of ſe fygge tre. "When his branche is yet tender, and his leaues sproinge, ye knowe that Sommer is yne. So likewyse ye, when ye se all these thynge, be ye sure, that it is yne euhen at the dores. Verely I saye vnto you: This generacion shall not passe, tyll all these be fullfille. Heauen and earth shal perisse, but my words shall not

1. Exod. 1. c. 2. Psal. 68. d. 3. Psal. 117. c.
Then shall the kingdom of heaven be like unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the brydegrome. But five of them were foolish, and five were wise. The foolish took their lamps, and went not in with their lamps. But the wise took their lamps, and went in with their lamps. They srombed all and slept. But at midnight there was a cry made: Behold, the brydegrome commeth, go your way out for to mete him. Then all those virgins arose, and prepared their lampes. But the foolish sayde vnto the wyse: geue vs of youre oyle, for oure lampes are gone out. Then answered the wyse, and sayde: Not so, lest there be not enough for vs and you, but go rather vnto them that sell, and bye for youre selues. And whyle they wente to bye, the brydegrome came: and they that were readye, wente in with hym vnto the mariage, and the gate was shut vp. At ye last came ye other virgins also, and sayde: LORDE, LORDE, opè vnto vs. But he answered, and sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: I knowe you not. Watch ye therefore, for ye knowe nether the daye ner yet the houre, whan ye sonne of man shal come.

Like wyse as a certayne mā ready to take his journey in to a straunge countrey, called his seruauntes, and delyned his goodes vnto the. And vnto one he gaue fyue talentes, to another two, and to another one: vnto euery man after his abilyste, and straight waye departed. Then he that had receaued the fyue talentes, wente and occupied with the same, and wanne other fyue talentes. Likewise he ye receaued two talentes, wane other two also. But he that receaued ye one wente and dygged a pyt in the earth, and hyd his lordes money. After a longe season the lorde of those seruauntes came, and rekened with them. Then came he that had receaued fyue talentes, and brought other fyue talentes, and sayde: Syr, thou deluyerdst vnto me fyue talentes: Beholde, with them haue I wonne fyue talētes mo.' Then sayde his lorde vnto hi: wel thou good faythfull seruaunt, thou hast bene faythfull ouer litle, I wil set the ouer mōch: entre thou in to the ioye of thy lorde. The came also that had receaued two talentes, and sayde: Syr, thou deluyerdst vnto me two talentes: Beholde, I haue wonne two other talētes with the. His lorde sayde vnto him: Wel thu good and faythfull seruaunt, thou hast bene faythfull ouer litle, I wil set the ouer mōch: entre thou in to the ioye of thy lorde.

Then he that had receaued the one talēt, came and sayde: Syr, I knew that thou art... an hard man: thou reapest where thou hast not sown, and gatherest where thou hast not strowed, and so I was afayed, and wete and hyd thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast thine owne. But his lorde answered, and saide vnto him: Thou ewell and sloutfull seruaunt, knewest thou that I reape where I sowed not, and gather where I strawed not? Thou shaldest theryfore haue had my money to the chaunger, and then at my commyng shulde I haue receaued myne owne with vaunting. Therefore take the talent fro him, and geue it vnto him that hath ten talents. *For who so hath, to him shalbe geuen, and he shall haue abundance. But who so hath not, fro him shalbe taka awaye eu en that he hath. And cast the vnprofitable seruaunt in to vtter dareknes: there shalbe waylinge and gnashinge of teth.

But whan the sonne of man shal come in his glory, and all holy angels with him, then shal he syt vpon the seate of his glory. And all people shalbe gathered before him: and he shall separate them one from another as a shepheard deuydeth the shepe from \Ý goates. And he shal set \Ý shepe on his right honde, and the goates on the lefte. Then shal the kyngye saue vnto them that shalbe on his right honde: Come hither ye blessed of my father, inueret ye \Ý kingdome, which is prepared for you from the begynnynge of the worlde. For I was hongrie, and ye gaue me meate: I was thirstie, and ye gaue me drynke: I was harboursesse, and ye lodged me: I was naked, a ye clothed me: I was sicke, and ye vysited me: I was in preson, and ye came vnto me.

Then shalt the righteous answer him, a saye: LORDE, whè saue we the hògrie, and fed the? Or thirstie, and gaue the drynke? When sawe we the harboursesse, and lodged the? Or naked, and clothed Ý? Or whè sawe we Ý sicke or in preson, and came vnto the? And the kyngye shal answer and saue vnto them: Verely I saye vnto you: Loke what ye haue done vnto one of the least of these my brethren, the same haue ye done vnto me.

Then shalt he also saye also vnto them that shalbe on the left hande: Départe fro me ye cursed in to the euerlastinge fyre, which is prepared for the deuell and his angels. For I was hògrie, and ye gaue me no meate: I was thirstie, and ye gaue me no drynke: I was harboursesse, and ye lodged me not: I was naked, and ye clothed me not: I was sicke and in preson, and ye vysited me not.

Then shal they also answere hi, and saye: LORDE, when sawe we the hògrie, or thirstie, or harboursesse, or naked, or sicke, or in preson, and haue not mynistred vnto the? Thè shal he answere them, and saye: Verely I saye vnto you: Loke what ye haue not done vnto one of the least of these, the same haue ye not done vnto me. And these shal go in to euerlastinge Payne, but the righteous in to euerlastinge life.

The rvi. Chapter.

And it came to passe whè Iesus had furnisshed all these wordes, he sayde vnto his discipes: Ye knowe, that after two dayes shalbe Easter, and the sonne of man shalbe deluyed to be crucified.*

Then 'assembled together the hye prestes and the scrybes, and the elders of the people in to the palace of the hye prest which was called Caiphas, and helde a councell, how they might take Iesus by diseate, and kyll him. But they sayde: Not on the holy daye, lest there be an vprooure in the people.

Now when Iesus was at Bethany* in the house of Symon the leper, there came vnto hi a woman, which had a boxe with precious oyntment, and pourd it vpon his heade, as he sat at the table. When his discipes sawe that, they disdayned, and sayde: Where to serueth this waist? This oyntmet might hawe bene wel solde, and genè to the poore. Whè Iesus perceaued that, he sayde vnto them: Why trouble ye the woman? She hath wroght a good worke vpon me for ye haue allwaye the poore with you," but me shal ye not haue allwayes. Where as she hath pourd this oyntmet vpon my body, she dyd it to bury me. Verely I saye vnto you: where so euer this gospels shalbe preached thrw out all the worlde, there shal this also that she hath done, be tolde for a memoriall of her.
Then one of the twelve (called Judas Iscarioth) wente vnto the hye prestes, and sayde: "What wil ye geue me, and I shal deluyer hym vnto you? And they offred hi thirte syluer pens. And from that tymethe forth, he sought opportunyte to betray him.

The first daye of sweete bred came the discipules to Iesus, and sayde vnto hym: Where wyl thou that we prepare for the, to eate the Easter lambe? He sayde: Go in to the cite to soch a man, and saye vnto hym: The Master sendeth the worde: My tymene is at honde, I wil kepe myne Easter by the with my discipules. And the discipules dyd as Iesus had appoynted them, and made ready the Easter lambe.

And at euene he sat downe at the table with the twelve. And as they ate, he sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: One of you shall betray me. And they were exceedinge soroufull, and beganne euerie one of them to saye vnto hym: Syr, is it I? He answered and sayde: He that deppeth his honde with me in the dyshe, the same shall betray me. The soume of man goeth forth, as it is wrytten of hym: but wo vnto that man by whô the soume of man shalbe betrayed: It had bene better for that man, ye' he had never bene borne. Thê Iudas that betrayed him, answered and sayde: Master, is it I? He sayde vnto hym: Thou hast sayde.

And as they ate, Iesus toke the bred, gau thankes, brake it, and gau it to the discipules, and sayde: Take, eate, this is my body. And he toke the cuppe, and thanked, and gau it the, and sayde: Drynke ye all therof, this is my bloude of the new testament, that shalbe shedd for many for the remission of synnes. I saye vnto you: I wil not drynke hence forth of this frute of the vyne tre, vutill that daye that I shal drynke it new with you in my fathers kyngdome.

And when they had sayde grace, they wente forth vnto mount Oluffete. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: This nighte shal ye all be offended in me. For it is wrytten: I wil smyte the shepherd, and the shepe of the flocke shalbe scattered abrode. But after that I ryse agayne, I wil goe before you in to Gafile. Peter answered and sayde vnto hym: "Though all men shulde be offended in me, yet wil I neuer be offended. Iesus sayde vnto hi: Verely I saye vnto you: This same nighte before ye cock crowe, shal thou deny me thrice. Peter saide vnto hym: And though I shulde dye with the, yet wil I not denye the. Likewise also sayde all the discipules.

Then came Iesus with them in to a feldes which is called Gethsemane, and sayde vnto the discipules: Syr ye here, whyle I go yonder, I praye. And he toke with hym Peter, and the two sonnes of Zebede, and beganne to wexe soroufull and to be in an agonye. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: My soule is heuy euene vnto the death. Tary ye here, and watch with me. And he wente forth a little, and fell flat vpon his face, and prayed sayenge: O my father, ye' it be possible, let this cuppe passe fro me: neuertheles not as I wil but as thou wilt. And he came to his discipules, and founde the a slepe, and sayde vnto Peter: What? coude ye not watch with me one houre? Watch a praye, that ye fall not in to temptation. The sprete is wyllinge, but the flesh is weake.

Agayne, he wete forth the seconde tymne and prayed, sayenge: O my father, ye' this cuppe can not passe awaye fro me (excepte I drynke of it) thy will be fulfille. And he came, and founde them a slepe agayne, and their eyes were heuy. And he left them, and wente forth agayne, and prayed the thirde tymne, sayenge the same wordes. Then came he to his discipules, and sayde vnto them: Slepe on now, and take youre rest. Beholde, the houre is come, ye the soume of man shalbe delynered in to the hondes of synners: Aryste, let us be goynge. Beholde, he is at hode, that betrayeth me.

Whyle he yet spake, lo, Iudas one of the twolue came, and with him a greate multitude with swordes and staines, sent fro the hye prestes and elders of the people. And he that betrayed him, had geuen them a toké, sayenge: Whom so euer I kysse, that same is he, laye hodes vpô him. And forthe withal he came to Iesus, and sayde: Hayle master, and kyssey him. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Frende, wherfore art thou come? Then came they, and layed hondes vpon Iesus, and toke

And beholde, one of them that were with Jesus, stretched out his honde, and drue his swerde, and stroke a seruanunt of the bye prestes, & smote of his eare: Then sayde Jesus vnto him: Put vp thy swerde in to his place. * For all that take the swerde, shall perish with the swerde. Or thinkest thou that I can not praye my father now, to sende me more then twelue legions of angels? But how the shulde the scriptures be fulfilled? * For thus must it be.

In the same houre sayde Jesus vnto the multitude: * Ye are come out as it were to a murtherer with swerdes and staines for to take me. I sat daylie teachinge in the temple amponge you, and ye toke me not. But all this is done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled.† The all the discipes left him, and fled. But they that toke Jesus,⁴ led him to Caiphas the hye prest, where the scribeys and the elders were gathered together. As for Peter, he followed him a farre of vnto the hye prestes palace, & wente in, and sat with the seruanunts, that he might se the ende.

But the hye prestes and the elders, and the whole councell sought false wytnesse agaynst Jesus, that they might put him to death, and founde none. And though many false wytnesses stepte forth, yet founde they none. At the last there stepte forth two false wytnesses, & spake: He sayde: I can breake downe the temple of God, & buyld it agayn in three dayes.

And the hye prest stode vp, and sayde vnto him: Answerest thou nothing, vnto it, that these testifie agaynst the? Neuerthelkes Jesus holde his tonge. And the hye prest answered, and sayde vnto him: I charge the by § lyuynge God, that thou tell us, yt thou be Christ the sonne of God. Jesus spake: Thou hast sayde it. Neuerthelkes I sayde vnto you: From this tyme forth it shall come to passe, that ye shall se the sonne of man settyng vpon the right hande of the power of (God) and commynge in the clouds of the heauen.

Then the hye prest rente his clothes, and sayde: * He hath blasphemed, what neede we eny mo wytnesses? Lo, now haue ye herde his blasphemy: What thinke ye? They answered, & sayde: He is gyllie of death. * Then spytthey thay in his face, & smote him with fistes. Some smote him vpon the face, and sayde: Prophecie vnto us thou Christ, who is it, that smote the?

As for Peter, he sat without in the palace. And there came vnto him a damsell, and sayde: And thou wast with Jesus of Galile also. Neuerthelkes he denied before thè all, and sayde: I can not tell what thou sayest. But when he wete out at the dore, another damsell sawe him, and sayde vnto them that were there: This was also with Jesus of Nazareth. And he denied agayn, and sware also: I knowe not the man. And after a little whyle, they that stode there, stepte forth, and sayde vnto Peter: Of a trueth thou art one of them also, for thy speach bewrayeth the. Then begane he to curse and to sware: I knowe not the man. And immediatly the cock crew. Then thought Peter vpon the wordes of Jesus, which sayde vnto him: *before the cock crow, thou shalt denye me thryse. And he wente out, and wepte byterly.

Vpon the morow, all the hye prestes & elders of the people helde a councell agaynst Jesus, *that they might put him to death, and bounde him, and led him forth, and deluyered him vnto Pontius Pilate the debyte.

When Iudas which betrayed him, sawe this that he was condemned vnto death, it repented him, and brought agaynde the thirtie syluer pens to the hye prestes and the elders, and sayde: I haue done euell, in that I haue betrayed innocet bloude. They sayde: What haue we to do with ? Se thou therto. And he cast the syluer pens in the têple, and gat him awaye, and wepte and hanged him self.

So the hye prestes toke the syluer pens, and sayde: It is not laufull to put them in to the Gods chest, for it is bloudmoney. Neuerthelkes they helde a councell, and bought with them a potters feld, for to burye straungers in. Wherefore the same feld is called the bloudfeld unto this daye. Then was that fulfilled, which was spoken by Jeremie the prophet sayenge: "And they toke thirtie syluer pens, the prye of him that was solde, whom they bought of the children of Israel: and these they gaue for a potters feld, as the LORDE commaunded me.

As for Jesus, he stode before the debyte, and the debyte axed him, and sayde: "Art thou the kyngge of the Iewes? And Jesus sayde vnto hym: Thou sayest it. And wha he was accused of the hye prestes and elders, he answered nothinge. Then sayde Pylate vnto him: Hearset thou not, how sore they accuse the? And *he answered him not one worde: in so much that the debyte marueled exceedingly.

"At that feast, the debyte was wote to delyuer a presoner fre vnto the people, whom they wolde. And at the same tyme he had a notable presoner called Barrabas. And when they were gathered together, Pylate sayde vnto them: Whether wil ye, that I geue lowse vnto you? Barrabas, or Jesus which is called Christ? For he knewe well that they had delyuered him of enuye. And wha he sat vpó the judgmen seate, his wife sent vnto him, sayenge: Haue thou nothinge to do with that righteous man, for I haue suffered many thinges this daye in a dreame because of him.

But the hye prestes and the elders perswaded the people, *that they shulde axe Barrabas, and destroye Iesus. Then answered the debyte, *he sayde vnto the: "Whether of these two wyl ye *I geue lowse vnto you? They sayde: *Barrabas: Pylate sayde vnto them: What shal I do then with Iesus, which is called Christ? *They sayde all: let him be crucified. The debyte saide: What euell hath he done the? Neuertheless they cried yet more and sayde, let him be crucified. So whan Pilate sawe, that he coude not helpe, but that there was a greater vproure, he toke water, and waszhezd his handes before the people, and sayde: I am vn就说 of thine bloud of this righteous man. Se ye therto. Then answered all the people, and sayde: His bloud come vpon vs, and vpon oure children.

Then gaue he Barrabas lowse vnto thē, but caused Iesus be scourged, and deluyed him to be crucified.

Then the debites soudyers toke Iesus, in to the common hall, and gathered the whole multitude ouer hym, and stryyped hym out of his clothes, and put a purple robe vpō hym, and platted a crowne of thorne, τ set it vpō hym his heade, and a rede in his hāde, and knelde before hym, and mocked hym, and sayde: halaye kynge of the Iewes. And spytte vpō hym, and toke ᾶ rede, τ smote hym vpō his heade. And wha they had mocked him, they toke the robe of hym ageyne, τ put his owne clothes vpō hym, and led him forth, ᾶ they might crucifie him. And as they were goinge out, they founde a man of Cyren called Symon: him they compelled to beare his crosse. And when they came vnto the place called ᾶ Golgatha (that is to saye by interpretation a place of deed mens soules) they gaue hym to drynke, veneger myxte with gall. And whan he had tasted thereof, he wolde not drynke.

"So whan they had crucified hym, they parted his garmetes, and cast lottes therfore: that the thinges might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the prophet: "They have parted my garmetes amonge thē, τ cast lottes vpō my vesture. And there they sat, and watched him. And aboue ouer his heade, they put vp the cause of his death in wrytinge: namely: This is the kyngge of the Iewes.

* Then were there two murtherers crucified with him, *the one of the right hande, and the other on the left. They that wente by, reuyled him, and wagged their heades and sayde: Thou that breakest downe the temple of God, and buyldest it in thre dayes, helpe thy self. Ye thou be the sonne of God, come downe from the crosse. The hye prestes also in like maner with the scrybes and elders, laughed him to scorne, and sayde: he hath helped other, and can not helpe himselfe: Ye he be the kyngge of Israel, *let him come downe now from the crosse, and we will beleue hym. *He trusted in God, let him deluyer him now, ye he wil haue hym. For he hath sayde: I am the sonne of God. The murthers also that were crucified with him, cast the same in his tethe.

And from the sixte hour there was darknes over the whole earth vnto the nyenthe hour.
And aboute the nyenthe houre, Iesus cried with a loude voyce, and sayde: Eli, Eli, Lamma asabthani? that is, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?  But some of the that stode there, when they herde y sayde: he calleth Elias.  And immediately one of them ranke, and toke a spōge, and fylled it with veneger, and put it vpon a rede, and gauce him to dryneke.  But y other sayde: holde, let se whether Elias wyl come, and deluyer hym.  Iesus cried agayne with a loude voyce, and gauce vp the goost.

And beholde, the vale of the temple was rente in two peces, from aboue byll beneth,
and the earth quaked, and the stones rent,
and the graues opened, and many bodies of the sayntes that slepte, arose, and wete out of the graues after his resurrectio, and came in to the holy cite, and appeared vnto many.

But the captayne and they that were with him, and kepte Iesus, when they sawe the earthquake and the thinges that were done, they were sore afrayed, and sayde: Verely this was Gods somne.  And there were many wemen there lokynge to afrare, which had folowed Iesus from Galile, and had mynistred vnto hym: amoung whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Iames and Ioses, and the mother of the children of Zebede.

At euyn there came a rich man of Arimathia, called Ioseph, which was also a disciple of Iesus.  He wete vnto Pylate, and axed the body of Iesus.  Then commaunded Pylate that the body shulde be geuē him.  And Ioseph toke the body, and wrapped it, and laid it in a cleane lynnen cloth, and layed it in his owne new sepulcre, which he had hewen out in a rocke, and roled a grete stone to the dore of the sepulcre, and wente his waze.  And there was Mary Magdalene and y other Mary, syttinge ouer agaynst the sepulcre.

The next daye that foloweth the daye of preparyngue, the hye preste and Pharises came together vnto Pylate, and saide: Syr, we haue called to remembrance, that this disceauer sayde whyle he was yet alue; Afterwards three dayes I wyl ryse agayne.  Comaunde therefore that the sepulcre be kepte vnto the thirde daye, lest peraduenture his discipes come, and steale him awaye, and saye vnto the people: He is ryson from the deed, and so shal the last error be worse the the first.  Pylate sayde vnto them: There haue ye watchme, go youre wyre, and kepe it as ye can.  They wete and kepte the sepulcre with watchmen, and sealed the stone.

Upon the euynynge of the Sabbath holy daye, which dawneth v morow of the first daye of v Sabbathes, came Mary Magdalene and y other Mary, to se v sepulcre.  And beholde, there was made a greate earthquake: for the angell of the LORDE descended from heaven, and came and roled backe y stone from the dore, and sat vpon it.  And his countenance was as y lightynenge, and his cloathinge whyte as snowe.  But y watch me were troubled for feare of him, and became as though they were deede.

The angell answered, and sayde vnto y women: Be not ye afrayed.  I knowe that ye seke Iesus that was crucified.  He is not here.  He is ryson, as he sayde.  Come, and se y place, where the LORDE was layed, and go youre wyre soone, and tell his discipes, that he is ryson from the deed.  And beholde, he wyl goe before you in to Galile, there shal ye se hym.  Lo, I haue tolde you.

And they departed from the grane in all the haist with fear and greate ioye, to brige his discipes worde.  And as they were goinge to tell his discipes, beholde, Iesus met them, and sayde: God spede you.  And they wente vnto him, and helde his fete, and fell downe before him.  The sayde Iesus vnto them: Be not afrayed: goe youre wyre and tell my brethren, that they go in to Galile, there shal they se me.

And when they were gone, beholde, certayne of the watchmen came in to the cite, tolde the hye preste every thinge that had happened.  And they came together with the elders, and helde a counsell, and gane ý souders money ynomg, and sayde: Saye ye:

his disciples came by night, and stole him cawaye, whyle we were a slepe. And yf this him, and brynge it so to passe, that ye shal be safe.

And they toke the money, and dyd as they were taught. And this sayenge is noysed

The eleuen disciples wente vnto Galile in to a mountayne, where Iesus had appoynted them. And whan they sawe him, they fell downe before him: but some of them douted.
And Iesus came vnto them, talked with them, and sayde: "Vnto me is genê all power in heauen and in earth. Go ye youre waye therfore, and teach all nacions, and baptyse them in the name of the father, and of the

The resurreccion of Christ, which appeareth vnto Mary Magdalene and to his disciples, whom he sendeth forth in to the worlde to preach the gospell, and ascended vp in to heauen himself.
The first Chapter.

This is the begynnynge of the gospell of Jesus Christ the sonne of God, as it is wrytt in the prophetes. Beholde, I sende my messaung before thy face, which shal prepare thy waye before the. The voyce of a cryer is in the wyldernes: Prepare the waye of the LORDE, make his pathes straight.

Ihon was in the wyldernes, and baptysed, and preached the baptyme of amendment, for the remissyon of synnes. And there wente out vnto him the whole londe of Iewry, and they of Ierusalem, and were all baptysed of him in Jordan, and knowleged their synnes.

Ihon was clothed with Camels beer, and with a lethron gerdell aboute his loynes, and ate locustes and wylde hony, and preached, and sayde: There commeth one after me, which is stronger then I: before whom I am not worthy to stoupe downe, and to lowse vp y lachet of his shue. I baptysye you with water, but he shal baptysye you with the holy goost.

And it happened at the same tyme, that Iesus came out of Galile from Nazareth, and was baptysed of Ihon in Jordan. And as soone as he was come out of the water, he sawe that the heauens opened, and the goost as a doue comynge downe vpon him. And there came a voyce from heauens: Thou art my deare sonne, in whom I deltyle.

And immediatly the sprete droue him in to the wyldernes: and he was in the wyldernes fourtye dayes, and was tempted of Sathan, and was with the wyld beastes. And the angels mynistred vnto him.

But after that Ihon was taken, Iesus came in to Galile, and preached the gospell of the kyngdome of God, and sayde: the tyme is fulfylled, and the kyngdome of God is at hande: Amende youre selues, and beleue the gospell.

So as he walked by the see of Galile, he sawe Symon and Andrew his brother, castinge their nettes in the see, for they were fyszhers. And Iesus sayde vnto the: Folowe me, and I wil make you fyszhers of men. And immediatly they left their nettes, and folowed him.

And when he was gone a lytle further from thence, he sawe James the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon his brother, as they were in the shyppe mendyng their nettes. And anone he called them. And they left their father Zebede in the shyppe with the hyred seruauntes, and folowed him.

And they wente in to Capernaum, and immediatly vpon the Sabbothes, he entred in to the synagoge, and taught. And they were astonnyed at his doctryne: for he taught them as one hauyenge power, and not as the Scrybes.

And in their synagoge there was a man possessed with a foule sprete, which cried and sayde: Oh what hauye we to do with the, thou Iesus of Nazareth. Art thou come to destrouye us? I knowe that thou art euyn y holy one of God. And Iesus reprooued him, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and departe out of him. And the foule sprete tare him, and cried with a loude voyce, and departed out of him. And they were all astonnyed, in so much that they axed one another amongst the selues, sayde: What is this? What new lernynge is this? For he comaundeth the foulc sprete with power, and they are obedient vnto him. And immediatly the fame of him was noysed rounde aboute in the coastes and borders of Galile.

And forth with they wente out of the synagoge, and came in to the house of Symo and Andrew, with James and Ithon. And Symons mother in lawe laye, slept the feuers, and anone they tolde him of her. And he came to her, and set her vp, and take her by yer hande, and the feuer left her immediatly. And she mynstred vnto them.

At cuen whan the Sonne was gone downe, they brought vnto him all that were sick and possessed, and the whole cite was gathered together at the dore, and he healed many that were diseased with dyuersse sickenes, and cast out many devils, and suffred not the devells to speake, because they knew him.

And in the mornynge before daye, he arose, and wente out. And Iesus departed in to a deserte place, and prayed there. Peter also and they that were with him, followed after him. And when they had founde him, they sayde vnto him: Every man seketh the. And he sayde vnto them: Let us go in to the next townes, that I maye preach there also, for therto am I come. And he preached in their synagogues, in all Galile, and droue out the devilis.

And there came vnto him a leper, which besought him, and kneelde before him, and sayde vnto him: If thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And it pitied Iesus, and he stretched forth his honde, and touched him, and sayde: I wyll, be thou cleane. And wha he had so spoken, immediatly the leprosy departed frō him, and he was clensed.

And Iesus forbad him strately, and forth with sent him awaye, and sayde vnto him: Take hede, that thou saye nothinge to any man, but go thy waye, and shew thyself vnto the prest, and offer for thy cleansyng what Moses commaundeth, for a wytnesse vnto them. But he when he was departed, beginne to speake much of it, and made the dede knowe: in so moch that Iesus coude no more go in to the cite openly, but was without in deserte places, and they came vnto him frō all quarters.

with ye publicans and synners? When Jesus herde that, he sayde vnto the: The whole nude not ye Phisician, but that they are sycke. I am not come to call the righteous, but the synners to repentance.”

And the disciples of Iohn and of ye Pharisies faster. And there came certaine, which sayde vnto him: Why fast the disciples of Iohn, and of ye Pharisies, and thy disciples fast not? And Jesus sayde vnto them: How can the weddinge children fast, whyle the brydegrome is with them? So longe as ye brydegrome is with them, they can not fast. But the tyme wyly come, that the brydegrome shall be taken from them, and then shal they fast.

No man soweth a pece of new cloth vnto an olde garment, for els he taketh awaye the new pece from the olde, and so is the rēt worse. And no man putteth new wyne in to olde vessels, els the new wyne breaketh the vessels, and the wyne is spylt, and ye vessels perishe: but new wyne must be put in to new vessels.

And it chaunsee that vpon ye Sabbath he wente thorow the corne feldes, and his disciples begaine to make a waye thorow, and to plucke the eares of ye corne. And the Pharisies sayde vnto him: Beholde, what thy disciples do, which is not lauffull vp to the Sabbath. And he sayde vnto the: Haue ye never red what Dauid dyd, whē he had nude, and was an hongred, both he and they that were with him: how he wente in to the house of God in the tyme of Abiathar the hye prest, and ate the shewbreds (which was lauffull for no man to eate, but for the prestes) and he gaue them vnto him, and to them that were with him? And he sayde vnto them: The Sabbath was made for mans sake, and not man for the Sabbathes sake. Therfore is the some of man LORDE enen ouer the Sabbath.

The 111. Chapter.

He wente agayne also in to the synagoge, and there was there a mā that had a wythred hande. And they marked him, whether he wolde heale him on the Sabbath, that they might accuse him. And he sayde vnto his mā with the wythred hāde: Steppe forth here.

And he sayde vnto the: Is it lauffull to do good on the Sabbath? Or is it lauffull to do euell? to saue life, or to kyll? But they helde their tongue. And he loked rounde aboute vpon them with wrath, and was sorry for the harde hertes of the, and sayde vnto the man: Stretch out thine hande. And he stretched it out. And his hande was made whole like as ye other.

And the Pharisies wote out, and straight waye they helde a councell with Herodes officers agaynst him, how they might destroye him. But Jesus departed awaye with his disciples vnto the see. And there folowed him moch people out of Galile, and frō Iewry, and from Ierusale, and out of Idumea, and from beyonde Iordan, and they that dwelt aboute Tyre and Sydon, a greate multituide which had herde of his noble actes, and came vnto him.

And he spake vnto his disciples ye they shulde kepe a shyppe for him because of the people, lest they shulde thrungme him: for he healed many of them, in so mοch, that all they which were plagued, preased vpon him, that they might touch him. And when the foule spretes sawe him, they fell downe before him, and cried, and sayde: Thou art the sonne of God. And he charged them strately, that they shulde not make him knowne.

And he wente vp in to a montayne, and called vnto him whom he wolde, and they came vnto him. And he ordeyned ye twolue, that they shulde be with him, and that he might sende them out to prach, and that they might haue power to heale sicknesses, and to cast out deuyls. And vnto Symon he gaue the name Peter, and Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon the brother of Iames, and gaue the the name Bonarges, that is to saye, the children of thonder: and Andrew, and Philippe, and Barlymew, and Mathew, and Thomas, and Iames ye sonne of Alpheus, and Tadde, and Symon of Cana, and Iudas Iscarioth which betrayed him.

And they came to house. Then assembled the people together agayne, in so mοch that they had no leysure to eate. And when they that were aboute him herde of it, they wente out to holde him. For they sayde: he
The iii. Chapter.

And he begane agayne to teach by y see side. *and there gathered much people vnto him, so that he wente in to a shippe, and sat vpon the water. And all the people stode vpon the londe by the see syde. And he preached longe vnto the by parables, and sayde vnto the in his doctrine: Herken to, beholde, there wente out a sower to sowe: g it happeneth whyle he was sowinge, that some fell by the waye syde. Then came the foules vnder the heauen, and ate it vp. Some fell vpon stonye grounde, where it had not mogh earth: and anone it came vp, because it had not depe earth. Now wha the Some arose, it caught heate: and in so mogh as it had no rote, it wythred awaye. And some fell amonge the thornes, g the thornes grew vp, and choked it, and it gaine no frute. And some fell vpon a good grounde, which gaine frute, that came vp and grew. And some bare thirte folde, and some sixtie folde, and some an hundreth folde. And he sayde vnto them: Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

*And when he was alone, they that were aboute him with the twolue, axed him concernynge this parable. And he sayde vnto the: Vnto you it is geuen, to knowe the mystery of the kyngdome of God: but vnto them that are without, all things happen by parables, that with seynge eyes they maye se, and not discerne: and that with heareinge eares they maye heare, and not vnderstoode, lest at eny tyme they turne, and their synnes be forgen euyn them. And he sayde vnto them: Vnderstone ye not this parable? How wyl ye then vnderstone al other parables?

The sower soweth the worde. *These be they that are by the waye syde: where the worde is sowne, and as soone as they haue herde it, immediatly commeth Satha, and taketh awaye the worde that was sowne in their hertes. And lykewyse are they that are sownen on the stonye grounde: which when they haue herde the worde, receaue it with joye, and haue no rote in them: but endure for a tyme. When trouble and persecution aryseth for y wordez sake, immediatly they are offended. And these are they that are sownen amoste the thornes: which heare the worde, and y carenfulnes of this worlde, and the disceatfulenes of riches, and many other lustez entre in, and choke the worde, and so is it made vnfrutefull. And these are they yz are sownen vp a good grounde: Which heare y worde, and receaue it, and byngze forth frute: some thirte folde, and some sixtie folde, and some an hundreth folde.

And he sayde vnto the: *Is a candell lighted to be put vnder a buschell, or vnder a table? Is it not lighted, to be set vpon a candell-sticke? For there is nothinge hyd, that shal

For who so hath, vnto him shal be geuen: and who so hath not, from him shalbe taken awaye, euuen that he hath.

And he sayde: The kyngdome of God is after this maner, as when a man casteth seder vpoun the londe, and slepeth, and stondeth vp night and daye, and the seder spryngeth vp, a growtheth, he knowinge of it. (For the earth bryngeth forth frute of her selfe: first the grasse, afterwandes the care, then the full wheate in the care.) But when she hath brought forth the frute, he putthe to the syckell, because the haruest is come.

And he sayde: Where vnto wyl we licken the kyngdome of God? Or by what symilitude wyl we compare it? It is like a grayne of mustarde seder, which whi it is sowed vp the londe, is the leest amonst all sedes of the earth. And whi it is sowne, it groweth vp, and is greater then all herbes, and getteth greate branches, so \( \gamma \) the foules vnder the heau[n] maye dwell vnder \( \gamma \) shadowe thereof.

And by many soch parables he spake the worde vnto th[is] there after as they might heare it, \( \gamma \) without parables spake he nothinge vnto them: but vnto his discipes he expounded all things pryvately. And the same daye at euen he sayde vnto them: *let us passe ouer. And they let the people go, and toke him as he was in the shippe, and there were no shippes with him. And there arose a greate storme of wynde, and daszhed the wawes in to the shippe, so that the shippe was full. And he was behynde in the shippe and slepte vpoun a pelowe. And they awoke him \( \gamma \) sayde vnto him: Master, Carest thou not, that we perishe? And he arose, and rebuked \( \gamma \) wynde, and sayde vnto the see: Peace, and be stille. And the wynde was layed, \( \gamma \) there followed a greate calme. And he sayde vnto them: Why are ye so fearfull? How is it, that ye haue no fa[ith]? And they feared exceedingly, \( \gamma \) sayde one to another:

\[ \text{And they came ouer vnto the other syde of the see in to the countre of the Gaderenites. \( \gamma \) And when he wete out of the shippe, there met him a man possessed of an vnclene spret[e], which had his dwellinge in the granes. And no man coude bynde hym, no not with cheynes: for he was oft bounde with fetters \( \gamma \) cheynes, and pluckte the cheynes in sunder, and brake the fetters in peces, and no man coude tame him. And he was alwayse both daie and night vpon the mountaynes and in the granes crienge, and beatinge him self with stones. But when he sawe Jesus afarre of, he ranne, and fell downe before him, and cried lounde, and sayde: *What hau[e] I to do with the O Iesus thou sonne of \( \gamma \) Hyest God? I charge the by God, that thou torment me not. Neuertheles he sayde vnto him: Go out of the man thou foule spret[e]. And he axed him: What is thy name? And euene there in the mountaynes there was a \( \gamma \) greate herd of swyne fedyinge, and all the deuyls praiede him, and sayde: Let vs departe in to the swyne. And anone Jesus gaue them leue. Then the foule spret[e] wente out, and intred in to the swyne. And the heerd of swyne, ranne heedlinges in to \( \gamma \) see with a storme. They were aboute a two thousande swyne, and were drowned in the see.

And the sywneherdes fled, and tolde it in the cite, and in the countre. And they wente out for to see what had happened, and came to Iesus, and sawe hym which was possessed and had had \( \gamma \) legion, that he sat, and was clothed, and in his right mynde, and they were afrayed. And they that had sene it, tolde them what had happened to the possessed, and of the sywne.

And they beganne to praye him, that he wolde departe out of their coastes. And when he came in to the shyppe, the possessed prayed him, that he might be with him.

Neuertheles Iesús wolde not suffre hi, but saide vnto hi: Go i to thy house a to thine aynwe, and tell the how greate benefites the LORDE hath done for y, and how he hath had mercy vpon the. And he wepte his waye, and beganne to publish in the ten cities how greate benefites Iesús had done for him. And euery man marneyed.

And when Iesús passed ouer agayne by shippe, there gathered mocch vnto hym, and was by the see syde. *And beholde, there came one of the rulers of the synagoge, whose name was Iairus. And when he sawe hym, he fell downe at his fete, and besought hym greatly, a saide: My daughter is at the poynthe (of death) let it be thy pleasure to come and laye thine honde vpon her, that she maye be whole and lyue. And he wente with hym, and mocch people folowed hym, and thronged hym.

And there was a woman, *which had had the bloudyssew twelve yeares, and had suffred mocch of many phisicians, and spent all that she had, and was not helped, but rather in worse case. Whan she herde of Iesús, she came behynde amonge the people, and touched his garment. For she saide: Yf I maye but touch his clothes, I shal be whole.

And immediatly y fountayne of hir bloude was drysd vp, and she felt in hir body, y she was healed of the plage.

And forth with Iesús felt in himself the power that was gone out of hym, and turned hym aboute amoge the people, and saide: Who hath touched my clothes? And his discipes saide vnto hym: Thou seist that the people thrustethe the, and sayest: Who hath touched me? And he lokd aboute to se her, that had done it.

As for the woman, she feared and trembled (for she knew, what was done in her) and came and fell downe before hym, and tolde hym the whole trouth. And he saide vnto her: *Doughter, thy faith hath made the whole: go thy waye in peace, a be whole of thy plag.
be shod with sandales, and that they shulde not put on two cotes. And he sayde vnto them: Where so euer ye shal entre in to an house, there abyde, tyll ye go thence. And who so euer wyll not receaue you, ner heare you, departe out from thence, and shake of the dust from youre fete, for a wytnesse vnto them. I saye vnto you verely: It shal be easier for Sodome and Gomorra in the daye of judgment, then for that cite.

And they wette forth, and preached, that men shulde amede them selues, and they cast out many deuyls: and many that were sicke anoynted they with oyle, and healed thē.

And it came to kynde Herods eares (for his name was now knowne) and he sayde: Ihon the baptist is ryzen agayne from the dead, and therfore are his dedes so mightie. But some sayde: It is Elias. Some sayde: It is a prophet, or one of ò prohetes. But when Herode herde it, he sayde: It is Ihon whom I beheded, he is ryzen againe from the dead. This Herode had sent forth, and taken Ihon, and put him in preson, because of Herodias his brother Philippes wife, for he had maried her. Neuertheles Ihon sayde vnto Herode: *It is not laulfull for the to haue thy brothers wife. But Herodias layed waye for him, and wolde haue slayne him, and coude not. Notwithstōdinge Herode feared Ihō, for he knew that he was a just and holy man: and he kepte him, and herkuned vnto him in many thinges, and herde him gladly.

And there came a convenient daye, that Herode on his 'byrth daye made a supper to the lorde, captaynes and chefe estates of Galile. Then the daughter of Herodias came in, and daunsed, and pleased Herode, and them that sat at the table. Then sayde the kynde vnto ñ damsel: Axe of me what thou wilt, I wil geue it the. And he swore vnto her: What soever thou shalt axe of me, I wil geue it the, euen vnto ñ one half of my kynge-dome. She wente forth, and sayde vnto her mother: what shal I axe? She sayde: Ihon baptistes heade. And immediatly she wēt in to the kinge with haist, and sayde: I will that thou geue me straight waye in a platter the heed of Ihon the baptist. Then the kynde was sory: Yet for the oothes sake and thē that sat at the table, he wolde not saye her nay.

And immediatly he sent the hangman, and commanded his heade to be brought in. So he wēt, and heeded him in the preson, and brought his heade in a platter, and gau it vnto the damsell, and the damsell gau it vnto hir mother. And when his disciples herde that, they came and toke his body, and layed it in a graue.

& And the Apostles came together vnto Jesus, and tolde hī all, and what they had done and taught. And he sayde vnto them: Let vs go out of the waye in to the wyldernes, and rest a litle. For there were many comers and goers, and they had not tyme enough to eate. And ther he passed by shippe out of ñ waye in to a deserete place. And the people sawe the departynge awaye, and many knewe of it, π ranne thither together of fote out of all cities, π came before thē, π came vnto him. & And Jesus wente out, and sawe much people, and had compassion vpon them: for they were ι as the shepe, that haue no shep-herde, and he begāne a lōge seremon.

Now whan the daye was farre past, his disciples came vnto him, and sayde: This is a deserete place, let them departe, ι that they maye go in to the vyllagies and townes rounde aboute, and bye them selues bred, for they haue nothinge to eate. But Iesu answered and sayde vnto them: geue ye them to eate.

And they sayde vnto him: Shal we go then, and bye two hundreth peny worth of bred, and geue them to eate? He sayde vnto them: 'How many loaes haue ye?' Go and se. And when they had searchēd, they sayde: Fyue, and two fishe. And he commanded them all to sȝt downe by table fulles vpon the grene grass. And they sat downe here a rowe and there a rowe by hundreds and by fifties. And he toke the fyue loaes and two fishe, and lokēd vp vnto heauen, and gau thanks, and brake the loaes, and gau to the disciples, to set before them. And the two fishe partēd he amonge them all. And they all ate, and were satisfied. And they toke vp twolue baskets full of ñ broken peces, and of the fishe. And they that ate, were aboute fyue thousande men. And anone he caused his disciples to go in to the shippie, and to passe ouer before him vnto Bethsaida, whyle he sent awaye the people. And at euens was the shippie in the mynddest of the see, and he alone vpon the londe. And he sawe that they were in parell with rowynge, for the wynde was agaynst them.

And aboute the fourth watch of the night he came vnto them, and walked vpon the see, and wolde haue gone ouer by the. And whan they sawe him walke vpon the see, they thought it had bene a sprete, and cried out, for they sawe him all, and were afayred. But immediately he talked with them, and sayde vnto them: Be of good comforte, it is I, be not afayred. And he wote vnto them in to the shippie, and the wynde ceased. And they were astonnyed, and maruelled exceedingely: for they had forgotten the loaues, and their hert was blyled.

And whan they were passed ouer, they came in to the lande of Genezareth, and drue vp in to the hauen. And whan they were come out of the shippie, immediately he knewe him, and ranne thorow out all the region aboute, and begane on euery syde to brynge vnto him in beddes as were sicke, where they herde that he was. And whither so euere he entred in to townes, cities or vyllages, there layed the sicke in the market place, and prayed him, that they might but touch the hemme of his garment. And as many as touched him, were made whole.

The biij. Chapter.

AND there came vnto him the Pharises, and certayne of the serybes, that were come from Ierusale. And wha they sawe certayne of his disciples eate bred with comon (that is, with vnwaschen) handes, they complayned. For the Pharises all the Jews eate not, excepte they wash their handes oft tymes: observynge so the tradiçons of the elders. And whan they come from the market, they eate not, excepte they washe. And many other thynge there be, which they haue taken vpon them to obserue, as the washynge of cuppes and cruses, and brased vessels and tables.

Then the Pharises and serybes axed him: Why walke not thy discipes after the tradiçons of the elders, but eate bred with vnwaschen handes? But he answered sayde vnto them: Full well hath Esay prophesied of you Ypocrytes, as it is wryttē: "This people honoureth me with their lippes, but their hert is farre fro me. But in vayne do they serve me, whyle they teach soch doctrynes as are nothinge but the commaundementes of me. Ye leue the commaundement of God and kepe the tradiçons of men, as the wasshyng of cruses and cruses, many soch things do ye.

And he saide vnto the: How goodly haue ye cast asyde the commaundement of God, to manteyne your owne tradiçons? For Moses sayde: Honour father and mother. And who so curseth father and mother, shall dy the death. But ye saye: A mā shall save to father or mother: Corban, that is, The thinge I shulde helpe the withall, is geue vnto God. And thus ye suffre him nomore to do ought for his father or his mother, and make Gods worde of none effecte, thorow youre owne tradiçons that ye have set vp. And many soch things do ye.

And he called vnto him all the peole, and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me ye all, and vnderstonde me. There is nothinge without a man, that can defyle him, when it entreth in to him. But that goeth out of him, that is it that maketh the man vnceleane. Ye eny man haue cares to heare, let him heare. And whan he came from the people in to his house, his discipes axed him of this symilitude. And he sayde vnto them: Are ye so then without vnderstandinge? Perceau ye not yet, ye every thinge which is without, and goeth in to the mā, can not defyle him? For it entreth not in to his hert, but in to his bely, and goeth out in to the draught, that purgeth all meates.

And he sayde: The thinge that goeth out of the man, that defyleth the man. For from within out of the hert of man procede euell thoughtes, adoutrye, whordome, murther, theft, couteousnes, wickednes, disseate, vnceleane, a wicked eye, blasphemy, pryde, foolishnes. All these euell things go from within, and defyle the man.

And he arose, and wente from thence in to the borders of Tyre and Sydōn, entred in to an house, and wolde let no man knoue of it, and yet coude he not be hyd: For a certayne woman (whose daughter had a foule sprete) bare the, and came and fell downe at his fete (and it was an Heithc woman of Syrophenics) and she besought him, that he wolde dryne out the deuell from hir daughter. But lesis sayde vnto her: Let the children be fed first: It is not mete to take the childrës bread, and to cast it vnto dogges. She answered and sayde vnto him: Yee LORDE, neuertheles the welphes also eate vnder y table, of y childrens crômes. And he sayde vnto her: Because of this sayenge go thoy awaye, the deuell is departed out of thy daughter. And she wente vnto her house, and founde the deuell was departed, and her daughter lyenge on the bed.

And whan he wente out agayne from the coastes of Tyro and Sydon, he came vnto the see of Galilâe, thorow the myddes of thy coastes of the tê cities. And they brought vnto him one that was deaf, and had impediment in his speach. And they prayed him, that he wolde laye his hands vpon him.

And he toke him a syde from the people, and put his fyngers in his eares, and dyd spyt, and touched his tonge, and looked vp vnto heavuen, sighed, and sayde vnto him: Ephatha, that is, be opened. And immediatly his eares were opened, and the bonde of his tõge was loswed, and he spake right. And he charged them, that they shulde tell noman.

But the more he forbade them, the more they published it, and marueyled out of measure, and sayde: He hath done all thinges well. The deaf hath he made to heare, and the domme to speake.

The viij. Chapter.

The same tyrne when there was moch people there, and had nothynge to eate, Iesus called his discipes to him, and sayde vnto them: I haue compassion vpon the people, for they haue taried with me now three dayes, and haue nothynge to eate. And ye let them go home fro me fastynge, they shulde fastynge by the wyse. For some of them were come from farre. And his discipes answered him: Where shulde we get bred here in the wyldernes, to satisfie them? And he axed the: How many loaues haue ye? They sayde: Seuen. And he commanded the people to set downe vpon the grounde. And he toke the seuen loaues, and gaue thakes, and brake them, and gaue the vnto his discipes to set them before the people. And they set the before the people. And they had a few small fyshes, and when he had gienen thankes, he bad set the same before the people. They ate, and were satisfie, toke vp seuen basckettes full of fy brokene meate that was left. And they fy ate, were vp a foure thouands. And he sent the awaye.

And forth with he wente in to a shippe with his discipes, and came in to the coastes of Dalmanutha. And the Pharises wente out, and begaine to dispute with him, and tempted him, and desyred a token of him from heavuen.

And he sighed in his sprete, and sayde: Why doth this generation seke a token? Verely I saye vnto you: There shal no token be geuen vnto this generation. And he left them, and went againe in to the shippe, and passed ouer. And they forgot to take bred with them, and had nomore with them in the shippe but one loafe. And he commanded them, and sayde: Take hede, and beware of the leuen of the Pharises, and of the leuen of Herode. And their myndes wauered here and there, and sayde amongst them selues: This is it, that we haue no bred. And Iesus vnderstode that, and sayde vnto them: Why trouble ye youre selues, that ye haue no bred? Are ye yet without vnderstanding? Haue ye yet a bylynded hert in you? Haue ye eyes, a se not? and haue ye ears, and haer not? and remembre ye not, that I brake fyue loaues amongst fyue thouands, how many basckettes full of broken meate toke ye then vp? They sayde: Twolue. And when I brake the seuen amongst the foure thouands, how many basckettes full of broken meate toke ye then vp? They sayde: Seuen. And he sayde vnto the: Why are ye then without vnderstanding?

And he came to Bethsaida, they brought one blinnede vnto him, and prayed him to touch him. And he toke the blinnde by the hand, and led him out of the towne, and spat in his eyes, and layed his handes vpon him, and axed him whether he sawe ought. And he loked vp, and sayde: I se men goyng as ye I sawe trees. After this he layed his handes vpon his eyes agayne, and made him to se. And he was brought to right againe, and sawe all clearly. And he sent him home, and sayde: Go not in to y towne, and tell it also vnto noman therin.

And Jesus wente out and his discipes into the townes of the cite Cesarea Philippi, and in y waye he axed his discipes and sayde vnto them: What do men saye, that I am? They answered: They saye, thou art Iohn the baptist: Some saye thou art Elias, some that thou art one of the prophets. And he sayde vnto them: But whom saye ye that I am? Then answered Peter and sayde vnto him: Thou art very Christ. And he charged them strately, that they shulde tell no man of him. And he began to teach them: The sonne of man must suffer many things, and be cast out of the elders y hye prestes and scribes, and be put to death, and after thre dayes ryse agayn. And that worde spake he fre openly. And Peter toke him vnto him, and beganne to rebuke him. But he turne him aboute, and loked vpon his discipes, and reproved Peter, and sayde: Go after me thou Sathan, for thou sauourest not the things that be of God, but of men.

And he called vnto him the people with his discipes, and sayde vnto them: Who so eu er wyl folow me, let him denye himself, and take vp his crosse, and folow me. For who so eu er wyl save his life, shal lose it: and who so eu er loseth his life for my sake and the gospels, shal same save it. What helpeh it a ma though he wane the whole worlde, and yet toke harme in his soule? Or, what can a man gene, to redeeme his soule withall? Who so eu er is ashamed of me and of my wordes amonst this aduouterous and synfull generacion, of him shal the sonne of man also be ashamed, when he commeth in the glory of his father with the holy angels. And he sayde vnto them: Verely I saye vnto you: There stode here some, which shall not taist of death, tyll they se the kyngdome of God come with power.

The is. Chapter.

And after sixe dayes Jesus take vnto him Peter, James and Iphon, and brought them vp in to an hye mountayne out of the waye alone, and was trasfigured before them, and his clothes were bright and very whyte as y snowe, so whyte as no fuller can make vpon earth. And there appeared vnto the Elias with Moses, and they talked with Jesus. And Peter answered, and sayde vnto Jesus: Rabbi, here is good beyng for vs. Let vs make thre tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias. For he knewe not what he sayde, and they were very fearfull. And there was a cloude, which ouershadowed the. And out of the cloude there came a voyce, and sayde: This is my deare soune, heare him. And immediatly they loked aboute them, and sawe noman more then Jesus onely with them.

But when they wente downe from the mountayne, Jesus charged them, that they shulde tell no man what they had sene, tyll the sonne of man were ryshen agayne from the dead.

And they kepeth that sayenge by them, and axed one another: What is that ryssinge agayne from the dead? And they axed him, and sayde: Why saye the scrybes then, that Elias must first come? He answered and sayde vnto them: Elias shal come first in dede, and bryng all thinges to right agayne. The sonne of man also shal suffre many thinges, and be despyesed, as it is wrytten. But I saye vnto you: Elias is come, and they haue done vnto him what they wolde, acordinge as it is wrytten of him.

And he came to his discipes, and sawe much people aboute them, and the scrybes disputynge with them. And as soon as the people sawe, they were astonnyed, and ranne vnto him, and saluted him. And he axed the scrybes: What dispute ye with them? And one of the people answered, and sayde: Master, I haue brought vnto the my soune, which hath a dome sprete: and when so euer he taketh him, he teareth him, and he fometh, and gnaszheth with the teth, and pyneth awaye, I haue spoken to thy disciples that they shulde cast him out, and they coude not.

C He answered him, and sayde: O thou un faithfull generacion, how longe shal I be with you? How longe shal I suffer you? Brynge hi hither to me. And they brought him vnto him. And as soone as the sprete saue him, he tare him, and fell vpon the earth, and weltried and fomed. And he axed his father: How longe is it, sens this happened vnto him? He sayde: Of a childe, and oft tymes hath he cast him in to the fyre and water, to destroye him: but ye thou canst do eny thinges, haue mercy vpon vs, and helpe vs. Jesus sayde vnto him: Yf thou couldest beleue: All thinges are possible vnto that belieueth. And immediatly the father of the childe cried with teares, and sayde: LORDE I beleue: O helpe thou myne vnbeleue.

Now when Jesus sawe that the people ranne to, he rebuked the foule sprete, and sayde vnto him: Thou domne and deaf sprete, I charge the, departe out of him, and entre no more in to him from hence forth. And he cried, and rent him sore, and departed. And he was as though he had bene deed, in so much that many sayde: he is deed. But Jesus toke him by the hande, and set him vp. And he arose. And when he came home, his disciples axed him secretly: Why coulde not we cast him out? And he sayde: This kynde can go out by no meanes, but by prayer and fastynge.

D And they departed these, and toke their journey thorow Galilee, and he wilde not that eny man shulde knowe of it. But he taught his disciples, and sayde vnto them: The sonne of mā shalbe deluyed in to the handes of men, and they shall put him to death: and when he is put to death, he shall ryse ageyne the thirde daye. But they vnderstode not that worde, and were afrayed to axe him.

And he came to Capernaum. And when he was at home, he axed them: What disputed ye amonge youre selues by ye waye? But they held their tinges: For they had disputed by the waye amonge them selues, who shulde be the greatest. And he sat downe, and called the twolfe, and sayde vnto them: Yf eny man wyly be the first, the same shall be the last of all, and the seruant of all. And he toke a childe, and set him in the myddest of them, and toke him in his armes, and sayde vnto them: Who so euer receaue a childe in my name, receaue me: and who so euer receaue me, receaue not me, but him that hath sent me.

Ihon answered him, and sayde: Master, we sawe one dryue out deuels in thy name, but he followeth not vs, and we forbade him because he followeth vs not. But Jesus sayde: Forbyd him not: for * there is no mā that doth a myraele in my name, and can soone speake euell of me. For who so euer is not agaynst vs, the same is for vs. And who so euer gaueth you a cuppe of water to drinke in my name, because ye belonge vnto Christ, verely I saye vnto you: he shal not lose his rewarde. And * who so offendeth one of these little ones that beleue in me, it were better for him, that a mylstone should be hanged aboute his neck, and he cast in to the see. Yf thy hāde offende the, cut him of. Better it is for the to entre in to life lamine, the haunynge two hondes to go in to hell in to the eueralstynge fyre, where their worme dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out.

Yf thy fote offende the, cut him of. Better it is for the to entre in to life crepell, the haunynge two fete to be cast in to hell in the fyre eueralstynge, where their worme dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out. Yf thine eye offende the, cast him from the. Better it is for the to entre in to ye kyngdome of God with one eye, then haunynge two eyes to be cast in to the fyre of hell: where their worme dyeth not, and their fyre goeth not out. For euery mā must be salted with fyre, and euery offerynge shalbe seasoned with salt. The salt is good: but ye salt be vnsauery, wherewith all shall it be salted? Haue salt in you, and peace amonge youre selues one with another.

The r. Chapter.

A ND he rose vp, and came from thence in to the places of Iewry beyonde Iordan. And the people weete agaynse him by heapes, and as his maner was he taught them agaynse. And the Pharises came vnto him, and axed him, if ye it were laufull for a man to put awaye his wife, and tempted him withall. But he answered and sayde: What hath Moses commaunded you? They sayde: Moses suffred to wyte a testimoniall of deuorecemět, and to put her awaye. Jesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Because of the hardenesse of youre hert dyd Moses wyte you this commaundement. But from the first creation God made the man and woman. For this cause shal a man leane his father and mother, and cleue vnto his wife, and they two shalbe one flesh. Now are they not twayne the, but one flesh. Let not man therfore put asunder that, which God hath coupled together.

And at home his disciples axed him agayne of the same. And he sayde vnto the: Who so euer putteth awaye his wife, and marrieth another, breakeh wedlocke to her waarde. And ye a woman forsake her husbande, and be married to another, she comitteth adulterie.

And they brought children vnto him, that he might touch them. But the disciples reproved those that brought the. Neuerthelesse when Jesus sawe it, he was displeased, and sayde vnto them: Suffre the children to come vnto me, and forbide them not, for of soch is the kyngdome of God. Verely I saye vnto you: Who so euer receaueth not the kyngdome of God as a childe, he shal not entere therein. And he toke them vp in his armes, and layed his handes vpon them, and blessed them.

And whan he was gone forth vpon the waye, there came one runninge, and knelled vnto him, and axed him: Good Master, what shal I do, that I maye inherit everlasting life? But Jesus saide vnto him: Why callest thou me good? There is no man good, but God onely. Thou knowest the commaundements: Thou shalt not breake wedlocke: thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not steel: thou shalt bere no false wytnesse: thou shalt begyle no man: Honour thy father and mother. But he answered, and sayde vnto him: Master, all these have I kepe fro my youth vp. And Jesus behelde him, and louted him, and sayde vnto him: Thou wantest one thing: Go thy waye, and * sell all that thou hast, and gene it vnto the poore: so shalt thou haue a treasure in heauen, and come vnto me, and take the crosse vpon the. And he was discomforted at the sayenge, and wente awaye sory, for he had greate possessions.

And Jesus asked aboute him, and sayde vnto his disciples: 4 How hardly shal the ryche come in to the kyngdome of God? And the disciples were astonnyed at his wordes. But Jesus answered agayne, and sayde vnto them: Deare children, how harde is it for them that trust in riches, to come in to the kyngdome of God? It is easie for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a needle, then for a rich man to entre in to the kyngdome of God. Yet were they astonnyed the more, and sayde amongst the selues: Who can the be saved? But Jesus behelde them, and sayde: With men it is vnpossyble, but not with God: for with God all things are possyble.

Then sayde Peter vnto him: Beholde, we haue forsaken all, and folowed the. Jesus answered sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no man that forsaketh house, or brethren, or sisters, or father or mother, or wife, or children, or londes for my sake and the gospels, that shall not receaue an hundred foldes now in this lyfe, houses, and brethre, and sisters, and mothers and children, and londes with persecucions, and in the world to come euerlastinge life. But many that are the first, shal be the last: and the last the first.

They were in the waye goinge vp to Jerusalem, and Jesus wente before them. And they were astonnyed, and folowed him, and were afraied. And Jesus toke the twelue agayne, and tolde them what shalde happe vnto him. Beholde, we go vp to Jerusalem, and the somme of men shalbe deluyerd vnto the hye prestes and scrybes, and they shal condemn him to death, and deluyer him vnto the Heythē. And they shal mocke him, and scourge him, and spyt vpon him, and put him to death, and on the thirde daye shal he ryse agayne.

Then wete vnto him Iames and Thon sons of Zebede, and sayde: Master, We desyre, that what soever we axe of the, thou wilt do it for vs. He sayde vnto the: What desyre ye that I shal do to you? They sayde vnto him: Graunte vs, that we maye syt one at thy right hande, and one at thy left hande in thy glory. But Jesus sayde vnto the: Ye wote not what ye axe. Maye ye drynke the cuppe, ý I shal drynke? and be baptysed with the bapt hymte that I shal be baptysed withall? They sayde vnto hym: Yee ý we maye. Jesus sayde vnto them: The cuppe that I drynke, shal ye drynke in dede: and be baptysed with the bapt hymte that I shal be baptysed withall. Neuertheles to syt at my right hande and at my left, is not myne to geue you, but vnto them for whom it is prepared.

And wha the ten herde that, they dismayned at Iames and Ihon. But Jesus called them, and sayde vnto them: Ye knowe that the prynces of ý worlde haue domynacion of the people, and ý mightie exercise auctorite amongeth them. So shal it not be amonge you: but who so euer wil be greate amongeth you, shal be youre mynister: and who so wyl be cheuest amongeth you, shalbe seruant of all. For the sonne of man also came not to be serued, but to do seruyce, and * to geue his life to a redempccion for many.

And they came vnto Iericho. And whan he wente out of Iericho, and his discipes, and moch people, there sat one blynde Barthimeus the sonne of Thimeus by ý waye, and begged. And wha he herde that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he beganne to crye and saye: Jesu thou sonne of Daviud haue mercy vpon me. And many reproved hym, that he shulde holde his tounge. But he cried mouch more: Thou sonne of Daviud haue mercy vpon me. And Jesus stode styll, and bad call hym. And they called the blynde, and sayde vnto hym: Be of good conforte, arysye, he calleth the. And he cast awaye his garment from hym, stode vp, and came to Jesu. And Jesus answered, * sayde vnto hym: What wilt thou that I do vnto the? The blynde sayde vnto hym: Master, that I might se. Jesus sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye, thy faith hath helped ý. And immediatly he had his sight and followed him in the waye.

The xi. Chapter.

And whan they came nye Jerusalem to Bethphage and Bethanye vnto mount

Oliuete, he sent two of his discipes, and sayde vnto them: Go in to the towne that lyeth before you, and as soone as ye come in, ye shal fynde a foale bounde, wher vpon no man hath syttë: lowse it, and brynge it hither. And yf eny man saye vnto you: wherfore do ye that? Then saye ye: The LORDE hath nede therof, and forth with he shal sende it hither. They wete their waie and founde the foale tyed by ý dore without at the partyng of the waye, and lowse it. And certayne of those ý stode there, axed them: What do ye, that ye lowse the foale? But they sayde vnto the, like as Jesus had commaundeth them. And so they let them alone. And they brought the foale vnto Jesus, and layed their clothes theron, and he sat theron. But many spred their garnettes in the waye: some cut downe bryanches fro the trees, and strowed the in the waye. And they that wente before, and that folowed after, cried, and sayde: Hosyanna, blessed be he, that commeth in the name of the LORDE: blessed be the kyngdome of oure father Daviud, which commeth in the name of the LORDE. Hosyanna in the height.

And the LORDE entred in to Jerusalem, and wente in to the temple, and loked vpon all. And at euyn he wente out vnto Bethany with the twolue: and on the morow wha they departed from Bethanye, he hugred, and sawe a fygge tre afarre of, which had leaues. Then came he nye, (to se) ýf he coude fynde eny thinge theron. And whan he came to it, he founde nothinge but leaues (for the tym of fygges was not yet.) And Jesus answered, and sayde vnto it: Neuer mä eate frute of the for euermore. And his discipes herde it. And they came to Ierusalem. And Jesus wente in to the temple, and beganne to drye ouer the sellers and byers in the teple, ouerthrew the tables of the money chaungers, and the stoles of the doue sellers, and suffred not eny man to cary a vessell throu the temple. And he taught and sayde vnto them: Is it not wryttë: * My house shalbe called a house of prayer for all people? But ye haue made it a denne of murtherers, him, but they were afraied of him, for all the people marrieled at his doctrine. And at euem he wente out of the cite. And on the morow they passed by, and sawe the fygge tre, that it was wythred vnto the rote. And Peter thought theron, and sayde vnto hym: Master, beholde, the fygge tre y thou cursedest, is wythred awaye. Jesus answered, and sayde vnto them: "Haue faith in God. Verely I saye vnto you: Who so euere saith vnto this mountayne: Avoysde, and cast thy self in to the see, and *douteth not in his hert, but beleueth that the thinges shal come to passe which he saith, then loke what he sayeth, it shal come to passe.

  Therefore I saye vnto you: What so euere ye desyre in youre proue, beleue that ye shal receaue it, and ye shal have it. "And whan ye stonde and praye, forgeue ye haue ought ageynst eny man, that youre father also in heauen, maye forgeue you youre trespaces.

And they came agayne vnto Ierusalem and when he wente in the temple, there came vnto hym the hye prestes and scrtybes and the elders, and sayde vnto hym: By what auctorite dost thou these thinges? and who gauethe this auctorite to do soch?

But Jesus answered and sayde vnto the: I wil axe you a worde also, answere me, and I wyn tell you, by what auctorite I do these. The baptyme of Iohn, was it from heauen, or of men? Answere me.

And they thought in them selues: ye what we saye, it was from heauen, then shal he saye: Why dyd ye not then beleue him? But ye what we saye: It was of men, then feare we the people, for they all helde that Iohn was a true prophet. And they answered, and sayde vnto hym: We can not tell. And Jesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges.

The rj. Chapter.

A ND he beganne to speake vnto them by parables: A certayne ma planted a vyynyarde, *and made a hedges aboute it, and dygged a wynne presse, and buylde a tower, and let yt out vnto husbande men, and wente in to a straunge countrie. And whan the tyme was come, he sent a seruaút to the husbande men, that he might receaue of the husbandmen, of the frute of the vyynyarde. But they toke him, and bet him, and sent him awaye emptye. Agayne, he sent vnto them another seruaunt, whom they stoned, and brake his heade, and sent hym awaye shamefully dealt withall. Agayne he sent another, whom they slew, and many other: some they bett, and some they put to death.

Then had he yet one sonne onely, whom he loued, him he sent also vnto them at the last, and sayde: they wyl stonde in awe of my sonne. But the same husbandmen sayde amongst them selues: This is the heyre, Come, let vs kyll him, so shal the inheritance be ours. And they toke him, and slewe him, and cast hym out of the vyynyarde. What shal now the lorde of the vyynyarde do? He shal come and destroye the husbande men, and gauethe the vyynyarde vnto other. Haue ye not red this scripture: *The same stone which the buylers refused, is become the headstone in the corner? This was the LORDES doyng, and it is maruels in our eyes.

And they wente aboute to take him (but they feared the people) for they perceaued, that he had spoké this parable ageynst the. And they left him, and wente their waye.

And they sent vnto hym certayne of the Pharises and Herodes *officers to take him in his wordes. And they came, and sayde vnto hym: Master, we knowe that thou art true and carest for no man. For thou regardest not the outwarde appearance of men, but teachest @ waye of God truly. Is it lauffull to gauethe tribute vnto the Emperoure, or not? Ought we to gauethe it, or ought we not to gauethe it? But he perceaued their ypocrisy, and sayde vnto them: Why tempte ye me? Brynge me a peny, that I maye se it. And they brought it him. Then sayde he: Whose ymage and superscripicion is this? They sayde vnto him: The Emperours. Then answered Jesus and sayde vnto the: *Geue therfore vnto the Emperoure that which is the Emperours, and vnto God that which is Gods. And they maruelled at him.

*Then came vnto him the Saduces (which holde that there is no resurrection) these axed him, and sayde: Master, Moses wroth vnto vs. "Ye eny mans brother dye, and leave a wife, and leave no children, his brother shal take his wife, and rayse vp sede vnto his brother. Now were there seuen brethren: the first toke a wife, and dyed, and left no sede: and the seconde toke her, and dyed, and left no sede also: the thirde in like maner.

And they all seuen toke her, and left no sede. At the last after them all, the wyfe dyed also. Now in the resurrection whan they shal rayse agayne, whose wife shal she be of them? For seuen had her to wyfe.

Then answered Iesus, and sayde vnto them: Do not ye erre? because ye knowe not the scripture nor the power of God? When they shal rayse agayne from the dead, they shal nether marry nor be maried, but they are as the angels in heauen. As touchinge the dead, that they shal rayse agayne, haue ye not red in the boke of Moses, how God spake vnto him in the bush, and sayde: "I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. Yet is not God a God of the dead, but of the lyuyng. Therfore ye erre greatly.

And there came vnto him one of the scrybys, that had herkened vnto the how they disputed together, and sawe that he had answered them well, and axed him: Which is the cheuest commaundement of all? Iesus answered him: The cheuest commaundement of all commaundementes is this: "Heare O Israel, the LORDE our God is one God, and thou shalt lone the LORDE thy God with all thy hert, with all thy soule, with all thy mynde, and with all thy strength. This is the cheuest commaundement, and the seconde is like vnto it: "Thou shalt lone thy neibbour as thy self. There is none other greater commaundement then these.

And the scrybe sayde vnto him: Master, Verely thou hast sayde right: for there is but one God, and there is none other without him, and to lone him with all the hert, with all the mynde, with all the soule, and with all the strength, and to lone a man neibbour as himself, is more then brent sacrifices and all offerynges. But whan Iesus sawe that he answered discreetly, he sayde vnto him: Thou art not farre from the kyngdome of God. And after this durst no man axe him eny no questions.

And Iesus answered, and sayde, whan he taught in the temple: "How saye the scrybys,
"Thou shalt lone the LORDE thy God. But Iesus answerd sayde vnto his LORDE: Sayt thou on my right honde, tyll I take thine enemies thy fote stole. Therfore Daudi calleth him his LORDE. How is he the his sonne? And many people herde him gladly.

And he taught the, and sayde vnto the: "Beware of the scrybys, that loute to go in longe garmentes, and loute to be saluted in the market, and syt gladly above in the synagoges and at the table: they demoure wyddowes houses, and vnder a coloure they make longe prayers. These shal receaue the more damnacion.

"And Iesus sat ouer agaynst the Gods chest, and behelde how the people put money in to the Gods chest. And many that were riche: put in mone. And there came a poore wyddowe, and put in two mytes, which make a farthinge. And he calleth vnto him his discipulles, and sayde vnto them: Verely I saye vnto you: this poore wyddowe hath put more in the Gods chest, then al they haue put in: For they al haue put i of their superfluyte, but she of hir pouerte hath put in all that she had, euyn hir whole lyuyng.

The riiij. Chapter.

And whan he wete out of the temple, one of his discipulles sayde vnto him: Master, se, what stones and what a buyldinge is this? And Iesus answered and sayde vnto him: Seist thou all this greate buyldinge? There shal not one stone be left vpo another, and shal not be broken downe.

And whan he sat vpon mount Olivet ouer ageynst the temple, Peter and Iames, and Ihon, and Andrew axed him pryvately: Tell vs, Whan shall all these come to passe? And what shalbe the tokë, whan all these shalbe fulfilled? Iesus answered them, and beganne to saye: Take hede, that no man disseace you, for there shal many come vnder my name, and saye: I am Christ, ε ἀναλυεῖν, and shall disceau many. But when ye shall hear of the noyse of warres, be not ye afraied: for so must it be, but ὑ ende is not yet. *One people shall ryse ageynst another, and one realme ageynst another, and there shall be earth quakes here and there, and derth shall there be and troubles. These are the begynnynge of sorowes.

But take ye hede to youre selues. *For they shall delyuer you vp to the *councels, and synagoyes, and ye shall be beaten, and shalbe brought before prynces and kynges for my namessake, for a wytnesse vnto the. And ὑ gospel must first be preached amōge all people.

*Now whan they shall lede you and delyuer you vp, take ye no thought afofe what ye shal saye: and ymagyn ye nothinge afofe hande, but what so euer shall be genē you at the same houre, that speake: for it is not ye that speake, but the holy goost. One brother shall delyuer another vnto death, and the father the sonne, ε the children shall ryse ageynst their fathers and mothers, and shal helpe them to death, and ye shall be hated of all men for my names sake. But who so endureth to the ende, shalbe saued.

*Whan ye shal se the abominaciō of desolacion (wherof it is spoke by 1Daniel the prophet) stonde where it oughte (who so readeth it, let him marc it well) then let the which be in Iewry, flye vnto the mountaynes: and let him that is on the house toppe not descend in to the house, ner come therin, to fetch euy thynge out of the house. And let him that is in the felde, not turne backe to fetch his clothes.

But wo vnto them that are with childe, and to them that geue suck in those dayes. Neuertheles praye ye, that youre flight be not in the wynter. For in those dayes there shall be such trouble as was not from the begynnynge of ε creatures which God created, vnto this tyme, nether shall be. And ὑ LORDE had not shortened those dayes, there shulde no man be saued. But for the electes sake whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened those dayes.

*Now ε eny man shal saye vnto you at ε tymε: Lo, here is Christ: o, he is there, belieue it not. For there shal arysye false Christes, and false prophetyes, which shal do tokens ε wonders, to disceau euyn the very chosen, εf it were possyble. But take ye hede, Beholde, I haue tolde you all before.

*But at the same tyme after this trouble, the Sonne and Monē shal lose their light, and the starres shall fall from heauen, and the powers of the heauens shal moue; and then shal they se the sonne of man commynge in the cloudes with greate power and glory. And the shal he sende his angels, and shal gather together his chosen fro the foure wyndes, from one ende of the earth to the other.

Lerne a symilitude of the fyge tre: Wha ε his braunc is yet tēder, and hath brought forth leaues, ye knowe that the Sommer is nye. So lykwyse wha ye se all these things come to passe, be ye sure, that it is nye euyn at the dores. Verely I saye vnto you: this generaciō shal not passe, tyll all these be fullfilled. Heauen and earth shal perishe, but my wordes shal not perishe. But of that daye and houre knoweth no man, nether the angels in heauen, no not the sonne him self, but the father onely.

*Take hede, watch, ε praye, for ye knowe not whan the tymε is. Like as a man that wente in to a strangue countrie, and left his house, and gaue his seruauntes auctorite. vnto euery one his worke, and commaunded y porter, that he shulde watch. Watch ye therefore, for ye knowe not wha the master of ε house cometh, whether he cometh in the euennyng, or at mydnyght, or aboue the cock crowynge, or in the mornyng, that he come not sodenly, and fynde ye slepyng. Loke what I saye vnto you, that saye I vnto all. Watch.

*And after two dayes was Easter, and the dais of swete bred. *And ε hye prystes ε serybes sought how they might take him with disceate, ε put him to death. But they sayede: Not in the feast dais, lest there be an vproure in the people.

*And when he was at Bethanye in the house of Symon the leper, and sat at the table, there came a woman, which had a boxe of pure and costly Nardus oyntment. And she brake the boxe, and poured it vpô his heade. Then were there some, who disdained and sayde: Where to serveth this waist? This oyntment might have bene solde for more then three hundred pens, and bene good for a poor. And they grudged against her.

But Jesus sayde: let her be in rest. Why trouble ye her? She hath done a good worke. Ye have alwaye the poore with you, and wha so ever ye wil, ye maye do the good: but me have ye not alwaie. She hath done what she could, she is come before, to anoynte my body for my buriall. Verely I saye vnto you: Where so euer this gospell shall be preached in all the worlde, there shall also be that she hath now done, be tolde for a remembrance of her.

And Iudas Iscarioth one of the twelue wente vnto the hye preste, to betraye him vnto them. When they herde, they were glad, and promysed that they wolde giue him money. And he sought, how he might conuiently betraye him.

And vpon the first daye of sweate breds, wha the Easter lambe was offered, his disciples sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou we go and prepare, y thay mayest eate y Easter lamb? And he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go youre waye in to the cite, and there shal mete you a ma bearing a pitchet with water, folowe him, where so euer he goeth in, there saye ye to the good man of the house: The Master sendeth the worde: Where is the gest house, wherein I maye eate the Easter lamb, with my disciples? And he shal shewe you a greete parlour, which is panned, prepared, there make readye for vs. And y disciples went forth, came in to y cite, and foudle it as he had sayde vnto the. And they prepared y Easter lambe.

At euern he came with the twelue. And as they sat at the table, Jesus sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: One of you eatheth with me, shall betraye me. And they were sory, saide vnto hi one after another: Is it I? another (sayde:) is it I? He answered y saide vnto the: One of the twelue, euyn y same y dyppeth with me in y platter. The sonne of man truly goeth forth, as it is wrytten of hi.

But wo vnto that man, by whom the sonne of man is betrayed. It were better for the same man, that he had never bene borne.

And as they ate, Jesus toke the bred, gane thankes, brake it, and gane it the, saide: Take eate, this is my body. And he toke the cuppe, thaked, and gane it the, and they all dranke thereof. And he sayde vnto them: This is my bloude of the new Testament, which shallbe shed for many. Verely I saye vnto you, that from hence forth I wil not drynke of the frute of the ryne, till y daye I drynke it new in y kyngdome of God. And wha they had sayde grace, they wete forth vnto mount Olue. And Jesus sayde vnto them: This night shall ye all be offended in me, for it is wrytten: * I wil smyte the sheperde, the shepe shall be scatred abrode. Neuertheles after y I am rysen agayn, I wil go before you in to Galilie. But Peter sayde vnto him: And though all men shulde be offended, yet wolde not I be offended. And Jesus sayde vnto him: Verely I saye vnto y: To daye in this same night, before y cock crowe two tymes, shalt thou denye me thryse. But he saide yet more: Yee though I shulde dye with y, yet wil I not denye y. So saide they all I like maner.

And they came in to y felde called Gethsemane, and he saide vnto his disciples: Syt ye here, till y I go yonder, and praye. And he toke with him Peter and James, Iou, and begaine to waxe fearefull, to be in an agonye, saide vnto the: My soule is heuy euyn vnto death: tary ye here and watch. And he wente forth a little, fell vpon the grounde and prayed, that, (yf it were possyble) y hour might passe fro him, and sayde: Abba, my father, all thynge are possyble vnto the, take this cuppe awaye fro me: Neuertheles not what I wil, but what thou wilt.

And he came vnto them, and founde the slepynge, and sayde vnto Peter: Symon, sleepest thou? Couldest thou not watch with me one houre? Watch and praye, that ye fall not in to temptation. The sprete is wyllynge, but y flesh is weake. And he wete forth agayne, and prayed, and spake the same wordes, and returned, and founde them slepynge agayne: for their eyes were heuy, they knewe not what they shulde answere him.
And he came the thirde tymne, and sayde vnto them: Slepe on now, and take youre rest. It is ynowth, the houre is come: beholde, thy sonne of man shalbe delyuered in to the handes of synners: arysse, let vs be goynte. Beholde, he is at hande, that betrayeth you.

And immedietly whyle he yet spake, came Iudas one of the twolue, and with hym a greate multitude, with swerdes and staues from the hye prestes and scrybes and elders. And the traytoure had geuen them a tokē, and sayde: Whom so euer I kysse, that same is he, laye handes vpon hym, and lede hym awaye warely. And whā he was come, he wente straight waye vnto hym, and sayde vnto hym: O master, master, and kyssed hym. Then layed they their handes vpon hym, & toke hym. But one of the that stode by, drew out his swerd, and smote the hye prestes seruaunt, and cut of his eare.

fAnd Jesus answered, and sayde vnto the: Ye are come forth as it were to a murtherer with swerdes and with staues to take me. I was daylie with you in the temple, and taught, and ye toke me not. But this is done, that the scripture maye be fulfilled. And all the discipes forsoke hym, and fled. And there followed hym a yonge mā, which was clothed in lynnen vpon the bare slynne, and the yonge mē toke holde of him. But he let the lynnen go, and fled naked from them.

And they led Jesus vnto the hye prest, where all thy hye prestes, and elders and scrybes, were come together. As for Peter, he folowed hym afarre of in to the hye prestes palace. And he was there, and sat with the seruauntes, and warned hym.

But the hye prestes and the whole councell sought wytnesse agaynst Jesus, they might bryng hym to death, and they founde none. Many gauie false wytnesse agaynst hym, but their wytnesses agreed nottogether. And some stode vp, and gauie false wytnesse agaynst hym, and sayde: We herde hym saye: I wil breake downe this temple that is made with hōdes, and in thre daways byłde another not made with handes. But their wytnesse agreed not together.*

GAnd the hye prest stode vp amonget hem, and axed Jesus, and sayde: Answerest thou nothinge vnto it, that these testifie agaynst the? But he helde his tunge, and answered nothinge. *The the hye prest axed him agayne, and sayde vnto hym: Art thou Christ the sonne of the blessed? Iesus sayde: I am. And ye shal se the sonne of man syt at the riȝt hande of power, and come in the cloudes of heauē. Then the hye prest rent his clothes, & sayde: What nede we eny mo wytnesses? Ye haue herde the blasphemy. What thynke ye? They all cōdeemned him, that he was gilty of death. Then beganne there some to spyt vpō him, and to couer his face, and to smyte him with fistes, and to saye vnto hym Prophecie vnto vs. And the seruauntes smote him on the face.

*And Peter was beneth in thy palace. The came one of the wenches of the hye prest: And whā she saw Peter warmynge hym, she loked vpō hī, and sayde: And thou wast with Jesus of Nazareth also. But he denied, & sayde: I knowe him not, neither can I tell what thou sayest. And he wente out in to the fore courte, and the cock crew. And a damsell sawe him, and beganne agayne to saye vnto them that stode by: This is one of them. And he denied it agayne. And after a little whyle they ỳ stode by, sayde agayne vnto hym: Of a trueth thou art one of them for thou art a Galilean, and thy speach soundeth euē alike. But he begane to curse and sweare: I knowe not the man, that ye speake of. And the cock crew agayne. Then thought Peter vpou the wordes, that Jesus sayde vnto hym: Before ỳ cock crow two tymes, thou shalt denye me thryse. And he beganne to wepe.

The Ṛb. Chapter.

AND soone in the mornynge the hye prestes helde a councell with the elders and scrybes and the whole councell, that bounde Iesus, and led hym awaye, and delyuered hym vnto Pylate. And Pylate axed hym: Art thou the kyng of the Iewes? He answered, and sayde vnto hym: Thou sayest it. And the hye prestes accused hym sore. But Pylate axed him agayne, and sayde: Answerest thou nothinge? Beholde, how sore they laye to thy charge. Nevertheless Jesus answered no more, in so much ἔπεσεν ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου

At that feast of Easter he was wont to deliever unto them a prisoner, whom so ever they wore desire. There was ἤ προσωπίζω with the sedious, one called Barrabas, which in the vppoure had committed murther, and the people wente vp, and prayed him, that he wolde do, as he was wonte.

Pylate answered them: ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω πᾶσιν σαρκικὸν, for he knew, that ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω πᾶσιν σαρκικόν

the hye prestes had delievered hym of envye. But the hye prestes mowed ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω πᾶσιν σαρκικόν, that he shulde rather geue Barrabas lowse vnto them.

Pylate answered agayne, and sayde vnto them: ὃς θυσίαν πάσην καὶ ἀνήρικον ἐπιμένει, Μαριάμ, Μαριάμ, daughter, and her sister, called Mary, and brought vnto the entrance of the house, and vppon the door, and crosse, and thurible, and arent and anale, and all the appurtenances of the temple, and put on his clothes vp, and leede hym out, that they might crucifie hym.

And they compelled one that passed by, called Symon of Cyren (which came from the felde, and was the father of Alexander and Rufus) to bare his crose. And Pylate brought hym to the place Golgatha, which is by interpretation: a place of dead mens skulles. And they gave hym wyne myxedt with myrrre, to drynke, ἄρα ἕπεσεν ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου, to kepe it not. And when they had crucified hym, they parted his garnetēs, ἄρα ἕπεσεν ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου and it was aboute ὃ τρίτη οὐρα ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου, what every one shuld take. And it was aboute ὃ τρίτη οὐρα ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου, the kyng of the Iewes. And they crucified him with two mutterhurs, one at ὃ δεξιός ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου hande, and one at the left. Then was the scripture fulfilled, which sayeth: ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω πᾶσιν σαρκικόν ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου, ἴππος ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω πᾶσιν σαρκικόν ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου, ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω πᾶσιν σαρκικόν. And they that wete by, reuyled hym, and wagged their heads, and sayde: Φύσιν ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου. And Pylate went vp to Pilate, and saide: Πยวτος ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου. And Pylate went vp to Pilate, and saide: Πยวτος ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου. And Pylate went vp to Pilate, and saide: Πยวτος ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου. And Pylate went vp to Pilate, and saide: Πยวτος ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου. And Pylate went vp to Pilate, and saide: Πยวτος ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου ἐντὸς τοῦ ἐξαγορασμένου.

And when they loked, they sawe, that the stone was rolled awaye: for it was a very greate one. And they wente in to the seulcre, and on the right hande they sawe a yonge man syttinge, which had a longe whyte garmet vpom him, and they were abaszhed. But he sayde vnto thè: Be not ye afraied, ye seke Iesus of Nazareth which was cruified: he is ryson, he is not here. Beholde, þ place, where they layed him. But go ye youre waye, and tell his disciples and Peter, that he wil go before you in to Galile,æ there shal ye se him* as he sayde vnto you. And they wente forth in all the haist, and fêd from the seulcre: for there was a tremblnyge þ feare come vpon them, nether sayde they eny thinge to eny man, for they were afraied.

4 But Iesus, when he was ryson vp early vpó the first daye of the Sabbathes, he appeared first vnto Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast out seuen deuels. And she wète and tolde thè that were with him, as they moured and wept. And whan they herde that he lyned, and had appeared vnto her, they beleued it not. After warde as two of the were walkynge, he shewed himself vnder another figure,5 whan they were goynge vpom the feld. And they wente, and tolde the other: these they beleued not also.

ÆAt the last, as the eluen sat at the table, he shewed him self vnto them, and rebuked their vnbeleue, and þ hardnes of their hert, because they beleued not þ which had sene him ryson. And he sayde vnto them: 5 Go ye youre waye in to all the worlde, and preach the gospel vnto all creatures. Who so beleueth and is baptysed, shalbe saued: but who so beleueth not, shalbe damned.

As for the tokens, which shal folowe thè that beleue, these are they: 5 In my name shal they cast out deuyls: 5 Speake with new tungen: Dryne awaye serpêtes: And þf they drynke eny deedly thinge, it shal not hurte them: 5 They shal laye their handes vpô the sicke, and they shal recover.

And the LORDE, after that he had spoken vnto them, was taken vp in to heaven, and sytteth at the right hûde of God. And they wente out, and preached every where. And the LORDE wrought with them, and confirmed the worde with tokens folowyng.

The gospell of S. Luke.

The prologue of S. Luke.

For so much as many haue taken in hande, to set forth y wordes of the actes that are come to passe amonge vs, like as they deliuered the vnto vs, which from the begynnyng sawe them their selues, and were ministers of the worde, I thought it good (after that I had diligently searched out all from the begynnyng) to wyte the same orderly vnto the (good Theophilus) that thou mightest knowe the certefe of y wordes, wherof thou art informed.

The first Chapter.

In the tyne of Herode kyngge of Iewry, there was a prest named Zachary of the course of Abia: and his wife of the doughters of Aaron, her name Elizabeth. They were both righteous before God, and walked in all the commandementes and statutes of the LORDE vnreproeuably. And they had no childe, for Elizabeth was baren, and they were both well stricken in age.

And it came to passe as he executed the prestes office before God when his course came (acordinge to the custome of the presthode) it fell to his lott to burne incense. And he wente in to the temple of the LORDE, and the whole multitude of the people was without in prayer, whyle the incense was aburnyngge. And the angell of the LORDE appeared vnto him, and stode on the right syde of the altaire of incense. And when Zachary sawe him, he was abasueth, & there came a feare vpon him.

But the angell sayde vnto him: Feare not Zachary, for thy prayer is hearde. And thy wife Elizabeth shal beare the a sonne, whose name thou shalt call Ihon, & thou shalt haue ioye and gladnes: and many shal reioyce at his byrth, for he shal be greate before the LORDE. Wyne and stronge drynke shal he not drynke. And he shalbe fylled with the holy goost, euyn in his mothers wombe. And many of the children of Israel shal he turne vnto the LORDE their God. And he shal go before him in the sprete and power of Elias, to turne the hertes of y fathers vnto the children, and the vnfaithfull vnto the wyszdome of the righteous, to make the people ready for the LORDE.

And Zachary sayde vnto the Angel: *Wherby shal I knowe this? For I am olde, and my wife well stricken in age. The angell answered, and sayde vnto him: I am Gabriell that stonde before God, and am sent to speake vnto the, and to shewe the thes glad tydinges. And beholde, thou shalt be done, and not able to speake, vn tyll the daye that this come to passe, because thou hast ȝ not beleued my wordes, which shalbe fulfylled in their season.

And the people wayted for Zachary, and maruyeled, that he taried so longe in the temple. And wha he were out, he coude not speake vnto them. And they perceaued, that he had sene a vision in the temple. And he beckened vnto them, and remayned speacheslesse.

And it fortuned wha the tyne of his office was out, he wente home in to his house. And after those dayes Elizabeth his wife conceived, and hyd hir self fyue monethes, ȝ sayde: Thus hath ȝ LORDE done vnto me in ȝ dayes, wherin he hath loked vpō me, to take awaye fro me my rebuke amōge men.

* 1 Ps. 25. b. † Exo. 30. b. Heb. 9. a. ‡ Mala. 3. d.
§ 4 Re. 7. a.
And in the sixte moneth was the angell Gabriel sent from God in to a cite of Galile, called Nazareth, vnto a virgin that was spoused vnto a man, whose name was Joseph, of the house of David, and the virgin name was Mary. And the angell came in vnto her, and sayde: Halye thou full of grace, the LORDE is with the: blessed art thou among women.

Wha shaw he, she was abashed at his sayenge, and thought: What maner of salutation is this? And the angell sayde vnto her: Fear not Mary, for thou hast found grace with God. Behold, thou shalt conceau in thy wobé, thou shal be a sonne: thy name is Iesus: he shal be great, and shalbe called the sonne of the Hyest. And the LORDE God shal geue him a seate of Davud his father, and shal be kinge ouer his house and of his kyngdome. Then sayde Mary vnto the angell: How shal this be, seinge I knowe not a man? The angell answered, sayde vnto her: The holy goost shal come vpon the, and the power of the Hyest shal ouer-shadowe the. Therfore that Holy also which shalbe borne (of the) shalbe called the sonne of God. And behold, thy csen Elizabeth she also hath conceaued a sonne in her olde age, this is the sixte moneth of her, which is reported to be baren: for with God is nothing vnpossible. And Mary sayde: Behold, here am I the handmaid of the LORDE: be it vnto me, as thou hast sayde. And the angell departed fro her.

And Mary arose in those dayes, and wente in to the moutaynes with haist, into þy cite of Lewry, and came in to þy house of Zachary, and saluted Elizabeth. And it fortuned as Elizabeth herde the salutation of Mary, the babe sprange in hir wombe. And Elizabeth was fylled with the holy goost, she cried loude, and sayde: Blessed art thou amõge wemen, and blessed is the frute of thy wombe. And how happeneth this to me, that þy mother of my LORDE commeth vnto me? Beholde, when I herde the voyce of thy salutation, the babe sprange in my wombe with ioye, And blessed art thou that hast beleu, for þy things shalbe perfourmed, which were tolde fro þy LORDE. And Mary sayde:

"My soule magnifith the LORDE. And my sprite reioyseth i God my Saviour. For he hath loked vpô the lowe degre of his hande mayde. Beholde, fro hence forth shal all generacions call me blessed. For he that is Mightie, hath done great things vnto me, and holy is his name. And his mercy endureth thorow all generacions, vpon them that feare him. He sheweth strength with his arme, and scatret them that are proude in the ymaginacion of their hert. He putteth downe the mightie from the seate, and exalteth them of lowe degre. He fylleth the hongrie with good thinges, and letteth the riche go emptye. He remembreth mercye, and helpeth vp his seruaunt Israel. Even as he promised vnto oure fathers, Abraham and to his sede for euer. And Mary abode with her aboute three monethes, and then returned home agayne. And Elizabethes tyme was come, that she shulde be delueryed, she brought forth a sonne. And hir neighbours and kynsfolkes herde, þy the LORDE had shewed great mercy vpô her, ðy they rejoysed with her. And it fortuned vpon the eight daye, þy they came to circumye þy childe, and called him Zachary after his father: And his mother answered, and sayde: No, but he shalbe called Ihon. And they sayde vnto her: There is none in thy kynde, þy is so called. And they made signes vnto his father, how he wolde hane him called. And he axed for wrytinge tables, wrote þy sayde: His name is Ihon. And they maruelyed all. And immediately was his mouth and his tõge opened, and he spake, þy prayed God. And there came a feare vpon all their neighbours. And all this acte was noysed abrode thorow out all the hill countre of Lewry: And all they þy herde therof, toke it to hert, and sayde: What maner of man wil this childe be? For the hande of the LORDE was with him. And Zachary his father was fylled with the holy goost, and prophecied, and sayde: Blessed be þy LORDE God of Israel, for he hath vysited and redeemed his people."
And hath set vp an horne of saluation in the house of his seruaunt DaviD.

Euen as he promysed afore tyme, by the mouth of his holy prophets.

That he wolde deluyer vs frō our enemies, α from y hande of all such as hate vs.

And γ he wolde shewe mercy vnto our fathers, γ thinke vpō his γ holy covenauit.

Euen the ooth γ he sware vnto our father Abraham, for to geue vs.

That we deluyuered out of γ hāde of our enemies, might serue him without feare all the dayes of our life, in soch holynes and righteousnes as is acepte before him.

And thou childe shalt be called a prophet of the Hyest: for thou shalt go before γ LORDE, to prepare his wayes.

And to geue knowlege of saluation vnto his people, for the remyssyon of their synnes.

Thorow the tender mercye of our God, wherby the daye sprynge from an hye hath vsiued vs.

That he might geue light vnto them γ syt in darkenesse and shadowe of death, and to gyde our fete in to the waye of peace.

And the childe grew, and waxed stronge in sprete, and was in the wyldernes, tyll the tyme that he shulde shewe him self vnto the people of Israel.

The ij. Chapter.

And it fortuned at the same tyme, that there wēte out a comauaundement frō Augustus the Emperoure, that the whole worlde shulde be taxed. And this taxyng was the first that was executed, whan Syrenius was leftenaunt in Siria. And they wente all, euery one to his owne cite to be taxed. Then Ioseph ga him vp also frō Galile, out of the cite of Nazareth, in to Ieryw, to y cite of DaviD,§ which is called Bethleem, (because he was of y house and lynage of DaviD) that he might be taxed with Mary his spousd wife, which was with childe.

And it fortuned whyle they were there, y tyme was come, that she shulde be deluyered. And she brought forth birst first begotte some, τ wrapped him in swadlinge clothes, and layed him in a maunguer: for they had els no rowme in the yune.

And there were in y same region shep-herdes in the feld by the foldes, and watchinge their flocke by night. And beholde, γ angell of the LORDE stode by the, and γ brightness of the LORDE shone rounde aboute them, and they were sore afrayed. And the angell sayde vnto them: Be not afrayed. Beholde, γ I brynge you tydges of greate ioye, which shall happen vnto all people: for vnto you this daye is borne γ Sautioure, euē Christ γ LORDE, in the cite of DaviD. And take this for a token: Ye shal fynde the babe swaddled, and layed in a maunguer. And straight waye there was by the angell a multitude of heauenly hoostes, which praysed God, and sayde: Glory be vnto God an hye, γ peace vpon earth, and vnto men a good wyll.

And it fortuned whā the angels were gone from the in to heauē, the shepherdes sayde one to another: let vs go now euē vnto Bethleem, and se this thynge that is happenede, which γ LORDE hath shewed vnto vs. And they came with haist, α founde both Mary and Ioseph, τ the babe layed in τ maunguer. And when they had sene it, they published abrode the sayenge, γ was tolde the of this childe. And all they that herde it, wondred at the wordes, which the shepherdes had tolde them. But Mary kepte all these sayenges, and pondred them in hir hert. And the shepherdes returned, pryasinge and laudinge God, for all that they had herde and sene, euē as it was tolde them.

And whā the dayes of their purificacion after the lawe of Moses, were come, they brought him to Ierusalē, that they might present him vnto the LORDE (As it is wrytten in the lawe of the LORDE:§ Every michilde that first openeth the Matrix, shall be called holy vnto γ LORDE) and that they might geue the offerynge, as it is wrytten in the lawe of the LORDE (namely) a payre of turtle doues, or two yonge pigeons.

And beholde, there was a man (at Ierusalē) whose name was Symeon, and the same mā was iust, and feared God, and longed for the consolacion of Israel, and the holy goost was Beholde, J.

And when the elders brought the childe Jesus in to the temple, to do for him after the custome of the lawe, then toke he him vp in his armes, and prayed God, and sayde:

LORDE, now lettest thou thy seruaunt departe in peace, acconding to thy promesse.

For myne eyes have seene thy Sauionere, who thou hast prepared before all people.

A light for the lightenye of the Heythē, for the prayse of thy people of Israel.

And his father and mother marueyled at the things that were spokē of him. And Symeon blessed them, and sayde vnto Mary his mother: Beholde, this (childe) shalbe set to a fall, and to an vprysinge agayne of many in Israel, and for a token, which shalbe spokē agaynst. And the swerde shall pearshe thy soule, that the thoughtes of many hertes maye be opened.

And there was a prophetisse, one Anna, the daughter of Phanuel of the trybe of Aser, which was of a greate age, and had lyued seuen yeares with hir huszbade from hir virginitē, had now bene a wedowe aboute foure score foure yeares, which came neuer fro the tēple, seruyng God with fastynge and prayenge, daye and night: the same came forth also the same houre, and prayed the LORDE, and spake of him vnto all that loked for the redemption in Ierusalem.

And when they had perfourmed all accordinge to the lawe of the LORDE, they returned i to Galile, to their owne cite Nazareth. And the childe grew, and waxed stronge in sprete, full of wyszdome, the grace of God was with him.

And his elders wente to Ierusalem euery yeare at the feast of Easter. And when he was twelue yeare olde, they wente vp to Ierusalem, after the custome of the feast. And when they had fulfilled the dayes, and were gone home agayne, the childe Jesus abode styll at Ierusalem. And his elders knewe it not, but thought he had bene in the company, and they came a dayes iournye, and sought hē amōge their kymszfolkes, acquittance. And whā they founde him not, they wete agayne to Ierusale, and sought him.

And it fortuned after three dayes, they founde him in the temple, syttinge amonge the teachers, hearynge thē, and opposyng them. And all they that herde him, wodred at his vnderstondyng and answere. And when they sawe him, they were astonnedy.

And his mother sayde vnto him: My sonne, why hast thou done this vnto vs? Beholde, thy father and I haue sought the sorowyng. And he sayde vnto them: What is it, that ye haue sought me? Wyst ye not, I must go aboute my fathers busynes? And they vnderstode not the sayenge, he spake vnto them. And he wente downe with the, and came to Nazareth, and was obedient vnto them. And his mother kepte all these wordes in hir hert. And Jesus increased in wyszdome, age and fauoure with God and men.

The iii. Chapter.

In the fiftenth yeare of the raigne of Tiberius the Emperoure, whā Pontius Pilate was leftenaït in Iewry and Herode one of the foure princes in Galile, and his brother Philippe one of the foure princes in Iturea, in the coastes of Traconites, and Lysanias one of the foure princes of Abilene, when Hannas and Caiphas were hye prestes, the came vnder the wordes of God vnto Ithon the sonne of Zachary in the wyldernes. And he came in to all coastes aboute Iordan, and preacted the baptyme of repētaunce for the remnyssyon of synnes. As it is wryttē in boke of sayenges of Esaye the prophet, which sayeth: The voyce of a cryer in the wyldernes: prepare the waye of the LORDE, and make his pathes straight. Euery valley shalbe fylled, and euery mountayne shall be brought lowe. And what so is crokē, shalbe made straight: and what rough is, shalbe made smooth, and all flesh shal se the Sauionere of God.

Then sayde he vnto the people, ye wente out to be baptysed of hym: Ye generacion of vipers, who hath certified you, that ye shal escape ḵ wrath to come? Take hede, brynge forth due frutes of repētaunce, begynne not to say: We have Abraham to our father. For I say unto you: God is able of these stones to raise vp children vnto Abraham. The axe is put vnto the tre allready: so that euery tre which bryngeth not forth good frute, shall be hewn downe, and cast in to the fyre. And the people axed him, and sayde: *What shal we do then? He answered, v sayde vnto the: He that hath two coates, let him parte with him y hath none: and he that hath meate, let him do likewise.

The publicans came also, to be baptysed and sayde vnto him: Master, what shal we do? He sayde vnto them: Requyre nomore, then is appoynted you. Then y souldyours axed him likewise, and sayde: What shal we do then? And he sayde vnto the: Do no man violence ner wronge, and be content with youre wages.

But whan the people were in a doute, & thought all in their hertes, whether he were Christ, Ihou answered, and sayde vnto the all: *I baptysye you with water, but after me there cometh one stronger the I, whose shue lachet I am not worthy to loue: *The shal baptysye you with the holy goost and with fyre. Whose fanne is in his hande, and he shal poure his floore, and shal gather y wheate in to his barne, and shal burne the chaffe with vnquencheable fyre. And many other thynges more exorted he, & preached vnto the people.

*But Herode the Tetrarcha (whā he was rebuked of him because of Herodias his bro-thers wife, and for all the euels that Herode dyd) besydes all this he layed Itho in preson.

*And it fortuned whan all the people receaunted baptyme, and whan Iesus also was baptysed and prayed, that heauen opened, and the holy goost came downe in a bodely shappe like a doue vpon him. And out of heauen there came a voyce, which sayde: Thou art my deare sone, in whō I delyte.

And Iesus was aboute thirtie yeares whan he beganne. *And he was taken for the sone of Ioseph, *which was the sone of Eli, which was the sone of Mathat.
Which was the sone of Leui.
Which was the sone of Melchi.
Which was the sone of Ianna.
Which was the sone of Ioseph.
Which was the sone of Mathathias.
 Which was the sonne of Peleg.
 Which was the sonne of Eber.
 Which was the sonne of Salah.
 Which was the sonne of Caynan.
 Which was the sonne of Arphachsad.
 Which was the sonne of Sem.
 Which was the sonne of Noe.
 Which was the sonne of Lamech.
 Which was the sonne of Mathusalah.
 Which was the sonne of Henoch.
 Which was the sonne of Iared.

The iiiij. Chapter.

JESUS full of the holy goost, came agayn from Iordane, and was led of the spryte in to wyldernes, a fourety dayes longe was he tempted of the deuell. And in those dayes he nothinge. And when they were ended, he hongred afterwarde. And the deuell sayde vnto him: Yf thou be the sonne of God, commaunde this stone, that it be bred. And Iesus answered, I sayde vnto hyn: It is wrytten: Man shal not lyue by bred onely, but by euery worde of God. And the deuell toke him vp in to an hye moutayne, and shewed him all the kyngdome of the whole worlde in twinkellinge of an eye, and sayde vnto hyn: All this power wil I geue vnto the, and the glory therof, for it is geue ouer vnto me, and I geue it, to whom I will. Yf thou now wilt worshippe me, they shall all be thine. Iesus answered him, and sayde: Auoyde fro me thou Satan. It is wrytten: Thou shalt worshippe the LORDE thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue.

And he caried him to Ierusalem, and set him vpon a pynnacliffe of the temple, and sayde vnto hyn: Yf thou be the sonne of God, cast thy self downe from hence. For it is wrytten: He shall geue his angels charge over the, to kepe the, and with their handes they shal holde the vp, that thou dase not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto hyn: It is sayde: Thou shalt not tempte the LORDE thy God. And when the deuell had ended all the temptacions, he departed from him for a season.

And Iesus came agayn in the power of the spryte in to Galile. And the name of him was noysed thorow out all lyfe rounde aboute. And he taught in their synagotes, and was commended of euery man.

And he came vnto Nazareth where he was noursed, and as his custome was, he wete in to the synagoge vpon ly Sabbath, and stode vp for to rede. Then was there deluyered him the foure boke of the prophet Esay. And when he had turned ouer the boke, he founde the place where it is wrytten: The spryte of the LORDE is with me, because he hath anoynted me: to preach the Gospell vnto the poore hath he sent me: to heale the broken harted: to preach deluyerance to the captuyne, and sight to the blinde: and frely to set at liberty them that are brused: and to preach the acceptable yere of the LORDE.

And when he had closed the boke, he gaue it agayn to the mynister, and sat him downe. And the eyes of all that were in the synagoge, were fastened on him. And he begane to saye vnto them: This daye is this scripture fulfilled in your eares. And they all gaue him wytnesse, and wodred at the gracius worde, which procedeed out of his mouth, and they sayde: Is not this Iosephs sonne?

And he sayde vnto them: Doubtes ye wyl saye vnto me this prouerbe: Phisician, heale thyself. For how greate thinges haue we herde done at Capernaum? Do the same here also in thine owne countrie. But he sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no prophet accepted in his owne countrie. Neuertheles of a trueth I saye vnto you: There were many wedowes in Israel in the yme of Elias, wha he was shut thre yeares and sixe monethes, and when there was a greate derth in all the lande: a to none of the was Elias sent, but onely vnto Sarepta of the Sydonyans to a wedowe. And many lepers were there in Israel in the yme of Eliseus, and none of the was clensed, saue onely Naaman of Syria.

And as many as were in the synagoge,
Let Lorde, for Marc. Immediately Master, for Marc. Lorde, I immediately brought many, suffered and (what were the manner people spake departed from) threw there they kyngdome in. And whoso he sought to commands and said: holde thy tongue, and departe out of him. And the deewell threw hi in the myndest amongst them, and departed from him, and dyd him no harme. And there came a feare ouer the all, and they spake amongst them selves, and sayde: What manner of thing is this? He commandeth the foule synpers with auctorite and power, and they departe out. And his fame of him was noyseyd thorow out all the places of his countre rounde aboute.

And he rose vp out of the synagoge, and came in to Symons house. And Symôs mother in lawe was takè with a greate feuer, and they prayed for her. And he wette vnto her, and commaunded the feuer. And it left her, and immediatly she rise vp, and mynistered vnto the. And when the Sonne was gone downe all they that had sick of dyuerse diseases, brought the vnto him. And he layed his hâdes vpon every one of the, and made thee whole. The deews also departed out of many, criè and sayenge: Thou art Christ the sonne of God. And he rebuked thee, and sufferd them not to speake: for they knewe that he was Christ. But wha it was daye, he wete out in to a deserte place. And the people sought hi, and came vnto him, he kepte him, and he shulde not departe fro the. But he sayde vnto the: I must preach the Gospel of Syngdome of God to other cities also: for there to am I sent. And he preached in the synagoges of Galile.

The b. Chapter.

I t came to passe, the people pressed vpon him to heare the worde of God, and he stode by the lake of Genazereth, and sawe two shippes stode by lake syde, but fishers were gone out of the, and had washde their nettes. Then wente he in to one of the shippes, which was Symons, and prayed him, he wolde thrust out a little fro the londe. And he sat him downe, and taught the people out of the shippe. And when he had left of talkynge, he sayde vnto Symon: Launch out in to the depe a let slyppe youre nettes, to make a draught. And Symon answered and sayde vnto him: Master, we haue laboured all night, and take nothing. But vp thy worde, I wil lowse forth the nett. And wha they had so done, they take a greate multitude of fishes, and their net brake. And they made synnes to their felowes which were in other shippes, they shulde come, and helpe the. And they came, and were both the shippes full, so they soncke. Whan Symon Peter sawe he, he fell downe at Jesus knees, and sayde: LORDE, go fro me, for I am a synfull man: For he was astonnyed and all that were with him, at this draught of fishes which they toke, and so were James and Iohn also the sonsnes of Zebede, which were Symons companions. And Jesus sayde vnto Symô: Feare not, for fro hence forth thou shalt take men. And they brought the shippes to londe, and left all, and folowed him.

And it fortuned as he was in a cite, beholde, there was a man full of leprosy. Wha he sawe Jesus, he fell vpon his face, and besought him, and sayde: LORDE, if thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And he stretched out his hâde, and touched him, and sayde: I wil, be thou cleane. And immediatly the leprosy departed from him. And he charged him, he shulde tell no man, but go thy waye (sayde he) and shewe thy self vnto prest, and offere for thy clesynesge, as Moses commaundd, for a witnesse vnto the. But his fame of hi wete out farther abrode, there came much people together, to heare him, to be healed by hi fro their sicknesses. And he departed

And it fortuned vpō a daye, \( \hat{y} \) he taught, and there sat \( \hat{y} \) Pharises and scrybes, which were "come out of all the townes of Galile, and Iewry, and frō Ierusale, and the power of the LORDE wēte frō him, \( \hat{q} \) healed euyry man. And beholde, certayne men brought vpō a bed, a man \( \hat{y} \) had \( \hat{y} \) palsy, and they sought how they might brynge him in, and laye him before him. And when they coude not fynde by what waye they might bringe him in (for \( \hat{y} \) people) they clymmed vp to \( \hat{y} \) toppe of the house, \( \hat{q} \) let him downe thorow the tylinge with the bed, amoge the before lesus. And whan they sawe their faith, he sayde vnto hi: Man, thy synnes are forgeue f.

Who cā forgeue synnes, but onely God?

Neuertheles whā Jesus perceaued their thoughtes, he answered, and saide vnto the: 'What thynke ye in youre hertes? Whether is easier to saye: Thy synnes are forgeue \( \hat{y} \), Or to saye: Arypse, and walke? But that ye maye knowe, that the sonne of ma hath power to forgeue synnes vpoun earth, he sayde vnto \( \hat{y} \) sicke of the palsie: I saye vnto \( \hat{y} \): Arypse, take vp thy bed, and go home. And immedeiatly he rose vp before the, \( \hat{q} \) toke vp the bed \( \hat{y} \) he had lyen vpō, and wete home, and prayed God. And they were all astonnyed, and gaue God \( \hat{y} \) prayse, and were fylled with feare, and sayde: We haue sene maruelous thynges to daye.

And afterwarde he wete out, and sawe a publican named Leui, syttinge at \( \hat{y} \) receate of custome, \( \hat{q} \) he sayde vnto him: 'Folowe me. And he left all, rose vp, \( \hat{q} \) folowed him. And Leui made hi a greate feast \( \hat{i} \) his house. And many publicans \( \hat{q} \) other sat with hi at \( \hat{y} \) table. And the scrybes and Pharyses murmured agaynst his disciples, \( \hat{q} \) saide: Wherfore do ye eate \( \hat{q} \) drynke with publicās \( \hat{q} \) synners? And Jesus answered, \( \hat{q} \) sayde vnto the: 'The whole nede not \( \hat{y} \) phisician, but they \( \hat{y} \) are sicke. I am not come to call \( \hat{y} \) righteous, but sinners to repentauce.'

But they sayde vnto him: Wherfore fast
destroye it? And he behelde the all rounde aboute, and sayde vnto the mā: Stretch out thine hande. And he dyd so. Then was his hande restored him to righ, euens as whole as the other. But they were fylled full of madnes, and commoned together, what they wolde do to him.

And it for tunes at the same tymne, that he wente out in to a mountayne to praye, and continued all night in prayer to God.* And whā it was daye, he called his discipes, and chose twelve of them, whom he called also apostles. Symon, whom he named Peter, and Andrew his brother, James and Ihon, Phylippe and Bartylmew, Mathew and Thomas, James the sonne of Alpheus, Symon called Zelotes, Judas the sonne of James, and Judas Iscarioth, which was the raytrayoure.

And he wente downe with them, and stode upon a playne in the felde, and the company of his discipes, and a greate multitude of people, from all Iewry, and Ierusale, and from Tyre and Sydon by the see coast, which were come to hearre him, and to be healed of their diseases, and they that were vexed with foule spretes, were healed. And all the people sought to touch him, for there wente vertue frō hime, and healed thē all.

And he lyft vp his eyes vpō his discipes, and sayde: Blessed are ye poore, for yours is the kyngdom of God. Blessed are ye that honger here, for ye shall be satisfied. Blessed are ye ṣ wepe here, for ye shall laugh. Blessed are ye, when men hate you, and put you out of their copanyes, and raylle you, and cast out youre name as an euell thinge, for the sonne of mans sake. Rejoyse ye then, and be glad: for beholde, youre rewarde is greate in heauen. *Euen this dyd their fathers vnto the prophets also.

But wo vnto you riche, for ye have youre cosmolation allready. Wo vnto you that are full, for ye shall honger. Wo vnto you that laugh here, for ye shall wepe and wayle. Wo vnto you when euery man prayseth you, Euen so dyd their fathers vnto the false prophetches also.

But I saye vnto you that heare: Loue youre enemies: do good vnto them that hate you: blesse them that curse you: praye for them that wrongfully trouble you. And who so smyteth the on the one cheke, offere him ṣ other also. And who so taketh awaye thy cloake, forbyd hym not thy cloate also. Who so euers axeth of the, geue him: and who so taketh awaye thynak, axe it not agayne. And as ye wolde that men shulde do vnto you, *euen so do ye vnto them likewise.

And yf ye loue them that loue you, what thē have ye therfore? For synners also love their louers. And yf ye do good for youre good doers, what thanke haue ye therfore? For synners also do euens the same. And yf ye lende vnto them, of whō ye hope to receaue, what thē haue ye therfore? For synners also lende vnto synners, that they maye receaue as much agayne. But rather loue ye youre enemies, do good, and lende, lokynge for nothynge thereof agayne: so shal youre warde be greate, and ye shall be the children of the Hyest, for he is kynde, euens to the vnthankfull and to the euell.

Be ye therfore mercifull,7 as youre father also is mercifull. Judge not, and ye shal not be judged. Condēpne not, and ye shall not be condemned. Forgeue, and ye shal be forgeuen. 6Geue, and to you shalbe geue. A good measure, pressed downe, shaken together, g rūnyng soup, shal mē geue in to youre bosome. 6For with what measure ye meete, with the same shal it be measured to you agayne.

And he sayde a symilitude vnto thē: *Can the blynde shewe the waye to ṣ blynde? Do they not both the fall in to the dyche? The disciple is not aboue his master. But whosoever is perfecte, ṣ same shalbe as his master. But why seist thou a moote i thy brothers eye, and considrest not the beame, that is in thine awne eye? Or how casst thou saye vnto thy brother: holde styll brother, I wil plucke ṣ moate out of thyne eye, and thou thy seist seist not ṣ beame in thine awne eye? Thou yppocracy, Fyrst cast the beame out of thine awne eye, and the shalt thou se clearely to pull the moote out of thy brothers eye.

For it is no good tre, ṣ bryngeth forth euell frut: and no euell tre ṣ bringeth forth good frute. Euer tre is knowe by his frute. For mē gather not fyngges of thornes, mer grapes of busbhes. A good mā out of ʃ good treasure of his hert, bryngeth forth ʃ which is good: and an euell mā out of the euell

The viij. Chapter.

AND it fortuned afterwarde, that he wente thorow the cities and townes, and preached, and shewed  Gospell of the kyngdome of God, and the twelue with him. And certayne wemen also, who he had healed fro euell spretes and infirmiues: Namely, Mary which is called Magdalene, out of whom wente seuen deuels, and Ioanna the wife of Chusa Herodes stewarde, and Susanna, and many other, that ministred vnto them of their sustance.

Now wha moch people were gathered together, and haisted vnto him out of the cities, He spake by a symilitude: There wente out a sower to sowe his sede, whyle he was sowynge, some fell by the waye syde, and was trodd unde the fote, and the foules of the ayre ate it vp. And some fell on stone, and when it was spong vp, it wythred awaye, because it had no moystnesse. And some fell amonde thornes, and the thornes spong vp with it, and choked it. And some fell vp a good grounde, and spong vp, and bare frute an hundereth folde. Wha he sayde this he cryed: Who so hath cares to heare, let him heare.
And his disciples axed him, and sayde: What symilitude is this? And he sayde: Vnsto you it is geue, to knowe the mysteryes of the kyngdome of God, but vnto the other in parables, ý though they see it, they shulde not se it, and though they heare it, they shulde not vnderstonde.

This is the parable: The sede is the worde of God: As for those that are by ý waye syde, they are they that heare it, afterwarde commeth the deuell, and taketh awaye the worde out of their hertes, that they shulde not beleue, and be sauëd. But they on ý stone, are such as when they heare it, receaue the worde with lyoe, and these hauë no rote: they beleue for a whyle, and in the tyme of temptacion they fall awaye. As for it that fel amonge the thornes, are such as heare it, and go forth amonge the cares, riches and volupetousenesse of this life, and are choked and brynge forth no frute. But that on the good grounde, are they that heare the worde, and kepe it in a pure good hert, and brynge forth frute in pacience.

No man lighteth a caiell, and couereth it with a vessell, or puttheth it vnder a table, but setteth it vpon a candelsticke, that soch as go in maye se licht. *For there is nothinge hyd, that shal not be openly shewed: and there is nothinge secrete, that shal not be knoune, and come to light. Take hede threfor how ye heare. *For who so hath, vnto him shalbe geue: but who so hath not, from him shalbe taken awaye, euë the same that he thyneketh to hauen.

There wente vnto him his mother and his brethren, and coude not come at him for the people. And it was tolde him. Thy mother and thy brethren stonde without,* and wolde se the. But he answered, ì sayde vnto the: My mother and my brethren are these, which heare the worde of God, and do it.

And it fortunede vpon a certayne daye, ý he wente in to a shippe, and his discipyles with hym, ì he sayde vnto the: Let vs passe ouer to the other syde of ý lake. And they thurst of frë the lôde. And as they sayled, he slepte.

And there came a storme of wynde vpon ý lake, and the wawes fell vpon the, and they stode in greate ioperdy. Then wëte they vnto him, and waked him vp, ì sayde: Master master, we perishe. Then he arose, and rebuked the wynde, and the têpest of water, and they ceased, and it waxed calme. But he sayde vnto the: Where is youre faith? Neuertheles they were afayed, and wödred, and sayde one to another: What is he this? For he cómaundeth the wyndes and the water, and they are obedient vnto him. *And they sayled forth in to the countre of the Gadarenites, which is ouer agaynst Galile.

And whan he wente out to londe, there met him out of ý cite a mä, which had a deuell longe tyme, ì ware no clothes, ì taried in no house, but in the graunes. Neuertheles whi he sawe Iesus, he cried, and fell downe before him, and cried loude, ì sayde: What haue I to do with the Iesus, thou sonne of the Hyest God? I beseeke the, that thou wilt not tormëte me. For he cómaundeth the foule sprete, that he shulde departe out of the mä, for he had plaged hi a lôge season. And he was bounde with cheynes, and kepte with fetters, and he brake the bonds in sonder, and was caried of the deuell in to the wyldernesse.

And Iesus axed him, and sayde: What is thy name? He sayde: Legion. For there were many deuels entred in to him. And they besought him, that he wolde not cómaunde the to go in to the depe. *But there was there a greate heerd of swyne fedyngyne vpon the mountayne, and they besought him, that he wolde geue them leue, to entre in to ý same. And he gaue thë leue. Then departed ý deuells out of the mä, and entred in to the swyne. And the heerd ruzhed headlynges with a storume in to the lake, and were drowned. But whi ý herdmen sawe what had chaunseed, they fled, and tolde it in the cite and in the vyllages.

Then wente they out, for to see what was done, and came to Iesus, and founde the mä (out of whom the deuyls were departed) syttinge at Iesus fete, clothed, and in his right mynde, and they were afayed. And they ý had sene it, tolde thë how the possessed was healed. And the whole multitude of ý countre of the Gadarenites besought him, that he wolde departe from them, for there was a greate fear come upon the. * And he gat him in to the shippe, and turned agayne. And the man out of whom the devils were departed, besought him, * he might be with him. But Jesus sent him away, and sayde: Go home agayne, and shewe how great things God hath done for the. And he wente his waye, * he preached thorow out all the citie, how great things Jesus had done for hi.

And it fortuned whan Jesus came agayne, the people receaun him, for they waited for him. And beholde, there came a man named Iairus (and he was a ruler of the synagoge) and fell at Jesus fete, * he besought him, that he wolde come in to his house. For he had but one daughter (vpon a twelue yeare of age) and she laye at the poyn and of death. * And as he wente, the people thronged him. And a woman hauynge the bloudyssse twelue yeares, (which had spent all her substaunce upon physicians, and coude be healed of none) came behynde, * she touched the hemme of his garnet, and immediatly hir ysse of bloude was stauched.

And Jesus sayde: Who hath touched me? But when they all denied, Peter sayde, and they that were with him: Master, the people thronge the and thrust the, and thou sayest: Who hath touched me? Jesus sayde: Some body hath touched me, for I fele, that there is vertue gone out fro me. But when the woman sawe that she was not hyd, she came treblynyge, and fell downe before him, and tolde him before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, * how she was healed immediatly. And he sayde vnto her: Doughter, be of good comforte, thy faith hath made the whole, go thy waye in peace.

Wylhe he yet spake, there came one fro y ruler of the synagogues house, and sayde vnto him: Thy doughter is deed, disease not the master. Whan Jesus herde that, he answered him, and sayde: Feare not, beleue onely, and she shall be made whole. But whan he came in to the house, he suffred no man to go in, saue Peter, and James and Ihô, and the father and mother of the mayden. They wepte all, and sorrowed for her. But he sayde: Wepe not, for she is not deed, but slepeth. And they laughed hi to scorne.

knoyng well that she was deed. But he thrust them all out, and toke her by the hande, and cryed, and sayde: Mayde aryse. And hir sprete came agayne, * she arose straight waye. And he commanded to geue her meate. And hir elders were astonnyed. But he charged them, that they shulde tell no man, what was done.

The iy. Chapter.

And he called the twolue together, * and gaue them power and auctorite over all devils, and that they might heale diseases. And he sent the out to preach the kyndgome of God, and to heale the sicke, and sayde vnto them: * Ye shal take nothinge with you by the waye, neither staff, nor scrypppe, nor bred, nor money: * ye haue two coates. And in to what house so euer ye entre, there abyde, till ye go thence. * And who so euer receaueth you not, departe out of the same cite, and shake of the dust from your cite, for a wytnesse ouer them. And they departed, and wente thorow the townes, preachinge the Gospell, * healynge every where.

Herode the Tetrarch herde of all that was done by him. And he toke care, for so moch as it was sayde of some: Ihô is ryzen agayne from the deed: of some, Elias hath appeared: of some, One of the olde prophetes is ryzen agayne. And Herode sayde: Ihô haue I beheade, who is this then, of whô I heare soch things? And he desyre to se him.

And the Apostles came agayne, and tolde him how great things they had done. And he toke them to him, and wente asyde in to a solitary place by the cite called Bethsaida. Whan the people knewe of it, they folowed him. And he receaued them, and spake vnto them of the kyndgome of God, and healed such as hade nede thereof. But the daye beganne to go downe. Then came the twolue to him, and sayde vnto him: let the people departe fro the, that they maye go in to the townes rounde aboute, and in to the vyllagges, where they maye fynde lodgynghe and meate, for we are here in the wildernesse. But he sayde vnto them: Gene ye them to eate. They sayde: We haue nomore but fyne loaues and two fyszhes. Excepte we shulde go be meate.
for so moch people (for there were vpon a fyue thousande men) But he sayde vnto his disciples: Cause them to syt downe by fifties in a cōpany. And they dyd so, and made them all to syt downe. Then toke he the fyue loaues and two fishe, and loked vp toward hēnē, and sayde grace ouer them, brake them, and gaued them to the disciples, to set the before the people. And they ate, and were all satisfied. And there were taken vp of that remayned to them, twolue baskettes full of broken meate.

And it fortuned when he was alone, "and at his praying, and his disciples with him, he axed them, and sayde: Whom saye the people that I am?" They answered, and sayde: They saye, thou art Iohn the baptist: Some, that thou art Elias: Some, that one of the olde prophets is ry森 agayne. But he sayde vnto them: Whom saye ye that I am? Then answered Peter and sayde: 'Thou art the Christ of God. And he charged them stratelēy, and commanued them, that they shulde tell this vnto no mā, and sayde: *For the sonne of man must suffre many thinges, and be cast out of the Elders and of y hye prestes, and scrybes, and be put to death, and ry森 agayne the thirde daye.

Then sayde he vnto them all: "Yf eny mā wil folowe me, let hē denie himself, * takē vp his crosse daylie, qwolowe me. *For who so ever wil saue his life, shal lose it. But who so loseth his life for my sake, shal saue it. For what advant-age hath a man, though he wanne the whole worlde, and loseth himself, or runneth in dammage of himself? * Who so is ashamed of me and of my sayenges, of him shall the sonne of mā also be ashamed, whan he commeth in his glory, and in the glory of his father, and of the holy angels. I saye vnto you of a treuth: "therē be some of them that stonde here, which shall not taist of death, tyll they se the kyngdome of God.

And it fortuned, that aboute an eight dayes after these wordes, he toke vnto him Peter, Iohn and Iames, and wente vp in to a mōut for to praye. ↑And as he prayed, the shapē of his countenance was chaunged of another fashion, and his garment was whyte, and shyned: and beholde, two men talked with him. Which were Moses and Elias, that appeared gloriously, and spake of his depart-yng, which he shulde filliſh at Ierusalem. As for Peter and them that were with him, they were full of slepe. But whan they awoke, they saw his glory, and the two men stondinglye with him.

↑And it chaunged, whan they departed fro him, Peter sayde vnto Iesns: Master, here is good belynge for vs. Let vs make three tabernacles: one for the, one for Moses, and one for Elias, and wyst not what he sayde. But whyle he thus spake, there came a cloude, and ouershadowed them. And they were afrayed, whan the cloude covered them. And out of the cloude there came a voyce, which sayde: This is my deare sonne, hear him. And whyle this voyce came to passe, they founde Jesus alone. ↑And they kepte it close, and tolde no mā in those dayes eny of the thinges which they had sene.

↑And it chaunensed on the nexte daye after, whan they came downe from the mont, moch people met him, and beholde, a man amonge the people cryed out, and sayde: Master, I beseke the, the looke vpon my sonne, for he is my owely sonne: beholde, the sprete taketh him, and sondeny he crieth, and he teareth him, that he fometh, and with payne deparṭeth he from him, whan he hath rente him. And I besought thy disciples to cast him out, and they couldē not. Then answered Jesus, and sayde: Oh thou vnfaithfull and croked generaçion, how longe shal I be in you, qwolfer you? Brynghe hithy thy sonne. And whan he came to him, the deuill rente him and tare him. But Iesns rebuked the foule sprete, and healed the chylde, and deuelyere vnto his father agayne. ↑And they were all amased at the mighty power of God.

And whylle they wondred ery one at all things which he dyd, he sayde vnto his disciples: Comprehende these sayenges in youre eares. ↑For the sonne of man must be deuelyere in to the hādes of men. But they wyst not what that wordes meaned, and it was hyd from them, that they understode it not. And they were afrayed to axe him of that worde. * There came a thought also amongst them, which of them shulde be the greatest. But whan Jesus saw the thoughts of their hert, he toke a childe, and set him harde by him, and sayde vnto them: "Whosoever receaueth this childe in my name, receaueth me: and who so ever receaueth me, receaueth that sent me." But who so is least amonge you all, that same shall be the greatest.

Then answered Ihô, and sayde: Master, we sawe one druyne out cuelus in thy name, and we forbad him, for he followed the not with vs. And Jesus saide vnto him: For byd him not, for he that is not agaynst vs, is for vs.

And it fortuned when the tyme was full-fyld that he shulde be receaued vp from hence, he turned his face to go straight to Jerusalem, and before him he sent messauengers, which wente their waye, and came in to a towne of the Samaritans, to prepare lodginge for him. And they wolde not receauhe him, because he had turned his face to go to Ierusale. Whan his discipes Iames and Ihon sawe that, they sayde: LORDE, wilt thou, that we commande, that fyre fall downe from heauen, and consume them, as Elias dyd? Neuertheles Jesus turned him aboute, and rebuked them, and sayde: Knowe ye not, what maner of sprete ye are of? The sonne of man is not come to destroye mens soules, but to saue them. And they wente in to another towne.

And it fortuned as they wente by the waye, one sayde vnto him: I wil folowe the, whyther so euer thou go. And Jesus sayde vnto him: "Let the deed burye their deed. But go thou thy waye, and preach the kyngdome of God.

And he sayde vnto another: Folowe me. He sayde: Syr, geue me leue first to go, and burye my father. But Jesus sayde vnto him: "Let the deed burye their deed. But go thou thy waye, and preach the kyngdome of God.

And another sayde: Syr, I will folowe thee, but geue me leue first, to go byd them farwele, which are at home in my house. Jesus sayde vnto him: Who so putteth his haid to the plowe, and loketh backe, is not mete for the kyngdome of God."
The sestec came agayne with joye, and sayde: LORDE, the deuels also are subdued vnto vs in thy name. But he sayde vnto them: "I sawe Sathan fall downe from heauen as a lightennyge. Beholde, I haue geuen you power to treden vpon serpentes and scorpiones, and ouer all power of the enemye, and nothinge shall hurte you. Neuerthelesse, reioyce not ye in this, that the sprestes are subdued vnto you: but reioyse, that your names are wrytten in heauen.

At the same houre reioyised Iesus in sprete, and sayde: "I praye the (O father and LORDE of heauen and earth) that thou hast hyd these thinges from the wyse and prudent, and hast opened them vnto babes. Euen so father, for so it pleased the. "All thinges are geuen ouer vnto me of my father: t'and no man knoweth who the sonne is, but onely the father: nether who the father is, saue onely the sonne, and he to whô the sonne will open it.

And he turned him vnto his disciples, and sayde in especiall: Blessed are the eyes, which se that ye se. For I saye vnto you: "Many prophets and kynges, wolde haue sene the thynge that ye se, and haue not sene them: and to haue herd the thynge that ye haer, and haue not herde them.

And beholde, there stode vp a scrybe and tempted him, and sayde: Master, what must I do, to inheret euerylastinge life? He sayde vnto hym: What is wrytten in the lawe? How readest thou? He answered and sayde: "Thou shalt love thy LORDE God with all thy hert, with all thy soule, with all thy strengthe, and with all thy mynde, and thy neigbour as thy selfe. He sayde vnto hym: Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt lyue. But he wolde haue iustified himself, a sayde vnto Iesus: Who is then my neigbour?

Then answered Iesus, and sayde: A certayne man wente downe from Jerusalem vnto Iericho, and fell amonge murtherers, which strypped hym out of his clothes, and wounded hym, and wente vnto their wyse, and left hym halfe dead. And by chaunce there came downe a prest the same wyse: and when he sawe him, he passed by. And likewyse a Leuite, whâ he came nyvnto the same place and sawe him, he passed by. But a Samaritane was goygne his journey, and came that waye, and when he sawe him, he had compasion vpon hym, wente vnto hym, bounde vp his woundes, and pourde oyle and wyne therin, and lifte hym vp vpon his beast, and brought hym in to the ymne, and made prouysion for him. Vpon the nexte daye when he departed, he toke out two pens, and gaue them to the oost, and sayde vnto hym: Take cure of hym, and what so euer thou spendest more, I wil paye it the, when I come agayne. Which of these thre now thinkest thou, was neigbour vnto hym, that fell amonge the murtherers? He sayde: He that shewed mercy vpon hym. Then sayde Iesus vnto hym: Go the wyse then, and do thon likewyse.

It fortunede as they wete, that he entred in to a towne, where there was a woman named Martha, which receaued hym in to his house. And she had a sister, called Mary, / which sat hir downe at Iesus fete, and herkened vnto his worde. But Martha made hir selfe moch to do, for to serue hir. And she stepte vnto hym, and sayde: LORDE, caresst thou not, that my sister letteth me serue alone? Byd hir therafore, that she helpe me. But Iesus answered, and sayde vnto her: Martha Martha, thou takest thought, and combrest thy self aboute many thinges: /there is but one thing nedefull. Mary hath chosen a good parte, which shal not be taken awaye from her.

The ri. Chapter.

And it fortunede that he was in a place, and prayed. And when he had ceased, one of his disciplis sayde vnto hym: LORDE, teach vs to praye, as Ihon also taught his disciplis. He sayde vnto the: Whan ye praye, saye: O oure father which art in heauen, halowed be thy name. Thy kyngdome come. Thy wil be fulfilled vpon earth, as it is in heauen. Gene vs this daye oure daylie bred. And forgue vs oure synes, for we also forgue all them that are detters vnto vs. And lede vs not in to temptacion, but deluyen vs from euell.

And he sayde vnto them: Which of you is it that hath a freunde, and shulde go to him at myndight, and saye vnto him: *Axe, lend me thre loanes, for a frende of mye is come to me out of the waye, and I haue nothinge to set before hym: and he within shulde answere and saye: Disquyte me not, the dore is shutt allready, and my children are with me in the chamber, I can not ryse, and geue the. I saye vnto you: and though he wolde not aryse and geue hym, because he is his frende, Yet because of his vnshamefast begynge he wolde aryse, and geue hym as many as he neded.

And I saye vnto you also: Axe, and it shal be geuen you: *Seke, and ye shal fynde: knooke, and it shalbe open vnto you. For who so euer axeth, receaueth: and he that seketh, fyndeth: and to him that knocketh, shal it be opene. Yf the sonne axe bred of eny of you that is a father, wyl he geue hym a stone therefor? Or yf he axe a bysshowe, wyl he for the fish offer hym a serpent? Or yf he axe an egg, wyl he proffer hym a scorpion? Yf ye then which are euell, can geue youre children good giftes, how much more shal the father of heauen geue the holy sprete vnto them that axe hym?

And he droue out a deuell that was domme: and it came to passe when the deuell was departed out, the domme spake, and the people wondred. But some of them sayde: He droueth out the deuels, thorow Beelzebub the chefe of the deuels. The other tempted him, and desyred a token of him from heauen. But he knewe their thoughtes, and sayde vnto them: Evry kyngdome deuyded within it self, shal be desolate, and one house shal fall vpó another. Yf Satan then be at variaunce within himself, how shal his kyngdome endure? Because ye saye, that I droue out deuels thorow Beelzebub.

And yf I droue out deuels thorow Beelzebul, by whom the do yeoure children drouye them out? Therfore shall they be your euubes. But yf I cast out the deuels by the fynger of God, then is the kyngdome of God come vnto you.

When a stronge harnessed man kepeth his house, *that he possesseth in peace: but when a stronger then he commeth vpó him, and ouer commeth him, he taketh fro him all his wapens, wherein he trusted, and deuydeth the spoyle. He that is not with me, is agaynst me: and he that gathereth not with me, scatereth abrode.

*Yf the vncline spryte is gone out of a man, he walketh thorow drye places, sekynge rest, and fyndeth none. Then sayeth he: I wil turne agayne in to my house, from whence I wente out. And when he commeth, he fyndeth it swepte, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh vnto hym seuen other spretes, worse the himself. And when they are entred in, they dwell there. And the ende of that man is worse then the begynynge.

And it forstunne when he spake soch, a certayne woman amonge the people lift vp hir voyce, and sayde vnto hym: Blessed is y wombe that bare the, and the pappes that thou hast sucked. But he sayde: Yee blessed are they that heare the worde of God, and kepe it.

Whan the people were gathered thicke together, he beganne to saye: *This is an euell generacion, they desyre a toke, and there shall no token be geuen them, but the toke of the prophet Ionaas. For like as Ionaas was a toke vnto the Ninuuytes, so shal the sonne of man be vnto this generacion. *The quene of the south shall aryse at the iudgmet with the men of this generacion, and shall condempne them: for she came from the ende of the worlde, to heare the wysdom of Salomon. And beholde, here is one more then Salomon. The men of Ninuue shall aryse at the iudgment with this generacion, and shall condempne them: for they dyd pennaunce after the preachinge of Ionaas: and beholde, here is one more the Ionaas.

No man lighteth a candell, and putteth it in a preuy place, nether vnder a buszhell, but vpon a candelsticke, that they which com in, may se the light. *The eye is the light of the body, Yf thine eye then be synge, all thy body shal be full of light: but yf thine eye be wicken, then shal all thy body be full of darknesse. Take hede therefore, that the light which is in the, be not darknesse. Yf thy body now be light, so that it haue no parte of darknesse, then shal it be all full of light, and shall light the euen as a cleare lightenyng.
But whyle he yet spake, a certayne Pharise prayed him, that he wolde dyne with him. And he wente in, and sat him downe at the table. Whan the Pharise sawe that, he marueyled, that he wasz hed not first before dyne. But the LORDE sayde vnto hym: Now do ye Pharises make cleane the out syde of the cuppe and platter," but youre inwarde partes are full of robbery and wickednesse. Ye fooles, is a thynge made cleane within, because the outsyde is clensed? Neuerthelkes guee ahnesse of that ye haue, and beholde, all is cleane vnto you.

But wo vnto you Pharises, ye that tythe mynty and rewe, and all maner herbes, and passe ouer iudgment and y loue of God. These ought to haue bene done, and not to leau the other vndone.

Wo vnto you Pharises, for ye loue to syt yppermost in the synagogues, and to be saluted in the market.

Wo vnto you scrybes and Pharyses, ye ypcrites, for ye be like couered seplulces, where ouer men walke, and are not awarre of them.

Then answered one of the scrybes, and sayde vnto hym: Master, with these wordes thou puttest vs to rebuke also. But he saide: And wo vnto you also ye scrybes, for ye lade men with vnstoable burthenes, and ye youre selues ouch them not with one of youre fyngers.

Wo vnto you, for ye buydle the seplulces of the prophetes," but youre fathers put them to death. Doules ye beare wytnesse, and consente vnto the dedes of youre fathers: for they slewe them, and ye buydle their seplulces.

Therfore sayde the wyszdome of God: I wil sende prophetes and Apostles vnto the; and some of them shal they put to death and persecute, that the bloude of all the prophetes which hath bene shed sens the foudacion of the worlde was layed, maye be requyred of this generacion: from the bloude of Abell," vnto y bloude of * Zachary, which perished betweene the altare and y temple. Yee I saye vnto you: it shalbe requyred of this generacion.

Wo vnto you scrybes, for ye haue receaued y keye of knowlege. Ye are not come in youre selues, and haue forbydden them that wolde haue bene in.

Whan he spake thus vnto them, the scrybes and Pharyses beganne to preasse sore vpon him, and to stoppe his mouth with many questions, and layed wayte for him, and sought to hunte out some thinge out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

The rij. Chapter.

THERE were gathered together an innu-merable multitude of people, in so much that they trode one another: Then beganne he, and sayde first vnto his disciples: Bewarre of the leuen of the Pharises, which is ypcrisye. But there is no thinge hyd, that shal not be discovered: neither secrete, that shal not be knowne. Therfore whatsoever ye haue spoke in darknesse, that same shal be herde in light: and that ye haue spoken in to the eare in the chibers, shalbe preached vpon the house toppes.

But I saye vnto you my frendes: Be not a Brayed of them that kyll the body, and after that haue nomore that they can do. But I wil shewe you, whom ye shal feare. Feare him, which after he hath kyld, hath power also to cast in to hell: Yee I saye vnto you: Feare him. Are not fuy sparowes bought for two farthings? Yet is not one of them forgotten before God. The very hayres of your heade also are nombred euery one. Feare not theryfore, for ye are better then many sparowes.

I saye vnto you: Who so euer knowlegeth me before men, him shal the sonne of my also knowlege before the angels of God: But he that denyeth me before men, shal be denied before the angels of God. And who so euer speakeyth a worde agaynst the sonne of man, it shalbe forgeuen him: "But who so blasphemeth the holy goost, it shal not be forgeuen him.

Whan they brynge you in to their synagoges," and to the rulers g officers, take ye no thought, how or what ye shal answere, or what ye shal speake: for the holy goost shal teach you in the same hora, what ye ought to saye.

For thou not little flocke, for it is your fathers pleasure to geue you the kyngdome. Sell that ye haue, and geue almesse. Make you bagges, which waxe not olde: euene a treasure that never fayleth in heauen, where no thefe commeth, and no moth corruppest: for where your treasur is, there wil youre hert be also.

"Let youre loynes be gerded aboute, and youre lightes burynge, and be ye like vnto men that wayte for their lorde, agaynst he returne from the mariage, that when he cömeth a knocketh, they maye straight waye open vnto him. Blessed are those seruauntes, whom the LORDE (when he cömeth) shal fynde wakynge. Verely I saye vnto you: He shal gynde vp him self, and make them syt downe at the table, and shal goe by them, and mynistre vnto them. And ye he come in the seconde watch, and in the thirde watch, and fynde them so, blessed are those seruauntes. But be sure of this, that ye god man of the house knewe, what houre the thefe wolde come, he wolde surely watch, and not suffre his house to be broken vp. Therfore be ye ready also, for at an houre when ye thynke not, shal the sonne of man come.

But Peter sayde vnto him: LORDE, tellst thou this symilitude vnto vs, or to all men also? The LORDE sayde: How greate a thinge is a faithfull and wyse stewart, whom his lorde setteth ouer his housholde, to geue the their dewtye in due season? Blessed is that seruaunt, whom his lorde (when he cömeth) shal fynde so doynge. Verely I saye vnto you: he shal set him ouer all his goodes. But ye the same seruaunt shal saye in his hert: Tush, it wil be olde or my lorde come, and shal begynne to smyte his seruauntes and maydens, yee a to eate and drynke, a to be dronke: the same seruauntes lorde shal come in a daye when he loketh not for him, and in an houre that he is not aware of, a shal hew him in peeces, and geue him his rewarde with the vnbeleruers.

"The seruaunt that knewe his lordes wil and prepared not himself, nether dyd acordinge to his will, shal be beaten with many strypes: But he that knewe it not, and yet
I am come to Kyndle fyre vpon earth, and what wolde I rather, the that it were kyndled already. Notwithstandinge I must first be baptised with a baptyme, and how am I payned tylle it be ended? Thynke ye, that I am come to byrnyge peace vpon earth? "I tell you nay, but rather debate. For from hence forth there shal be at varyance in one house: thre agaynst two, and two agaynst thre. The father shal be deuyded agaynst y sonne, and the sonne agaynst the father: the mother agaynst the daughter, y the daughter agaynst the mother: the mother in lawe agaynst hir daughter in lawe, and y daughter in lawe agaynst hir mother in lawe.

And he sayde vnto the people: "Whan ye se a cloude ryse out of y west, straight waye ye saye: there cometh a shower, and so it is: and when ye se the southwynde blowe, ye saye: It will be hote, and it commeth so to passe. Q ye ypoercytes, ye can discerne the fashion of the syke and of the earth: Why can ye not discerne this tyme also? Yee, and why indge ye not of youre selues, what is right?

Whyle thou goest with thine aduersary vnto the Prynçe, gene diligences by the waye, that thou mayest be quyte of him, lest he brynge the before the iudge, and the iudge deluyer the to the iaylar, and the iaylar cast the in to preson. I tell the, thou shalt not come out thence, tyll thou paye the vtemost myyte.

THERE were present at the same season certayne, that shewed him of y *Gali-leans, whose bloude Pilate had meydled with their awne sacrifique. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Suppose ye, that these Galiłeas were greater synners then all the other Galiłeans, because they suffred such punishment? I tell you naye, but excepte ye amede youre selues, ye shal all perisse likewise. Or thynke ye that y eightene (vpon whom the tower in Siloe fell and slowe them) were giltie aboue all men that dwell at Jerusalem? I tell you naye: but except ye amende youre selues, ye shal all perisse likewise.

And he tolde them this symilitude: A certayne mā had a fygge tre, which was planted in his vynyarde, & he came and sought frute theron, and founde none. Then sayde he vnto the wynegardener: Beholde, This thre yeare longe haine I come every yeare, and sought frute vpon this fygge tre, and fyude none: cut it downe, why hyndreth it the grounde? But he answered, and sayde: Syr, let it alone yet this yeare, tyll I dygye roude aboute it and donge it, yf it wyl byrnyge forth frute: Yf no, then cut it downe afterwarde.

And he taught in a synagoge vpon the Sabbath: and beholde, there was a womā, which had a sprote of insfirmyte eightene yeares, and was croked, and coude not well loke vp. Whan Iesus sawe her, he called her to him, and sayde vnto her: Woman, be deluyered from thy disease. And he layed his handes vpō her, and immediatedly shes was made straight, and praysed God. Then answered the ruler of the synagoge, and toke indignacion (because Iesus healed vpon Sabbath) and sayde vnto the people: There are sixe dayes, wherein men ought to worke, in them come and be healed, and not on the Sabbath.

Then the Lorde answered him, and sayde: Thou ypoecyte, doth not every one of you louse his oxe or asse frō the crybbe vpō Sabbath, and leade him to the water? But shulde not this (which is Abrahams doughter) whom Sathan hath bounde now eightene yeares, be lowsed from this bonde vpō the Sabbath? And whan he thus sayde, all his aduersaries were ashamed. And all the people rejoysed ouer all the excellent dedes, that were done by him.

And he sayde: "What is the kyngdome of God like? Or wher vnto shal I copare it? It is like a grayne of mustarde sede, which a man toke, and cast in his garden: and it grewe, and waxed a greate tre, and the foules of the ayre dwelt amonge the branches of it.

And agayne he sayde: "Where vnto shal I licken the kyngdome of God? It is like vnto lenen, which a woman toke, and myxte it a Mat. 10. e.  b Mat. 16. a.  c Mat. 13. d.  d Mat. 13. a.

And one sayde vnto hym: LORDE, are there few (thinkest thou) that shalbe saued? But he sayde vnto them: 4 Stryue ye to entre in at the strayght gate, for many (1 saye vnto you) shal seke to come in, and shal not be able. From that tyme forth, when the good man of the house is rysen vp, and hath shut the dore, then shal ye begynne to stonde without, and to knocke at þy dore, and saye: LORDE LORDE, open vnto vs. 5 And he shal answere, and saye vnto you: I knowe you not whence ye are. Then shal ye begynne to saye: We have eaten and dronken before the, and thou hast taught vs vpon þy stretes. And he shal saye: I tell you, I knowe you not whence ye are. 6 Departe fro me all ye workers of iniqyute. There shalbe wepynge and gnashinge of teth, when ye shal se Abraham, and Izaack, and Iacob and all the prophetes in þy kyngdome of God, and youre selues thrust out, And wha þey shal come from the east and from the west, 7 from the north and from the south, which shal syt at þy table in the kyngdome of God. And beholde, 8 there are last, which shal be fyrst: and there are first, which shalbe last.

Vpon the same daye there came certayne of þy Pharises, and sayde vnto hym: Get the out of the waye, and departe hence, for Herode wyll kyll the. And he sayde vnto þe: Go ye and tell that fo xe: beholde, I cast out duels, and heale the people todaye and to morow, and vpþ the thirde daye shal I make an ende; for it can not be, that a prophet perishe without Ierusalem.

8 O Ierusalem Ierusale, thou that kyllest the prophetes, and stonest þe that are sent vnto þy, how oft wolde I have gathered thy children together, even as the henne gathereth her nest vnder hir wynges, and ye wolde not? Beholde, youre habitacion shal be left vnto you desolate. For I saye vnto you: ye shal not se me, tyll þy tyme come that ye shal saye: 9 blessed be he, þy cómeth in þy name of the LORDE.

AND it was fortuned that he came in to the a house of one of þy chefe Pharises vpþ a Sabbath, to eate bred, 10 they watched him. And beholde, there was a mā before him, which had þy dropsye. And Iesus answered, 11 spake vnto the scrymes and Pharises, 12 sayde: Is it lauffle to heale on the Sabbath? But they helde their tongs. And he took him, and healed him, 13 let him go, and answered, and sayde vnto þe: Which of you shal haue an ox e or an asse fallen in to a pytte, 14 and wil not straight waye pull him out on the Sabbath daye? And they coude not answere him agayne to that.

And he tolde a symilitude vnto þy gestes, whā he marked how they chose the hyest seates, 15 sayde vnto þe: Whā thou art byddē of eny man to a weddyng, syt not downe in the hyest rowme, lest a more honorable man þe thou be byddē of him, and he that bade both the and him, come 16 saye vnto þy: geue this mā rowme, and thou þe begynne with shame to take þy lowest rowme. But rather whā thou art byddē, go and syt in þy lowest rowme, that whā he that bade the, 17 cómeth, he maye saye vnto the: Frende, syt vp hyer: then shalt thou haue worshipe in the presence of them that syt at the table. 18 For who so euer exalteth himself, shalbe brought lowe: 19 and he þy humbleth himself, shalbe exalted.

He sayde also vnto him that had bydden him: Whā thou makest a dyner or a supper, call not thy frendes, nor thy brethren, nor thy kynsfolkes, nor thy riche neibourhes, lest they call the agaynse, and recompe ce be made þy. But whā thou makest a feast, 20 call the poore, the crepell, the lame, the blinde, then art thou blessed, for they can not recompe ce þy. But it shalbe recompe ce the in the resurrection of the righteous.

Whan one of them that sat by at the table herde this, he sayde vnto hym: Blessed is he, 21 that eateth bred in þy kyngdome of God. But he sayde vnto hym: A certayne mā made a greate supper, 22 and called many ther to. And in þy houre of the supper he sent his seruaute, to saye vnto the þy were byddē:

Ps. 117. c. 1 Luc. 6. a. and 13. b. Mat. 12. b. Marc. 3. a.
2 Exo. 23. a. Deut. 22. b. 1 Pro. 23. a.  8 Mat. 23. b.
3 Luc. 16. b.  7 Tob. 4. c.  8 Mat. 22. a. Apo. 19. b.

* Gen. 13. a.  5 Mat. 7. b.  3 Mat. 25. a.  9 Psal. 6. b.
4 Mat. 7. b. and 25. d.  6 Mat. 8. b.  7 Mat. 19. d.
8 and 20. b. Marc. 19. c.  9 Mat. 23. e.  4 Luc. 19. d.

Come, for now are all things ready. And they began all together to excuse the selues one after another: The first said unto him: I haue bought a seruice, and I must needs go forth and see it, I pray you haue me excused. And the second said: I haue bought fyue yoke of oxen, and now I go to prowe them, I pray you haue me excused. And the third saide: I haue maried a wife, therefore can I not come. And the seruant came, and brought his lordes wordes agaynse thereof.

Then was the good man of the house displeased, and sayde vnto his seruant: Go out quickly in to the strete and quarters of & yfe cite, and brynge in either the poore and crepell, and lame and blinde. And the seruant sayde: lord, it is done as thou hast commaunded, and there is yet more rowme. And the lord sayde vnto the seruant: Go out in to the hye wayes, and to the hedges, and compell them to come in, that my house maye be fylled. But I saye vnto you: that none of these men which were bydden, shall taist of my supper.

There wente moch people with him, and he turned him aboute and sayde vnto them: Yf any man come vnto me, and hate not his father, mother, wife, childre, brethren, sisters, yee and his owne life also, he can not be my disciple. And whosoever beareth not his crosse, and foloweth me, can not be my disciple.

Which of you is it & wol buyldye a tower, and syteth not downe first and counteth & cost, whether he have sufficient to perfourme it? lest after he hath layed the foundacioun, and is not able to perfourme it all, they that se it, begynne to laugh him to scorne, & to saye: This man beganne to buyldye, and is not able to perfourme it. Or what kyng wil go to make battayle agaynst another kyng, and syteth not downe first, and casteth in his mynde, whether he be able with ten thousand, to mete him that commeth agaynst him with twentye thousand? Or els, whyle the other is yet a greate waye of he sendeth embassage, and desyreth peace. So likewise eyuer one of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, can not be my disciple.

Salt is a good thing: but ye the salt be vsnaurety, what shal they season withall? It is nether good vpon the lande, ner in the donge hyll, but shall be cast awaye. He that hath eares to heare, let him heare.

The vb. Chapter.

THERE resorted vnto him all the publieans and synners, that they might heare him. And yfh Pharises and scribez murmured, and sayde: This man receauneth synners, and eateth with them. But he tolde them this symilitude, and sayde: What man is he amonge you, that hath an hundreth shepe, and yf he loose one of the, that leaneth not the nyne and nyentye in the wylderness, and goeth after that which is lost yt he fynde it? And when he hath founde it, he layeth it vpon his shulders with ioye: and when he commeth home, he calleth his fredes and neighbours, and sayeth vnto the: Reioyce with me, for I haue founde my shepe, yt was lost. I saye vnto you: Euen so shal there be ioye in heauen ouer one synner that doth pennaunce, more then ouer nyne and nyentye righteous, which vonede not repentance.

Or what woman is it that hath ten grotes, yf she loose one of them, that lighteth not a candell, and swepeth the house, and seketh not diligently, yt thynde it? And when she hath founde it, she calleth her fredes and neighbours, and sayeth: Reioyce with me, for I haue foide my grote, which I had lost. Euen so (I tell you) shal there be ioye before the angels of God, ouer one synner yt doth pennaunce.

And he sayde: A certayne man had two sones, and the yonger of them sayde vnto the father: Father, give me the porcion of yt goodes, that belongeth vnto me. And he denyed the good vnto them. And not longe thereafter, gathered the yonger sonne all together, yt took his journy in to a farre countere, and therewaite he his goodes with rytoys lyuyng. Now when he had spent all that he had, there was a greate derth thorow out all the same lode. And he begaine to lache, and wente his waye, and claue to a cytesin of that same countere, which sent him in to his feld, to kepe swyne. And he woldeayne haue fylled his bely with the coddes, that the swyne ate. And woman gane him them.

a Deut. 13. b. Mat. 10. e. and 16. d. b Mat. 5. b. Marc. 9. e. c Mat. 9. a. Marc. 2. b. Luc. 5. d.
Then came he to himself, and sayde: How many hyred servauntes hath my father, which haue brod ynoough, and I perish of hunger? I wil get vp, and go to my father, and saye vnto hym: Father, I haue synned agaynst heauen and before the, and am nomine worthy to be called thy sonne, make me as one of thy hyred servauntes. And he vnto hym vp, and came vnto his father. But when he was yet a greate wyfe of, his father sawe him, and had compass, and ranne, and fell aboute his neck, and kyssed hym. Then sayde the sonne vnto hym: Father, I haue synned agaynst heauen, and before the, I am no more worthy to be called thy sonne. But the father sayde vnto his servauntes: Brynge forth the best garnement, and put it vpon hym, and geue hym a rynge vpon his hande, and shues on his fete, and brynge bither a ked calfe, and kyll it, lat vs eate and be mery: for this my sonne was deede, and is aluye agayne: he was lost, and is founde. And they beganne to be mery.

But the elder sonne was in the feld. And when he came, and drewe nye to the house, he herde hym say: All waye ye myrystlesye and daunsyng, and calle one of the servauntes vnto hym, and axed what it was. He sayde vnto hym: Thy brother is come, and thy father hath slayne a ked calfe, because he hath receaued hym safe and sounde. Then was he angerie, and wolde not go in. Then wente his father out, and prayed hym. But he answered, and sayde vnto his father: Lo, thus many yeares hane I done the seruyce, nether haue I yet broken thy commandement, and thou gauest me neuer one kydd, I might make mery with my frendes. But now that this thy sonne is come, which deuoured his goodes with harlottes, thou hast slayne a ked calfe. But he sayde vnto hym: My sonne, thou art allwaye with me, and all that is myne, is thine: thou shulddest be mery and glad, for this thy brother was deede, and is aluye agayne: he was lost, and is founde agayne.

The 10. Chapter.

He sayde also vnto his discipes: There was a certayne riche man, which had a stewarde, that was accused vnto him, that he had waisted his goodes. And he called him, and sayde vnto him: How is it, that I heare this of the? geue acomptes of thy stewardship, for thou mayest be no longer stewarde. The stewarde sayde within himself: What shal I do? My lorde wil take awaye the stewardship fro me. I cā not dyse, and to begg I am ashamed. I wote what I wil do, that whā I am put out of the stewardship, they maye receaue me in to their houses.

And he called vnto hi all his lorde detters, and sayde vnto the first: How much owest thou vnto my lorde? He sayde: an hundred tonnes of oyle. And he sayde: Take thy byll, and warte quckly, wryte fiftie. Then sayde he vnto another: How owest thou? He sayde: An hundred quarters of wheate. And he sayde vnto hym: Take thy byll, and wyte fourte score. And the lorde comended the vnrighteous stewarde, because he had done wyse. For the children of this worlde are in their kynde wyser, the the children of light. And I saye vnto you: Make you frendes with the vnrighteous Mammon, whan ye shal haue neue, they maye receaue you in to everlastinge Tabernacles.

He that is faithfull in the least, is faithfull also in much: and he that is vnrighteous in the least, is vnrighteous also in much. Yf ye then haue not bene faithfull in the vnrighteous Mammon, who wyll beleue you in that which is true? And yf ye haue not bene faithfull in another mans busynesse, who wil geue you that which is youre awne?

6 No servaunt can serue two masters: for either he shall hate the one, and lune the other: or els he shall leane to the one, and despise the other. Ye can not serue God and Mammon.

All these thinges herde the Pharisies, which were coucous, and they mocked hi. And he sayde vnto them: Ye are they that justifie youre selues before men, but God knoweth youre hertes. For ye which is lye amonge men, is an abominacion before God.

The lawe and prophesyes prophesied vnto Iohn, and from that tyme forth was ykyndome of God preached thowre forth, and euery man preasseth in to it by violence. But easier is it, for heauen and earth to perishe, then one tittle of lawe to fall. Who so oun putteth awaye his wife, he marrieth another, breaketh matrimonye: and he that marrieth her which is deuorced fro hir husbande, breaketh wedlocke also.

a Psal. 31. a. 1ob 13. b. 6 Mat. 6. c. 11. b. 4 Mat. 5. d. and 19. b. Marc. 10. a.
There was a certayne riche man, which clothed him self with purple and costly lynnyn, and fared deliciously every daye. And there was a poore man named Lazarus which laye at his gate full of sores, and desyred to be fylled with the crommes, that fell from the riche mans table. Yet came the dogges, andликed his sores. But it fortuned, that the poore man dyed, and was caried of the angels in to Abrahams bosome. The riche man dyed also, and was buried.

Now when he was in the hell, he lift vp his eyes in the payne, and sawe Abraham afarre of, and Lazarus in his bosome: and he cried, and sayde: Father Abraham, haue mercy vpon me, and sende Lazarus, that he maye dyppre the typppe of his fyngers in water, quicke my tone, for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham sayde: Benemere sonne, y\(^{\prime}\) thou hast receaued good in thy lyfe, but contrary wyse Lazarus receaued euell. But now is he comforted, and thou art tormented. And beside all this, there is a great space set betwene vs and you: so y\(^{\prime}\) they which wolde go dowe from hence vnto you, can not: nether maye they passe ouer from thence vnto vs.

Then sayde he: I praye the then father, that thou wilt sende him vnto my fathers house, for I haue yet fyue brethren, that he maye warne them, lest they also come in to this place of torment. Abraham sayde vnto him: They haue Moses and the prophets, let them heare them. But he sayde: Nay father Abraham, but yf one wen to them fro the deed, they wolde do pennance. Neuertheless he sayde vnto him: Yf they heare not Moses & the prophets, then shal they not beleue also, though one rose agayne fro the deed.

The r\(\text{b\(\text{i}\)}\)j. Chapter.

\(\text{b}\) He sayde vnto his discipules: It is vnpossible that offences shulde not come: \(^{a}\) but wo vnto him by whom they come: It were better for him, that a mylstone were hanged aboute his neck, and he cast in to the see, then that he shulde offendde one of these little ones. Take hede to youre selues. Yf thy brother trespace agaynst the, rebuke him: and yf he amende, \(^{b}\) forgeue him. And though he synne agaynst the seuen tymes in a daye, and come seuen tymes in a daye to agayne, and saye: It repenteth me, foruge him.

And the Apostles sayde vnto \(^{\text{y}}\) LORDE: Increase oure faith. The LORDE sayde: If ye haue faith as a grayne of mustarde seele; \(^{c}\) and saye vnto this Molbery tre: Plucke thy self vp by the rotes, and plase thy self in the see, it shalbe obiedet vnto you. Which of you is it, that hath a seruaunt (which ploweth, or fedeth the catell) wha he commeth home from y felde, that he wil saye vnto him: Go quykly, and syt the down to meate? Is it not thus? that he sayeth vnto him: Make ready, that I maye suppe, gyarde vp thyself, and serue me, tyl I haue eaten and donken, afterwarde shalt thou eate and drynke also. Thanketh he the same seruaunt also, because he dyd that was commanded him? I trowe not. \(^{d}\) So likewyse ye, wha ye haue done all that is comandad you, saye: We are unprofitable seruauntes, we haue done that we were bounde to do.

And it fortuned, when he toke his journey towarde Ierusalam, he wente thorow the mynddest of Samaria and Galile. And as he came in to a towne, there met him ten leporous men, which stode afarre of, and lift vp their voyce, and sayde: Iesu master, haue mercy vpon vs. And when he sawe them, he sayde vnto them: \(^{e}\) Go, and shewe youre selues vnto \(^{\text{y}}\) prestes. And it came to passe, as they wente, they were clesened. And one of them wha he sawe that he was clesed, he turnede backe agayne, and prayed God with loude voyce, and fell downe on his face at his fete, and gaue him thankes. And the same was a Samaritane. Iesu answered and saide: Are there not ten clesed? But where are those synne? There were els none founde, that turnede agayne, and gaue God the prayse, saue onely this strainger. And he sayde vnto him: Arise, go thy waye, thy faith hath made thy whole.

But when he was demaundad of \(^{\text{y}}\) Pharies: Whan cometh the kyngdome of God? He answered them, and sayde: The kyngdome of God commeth not with outwarde appearance, nether shal it be sayde: lo, here or there is it. For beholde, \(^{\text{y}}\) kyngdome of God is inwarde in you.

And he sayde to the discipules: The tyme shall come, wha ye shal desyre to se one daye

Yet saye I: There is this the Lorde: Heare what ye sayeth. But shall not God also deluyer his chosen, that crie vnto him daye and night, though he differeth? I saye vnto you: He shal deluyer them, and that shortly. Neuertheles, whan the sonne of man cometh, suppose ye, that he shal fynde faith vpon earth? And vnto certayne which trusted in the selues, that they were perfecte, and despysed other, he spake this symilitude: There went vp two men in to the tēple, to praye: the one a Pharise, the other a publican. The Pharise stode, and prayed by himself after this maner: I thanke the God, that I am not as other men, robbers, vnrighteous, aduouters, or as this publican. I fast twysse in the weke, I gene the tithes of all that I haue. And the publican stode afarre of, and wolde not lift vp his eyes to heauen, but smote vpon his brest, and sayde: God be thou mercyfull vnto me synner. I tell you: This man wente downe in to his house justified more the the other. For who so euer exalteth himself, shalbe brought lowe: and he that humbleth himself, shalbe exalted.

'They brought yonge children also vnto him, that he shulde touch them. But whan the disciples sawe that, they rebuked them. Neuertheloses Jesus called them vnto him, and sayde: Suffer chylde to come vnto me, and forbyd the not, for of soch is this kyngdome of God. Verely I saye vnto you: Whosoever receaueth not this kyngdome of God as a childe, shal not enter therein.

And a cerryne ruler axed him, and sayde: Good master, what must I do, that I maye enheret euerlastinge life? But Iesus saynt vnto him: Why callest thou me good? There is no man good, but God onely. Thou knowest the cōmaundements: Thou shalt not kyll: Thou shalt not brake wedlocke: Thou shalt not stole: Thou shalt not beare false wytnesse: Honour thy father and thy mother. But he sayde: All these haue I kept fro my youth vp. When Iesus herde that, he sayde vnto him: Yet lackest thou one of the sonne of man, and shal not se it. And they shal saye vnto you: 'Se here, Se there. Go not ye, nether folowe, for as the lightenghe shyneth aboue frome the heauen, and lighteth ouer all that is vnder the heauen, so shal the sonne of man be in his daye. But first must he suffer many thinges, and be refused of this generation.

And as it came to passe in the tyme of Noe, so shal it come to passe also in this dayes of the sonne of man. They ate, they dranke, they maried, and were maried, even vnto this daye that Noe wente in to the Arke, and floude came, and destroyed them all.

Likewise also, as it came to passe in the tyme of Lot, they ate, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they bylded. But euene the same daye that Lot wente out of Sodom, it rayned fyre and brymstone from heauen, and destroyed them all. After this maner also shal it go, in the daye when the sonne of man shall appeare.

In that daye, who so is vpō the rofe, and his stiffe in his house, let him not come downe to fetch it: Likewise he that is in the felde, let him not turne backe, for it that is behynde him. Rembrē Lottes wife. Who so euer goeth aboute to saue his life, shall lose it: and who so euer shall lose it, shall save it.

I saye vnto you: In this night shall two lyce vpon one bed, the one shall receaueth, the other shall be saken. Two shall be gryndinge together, the one shall receaueth, the other shall be forsaken. And they answered, and sayde vnto him: Where Lorde? He sayde vnto the: Where euer thy deed carcase is there wil thy Aegles be gathered together.
things, sell all that thou hast, and give it vnto thy poore, and thou shalt haue a treasure in heauen, and come & folowe me. When he herde that, he was sory, for he was very riche.

* When Jesus sawe that he was sory, he sayde: How hardly shal the riche come in to the kyngdome of God? It is easyer for a Camell to go thorow the eye of a needle, the for a rich man to entre in to the kyngdome of God. Then sayde they: Herde that: Who can then be saved? But he sayde: loke what's vnpossible with mē, is possible with God.5

Then sayde Peter: Beholde, we haue forsakē ali, and folowed the. He sayde vnto the: Verely I saye vnto you: There is no mā v̄ forsaketh house, or elders, or brethren, or wife, or children for the kyngdome of Gods sake, which shall not receaue much more in this tyme, and euerlasting life in the worlde to come.

He take vnto him the twolue, and sayde vnto them: Beholde, we go vp to Ierusale, and it shal all be fulfilled, that is written by the prophetes of the sonne of man. For he shal be deluyuered vnto Heythen, and shalbe mocked, and despoyefully intreated, and spitted vpon; and when they have scourged him, they shal put him to deathe, and vpon the thirde daye shal he aryes agayne. *And they vnderstode nothinge of these things. And this sayenge was hyd from them, and they perceaeued not the things that were spoken.

And it came to passe, when he came nye vnto Jericho, there sat one blinde by the waye, and begged. And when he herde the people passe by, he axed what it was. Then sayde they vnto him, that Jesus of Nazareth passed by. And he cryed, and sayde: Iesu thou sonne of Daviūd, haue mercy vpon me. But the people that wente before, rebuked him, that he shulde holde his tunge. Neuertheles he cried moch moore: Thou sonne of Daviūd haue mercy vpō me. Jesus stode styl, & commaunded hī to be brought vnto hī. And when he was come neare, he axed him and sayde: What wilt thou, that I do vnto the? He sayde: LORDE, that I maye receaue my sight. And Jesus sayde vnto him: Receaue thy sight, thy faith hath saved the. And immediatly he sawe, and followed him,† prayset God. And all the people that sawe it, gaue God the prayse.

The rīr. Chapter.

And he entred in, and wente thorow A Iericho: ʻBeholde, there was a man named Zacheus, which was a ruler of the publicanes, and was riche, and desyred to see Jesus what he shulde be, and he could not for the people, for he was lowe of stature. And he raune before, and clymmed vp in to a wylde fygge tre, that he might se him: for he shulde come v̄ waye. And when Jesus came to the same place, he loked vp, and sawe him, and sayde vnto him: Zache, come downe haistely, for to daye must I tūrne in to thy house. And he came downe haistely, and receaued him† with ioye. Whan they sawe that, they murmured all, and sayde, ʻhe was gone in, to a synner.

But Zacheus stode forth, and sayde vnto the LORDE: Beholde LORDE, the halfe of my goodes geue I to the poore: and yt I haue defrauded eny man, I restore him fourf folde. Iesu sayde vnto him: This daye is health happened vnto this house, for so moch as he also is Abrahams sonne.† For the sonne of mā is come, to seke and to saue that which was lost.

Now whyle they herkened, he tolde a symultude also, because he was nye vnto Ierusale, and because they thought, that the kyngdome of God shulde appeare immediatly. And he sayde: ʻA certayne noble mā wēte in to a farre countre, to receaue hī a kyngdome, and then to come agayne. This man called ten of his seruantes, and deluyuered them ten pounde, and sayde vnto them: Occupye, tyll I come agayne. But his citesyns hated him, and sent a message after him, and sayde: We wil not haue this man to raigne ouer vs.

And it fortuned when he came agayne, after that he had receaue the kyngdome, he bade call for the seruantes, vnto whom he had geuen his money, ʻthey might knowe, what euery one had done. Then came the first and sayde: Syr, thy pounde hath wonne ten pounde. And he sayde vnto him: Well thou good seruaunt, for so moch as thou hast bene begâne joyfully to prayse God with loude voice, ouer all the miracles that they had sene, and syde: *Blessed be he, that cómeth a kyng in the name of the LORDE.

Peace be in heauen, and prayse in the height. And some of the Pharis and the people syde vnto hym: Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered and syde vnto them: I tell you, vf these holde their peace, yet shal the stones crye.

For the tyne shal come vpon the, that thine enemies shal cast vp a bake aboute the, and aboue thy children with the, and besiege yf, and kepe the in euery syde, and make the euens with the grounde, and shal not leue in the one stone vpon another, because thou hast not knowne yf tyne, wherin thou hast bene visited.

And he wente in to the temple, and begâne to dryue out them that bought and solde therin, and syde vnto them: It is wrytten:

My house is an house of prayer, but ye haue made it a denne of murthurers. And he taught daylie in the temple. But the hye prestes and the scrubes and the cheuest of yf people were aboute to destroye hym, and founde not, what to do vnto hym. For all the people stacke by him, and gaue him audience.

The 17. Chapter.

AND it fortunated one of those dayes, whan a he taughe the people in the temple, and preached the Gospel, the hye prestes and scrubes came to hym with the Elders, and spake vnto hym, and syde: Tell vs, by what auctorite doest thou these thinges? Or who gaue the this auctorite? But he answered, and syde vnto thè: I wil axe you a worde also, tell it me: The baptyme of Ibbó was it from heauen, or of men? But they thought in them selues, and syde: Yf we saye, from heauen, then shal he saye: Why dyd ye not thè beleue him? But yf we saye, of men, then shal all the people stone vs, for they be persuaded, that Ibon is a prophet. And they answered, that they could not tell, whence it was. And Jesus sayde vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these things.

And he beganne to tell the people this symilitude: A certayne man planted a vyndarde, and let it out vnto huszbardmen, and wente himself in to a straunge countre for a greate season. And when his tyme was come, he sent a seruaunt to the huszbardmen, that they might gee him of the frute of the vyndarde. But the huszbardmen bet him, and sent him awaye emptye. And agayne he sent yet another seruaunt: but they bet him also, and intreated him shamefully, sent him awaye emptye. And besydes this, he sent the thirde: but they wounded him also, and thrust him out. Then sayde the lorde of the vyndarde: What shal I do? I wil sende my *deare somme, peraduenture they wil stonde in awe of him, when they se him.

But when the huszbardmen sawe the sonne, they thought in the selues, and sayde: This is the heyre, come, let vs kyll him, the inheritance maye be ournes. And they thrust him out of vyndarde, and slew him. What shal now the lorde of the vyndarde do vnto them? He shal shalome, and destoyne those huszbardmen, and let out his vyndarde vnto other. Whan they herde that, they sayde: God forbyd.

But he behelde the, and sayde: What is this then that is wrytten: The same stone which the buylders refused, is become the head corner stone? Who so euer falleth vpon this stone, shalle be broken in sunder: but vp& wh& so euer he falleth, he shalle grynde him to poulde. And the hyre prestes and scrybes werente aboute to laye handes vpon hym the same houre, and they feared the people: for they perseuced, that he had spok this symilitude agaynst them.

And they watched hi, sent forth spyes, which shulde fayne the selues perfecte, that they might take him in his wordes, to deluyer him vnto the power and auctorite of they debite. And they axed him, sayde: Master, we knowe that thou sayest teache right, and regardest the outwarde appareance of no man, but teachest the waye of God truly. Is it lauffleth, that we geue tribute vnto the Em-
"Now whyle all the people gane audience, he sayde vnto his disciplyes: Beware of the serybes, which wyll go in longe garments, and loue to be saluted vpon the market, and desire to syt hyест in the synagogues, and at the table. They deckore wedowes houses, and that vnder a cloure of longe prayenge: These shal reecae the greater danacion.

The rri. Chapter.

AND he lokèd vp, and behelde þy riche, how they put in their offerynes in to the Gods chest. He sawe also a poore wedowe, which put in two mytes, and he sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: This poore wedowe hath put in more þè they all: For these all haue of their excess put in vnto the offerynge of God, but she of hir pouerte hath put in all hir lyuynge that she had.

And wha some speke of the temple, that it was garnished with goodly stones and jewels, he saide: The time shal come, wherin of all this that ye se, there shal not be left one stone vpon another, which shal not be broken downe. They axed him, and sayde: Master, wha shall these be? and what shalbe the token, when these shal come to passe? He sayde: Take hede, that ye be not discoued: For many shal come in my name, and saye, I am he, the tyme is come hard by. Followe them not.

But whan ye heare of warres and insurreccions, be not ye afayed, for soche must come to passe, but the ende is not yet there so soone. Then sayde he vnto them: One people shall ryse agaynst another, and one realeme agaynst another, and shal be grete earthquakes here and there, and pestilence, and derth, and fearfull things. And grete tokès shal there be frô heaué. But before all these, they shal laye handes vpoun you, and persecyte you, and delyuer you vp in to their synagogues and presons, and bryngye you before kynges prynces for your names sake. But this shal happen vnto you for a wyytne. Be at a poynyt therfore in youre hertes, that ye take no thought, how ye shal answere: for I wil gue ye mouth, agaynst the which all youre aduersaries shal not be able to speake ner to resist. But ye shal be deluyered vp euyn of youre elders, brethren, kynszfolkes and frendes, and some of you shal they put vnto death, and ye shal be bated of euery man for my names sake, and ye shal not one hayre of youre heade pershe. Holde fast youre soules with pacience.

But whan ye shal se Jerusalem besieged with an hoost, then vnderstonde, that the desolacion of it is nye. Then let them which be in Jewry, flye vnto the mountaynes: and let soch as be in the myddest therof, departe out: and let soch as be in the countrees, not come therin. For these are the dayes of vengeaunce, that euery thinge which is wrytten, maye be fulfilled. But wo vnto them that are with childe, and to them that guee sucke in those dayes: for there shalbe grete trouble vpon earth, and wrath owr this people, and they shal fall thowre the edge of the swerde, and be led captuyre amôge all naciones. And Ierusale shalbe troden downe of the Heithen, vntyll the tyme of the Heithen be fulfilled.

And there shal be tokens in the Sonne and Mone, and starres, and vpon earth the people shalbe in soch perplexe, that they shal not tell which waye to turne them selues. And the see and the waters shal roare, and men shal pynye awaye for feare, and for lokyng after the thinges which shal come vpô earth. For euyn the very powers of heauen shal mone.

And then shal they se the sonne of man commynge in the cloude with power and greate glory. But whan these thinges begynne to come to passe, the loke vp, and lift vpp youre heades, for youre redemption draweth nye.

And he tolde them a symilitude: Beholde the fygyre tre, and all the trees, wha they now shute forth their buddes, ye se by them, and perceynte, that Sommer is now at hande. So likewyse ye, whan ye se all these thinges come to passe, be sure that the kyngdome of God is nye. Verely I saye vnto you: This generacion shal not passe, tyll all be fulfilled. Heauen and earth shal passe, but my wordes shal not passe.

The feast of swete bred (which is called Easter) drue nye. And the hye preestes and Scrybys sought how they might put him to death, and were agrayed the people. But Satan was entred in to Iudas, named Iscarioth (which was of the number of twelve) and he wete his waye, and talked with the hye preestes and with officers, how he wolde betraye him vnto them. And they were glad, and promysed to geue him money. And he cossedent, a sought opportunite, he might betraye hit without any rumoure.

Then came the daye of swete bred, wherein the Easter lambe must be offered. And he sent Peter and Ihon, and sayde: Go youre waye, prepare vs the Easter lambe, that we maye eate. But they sayde vnto hit: Where wilt thou, that we prepare it? He sayde vnto them: Beholde, wha ye come in to cite, ther shall mete you a man, bearinge a pitcher of water, folowe him in to the house, he entreth in, and saye vnto the good man of the house: The master sendeth you, wha ye come in to cite, ther shall mete you a man, bearinge a pitcher of water, folowe him in to the house, he entreth in, and saye vnto hit: The master sendeth you, wha ye come in to cite.

And when the houre came, he sat him downe, and the twelue Apostles with him, and he sayde vnto them: I haue hertely deseryed to eate this Easter labe with you before I suffer. For I saye vnto you: that henceforth I wil eate nomere therof, tylly it be fulfilled in the kyngdome of God. And he toke the cuppe, gaue thankes, and sayde: Take this and deuyde it amonge you. For I saye vnto you: I wil not drynke of the frute of the wyne, vntyll the kyngdome of God come. And he toke the bred, gaue thankes, and brake it, and gaue it them, and sayde: This is my body, whiche shalbe geyen for you. This do in the remembranunce of me. Likeweys also the cuppe, after they had supped, and sayde: This cuppe is the new Testamet in my bloude, which shalbe shed for you.

But lo, the hande of him that betrayeth me, is with me on the table. And the somne of man trulye goeth forth, as it is appoynted. But wo vnto that man, by whom he is betrayed. And they beganne to axe amonge them selues, which of them it shulde be, that shulde do that.

There rose a strife also anoge thee, which of them shulde be take for the greatest. But he sayde vnto them: The kynges of this worde haue domynion ouer thee people, and they beare rule ouer thee, are called gracious lords. But ye shall not be so: But the greatest amonge you, shalbe as the yongest: and the chefest, as a seruaut. For which is the greatest? he that ytteteth at the table, or he that sesueth? Is not he that ytteteth at the table? But I am anoge you as a mynter. As for you, ye are they, that haue hydde with me in my temptacion. And I wil apoynte the kyngdome vnto you, even as my father hath appoynted me, that ye maye eate and drynke at my table in my kyngdome, and sit vpon seates, and jugde the twelue trybes of Israel.

But the Lorde sayde: Simon Simon, beholde, Satan hath deseryed after you, that he might sisse you even as wheate: but I haue prayed for thee, that thy faith fayle not. And when thou art couert, strength thy brethren: But he sayde vnto him: Lorde, I am ready to goe with the in to preson, and in to death. Neuertheles he sayde: Peter, I saye vnto the: The cock shal not crowe this daye, tylly thou haue thr ys denied, thou knewest me.

And he sayde vnto them: When I sent you without wallet, without scryppe, and without any suche thinge, yet had ye my silence. But now he sayde vnto the: Ye maye say: This cuppe is the new Testamet in my bloude, which shalbe shed for you.

Chap. xuij.

The whole multitude of the arose, and led him vnto Pilate, and begane to accuse him, and sayde: We haue founde this felowe persueting the people, and forbyndinge to geue trybute vnto the Emperoure,

\[\text{Without shues, lacked ye eny thinge? For I saye vnto you: It must yet be fulfilled on me, that is wrytten: He was counted amongst the euel doers. For loke what is wrytten of me, it hath an ende. But they sayde: LORDE, Beholde, here are two swerdes. He sayde vnto the: It is yonough.}

\[\text{And he wente out (as he was wonte) vnto mouit Oliuete. But his disciples folowed him vnto the same place. And when he came thither, he sayde vnto the: Praye, that ye fall not in to teptacion. And there appeared vnto him an angell frô heauen, and comforted him. And it came so, that he wrestled with death, and prayed the longer. And his sweate was like droppes of bloude, runnyng downe to the grounde. And he rose vp frô prayer, and came to his disciples, and founde them slepinge for heuyness, and sayde vnto them: What, slepe ye? ryse vp and praye, that ye fall not in to tentacion.}

\[\text{But whyle he yet spake, beholde, the multitude, & one of the twelue called Iudas wente before them, and he came nye vnto Jesus, to kyss hym. Neuertheless they toke hym, and led hym, and brought hym in to the hye prestes house. As for Peter, he folowed hi a farre of. Then kyndled they a fire in the myddest of the palace, and sat them downe together. And Peter sat him downe amoncke them. Then a damsell sawe him sittinge by the light, and behelde him well, and sayde vnto hym: This was the same also with him. But he denied hym, and sayde: Womâ, I knowe him not. And after a little whyle, another sawe him, and sayde: Thou art one of them also. But Peter sayde: Man, I am not. And aboute the space of an houre after, another affirmed, & sayde: Verely this was with hym also, for he is a Galilean. But Peter sayde: Ma, I wote not what thou sayest. And immediately whyle he yet spake, & cock crowe. And the LORDE turned hym aboute and loked vp Peter. And Peter remembered the wordes of & LORDE, how he sayde vnto hym: Before the cock crowe, thou shalt denye me thrbye. And Peter wente out, and wepte bitterly. And many other blasphemies sayde they vnto hi.}

and sayeth, that he is Christ a kyng. But Pilate axed him, and sayde: "Art thou the kyng of the Iewes? He answered him, and sayde: Thou sayest it. Pilate sayde vnto hys preses and to the people: I fynde no cause in this man. But they were the more feare, and sayde: He hath moned the people, in that he hath taung here and there in all the londe of Iewry, and hath begunne at Galile vnto this place.

When Pilate herde mencion of Galile, he axed whether he were of Galile. And when he perceaued that he was vnder Herodes jurisdiction, he sent him to Herode, which was also at Ierusalem in those dayes. When Herode sawe Iesus, he was exeedinge glad, for he had longe bene desyrous to se hym: because he had herde moch of hym, and hoped to se a miracle of hym. And he axed hym many thinges. Neuertheles he answered hym nothing. The hys prestat and scrybes stode, and accused hym sore. But Herode with his men of warre despysed hym, and mocked hym, put a whyte garment vpo hym, and sent hym agayne vnto Pilate. Vpô the same daye were Pilate and Herode made frendes together, for afore they had bene at variaunce.

Pilate called the hys prestat, and the rulers, and the people together, and sayde vnto the: "Ye haue brought this man vnto the, as one that perueret the people, and beholde, I haue examyned hym before you, a fynde in the man none of the causes, wherof ye accuse hym: Nor yet Herode: for I sent you to hym, and beholde, there is brought vpon hym nothinge, that is worthy of death. Therefore wil I chasten hym, and let hym lowse: For he must haue let one lowse vnto them after the custome of the feast.

"Then cried the whole multitude, and sayde: Awaye with him, and deluyer vnto Barraybas, which for insurreccion made in the cite, and because of a muturth, was cast in to preson. Then called Pilate vnto them agayne, and wolde haue let Jesus lowse. But they cried, and sayde: Crucifye hym, Crucifye hym. Yet sayde he vnto them, the thirde tym: What euell the hath he done? I fynde no cause of death in hym, therfore wil I chasten hym, and let hym go. But they laye styll vpon hym with great crynge, and requerde hym he might be crucified. And the voyce of the and of the hys prestat pynayled.

"And Pilate gaue sentence, that it shulde be as they requerde, and let lowse vnto the, him, that for insurreccion and muturth was cast in to preson, whom they desyre, but gane Iesus ouer vnto their wyll. And as they led him awaye, they toke one Simon of Cyren (which came from the falde) and layed hym vpon him, to bore it after Iesus.

"And there followed him a greate multitude of people and of women, which bewayed and lamented hym. But Iesus turned him aboute vnto the, and sayde: Ye douthing of Ierauls, wepe not ouer me: but wepe ouer youre selues, and ouer youre childre. For beholde, the tym wil come, wherin it shal be sayde: Blessed are the baren, and the wounded that haue not borne, and the pappes that haue not geuen sucke." Then shal they begynne to saye vnto the mountaynes: Fall vpon vs. And to the hylles: Couer vs. For yf this be done to a grene tre, what shal be done then to the drye?

"And two other (which were mysdoers) were led out also, to be put to death with hym. And wha they came to this place, which is called Caluery, they crucifyed hym even there, and the two mysdoers with hym, the one on the righte hande, the other on the left. But Iesus sayde: "Father, forgive them, for they wote not what they do." And they parted his garments, and cast lottes therefor. And the people stode and behelde.

And the rulers mocked him with them, and sayde: He hath helped other, let hym helpe hym self now, yf he be Christ y chosen of God. The souldyers also mocked hym, wete vnto hym, brought vnto hymyneger, and sayde: Yf thou be the kyng of the Iewes, then helpe thyself. And aboue ouer him was this superscription wrytten with letters of Greke, Latyn, and Hebrue: This is the kyng of the Iewes.

And one of the mysdoers that hanged there, blasphemed hym, and sayde: Yf thou be Christ, then helpe thy self and vs. Then answered the other, rebuked hym, and sayde:

And thou fearest not God also, which art yet in like dimacion. And truly we are therin by right, for we receave acordinge to oure dedes. As for this man, he hath done nothinge anysse. And he sayde vnto Iesus: LORDE, remembre me, whan thou commenest in to thy kyngdome. And Iesus sayde vnto hym: Verely I saye vnto the: To daye shal thinke be me in Paradise. And it was aboute the sixte houre, and there was darknesse over the whole londe vntyll the nyenth houre. And the Sonne was darkened, and the vayle of the temple rente in two euyn thorow the myddles.

And Iesus cryde loude, sayde: Father, in to thy handes I commende my spryte. And when he had so sayde, he gaue vp the goost. But when the Captayne saw what had happened, he prayed God, and sayde: Verely this was a just man. All the people that stode by behelde, when they saw what was done, smote vpon their brestes, turned backe agayne. But all his acquantaunce, and the wemen that had folowe him out of Galile, stode a farre of, and behelde all these things.

And beholde, a ma named Joseph, a Senator, which was a good just man, the same had not consented vnto their councell, and dede, which was of Arimathia a cite of the Iewes, which same also wayted for the kyngdome of God: he wete vnto Pilate, and axed the body of Iesus. And he toke him downe, wrapped him in a lynnyn cloth, and layed him in a hewen sepulcre, wherin neuer man was layed. And it was the daye of preparinge, and the Sabbath drue on.

The wemen that were come with him out of Galile, folowed him, and behelde the Sepulcre, how his body was layed. But they returned, and made ready the spyses and anontymes. And vpon the Sabbath they rested, acordinge to the lawe.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

But vpon one of the Sabbathes very early in the morynge, they came vnto the Sepulcre, and brought spyses which they had prepared, and certayne wemen with the. Neuerthelesse they founde the stone rolled awaye from the sepulcre, and wente in, and founde not the body of LORDE Iesus. And it happened as they were amased therat, beholde, there stode by them two men in shyninge garmentes. And they were afrayed, and cast downe their faces to the earth. Then sayde they vnto the: What seke ye? the lyuynge amoge the deed? He is not here. He is rysen vp. Remembre, how he tolde you wha he was yet in Galile, and sayde: The sonne of man must be deluyered in to the hades of synners, and be crucifited, and the thirde daye rys agayne.

And they remembred his wordes, and wente from the sepulcre, and tolde all this vnto the eleuen, and to all the other. It was Mary Magdalene, and Iohanna, and Mary Iames, and the other with them, that tolde this vnto the Apostles. And theyr wordes semed vnto them, as though they had bene but fables, and they beleued them not. But Peter arose, and ranne to the sepulcre, and stouped in, and sawe the lynnyn clothes layed by them selves, and departed. And he wondred within himself at that which had happened.

And beholde, two of them wente that same daye, to a towne (which was thrice score furloes from Jerusalem) whose name was called Emaus. And they talked together of all these things had happened. And it chaunced as they were thus talkinge and reasonyngge together, Iesus himself drue nye, and wente with them. But their eyes were holden, that they shulde not knowe hi. And he sayde vnto them: What maner of communicacions are these that ye haue one to another as ye walke, and are sad? Then answered the one, whose name was Cleophas, and sayde vnto him: Art thou onely a straunger at Jerusalem, not knowinge what is come to passe there in these dayes? And he sayde vnto the: What? They sayde vnto him: That of Iesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet, mightie in dede and worde, before God and all people, how oure hye prestes and rulers deluyered him to the condemnacion of death, and crucificted him. But we hoped that he shulde have deluynered Israel. And besides all this, todaye is the thirde daye that this was done. Yee certayne wemen also of oure company which were early at the Sepulcre.
and founde not his body, came and tolde, that they had sene a visiō of angels, which sayde he was alyue. And certayne of them that were with vs, wente vnto the sepulcre, and founde it enen so as f wemē sayde, but hi founde they not.

And he sayde vnto the: O ye fooles and slowe of hert to beleue all that the prophetes haue spoke? * Ought not Christ to haue suffered these thinges, and to entre in to his glory? And he beganne at Moses and at all the prophetes, and expounde vnto them all the scriptures, that were spoken of him. And they drue nye vnto the towne, which they wete vnto, and he made as though he wolde haue gone farther. ∗ And they compelled him, and sayde: Abyde with vs, for it draweth towards night, and the daye is farre passed.
And he wente in to tary with thē. And it came to passe whe he sat at the table with thē, he tooke the bred, gave thankes, brake it, and gane it them. Then were their eyes opened, and they knewe him. And he vanyished out of their sight. And they sayde, betwene thē selues: Dyd not oure hert burne with in vs, whe he talked with vs by the waye, whyle he opened the scriptures vnto vs?
And they rose vp the same houre, turned agayne to Ierusalem, and founde f eleue gathered together, and them that were with them, which sayde: The LORDE is rysen
of a trueh, and hath appeared vnto Symon.
And they tolde thē what had happened by f
waye, and how they knewe him in breakyng of the bred.

“But whyle they were talkyng therof, Jesus himself stode in the myddes amonc thē, and sayde: Peace be with you. But they were abashed and afrayed, supposinge that they had sene a sprete. And he saide vnto thē:
Why are ye abashed? a wherfore ryse there soch thoughtes in youre hertes? Beholde my hādes a my fete, if is enen I my self. Handle me, and se, for a sprete hath not flesh and bones, as ye se me haue. And whan he had thys spokē, he shewē thē his hōdes and his fete. But whyle they yet beleued not for ioye and wondred, he sayde vnto them: ∗ Haue ye eye any thinge here to eate? And they set before him a pece of a broyled fish, and an hony combe. And he toke it, and aete it before thē.

And he sayde vnto them: ∗ These are the wordes, which I spake vnto you, whyle I was yet with you. For it must all be fulfilled that was wrytten of me in the lawe of Moses,
in the prophetes, a in the Psalmes. Thē opened he their vnderstandinge, that they might vnderstondē the scriptures, and sayde vnto them: ∗ Thus is it wrytē, and thus it behoued Christ to suffre, a the thirde daye to ryse agayne fro the deed, and to let repentaunce and remyssion of synnes be preached in his name amōge all nacions,‖ and to be gynne at Ierusalem. As for all these thinges, ye are wyntenesses of thē. And beholde, † I wil sende vpon you the † promes of my father:
but ye shal tary in the cīte of Ierusalem, tyll
ye be endewed with power from aboue.

But he led them out vnto Bethany, and lift vp his handes, and blessed them. And it came to passe whē he blessed them, he departed from them, and was caried vp in to heauen. And they worshipped him, and turned agayne to Ierusalem with great joyye and were contynually in f tēple, geuye prayse and thankes vnto God. Amen.

Chap. I.—The euerlastinge byrth of the sonne of God, and how he became man. The testimony of Iohn and of his baptyme. The callinge of Andrew, Peter, Philip and Nathanael.

Chap. II.—Christ turneth the water vnto wyne at the marrying in Cana, and dryneth the mar-chauntes out of the temple.

Chap. III.—The swete talkinge of Christ with Nicodemus. The doctrine of baptyme of Ihoh, and what wytnesse he beareth of Christ.

Chap. IV.—The lonyng communication of Christ with the woman of Samaria by the welles syde. How he commeth in to Galile, and healeth the rulers sonne.

Chap. V.—He healeth the man that was sicke eight and thirtie yeare. The lewes accuse him as a breaker of the Sabbath: he answereth for him self, and reprooveth them.

Chap. VI.—Jesus fedeth fyue thousande men with fyue barlye Loanes, departeth awaye, that they shulde not make him kyng, goeth vp the see, and reprooveth the fleshly hearers of his worde. The carnall are offended at hi, and forsake him.

Chap. VII.—Jesus commeth to Ierusalé at the feast, teacmeth the lewes and reprooveth the: The pharisys the hye prestes hearinge that the people begynne to fauour Christ and to beleue in him, sende out officers to take hi. There are dynerse opinions of him amouge the people. The pharisys rebuke the officers because they have not taken hym, and chye with Nicodemus for takinge his parte.

Chap. VIII.—A woman is taken in aduoutrye: Christ deleyuereth her. The fredome of soch as folowe Christ, whom they accuse to hau the deuel within him, and go aboute to stone him.

Chap. IX.—Christ maketh the man to se that was borne blynde, where thorow he getteth him self more displeasure amongethe lewes and Pharises.

Chap. X.—Christ is the true shepherde, and the dore of the shepe. Some saye: Christ hath the deuell, and is mad, some saye: he speaketh not the wordes of one that hath the deuell. Because he telleth the trueth, the lewes take vp stones to cast at him, call his preachinge blasphemy, and go aboute to take him.

Chap. XI.—Christ rayseth Lazarus frö death. The hye prestes the pharrises gather a coun-cell, and cast their heads together agaynst him, thersore he getteth him out of the waye.

Chap. XII.—Mary anoynteth Christes fete, Iudas murmur eth, Christ excuseth her, ryedeth in to Ierusalem, and is lonyngly receaued of the thankfull, but vitrvely despysed by the vngodly.

Chap. XIII.—Christ waseth the discipels fete, telleth them of Iudas the traytour, and commaundeth the earnestly to loue one another.

Chap. XIII.—He armeth his discipels with consolacion agaynst trouble for to come, taketh frö the heuyynes that they had because of his departinge, and promiseth them the holy goost, the spirite of comforte.

Chap. XV.—The true vyne, the husbandman the branches. A doctrine of loue, and a swepte comforte agaynst persecution.

Chap. XVI.—Cosolacion agaynst trouble. Prayers are herde thorow Christ.

Chap. XVII.—The most hartely the lonyng prayer of Christ vnto his father, for all soch as receaued the trueth, and be his awne.

Chap. XXI.—He appareareth to his discipels agayne by the see of Tyberias, and commaundeth peter earnestly to fede his shepe.
The gospell of S. Iohn.

The first Chapter.

In the begynnynge was the worde, and the worde was with God, and God was the worde. The same was in the begynnynge with God. All thinges were made by the same, and without the same was made nothinge that was made. In him was the life, and the life was the light of men: and the light shyneth in the darknesse, and the darknesse comprehended it not.

There was sent from God a man, whose name was Iohn. The same came for a witnesse, to beare wytnesse of the light, that thorow him they all might beleue. He was not that light, but that he might beare witnessse of the light. That was the true light, which lighteth all men, that come in to this world. He was in the world, and the worlde was made by him, and the worlde knewe him not. He came in to his awne, and his awne receaued him not. But as many as receaued him, unto them gaue he power to be the children of God: euene soch as beleue in his name. Which are not borne of bloude, ner of the wyl of the flesh, ner of the wyl of man, but of God.

And the worde became flesh, and dwelt amonge vs: and we sawe his glory, a glory as of the onely begotté sonne of the father, full of grace and trueth.

Iohn bare wytnesse of him, cryed, and sayde: It was this, of whom I spake: After me shal he come, that was before me, For he was or euer I: and of his fulnesse haue all we receaued grace for grace. For the lawe was geuen by Moses, grace and trueth came by Jesus Christ. No man hath sene God at eny tyme. The onely begotté sonne which is in the bosome of the father, he hath declared the same vnto vs.

And this is the recorde of Iohn, whan the Iewes sent prestes and Leuites fro Ierusalem, to axe him: Who art thou? And he confessed and denyed not. And he confessed, and sayde: I am not Christ. And they axed him: What the? Art thou Elias? He sayde: I am not. Art thou the Prophet? And he answered: No. Then sayde they vnto him: What art thou the? we maye geue answere vnto the that sent vs? What sayest thou of thy self? He sayde: I am a voyce of a cryer in the wyldernes. Make straighte waye of the LORDE. As a prophet Esay sayde.

And they that were sent, were of the Pharises. And they axed him, sayde vnto him: Why baptyst thou then, yf thou be not Christ, ner Elias, ner a prophet? Iohn answered them, and sayde: I baptys with water, but there is one come in amonge you, whom ye knowe not. It is he that cometh after me, which was before me: whose shue lachet I am not worthy to vnlowse. This was done at Bethabara beyonde Iordane, where Iohn dyd baptysye.

The nexte daye after, Iohn sawe Jesus commynge vnto him, and sayde: Beholde the Lamb of God, which taketh awaye the synne of the worlde. This is he, of whom I sayde vnto you: After me commeth a man, which was before me. For he was or euer I, and I knewe him not: but that he shulde be declared in Israel, therefor am I come to baptse with water.

And Ion bare recorde, saye: "I sawe the sprete descende from heauen like a doue, and abode vp on him, saye: I knewe him not. But he that sent me to baptse with water, ye same sayde vnto me: Upon whom thou shalt se the sprete descende and tary stylle on him, the same is he, that baptyseth with the holy goost. And I sawe it, and bare recorde, that this is the sonne of God."

The nexte daye after, Ion stode agayne, and two of his discipes. And wha he sawe Jesus walkynge, he sayde: Beholde the *laber of God. And two of his discipes herde him speake, and followed him. And Jesus turned him aboute, and sawe them folowinge, and sayde vnto the: What seeke ye? They sayde vnto him: Rabbi, (which is to saye by interpretacion, Master.) Where art thou at lodginge? He sayde vnto them: Come and se it. They came and sawe it, abode with him the same daye. It was aboute the tenth houre.

One of the two, which herde Ion speake, and followed Iesu, was Andrew the brother of Symon Peter: the same founde first his brother Symon, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde Messias (which is by interpretacion, *Anointed) and brought him to Iesus. Whan Iesus behelde him, he sayde: Thou art Symon the sonne of Jonas, thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretacion, a stone.

The nexte daye after, wolde Iesus go agayne in to Galile, and founde Philippe, and sayde vnto him: Follow me. Philippe was of Bethsaida the cite of Andrew and Peter. Philippe founde Nathanael, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde him of whome Moses in the lawe, and ye prophets haue wrytten, euen Iesus the sonne of Ioseph of Nazareth. And Nathanaell sayde vnto hym: What good can come out of Nazareth? Philippe sayde vnto him: Come, and se.

Iesus sawe Nathanael comynghe to him, and sayde of him: Beholde, a righte Israelite, in whom is no gyle. Nathanael sayde vnto him: From whence knowest thou me? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto hym: Before *Philippe called the, whan thou wast vnder the fygge tre, I sawe the. Nathanaell answered, and sayde vnto hym: Rabbi, thou art ye sonne of God, thou art ye kyng of Israel. Iesus answered, saye vnto him: Because I sayde vnto the, that I sawe the vnder the fygge tre, thou beleuest: thou shalt se yet greater things the these. And he sayde vnto him: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Fró this tyme forth shal ye se the heauen open, and the angels of God goinge vp and downe over the sonne of man.

The ij. Chapter.

AND vpone the thirde daye there was a marriage at Cana in Galile, and the mother of Iesus was there. Iesus also and his discipes was called vnto ye mariage. And whan the wyne fayled, the mother of Iesus sayde vnto hym: They haue no wyne. Iesus sayde vnto her: WOman, what haue I to do with the? Myne houre is not yet come. His mother sayde vnto ye mynisters: Whatsoeuer he sayseth vnto you, do it. There were set there sixe water pottes of stone, after ye maner of the purifinge of ye leues, euery one coyteninge two or thre measures.

Iesus sayde vnto the: Fyll the water pottes with water. And they fyllen the vp to ye brymme. And he sayde vnto the: Drawe out now, and brynge vnto the Master of the feast. And they bare it. Wha the master of ye feast had taisted ye wyne which had bene water, and knewe not whenc it came (but the mynisters that drue ye water, knewe it) the Master of the feast called the brydegrome, and sayde vnto hym: Every man at the first geneth the good wyne; ye whan they are dronken, the that which is worse. But thou hast kepe backe the good wyne vntil now.

This is the first token that Iesus dyd at Cana in Galile, and shewed his glory, and his discipes beleued on him. Afterwarde wenthe he downe to Capernaum, he, his mother, his brethren, and his discipes, and taried not longe there.

And the Iewes Easter was at hande. And Iesus wete vp to Jerusalem, and founde sittinge in the temple, those that solde oxen, shepe, and doues, and chaungers of money.
And he made a scourge of small cords, and droue them all out of the temple with the shepe and oxen, and poured out the chaungers money, and ouerthrew the tables; and sayde vnto them that solde the doues: Have these things hice, and make not my fathers house an house of marchaundysse. His disciples remembred it, that is wrytten: *The zele of thine house hath euene eaten me.

Then answered the Iewes, and sayde vnto him: *What token shewest thou vnto vs, that thou mayest do these things? Jesus answered, *sayde vnto the: *Breake downe this temple, and in thre dayes wil I set it vp agayne. Then sayde the Iewes: *Sixe and fourtye yeare was this temple abuyldinge, and wilt thou set it vp in thre dayes? But he spake of *tÃ©pÅelf of his body. Now whÅlf he was rysen agayne from the dead, his disciples remembred that he thus sayde, and they beleued the scripture, and the words which Iesus spake.

WhÅlf he was at Ierusalam at Easter in *feast, many beleued on his name, when they saw *tokes *he dyd. But Iesus commytted not himself vnto the, for he knewe the all, *neded not *eny mÅ shulde testifye of man, *for he knewe well what was in man.

The iij. Chapter.

There was a man of the Pharises, named Nicodemus, a ruler amonge the Iewes. The same came vnto Iesus by night, *sayde vnto hi: Master, we knowe *thy thou art come a teacher fro God: for *hno mÅ can do these tokes *thy thou doest, excepte God be with him. Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: Verely verely I saye vnto the: Excepte a man be borne a new, he can not se the kyngdome of God. Nicodemus sayde vnto him: How can a man be borne, when he is olde? Can he entre in to his mothers wombe, and be borne agayne? Iesus answered: Verely verely I saye vnto the: Excepte a mÅ be borne of water and of the spryte, he can not come in to *kyngdome of God.

*That which is borne of flesh, is flesh: *that which is borne of the spryte, is spryte. Maruell not, that I sayde vnto *thy: Ye must be borne of new. The wynde bloweth where he wyl, and thou hearest his sondre: *but thou canst not tell whÅc he commeth, and whither he goeth. So is euery one, that is borne of the spryte.

Nicodemus answered, and sayde vnto him: How maye these be? Iesus answered, *sayde vnto hi: Art thou a Master in Israel, *knowest not these? Verely I saye vnto *thy: We speake that we knowe, and testifie that we haue sene, and ye receaune not oure wyt-nesse. Yf ye beleue not, when I tell you of earthly thinges, how shulde ye beleue, whÅlf I speake vnto you of heauenly thinges?

*And noman ascendeth vp in to heauen, but he that is come downe from heauæ, (namely) the sonne of man which is in heauen. *And like as Moses lift vp the serpent in the wyldernes, euene so must the sonne of man be lift vp, that who so euere beleueth in him, shulde not perish, but haue euerverlasting life.

For God so loued the worlde, that he gaue his onely sonne, that who so euere beleueth in him, shulde not perish, but haue euerverlasting life.* For God sent not his sonne in to *wyrdle to condemne the worlde, but that the worlde might be saued by him. He that beleueth on him, shal not be condemned. But he that beleueth not, is condemned alreadie: because he beleueth not on the name of the onely sonne of God. But this is *wydempnac: *that the light is come in to the worlde, and men loued the darknesse more the *light: for their worke were euell. Whoso- euer doth euell, hateth the light, and cometh not to the light, that his dedes shulde not be reproued. But he that doth the trueth, commeth to the light, that his worke maye be knowe: for they are done in God.

Afterwarde came Iesus *a his discipules in to the lode of Iewry, and had his byenghe there with them, and *baptysed. *Ihon baptysed also in Enon besyde Salem: for there was moch water there. And they came thither, and were baptysed: for Ihon was not yet put in preson.

Then arose there a question amonge the discipules of Ihon with the Iewes about the purifienge, and they came vnto Ihon, and sayde vnto him: Master, he *hi was with the beyonde Iordan, of whom thou barest wyt-nesse, beholde, he baptyseth, and euery man cómeth vnto him. Ihon answered and sayde:
A man can receaue nothinke, excepte it be geuen him from heaué. Ye youre selues are my witnesses, how *that I sayde, I am not Christ, but am sent before him. He that hath the bryde, is the brydegrome: but the frende of the brydegrome stondeth, and herkeneth vnto him, and reioyseth greatly ouer the voyce of the brydegrome, this same joye of myne is now fulfilled. He must increase, but I must decreace.

He that commeth from an hye, is aboue
all. He that is of the earth, is earthly, and speaketh of the earth. He that commeth frô heauen, is aboue all, and testifith what he hath sene & herde, and no man receaue his wytnesse. But he that receaueith it, hath set to his seale, +that God is true. For he whô God hath sent, speaketh ¥ wordes of God:
+for God geueu not the sprete (vnto him) by measure. "The father loueth the sonne,
and geueu him all thinges in to his hande.
§He that beleueth on the sonne, hath everlasting life: he that beleueth not the sonne, shal not se the life, but ¥ wrath of God
abydeth vpon him.

The iiiij. Chapter.

NOW whan Jesus had knowlege, ¥ it was come to the eares of the Pharises, that Jesus made and baptysed mo disciples thê Ihon (howbeit Jesus himself baptysed not,
but his disciples)  he left the londe of Iewry, and departed agayne in to Galile. But he must nede go thowre Samaria. Then came he in to a cite of Samaria, called Sichar, nye vynto ¥ pecce of lôde, ¥ ¥ Iacob gaue vnto Ioseph his sonne. And there was Iacobs well.
Now whan Jesus was weere of his journey, he satt hi downe so vpô the well. And it was aboute the sixte houre. Then came there a woman of Samaria to drawe water. Jesus sayde vnto her: Gene me drynke. (For his disciples were gone their waye in to ¥ cite, to bye meate.) So the woman of Samaria sayde vnto him: How is it that thou axest drynke of me, seynge thou art a Iewe, and I a woman of Samaria? For the Iewes medle not with the Samaritans.

Ijesus answered, and sayde vnto her: ¥f thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that sayeth vnto the, geue me drynke, thou woldest axe of him, and he wolde geue the,
the water of life. The woman sayde vnto him: Syr, thou hast nothinge to drawe withall,
and the well is depe, from whence hast thou then that water of life? Art thou greater then oure father Iacob, which gaue vs this well? And he himself dranke therof, and his children, and his catell. Jesus answered, and sayde vnto her: Who so euer drynke of this water, shal thyrst agayne: But whosoever
shal drynke of the water that I shal geue him, shal neuer be more a thyrst: ¥ but the water that I shal geue him, shalbe in him a well
of water, which spryngeth vp in to euerlastinge life.

The woman sayde vnto him: ¥ Syr, geue me that same water, that I thyrst not, nether nde to come hither to drawe. Jesus sayde vnto her: Go, call thy huszbande, and come hither. The woman answered, and sayde vnto him: I haue no huszbande.

Jesus sayde vnto her: Thou hast sayde well, I haue no huszbande: for thou hast had fyue huszbande, and he whom thou hast now, is not thine huszbande: there saydest thou right. The womâ sayde vnto him: Syr, I se, that thou art a prophet. Oure fathers worshipped vpon this mountayne, and ¥ye saye, that at Jerusalem is the place, where men ought to worshippe. Jesus sayde vnto her: Woman, beleue me, the tymecometh, that ye shal nether vpon this mountayne ner
at Jerusalem worshippe the father. Ye wote not what ye worshippe, but we knowe what we worshippe, for ¥ Saluacion commeth of the Iewes. But the tymecometh, and is now allready, that the true worshippers shal wor-shipe the father in ¥ sprete and in the trueth:
For the father wil haue soch so to worshippe
him. God is a sprete, and they that worshippe him, must worshippe in sprete and in the trueth.

The womâ sayde vnto him: I wote that Messias shal come, which is called Christ.
Whan he commeth, he shal tell vs all things.

Iesus sayde vnto her: I that speake vnto the, am he. And in the meane season came his disciples, and they marueyled that he talked with the woman. Yet sayde no man: What axeest thou, or what talkest thou with her? Then the woman let hir pot stonde, and wente in to the cite, and sayde vnto the people: Come, se a man, which hath tolde me all that euer I dyd, Is not he Christ? Then wente they out of the cite, and came vnto him: In the meane whyle his disciples prayed him, and sayde: Master, eate. But he sayde vnto them: I haue meate to eate, that ye knowe not of. Then sayde the disciples amonge them selues: Hath any man brought him meate? Iesus sayde vnto the: My meate is this, that I do the wyll of him that sent me, and to fynish his worke. Saye not ye youre selues: There are yet foure monethes, and then commeth the fowrest? Beholde, I saye vnto you: lift vp youre eyes, and loke vpon the selde, *for it is whyle allreadie vnto the haruest.

And he that reapeth, receaueth rewarde, and gathereth frute to everlastinge life, that both he that soweth and he that reapeth, maye reioyse together. For herin is the prouerbe true: One soweth, another reapeth. I haue sent you to reap that, wheroin ye bestowed no laboure. Other haue labourd, and ye are come in to their labours.

Many Samaritans of the same cite beleued on him, for the sayenge of the woman, which testified: He hath tolde me all that euer I dyd. Now when the Samaritans came to him, they besought him, that he wolde tary with them. And he abode there two dayes, and many mo beleued because of his worde, and sayde vnto the woman: We beleue now hence forth, not because of thy sayenge, *we haue herde hymourselves, and knowe, that this of a trueth is Christ the Saniuore of the worlde.

After two dayes he departed thence, and wente in to Galile. *For Iesus himself testifié, that a prophet is nothynge set by at home. Now wha he came in to Galile, the Galileas receaued him, which had sene all that he dyd at Jerusalem in the feast: for they also were come thither in the feast. And Iesus came agayne vnto Cana in Galile,§ where he turned the water vnto wyne.

And there was a certayne ruler, whose some laye sicke at Capernaum. This herde that Iesus came out of Iewry in to Galile, and wente vnto him, and besought him, that he wolde come downe, and helpe his sonne, for he laye deed sicke. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Excepte ye se tokens and wonders, ye beleue not. The ruler sayde vnto him: Come downe Syr, or euer my childe dye. Iesus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, thy sonne lyueth. The man beleued the worde, that Iesus sayde vnto him, and wente his waye. And as he was goinge downe, his seruauntes mett him, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy childe lyueth. Then enqyred he of them the houre, wherein he beganne to amende. And they sayde vnto him: Yesterdaie aboute the seueth houre the feuere left him. Then the father perceaued, that it was aboute the same houre, wherein Iesus sayde vnto him: Thy sonne lyueth,¶ And he beleued with his whole house. This is now the seconde token that Iesus dyd, whan he came from Iewry in to Galile.

The v. Chapter.

Afterwarde, there was a feast of the Iewes, and Iesus went vp to Ierusalem. There is at Ierusalem by the slaughter house a pole, which in Hebre is called Bethesda, § hath fyue porches, wherein laye many sicke, blynde, lame, wythred, which wayted, whan the water shulde moue. For the angell wente downe at his tyme in to the pole, and stered the water. Who so euer now wente downe first, after that the water was stered, ¶the same was made whole, what soever disease he had. And there was a man, which had lyen sicke eight and thirtie yeares. Whan Iesus sawe him lye, ² knewe that he had lyen so longe, he saide vnto him: Wilt thou be made whole? The sicke answered him: Syr, I haue no man, whan the water is moued, to put me in to the pole. And whan I come, another steppeth downe in before me.

Iesus sayde vnto him: Arynse, take vp thy bed, and go thy waye. And immediately the man was made whole,* and toke vp his bed and wente his waye. * But vpon the same daye it was the Sabbath. Then sayde the Iewes vnto him that was made whole: To daye is ý Sabbath, it is not laulfull for the to carry the bed. He answered them: He that made me whole, sayde vnto me: Take vp thy bed, and go thy waye. Then axed they him: What man is that, which sayde vnto the: Take vp thy bed, and go thy waye? But he that was healed, wyse not who he was: for Iesus † had gotte him self awaye, because there was much people.

Afterwarte founde Iesus him in the tēple, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou art made whole; § synne nomore, lest a worse thing happento the. The mā departed, and tolde the Iewes, that it was Iesus, which had made hī whole. Theorefore dyd ý Iewes persecute Iesus, and sought to slaye him, because he had done this vpǒ ý Sabbath.

But Iesus answered them: §My father worketh hither to, and I worke also. Theorefore sought the Iewes the more to slaye hī: because he brake not onely ý Sabbath, but saide also, that God was his father, and made him self equall with God. The answered Iesus, and sayde vnto them: Verely verely I saye vnto you: ¶The sonne can do nothinge of himself, but that he sethy the father do. For what soever he doeth, that doeth ý sonne also. The father loueth the sonne, ζ sheweth him all that he doth, and wyll shewe him yet greater worokes, so that ye shal marueyle. For as the father rayseth vp the deed, and maketh them lyue, euē so the sonne also maketh luyynge whom he wyll. For the father judgeth no man, but ζ hath geuen all iudgmet vnto the sonne, that they all might honour the sonne, even as they honour ý father. Who so honoureth not the sonne, the same honoureth not the father which hath sent him.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: Who so heareth my worde, ‡and belueneth him that sent me, hath euerlastinge life, and cōmeth not in to dannacion, but is passed thorow from death vnto lyue.

Maruayle not ye at this: §§ for ý houre cōmeth, in ý which all that are in ý graues, shal heare his voyce, and shal go forth, they that haue done good, vnto the resurrection of life: but they that haue done euell, vnto the resurrection of dannacion.

I can do nothinge of my self. As I heare, so I judge: a my iudgmet is iust. For I seke not myne owne wyll, but the wyll of the father which hath sent me. ¶¶¶¶¶ I hauent wytnesse of my self, my wytnes is not true. There is another that beareth wytnesse of me, and I am sure, that the wytnes which he beareth of me, is true.

†† Ye sent vnto Ihon, and he bare wytnes of the trueth. As for me, I take no recorde of mā, but these things I seye, that ye might be saued. He was a burnynge and shyninge light, but ye wolde haue reioysed a little while in his light. Neuerthelesse I haue a greater wytnesse then the wytnesse of Ihon. For the workes which the father hath geue me to fynish, the same workes which I do, beare wytnesse of me, that the father hath sent me. * And ý father him self which hath sent me, beareth wytnesse of me. Ye haue nether herde his voyce at eny tyme, nor sen his shappe: and his worde haue ye not abydinge in you, for ye beleue not him, whom ye hauent sent.

‡‡‡‡‡ Searche the scripture, for ye thinke ye haue euerlastinge life therin: and the same is it that testifeyth of me, and ye wil not come vnto me, that ye might haue lyfe. ‡ I receaue not praye of men. But I knowe you, that ye hauent not the loue of God in you. I am come in my fathers name, and ye receaue me not.++++ Yf another shal come in his awne name, him wil ye receaue. How can ye beleue which receaue praye one of another, and seke not the praye, that is of God onely?

Ye shall not thinke that I wyll accuse you before ý father: there is one ý accuseth

The gospel of S. John.

AFTER this went Jesus over the sea unto the cite Tiberias in Galilee. And much people followed him, because they saw the tokens that he dyd vpon the which were diseased. But Jesus went vp in to a mountayne, and there he sat with his disciples. And Easter feast of the Iewes was nye. Then Jesus lift vp his eyes, and sawe there came mch people vnto him, and he sayde vnto Philippe: Whence shal we bye bred, y these maye eate? But this he sayde to proue him, for he himself knewe, what he wolde do.

Philippe answered him: Two hundred peny worth of bred is not ynowgh amonse the, y every one maye take a little. Thé sayde vnto his one of his disciples, Andrew y brother of Symé Peter: There is a lad here, y hath fyue barlye loaues, and two fishes, but what is that amôge so many? Jesus sayde: Make the people syt downe. There was some grasse in the place. Then they sat the downe, aboute a fyue thousande men. Jesus toke the loaues, thanked, and gave them to the disciples: the disciples (gaye) to them that were set downe. Likewise also of the fishes as much as they wolde.

When they were fylled, he sayde vnto his disciples: Gather vp the broken meate that remaineth, that nothynge be lost. Thé they gathered, and fylled twelue baskettes with the brokè meate, that remainèd of the fyue barlye loaues, vnto them which had eaten. Now when the men saved the token y Jesus dyd, they saide: 'This is of a truch the Prophet, y shulde come into the worlde. When Jesus now perceane that they wolde come, and take him vp, to make him kyunge, he gat him awaye agayne in to a mountayne himselfe alone.

At euene wente his disciples downe to y see, and entered in to the shippe, and came to the other syde of y see vnto Capernaü. And it was dereke allready. And Jesus was not come to thè. And y see arose thorow a greate wynde. Now when they had rowed vp a fyue and twelie or thirtie furlonges, they sawe Jesus goynge vpoun the see, and came nye to the shippe. And they were atraied. But he sayde vnto them: It is I, be not atraied. Then wolde they have receaued him in to the shippe. And immediatly y shippe was at the londe whither they wente.

The nexte daye after, the people which stode on the other syde of the see, sawe that there was none other shippe there save that one, wherinto his disciples were entred: and that Jesus wète not in with his disciples in to the shippe, but y his disciples were gone awaie alone. Howbeit there came other shippes from Tiberias, nye vnto y place where they had eate the bred, after y the LORDE had genue thanks. Now when the people sawe that Jesus was not there, nether his disciples, they toke shippe also, and came to Capernaum, and sought Iesus.

And when they founde him on the other syde of the see, they sayde vnto him: Master, whan earnest thou hither? Iesus answered they, g sayde: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Ye seke me not because ye sawe y tokës, but because ye ate of the loaues, and were fylled. Laboure not for the meate which perisheth but y endureth vnto everelastinge life, which the sonne of më shal gene you: For him hath God the father sealed.

The sayde they vnto him: What shal we do, that we maye worke y workes of God? Jesus answered, and sayde vnto the: This is the worke of God, that ye beleue on him, whom he hath sent. Then sayde they vnto him: $ What token doest thou thè, that we maye se and belene y? What workest thou? Oure fathers ate Manna in the wyldernesse, as it is wryttë: 'He gane the bred fro heauen to eate. Then sayde Iesus vnto thè: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Moses gane you not bred from heauen, but my fader geueth you the true bred from heauen: For this is that bred of God, which commeth from heauen, and geueth life vnto the worlde.

The sayde they vnto him: || Syr, gene vs allwaye soch bred. But Jesus sayde vnto thè: I am y bred of life. He that kommeth vnto me, shal shal higer: || he that beleneth on me, shal neuer thyrst. But I haue sayde vnto you, y ye haue sene me, and yet ye belene not. All that my father geuceth me, cômeth vnto me: and who so cômeth vnto me, him wyl not I cast out: for I am come downe from heauë, not to do myne awne wyll, but the wyll of him that hath sent me."

This is ñ will of the father, which hath sent me, that of all that he hath geue me, I shulde lose nothynge, but shulde rayse it vp agayne at the last daye. This is the wyll of him which hath sent me, that, who soeuere sethy the sonne and beleueth on him, haue euerlastinge life, and I shall rayse him vp at the last daye.

Thë murmured the iewe ther ouer, that he sayde: I am ñ bred which is come downe from heauë, and they sayde: Is not this Iesus, Iosephs sonne, whose father and mother we knowe? How sayeth he then, I am come downe from heauë? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Murmur not amonge youre selues. No man can come vnto me, excepte the father which hath sent me, drawe him. And I shall rayse him vp at the last daye. It is wrytten in the prophetes: They shall all be taught of God. Who so euere now heareth it of the father, and lerneth it, commeth vnto me. Not that euery man hath sene the father, saue he which is of the father, the same hath sene the father.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: He that beleueth on me, hath euerlastinge life. I am that bred of life. Youre fathers ame Manna in the wyldernes, and are deede. This is that bred which commeth from heauë, that who so eateth therof, shulde not dye. I am that lyuynge bred, which came downe fro heauë: Who so eateth of this bred, shal lyue for euer. And the bred that I wil geue, is my flesh which I wil geue for ñ life of the world.

Then strewe the iewe amonge them selues, and sayde: How çâ this felowe geue vs his flesh to eate? Iesus sayde vnto thë: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Excepte ye eate ñ flesh of ñ sonne of man and drynke his bloude, ye haue no life in you. Who so eateth my flesh, and drynketh my bloude, hath euerlastinge life: and I shall rayse him vp at the last daye. For my flesh is ñ very meate, and my bloude is ñ very drynke. Who so eateth my flesh, and drynketh my bloude,* abydeth in me, and I in him. As the lyuynge father hath sent me, and I lyue for the fathers sake: Even so he that eateth me, shal lyue for my sake. This is ñ bred which is come fro heauë: Not as ouere fathers ate Manna, and are deede. He that eateth of this bred, shal lyue for euer.

These things sayde he in the synagogue, whâ he taught at Capernaum. Many now of his disciples that heard this, sayde: This is an harde sayenge, who maye abyde the hearynge of it? But when Iesus perceaued in hi self, that his disciples murmured therat he sayde vnto them: Doth this offende you? What and ñ ye shal se the sonne of man ascende vp thi ther, where he was afore? It is ñ sprete that quyckeneth, ñ flesh profiseth nothynge. The wordes that I speake, are sprete, and are life. But there are some amõge you, that beleue not. For Iesus knewe well from the begynynge, which they were that beleued not, and who shulde betraye him. And he sayde: Therfore haue I sayde vnto you: No man can come vnto me, excepte it be geuen him of my father.

From that tyme forth, many of his disciples wente backe, and walked nomore with him. Then sayde Iesus vnto the twelve: Wyll ye also goe away? Then answered Simon Petra: LORDE, Whither shal we goe? Thou hast the wordes of euerlastinge life: and we haue beleued a knowne, that thou art Christ the sonne of the lyuynge God. Iesus answered them. Haue I not chosen you twolue, and one of you is a deuell? But he spake of Iudas Symon Iscarioth: the same betrayed him afterwarde, and was one of the twolue.

The biij. Chapter.

AFTER that wente Iesus aboute in Galile, for he wolde not goe aboute in Iewry, because the iewe sought to kyll him. But the iewe feast of Tabernacles was at hande. Then sayde his brethren vnto hym: Get the hecede, and go in to Iewry, that thy disciples also maye se thy worke, that thou doest. He that sekethe to be openly knowne, doth nothynge in secrete. Yf thou doe soth things, the shewe thy self before the worlde: For his awne brethren also beleued not in him.*

Then sayde Iesus vnto them: My tyme is not yet come, but youre tyme is allwaye ready. The worlde can not hate you, but me it hateth: because I testifie of it, that the workes of it are euell. Go ye vp vnto this feast, I will not go vp yet vnto this feast, for my tyme is not yet fullyd. When he sayde this vnto them, he abode styll in Galile. But as soone as his brethren were gone vp, then wente he vp also vnto the feast, not openly, but as it were secretly. Then sought him \( \ddagger \) Iewes at \( \ddagger \) feast, and sayde: + Where is he? And there was a greate murmur of him amonge the people. Some sayde: He is good. But other sayde: No, he doth not disceauie the people. \( \ddagger \) Howbeit no man spake frely of him, for feare of the Iewes. But in the myddles of the feast wote Iesus vp in to the temple, and taught. And the Iewes maruelyd and sayde: How can he \( \ddagger \) scripture, seye he hath not lerned it? Iesus answered them, and sayde: My doctrine is not muye, but his that hath sent me. Yf eny man wyl do his will, he shal knowe, whether this doctrine be of God, or whether I speake of my self. He that speaketh of himself, seketh his owne praye: but he that seketh the praye of him that sent him, the same is true, \( \ddagger \) there is no vnrighteousnes in him. \( \ddagger \) Hath not Moses geuen you the lawe, and none of you kepeth the lawe? Why go ye aboute to kyll me? The people answered, and sayde: Thou hast the deuell, who goeth aboute to kyll the? Iesus answered and sayde: + One worke haue I done, and ye all maruayle. Moses gae you the circumcision, (not because it commeth of Moses, but of \( \ddagger \) $ fathers;) Yet do ye circumcision a man vpon the Sabbath. \( \ddagger \) A man receauie circumcision vpon the Sabbath, that the lawe of Moses shulde not be broken, disdayne ye then at me, because I haue made a mæ euerly whyte whole on the Sabbath? \( \ddagger \) Judge not after the outer apperance, but judge righteous judgment.

Then sayde some of them of Jerusalem: Is not this he, whô goe about to kyll? And beholde, he speaketh boldely, and they saye nothinge to him. Do oure rulers knowe in dede, that he is very Christ? Howbeit we knowe, whence this is. But wha Christ commeth, no man shal knowe whence he is.

Then cryed Iesus in the temple as he taught, and sayde: Yee ye knowe me, and whence I am ye knowe,\( \ddagger \) and of my self am I not come, but he \( \ddagger \) sent me, is true, whom ye knowe not. But I knowe him, for I am of him, and he hath sent me. Then sought they to take him,\( \ddagger \) but no man layed handes vpon him, for his houre was not yet come. But many of the people beleuued on him, and sayde: When Christ commeth, shall he do no tokens, then this doth?

And it came to the Pharises eares,\( \ddagger D \) that \( \ddagger \) people murmured soch things of him. And the Pharises and hye prestes sent out seruanutes, to take him. Then sayde Iesus vnto them: I am yet a little whyle with you and then go I vnto him that hath sent me. Ye shal seke me, \( \ddagger \) not fynde me;\( \ddagger \) and where I am, thither can ye not come. Then sayde the Iewes amonge them selues: Whyther wil he go, that we shal not fynde him? \( \ddagger \) Wyl he go amõge the Grekes that are scarad abrode, and teach the Grekes? What maner of sayenge is this, that he sayeth: ye shal seke me, and not fynde me: and where I am, thither can not ye come?

But in the last daye which was \( \ddagger \) most solempne daye of the feast, Iesus stode vp, cried, and sayde: \( \ddagger \) Who so thyristeth, let him come vnto me, and drylke. He that beleueth on me, as the scripture sayeth, out of his body shal flowe ryuers of the water of life. (But this spake he of the \( \ddagger \) sprete, which they that beleue on him, shulde receauie. For the holy goost was not yet there, because Iesus was not yet glorified.) Many of the people now whan they herde this sayenge, sayde: This is a very prophet.\( \ddagger \) Other sayde: \( \ddagger \) He is Christ. But some sayde: Shal Christ come out of Galile? Sayeth not the scripture,\( \ddagger \) that Christ shal come of the seed of David, and out of the towne of \( \ddagger \) $$ Bethlehem, where David was? Thus was there discension amonge the people for his sake. Some of them wold haue taken him, but no man layed handes on him.

The seruanutes came to the hye prestes and pharises, and they sayde vnto them: **

The viij. Chapter.

I

ESUS vnto mount Oliuete, 9 and earlie in the mormyng he came agayne in to the temple, and all the people came vnto
him. And he sat downe, and taught them.
And 7 scrybes and Pharises brought vnto him
a woman taken in aduotrye, and set her there openly, and sayde vnto him: Master, this woman was taken in aduotrye, euë as the dede was adoynge. 4 Moses in the lawe commaned vs to stone soch. What sayest thou? This they sayde, to tempte him, that they might haue wherof to accuse him. But Jesus stouped downe, and wrote with his fynger vp o the grounde. Now whyle they contynued axynnge him, he lift him self vp,
and sayde vnto them: He thas is amonge
you without synne, let him cast the first stone at her. And he stouped downe agayme, and wrote vpon the grounde. But when they herde that, they wente out, one after another:
the eldest first, and left Jesus alone, and the woman stondinge before him. Jesus lift himself vp, and when he sawe woman but the woman, he sayde vnto her: Woman, where are thine accusers? Hath noman condenmped the? She sayde: LORDE, no man. Jesus sayde: Nether do I cõdeempe the, 4 Go thy wayne, and synne nomore.

Then spake Jesus agayne vnto them, and sayde: I am the light of the worlde. * He that foloweth me, shal not walke in darknesse, but shal haue the light of life. Then sayde
the Pharises vnto him: Thou bearest recorde thy self, thy recorde is not true.

Jesus answered, and sayde vnto them:
Though I beare recorde of my self, yet my recorde is true: for I knowe whenceso I came,
and whither I go: but ye can not tell whenceso
I come, and whither I go. Ye iudge after the flesse, I iudge no man: but yf I iudge, my iudgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the father that hath sent me. It is wryten also in youre lawe, 7 that the testimony of two men is true. I am one that beare wytynesse of my self: And the father that sent me, 7 bærer wytynesse of me also.
Then sayde they vnto him: Where is thy father? 7 Jesus answered: 6 Ye nether knowe me ner yet my father. Yf ye knewe me, ye shulde knowe my father also. These wordes spake Jesus vpon the Godschest, as he taught in the têple. And noman toke him, 4 for his houre was not yet come.

Then sayde Jesus agayne vnto them: I go my waye, and ye shal seke me, and shal dye in youre synnes: whither I go, thither can not ye come. Then sayde 6 Iewes: Wyl he kyll him self then, that he sayeth: whither I go, thither can not ye come? And he sayde vnto them: Ye are from beneth, I am from aboue:
Ye are of this worlde, I am not of this worlde.
Therfore haue I sayde vnto vou, that ye shal dye in youre synnes. 4 For yf ye beleeue not that I am he, ye shal dye in youre synnes.

Then sayde they vnto him: Who art thou then? And Jesus sayde vnto the: Euë the very same thinges that I saye vunto you. I haue many thinges to saye and to iudge of you. But he that sent me, is true: * and loke what I haue herde of him, that speake I before the worlde, Howbeit they vnderstode not, that he speake of the father.

Then sayde Jesus vnto them: When ye haue lift vp an hye the sonne of man, then shal ye knowe that I am he, and that I do nothinge of my self: 7 but as my father hath taught me, euë so I speake. And he that sent me, is with me. The father leaueth me not alone, for I do alwaie that pleaseth him.

Jesus sayde vnto the: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Or euer Abraham was, §§ I am. Then toke they vp stones, to cast at him. But Jesus hyd himself, and wente out of the temple.

The 1st Chapter.

And Jesus passed by, and sawe a man that was borne blynde. And his disciples axe him,  & sayde: Master, Who hath synned? this, or his elders, that he was borne blynde? Jesus answered: Nether hath this synned, nor his elders,  but that  yr workes of God shulde be shewed on him. I must worke the workes of him that hath sent me, whyle it is daie. The night commeth, when no man can worke. As longe as I am in the worlde, I am the light of the worlde.

Whan he had thus sayde, he spat on the grounde, and made claye of the spetle, and rubbed the claye on the eyes of the blynde, and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye to the pole of  Syloha (which is interpretated, sent) and wash the. Then wete he his waye and wasched him, and came seynge. The neigbours and they that had sene him before, that he was a begger, sayde: Is not this he that sat, and begged? Some sayde: It is he.

Other sayde: he is like him. But he himself sayde: I am even he. Then sayde they vnto him: How are thine eyes opened? He answered, and sayde: The mā that is called Jesus, made claye, and anointed myne eyes, and sayde: Go thy waye to the pole of Siloah, and washe the. I wente my waye, a washed me, and receaued my sight. Then sayde they vnto him: Where is he? He sayde: I can not tell.

Then brought they vnto the pharises, him that a little before was claye. *It was the Sabbath, when Jesus made the claye, and opene his eyes. Then agayne the Pharises also axed him, how he had receaued his sight. He sayde vnto the: He put claye vpon myne eyes, and I washed me, a now I se.

Then sayde some of the pharises: This man is not of God, seynge he kepeth not y Sabbath. *But the other sayde: How can a synfull man do so thenc tokens? And there was a stryfe amonge the. They sayde agayne vnto y claye: What sayesst thou of him, that he hath opene thine eyes? He sayde: he is a prophet.

The Iewes beleued not hī, that he was claye, and had receaued his sight, tyll they called the elders of him, that had receaued his sight, and they axed them, and sayde: Is this youre sonne, whom ye saye, was borne claye? How doth he now se then? His elders answered them, and sayde: We knowe, that this isoure sonne, and that he was borne claye. But how he now seyeth, we can not tell: or who hath opene his eyes, can we not tell. He is olde ynoough himself, axe him, let him speake for him self.

This sayde his elders, because they feared the Iewes. *For the Iewes had conspyred alread, that yf eny man dyd confess that he was Christ, the same shulde be excommunicate. Therfore sayde his elders: He is olde ynoough, axe him.

Then called they the mā agayne y was claye, and sayde vnto him: *Sene God y prayse, we knowe that this man is a syner. He answered, a sayde: Whether he be a syner or no, I can not tell: one thinge am I sure off, that I was claye, and now I se. Thē sayde they vnto him agayne: What dyd he vnto the? How opene he thine eyes?

He answered them: I tolde you right now. Herde ye it not? What, wil ye heare it agayne? Will ye also be his disciples? Then rayted they him, and sayde: Thou art his disciple. We are sure that God spake with Moses: As for this felowe, we know not whēce he is.

The man answered, and sayde vnto the: This is a maruelous thinge, that ye wote not whence he is, and he hath opene mine eyes. For we knowe that God heareth not y sinners: but yf eny mā be a fearer of God, and doth his will, him heareth he. Sens y worlde beganne was it not herde, that eny man opened the eyes of one that was borne claye. Yf this man were not of God, he could haue done nothynge. They answered, and sayde vnto him: Thou art aliogether borne in syne, and teache thou vs? And they thrust him out.

Jesus herde, y they had thrust him out, and whā he had founde him, he sayde vnto him: Beleuest thou on the sonne of God? He answered, and sayde: LORDE, who is it, y I might beleue on him? Jesus sayde vnto him: Thou hast sene him, and he it is, that talketh with the. He sayde: LORDE, I beleue. And he worshipped him.

And Jesus sayde: I am come to iudgemet in to this worlde, that they which se not, might se: and that they which se, might be borne claye. And some of the Pharises y were with him, herde this, and sayde vnto him: Are we then claye also? Jesus sayde vnto the: Yf ye were claye, ye shulde haue no syne. But now that ye saye, we se, therfore youre syne remayneth.

The r. Chapter.

VERELY verely I saye vnto you: He y a entreth not in at the dore in to the shepefolde, but clymmyth vp some other waye, the same is a thefe y a murtherer. But he that goeth in at the dore, is the shephere of the shepe: to him y porter openeth, and the shepe heare his voyce,* and he *calleth his awne shepe by name, and ledeth them out. And when he hath sent forth his awne shepe, he goeth before them, and the shepe folowe him: for they knowe his voyce. As for a straunge, they folowe him not, but flye from him: for they knowe not the voyce of strangers. This prouerbe spake Iesus vnto them, but they vnderstode not what it was, that he sayde vnto them.

Then sayde Iesus vnto them agayyne: Verely verely I saye vnto you: I am the dore of the shepe. All they that are come before me, are theues and murthurers. But the shepe harkened not vnto them. I am the dore. If euery man entred in by me, he shalbe saued, and shal goe in and out, and fynde pasture. A thefe cometh not, but for to steale, kyll, and destroye. I am come, ye they might haue life, and haue it more abundantly.

I am a goode shepheard. A goode shepheard goueth hislife for the shepe. But an hyred seruaunt, which is not the shepheard, nether the shepe are his awne, seyth: Ye wilke komenge, and leaueth the shepe, and flyeth. And the wolfe catcheth the scatereth shepe. But the hyred seruaunt flyeth, because he is an hyred seruaunte, and careth not for the shepe. I am a goode shepheard, and knowe myne, and am knowne of myne. Eue as my father knoweth me, and I knowe my father. And I geue my life for my shepe. And I haue yet other shepe, which are not of this folde, and those same must I brayne also, and they shall haue my voyce, and there shalbe one flocke and one shepheard.

Therefore doth my father loue me, because I leave my life, that I maye take it agayyne. No may taketh it fro me, but I leave it of my self. I haue power to leave it, and haue power to take it agayyne. This comandement haue I receaued of my father. Then was there discennion amoung the Iewes for these sayenge. Many of the sayde: He hath the denuell, and is madd, why haer ye him? Other sayde: These are not wordes of one that is possessed. Can the denuell also open ye eyes of the blynde?

It was the dedicacion of the temple at Jerusalem, was wynther, and Iesus walked in the Salomos porche. The came to Iewes rounde aboute hi, saide vnto hi: How lyege dost thou make vs doute? Yf thou be Christ, tell vs planely. Iesus answered the: I tolde you, ye be beleue not. The workes ye I do in my fathers name, they bare wytnesse of me. But ye beleue not, because ye are not of my shepe as I sayde vnto you. My shepe haer my voyce, I knowe the, they folowe me. And I geue thee everlasting life, they shall never perishe, and nomai shal plucke the out of my hande. My father which gaueth me, is greater the all: noman is able to plucke them out of my fathers hande. If I and the father are one. Then the Iewes toke vp stones agayyne, to stone him. Iesus answered the: Many good workes haue I shewed you fro my father, for which of the stone ye me?

The Iewes answered hi, and sayde: For the good worke sake we stone the not, but for the blasphemy: and because thou bryngest a man, a takest thy self God. Iesus answered the: Is it not wrytten in youre lawe: I haue sayde, Ye are Goddes? Yf he call them Goddes, vnto whom the worde of God came (ye the scripture can not be brok) saye ye the vnto hi, whoe father hath sanctified sent in to ye worlde: thou blasphemest God, because I sayde: I am thy sonne of God? Yf I do not thy workes of my father, beleue me not: but yf I do the, the (ye beleue not me) yet beleue ye workes, ye ye maye knowe the father is in me, I in ye father.

They wente aboute agayyne to take him, but he escaped out of their hades, and went awaye agayyne beyonde Iordane, in to ye place where Ibi had baptysed before, there he abode. And many came to hi, and sayde: Ibi dyd not tokes, but all I John spake of this man, is true. And many beleued him there.

THERE laye one sicke, named Lazarus of Bethania, in the towne of Mary and her sister Martha. It was she which anoynted the LORDE with oynment, dried his fete with his heer, whose brother Lazarus laye sicke.) The sent his sisters vnto hi, sayde: LORDE, beholde, he who thou louest lyeth sicke. Wha Iesus herde that, he sayde: This sicknesse is not vnto death, but for the praye of God, the sonne of God maye be prayed there thorow. Iesus loued Martha and her sister, Lazarus. Now wha he herde that he was sick, he abode two dayes in ý place where he was.

After warde sayde he vnto his disciples:
Let vs go agayne ý to Iewry. His disciples sayde vnto him: Master, * lately wolde the Iewes hane stoned the, ý wilt thou go thither agayne? Jesus answered: Are there not twolue houres in ý daye? He ý walketh in the daye, stembleth not, for he seyeth ý light of this worlde. But he that walketh in the night, stambleth: for there is no light in him.

B This he spake, ý after warde sayde he vnto thè: Lazarus oure frende slespeth, but I go to wake him out of slepe. Thè sayde his disciples: LORDE, ýf he slepe, he shal do well yough (Howbeyt Jesus spake of his death but they thought ý he had spoke of ý bodely slepe.) Thè sayde Jesus vnto thè planely: Lazarus is deed, ý I am glad for your sake, ý I was not there, that ye maye beleue. Neuertheles let vs go vnto hi. Thè sayde Thomas (which is called Didimus)* vnto ý disciples: Let vs go also, ý we maye dye with ýi.

Thè came Jesus, ý founde ý he had lyen in ý grave foure dayes allready. Bethanye was nye vnto Ierusale, aboute fiftene furlöges. And many of the Iewes were come to Martha ý Mary, to cōforte thè ouer their brother. Now whà Martha herde ý Jesus came, she wète to mete him. But Mary satt styl at home.

C Thè sayde Martha vnto Jesus: LORDE, ýf thou haddest bene here, *my brother had not bene deed. But neuertheles I knowe also, what soeuer thou axest of God, that God wyl gene it the. Jesus sayde vnto her: Thy brother shal ryse agayne. Martha sayde vnto hi: I knowe, ý he shal ryse agayne in the resurreccion at ý last daye. Jesus saide vnto her: I am the resurreccion ý the life.† He ý beleueth on me, shal lyue, though he were deed allready: ý whosoever lyueth and beleueth on me, shal neuer dye. Belenueth thou this? She saide vnto him: Yee LORDE, I beleue, that thou art Christ the sonne of God, whiche shuld be come in to the worlde. And whà she had sayde this, she wète hir waye, ý called Mary hir sister secretly, ý saide: The maister is come, ý calleth for the. Whanne she herde that, rose vp quckly, and came vnto him: For Jesus was not yet come in to ý towne, but was yet in the place, where Martha met him. The Iewes that were with her in the house and comforted her, when they sawe Mary, that she rose vp haistely, ý wente out, they followed her, ý saide: She goeth to the graue, to wepe there.

Now whà Mary came where Jesus was ý sawe him, she fell downe at his fete, ý sayde vnto hi: LORDE, ýf thou haddest bene here, my brother had not bene deed. Whà Jesus sawe her wepe, ý the Iewes wepinge also ý came with her, he groned in the sprete, ý was sory with in himself, ý sayde: Where hauye ye layed him? They sayde: LORDE come, ý se it. And ýs Jesus wepe. Then sayde ý Iewes: Beholde how he loued him. But some of the saide: Could not he ý which opened the eyes of ý bluye, hauye made also, that this mā shulde not hauye dyed? But Jesus groned agayne in himself, and came to the graue. It was a cawe, and a stone layed on it. Jesus saide: Take away ý stone. Martha the sister of him ý was deed, saide vnto hi: LORDE, he stynketh allready, for he hath bene deed foure dayes. Jesus sayde vnto her: Sayde I not vnto the, that ýf thou dyddest beleue, thou shuldest se the glory of God?

Then toke they awaye the stone, where the Œ deed laye. Jesus lyf vp his eyes, and sayde: Father, I thāke ý, that thou hast herde me. Howbeit I knowe, that thou hearest me allwaye: but ý because of ý people that stonde by, I sayde it, that they maye beleue, that thou hast sent me.

Whanne he had sayde this, he cryed loude: Lazarus come forth. And ý deed came forth bounde hunde ý fote with grate cloyses, ý his face bounde with a napkyn. Jesus sayde vnto thè: Lowse him, ý let him go. Many now of ý Iewes which were come vnto Mary, and sawe what Jesus dyd, beleued on him. But some of thè wente their waye vnto the pharises, and tolde thè what Jesus had done.

*Then the hye prestes, and the pharises gathered a counsell, and sayde: What do we? This man doth many tokens. Yf we let him go thus, all me wyl beleue in hym: ††thè shal the Romanyes come, and take awaye oure londe and people. But one of them, named Caiphas, which was to be of the highest priest of the same year, sayd unto them: Ye know nothing that ye consider would be any thing at all. It is better for us that one man dye for the people, then that all the people shulde perish.

This spake he not of himself, but for so much as he was of the high priest of the same year, he prophesied. For Jesus was for to dye for the people, and not for the people onely, but that he shulde gather together the children of God, which were scattered abroad: From that daye forth they took counsel, how they might put him to death. Jesus walked no more openly among the Jews, but went from thence in to a countrey by the wyldernes, to a cite called Ephraim, there had he his byenge with his disciples.

The Jews Easter was nase at hande. And there went vp many to Jerusalem out of that countrey before this Easter, to purifie them selues. Then stode they vp, and axed after Jesus, and spake amonge them selues in the temple: Wha thynke ye, that he cometh not to this feast? The high preste & pharises had gotten a commendment, that ye eny man knewe where he were, he shulde shewe it, that they might take him.

The rīj. Chapter.

Six days before Easter came Jesus vnto Bethanye, where Lazarus was, which was dead, whose Jesus raised vp from the dead. There they made him a supper, and Martha serued. But Lazarus was one of them, that sat at the table with him. Then toke Mary a pounde of ointment of pure and costly Nardus, and anointed Jesus eate, dried his eate with hir heere. The house was full of the saoure of the ointment. Then sayd one of his disciples, Iudas Iscarioth Symous sonne, which afterwarde betrayed him: Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pens, and ginen to the poore? (This sayde he not that he cared for the poore, but because he was a thefe, and had the bagge, and bare that which was gonne) Then sayd Jesus: Let her alone, this hath she kept against the daye of my burynge. For the poore have ye allwaye with you, but me haue ye not allwaye.

Then mouch people of the Iewes had knowledge, that he was there, and they came not for Jesus sake onely, but also they might see Lazarus, whom he had raised from the dead. But they high preste were advised to put Lazarus to death also: because of his sake many of the Jews were awaye and beleved on Jesus.

Vpon the nexte daye mouch people which were come vnto the feast, when they herde that Jesus came to Ierusale, they tooke branches of palmes, and were out to meete him, and cryed: Hosanna, Blessed be he, that in the name of the Lorde commeth kyng of Israel. Jesus gave a yonge Asse, and rode theron, As it is wryt: * Feare not thou daughter of Sion, behold, thy kyng cometh ryding vpó an Asses foale. Neuer theles his disciples understode not these things at the first, but when Jesus was glorified, then remembreth they that soch things were wryt of him, and that they had done soch things vnto him.

The people that was with him when he called Lazarus out of the grave and raised him from the dead, commended the acte. Therefore the people met him, because they herde, that he had done soch a miracle. But the pharises sayde amongeth them selues: Ye se, that we preuyale nothinge, beholde, all warde runneth after him.

There were certayne Grekes (amonge them that were come vp to Ierusale to worship at the feast) the same came vnto Philippe, * which was of Bethsaida out of Galile, sayd they: Syr, we wolde fayne se Jesus. Philippe came, tolde Andrew. And agayne, Philippe and Andrew tolde Jesus. Jesus answered the, and sayde: The houre is come, that the soune of man must be glorified.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: Excepte the wheatsorne fall in to the grounde, and dye, it bydeth alone: But ye if it dye, it bryngeth forth moch frute. He that loueth his life, shal lose it: and he that hateth his life in this worlde, shal kepe it vnto life everlastinge. He that wyl serue me, let him folowe me.
And where I am, there shall my servant be also: and he that serveth me, him shall my Father honour.

Now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say? Father, help me out of this hour. But therefore am I come in to this hour. Father, glorifie thy name.

Then came there a voice from heaven: I have glorified it, and wyl glorifie it agayne. Then sayde the people that stode by and herde: It thondereth. Other sayde: An angell spake vnto him. Jesus answered, and sayde: This voyce came not because of me, but for youre sakes.

Now goeth the judgment ouer the world. Now shal the prynces of this worlde be thrust out. And I whan I am lift vp from the earth, wyl drawe all vnto me. (But this he sayde, to signifie, what death he shulde dye.) Then answered him the people: We haue herde in the lawe, that Christ endureth for euere: and how sayest thou then, that the sonne of man must be lift vp? Who is this sonne of man?

"Then sayde Jesus vnto them: The light is yet a little whyle with you, walke whyle ye haue the light, that the darknesse fall not vpou you. Hee that walketh in the darknesse, woloth not whither he goeth. Beleeue ye on the light, whyle ye haue it, that ye maye be the children of light.

These thinges spake Jesus, and departed awaye, and hyd himself from them. And though he had done soch tokens before thee, yet beleued they not on him, that the sayenge of Esay the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake: LORDE, who beleueth oure preachinge? Or to whom is the arme of the LORDE opened? Therefore coudele they not beleue, for Esay saide agayne: He hath blynded their eyes, and hardened their hert, that they shulde not se with the eyes, ner vnderstande with the hert, shulde be converted, and he shulde heale them. This sayde Esay, whan he sawe his glory, and spake of him.

Neuertheles many of the chefe rulers beleued on him, but because of the Pharisses they wolde not be aknowne of it, lest they shulde be excommunicate. For they loued more the pryaze with men, then with God.

Jesus cryed and sayde: He thayt beleueth on me, beleueth not on me, but on him that sent me. And he that seyth me, seyth hym sent me. "I am come a light in to the worlde, that whosoever beleueth on me, shulde not bynde in darknesse. And he that heareth my words and beleueth not, I judge him not, for I am not come to judge the worlde, but to saue the worlde. He that refuseth me, and receauneth not my words, hath one allready that judgeth him. And the worlde that I haue spoken, that shall judge him at the last daye. For I haue not spoken of my self: but the father that sent me, hath gaven me a commandement, what I shulde do and saye. And I knowe that his commandement is life everlasting. Therefore loke what I speake, that speake I euene so, as the father hath sayde vnto me.

The riji. Chapter.

BEFORE the feast of Easter whan Jesus a knewe that his tyme was come, that he shulde departe out of this world vnto his father, as he loued his which were in the world, euene so loued he them vnto the ende. And after supper, whan the deuell had alreadie put in to the hert of Iudas Iscarioth Symons sonne, to betraye him, Jesus knowinge that the father had gaven all thinges in to his handes, that he was come from God, and wente vnto God, he rose from supper, and layed asyde his upper garments, and toke a towell, and gyrded it aboute him. Afterwaerde poured he water in to a basen, and beganne to wash the disciples fete, and dryed them with the towell. He was gyrded withall.

Then came he vnto Symon Peter, and sayde vnto him: LORDE, shal thou washe my fete? Jesus answered and sayde vnto him: What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt knowe it hereafter. Then sayde Peter vnto him: Thou shalt neuer washe my fete. Jesus answered him: Yf I wash ye not, thou shalt haue no parte with me. Symon Peter sayde vnto him: LORDE, not the fete onely, but the handes also and the heade.

Jesus sayde vnto him: He that is washe nedeth not, saue to washe fete but is cleane euery whytte. And ye are cleane but not..."
all. For he knewe his betrayer, therfore sayde he: ye are not all cleane.

Now when he had washen their fete, and taken his clothes, he sat him downe agayne, and sayde vnto thē: Wote ye what I haue done vnto you? Ye call me master and LORDE, and ye saye right therin, for so I am. Yf I then youre LORDE and master haue washen youre fete, ye ought also to wash one anothers fete. *I haue geue you an ensample, that ye shulde do as I haue done vnto you. Verely verely I saye vnto you: *the seruaunt is not greater then his lorde, nether is the Apostell greater then he that sent him. Yf ye knowe these things, *blessed are ye yf ye do them. I speake not of you all, I knowe whom I haue chosen, but that the scripture might be fulfilled: ↑He y eateth my bred, hath līf vp his hele against me. I tell it you now, before it come, that when it is come to passe, ye maye beleue, that I am he.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: He that receaueth whom so euerm I sende, receaueth me: and he that receaueth me, receaueth him that sent that me. Whan Jesus had thus sayde, he was heuy in sprete, and testifie, and sayde: ↑Verely verely I saye vnto you: One amonge you shall betray me. Then the discipes loked one vpon another, q were in doute, of whom he spake. But there was one amōge his discipes, that leaned at the table on Jesus bosome, whō Jesus loued: to him beckened Symon Peter, that he shulde axe, who it was, of whom he spake. For the same leaned vpō Jesus brest, and sayde vnto him: LORDE, who is it? Jesus answered: It is he, vnto whom I dippe the soppe q geue it. And he dippe in the soppe, and gau e vnto Iudas Iscaritho Symsonne, and after y soppe the deuell entred in to him.

Then sayde Jesus vnto him: That thou doest, do quykely. But y same wyst no man at the table, for what intent he sayde it vnto him. Some thought (for so mōch as Iudas had the bagge*) that Jesus had sayde vnto him: Bye that is necessary for vs agaynst the feast: Or that he shulde geue some thing vnto the poore. When he had receaued the soppe, he wente out immediatly, and it was night.

When he was gone forth, Jesus sayde: D Now is the some of ma glorified,* and God is glorified in him. Yf God be glorified in him, the shal god glorifie him also in hisel, q straight wyaye shal he glorifie him. Deare childe, I am yet a little whyle with you. Ye shal seke me, and (as I saye vnto y Iewes') whither I go, thither can ye not come. And now I saye vnto you, ↑A new cómandemēt geue I you, that ye loute together as I haue loute you, y euven so ye loute one another. By this shal euery man knowe that ye are my discipes,* yf ye haue loute one to another. Symon Peter sayde vnto him: LORDE, whither goest thou? Iesus answered him: Whiter I go, thou canst not folowe me now, but thou shalt folowe me herafter. Peter sayde vnto him: LORDE, why cā not I folowe the now? I wil geue my life for thy sake. Jesus answered him: Wilt thou geue thy life for my sake? Verely verely I saye vnto y. ↓ The cock shall not crowe, tyll thou haue denied me thryste.

The riiij. Chapter.

A ND he sayde vnto his discipes: Let not a youre hert be afrayed. Yf ye beleue on God, thē beleue also on me. In my fathers house are many dwellings. Yf it were not so, I wolde haue tolde you: I go to prepare the place for you. And though I go to prepare the place for you, yet wil I come agayne, and receaue you vnto my self, y ye maye be where I am. And whither I go, ye knowe, and the waye knowe ye also.

Thomas sayde vnto him: LORDE, we knowe not whither thou goest, α how can we knowe the waye? Jesus sayde vnto him: I am the waye, and the trueth, and the life. "Noman cómeth to the father but by me. Yf ye knewe me, ye knewe my father also. And frō hēc forth ye knowe hī, q haue sene him. Philippe sayde vnto him: LORDE, shewe vs the father, and it sufīceth vs. Jesus sayde vnto him: Thus longe am I with you, and hast thou not knowe me? Philippe, he that seyth me, seyth the father. And how seyst thou then: Shewe vs the father? Beleueth thou not that I am in the father," and that y father is in me? The wordes that I speake vnto you, those speake not I of my self: but the father that dwelleth in me, he doth the workes. Believe me, that I am in the father, and that I father is in me: Or els, believe me at the leest for the workes sake.

Very very I saye vnto you: He that beleueth on me, shal do the workes that I do, and shall greater then these: for I go to the father. And what soever ye axe I father in my name, that ye I do, that the father maye be prayed in the sonne. Yf ye axe any thinge in my name, I wyl do it.

Yf ye loue me, kepe my commaundementes. And I wyl praye the father, and be shal geue you another comforter, that he maye byde with you for ever: euyn sprete of truem, whom ye worlde can not receaue, for it seyth him not, nether doth it knowe him: but ye knowe him, for he abyeth with you, & shalbe in you.* I wil not leaue you comfortles, I come vnto you. It is yet a little while, the shal the worlde se me nomore, but ye shal se me: for I lyue, and ye shal lyue also. In daye shal ye knowe, that I am in the father and ye in me, and I in you. He that hath my comforter, and kepeth them, the same is he that loueth me: and he that loueth me, shalbe loued of my father: & I wyl loun him, and wyl shewe myne awne selfe vnto him. *Iudas sayde vnto hî: (not that Iscarioth) IORDE, What is the cause thē, that thou wilt shewe thy selfe vnto vs, and not vnto the worlde?

Jesus answered, and sayde vnto him: He that loueth me, wyl kepe my worde, and my father wyl loun him: and we wyl come vnto him, and wyl make oure dwellyinge with him. But he that loueth me not, kepeth not my sayenges. And the worde that ye heare, is not myne, but the fathers which hath sent me.

This haue I spoken vnto you, whyle I was with you. *But that comforter euyn holy goost, who my father shal sende in my name, he shal teache you all thinges, & bringe all to youre remembrance, what soever I haue tolde you.

Peace I leaue vnto you, my peace I geue you: I geue not vnto you, as the worlde geneth. Let not youre hert be troubled, nether let it be afrayed. Ye haue herde, that I sayde vnto you: I geue, come agayne vnto you. Yf ye loued me, ye wolde reioyse, because I saide, I go to the father: for I father is greater thē I. And now haue I tolde you, before it come, that when it is come to passe, ye maye beleue: Here after wyl not I talke moch with you. *For the pynesse of this worlde come, and hath nothinge in me. But that the worlde maye knowe that I loue ye father. And as the father hath commaundede me, so do I. Aryse, let vs go hence.

The 16. Chapter.

I AM a true vyne, and my father is an husbande man. Every braunch that bringeth not forth frute in me, shal he cuit of: and euery one that byngeth forth frute, shal he pouer, it maye bringe forth more frute. Now are ye cleane, because of the worde, that I haue spokē vnto you. Byde ye in me, and I in you. Like as ye braunch can not bynge forth frute of it selfe excepte it byde in the vyne, Euen so nether ye also, excepte ye abyde in me.

I am the vyne, ye are the braunches. He that abydeth in me, and I in him, the same byngeth forth moch frute: for without me can ye do nothinge. He that abydeth not in me, is cast out as a vyne braunch, and it wythereth, and men gather it vp, and cast it in to the fyre, and it burneth. Yf ye abyde in me, and my worde abyde in you, ye shal axe what ye wyl, it shal be done vnto you. Herin is my father praysed, that ye bynge forth moch frute, and become my disciples. Like as my father hath louned me, euē so haue I louned you. Cōtynue ye i my loun, Yf ye kepe my commaundementes, ye shall cōtynue in my loun: like as I haue kepte my fathers commaundementes, and cōtynue in his loun.

These thinges haue I spoken vnto you, that my ioye might remayne in you, and ye youre ioye might be perfecte. *This is my cōmaundement, that ye loun together, as I haue louned you. No man hath greater loun, then to set his life for his frende. Ye are my frendes, ye do that I commaunde you. Hence forth call I you not seruauntes, for a
These things have I said unto you, that ye shulde not be offended. They shall excomunicate you. The tyme commeth, that who soever putteth you to death, shall thinke that he doth servyce vnto God. And sorch thinges they do vnto you, because they have nether knowne thy father ner yet me. But these thinges have I saidye unto you, that when the tyme cometh ye maye thinke theron, that I tolde you. But these thinges have I not sayde vnto you from the begynnynge: For I was with you.

But now I go vnto him that sent me, and none of you axeth me: Whither goest thou? but because I haue sayde these thinges vnto you, yore hert is full of sorowe. Neuertheles I tell you the trueth, It is better for you if I go awaye: For if I go not awaye that comforter commeth not vnto you: but if I departe, I wil sende hi vnto you. And when he commeth, he shal rebuke the worlde of synne, and of righteousnes, of judgment. Of synne, because they beleue not on me. Of righteousness, because I go to the father, and ye shal se me nomore. Of judgmet, because the prynce of this worlde is judged alreadye.

I haue yet moch to saye vnto you, but ye can not now beare it awaye: howbeit when he (the sprote of trueth) commeth 'he shal lede you in to all trueth. For he shal not speake of himself, but what soever he shal heare, that shal he speake: and he shal shewe you, what is for to come. He shal glorifie me: for he shal receaue of myne, and shal shewe vnto you. All that the father hath, is myne. Therfore haue I sayde: he shal receaue of myne, and shewe vnto you.

After a little whyle, and ye shal not se me: and agayne after a little whyle, and ye shal se me: for I go to the father. Thé saide some of his disciples amonc them selues: What is this that he sayeth vnto vs, After a little whyle, and ye shal not se me: agayne after a little whyle, ye shal se me: for I go to the father? Then sayde they: What is this, that he sayeth: After a little whyle? We can not tell what he sayeth. Then perceaued Iesus that they wolde axe him, and he sayde vnto them: Ye enquyre of this amonc youre selues, that I sayde: After a little whyle, and ye shal not se me: agayne after a little whyle, and ye shal se me.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: Ye shal wepe and lamente, but the worlde shal rejoyse: Ye shal be sorry, but youre sorowe shall be turned in to ioye. A woman when she traunyleth, hath sorowe, for hir houre is come. But when she is declueryed of the childe, she thinketh nomore of the anguyse, for ioye that a man is borne in to the worlde. And now haue ye sorowe also: but I wil se you agayne, and youre hert shall reioyse, and youre ioye shall noman take from you. And in that daye shall ye axe me no question. *Verely verely I saye vnto you: If ye axe * father ought in my name, he shal geue it you. Hither to haue ye axed nothinge in my name. Axe, and ye shal receaue, * youre ioye may be perfecte. These thinges haue I spoken vnto you *proverbes. Neuertheles the tyne commmeth, that I shal speake nomore by proverbes, but I shal shewe you planely of my father.

In that daye shall ye axe in my name. And I saye not vnto you, that I wyl praye vnto the father for you: for the father himself loneth you, because ye haue loued me, * beleued that I am come out from God. * I wente out from the father, and came in to the worlde: Agayne, I leaue * worlde, and go to the father. His disciples sayde vnto him: Beholde, now talkest thou planely, and speakest no proverbe. Now are we sure * thou knowest all thinges, and nedest not that eny mā shulde axe the. Therfore beleue we, that thou camest out from God: Jesus answered them: Now ye do beleue: * Beholde, the houre draweth nye, and is come allready, that ye shalbe scatred, euery man in to his awne, and shal meaue alone: and yet am I not alone, for the father is with me. These thinges haue I spoken vnto you, that in me ye might haue peace. In * worlde haue ye trouble, but be of good comforte, I haue overcom the worlde.

THESE thinges spake Jesus, and lift vp his eyes towarte heauen, and sayde: Father, the houre is come, that thou glorifie thy sonne, that thy sonne also maye glorifie thee. Like as thou hast geuen him power ouer all fleshe, * that he shulde geue euerlastinge life to as many as thou hast geuen him:* But this is the life euerlastinge, that they knowe the (that thou onely art the true God) and whom thou hast sent, Jesus Christ.

*I haue glorified * vpō earth, * finished * worke, * thou gauest me to do. And now glorifie me thou father by thine awne self, with * glory which I had or euer the worlde was. * I haue declared thy name vnto * men, whom thou gauest me from the worlde. They were thine, and thou gauest them vnto me, and they haue kepte thy worde.

Now knowe they, that all thinges what souer thou hast geuen me, are of thee. For * wordes which thou gauest me,* haue I geue vnto them, and they haue receaued them, * knowne of a trueth, that I am come forth from the, and haue beleued, that thou hast sent me. I praye for them, and praye not for the all worlde, but for them whom thou hast geuen me, for they are thine. And all that is myne, is thine: and what thine is, that is myne. And I am glorified in them. And now am I nomore in the worlde, and they are in * worlde, and I come to the. Holy father, kepe in thy name, those whom thou * hast geuen me, that they maye be one, like as we are. Whyle I was with the in the worlde, I kepe them in thy name. Those * thou gauest me, haue I kepte, and none of them is lost, but that lost childe,* that the scripture might be fullyfled. But now come I vnto the, and this I speake in the worlde, that they maye haue my ioye perfecte in them. I haue geuen them the wordes, and the worlde hateth the: for they are not of the worlde, euens as I also am not of the worlde. I praye not that thou shuldest take them out of the worlde, but that thou kepe the fro euell. They are not of the worlde, as I also am not of the worlde.

Sanctifie them in thy trueth. Thy worde is the trueth. Like as thou hast sent me in to the worlde, so haue I sent them in to the worlde: and for their sakes I sanctifie my self, that they also maye be sanctifie in the trueth.

Neuertheles I praye not for them onely, but also for those, which thorow their worde shal beleue on me, that they all maye be one, like as thou father art in me, and I in * that, that they also maye be * one in vs: that the worlde maye beleue, that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gauest me, haue I geuen

WHAN Jesus had thus spokè, he went forth with his disciples over the broke Cedron, where there was a gardèn, in to the which Jesus entred and his disciples. But Iudas y betrayed hi, knewe the place also. For Jesus resorted thither oft tymes with his disciples. Now when Iudas had taken vnto him the co pancre, a munysitter of the hye prestes and Pharises, he came thither with creshettes, with lanternes, and with weapons. Jesus now knowinge all y shulde comse ypon him, wente forth, and sayde vnto thè: Whom seke ye? They answered him: Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus sayde vnto them: I am he: Iudas also which betrayed him, stode with thè. Now when Iesus sayde vnto thè: I am he, they wete bacwardes, and fell to the grounde. Then axed he thè agayne: Whom seke ye? They sayde: Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus answered: I haue tolde you, that I am he. Yf ye seke me, then let these goe their waye. That the worde be fulfilled, which he sayde: Of them whò thou gauest me, haue I not lost one. Then had Symon Peter a swerde, and drewe it out, and smote the hye prestes servaunt, and cut out of his right eare. And y servauntes name was Malchus.

Then sayde Iesus vnto Peter: Put vp thy swerde in to the sheeth. Shal I not drynke of y cuppe, which my father hath geue me? Then the company and the captayne y the officers of the Iewes toke Jesus, and bounte him, y led him awaye first vnto Annas, that was fatherlawe vnto Caiphas, which was hye prest y same yeare. It was Caiphas, which gauè coçcell vnto y Iewes that it were good, that one man shulde dye for the people.

As for Symon Peter, he and another discipule folowed Jesus. The same discipule was knowne vnto the hye prest, and wepte in with Jesus in to the hye prestes palace. But Peter stode without at the dore. Then y other discipule which was knowne vnto the hye prest, wente out, and spake to the damsell y kepè the dore, and brought in Peter. Then the damsell that kepè the dore, sayde vnto Peter: Art not thou also one of this mans discipules? He sayde: I am not.

The servauntes y officers stode, and had made a fyre of coles (for it was colde) y warmed thè selues. Peter also stode with them, and warmed him self. The hye prest axed Jesus of his discipules, and of his doctryne, Jesus answered him: I haue spoken openly before the worlde, I haue euer taught in the synagoge and in the tèple, whither all the Iewes resorted, y in secreete haue I spokè nothinge. Why axest thou me? Axe thè y haue herde, what I haue spoken vnto thè: beholde, they can tell what I haue sayde. But when he had thus spokè, one of the officers that stode by, smote Jesus on the face, and sayde: Answerest thou the hye prest so? Jesus answered him: Yf I haue euell spokè, thè beare wyntnesse of euell: but yf I haue well spoken, why smytest thou me? And Annas sent him bounde vnto Caiphas y hye prest.

Symò Peter stode and warmed him self. Thè sayde they vnto him: Art not thou one of his discipules? He denied, and sayde: I am not. A servaunt of the hye prestes, a kynszma of his, whose eare Peter had smytted of, sayde vnto him: Dyd not I se the in the gardè with him?

Then Peter denied agayn. And immediately the cock crew. Then led they Jesus from Caiphas in to the comon hall. And it was early in the mornyng. And they them selues wepte not in to the comò hall, lest they shulde be defyled, but y they might eate y Pasccall lambe. Then wente Pilate out vnto thè, and sayde: What accusation bryng ye agaynst this man? They answered, and sayde Behold, it is the Shaloth. Then Pilate vnto the: Art thou the kyng of the Iewes? Jesus answered: Sayest thou that of thy self, or haue other tolde it the of me? Pilate answered: Am I a Iew? Thy people and the hye prestes haue delyuered the vnto me. What hast thou done? Jesus answered: My kyngdome is not of this worlde. Yf my kyngdome were of this worlde, my mynisters wolde fight therfore, y shulde not be delyuered vnto the Iewes. But now is my kyngdome not from hence. Thence Pilate vnto hi: Art thou a kyng the? Jesus answered: Thou sayest it, for I am a kyng. For this cause was I borne, and came in to the worlde, that I shulde testifie the truth. Who so euer is of the trueth, hearth my voyce. Pilate sayde vnto hi: What is the trueth? And when he had sayde that he wete out agayne to the Iewes, and sayde vnto them: I fynde no gylnesse in hym: But ye haue a custome, that I shulde geue one vnto vou lowse at Easter. Wyl ye now? I lowse vnto you the kyng of y Iewes? Thence they agayne altogether, and sayde: Not hym, but Barrabas. Yet was Barrabas a murthurer.

The r.v. Chapter.

THEN Pilate take Jesus, and scourgred him. And the soudyers platted a crowne of thornes, and set it vpon his head, and a purple garment vpon him, and sayde: Hayle kyng of the Iewes. And they smote him on the face. Then wente Pilate forth agayne, and sayde vnto the: Behold, I brynyge hym forth vnto you, y ye maye knowe, y I fynde no faute in hi. So Jesus wente out, ware a crowne of thorne and a purple robe. And he sayde vnto them: Behold, the man. When the hye prestes the mynisters sawe hym, they cryed, sayde: Crucifye, crucifye. Pilate saide vnto the: Take ye hym, and crucifye him, for I fynde no gylnnesse in hym. The Iewes answered him: We haue a lawe, after oure lawe he ought to dye, because he made hym self the some of God. When Pilate herde that worde, he was the more afrayed, and wente agayne in to the comon hall, and sayde vnto Jesus: Whence art thou? But Jesus gaue him no answere. Thence Pilate vnto hym: Speakest thou not vnto me? Knowest thou not, y haue power to crucifye y, haue power to lowse y? Jesus answered: Thou shuldest haue no power vpô me, ye it were not geue the from aboue. Therfore he that delyuered me vnto y, hath the more synne. From that tyme forth Pilate sought means to lowse hym. But the Iewes cryed, sayde: Yf thou let him go, thou art not the Emperours fréde. For whoseuer maketh himself kyngse, is agaynst the Emperoure.

When Pilate herde y worde, he brought Jesus forth, sat hi downe vpô y iudgmet seate, in the place which is called the Paumet, but in the Hebreue, Gabbatha. It was the daye of preparinge of the Easter aboute the sixte howre. And he sayde vnto the Iewes: Beholde your kyngse. But they cryed: Awaye with him, awaye with him, crucifie him. Pilate saide vnto the: Shall I crucifye youre kyngse? The hye prestes answered: We haue no kyngse but y Emperoure. The delyuered he vnto them, to be crucifyed.

They toke Jesus, and led him awaye. And he bare his crosse, and wente out to the place called y place of deed mens skulles, which in Hebreue is named Golgatha, where they crucifie him, and two other with hym, on either syde one, but Jesus in the myddles. Pilate wrote a superscription, and set vpon the crosse. And there was wrytten: Jesus of Nazareth, kyngse of the Iewes. This superscription red many of the Iewes. For y place where Jesus was crucifievd, was nye vnto the cite. And it was wrytten in Hebreue, Greke and Latyn. Then sayde the hye prestes of the Iewes vnto Pilate: Wryte not kyngse of the Iewes, but y he sayde, I am kyngse of the Iewes. Pilate answered: What I haue wrytten, that haue I wrytten.
The soudyers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garmentes, and made foure partes, to euery soudyer one parte, and the cote also. As for the cote, it was vsnowed fro aboue, wrought thorow and thorow. Then sayde they one to another: Let vs not deude it, but cast lottes for it, who shal haue it, that the scripture might be fulfilled, which sayeth: *They haue parted my garmentes amongst them, and on my cote haue they cast lottes. This dyd the soudyers in dede.

There stode by the crosse of Jesus, his mother, and his mothers sister Mary, the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. Now whan Jesus sawe his mother, and the disciple stondynge by, wh6 he loued, he sayde vnto his mother: Woman, beholde, that is thy sonne. Then sayde he to the disciple: beholde, that is thy mother. And from that houre the disciple toke her vnto him.

After that, whan Jesus knewe that all was perfourmcd, *that the scripture might be fulfilled, he sayde: I am a thirst. There stode a vessell full of wyneger. They fyllcd a sponge with wyneger and *wonde it aboute with ysope, and helde it to his mouth. Now whan Jesus had receaued the wyneger, he sayde: It is fynished, and bowed his heade, and gane vp the goost.

The Iewes then, for so much as it was the daye of preparinge, that ¥ bodies shulde not remayne vpon the crosse on the Sabbath, (for ¥ same Sabbath daye was greate) besought Pilate, that their legges might be broken, and that they might be taken downe. Then came the soudyers, and brake the legges of the first, and of the other that was crucified with him. But whan they came to Jesus, and sawe that he was deed allready, they brake not his legges, but one of the soudyers opened his syde with a speare. †And immediatly there wente oute bloude and water.

And he that sawe it, bare recorde, and his recorde is true. And he knoweth that he sayeth true, that ye might beleue also. For this is done, ¥ the scripture might be fulfilled: ¥ Ye shal not breake a bone of him. And agayne, another scripture sayeth: †They shal se him, whom they haue pearsed.

After that, Ioseph of Arimathia, which was a disciple of Iesus (but secretly *for feare of the Iewes) besought Pilate, ¥ he might take downe the body of Iesus. And Pilate gane him lycence. There came also * Nicodemus, (which afofe came vnto Iesus by night) ‡ brought of Myrrhe & Aloes mingled together, aboute an hundreth poide weight.

The toke they the body of Iesus, ¥ wonde it with lynnemen clothes, and with the spycses, as the maner of the Iewes is to burye. And by ¥ place where Iesus was crucified, there was a gardé, and in the garden a new sepulchre, where in was neuer man layed: there layed they Iesus, because of the preparinge daye of ¥ Iewes, for the sepulcre was nye at hande.

The xv. Chapter.

Vpon one daye of the Sabbath, came Mary Magdalene early (whde it was yet darcke) vnto the sepulcre, ¥ sawe that the stone was také from the sepulcre. Then ranne she, ¥ came to Symon Peter, and to ¥ other disciple, * whom Iesus loued, and sayde vnto them: They haue take awaye the LORDE out of the sepulcre, ¥ we can not tell where they haue layed him. Thé wete Peter forth and the other disciple, and came to the sepulcre. They rane both together, and that other disciple out rane Peter, and came first to the sepulcre, and loked in, and sawe the lynnemen clothes layed. But he wete not in. Thé came Symon Peter after him, and wente in to the sepulcre, ¥ sawe the lynnene clothes lye, and the napkyne that was bounde aboute Iesus heade, not layed with the lynnemen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by it self. Thé wete í also ¥ other disciple, which came first to ¥ sepulcre, ¥ he sawe í beleued; for as yet they knewe not ¥ scriptures, ‡ ¥ it behoved hi to ryse agayne fro ¥ deed. Thé wete ¥ disciples againe together.

As for Mary, she stode before ¥ sepulcre ¥ wepte without. Now as she wepte, she loked in to the sepulcre, and sawe two angels in whyte garmentes syttinge, ¥ one at the heade, ¥ the other at ¥ fete, where they had layed the body of Iesus. And they sayde vnto her: Womà, why wepest thou? She saide vnto thé: They haue taken awaye my LORDE, ¥
I wrote not where they have layed Him. And when she had said, y, she turned her selfe backe, as sawe Jesus standinge, as knewe not y it was Jesus. Jesus sayde vnto her: Woman, why wepest thou? Whom sekest thou? She thought it had bene y gardener, as sayde vnto him: Syr, if thou hast borne him hence: then tell me where thou hast layed him? and I will fetch him. Jesus sayde vnto her: Mary. Then turned she her aboute, as sayde vnto him: Rabboni, y is to saye: Master. Jesus sayde vnto her: Touche me not, for I am not yet ascended vnto my father. But go thou thy waye vnto my brethre as sayde vnto the: I ascended vp vnto my father and youre father: to my God, as youre God. *Mary Magdalene came, as tolde y disciples: I have seen the LORDE, as soch things hath he spoken vnto me.

The same Sabbath at euene when y disciples were gathered together, and the dores were shutt for feare of y Jews, came Jesus, and stode i y myddes, as sayde vnto the: Peace be with you. And wha he had so sayde, he shewed the his hades as his syde. Tho were y disciples glad, as they sawe y LORDE. The sayde Jesus vnto the agayne: Peace be with you. Like as my father sent me, euene so sçede I you. And when he had sayde y, he brethed vpó the, and sayde vnto the: Receaine the holy goost. Whose synnes soener ye remytte, they are remytted vnto the: and whose synnes so ener ye retayne, they are retayned.

But Thomas one of the twelve which is called Didimus, was not with the wha Jesus came. The sayde the other disciples vnto him: We have sene the LORDE. But he sayde vnto the: Excepte I se in his handes the prynyte of the nales, and put my hâde in to his syde, I wil not beleue.

And after eight dayes agayne were his disciples with in, as Thomas with the. The came Jesus (wha y dores were shutt) as stode in the myddes, as sayde: Peace be with you. After y sayde he vnto Thomas: Reach bither thy lynder, and se my handes, and reach bither thy hâde, and put it i to my syde, as be not faithlesse, but beleue. Thomas answered, as sayde vnto him: My LORDE, and my God. Jesus sayde vnto him: Thomas, because thou hast sene me, thou hast beleuen. Blessed are they, that se not, and yet beleue.

Many other take dyd Jesus before his disciples, which are not wryttè in this boke. But these are wryttè, y ye shulde beleue, y Jesus is Christ the sonne of God, as that ye thorow beleue mighte haue life in his name.

The 111. Chapter.

After that shewed Jesus himself agayne at the see of Tiberias. But on this wyse shewed he himself. There were together Symo Peter, as Thomas which is called Didi-mus, as Nathanael of Cana a cite of Galile, as the sonnes of Zebedee, as two other of his disciples. Symon Peter sayde vnto the: I go a fyshinge. They sayde vnto hi: We also wil go with the. They wente out, as entred in to a shippe straighte wyse. And y same night toke they nothinge. But wha it was now morow, Jesus stoode on the shore, but his disciples knewe not y it was Jesus. Jesus sayde vnto the: Childre, haue ye eny thinge to eate? They answered hi: No. He sayde vnto the: *Cast out the nett on y right syde of the shippe, as ye shal fynde. They cast out, as couldo nomore drawe it for y multitude of fishes. Tho sayde y discipline who Jesus loued, vnto Peter: It is the LORDE.

Whan Simon Peter herde that it was the LORDE, he gyrdre his mantell aboute him (for he was naked) and sprawne in to y see. But other disciples came by shippe (for they were not farre fro londe, but as it were two hundreth cubytes) and they drewe the net with the fisshes. Now whan they were come to londe, they sawe coles layed, and fysh theron, and bred. Jesus sayde vnto the: *Bringe hither of the fisshes, that ye haue taken now. Symon Peter stepped forth, and drew the nett to the londe, full of greate fyshes, an hundreth and thre and fyftye. And for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

Jesus sayde vnto them: Come, and dyne. But none of the disciples dryst axe him: Who art thou? For they knewe, that it was the LORDE. Then came Jesus, and toke y bred, and gaue it the: and the fisshes likewyse. This is now the thirde tyme that Jesus appeared vnto his disciples, after that he was rysen agayne from the deed.

Now wha they had dyne, Iesus sayde vnto Symon Peter: Symo Iohåna, louest thou me more then these do? He sayde vnto him: Yee LORDE, thou knowest y I lōue thee. He sayde vnto him: Fede my shepe. He sayde vnto him thirde tyme: Symon Iohåna, louest thou me? Peter was sory, because he sayde vnto him, louest thou me? And he sayde vnto him: LORDE, thou knowest all thinges, thou knowest, that I lōue y. Iesus sayde vnto him: Fede my shepe. Verely verely I saye vnto the: Whan thou wast yōge, thou gerdedst thyselfe, and walkedst whither thou woldest. But wha thou art olde, thou shalt stretch forth thy handes, and another shall gyrdhe the, and lede the whither thou woldest not. But this he sayde, to signifye with what death he shulde glorifye God.

Whan he had spoken this, he sayde vnto him: Folowe me. Peter turned him aboute, and sawe the disciple folowinge, whom Iesus loued, (*which also leaned vpō his brest at the supper, and sayde: LORDE, who is it that betrayeth the)? Wha Peter sawe him, he sayde vnto Iesus: LORDE, but what shal he do? Iesus sayde vnto him: Yf I wil that he tary tyll I come, what is that to the? Folowe thow me. Then wente there out a sayenge amonge the brethren: This disciple dyeth not. And Iesus sayde not vnto him: He dyeth not, but: Yf I wil that he tary tyll I come, what is that to the? This is the same disciple, which testifeyeth of these thinges, and wrothe these thinges, and we knowe that his testimony is true.

There are many other thinges also that Iesus dyd, which, yf they shulde be wryttere euery one, I suppose the worlde shulde not contayne the bokes, that were to be wrytten.

The Actes of the Apostles.

The first Chapter.

THE first treatise (deare Theophilus) haue I made of all that Iesus beganne to do and to teache, vntyll y daye that he was taken vp, after that he (thorow the holy goost) had geuen commandementes to the Apostles, whom he had chosen: to whom also he shewed himselfe "alyue after his passion, by many tokes, and appeared vnto them fourtye dayes longe, and spake vnto them of the kyngdome of God.

And when he had gathered them together, he commaundd them that they shulde not departe from Jerusalem, but to wayte for the promyse of the father, wherof (sayde he) ye haue herde of me: For Iohn baptysd with water, but ye shal be baptysed with the holy goost, which that within this few dayes.

Now when they were come together, they axed him, and sayde: LORDE, shalt thou at this tyme set vp the kyngdome of Israel agayne? But he sayde vnto them: It belongeth not vnto you to knowe the tymes or seasons, which the father hath kepe in his awne power, but ye shal receaue the power of the holy goost, which shal come vpon you, and ye shal my witnesses at Jerusalem, and in all Iewrye and Samaria, vnfo the ende of the earth.

And when he had spoken these thinges, whyle they behelde, he was taken vp, and a cloude receaue him from their sight. And whyle they loked after him, as he wente in to heauen, beholde, there stode by them two men in whyte garmentes, which also sayde: Ye men of Galile, Why stonde ye gasynge vp in to heauen? This Iesus which is takene vp from you in to heauen, shall come euyn so as ye haue sene him go in to heauen.

Then turned they agayne from the mount that is called Olivete, which is nere to Jerusalem, and hath a Sabbath dayes journee. And when they came in, they wente vp in to a parler, where abode Peter and James, Ihon and Andrew, Philippe and Thomas, Bartilmew and Mathew, James the sonne of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Iudas the sonne of James. These all contynued with one acorde in prayer and supplicacion, with the women and Mary the mother of Iesu and with his brethren.

And in those dayes Peter stode vp in the myddes amonge the disciples, and sayde: (The company of the names together, was aboute an hundred and twentye.) Ye men and brethren, this scripture must neses be fulfilled, which y holy goost by the mouth of Dauid spake before of Iudas, which was a gyde of the that toke Iesus: for he was nombred with vs, and had opteyned the felashippe of this mynistracion. This same truelye possessed the felde for the reward of vnrighteousnes, and hanged himself, and brast a sunder in the myddes, and all his bowels guszed out. And it is knowne vnto all the that dwell at Jerusalem, in so moche that the same felde is called in their mother tonge Acheldema, that is to saye, the bloude felde.

For it is wrytten in the boke of psalmes: His habitacon be voyde, and noman be dwellinge therin. And: || His bishopprike another take. Wherfore amonge these men.
which haue bene gathered together with vs
(all the tyme that the LORDE Iesus wote out and in amonge vs, begynynge from the baptyme of Ihon, vntyll y daye that he was takē vp from vs) must one be a wytnesse with vs of his resurreccion.

And they appoynted two (Joseph a called Barsabas, whose synname was Iustus, and Mathias.) makinge their prayer and sayenge:
Thou LORDE, which knowest the heretes of all men, shewe whether of these two thou hast chosen, that the one maye take the roynwe of this mynistracion and Apostelshippe, from thee which Iudas by transgression fell, that he might go awaye in to his awne place. And they gaue forth the lottes ouer them, and the lot fell vpon Mathias. And he was counted with the eleuen Apostles.

The ij. Chapter.

And whan the * Whyt sondaye was ful-fyled, they were all with one acorde together in one place. And sodenly there came a sounde from heauen, as it had bemade
the comynge of a mightie wynde, and it fyled the whole house where they sat. And there appeared vnto them clouen tungen, like as they had bene of fyre. And he sat vpon ech one of them, and they were all fyled with the holy goost. And they beganne to preach with other tungen, euen as the sprete gaue them vtertanaunce.

There were dwellinge at Ierusalem Iewes,
men that feared God, out of euery nacion that is vnder heauen. Now whan this vjoyce came to passe, the multitude came together,
and were astonied: For euery one herde, that they spake with his awne tongue. They wonderd all and marneyled, and sayde amonge them selues: Beholde, are not all these which speake, of Galile? How heare we the evry one his awne tongue, wherein we were borne?
Parthians and Medes, and Elamites, and we that dwell in Mesopotamia, and in Iewry and Capadocia, Pontus, and Asia, Phrigia and Pamphylia, Egipte, and in the partes of Lybia
by Cyren, and straungers of Rome, Iewes and + Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians: we heare them speake with oure awne tongues the greate workes of God.

They were all amased, and wondere, and sayde one to another: What wil this be?
But other mocked them, and sayde: They are full of swete wyne. Then stode Peter vp with the eleuen, and lift vp his voyce, and sayde vnto them:
Ye men of Iewry, and all ye that dwell at Ierusalem, be this knowne vnto you, and let my wordes entre in at youre eares. For these are not dronken, as ye suppose, for it is yet but the thirde hour of y daye: but this is it, that was spake before by the prophet Ioe.
And it shall come to passe in the last dayes,
sayeth God, I will poure out of my sprete
upon all flesh, and youre sonnes and youre daughters shal propheye, and youre yonge men shal se visions and youre olde men shall daeme dreams, and on my seruauntes and on my handymaydens wyl I poure out of my sprete in those dayes, the they shall propheye.

And I wil shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens on the earth bene, bloute and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The Sonne shalbe in to darkenesse, and the Moone in to bloute, before that greate and notable daye of the LORDE come. And it shall come to passe, Who so euere shal call vpō
the name of the LORDE, shalbe saued.

Ye men of Israel, heare these wordes: Iesus of Nazareth, y man approwed of God amonge
you with miracles, and wonders and tokens, which God dyd by him in the myydes amonge
you, as ye youre selues knowe also, him (after that he was deluyered by the deter-minate councell and foreknowlege of God)
haue ye taken by the handes of vriousarteghe personnes, and crucyfied him, addone him, who God hath rayesed vp, and loued the sorowes of death, for so moch as it was vn-possyble that he shulde be holden of it. For David speaketh of him: A fore honde haue
I set the LORDE allwayes before me, for he is on my right hode, that I shulde not be moued. Theryfore dyd my hert reioyse, and my tounge was glad: For my flesh also shal rest in hope. For thou shalt not leue my soyle in hell, nether shalt thou suffer thy Holy to se corrupcion. Thou hast shewed me the wayes of life, thou shalt make me full of ioye with thy countenaunce.

‡ Act. 10. c. * Psal. 15. b.
Ye men and brethren, let me freely speake vnto you of the Patryarke Davi: For he is deed and buried, and his sepulcre is with vs vnto this daye. Wherefore now seinge he was a prophet, and knewe that God had promised him with an oth, that the frute of his loynes shulde syt on his seate, he sawe it before, and spake of the resurrection of Christ: for his soule was not left in hell, neuer hath his flesh sene corrupcion. This Iesus hath God rased vp, whereof we all are witnesses.

Seynge now that he by the right hande of God is exalted, and hath receaued of the father promyse of the holy goost, he hath shed allthe blood of the Apostles, and of the other witnesses.

When they herde this, their hert pricked them, and they sayde vnto Peter and to the other Apostles: Ye men and brethre, what shal we do? Peter sayde vnto them: Amende youre selues, and let euery one of you be baptysed in the name of Iesus Christ, for the remysion of synnes, and ye shal receaue the gift of the holy goost. For this promyse was made vnto you and youre children, and to all that are farre of whom so euer the LORDE our God shall call. And with many other wordes bare he witnesse, and exerted them, and sayde: Saue youre selues from this vntowarde generacion. They that gladly receaued his prechinge, were baptysed, and the same daye there were added vnto them aboute thre thousande soules.

They continued in the Apostles doctryne, and in the felishappe, and in brekinge of bred, and in prayer. And feare came vpo euery soule, and many wonderes and tokens were done by the Apostles. But all they that beleued, were togethre, and had all things commen. They solde their goodes and possessions, and parted them out amonoge all, acording as euery man had nede. And they continued daylie with one acorde in the tēple, and brake bred in euery house: they toke their meate with ioye, and synglenesse of hert, praysinge God, and had faoure with all people. And the LORDE added to the congregacion daylie soch as shulde be saued.

The iiij. Chapter.

PETER and Ihon wente vp together in to the temple aboute the nyghte houre to praye. And there was a certayne man halt from his mothers wombe, whom they brought and layed daylie at the gate of the tēple, which is called, the Betsyfull, that he might axe almesse of them that were in to the temple. Now whan he sawe Peter and Ihon, that they wold in to the temple, he desyred to receaue an almesse. Peter behelde him with Ihon, and sayde: Loke on vs. And he gane hede vnto them, hopynge to receaue some thinge of them. Howbeit Peter saide: Syluer and golde haue I none: but soch as I haue geue I the. In the name of Iesus Christ of Nazareth ryse vp a walke. And he toke him by the righte hande and lifte him vp. Immediatly his legges and bones were made strege, and he sprang, stode and walked, and entred with them in to the tēple, walkyng, and leapinge and praysinge God.

And all the people sawe him walke and praye God. And they knewe him, it was he, which sat for almesse at the Betsyfull gate of the temple. And they were fylled with wondrynge, and were astonnyed at that, which had happened vnto hi. But as this hault which was healed helde him to Peter and Ihon, all the people ranne vnto them in to the porch, which is called Salomōs, and wondred.

When Peter sawe that, he answered vnto the people: Ye men of Israel, why marauyle ye at this, or why loke ye so at vs, as though we by oure awne power or deseruynge, had made this man to walke? The God of Abrahaam and of Iaac, and of Iacob, God of oure fathers hath glorified his childe Iesus, whom ye deluyered and denied in the presence of Pilate, whan he had judged him to be lowes. But ye denied the holy and iust, and desired the murthurer to be geuen you, but ye slewe the pryncye of life, whom God hath rased from the deed, of the which we are witnesses. And thorow thy faith in his name, hath he confirmed his name vpon this man, whom ye se and knowe: and faith thorow him, hath gue this man this health before youre eyes.

Now deare brethren, I knowe that ye haue done it thorow ignorance, as dyd also youre rulers. But God, which by the mouth of all his prophets had shewed before, thy Christ shulde suffre, hath so fulfilled it. Do penance now therefor and turne you, that youre synnes maye be done awaye, when the tyme of refreshinge shall come before the presence of the LORDE, and when he shall sende him, which now before is preached vnto you, euen Jesus Christ: which must receaue heauen vntylly the tyme that all thinges, which God hath spoken by the mouth of his holy prophets sence thy worlde beganne, be restored agayne.

For Moses sayde vnto thy fathers: A prophet shall the LORDE your God rayse vp vnto you, euen from amõge youre brethren, like vnto me: him shal ye heare, in all that he shal saye vnto you. And it shall come to passe, what soule souer shall not heare the same prophet, shall be destroyed from amonge the people. And all the prophets from Samuel and thence forth as many as haue spoken, haue likewyse tolde of these days.

Ye are the children of the prophets and of the counaunt, which God made vnto oure fathers, when he sayde vnto Abrahâ: "Thorow thy sede shall all thy nacies of thy earth be blessed."

First vnto you hath God raysed vp his childe Jesus, sent him vnto you, to blesse you every one shulde turne frô his wickednesse.

The iii. Chapter.

But as they spake to thy people, there came vnto the the presettes and the rulers of the têple, and the Saduces, whe it greden they they taught the people, preached in Jesu resurrection frô the dead and they layed handes vpon them, and put the in holde tyll the morowe: for it was now euentyde. Howbeit many of the which herde the worde, beleued, and the nombre of thy men was aboute fyue thousande.

And it chaunced on thy morow, that their rulers and Elders and scrybes (as Annas thy hye prest and Caiphas, and Ihon Alexander, and as many as were of the hye prestes kynred) gathered them selues together at Jerusalem, and set them before them, and axed them: By what auttorite, or in what name haue ye done this?

Peter full of the holy goost, sayde vnto them: Ye rulers of the people, and ye Elders of Israel, Ye we this daye be examyled concernyng this good dede vpon the sicke mä, by what meanes he is made whole, be it knowe then vnto you and to all the people of Israel, that in thy name of Iesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whô God hath raysed vp from the dead, stôdeth this man here before you whole. This is the stone refused of you buylders, which is become the head corner stone, nether is there salvacion in eny other: Ner yet also is there genê vnto me eny other name, wherein we must be saued.

They sawe the boldnesse of Peter and marueyled, for they were sure they were vnlearned men and laye people. And they knewe the also, that they were with Iesu. As for the man thy was made whole, they sawe him stôdinge by thô, could not saye agaynst it. Then commaunded they thô to stode asyd out of thy councell, commaened amõge the selues, saide: What shal we do to these men? for a manyest token is done by them, and is openly knowne vnto thô that dwell at Jerusalem, and we can not denye it. But that it breake out no farther amõge the people, let vs threate them earnestly, that hence forth they speake of this name vnto noman.

And they called them, and commaunded thô, that in eny wyse they shulde not speake nor teache in the name of Iesu. But Peter saide: Ihon answered, and sayde vnto thô: Judge ye youre selues, whether it be right before God, that we shulde be more obedient vnto you, then vnto God. We can not chose, but speake that we haue sene thô herde. But they threatened them, and let them go, and founde nothinge how to punyssh them because of thy people: for they all prayed God because of that, which was done. For the man, vpon whom this token of health was done, was aboute fourteye yeare olde.

And when they were let go, they came to their folowes, and tolde them what y hye prestes and Elders sayde vnto them. Whâ they herde that, they lifte vp their voyce with one acorde vnto God, and sayde: LORDE, thou that art the God which made heauen and earth, and all that therin is thou that by the mouth of Dauid thy seruaunt hast sayde: Why do the Heythâ rage? and y people ymagine vayne things? The kynges of the earth stonde vp, and the pryncees haue gathered them selues together agaynst y LORDE, and agaynst his Christ. Of a trueth agaynst thy holy childe Jesus, whom thou hast anoynted, both Herode â Pontius Pilate with the Heythen and people of Israel, haue gathered the selues together, to do what soever thy hande and thy counsell determyned before to be done. And now LORDE, beholde their threatenynge, and graunte vnto thy seruauntes with all stedfast boldness to speake thy vorde: and stretch out thine hande, that healinge and tokës and wonders maye be done by the name of thy holy childe Jesus.

And whâ they had prayed, the place mowed where they were gathered together, â they were all fylled with y holy goost, â speake the worde of God boldly. The multitude of them that beleued, were of one hert and of one soule. Also none of them sayde of his goodes, that they were his awne, but had all things cõmen. And with greate power gane the Apostles wesnese of the resurrectioun of the LORDE Iesu, and greate grace was with them all. Nether was there any amone them that lacked. For as many as were possessors of londes or houses, solde the and brought y money of the goodes that were solde, and layed it at the Apostles fete. And distribution was made vnto euery mä, accordinge as he had nede.

Ioses which was also called of y Apostles, Barnabas (that is to saye, the sonne of consolacion) a Leuite, of the countre of Cypers, had londe, and solde it, â brought the money, and layed it at the Apostles fete.

The 9. Chapter.

BUT a certayne man named Ananias with Saphira his wife, solde his possesion, and kepeth awaye parte of the money (his wife knowinge of it) and broughte one parte, â layed it at the Apostles fete. But Peter sayde: Ananias, Wherfore hath Sathan fylled thine hert, that thou shuldest lye vnto the holy goost, and withdrawe awaye parte of the money of the lyuelod? Mightest thou not haue kepte it, whan thou baddest it? And whan it was solde, the money was also in thy power: Why hast thou then conceaued this thinge in thine hert? Thou hast not lyed vnto me, but vnto God. Whan, Ananias herde these wordes, he fell downe, â gaue vp the goost. And there came a greate feare vpon all the that herde of this. The yonge men rose vp, and put him asyde, and caried him out, and buried him.

And it fortuned as it were aboute y space of three houres after, his wife came in, and knewe not what was done. But Peter answered vnto her. Tell me, solde ye the londe for somoch? She sayde: Yee, for so moch. Peter sayde vnto her: Why haue ye agreed together, to tempte the sprete of the LORDE? Beholde, the fete of the which haue buried thy huszbande, are at the dore, â shal carye the out. And immediatly she fell downe at his fete, and gaue vp the goost. Then came in the yonge men, and founde her deed, and caried her out, and bere her awaye, and buried her by hir huszbâde. And there came a greate feare ouer the whole congregacion, and ouer all the that herde it.

Many tokens and wonders were done amonst the people by the hâdes of the Apostles (and they were all together with one acorde in * Salomons porche: but of other there durst no man ioyne him self vnto the, neuertheles the people helde moch of them. The multitude of the men and wemen that beleued in the LORDE, grewe more and more) In so moch that they brought out the sycke in to the strete, and layed them vpon beddes and barowes, that at the leest waye the shadowe of Peter (whan he came by) might over-shadowe some of the. There came many also out of y cities rounde aboute vnto Ierusalem, and brought the sicke and the that were vexed with vnelane spretes, and they were healed euery one.

But the hye prest rose vp, and all they y were with him, (which is the secte of the Sadduces, and were full of indignacion) â layed handes on the Apostles, and put them in the comon prson. But the angell of y LORDE'

before these dayes rose vp one Theudas, boosting himself. (And there came vp to him a noble of Me, aboute a foure hundreth) which was slayne, and all they ye enclyned vnto him, were scatred abrode, and brought to naught. After this stode vp Iudas of Galile in ye dayes of tryste, and drewe away much people after him, & he also perished, or all they that enclyned vnto him, are scatred abrode. And now I saye vnto you: refrayne youry selues fro these men, and let the go. If this counsell or worke be of Me, it will come to naught: but ye it be of God, ye are not able to destroy it, lest ye be founde to be the men, that will striye agaynst God. Then they agreed vnto him, and called the Apostles, and bet them, and commaund them, that they shulde speake nothinge in the name of Jesu, and let them go.

But they departed from the presence of the counsell, rejoysinge, that they were worthy to suffre rebuke for his names sake. And daylie in the temple and in every house they ceased not, to teache and to preache the Gospell of Iesu Christ.

The vi. Chapter.

In those dayes when the nombre of the disciples increased, there arose a grudge amonge the Grekes agaynst the Hebrues, because their wyddowes were not loked vpun in the daylie handreachinge. Then the twolue called the multitude of the disciples together, and sayde: It is not mete that we shulde leue the worde of God, and to serue at the tables. Wherfore brethren, loke out amonge you selue men, that are of honeste reporte, and full of the holy goost and wysdom, whom we may appoynte to this nedefull busynes. But we wil geue oure selues vnto prayer, and to the mynstiration of the worde of God. And the sayenge pleased the whole multitude. And they chose Steuen, a man full of fayth and of the holy goost, and Philippe, and Procorus, and Nicanor, and Thimon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas the Prosclite of Antioche. These they set before ye Apostles, and they prayed, and layed their handes vpon them. And the worde of God increased, and the nombre of the disciples multiplied greatly at Jerusalem.

And there were many preistles also obedient vnto the faith.

Steeuen full of faith and power, dyd wonders and greate tokens amonst the people. Then arose there certayne of the synagogue, which is called (the synagogue) of f Libertynes, c of the Cyrenites, and of the Alexandrines, and of the y were of Celicia and Asia, ã disputed with Steuæ, * and they could not resiste the wyszdome and the spreter, out of the which he spake. And all they that sat in the councell, loked vpó him and sawe his face as the face of an angell.

The viij. Chapter.

THEN sayde the hye prest: Is it euë so? He sayde: Deare brethren and fathers, herken to, The God of glorye appeared vnto oure father Abrahãú, wylye he was yet in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran, and sayde vnto hym: Get y out of thy couëtre, and fró thy kyured, and come in to a londe which I wil shewe y. Thë wenë he out of the lande of the Caldeës, 4 and dwelt in Haran.  And from thëe, whan his father was deede, he brought hym ouer in to this londe (where ye dwell now) and gaue hym no inheritaunce therin, no not y breth of a fote: and promysed hym, that he wolde geue it hym to possesse, 4 and to his sede after hym, whan as yet he had no childe.

But thus sayde God vnto hym: Thy sede shall be a straunger in a straunge londe, and they shall make bonde men of them, and intreate thëe euell foure hundreth yeares: and y people whom they shall serue, wil I indge, sayde God. And after that they go forth, and serue me in this place. And he gave hym the covenaut of circãcisation.  And he begat Isaac, 4 and circãcisèd hym the eighte daye. And Isaac begat Iacob 4 and Iacob begat the two Pateriarkes.

And the Pateriarkes bad indignacion at Ioseph, 4 and solde him in to Egipte. And God was with hym, and deluynered hym out of all his troubles, and gaue hym fayoure ad wyszdome i the sight of Pharãos kyng of Egipte 5 which made hym prynce ouer Egipte and ouer all his house.

But there came a derth ouer all the londe of Egipte and Canaan, and a greate trouble, and oure fathers founde no sustenance. But Iacob herde that there was corne in Egipte, and sent oure fathers out the first tyme.  And at the seconde tyme was Ioseph knowne of his brethren, and Iosephs kyndred was made knowne vnto Pharaos. But Ioseph sent out, and caused his father and all his kyndred to be broughte, euë thre score and fyftene soules.  And Iacob wente downe in to Egipte, and dyed, both he and oure fathers 4 and were brought ouer vnto Sichã, and layed in the sepulcre, 4 that Abraham boughte for money of the children of Hemor at Sichem.

Now wha the tyme of the promes drue nye (which God had sworne vnto Abrahãú) the people grewe and multiplied in Egipte, tylly there rose another kyng, which knewe not of Ioseph. The same dealeth suettely with oure kyndred, and intreated oure fathers euell and made them to cast out the yonge children, that they shulde not remayne alyne.

At the same tyme was Moses borne, and was a proper childe before God, and was norished thre monethes in his fathers house. But whan he was cast out, Pharaos daughter toke him vp, and norished him vp for hir awne sonne. And Moses was learned in all maner wyszdome of the Egyptians, and was mightie in dedes 4 wordes.

But whan he was fouythe yeare olde, it came in to his mynde to vyset his brethren the children of Israel. And whan he sawe one of them suffre wroge, he helped hym, and deluynered hym, that had the harme done vnto hym, and slewe the Egyptian. But he thoughte that his brethren shulde haue

And on the nexte daye he shewed himself vnto them as they stroue together, and wolde haue set them at one agayne, and sayde: Syrs, ye are brethren, why hurte ye one another? But he that dyd his neigbour e wyreng, thrust hym awaie, and sayde: *Who made the a ruler and iudge ouer vs? Wilt thou slaye me also, as thou slewest the Egypt-\cian yesterdaye? But Moses fled at that sayenge, and was a straunger in the lande of Madian, where he begat two sones.

And after fourtye yeares, the angell of ¶ LORDE appeard vnto him vpon mount Sina, in a flamme of fyre in a busche. Whā Moses sawe it, he wondred at the sighete. But as he drue nye to beholde, ¶ voyce of ¶ LORDE came vnto him: I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. Howbeit Moses trefled, and durst not beholde. But ¶ LORDE sayde vnto hi: *Put of thy shues from thy fete, for ¶ place where thou stonest, is an holy grounde. Thā haue well sene the trouble of my people in Egipte, and have herde their grōnyng, and am come downe to deluyer them. And now come, I wil sende the in to Egipte.

This Moses, whom they refused, and sayde: ¶Who made ¶ a ruler and iudge ouer vs? him had God sent to be a ruler ¶ deluyerer by the hande of the angell, that appeared vnto him in the busche. Thā same broughte them out, and dyd wonders and tokens in Egipte, and in the reed see, and in ¶ wyldernesse fourtye yeares. This is that Moses, which sayde vnto the children of Israel: ¶A prophet shal the LORDE youre God rayse vp vnto you euem from amonge youre brethren, like vnto me. Him shal ye heare. Thā is he, ¶ that was in the congregacion in the wyldernesse with the angell, which talked with him, vpō mount Sina, and with oure fathers. This man receaued the worde of life to geue vnto vs, vnto whom oure fathers wolde not be obediēt, but thrust him fro ther, and in their herdes turnede baayge in to Egipte, and sayde vnto Aaron: ¶Make vs goddes to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this Moses, ¶ broughte vs out of the lande of Egipte. And they made a calfe at the same tyume, and offered sacrifice vnto the ymage, and rejoyed in the worke of their owne handes.

But God turned himselfe, ¶t gaze them vp, so that they worshipped the hooste of heauē, as it is wrytten in the boke of the pro-\phetes: ¶O ye house of Israel, gaze ye me sacrifices and catel those fortye yeares in the wyldernes? And ye toke vnto you ¶ tabernacle of Moloch, and the starre of youre god Remphan, ymages which ye youre selues made to worshippe ther. And I wil cast you out beyonde Babilon.

Oure fathers had the tabernacle of witnesse in ¶ wyldernesse, like as he appoynted them, ¶when he spake vnto Moses, that he shulde make it (acordinge to the patron, ¶ he had sene.) which oure fathers also receaued, and brought it with Iosue in to the londe that the ¶Heythe had in possession, whom God droue out before the face of oure fathers, vntyl the tyume of Danid, which founde fauoure with God, and desyred that he might fynde a tabernacle for the God of Iacob.

But Salomon buylyte hi an house. ¶How-\beit ¶ Hyest of all dwelleth not in temples that are made with handes: As he sayeth by the prophete: ¶Heauē is my seate, and the earth is my fote stole. What house then wil ye buyldye vnto me? sayeth the LORDE: Or which is the place of my rest? Hath not my hande made all these things?

¶Ye styffnecked ¶ of vncircumcysyd heredes and eares, ye allwaye resiste the holy goost: Eauē as youre fathers dyd, so do ye also. Which of the prophetes haue not youre fathers persecuted? And they slewe ther, which tolde before of the cōmynge of ¶y righteous, whose traytours and murtherers ye are now become. ¶Ye receaued the lawe by the mynistracion of angels, ¶and haue not kepte it.

Whan they herde this, it wente thorow ¶ herd of the, and they gnashed vpō him with their tethe. But he beyng full of the holy goost, lokyd vp towards heauen, ¶¶and sawe the glorye of God, and Iesus stōdinge on the righte hande of God, and sayde: Beholde, I se the heauens open, and the some of ma stondinge on thy righte hande of God. But they cried out with a loude voyce, sayed they, stopped their cares, and raine violently upon him all at once, and thrust him out of the cite, and stoned him. And witnesses layed downe their clothes at the fete of a yonge man, which was called Saul. And they stoned Steuen, which cryed, sayde: LORDE Iesu, receaue my sprete. And he kneele downe, cried with a loude voyce: LORDE, laye not this synne to their charge. And wha he had thus spoken, he fell a slepe.

The bii. Chapter.

S AUL had pleasure in his death. At the same tyme there was a greate persecution ouer the congregacion at Ierusalem. And they were all scatered abrode in the regions of Iewrye and Samaria, excepte the Apostles. As for Steuen, men feared God dressed him, and made greate lamentacion ouer him. But Saul made hauocke of the congregacion, entred in to euery house, and drue out men with women, deluyed the preson. They now were scatered abrode weacte aboute preached the worde. The came Philippe in to a cite of Samaria, and preached Christ vnto them. And the people gane hede with one acorde vnto things that Philippe spake, hearinhe him, and semyng the tokens that he dyd. For the vncleane spretes cryed loude, and departed out of many were possessed. And many that were sicke of the pasihe and lame, were healed. And there was greate joye in the same cite.

But afore there was in the same cite a certayne man, called Simon, which vsed witches craft, and bewitched people of Samaria, sayenge, that he was a man which could do greate thinges. And they all regarded him from the leest vnto greatest, sayde: This is the power of God which is greate. But they regarded him, because that of longe tyme he had bewitched them with his sorcery.

Howbeit when they beleued Philippe preaching of kyngdome of God, and of the name of Iesu Christ, they were baptysed both mee and. Then Symon himself beleued also, and was baptysed, and cleued vnto Philippe. And wha he sawe the dedes and tokens that were done, he wondred.

When the Apostles which were at Ierusalem, herde, that Samaria had receaue the wordes of God, they sent vnto the Peter and Ihon. Which, wha they were come, prayed for these, they might receaue the holy goost. For as yet he was come vpon none of them but they were baptysed onely in the name of Christ Iesu. Then layed they their hadies on them, and they receaue the holy goost.

But whan Simon sawe, that by the layenge of the Apostles hadies the holy goost was geuen, he offred the money, and sayde: Geue me also this power, that, on whomsoever I put the hodies, he maye receaue the holy goost. Howbeit Peter sayde vnto him: Perishe thou with thy money, because thou thinkest that the gift of God maye be optayned with money. Thou shalt haue nether parte ner felasiphe in this worde, for thy hert is not righte before God. Repente thyself of this thy wickednesse, and praye vnto God, if the thought of thy hert maye be forgue. For I se, thou art full of bitter gall, and wrapped in wrighthouse.

Then answered Simon, sayde: Praye ye vnto the LORDE for me, none of these thinges wherof ye haue spoken, come vpon me. And they, wha they had testified and spokethe the worde of the LORDE, turned agayne to Ierusalem, and preached the Gospell in many townes of the Samaritane.

But the angell of the LORDE spake vnto Philippe, and sayde: Aryste, goe toward the South, vnto the waye that goeth downe from Ierusalem vnto Gaza, which is deserte. And he rose, and wente on. And beholde, a mene of the Morians lode (a chamberlayne and of auctorite with Candise y quene of the londe of the Morians) which had the rule of all hir treasuries, came came to Ierusalen to worship, and returned home agayne, and satt vpon his charret, and red the prophet Essay.

The sprete sayde vnto Philippe: Goe neare, and ioyne thy selfe to yonder charret. The rame Philippe vnto him, and herde him rede the prophet Essay, and sayde: Vnderstode thou what thou readest? He sayde: How can I, excepte some ma enourme me?

And he desyred Philippe, that he wolde come vp, and syt with hym. The tenoure of the scripture which he red, was this: He was led as a shepe to be slayne, and as a lambe voycelesse before his sherer, so opened he not his mouth. In his humblenesse is his judgment exalted. Who shal declare his generacion? for his life is taken away from the earth. Then answered the chamberlayne vnto Philippe, and sayde: I praye the, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himselfe, or of some other man?

Philippe opened his mouth, and beganne at this scripture, and preache him the Gospell of Iesus. And as they wete on their waye, they came to a water. And the chamberlayne sayde: Beholde, here is water, what hyndereth me to be baptysed? Philippe sayde: Yi thou beleeue from thy whole herte, thou mayest. He answered, and sayde: I beleue, that Iesus Christ is the sonne of God. And he commanded to holde styll the charet, and they wente downe in to the water, both Philippe and the chamberlayne. And he baptysed hym. But when they were come vp out of the water, the spret of the LORDE toke Philippe awaye. And the Chamberlayne sawe him nomore. But he wente on his waye reioysinge. As for Philippe, he was founde at Aszdod, and walked aboute, and preache the Gospell vnto all the cities,yll he came to Cesarea.

The 4. Chapter.

SAUL was yet breathinge out threatnynges and slaughter* agaynst the disciples of the LORDE. And wente vnto y hye preste, and desyre of hym letters to Damascou vnto the synagogues, that yf he fonde euy of this waye (whether they were men or wemen) he mighte brynge the bounde vnto Ierusalem. And as he was goinge on his journey, it fortuned, that he came nye vnto Damascou, and sodenly there shyned rounde aboute hi a light frō heauē, and he fell to the earthe, and herde a voyce, which synde vnto hym: Saul Saul why persecutest thou me? He synde: LORDE, who art thou? The LORDE synde: I am Iesus, whο thou persecutest. It shalbe harde for y to kycke agaynst the prycke. And he both tremblinge and as-them bounde vnto the hye prestes? But Saul increased in strength, g cofoounded y Iewes which dwelt at Damascon, and affirmed y this was very Christ.

And after many dayes the Iewes helde a councell togeth er to kyll him. But it was tolde Saul, that they layed wyate for him. "And they wateyed at y gates daye g night, that they might kyll him. "Then the disciples toke him by nighte, g put him thorow the wall, and let him downe in a baskell.

"But whan Saul came to Ierusalem, he assayed to ioyne himself to y disciples. And they were all agrayed of him, and beleued not, y he was a disciple. Neuertheles Barnabas toke him, and broughte him to the Apostles, and tolde them how he had sene the LORDE in the waye, and how he spake to hym, g how he had done boldly at Damascon in the name of lesu. And he was with them, and wente out and in at Ierusale, and quyte him selfe boldly in y name of y LORDE lesu. He spake also, and disputed with y Grekes. But they weete to slaye him.

whan the brethren knewe y, c they brought him to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tharais. So the congregacions had rest thorow out all Iewry, and Galilie, and Samaria, g were edified, and walked in the feare of the LORDE, and were fylled with the confort of the holy goost.

It chauned that as Peter walked thorow all quarters, he came also vnto y sayntes which dwelt at Lydda. There founde he a man named Eneas, which had lyen vpon his bedd eighte yeares sicke of y palsy. And Peter sayde vnto him: Eneas, lesus Christ make the whole, ariye, and make thy bedd for thy self. And he arose immediatly. And all they that dwelt at Lydda and at Sarona, sawe him, and turned vnto the LORDE.

At Ioppa there was a certayne woman that was a disciple, named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: y same was full of good workes and almesse dedes, which she dyd. But it chauned at the same tyme, that she was sicke, and dyed. Then wasshed they her, and layed her in a chaiber. But for so much as Lydda was nye vnto Ioppa, and the disciples herde that Peter was there, they sent two men vnto him, and desyred him, y he wolde take it for no grefe to come vnto them.

Peter rose, and came with the. And wha he was come, they broughte him in to the chamber, and all the wyddowes stode rounde aboute him, wepynge, and shewed him the cotes and garmetes, which Dorcas made whyle she was with them. And wha Peter had put them all forth, he kneeld downe, made his prayer, and turne vnto the body, and sayde: Tabitha, ryse vp. And she opene hir eyes: and whan she sawe Peter, she sat her downe agayne. But he gaue her the hande, and lifte her vp, and called the sayntes and the wedowes, and shewed her there aluye. And it was knowne thorow out all Ioppa, g many beleued on y LORDE. And it for- tuned, y he taried a loge season at Ioppa by one Simo, which was a tanner.

The r. Chapter.

THERE was a man at Cesarea, named A Cornelius (a captayne of y copany, which is called y Italianysh) a deoute man, g one that feared God with all his house, g gaue moch almesse to y people, and prayed God allwaye. The same sawe in a vision openly (aboute the nyghte houre of the daye) an angell of God entringe in to him, and sayenge vnto hym: Cornelius. He loked vpon him, and was agrayed, and sayde: LORDE, what is it? He sayde vnto hym: Thy prayers thine almes on come vp in to remembreunce before God. And now sende men vnto Ioppa, g call for Simo, whose syname is Peter, which is at lodginge with one Symon a tanner, whose house lyeth by y see syde: he shal tell y, what thou oughtest to do. And wha the angell which spake to Cornelius, was departed, he called two of his housholde seruauntes, g a deoute soodyer, of thc that wayted vpon him: and tolde them all, and sent the to Ioppa.

On the nexte daye after whan these were goinge on their journey, and came nye vnto the cite, Peter y wente vp in to a chamber to praye aboute the sixte houre. And whan he was hoggrie, he wolde haue eat: But whyle they made ready for him, he fell in to a trauence, and sawe haue open, and a vessell comynge downe vnto him, as it had bene a greate lymâ colthe, knytt at the foure corners, and was let downe to y earth, wherin were all maner of foure foted beastes of the earth, γ wylde beeastes, and worsmes, and foules of the aire. And there came a voyce vnto him: Ryse Peter, slaye, γ eate. But Peter sayde: Oh no, LORDE, † for I neuer eate any commone or vnclene thinge. And the voyce spake vnto him agayne 早上 secâde tymne: What God hath clensed, 早上 make not thou vnclene. This was done thryse. And 早上 vessell was receaued vp agayne in to heauen.

But whyle Peter was comembred in him selfe, what maner of vision this shulde be which he had sene, beholde, the men 早上 were sent from Cornelius, enquered after Simôs house, and stode before the dore, and called, and axed whether Simon (whose synname was Peter) were lodged there. Whyle Peter was musinge of the vision, the sprete sayde vnto him: beholde, the men seke the. Arys therfore, and get the downe, γ go with the, and doute not, for I haue sent them.

Then wente Peter downe to the men, 早上 were sent vnto him from Cornelius, and sayde: lo, I am he whom ye seke: what is 早上 cause, wherfore ye are come? They sayde: Cornelius the capitayne, a just man and one that feareth God, and of good reporte amôge all the people of the Iewes, was warned by an holy angell, to sende for the in to his house, and to heare wordes of the. Then called he them in, and lodged them.

The nexte daye after wente Peter forth with them, and certayne brethren of Ioppa bare him company. And 早上 daye folowinge came they to Cesarea. Cornelius wayted for the, and had called together his kynyszfolkes and speciall frendes. And as it chaunced 早上 Peter came in, Cornelius mett him, and fell downe at his fete, γ worshipped him. But Peter toke him vp, and sayde: 早上 Shonde vp, I am a man also. And as he talked with him, he wente in, and founde many that were come together, and he sayde vnto them: Ye knowe, that it is not laufull for a man beyng a Iewe 早上 to ioyne him selfe or to come to a straunger. But God hath shewed me, 早上 I shulde call no man commone or vnclene. Therefore haue I not douted to come, as soone as I was sent for.

I axe you therfore, for what intent haue ye sent for me?

Cornelius sayde: It is now foure dayes agoon, then fasted I, and at the nyenth houre I prayed in my house, and beholde, there stode a man before me in a bryghte clothinge, and sayde: Cornelius, thy prayer is herde, and thine almesse deedes are had in remembreancie in the sighte of God. Send therfore to Ioppa, and call for one Simon (whose synname is Peter) which is at lodginge in 早上 house of Simon 早上 tâner, by the see sayde: 早上 same wha he commeth, shall speake vnto 早上. Then sent I vnto the immediatly, and thou hast done well, that thou art come. Now are we all here presente before God, to heare all things that are commande the of God.

Peter openes his mouth, γ sayde: Now perceau I of a truth, that God hath no respecte of personnes, 早上 but in all people he 早上 seareth him, and worketh rightousenes, is accepted vnto him. Ye knowe of 早上 preachers that God sent vnto the children of Israel, preachers thorow Iesus Christ (which is LORDE ouer all) which preachers was published thorow out all Iewry, 早上 and begane in Galile after 早上 baptyme that Ihon preached, how God 早上 anointed the same Iesus of Nazareth with the holy goost and with power, which wente aboute, γ dyd good, and healed all those that were oppressed of the deuell, for God was with him. And we are witnesses of all that he dyd in the londe of the Iewes, γ at Jerusalem. Whom they slewe, and hanged on tre.

Him God rayes vp on the thirde daye, 早上 and caused him to be openly shewed, not to all the people, but to 早上 chosen witnesses of God euyn vnto vs, which ate γ dronke with him, after he was rysen vp from the dee. And he commandes vs to preach vnto the people, 早上 and to testifie, that it is he which is ordyned of God a iudge of the lyuynge and of the deed. Of him beare all the prophets wytnessey, that thorow his name all they 早上 beleeu in him, shall receauce remyssion of synnes. Whyle Peter was yet speakingynge these wordes, the holy goost fell vpô all thae that herkened vnto the worde. And the faithfull of the circüision which came with Peter, were astonnyed, because that the gifte of the holy goost was shed out also vpon the Heythen. For they herde that they spake with tongues, and magnified God. Thē answered Peter: *Maye eny man forbryde water, that these shulde not be baptesyd, which haue receaued the holy goost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptesyd in the name of the LORDE. Thē prayed they him, that he wolde tary there certayne dayes.

The ri. Chapter.

THE Apostles and the brethren that were in Iewrye, herde saye, that the Heythen also had receaued the worde of God. And whan Peter was come vp to Jerusalem, they that were of the circucisicion, chode with him, and sayde: *Thou wentest in to men that are vnecircuysed, and hast eaten with them. But Peter beganne, and expounded the thing in order vnto thē and sayde: I was in the cite of Ioppa preyge, and in a trauancé I saw a vision, a vessell commyngye downe, as it had bene a greate lynne clothe with foure corners, and let downe from heauen, and came vnto me. In to the which I loked, and considered, and sawe foure foted beastes of the earth, and wylde beastes, and wormes, and foules of the ayre. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: Ryse Peter, slaye, eate. But I sayde: Oh no, LORDE, for there neuer entred eny commen or vnclene thinge in to my mouth. Neuerthelesse the voyce answered me agayne from heauen: What God hath clensed, that call not thou vnclene. This was done thre tymes, and all was taken vp agayne in to heauen.

And beholde, immediatly stode there thre men before the dore of the house that I was in, sent from Cesarea vnto me. But the sprete sayde vnto me, that I shulde go with the and doute nothinge. *These sixe brethren also came with me, and we entred in to the mans house.

And he shewed us, how he had sene an angell standinge in his house, which sayde vnto hym: Sende men to Ioppa, and call for Simon (whose synname is Peter) he shall tell the worde, wherby thou and all thys house shall be saued. But when I beganne to speake, The holy goost fell vpō them, like as vpon vs at the begynnynge. Then thoughte I vpon the worde of the LORDE, how he sayde: I hon baptesyd with water, but ye shalbe baptesyd with the holy goost. For as muche then as God hath geuen them like giftes, as vnto vs, which beleeue on the LORDE Iesu Christ, who was I, that I shulde be able to withstode God? When they herde this, they helde their peace, and prayed God, and sayde: Then hath God also to the Heithen graunted repentance vnto life.

*They that were sene abrode thorow this troublous rose aboute Steuen, walked on euery syde vntyl Phenices, and Cipers, and Antioche, and spake the worde vnto noman but onely vnto the Iewes. Neuerthelesse some of these were men of Cipers and Cyren, which came to Antioche, and spake also vnto the Grekes, preached the Gospell of the LORDE Iesu. And the hande of the LORDE was with these. And a greate nombre beleued, and turned vnto the LORDE.

This tydinges of them came to the eares of the cogregacion at Jerusalem. And they sent Barnabas, that he shulde go vnto Antioche. Which whan he was come thither, preached the grace of God, he was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of hert they wolde continue in the LORDE. For he was a good man, full of the holy goost and faith. And there was a greate multitude of people added vnto the LORDE. But Barnabas departed vnto Tharsus, to seke Saul. And whan he had fonde hym, he brought hym to Antioche. It chauised, that a whole yeare they were there cœurserante together in the cogregacion, taughte much people, so that the disciples at Antioche were first called Christen.

In those dayes came there prophetes from Jerusalem vnto Antioche. And one of them (whose name was Agabus) stode vp, and declared by the sprete a greate derth, that shulde come ouer the whole compass of the earth: which came to passe vnder the Emperour Claudius. But the disciples concluded (euerie one acordinge to his abylite) to sende an handreachinge vnto the brethren that were in Iewry: which thinge they also dyd, and sent it by the handes of Barnabas and Saul.

At the same tyne layed kyng Herode handes vpon certayne of the congregacion, to vexe them. As for *Iames the brother of Ihou, him he slewe with the swerde. And when he sawe that it pleased the Iewes, he proceeded farther to take Peter also. But it was Easter. Now whan he had taken him, he put him in preson, and deluyered him vnto foure quaternions of sondyers, to kepe him: and thought after Easter to bringe him forth to the people. And Peter was kepte in the preson. *But prayer was made without ceasing of the congregacion, vnto God for him. And whan Herode wold haue broughte him out vnto the people, in the same nighte splete Peter betwene two sondiers, bounde with two cheynes. And the kepers before the dore kepte the preson.

And beholde, the angell of the LORDE was there presente, and a lighte shyned in the habitacion, and he smote Peter on the syde, and waked him vp, and sayde: Aryse vp quckly. And the cheynes fell of from his hondes. And the angell sayde vnto him: Gyrde the, and put on thy shues. And he dyd so. And he sayde vnto him: Cast thy mantle aboute the, and folowe me. And he wente out, and folowed him, and wysst not, that it was trueth that was done by ë angell, but thoughte he had sene a vision. Neuertheles they wente thorow the first and seconde watch, and came to the yron gate, that ledeth vnto the cite, which opened to the by his awne acorde. And they wente out, and passed thorow one strete, and immediatly the angell departed from him.

And whan Peter was come to himself, he sayde: Now I knowe of a trueth, that ë LORDE hath sent his angell, and deluyered me out of the honde of Herode, and from all the waytinge for of the people of the Iewes. And as he considered the thinge, he came to the house of Mary the mother of one Ihon, (which after his syrname was called Marke) where many were gathered together, and prayed. As Peter knocked at the entrye dore, there came forth a damsell to herken, named Rhoda. And whan she knewe Peters voyce, she opened not the entrye for gladnes, but ranne in, and tolde, that Peter stode before ë entrye. But they sayde vnto her: Thou art mad. Neuertheles she abode by it, that is was so. They sayde: it is his angell. But Peter continualley knockinge. When they opened the dore, they sawe him, and were astonnyed. But he beckened vnto them with the hande, to holde their peace, and tolde them, how the LORDE had broughte him out of the preson. And he sayde: Shewe this vnto Iames, and to the brethren. And he departed, and wete in to another place.

Whan it was daye, there was not a little a dood amoûge the sondiers, what was become of Peter. Whan Herode had called for him, and founde him not, he caused the kepers to be examyned, and commanded the to be caried awaye, and he wente downe fro Jewry vnto Cesarea, and there abode. But he was displeased with them of Tyre and Sidõ. Neuertheles they came vnto him with one acorde, and made intercession to Blastus the kynges chamberlayne, and desired peace, because their coutrie was norished by the kynges londe. But vpon a daye appoynted, Herode put on ë kyngly apparell, sat him downe vpon the judged seate, and made an oracion vnto them. As for the people, they cried therto: This is a voyce of God, and not of a man. Immediatly the angell of the LORDE smote him, because he gaue not God the honoure: And he was eaten vp of wormes,* and gaue vp the goost. But the worde of God grewe, and multiplyed. As for Barnabas and Saul, they came agayne to Jerusalem, and deluyered the handreachinge, and toke with them Ihon, whose syrname was Marke.

THERE were at Antioche in the congregacion, prophetes and teachers, as Barnabas, and Simon called Niger, and Lucius of Cyren, and Manahen Herodes the Tetrachas norsfelowe, and Saul. As they serued ë LORDE, and fasted, the holy goost sayde: Separate me out Barnabas and Saul for the worke,* where vnto I haue called them. Then fasted they and prayed, and layed the handes on them, and let them go. And they beyng sent of the holy goost, came vnto Seleucia, from thence they sayled vnto Cyperes. And whan they were come in to the cite Salamin, they shewed the worde of God in the syna-

Chapter 13.

And when they had gone thorow out the yle vnto the cyte of Paphos, they founde a certayne Sorcerer and false prophete, a Iewe (whose name was Barisien) which was with Sergius Paulus the ruler of the courte, a man of vynderstandinge. The same called Barnabas and Saul vnto him, and desyred to heare y wordes of God. Then the Sorcerer Elimas (for so was his name by interpretacion) withstode thee, and soughte to turne awaye the ruler fro the faith. But Saul which is also called Paul, beyinge full of the holy goost, loked vpon him, and sayde: O thou childe of the deuell, full of all suttyltie and all disseasantelles, and enemie of all righteoussenes, thou ceassest not to pernerte the straighte wayes of y LORDE. And now beholde, the haide of the LORDE commeth vpon the, and thou shalt be blinde, and not se the Sonne for a season. And immediatly there fell on him a myst and darknesse, and he wente aboue, and soughte them that shulde lede him by the hande. Whan the ruler sawe what was done, he beleued, and wodred at the doctrine of the LORDE.

Whan Paul and they that were with him, were departed by shippe fro Paphos, they came to Perga in the londe of Pamphilia. But Ihon departed from them, and wente agayne to Jerusalem. Neertheles they wandred thorow fro Perga, and came to Antioche in the londe of Pisidia, and wete in to the synagogge vpon the Sabbath daye, and sat downe. But after the lecturing of the lawe and of the prophetes, the rulers of the synagogge sent vnto them, sayenge: Good brethren, ye haue eny sermon to exorte the people, saye on. Then stode Paul vp, and becke ned with the hande (that they shulde holde their peace) and sayde:

Ye men of Israel, and ye that feare God, herke to: The God of this people chose oure fathers, and exalted the people, whan they were straungers in the lode of Egipte, and with a mightie arm broughte he them out of it. And by the space of ffortie yeares suffred he their maners in the wylardennesse, and destroyed seuen naciones in the lande of Canaan, and parted their londe amoyng them by lott. After that gaue he them judges by the space of foure hundreth and fiftie yeares, vnto the prophet Samuel. And after that they desyred a kyngye, and God gaue vnto them Saul the sonne of Cis, a man of the trybe of Ben Iamin, ffortye yeares longe. And whan he had put him downe, he set vp Dauid to be their kyngye, of whom he reported, sayenge: I haue founde Dauid the sonne of Jesse, a man after my hert, he shal fullfyll all my wyll.

Of this mans sede hath God (accordinge to the promesse) broughte forth vnto the people of Israel, y Sanioure Iesus: whan Ihon had first preached before his comynge the baptyme of repentance vnto Israel. But whan Ihon had fullfylld his course, he sayde: I am not he, that ye take me for. But beholde, there commeth one after me, whose shues of his fete I am not worthy to loswe. Ye men and brethren, ye children of the generacion of Abraham, and they that feare God amoyng you, vnto you is y wordes of this salvacion sent. For the inhabiteres of Jerusalem, and their rulers, for somoch as they knewe him not, ner yet the voyces of the prophetes (which are red euery Sabbath) have fullfylld them in condemnynge him. And though they founde no cause of death in him, yet desyred they Pilate to kyll him. And whan they had fullfylld all that was wrytten of him, they toke him downe from the tre, and layed him in a sepulcre. But on thirde daye God rysed him vp from the dead, and he appeared many dayes vnto the, that wente vp with him from Galilie vnto Jerusalem, which are his witnesses vnto the people.

And we also declare vnto you y promes, which was made vnto oure fathers, how that God hath fullfylld the same vnto vs their children, in y he rysed vp Iesus agayne. As it is wrytten in the seconde Psalm: Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the. But that he hath rysed him vp fro the dead, now more to returne to corrupcion, he sayde on this wyse: The grace promised to Dauid, wyl I faithfully kepe vnto you. Therfore sayeth he also in another place: Thou shalt not suffer thy Holy to se corrupcion. * For Dauenid, whan he in his tymne had serued the wyll of God, * he fell a slepe, and was layed by his fathers, a sawe corrupcion. But he who God raysed vp agayne, sawe no corrupcion.

Be it knowne vnto you therefores ye men and brethren, y thorow this man is preached vnto you y forvueenesse of synnes, and frō all y thinges, wherby ye mighte not be justifiyd in the lawe of Moses. But whosoever beleueth on this man, is justifiyd. Beware therfore, that it come not vpon you, which is spoken in the prophetes: Beholde ye despysers, c and wonder at it, and persifie, for I do a worke in youre tymne, which ye shal not beleue, yf eny man tell it you.

Whan the Iewes were gone out of the synagoge, the Heythen besoughte them, y they wolde speake y worde vnto them betwene the Sabbath dayes. And wha the congregation of the synagoge was broken vp, many Iewes and Proseltites y serued God, folowed Paul and Barnabas, which spake to them, and exorted them, that they shulde continue in the grace of God.

On y Sabbath folowinge, came almost the whole cite together, to heare the worde of God. Whan the Iewes sawe the people, they were full of indignacion, and spake agaynst that which was spoken of Paul, speakinge agaynst it, a blasphemyng. But Paul and Barnabas waxed bolde, and sayde: 4 It behoued first the worde of God to be spoken vnto you: but now that ye trust it frō you, and counte youre selues vnworthy of euerlastinge life, lo, 5 we turne to the Gentyles. For so hath the LORDE commaundde vs: 'I haue set the to be a lighte vnto y Gentyles, y thou be y Salvacion vnto the ende of the earth. Whan the Gentyles herd that, they were glad, and prayed the worde of the LORDE, and beleued, euē as many as were ordeyned to euerlastinge life. And the worde of y LORDE was spred abrode thorow out all the region. 6 Howbeit the Iewes moued the deoute and honorable wemen, and the chefe men of the cite, and raysed vp a persecucion agaynst Paul and Barnabas and expelled them out of their coastes. But they shoke of the dust of their fete agaynst them, and came to Iconium. And the disciples were fylled with ioye and with the holy goost.

The riij. Chapter.

I T furtuned at Iconium, that they wete both together in to the synagoge of the Iewes, and spake so, that a great multitude of the Iewes a of the Grekes beleued. But the vnbeleuyng Iewes moued and disquyeted the soules of the Heythē agaynst the brethren. So they had their byenge there a lōge season, and quyte them selues boldly in the LORDE, which gaue testimony vnto the worde of his grace, and caused tokens and 4 wonders to be done by their handes. Howbeyt the multitude of the cite was deuyded, some helde with the Iewes, and some with the Apostles.

But whan there rose vp an insurrection of the Heythē and of y Iewes, and of their rulers, to put them to shame, and to stone the, they perecaued it, and fled vnto lystra and Derba cities of y countre of Licaonia, and vnto y region that lyeth rounde aboute, and there they preached the Gospel.

And amonge them of Lystra, there was a man, which sat byenge impotent of his fete, and was crepell frō his mothers wombe, and had neuer walked, the same herde Paul speake. And whan he behelde him, and perecaued that he had faith to be made whole, he sayde with a loude voyce: Stonde vp righte on thy fete. And he sprange vp and walked. But whan the people sawe what Paul had done, they lifte vp their voyce, and sayde in y speache of Lycaonia: The goddes are become like vnto men, and are come downe vnto vs. And they called Barnabas Iupiter, and Paul Mercurius, because he was the preacher. But Iupiters prest which dwelt before their cite, broughte oxen and garlandes before the gate, and wolde haue done sacrifice with the people.

Whan y Apostles Barnabas and Paul herde that, they rent their clothes, and ranne in amonge the people, cryenge and sayenge: 4 Ye me, Why do ye this? We are mortall me also like vnto you, a preach vnto you y Gospell, that ye shulde turne from these

The Acts of the Apostles

Chap. 14.

And there came certaine frō Iewry, and taughte the brethren: † Except ye be circumcised after the maner of Moses, ye can not be saved. Now whā there rose a discēson, and Paul and Barnabas had set them selues harte agaynst them; † they ordeyned, that Paul and Barnabas and certayne other of them shulde go vp to Ierusalem vnto the Apostles and Elders, aboute this questiō. And they were broughte on their waye by ἂ κοινονεῖν, ἃ ψαλλεῖς Φενίκης καὶ Ἰσραήλ, and declared the κοινονεῖν of the Heythen, and broughte greate ioye vnto all the brethren. When they came to Ierusalem, they were receaue of ἂ κοινονεῖν of the Apostles, and of the Elders, ἃ they tolde how greate thinges God had done with thē. Then rose there vp certaine of the secte of ἂ Προφήτης (which beleued) and sayde: They must be circumcysed and commanded, to kepe the lawe of Moses. But the Apostles and Elders came together, to reason vpon this matter.

Now whan there was much disputinge Peter rose vp, and sayde vnto thē: Ye men and brethren, ye knowe that a good whyle agoo, God chose amonge vs, ἃ the Heythe with my mouth shulde heare the worde of the Gospell, and beleue. And God the knower of hertes bare wytnesse ouer thē, and gauε thē the holy goost, like as vn to ἃ put no difference betwixte vs ἃ them, and purified their hertes thorow fayth. Now therfore why tempte ye God, with layenge vp ἃ discēles neckes the yocke, ἃ which nether oure fathers ner we were able to beare? But we beleue to be sauned thorow the grace of the Κύριος Christ, like as they also. Then all ἃ multitude helde their peace, and gaue audience vnto Paul and Barnabas, which tolde how greate tokens and wonders God had done by thē amōge the Heythen. Afterwarde whan they helde their peace, Iames answered, and sayde: Ye men and brethren, herke vnto me. Μωυσῆ hath tolde, how God at the first vysited to receaue a people vnto his name from amonge the Heythen. And vnto this agree ἂ wordes of the prophetes, as it is wyttē: After this wyll I returne and wyll buylede agayne ἂ tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen downe, and that which is fallen in decaye therof, wyll I buylede agayne, and wyll set it vp, that the residue of men maye seke after the Κύριος: ἃ also the Heythen vpō whom my name is named, sayeth the Κύριος, which doth all these thinges. Knowne vnto God are all his workes from the begynynge of ἂ worde. Wherfore my sentence is, that they which from amonge the Heythen are turned vnto

God, be not disquyeted, but to wryte vnto them, that they absteyne them selues from sylthynesse of * Idols, from + whordome, and from † strangled, and bloude. For Moses hath of olde tyne in every cite them that preach him: and he is red in the synagogues every Sabbath daye.

And the Apostles and Elders with the whole congregacion thoughte it good, to chose out men of them, and to sende them vnto Antioche with Paul and Barnabas, namely § Iudas, whose syrname was Barsabas, and Sylas (which were chefe men amoge the brethren) and gaue the letters in their handes after this maner:

We the Apostles and Elders a brethen, wysh health vnto the brethren of the Heythe which are at Antioche, and Syria and Celicia. For so much as we haue herde that certayne of oures are departed, and haue troubled you, and combred youre myndes, sayenge: ye must be circumsyed, and kepe ✞ lawe (to whom we gaue no soch commandement) it semed good vnto vs, beynge gathered together with one accorde, to chose out men, and to sende them vnto you, with oure beloued Barnabas and Paul, men that haue † ioperded their lyues for ✞ name of oure LORDE Jesus Christ. Therfore haue we sent Iudas and Sylas, which shall also tell you the same with wordes. For it pleased the holy goost and vs, to laye no charge vpon you, more then these necessary pouynes: That ye absteyne from the § offerings of Idols, and from bloude, and from strangled, and from whordome. From the which ye absteyne youre selues, ye shal do well. Fare ye well.

When these were sent forth, they came vnto Antioche, and gathered the multitude together, and deluyered the epistle. When they had red it, they were glad of that coo-locacion. As for Iudas and Sylas (which were prophets also) they exorted ✞ brethren with molc preachinge, and strethed them. And when they had taried there for a season, they were let go of the brethren in peace vnto the Apostles. Notwithstandinge Sylas thoughte it good tobye there still. But Paul and Barnabas coyntued at Antioche, teachinge and preachinge the worde of the LORDE, with other manys.

Neuertheles after certayne dayes Paul sayde vnto Barnabas: let vs go agayne, and vset oure brethren thorow all the cities (wherin we haue shewed the worde of the LORDE) how they do. But Barnabas gaue counsell, that they shulde take with the Ihon, whose syrname was Marke. Howbeit Paul thoughte it mete, not to take him with them,  which departed from them in Pamphilia, and wente not with them vnto the worke. And so sharpe was the strife betwene them, that they departed asunder ✞ one fro the other, and Barnabas toke Marke vnto him, and sayled vnto Cypers. But Paul chose Sylas, and departed, beynge coyntuted of the brethren vnto the grace of God. He wente thorow Syria and Celicia, stablishyne the congregacions.

The rbi. Chapter.

H e came vnto Derba and to Lystra, and a beholde, a certayne disciple was there named Timotheus, the sonne of a Jewish woman, which belued, but his father was a Greke: ✞ same had a good reporte amonge the brethren of Lystra and at Iconium. Paul wold that the same shulde go forth with him, and toke and ✞ circumcysed him because of the Iewes that were in those quarters. For they knewe all, that his father was a Greke. But as they wente thorow the cities, they deluyered them the sentence to kepe, ✞ which was concluded of the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem. The were the congregacions stablished in the faith, and increased in nombre daylie.

But as they wente thorow Phrygia and the loude of Galacia, they were §§ byfodden of the holy goost, to preache the worde in Asia. Howbeit as they came in to Mysia, they proued to take their journey in to Bithinia, and the sprete suffred them not.

Neuerthelss when they had passed thorow B Mysia, they came downe to Troada, and the there appeared a ✞ vision vnto Paul by night, that there was a man of Macedonia which stode and prayed him, and sayde: Come downe to Macedonia, and helpe vs. When he had seen ✞ vision, we soughte immediatly to go, vnto Macedonia, beynge certified, that ✞ LORDE had called vs thither, to preache the Gospell vnto them. The departed we

from Troada, and came the straight course vnto Samothracia, on the nexte daye to Neapolis, and from thence to Philippi, which is the chefe cite of the londe of Macedonia, and a fre cite. In this cite abode we certayne dayes.

On the daye of the Sabbathes wete we out of the cite besyde the water, where men were wonte to praye, and we sat downe, and spake vnto the wemen that resorted thither. And a deuoute woman (named Lydia) a seller of purple, out of the cite of Thyatira, herkened to, whose hert the LORDE opened that she gaue hede vnto the things that Paul spake. When she was baptysed and hir housholde, she besoughte vs, and sayde: If ye thynke that I beleue on the LORDE, then come in to my house, and a byde there. And she constrayned vs.

It fortuned when we wente to prayer, ye there mete vs a damsel, which had a preste of soyhtsayenge, and broughte hir master and mastresse greate vauntage with soyth sayenge: ye same folowed Paul and vs, and cryed, and sayde: These men are the seruantes of the most hye God, which shewe vs ye waye of saluacion. This dyd she many dayes. But Paul was not content with it, and turned him aboute, and sayde vnto the preste: I comande the in the name of Iesu Christ, that thou departe out of her. And he departe out at the same houre.

But wha hir master and mastresse sawe that the hope of their vauntage was gone, they toke Paul and Sylas, drue them in to the market place before ye rulers, and broughte the vnto the officers, and sayde: These men trouble oure cyte, are Iewes, and preach an ordynaunce, which is not lawfull for vs to receaue, ner to observer, seyngewe we are Romaynes. And the people ranne on them, and the officers rente their clothes, and commaunded them to be beaten with roddes. And whan they had beaten them sore, they cast they in preson, and commaunded the laye, to kepe them diligently. Which when he had receaued such commandement, he cast they in to the ymer preson, and put their fete in the stocks.

But at myndight prayed Paul and Sylas, and prayed God. And the presoners herde them. Sodenly was there a greate earth quake, so that the foundacions of the preson were shaken. And immediately were all the dores open, and all their bonds lowsd. Whau the keper of the preson waked out of slepe, and sawe the preson dores open, he drue out his swerde, and wolde haue kyld him selfe: for he thoughte they presoners had bene fled. But Paul cryed loude, and sayde: Do thy selfe no harme, for we are all here. He called for a lighte, and sprange in, and trembuled, and fell at the fete of Paul and Sylas, and broughte them out, and sayde: Syrs, what must I do, to be saued? They sayde: Beleue on the LORDE Iesu, and so shalt thou and thy housholde be saued. And they preached the worde of the LORDE vnto him, and to all that were in his house.

And he toke them to him in the same houre of the night, and waszhe their strypes. And immediatly was he baptysed, and all his. And he broughte them in to his house, and set them a table, and rieuysed with all his housholde, that he was become a beleuer on God.

And whan it was daye, the officers of the cite sent mynisters, and sayde: Let those men go. And the keper of the preson tolde this sayenge vnto Paul: The officers haue sent hither, that ye shulde be louwe. Now therfore get ye hewe, and go in peace. But Paul sayde vnto them: They haue beaten vs openly vncondemned (where as we are yet Romaynes) and haue cast vs in preson, and shulde they now trust vs out preuely? Not so, but let them come them sellues, and brynge vs out. The mynisters tolde these worde vnto the officers. And they feared, whan they herde that they were Romaynes, and came and besoughte them, and prayed the to departe out of the cite. Then wente they out of the preson, and entred in to the house of Lydia. And whan they had sene the brothren and comforted them, they departed.

The viij. Chapter.

As they made their journey thorow Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagoge of the Iewes. And Paul (as his maner was) wete in vnto them, and vpon thre Sabbathes he spake vnto them of the scripture, opened it vnto the, and alleged, *that Christ must you (sayde he) is & same Christ. And some of the beleued, and were ioyned vnto Paul and Sylas, a great multitude also of the denoute Grekes, and of the chefe wemen not a fewe.

But the styfneeked Iewes had indignacion, and toke vnto them certayne euell men which were vagabundes, and gathered a company, and set the cite in a rore, and preassed vnto the house of Iason, and soughte to brynge them out vnto the comon people. But when they founde them not, they drue Iason, and certayne brethren vnto the rulers of the cite,
and cryed: These that trouble all the worlde,
are come hither also, whom Iason hath re-ceaued preuely. And these all do contrary to the decrees of the Emperoure, sayenge, that there is another kyng, a one Iesus. They troubled the people, and the rulers of the cite, that herde this. And when they had receaued
a sufficient answerwe of Iason and of the other,
they let them go.

But the brethren immediatly sent awaye Paul and Sylas by night vnto Berea. When they came there, they wete in to the synagoge of the Iewes (for they were the Eldest amonge the at Thessalonica) which receaued the worde maruelous wyllingly, and *searched the scriptures daylie, whether it were euyn so.
Then beleued many of them, and worshipfull wemen off the Grekes, and men not a fewe.: But when the Iewes off Thessalonica had knowelge, that the worde off God was preached off Paul at Berea, they came, and moued the people there also. Howbeit the brethren sent Paul awaye then immediatly, to go vnto the see. As for Sylas and Timotheus, they abode there styll.

They that conueyed Paul, brought him vnto Athens. And when they had receaued a comauendement vnto Sylas and Timotheus, that they shulde come vnto him in all the haist, they wente their waye. But whyle Paul wayted for them at Athens, his sprete was moued in him, when he sawe the cite genue so to the worshipinge of ymage. And he spake vnto the Iewes and demoute personnes in the synagoge, & in s market daylie vnto the that came to him. But certayne Philosophers of Epicurees and Stoikes disputed with him.
And some sayde: What will this babler saye?
But some sayde: He semeth to be a tidinges brynger of new goddes (That was, because he had preached vnto the the Gospell of Iesus, a of the resurrection.) And they toke him, and broughte him before the counsell house, and sayde: Maye we not knowe, what new doctryne this is that thou teachest? For thou bryngeth straunge tidinges to oure eares?
We wolde knowe therfore, what this meaneth.
As for all they of Athens, and strangers a gestes, they gau the selues to nothinge els,
but either to tell, or to heare some newes.

Paul stode on the myddes of the comon place, and sayde: Ye me of Athens, I see that in all things ye are to supersticious. I have gone thorow, a sene youre gods seruice, and founde an alare, where vp was wrytten: To the vnknowne God. Now shewe I vnto you & same, whom ye worshippe ignorauntly. God which made s worlde, & all that therein is,
for so moch as he is LORDE of heauen and earth, dwelleth not in temples made of handes, nether is he worshipped with mens handes, as though he had nede of emy man, sayenge he himselfe geueth life and breth vnto
all men euery where: and hath made of one bloude all the generation of men to dwell vp all the face of s earth: and hath assigned borders appoynted before, how longe and farre they shulde dwell, that they shulde seke the LORDE, if they mighte fele and fynde him.

all men, after that he had raised him vp from the deed. Whan they herde the resurrection of the deed, some mocked. But some sayde: We wyl heare the agayne of this matter. So Paul departed from amonge them. Howbeit certayne men claue vnto him, and beleued: amonge whom was Dionisius, one of the counsell: and a woman named Damaris, and other with them.

The rbiij. Chapter.

AFTER that departed Paul fro Athens, and came to Corinth, and founde a Iewe named *Aquila, borne in Pòtus, which was lately come out of Italy: and his wife Priscilla (because the Emperor Claudius had commaundd all Iewes to departe from Rome) and he drue vnto thē. And because he was of the same craftes, he abode with thē, and wroughte. Their crafte was to make tentes. And he preached in the synagoge euery Sabbath daye, and exhorted the Iewes and the Grekes.

Whan Sylas and Timotheus were come fro Macedonia, Paul was constrainyd by the sprete to testifie vnto the Iewes, that Iesus was very Christ. But whā they sayde cōtrary and blasphemed, he shake his rayment, and sayde vnto them: Youre bloude be vpon youre awne heade. From hence forth I go blamelesse vnto the Gentyles. And he departed thence, and came in to the house of a man named Iustus, which feared God, and his house was nexte vnto the synagoge. Howbeit Crispus the chefe ruler of the synagoge, beleued on LORDE with all his housholde. And many of the Corinthians that gau audience, beleued, and were baptysyd:

The LORDE spake vnto Paul by a vision in the nighte: Be not afayed, but speake, and holde not thy peace, for I am with the: and noman shal imade the that shal hurte the, for I haue much people in this cite. He continued there a yeare and sixe monethes, and taught them the worde of God.

But whan Gallio was ruler of the countre of Achaia, the Iewes made insurreccion with one acorde agaynst Paul, he vndeceived him before the judgment seate, and sayde: This felowe counceleth men to worship God cōtrary to the lawe. Whan Paul was aboute to open his mouth, Gallio sayde vnto the Iewes: If it were a matter of worse or an euell dede (O ye Iewes) reason wolde that I shulde heare you: but ye it be a question of wordes, and of names, and of lawe amōge you, loke ye to it youre selues, I thinke not to be judge there ouer. And he drue them from the iudgment seate. Then all the Grekes toke Sosthenes the ruler of the Sinagoge, and smote him before the judgment seate. And Gallio cared for none of the things.

Paul after he had taried a good whyle, toke his leue of the brethren, and sayled in to Syria, Priscilla & Aquila bearing him company. And he shore his head at Cenchrea (for he had a vowe) came downe to Ephesus, and lefte them there. But he himselfe wite in to the synagoge, and reasoned with the Iewes. And they desired hym, that he wolde tary with them a longer season. And he cōsented not, but bad them farwele, and sayde: I must nede in ense wyse kepe this feast that commeth, at Ierusalem: but ye if God wyl, I wil returne agayne vnto you.

And he departed from Ephesus, and came to Cesarea, and wente vp, and saluted the congregation, and toke his iourney downe to Antioche, and taried there a certayne tyme, and departed, and walked thorow all the countre of Galatia and Phrigia by ordre, and strengthened all the disciples.

There came vnto Ephesus a certayne Iewe, named Apollo (borne at Alexādria) an eloquent man, and mightie in the scriptures: the same was informd in the waye of the LORDE, and spake fervently in the sprete, and taught diligently the thinges of the LORDE, and knewe but the baptyme of Ihon onely. The same beganne to speake boldly in the synagoge. Whan Aquila and Priscilla herde him, they toke him vnto thē, and expounded the waye of God vnto thē more perfectly. But whan he wolde go in to Achaia, the brethren wrote, and exorted the disciples to receaue him. And whan he was come thither, he helped them moch which beleued thorow grace. For he ouercame the Iewes mightely, and shewed openly by scripture, that Iesus was Christ.
The Actes of the Apostles.

Chap. rir.

BUT it fortune when Apollo was at Corinth, that Paul walked thorow the upper coasts, and came to Ephesus, and founde certayne discipes, vn to whom he sayde: Haue ye reconned ye holy goost, sence ye beleued? They sayde vnto hi: We haue not herde, whether there be an holy goost. He sayde vnto them: Where with then were ye baptysed? They sayde: With the baptyme of Ihon. Paul sayde: Ihon baptysed with the baptyme of repentance, and spake vnto ye people, that they shulde belene on him, which shulde come after him, that is, on Iesus, that the same is Christ. Whan they herde that, they were baptysed in the name of the LORDE Iesus. And whan Paul layed the hades on thè, the holy goost came vpon them, and they spake with tungen, and prophesied. And all the men were aboute twelue.

He wète in to § synagoge, and preached boldly thre monethes longe, teachinge, and geuyng them exortaciones of the kyngdome of God. But whan dyuerse waxed herde herted, and belened not, and spake euell of the waye of the LORDE before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the discipes, and disputed daylye in the scole of one called Tyranus. And this was done two yeares longe, so that all they which dwelt in Asia, herde the worde of the LORDE Iesus, both Iewes § Grekes. And God wroghte no small miracles by the handes of Paul, so that from his body there were broughte napkyns or partlettes vnto the sicke, and the diseases departed from them, and the euell spretes wente out of them.

But certayne of the vagabonde Iewes which were conturiers, vnderiokte to name ye name of the LORDE Iesus, ouer those that had euell spretes, and sayde: We charge you by Iesus whom Paul preacheth. They were seuen sonnes of one Scena a Iewe the bye prest, which dyd so. The euell sprete anwered, and sayde: Iesus I knowe, and Paul I knowe, but who are ye? And the ma in whò the euell sprete was, ranne vpon them, and ouercame them, and cast them vnder him, so that they fled out of the same house naked and wounded. This was knowne vnto all the Iewes and Grekes which dwelt at Ephesus, and there fell a feare vpon them all. And ye name of the LORDE Iesus was magnified. Many of thò also that belened, came and cofuelled, and shewed their worke. But many of them that had vseyd curious craftes, broughte the bokes together, and burnt the them openly: and they counted the pryce of them, and founde it of money fiftie thousande pens. So mightely grewe ye worde of the LORDE, and preuayled.

Whan this was done, Paul purposèd in to sprete to take his journey thorow Macedonia and Achaia, and to go to Ierusale, and sayde: After that I haue bene there, I must se Rome also. And he sent in to Macedonia two that ministred vnto him, Timotheus and Erastus. Whan he selfe remayned in Asia for a season. At the same tyme there rose no little a doo aboute that waye. For a certayne man named Demetrius a goldsmith, which made syluer shrynes for Diana, and broughte them of the crafte no small vaunte. Them he gathered together, and the felowworkme of the same occupacion, and sayde: Syrs, ye knowe that by this crafte we haue vaunte, and ye se and heare, that not onely at Ephesus, but also thorow out all Asia, Paul turneth away moch people with his persuaynge, and sayeth: They be not goddes that are made with hondes. Howbeit it shal not onely brynge oure occupacion to this poynte to be set at naught, but also the temple of great Diana shal from hence forth be despyed, and hir maisteye also shalbe destroyed, whò neuertheles all Asia and the worlde worshippeth.

Whan they herde this, they were full of wrath, cried out, and sayde: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians. And all ye cite was on a roore, and they ruszed in with one assent in to the open place, and toke Gaius and Aristarchus of Macedonia, Pauls companions. Whan Paul wolde haue gone in amonge the people, the discipes suffred him not. Certayne also of ye chefe of Asia which were Pauls good frendes, sent vnto him, and despyed him, that he shulde not preasse in to the open place. Some cried one thinge, some another. And the congregacion was out of quyete, and the more parte kneue not wherfore they were come together. Some of the people drue forth Alexander, whan ye Iewes thrust him forward. Alexander beckened with the handle, and wold haue genn the people an answere. But when they knewe that he was a Iewe, there arose a shoute of all, and cried the space of two houres: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians.

When the towne clarkede had styled the people, he sayde: Ye men of Ephesus, what man is it which knoweth not, that the cite of Ephesias is a worshippere of the greate goddesse Diana, and of the heauenely ymage? Seinge now that this can not be sayde agaynst, ye ought to be contente, and to do nothinge without aduysement. Ye haue broughte hither these men, which are nether church-robbers ner blasphemers off youre goddessse.

But yf Demetrius and they that are craftesmen with hym, haue ought to saye vn to eny man, the lawe is open, and there are rulers, let them accuse one another. But yf ye wil go aboute eny other thinge, it maye be determined in a laulfull congregacion. For we stonde in ioperdy to be accused of this dayes vproure: and yet is there no man gilte, of whom we mighte geue a rekenynge of this vproure. And when he had sayde this,
he let the congregacion parte.

The xvi. Chapter.

NOW when the vproure was ceasede, Paul called the disciples vnsto him, and toke his leue of them, and departed *to go in to Macedonia. And when he had gone thorow those partes, and exhorted them with many wordes, he came in to Grecelonde, and there abode thre monethes. But when the Iewes layede waye for him, as he was aboute to sayle in to Syria, he purposed to turne gayne thorow Macedonia. There accompanied him in to Asia, Sopater of Berrea: and of Thessalonica, Aristarchus and Secundus:
and Gaius of Derba, and Timotheus: but of Asia, Tychicus and *Trophimus. These gonne before, and taried for vs at Troada:
and they sayled after the Easter dayes from Philippes, vnsto ¥ fifth daye, and came to them vnsto Troada, and taried there seuen dayes.

Vpon one of the Sabbathes, when the disciples came together to breake bred, Paul preached vnsto them, wyllinge to departe on the morow, and continued the preachinge to mydnight. And there were many lightes in the chamber, where they were gathered together. There sat a yonge man named Eutyches, in a wyndow, and fell in to da depe spepe (whyle Paul was speakinge) and was overcomen with spepe, and fell downe from the thirde loft, and was taken vp deede. But Paul wente downe, and fell on hym, and embraced hym, and sayde: Make nothinge a do, for his soule is in hi. Then wente he vp, and brake the bred, and ate, and talked moch with thë, ytt the daye brake, and so departed. As for the yoge man, they broughte him alyue, and were not a little conforted.

But we wente afoire in to the shippe, and sayled towarde Asson, wyllinge there to receau Paul. For so had he appoynted, and wolde himselfe go on forte. Whan he was come to vs vnsto Asson, we toke him in, and came to Mitylenes, and sayled from thence,
and came on the nexte daye ouer agaynst Chios, and on the daye folowingwe we arnyed at Samos, and taried at Tragilion, and on the nexte daye came we to Mileton: for Paul had determined to sayle ouer by Ephesus, that he nede not to spende the tyme in Asia: for he haistede to be at Jerusalem vpô the Whitsondaye, yf it were possible for him.

But from Mileton he sent vnsto Ephesus,
and called for the Elders of the congregacion.
Whan they were come to him, he sayde vnsto them : Ye knowe sence the firste daye :that I came in to Asia, after what maner I haue bene with you at all tyme, and serued ¥ LORDE with all humblenesse of mynde, and with many teares and tentaions, which happened vnsto me by ¥ layenges of wayte of the Iewes, how ¥ I haue keppe backe nothinge ¥ was profitable, but that I haue shewed you, and taughte you openly, and privatlye from house to house. And haue testifiede both vnsto the Iewes ¥ to the Grekes the repentaunce towarde God, and faith towarde our LORDE Iesus.

And now beholde, I go bounde in ¥ sprete vnsto Ierusalem, not knowinge what shal happen
there vnsto me, but ¥ the holy goost ¥ witnesseth in euery cite, and sayeth, that bonds and troubles abyde me there. But ¶ I re-garde none of them, nether counte I my life dearer then my selfe, that I maye fullyll my course with ioye, and the office ¥ I haue receaued of the LORDE Iesus, to testifie the Gospel of the grace of God.

And now beholde, I knowe that ye shal se my face nomore, all ye, thorow whom I haue gone, and preacheth the kyngdome of God. Wherfore I take you to recorde this daye, that I am pure from the bloude of all men: For I haue kepeth nothinge backe, but haue shewed you all the councll of God. Take hede therefore vnto youre selues, and to all the flocke, amongethe which the holy goost hath set you to be Bishoppes, to fede the congregation of God, which he hath purchaced thorow his owne bloude. For this I knowe, *that after my departinghe there shal enter in amongethe you gresous stones, which shal not spare the flocke. Yee euery from amongethe youre awne selues shal men arysse, speakynghe peruerse doctrine, to draue disciples after them. Therefore awake, and remembre, that by the space of three yeares I ceaseth not to warne euery one off you both nighte and daye with teares.

And now brethren I commende you vnto God, and to ye worde of his grace, which is mightie to edifye you, and to geue you the encheritance amoung all them that are sanctified. *I haue not desyesd syluer, golde or rayment off euery off you. For ye youre selues knowe, that euery handes haue mynistered vnto my necesseties, and them that were with me. I haue shewed you all thinges, how that so labouringe ye oughte to receaueth the weake, and to remembre the worde of the LORDE, how that he saide: It is more blessed to geue, then to receaueth.

And whan he had saide this, he kneled downe, and prayed with them all. But there was moch wepynghe amongethe them all, and they fell aboute Pauls necke, and kyssed him, and were sory, most of all because of the worde which he had saide, that they shulde se his face nomore. And they accompanied him vnto the shippe.

The rii. Chaptr.

NOW whan it fortuned that we had launched forth and were departed from them, we came with a straight course vnto Coon, and on the daye folowinge vnto the Rhodes, and from thence vnto Patara. And whan we founde a shippe ready to sayle vnto Phenices, we wente aborde and set forth.

But wha we came within the sighte of Cyperes, we lefte it on the lefte hande, and sayled vnto Syria, and came vnto Tyre: for there the shippe shulde laye forth the ware. And whan we had founde disciples, we taried there seuen dayes. And they tolde Paul thorow the spret, that he shulde not go vp to Jerusalem. And it fortuned wha we had fulfilled those dayes, we departed, and wente our wayes, and they all broughte vs on our waye with wyues and childre, tyll we were come out of y cite, and we kneeld downe vpo the shore, and prayed. And whan we had taken ourleue one off another, we toke shippe, but they turned agayne vnto theirs. As for vs we ended the course from Tyre, and came to Ptolomaida, and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one daye.

On the nexte daye we y were with Paul, departed, and came vnto Cesarea, and entred in to the house of *Philippe the Euangelist (which was one of the seue) and abode with him. The same had foure daughters, which were virgins, § and prophesied. And as we taried there mo dayes, there came downe from Iewry a prophet, named *Agabus. Wha he was come vnto vs, he tolde Pauls gerdell, and bounde his hâdes and feate, and sayde: Thus sayeth y holy goost: The man whose gerdell this is, shall the Iews bynde thus at Jerusalem, and shall delyuer him in to the handes of the Heythene. Whan we herde this, both we and they that were of the same place, besoughte him, that he wolde not go vp to Jerusalem. Then answered Paul and sayde: What do ye, wepynghe, and breakynge my hert? For I am redye not onely to be bounde, but also to dye at Jerusalem for ye name of the LORDE Iesus. But wha he wolde not be persuaded, we ceassed, and sayde: The will of the LORDE be fullfilled. And after those dayes we were ready, and wente vp to Jerusalem: There came with vs also certayne of the disciples off Cesarea, and broughte with them one of Cyperes, named Mnason, an olde disciple, with whom we shulde lodge. Now wha we came to Jerusalem, the brethren receaued vs gladly. But on the nexte daye Paul wente in with vs vnto Iannes, and all the Elders came together. And whan he had saluted them, he tolde by order, what God had done amōge the Heythen.

E When they herde that, they prayed the LORDE, and sayde vnto him: Brother, thou seyst how many thousand Iewes there are which beleue, and are all Zelous ouer ÿ lawe. But they are enforcied against the, that thou teachest all the Iewes which are amōge the Heythen, to forsake Moses, and sayest that they oughte not to circumsyce their children, ner to walke after the same custome. What is it therfore? The multitude must nedes come together, for they shall hear that thou art come. Do this therfore that we saye vnto the: We haue four men, which haue a *vowe on them, take them vnto ÿ, and purifie thyselfe with them, and do the cost on them, that they maye shawe their heads: and they shall knowe, that it is nothinge, wherof they are enforcied against the, but that thou also walkest and kepest the lawe. For as touchinge them that beleue amōge the Heythen, † we haue wryten, and concluded, that they shulde obserue no soch, but onely to kepe them selues from the offeringes of Idols, from bloude, from stragled, and from whordome. *Then Paul toke the men vnto him, and was purifie with them on the nexte daye, and entred in to the temple, declaringe that he fulfilled the dayes of purificacion, tyll there was an offeringe offerd for every one of them. But when the seuen dayes were almost fulfilled, the Iewes of Asia sawe him in the temple, and moued all the people, layed handes vpon him, and cryed: Ye men of Israel, helpe, this is the man, that teacheth all men euery where agaynst oure people, the lawe, and this place. He hath broughte Grekes also in to the temple, and hath defyled this holy place. For they had sene † Trophimus the Ephesian with him in the cite, him they thoughte ÿ Paul had broughte in to the temple. And all the cite was moued, and the people ranne together. And they toke Paul, and drue him out of the temple, and forth with the dores were shut to.

But when they wete aboute to kyll him, tydings came to the chefe captayne of the company, that all Jerusalem was moued. Which immediately toke soudyers and captaynes vnto him, and ranne in amōge them. When they sawe the captayne and the soudyers, they lefte smytynge of Paul. * When the captayne came nye, he toke him, and commanded him to be bounde with two cheynes, and axed what he was, and what he had done. One cried this, another that amongst the people. But when he could not knowe the certente because of the rumoure, he commanded him to be caried in to the castell. And wha he came to the steppes, it fortuned that he was borne of ÿ soudyers because of the violence of the people. For the multitude off the people folowed after, and cryed: Awaye with him. When Paul was now to be caried in to the castell, he sayde vnto ÿ captayne: Maye I speake vnto the? He sayde: Canst thou Greke? Art not thou the Egipcian, which before these dayes maydest an vprooure, ÿ leddest out in to the wyldernesse foure thousande preuy murthurers? Paul sayde: I am a man which am a Iewe off † Tharisis, a citesyn of a famous cite in Celicia: I besoke the, suffre me to speake vnto the people. When he had geuen him lycence, Paul stode on the steppes, and beckened with the hande vnto the people. Now whan there was made a greate sylence, he speake vnto them in Hebrue, and sayde:

The 111. Chapter

YE men, brethren, and fathers, heare ÿ myne answere which I make vnto you. Whan they herde that he speake vnto them in the Hebrue, they kepede the more sylence. And he sayde: I am a man which am a Iewe, borne at Tharisis in Celicia, and broughte vp in this cite at the fete off  Gamaliel, enforcied diligently in the lawe of the fathers, and was feruent mynded to God warde, as ye all are also this daye, †† and I persecuted this waye vnto the death. I bounde them and deluyered them vnto preson, both men and women, as ÿ hye prest also doth beare me wytnesse, and all ÿ Elders: of whom I receaued letters vnto the brethren, and wente towaerde Damascon, that I mighte bryng the which were there, bounde to Ierusalem, to be punyshed.

But it fortuned as I made my iourney, and came nye vnto Damascon, aboute noone, sodenly there shone a greate lighte aboute me from heaven, and I fell to the earth, and here a voice which sayde vnto me: Saul, Saul, why persecuest thou me? I answered: Who art thou LORDE? And he sayde vnto me: I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecust. As for them that were with me, they saye: What lighte and were afrayed, but they herde not the voice of him that spake with me. I sayde: LORDE, what shal I do? The LORDE sayde vnto me: Arise, and go in to Damascon, there shal it be tolde ¥ of all that is appoynted the to do. But when I sawe nothinge for the brightnesse of the lighte, I was led by the hande of them that were with me, and came to Damascon.

There was one Ananias, a deuoute man after the lawe,* which had a good reporte of all the Iewes that dwelt there, the same came, and stepte vnto me, and sayde: Brether Saul, loke vp. And I loked vp vpon him the same houre. He sayde: The God of oure fathers hath ordeyned the before, that thou shouldest knowe his will, and se the thinge ¥ is rightfull, and heare the voice out of his mouth: for thou shalt be his wytnesse vnto all men, of the thinges which thou hast sene and herde. And now why tarest thou? Aryse, and be baptysed, and wasze awaye thy synnes, and * call vpon the name of the LORDE.

But it fortunede, that when I was come agayne to Ierusalem, and prayed in the temple, I was in a trauence, and sawe him. Then sayde he vnto me: Make haist, t and get the soone out of Ierusalem, for they wyl not receaue the witnesse that thou bearest of me. And I sayde: LORDE, they the selues knowe that I put in preson and bett in euery synagoge them that beleued on the. And wha the bloude of Steuë thy witnesse was shed, I stode by also, æ consented vnto his death, and keppe the clothes of them that slewe him. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, for § I wil sende the farre amonge the Heythen.

They gaue him audience vnto this worde, and lıt vp their voyage, æ sayde: Awaye with soch a felowe from the earth, for it is not reason that he shulde lyue. But as they cried, and cast of their clothes, æ thre dust in to the ayre, the captayne bad brynyge him in to the castell, and commanded him to be beaten with roddes and to be examyned, that he mighte knowe, for what cause they cried so vpon him. And when he bounde him with thonges, Paul sayde vnto the vndercaptayne that stode by: Is it lawfull for you to scourge a man that is a Romayne, and vncondemned? When the vndercaptayne herde that, he wete to the vpper captayne, and tolde him, and sayde? What wylt thou do? This man is a Romayne. Then came ¥ vpper captayne, and sayde vnto him: Tell me, art thou a Romayne? He sayde: Yee. And the vpper captayne answered: With a great summe optayned I this freedome. But Paul sayde: As for me, I am a Romayne borne. The straighte waye departed from him, they that shulde haue examyned him. And ¥ chefe captayne was afrayed, whan he knewe that he was a Romayne, and because he had bounde him. On the nexte daye wold he knowe the certentye wherfore he was accused of the Iewes, and he lowse from the bondes, and commaunded the hye prestes and all their councell to come together, and broughte Paul forth, and set him amonge them.

The iiiij. Chapter

PAUL behelde the councell, and sayde: A Ye men and brethren, I haue lyued with all good conscience before God vnto this daye: ¥ But the hye prest Ananias commaunded them that stode aboute him, to smyte hi on the mouth. Then sayde Paul vnto him: God shal smyte the thy paynted wall. ¥ Sytteste thou and judgeste me after the lawe, and commaundest me to be smytten contrary to ¥ lawe? And they that stode aboute hi, sayde: Reynlest thou Gods hye prest? And Paul sayde: Brethre, I wyster not that he was the hye prest. For it is wrytte: The rulere of thy people shalt thou not curse.

But when Paul knewe that the one parte was Saduces, and the other parte Pharises, he cried out in ¥ councell: Ye men and brethren, I am a Pharise, and the sonne of a Pharise, †† Of hope and resurrection of the deed am I judged. And whan he had so sayde, there arose a dissencion betwene ¥ Pharises and the Saduces, and the multitude was deuyed: for the Saduces saye that there is no resurrection, nether angell, ner

Then the upper captain let the young man depart, and charged him to tell no man, that he had shewed him this. And he called unto him two undercaptaynes, and sayde: Make ready two hundred soudyers, that they maye go to Cesarea, and three score and ten horsmen, and two hundred speare men at the thirde houre of the nighte, and deluer the beasts, that they maye set Paul theron, and brynge him safe vnto Felix the debyte, and he wrote a letter on this maner:

Claudius Lysias, vnto the most mightie Debyte Felix, greyncge. The Iewes had taken this man, and wolde haue slayyne him, then came I with soudyers, and rescued him, and perceaued that he is a Romayne. And when I wolde haue knowne the cause, wherfore they accused hi, I broughte him in to their councell: then perceaued I, that he was accused aboute questions of their lawe. But there was no accusation worthy of death or of bonde. And when it was shewed me, that certayne Iewes layed wayte for him, I sent him straight wayte vnto the, and commanded the accusers also, that loke what they had agaynst him, they shulde tell the same before the. Fare well.

The soudyers (as it was commanded them) toke Paul, and broughte him to Antipatras. But on the nexte daye, they lefte 3 horse men to go with him, and turned agayne to the castell. When these came to Cesarea, they deluynered the letter vnto the Debyte, and presented Paul before him also. When the Debyte had red the letter, he axed off what countrie he was. And whi he vnderstode that he was of Celicia, he sayde: I wil heare the, when thine accusers are come also. And he commanded him to be kepe in Herodes judgment house.

The tymiij. Chapter.

AFTER fyue dayes the hye prest Ananias came downe with the Elders, and with the Oratour Tertullus, which appeared before the Debyte against Paul. Whan Paul was called forth, Tertullus begaine to accuse him, and sayde: Seynge that we lyne in grete peace by the meanes of 3, and that many good things are done for this people thorow thy prouyndence (most mightie Felix) that alowe we euer and in all places with all thankes. Notwithstandinge 3 I be nomore.
tedious vnto the, I praye the, that of thy curtesy thou woldest heare vs a few wordes.

We haue founde this man a pestilent felowe, and a sterer vp of sedicion amonge all the Iewes thorow out all the worlde, and a manteyner of the secte of the Nazaretes, * and hath taken in hande also to suspende the temple, whom we toke, and wolde haue judged him acordinge to oure lawe. But Lysias the hye captyaine came vp vs, and with greate violence deluyered him out of oure handes, and commanded his accusers to come vnto the: of whom (yf thou wilt enquire) thou mayest haue knowlege of all these things, wherof we accuse him. The Iewes likewise affirmed and sayde, that it was euen so.

But Paul (whan the debye had beckened vnto him, that he shulde speake) answered: Seynge I knowe that thou hast bene iudge now many yeares amonste this people, I wil not be afferayed to answere for my selfe, because that thou mayest knowe, that there are yet nomore but twelue dayes sence I came vp to Ierusalem for to worshippe, and that they nether founde me in the temple disputinge with eny man, or makynge eny vprore amonste the people, ner in ¥ synagoges, ner in the citte: nether can they proue the things, wherof they accuse me. But this I  confesse vnto the, that after this waye which they call heresye, so worshippe I the God of my fathers, that I beleue all that is wrytten in the lawe and in the prophets, and haue hope towards God, that the same resurrection of the dead (which they them selves loke for also) shalbe, both of the iust and vniust. Therto fore studye I to haue allwaye a cleare conscience towarde God and towarde men.*

*But after many yeares I came and broughte allmesse vnto my people, and offeringe: ¥ wherupon they founde me purified in the temple without eny maner of rumoure or vnquyetnesse. Howbeit there were certayne Iewes out of Asia, which shulde be here presente before the, and accuse me, yf they had oughte agaynst me: or els lett these same here saye, yf they haue founde eny vnrighteousnesse in me, whyle I stonde here before ¥ councell: excepte it be for this one worde, that I cried stondinge amonste them: ¥ Of the resurrection off the dead am I judged of you this daye.

Whan Felix herde this, he dyferred the (for he knewe very well of that waye) and sayde: Whan Lysias the(vp)er captyaine commeth downe, I wyll knowe ¥ vtemost of youre matter. ‖ But he commanded the vndercaptayne to kepe Paul, and to let him haue rest, and that he shulde forbyde none of his acquantaunce to mynister vnto him, or to come vnto him.

But after certayne dayes came Felix with his wife Drusilla, which was a Iewesse, and called for Paul, and herde him of the faith in Christ. Howbeit whan Paul spake off righteounesse, and off chastite and off the judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered: Go thy waye for this tyme. Whan I haue a conuenent tyme, I wil sende for the. He hoped also, that money shulde haue bene geuen him of Paul, therto fore he oft for him, and commened with him. But after two yeares came Portius Festus in to felix rowne. Yet Felix wyllinge to shewe the Iewes a pleasure, left Paul bounde.

The 170. Chapter.

NOW whan Festus was come in to the countrie, ouer thre dayes he wente vp from Cesarea to Ierusalem. Then appeared the hye prestes and the chefe of the Iewes before him agaynst Paul, and intreated him, and desyred fauoure agaynst him, that he wolde sende for him to Ierusalem, and layed wayte for him, that they might slaye him by the waye. Then answered Festus, that Paul shulde be kepe at Cesarea, but that he himselfe wolde shortly go thither agayne. Let them therefore (sayde he) which are able amonste you, come downe with vs to accuse the man, yf there be ought in him.

Whan he had taryed amonste them more then ten dayes, he wente downe to Cesarea. And on the nexte daye he sat downe on the judgment seate, and commanded Paul to be broughte. Whan he was come, ¥ Iewes which were come downe from Ierusalem, stode rounde aboute him, and broughte vp many and greevous quares agaynst Paul, which they could not proue, whyle he answered for himselfe: I haue nether offended ought agaynst the lawe of the Iewes, ner agaynst the têpe, ner agaynst the Emperoure.

But Festus wylinge to shewe the Iewes a pleasure, answered Paul, and sayde: Wilt thou go vp to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me? But Paul sayde: I stonde at the Emperours judget seate, where I ought to be judged: to the Iewes hau I done no harme, as thou also knowest very well. Yf I have hurte any man, or committete any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to dye. But ye there are no soch thinges as they accuse me off, then maye no man deleyuer me vnto them. I appeale vnto the Emperoure. Then spake Festus with the Councell, and answered: Thou hast appealed vnto the Emperoure, to the Emperoure shalt thou go.

After certayne dayes came kyng Agrippa and Bernice to Cesarea to welcome Festus. And whan they had taried there many dayes, Festus rehearsed Pauls cause vnto the kyng, and sayde: There is a man lefte bounde of Felix, for whose cause the hye prestes and Elders of the Iewes appeared before me when I was at Jerusalem, and desyred a sentence agaynst hym. Vnto whom I answered: *It is not the maner of the Romaynes to deleyuer any man that he shulde perishe, before that he which is accused, haue his accusers presente, and receaue libertye to answere for hyme selfe to the accusacion. Wha they were come hither together, I made no delaye, but sat the nexte daye in jugdment, and commaunded the man to be broughte forth. Of whom, whan the accusers stode vp, they broughte no accusacion of soch thinges as I supposed: But had certayne questions agaynst hym of their awne supersticions, and of one Iesus deed, whom Paul affirmed to be alyne. Howbeit because I vnderstode not the question, I asxed hi, whethor he wolde go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters. But wha Paul had appeale, that he might be kepte vnto the knowleghe of the Emperoure, I commaunded him to be kepte, tyll I myghte sende him to the Emperoure."

Agrippa sayde vnto Festus: I wolde fayne heare the man also. He sayde: Tomorrow shalt thou heare him. And on the nexte daye came Agrippa a Bernice with grete pompe, and wete in to the comon halfe with the captaynes chefe me of the cite. And at Festus commaundement, Paul was broughte forth. And Festus sayde: Kyng Agrippa, and all ye men which are here with vs, ye se this man, about whom all the multitude of the Iewes haue entreated me, both at Jerusalem and here also, and cried, that he ought not to lyue any longer. But when I perceived that he had done nothing worthy of death, and that he himselfe also had appealed vnto the Emperoure, I determyned to sende hym, of wha I haue no certayne thinges to wryte vnto my lorde. Theryfore haue I caused hi to be broughte forth before you, specially before the (O kyng Agrippa) that after examinacion had, I might haue somewhat to wryte. For me thynke it an unreasoneable thinge to sende a presoner, and not to shewe the causes which are layed agaynst hym.

A GRIPPA sayde vnto Paul: Thou hast a leue to speake for thy selfe. The Paul stretchede forth the hande, and answered for hymselue: I thinke my selfe happye (O kyng Agrippa) because I shal answere this daye before the, of all the thinges wherof I am accused of the Iewes: specially for so much as thou art experte in all customes and questions, which are amonge the Iewes. Wherfore I beseche the, to heare me paciently.

My lyuynge truly from youth vp (how it was led from the begynnynge amonge this people at Jerusalem) knowe all the Iewes which knewe me afore at the first, yf they wolde testifye, for after the most straie secte of our Iewysh lawe," I lyued a Phariese. And now stonde I, and am judged because of the hope of the promes, that was made of God vnto our fathers, vnto the which (promes) our twelue trybes hope to come, seruynge God instatly daye and nighte. For the which hope sake (O kyng Agrippa) I am accused of the Iewes. Wherfore is this judget amonge you not to be beleued, that God rayseth vp the deed?

I also verelie thoughte by my selfe, that I oughte to do many contrary thinges cleane agaynst the name off Iesus off Nazareth; which I dyd at Jerusalem, when I shut vp many saynetes in preson, wherypon I receaue dactorit of y hye prestes. And wha they shulde be put to death, I broughte the sentence. And thorow all the synagoges I punished them of, and compellte the to blaspheme, and was exceedinge mad vpon them, and persecuted them euyn vnto straunge cities. Aboute which thinges as I wente towardes Damascon with autorite and lyence of the bye prestes, euem at myddaye (O kyng) I sawe in the waye, that a lighe from heauen (clearer then the brightnesse of the Sonne) shyned rounde aboute me, and them that journeyed with me.

But when we were all fallen downe to the earth, I herde a voyce speakeynge vnto me, and sayenge in Hebrue: Saul, Saul, why persecute thou me? It shalbe harde for the tokynke agaynst the prycke. But I sayde: LORDE, who art thou? He sayde: I am Iesus, whom thou persecutest. But ryse vp, and stonde vpon thy fete, for therfore haue I appeared vnto the, that I mighte ordyne the to be a mynister and witnessse of that thou hast sene, and that I wyll yet cause to appeare vnto the. And I wil delyuer the from the people, and from the Heythen, amonghe whome I wil now sende the, to opc their eyes, that they maye turne from the darknesse vnto the *lighe, and from the power of ye dewell vnto God, that they maye receaue forgenesesse of synnes, and the heritaunce with them that are sanctified by faith in me.

Wherfore (O kyng Agrippa) I was not faithlesse vnto ye heauncly vision, but shewed it first vnto them at Damascus, and at Ierusaleme, and in all the coastes of Iewry, and to the Heythen, that they shulde do peninne, and turne vnto God, and to do the righte works of peninne. For this cause the Iewes toke me in the temple, and wente aboute to kyll me. But thow the helpe of God lent vnto me, I stonde vnto this daye, and testifie both vnto small and greate, and saye no other thinge, the that ye prophets haue sayde (that it shulde come to passe) and Moses, that Christ shulde suffere, and be the first of the resureccion from the deed, and shew light vnto the people, and to the Heythen.

Whan he thus answered for himselfe, Festus sayde with a loude voyce: Paul, thou art besydes thy selfe, mouch lernynge maketh ye madd. But Paul sayde: I am not madd (most deare Festus) but speake the wordes of trueth and sobernesse: for ye kyng knoweth this well, vnto whom I speake frely. For I thinke that none of these thinges is hyd from him: for this was not done in a corner. Beloouest thou the prophets, O kyng Agrippa? I knowe that thou beleuest. Agrippa sayde vnto Paul: Thou persuadest me in a parte to become a Christen. Paul sayde: I wolde to God, that (not onely in a parte but all-together,) I mighte persuade not the onely, but all them that heare me this daye, to be soch I am, these bondes excepte. And whan he had spoken this, the kyng rose vp, and the Debyte, and Bernice, and they that sat with them, and wente asyde, and talked together, and sayde: This man hath done nothinge that is worthy of death or of bondes. But Agrippa sayde vnto Festus: This man mighte haue bene lowsed, ye he had not appeale vnto the Empeoure.

The 197. Chapter.

W HAN it was concluded that we shulde sayle in to Italy, they deluyere Paul and certayne other presoners to the vndercaptayne named Iulius, of the Empeours soudyers. And whan we were entred in to a shipp of Adriamium, to sayle by Asia, we lowsed from londe. And there was with vs one Aristarchus out of Macedonie off Thesalonica, and on the nexte daye we came vnto Sidon. And Iulius intreated Paul curteously, and gaue him liberty to go to his frendes, and to refresh himselfe. And from thence launched we, and sayled harde by Cypers (because the wyndes were agaynst vs) and sayled ouer the see of Celicia and Pamphilia, and came to Myra in Lycia.

And there the vndercaptayne founde a shipp of Alexadria, ready to sayle in to Italy, and put vs therin. And whan we had sayled slowly, and in many dayes were searely come ouer agaynst Gnydon (for the wynde with stode vs) we sayled by Candy nye vnto the cite off Salmo, and came searely beyonde it. Then came we to a place, which is called Goodhauen, nye where vnto was the cite Lasen. Now whan mouch tyme was spent, and saylinge was now ioperdous, because that they also had lasted ouerlonge, Paul exhorted them, and sayde vnto them: Syrs, I se that this saylinge wyl be with hurte and monch dammage, not onely of the ladynge and of the shipp, but also of oure lyues.

Neuertheles ye vndercaptayne beleued the gouernoure of the shipp and ye master, more then it that was spoken of Paul. And for so moch as the hauë was not comodious to wynter in, the more parte off them toke counsell to de parte thece, yt by eny meanes they might come to Phenices to wynter there, which is an hauen
d of Candy, towarde the Southwest and Northwest wynde. Whan the South wynde blew, they supposinge to haue had their purpose, lowed vnto Asson, and sayled past all Candy.
But not longe after, there rose against their purpose a flawe of wynde, which is called the Northeast. And when the shipp was cought, and coulde not resist y wynde, we let her go, and draue with the weeder. But we came to an Ile named Claudia, where we could scarce get a bote. Which they toke vp, and vsed helpe, and bounde it vnder harde to the shipp, fearinge lest they shulde haue fallen in to the *Syrtes, and let downe the vessell, and so were caired. And when we had bydden a greate têpest, on the nexte daye
they made an outcastinge. And on the thirde daye with oure awne handes we cast out the tacklynge of the shipp. But whâ nether Sonne ner starses appeared in many dayes, and no small tempest laye vpon vs, all the hope of oure life was taken awaye.

And after louge abstinence, Paul stode forth in the myddes of thê, and sayde: Syrs, ye shulde haue herkened vnto me, and not to haue lowed from Candy, and not to haue broughte vs this harme and losse. And now I exhorte you to be of good cheare, for there shal
none of oure lyynes periste, but the shipp heone.

For this night stode by me the angell off
God (whose I am, & whó I serue) as saide:
Fare not Paul, thou must be broughte before the Emperoure. And lo, God hath geuen vn to the all thê that sayle with the. Wherfore syrs be of good cheare: for I beleue God, ý it shal come so to passe, as it was told me. Howbeit we must be cast in to a certayne yloude.

But whan the fourtene night came, as we were caried in Adria aboute myndnight, ý shipmen demed that there appeared some countre vnto them, and they cast out the leade, and founde it twêtey feddoms: and whâi
they were gone a little farther, they cast out
the leade agayne, and founde fyftene feddoms.
Then fearinge lest they shulde fall on some rocke, they cast foure anckers out of the sterne, and wysched for the daye. Whan the shipmen were aboute to flye out of the shipp, and let downe the bote in to the see, (vnder a coloure as though they wolde cast anckers out of the fore shipp) Paul sayde to ý vndercaptayne and to the soudyers: Excepte these byde in the shipp, ye can not be saued.

Then the soudyers cut of the rope from the bote, and let it fall. And whan it beganne to be daye, Paul exhorted them all to take meate, and sayde: To daye is the fourtene daye that ye haue taried and contynued
fastinge, and haue receaued nothinge: Wherfore
I praye you to take meate, for your health: "for there shal not one heer fall from the heade of eny of you. And whan he had thus spoken, he toke bred, and gaue thankes to God before them all, and brake it, and begane to eate. Then were they all of good cheare, and toke meate also. We were all together in the shipp two hundreth thre score and sixente soules. And whan they had eaten ynoogh, they lightened the shipp,
and cast out the wheate in to the see.

Whan it was daye, they knewe not the londe. But they spedy an hauen with a banke, in to which they were mynyed (yt if it were possible) to thrust in the shipp. And whan they had takë vp the anckers, they commytted them selues to the see, and lowed
the rudder bandes, and hoyssed vp the mayne
sayle to the wynde, and drue towarde londe.
And whan we chaunced on a place which had the see on both the sydes, the shipp dasshed vpon it. And the fore parte abode fast nymed, but the hynder parte brake thorow
the violence of the wawes.

The soudyers counsell was to kyll ý presoners, lest eny of them whan he had swynned out, shulde flye awaye. But the vndercaptayne wyllinge to saue Paul, kepeth them from their purpose, and commandeth that they which coulde swynnde, shulde cast them selues first in to the see, and escape vnto londe: and the other, some on bordes, some on broken peces of the shipp. And so it came to passe, that all the soules came safe vnto londe.

The rybiiij: Chapter.

AND whâi we were escaped, we knewe a that the Ile was called Melite. As for the people, they shewed vs no little kyndnesse:

for they kyndled a fyre, and receaue vs all because of the rayne that was come vpó vs, and because of the colde. Whan Paul hadde gathered a bondell of stickes, and layed them on the fyre, there came a vyper out of the heate, and leape on Pauls hande. Whan the people sawe the beest hange on his hande, they sayde amonge them selues: This man must nede be a murtherer, who vengeaunce suffreth not to lyue, though he haue escaped the see. But he shoke of the beest in to the fyre, * and felt no harme. Howbeit they wayted, wha he shulde haue swollen, or fallen downe deed sodenly. But whan they had loked a greate whyle, and sawe there happened no harme vnto hym, they chauenged their myndes, and sayde that he was a God.

In the same quarters the chefe man of the Ile whose name was Publius had a lordshipe: the same receaue vnd the, and lodged vs three dayes curteously. It fortuned wha Publius father laye sicke of the feuers and of a bloudy fluxe, Paul wente in vnto hym, and prayed, and layed the handes on him, and healed hym.

When this was done, other also which had diseases in the Ile, came, and were healed. And they dyd vs greate honoure. And when we departed, they laded vs with thinges necessary.

After thre monethes we sayled in a shipp of Alexandria, which had wyntryd in the Ile, and had a badge of Castor and Pollux. And whan we came to Syracusa, we taried there three dayes. And whan we had sayled aboute, we came to Rhegium: and after one daye whan the south wynde blew, we came to Putiulus, where we founde brethren and were desyred of threm to tarye there seuen dayes, and so came we to Rome. And from thence whan the brethren herte of vs, they came forth to mete vs to Apiforum and to the Thre taurerns. Whan Paul sawe them, he thanked God, and waxed bolde. But wha we came to Rome, the vnder captayne delyuered the presoners to chefe captayne. As for Paul, he had leue to byde alone with one soudyer that kepeth hym.

C After thre dayes it fortuned, * Paul calleth chefe of Iewes together. And wha they were come, he sayde vnto the: Ye me brethren, I haue commytted nothinge agaynst our people, ner agaynst lawes of fathers, yet was I boode, delyuered out of Ierusaleme in to Romeynes haides: which wha they had examyned me, wolde haue let me goe, for so moch as there was no cause of death in me. But wha I Iewes spake couthary, I was castrayned to appeale vnto Emeroure: not as though I had ought to accuse my people. For this cause haue I called you, euene to se you, to speake with you: because for hope of Israel, I am bounde with this cheyne. They sayde vnto hi: We haue nether receaue letter out of Iewry cœcernynge the, nether came there eny of the brethren, shewed or spake eny harme of Iewes. But we wyl heare of Iewes, what thou thinkest: for we haue herde of this secte, that every where Iewes is spoken agaynst. And wha they had appoynted hi a daye, there came many vnto hi in to his lodgynge: vnto wha he expoued Iewes kyngdome of God, which they cast wente vnto the of Iesu, out of Iewes lawe and out of the prophete, euene from middaye, and some beleued. Iewes ye haue not, but some beleued not.

But wha they agreed not among the selues, they departed, wha Paul had spoken one worde: Full well haue the holy goost spake by the prophet Esay vnto oure fathers, ye sayde: Go vnto this people, and saye: With eares ye shall heare, ye not vnderstande: ye with eares shall ye see, ye not perceaueth. For ye hert of this people is waxed gasse, ye heare hardly with their eares: ye their eyes haue they closed, ye they shulde not once se with their eyes, ye heare with their eares, ye vnderstande the their hertes, and be converted, ye I mighte heale the. Be it knowne thercore vnto you, ye this saluation of God is sent vnto ye Heythene, and they shall heare it. And wha ye sayde, ye Iewes departed, ye had a greate disputacion amonge the selues. But Paul abode two whole yeares in his owne hyred dwellinge, ye receaue all the ye came in vnto hi, preachinge kyngdome of God, and teachinge those thinges which concerne the LORDE Iesu with all boldnesse, vforbidden.

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Romaynes.

The Summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I. Paul declareth his loue towards the Romaynes, sheweth what the gospell is with the frute therof, and rebuketh the beestlynesse of the flesh.

Chap. II. He rebuketh the Iewes, which as touching synne are like the Heythē, yee worse then they.

Chap. III. He sheweth what preferment the Iewes haue, and that both the Iewes and Gētiles are vnder synne, and are justified only by the grace of God in Christ.

Chap. IIII. He declareth by the exāple of Abraha, that faith justifieth, and not the lawe, ner the workes therof.

Chap. V. The power of faith, hope, and loue: and how death raigned fro Adā vnto Christ, by whō only we haue forguenessse of synnes.

Chap. VI. For so moch as we be delyuered thorow christ from synne, we must fashionoure selues to lyue as the seruauntes of God, and not after oure owne lustes. The unlike rewarde of righteousnes and synne.

Chap. VII. Christ hath delyuered vs from the lawe and death. Paul sheweth what the flesh and outwarde man is, and calleth it the lawe of the membres.

Chap. VIII. The lawe of the sprete geneth life. The sprete of God maketh vs Gods children and heyres with Christ. The abundaunt loue of God can not be separated.

Chap. IX. Paul complayneth upon the hard hertes of the Iewes, that wolde not receaue Christ, and how the Heythē are chosen in their steade.

Chap. X. The unfaithfullnes of the Iewes. Two maner of righteousnesse.

Chap. XI. All the Iewes are not cast awaye, therefor Paul warneth the Gentiles that be called, not to be hye mynded, ner to despyse the Iewes, for the iudgmētes of God are depe and secrete.

Chap. XII. The swete conuersacion, loue, and worke of soch as beleue in Christ.

Chap. XIII. The obedience of men vnto their rulers. Loue fulfilleth the lawe. It is now no tyme to folowe the worke of darknesse.

Chap. XIIIII. The weake ought not to be despysed. No man shulde offende anothers conscience. Agayne, for outward thinges shulde no man condemne another.

Chap. XV. The infirmitie and fraylnesse of the weake ought to be borne with all loue and kyndnesse, after the ensample of Christ.

Chap. XVI. A chapter of salutacions. He warneth them to beware of mens doctryne, and commendeth vnto them certayne godly men, that were louers and brethren in the trueth.
The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Romaynes.

The first Chapter.

PAUL the seruante of Iesus Christ, called to be an Apostle, put aparte to preach the Gospell of God (which he promised afore by his prophetes in ¥ holy scriptures) off his sonne, which was begotte of ¥ sede of Dauid after the flesh: and mightely declared to be the sonne of God after the sprete which sanctifieth, sence the tyme that he rose agayne from the deed, namely, Iesus Christ our Lorde, by whom we haue receaued grace and Apostelshippe amonge all Heythen, to set vp the obedience of faith vnder his name, of whom ye are a parte also, which are called of Iesus Christ.

To all you that be at Rome, beloued of God, and saynutes by callynge Grace be with you and peace fro God our father, and the Lorde Iesus Christ.

First, I thanke my God thorow Iesus Christ for you all, that youre faith is spoken of thorow out all the worlde. For God is my winnesse (whom I serue in my sprete in the Gospell of his sonne) that without ceassynge I make mencion of you beseekinge allwayes in my prayers, that I mighte once haue a prosperous journey (by the will of God) to come vnto you. For I longe to se you, that I mighte bestowe vpon you some spiritual gift to strêgh you (that is) that I mighte be comforted with you, thorow youre faith a myne, which we haue together.

But I wolde ye shulde knowe (brethren) how that I haue often tymes purposd to come vnto you (but haue bene let hither to) that I mighte do some good amonge you, like as amonge other Gentyles. I am detter both to the Grekes, and to the vngrekes, to the wyse and to the vnwyse. Wherfore (as much as i me is) I am ready to preach the Gospell vnto you at Rome also.

*For I am not ashamed of the Gospell of Christ: for it is the ¥ power of God, which saueth all that beleue theron, the Iewe first and also the Greke: for in it ¥ righteousnes that is of value before God, is opened, which cometh out of faith ¥ to faith. As it is wrytt:

"The just shall lyue by his faith. For ¥ wrath of God is declared from heauen vpon all vn-godlynes and vnrighteousnes of men, which withold the trueth of God in vnnatrueous: because that it, which maye be knowne of God, is manifest with the. For God hath shewed it vnto the, that the invisible things of God (that is, his everlastinge power and Godheade) mighte be sene whylle they are considered by theworkes from the creation of the worlde: so that they are without exccuse, in as much as they knewe, that there is a God, and haue not prayed him as God neer thanked him, but became vayne in their imaginacions, and ¥ their foolish hert was blyled. Whan they counted them selues wyse, they became fooles: and turned ¥ glory of the incorruptible God in to ¥ symilitude of ¥ ymage of a corruptible ma, ¥ of byrdes, ¥ of foure foted, ¥ of crepinge beestes ¥ ¥ Wherefore God likewise gaue them vp vnto their hertes lustes in to vnclennes, to defylke their awne bodiies in them selues, which turned the trueth of God vnto a lye, ¥ worshipped and

Therefore God gave the vp vnto shamefull lustes. * For their womens chaunged the naturall vse in to the vnnatural: likewisely  they also lefte the naturall vse of the woman, and brent in their lustes one on another, and man with man wrought filthyines, and receauned in them selues the rewarde of their errore, as it was accordinge. ¶ And as they regarded not to know God, euen so  God gave the vp in to a lewde mynde, to do those thinges which were not comly, beynge full of all vnrighteousnes, whordome, wickednes, couetousnes, maliciousnes, full of enuy, murthur, strife, disseate, euell coidicioned whisperers, backbyters, despysers of God, doers of wronge, proude, boosters, bryngers vp of euell thinges, disobedient to their Elders, without vnderstanding, couenaunt breakers, vnloynge, stubborne, vnmercifull: which men, though they knowe the righteousnes of God (that they which do soch, are worthy of death) yet not onely do the same, but also haue pleasure in those that do the.

The 15. Chapter.

Therefore canst thou not excuse thy selfe (O man) who soeuer thou be that judgest:  for loke wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thy selfe, in so much as thou that judgest, doest euen the same. For we are sure that the judgment of God is (acordinge to the truth) ouer them that do soch. But thinkest thou this O thou man, that judgest them which do soch thinges, and doest euen the very same thy selfe, that thou shal escape  judgmet of God? Or despysest thou the riches of his goodnesse, patience, and lange suferinge? ¶ Knowest thou not, that  lounyng kyndnesse of God leadeth the to repentauce?

But thou after thine hardre and impenitent hert, heapest vnto thy selfe a treasure of wrath, agaynst the daye of wrath and of the openyng of the righteous judgment of God,  which shall rewarde euery man accordinge to his dedes: namely, praye  honoure, and vncorruption, vnto them that with patience in doinge good, seke euerylasting life: But vnto them that are contencious * *  not obedient vnto the truth, but obeye vnrighteousnes, shal come indignacion and wrath, trouble and anguysh vpó all the soules of me that do euell, of the iewe first and also of the Greke: But vnto all thee that do good (shal come) prayse and honoure, and peace, vnto the iewe first, and also to the Greke.

¶  For there is no respecte of personnes before God: Who so euery haue synned without lawe, shal perish also without lawe: and whosoeuer haue synned in the lawe, shalbe judged by the lawe. ¶ For before God, they are not righteous, which heare  lawe: but they that do the lawe, shalbe justified. For yf the Gentyles which haue not the lawe, do of nature the things coneyned in the lawe, then they haunynge not the lawe, are a lawe vnto them selues, in that they shewe, that the worke of  lawe is wyrty in their hertes: whye their conscience beareth witnesse vnto the, and also the thoughtes which accuse or excuse them amongeth them selues, in the daye when God shal judge the secretes of men by Jesus Christ, acordinge to my Gospell.

But take heed,  thou art called a iewe, and trustest in the lawe,  makest thy boost of God, and knowest his will:  for so much as thou art enampped out of  lawe, thou prowest what is best to do, and presumest to be a leader of the bylde: a lighte of them  are in darcknes: an enformer of  vnwyse: a teacher of  symple: which hast the ensembly of knowlege  of the truth in the lawe.

Now teachest thou other, and teachest not thy selfe. Thou preachers that a man shulde not steale, and thou stealest. Thou sayest, that a man shulde not breake wedlocke, and thou breakest wedlocke. Thou abhorrest ymages, and robbest God of his honoure. Thou makest thy boost of the lawe, and thorow breakeynge of the lawe thou dishonorest God. For thorow you is the name of God euell spoken of amonge the Gentyles,  as it is wrytten.

The circuision verely avayleth, yf thou kepe the lawe: but yf thou brake the lawe, then is thy circuision become vncircuision. Therfore yf the vncircuision kepe

the righte thinges conteyued in the lawe, shal not his vnccircumcision be counted for circumcision? And so it that of nature is circumcision, and fullfilleth the lawe shal judge the, which vnder the letter and circumcision trisgressest the lawe. For he is not a Jew which is a Jewe outwarde: nether is that circumcision which is done outwardly in y flesh: *But he is a Jewe, which is hydd within. And *the circumcision of y hert is the circumcision, which is done in the spryte and not in the letter: whose prayse is not of men, but of God.

The iii. Chapter.

WHAT furtherranee then haue the Jewes? Or what avantage thert circumcision? Surely very moch. First Vnto them was commytted what God spake. But where as some of then dyd not beleue theron, what then? shulde their vnebelee the promes of God of none effecte? God forbyd. Let it rather be thus, that *God is true, and all men lyers. As it is wrytten: That thou mayest be justified in thy sayenges, and shuldest overcomm, wha thou art judgged.

But yf it be so, that oure vnrighteous prayseth therto righteousness of God, what shal we saye? Is God then vnrighteous, that he is angrie therefor? (I speake thus after the maner off men) God forbyd. How mighte God the judge thereof? For yf the truth of God be thorow my lyfe the more excellent vnto his prayse, why shulde I therefore be judged yet as a souer?  or not rather to do thus (as we are euell spoken of, and as some reparte, that we shulde saye) Let vs do euell, y good maye come therof. Whose danacio is iust."
For thine sake showed me mercy, and for thine oueuer cir-cucision? We must nede graunte, y Abrahās faith was couited vnto hi for righteousnes. How was it the reke ned vnto him? In the cir cucision, or in the vn cireucision? Doubles not in the circucision, but in the vncircucision. As for the tokē of circucision he receaued it for a scale off the righteousnes off faith, which he had yet in v circucision, y he shulde be a father of all the y beleue, beinge in v vcircucisiō, y it might be couited vnto thē also for righteousnes: that he might be a father of circucision, not onely of the that are of v circucision, but of them also that walke
in the fotesteppes of the faith, which were in the vncircucision of oure father Abraham.

For the promes (that he shulde be y heyre of the worlde) was not made vnto Abraham or to his sede thorow the lawe, but thorow the righteousnes of faith. For yf they which are of the lawe be heyres, the is faith wayne, and the promes of none efecete, for so much as the lawe caueth but wrath. For where the lawe is not, there is also no transgression.
Therfore was the promes made thorow faythe, that it myght come off fauoure, whereby the promesse myght be made sure vnto all the sede: not onely vnto him which is off the lawe, but also vnto him that is of the faith of Abrahā which is the father of vs all. As it is wrytten: I haue made the a father of many Heythen before God, whom thou hast belued: which quyckeneth the deed, and calleth it which is not, that it maye be.

And he beleued vpō hope, where nothing was to hope, that he shulde be a father of many Heythen. Acordinge as it was sayde vnto him: Euen so shal thy sede be. And he was not faynt in faith, nether cosiured his awne body, which was deed already,
whyle he was almost an hundred yeare olde, nether the deed wombe of Sara. For he douted not in the promes of God thorow
vnbeleue, but was strōge in faith, and gaue
God the prayse: y was sure, that loke what God promyseth, he is able to make it good.
And therfore was it reke ned vnto him for righteousnes. But this is not wryttē onely for his sake, y it was couted vnto him, but also for oure sakes: vnto whō it shalbe cou ted, yf we beleue on him, that rayseyd vp our LORDE Iesus from the deed. Which was geuen for oure synnes, and rayseyd vp for oure righteousnesse sake.

BECAUSE theryfore that we are justifi ed

by faith, we haue peace with God thorow oure LORDE Iesus Christ, by whō also we haue an intramuce in faith vnto this grace, wherin we stonde, y 1 y rejoys in the hope of y glorie for to come, which God shal geue. Not onely y, but we rejoys also i troubles, for so much as we knowe, y ill troubls byngeth paciēce, paciēce bryngeth experieēce, experieēce byngeth hope: As for hope, is let tetth vs not come to confuison, because the loue of God is shed abreode in oure hertes, by the holy goost which is geuen vs. For whan we were yet weake acordinge to the tymne, Christ dyed for vs vnsgodly. Now dyeth there scarce eny man for the righteous sake: Peraduenture for a good man durst one dye. Ther fore doth God set forth his loue toward vs, in y Christ dyed for vs, whan we were yet synners: Moch more then shal we be saued from wrath by him seyngewe we are now made righteous thorow his bloude.

For yf we were recoucyed vnto God by y

death of his sone, whā we were yet enemys:
moch more shal we be saued by him, now y
we are reconcyled. Not onely that, but we rejoys also in God thorow our LORDE Iesus Christ, by whom we haue now receaued the attonement.

Wherfore * as by one man synned entered in to the worlde, and death by * y* means of synne: euyn so wente death also over all men, in so moch as they all haue synned. For synne was in * y* worlde vnto the lawe: but where no lawe is, there is not synne regarded. Neuertheless death reigned from Adam vnto Moses, euyn over them also that synned not with like trangressio as dyd Adam, which is * y* ymage of him * y* was to come.

But it is not with the gifte as with the synne: for yf thorow the synne of one many be deeed, yet moch more plenteously came the grace and gifte of God vpon many + by the fauour that belonged vnto one man Iesus Christ.

And the gifte is not onely ouer one synne, as death came thorow one synne of one that synned. For the judgment came of one synne vnto condemnation, but the gifte to iustifye fro many synnes. For yf by * y* synne of one, death raigned by the means of one, moch more shal they which receaue the abundaunce of grace and of the gifte vnto righteousnes, raigne in life by * y* means of one Iesus Christ. Likewyse the * as by the synne of one, condemnation came on all men, euyn so also by the righteousnes of one, came the iustifenge off life vpon all men. For as by the disobedience of one, many became synners, euyn so by the obedience of one shal many be made righteous.

But the lawe in the meane tyme entred, that synne shulde increase. Neuertheless where abundaunce of synne was, there was yet more plenteousnes of grace: that, like as synne had reigned vnto death, euyn so might grace reigne also thorow righteousnes to euerylastinge life by the meanses of Iesus Christ.

The bi. Chapter.

WAT shal we saye then? Shal we continue in synne, that therfor maye be abundaunce of grace? God forbyd. How shal we lyue in synne, * y* are deeed from it? $ Knowe ye not, that all we which are baptysed in to Iesus Christ, are baptysed in to his death? Therfore are we buried with him by baptysme in to death, that, like as Christ was raysed vp from the deed by the glory of the father, etc euyn we also shulde walke in a new life. For yf we be grafted with him vnto like death, then shal we be like the resurrection also: For so moch as we knowe, that oure olde man is crucified with him, that the synfull body mighte cease, that hence forth we shulde serue synne nomore. * For he that is deeed, is made righteous fro synne.

But yf we be deeed with Christ, we beleue, that we shal lyue also with him, and are sure, that Christ rayesed from the deede, dyeth nomore: Death shal haue nomore power over him. For as touchinge that he dyed, he dyed cocation synne once: but as touchinge that he lyueth, he lyueth vnto God. Likewyse ye also, counte youre selues to be euyn deed cocationynge synne, and to lyue vnto God thorow Iesus Christ our LORDE. Let not synne reigne therfore in youre mortall bodye, that ye shulde obeye vnto the lustes of it. Nether geue ye ouer youre membres vnto synne to be wapens of vnrighteousnes, but geue ouer youre selues vnto God, as they that off deede are become lyuynge, and youre membres vnto God to be wapens off rightuousnes. For synne shal not haue power ouer you, in so moch as ye are not vnder the lawe, but vnder grace.

How then? Shal we synne, because we are not vnder * y* lawe, but vnder grace? God forbyd. + Knowe ye not, that loke vnto wh* y* geue ouer youre selues as seruauntes to obeye, his seruauntes ye are to whom ye obey, whether it be of synne vnto death, or of disobedie vnto righteousnes? But God be thanked, that though ye haue bene the seruauntes of synne, ye are now yet obedient of herte to the ensample off the doctrine, whervnto ye are commytted. For now that ye are made fre from synne, ye are become the seruauntes of righteousnes.

I wil speake groously, because of the weaknes of youre flesh. Like as ye haue geuen ouer youre membres to the seruyce of vnclennesse, from one wickednesse to another: Euyn so now also geue ouer youre membres to the seruyce of rightuousnesse, that they maye be holy. For whan ye were the seruauntes of synne, ye were lowse from righteousnes. What frute had ye at that tyme in those things, wherof ye are now ashamed? For the ende of such things is death. But now that ye be fre from synne, and are become the seruauntes of God, ye hane youre frute that ye shulde be holy: but the ende is everlastinge life. * For death is the rewarde of synne, but the gifte of God is everlastinge life.
Chap. viij. The Epistle to the Romanes.

The biij. Chapter.

K NOWE ye not brethren (for I speake vnto them that knowe the lawe) howe that y lawe hath power vpon a man as longe as he lyueth? * For the woman y is in subjection to the man, is bounde vnto the lawe whyle the man lyueth: but ye f the man dye, then is she loused from the lawe that concerneth the man. +Yf she be now with another man, whyle the man lyueth, she shall be called a wedlocke breaker. But yf the man be dead, then is she fre from the lawe, so that she is no wedlocke breaker, yf she be with another man.

Euen so my brethren, ye also are deed vnto the lawe by the body of Christ, that ye shulde be with another (namely with him which is raised vp from the dead) that we shulde brynge forth frute vnto God. For when we were in the flesh, the synfull lustes (which were stered vp by the lawe) were mightie in oure members to brynge forth frute vnto death. But now are we loused from the lawe, and deed vnto it, that helde vs captuye, so that we shulde serue in a newe conversacion of the sprete, and not in the olde conversacion of the letter.

What shal we saye then? Is the lawe synne? God forbyd: Neuertheles I knewe not synne, but by y lawe. For I had knowne nothing of lust, yf the lawe had not sayde: +Thou shalt not lust. But then toke synne occasion at the commandement, and stered vp in me all maner of lust. For without the lawe synne was deed. As for me, I lyued some tyme without lawe. Howbeit when the commandement came, synne reuyued, but I was deed. And the very same commandement that was gaven me vnto life, was founde to be vnto me on occasion of death. For synne toke occasion at the commaundement, and diseauned me, and slewe me by the same commaundement. $ The lawe in dede is holy, and the commaundement holy, iust and good. Is that then which is good, become death vnto me? God forbyd. But synne, that it mighte appeare how it is synne, hath wrouhte me death thorow good: that synne mighte be out of measure synfull by the commaundement. For we knowe, that the lawe is spiritual, but I am carnall, ¶ solde vnder synne: because I knowe not what I do. For I do not y I will, but what I hate, y do I. Yf I do now that which I wil not, the graunte I, that the lawe is good.

So then it is not I that do it, but synne that dwelleth in me: for I knowe that in me (y is, in my *flesh) there dwelleth no good thinge. To wyll is present with me, but to perfourme y which is good, I fynde not. For y good that I wyll, do I not: but the euell which I wil not, that do I. Yf I do now that I wil not, then is it not I that do it, but synne that dwelleth in me.

Thus fynde I now by the lawe. y when I wyl do good, euell is present with me. For I delite in the lawe of God after the inwarde man: but I se another lawe in my members, which stryueth agaynst y lawe of my mynde, and taketh me presoner in y lawe of synne, which is in my members. O wretched man that I am, who shal delyuer me from the body of this death? I thanke God thorow Iesus Christ our LORDE. So then with the mynde I serue y lawe of God, but with the flesh the lawe of synne.

The biij. Chapter.

THEN is there now no damacion vnto A the that are in Christ Iesu, which walke not after the flesh, but after y sprete. For y lawe of y sprete (y bryngeth lie I Christ Iesu) hath made me fre fro the lawe of synne y death. ††For what vnpossible was vnto y lawe (in as much as it was weake because of the flesh) y perfourmed God, †† sent his sonne in y similitude of synfull flesh, † by †† synne damed synne in y flesh: that the righteousnes requyred of the lawe, mighte be fulfilled in vs, which walke not after the flesh, but after the sprete. For they that are fleshly, are fleshly mynded: but they that are goostly, are goostly mynded. To be fleshly mynded, is death: but to be goostly mynded, is life and peace. For to be fleshly mynded is enemyte agaynst God, §§ synth it is not subdued vnto y lawe of God, for it can not also. As for the

that are fleshlye, they can not please God. Howbeit ye are not fleshly, but goostly, yf so be that the sprete of God dwell in you. But who so hath not the sprete of Christ, the same is not his. Neuertheles yf Christ be in you, then is the body deed because of synne. But the sprete is life for righteousness sakes.

Wherfore yf the sprete of him, that rased vp Jesus from the dead, dwell in you, then shal euene he also that rased vp Christ from the dead, quycketh youre mortal bodies, because yf his sprete dwelleth in you. Therefore brethre we are now detters, not to the flesh, to lyne after the flesh: for yf ye lyne after yf fleshe, ye must dye: but yf ye mortyfye the dedes of the body thorow the sprete, ye shall lyue. For who so euer are led by the sprete of God, are Gods childre: for ye have not receauned the sprete of bondage to feare any more, but ye haue receauned yf sprete of adopcion, wherby we crye: Abba, deare father. The same sprete certifieth oure sprete, that we are the childre of God. Yf we be childre, then are we heyeys also, namely the heyes of God, and heyeys annexed with Christ, yf so be that we suffer together, that we maye be also glorified together.

For I suppose, that the affliccions off this tyme, †are not worthy of yf glorye, which shallbe shewed vpon vs. † For the ferenct loginge of yf creature loketh for the appeareninge of the children of God, because the creature is subdued vnto vanyte against hir will, but for his wyll that hath subdued her vpon hope. For the creature also shall be fre from the bondage of corrupcion, vnto the glorious libertye of the childre of God. For we knowe, that euery creature groenth, and † travauyleth with vs in paynte vpon the same tyme.

Not they only, but we oure selues also, which haue the first frutes of the sprete, groane within oure selues for the childshipp, and loke for yf delyuernaunce of oure bodye. For we are saued i dede, howbeit i hope: but yf hope that is sene, is no hope: for how can a man hope for that which he seyth? But yf we hope for that which we se not, the do we thorow pacience abyde for it.

Likewyse the sprete also helpeth oure weaknesse: for we knowe not what we shulde desyre as we oughte: † neuertheles yf sprete it selfe maketh intercession mightely for vs with vnoutspeakable gronynges. Howbeit he yf searcheth the hert, knoweth what the mynde of the sprete is: for he maketh intercession for the sayntes acordinge to the pleasure of God. But sure we are, that all things serue for the best vnto them that loue of God, which are called of purpose. For those whom he knewe before, hath he ordyned also before, † they shulde be like fashioned vnto yf shappe of his sonne, yf be mighte be the first begotté amõge many brethre. As for those whom he hath ordyned before, them hath he called also: and whom he hath called, the hath he also made righteous: and whom he hath made righteous, them hath he glorified also.

What shal we saye then vnto these thinges? †Yf God be on oure syde, who can be agaynst vs. Which spared not his owne sonne, but hath geuen him for vs all: how shall he be with him geue vs all thinges also? Who wyl laye eny thinge to yf charge of Gods chosen? Here is God that maketh righteous, who wil then condemne? Here is Christ that is deed, yee rather which is rased vp agaynse, which is also on yf richt hande of Christ, and maketh intercession for vs.

Who will separate vs from the loue of God? Trouble? or anguyshe? or persecucio? or honger? or nakondnesse? or parell? or swerde? As it is wryten: †For thy sake are we kylld all the daye longe, we are counted as shepe appoynted to be slayne. Neuerthelasse in all these thinges we overcome farre, for his sake that loued vs. For sure I am, that nether death ner life, nether angell, ner rule, nether power, nether thinges present, nether thinges to come, nether heyth, ner loweth, nether any other creature shalbe able to separate vs from the loue of God, which is in Christ Iesu our LORDE.

The ir. Chapter.

SAYE the truth in Christ, and lye in not (wherof my conscience beareth me witnesse in the holy goost) that I haue great heuynesse & continuall sorrowe in my hert. † I haue wysshed my selfe to be cursed from Christ for my brethren, that are my kynsmen after the flesh, which are off Israel: † vnto whom pertayneth the childshipp, and the glory, and the couenauntes and lawe, and the seruice of God, and the promyses: whose are also the fathers, off whom (after the flesh) commeth Christ, *which is God ouer all, blessed for euer. Amē. But I speake not these things, as though the worde of God were of none effecte: *for they are not all Israelites, which are of Israel: †neither are they all children, because they are the sede of Abraham: †but in Isaac shal the sede be called vnto the, that is, They which are children after the flesh, are not the children of God, but the children of the promes are counted for the sede. For this is a worde of the promes, where he sayeth: ‡Aboute this tymne wyl I come, and Sara shal haue a sonne. Howbeit it is not so with this onely, but also whan Rebecca was with childe by one (namely by oure father Isaac) or euer the childe were borne, θ had done nether good nor bad (that the purpose of God might stode acordinge to the eleccion, not by the deseruynge of workes, but by the grace of the caller) it was sayde thus vnto her: The greater shal serue the lesse. As it is wrytten: §Iacob haue I loved, but Esau haue I hated. What shal we saye then? Is God then vnnrighteous? God forbyd. For he sayeth vnto Moses: †I shewe mercy, to whom I shewe mercy: and hate compassion, on whō I haue compassion. So lyeth it not then in eny mans wyll or runnynge, but in the mercy of God. For the scripture sayeth vnto Pharaoh: †For this cause haue I stered the vp, euyn to shewe my power on the, that my name mighte be declared in all lödes. Thus hath he mercy on whom he wyl: and whom he wyl, he hardeneth. Thou wilt saye then vnto me: Why blameth he vs yet? For who can resiste his will? O thou man, who art thou, that disputest with God? Sayeth the worke to his workman: Why hast thou made me on this fashion? ¶Hath not the potter power, out of one lompe of claye to make one vessell vnto honoure, and another vnto dishonoure? Therfore when God wolde shewe wrath, and to make his power knowne, he broughte forth with greate paciencie the vessels off wrath, which areordeyned to dannacion: that he might declare the riches off his glorye on †v vessels of mercy, which he hath prepared vnto glorye, whom he hath called (namely vs) not onely of the Iewes, but also of the Gentyles. As he sayeth also by Osee: ¶I wil call that my people, which is not my people: and my beloued, which is not ‡beloued. And it shal come to passe in ‡place, where it was sayde vnto them: Ye are not my people, there shal they be called the children of the lyuyng God. But Esay crieth ouer Israel: ¶Though the nombre of the children of Israel be as the sonde of the see, yet shal there but a remnaunt be saued. For there is the worde, that fynisheth and shorteneth in rightouenes: for a shorte worde shal God make vpon earth. And as Esay sayde before: ¶Excepte the Lorde of Sabaoth had lefte vs sede, we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorrah. What shal we saye then? This wil we saye: The Heythen which followed not rightouenes, haue ouertaken rightouenes: but I speake of the rightouenes that commeth of faith. Agayne, Israel folowed the lawe of rightouenes, and attayned not vnto the lawe of rightouenes. Why so? Euen because they soughte it not out of faith, but as it were out of the deseruynge of workes. For they haue stumbled at the stomblinge stone. As it is wrytten: ¶Beholde, I laye in Sion a stone to stoble at, and a rocke to be offended at: and ¶who so euer beleueth on him, shal not be confounded.

The r. Chapter.

Brethren, my hertes desyre, a prayer vnto God for Israel is, that they might be saued. For I bare them recorde, that they are zelous for Gods cause, but not with vnderstondinge. For they knowe not the rightouenes which anayeth before God, and go aboute to manteyne their awne rightouenes: and thus they are not subdued vnto the rightouenes, that is off value before God. ¶For Christ is the ende of the lawe, vnto rightouenes for euery one ‡belueth. ¶Moses wryteth of ‡rightouenes which commeth of the lawe, that the man which doth ‡same, shal lyue therin. But ‡rightouenes which cōmeth of faith, speake on this wyse: ¶¶ Saye not in thine hert: Who wil go vp in to heauē?
(that is nothinge els then to fetch Christ downe) Or who wyl go downe in to \\ ye depe? (that is nothinge els thē to fetch vp Christ from the deed.) But what sayeth the scripture? The worde is nye the, euyn in thy mouth and in thine hert. This is ye worde of faith ye we preach.

For yf thou knowest Jesu with thy mouth, that he is the LORDE, and beleueth in thine hert, that God hath rayesed him vp from the deed, thou shalt be saued. For yf a man beleue from the hert, he shalbe made righteous: and ye a mà knowle ge with the mouth, he shall be saued. For the scripture sayeth: 'Who so euere beleueth on him, shal not be confounded.

Here is no difference, nether of the Iewes nor of the Gentyle. For one is LORDE of all, which is riche vnto all ye call vpô him. For who so euere shall call vpon the name of the LORDE, shalbe saued. But how shal they call vpô him, on whô they beleue not? How shal they beleue on him, of whô they haue not herde? How shal they heare without a preacher? But how shal they preach, excepte they be sent? As it is wryttē: 'How beutifully are the fete of thē ye preach peace, ye brynge good tidinges? But they are not all obedient vnto the Gospel. For Esaye sayeth: LORDE, who beleuethoure preachinge? So thē faith cometh by hearynge, but hearinge cometh by the worde of God.

But I saye: Haue they not herde? 'No doubt their sounde wête out in to all lendes, and their wordes in to the endes of the world. But I saye: Hath not Israel knowne? First, Moses sayeth: 'I wil prouoke you to enuye, by them that are not my people: ye by a foolish nacion wyl I anger you. Esaye after him is bolde, and sayeth: 'I am founde of them, that sought me not: ye haue appeared vnto them, that axed not after me. But vnto Israel he sayeth: 'All the daye lôge haue I stretched forth my handes vnto a people ye beleueth not, but speaketh agaynst me.

The ri. Chapter.

I SAYE then: Hath God thrust out his people? God forbyd: 'for I also am an Israelite, of the sede of Abraham out of the trybe of Ben Iamin. God hath not thrust out his people, whom he knewe before. Or wote ye not what the scripture sayeth of Elias, how he maketh intercession vnto God against Israel, and sayeth: 'LORDE, they haue slayne thy prophets, ye dydged downe thine altes, and I am lefte ouer onely, and they seke my life? But what sayeth the answere of God vnto him? 'I haue reserved vnto me seuen thousande men, which haue not bowed their knee before Baal. Eue so goeth it now at this tyme also with this remnaunt after ye election of grace. 'Yf it be done of grace, thē is it not of deservynge: els were grace no grace. But yf it be of deservynge, then is grace nothinge: els were deservynge no deservynge.

What thē? Israel hath not optayned yf which he soughte, but the election hath optayned it. As for ye other, they are blynded. As it is wryttē: God hath geuen them the sprete of vnquyetnesse, ye eyes that they shulde not se, and eares that they shulde not heare, euë vnto this daye. And David sayeth: Let their table be made a snare to take thē with all, ye an occasion to fall, ye a rewarde vnto thē. Let their eyes be blynded that they se not, and euyn bowe downe their backes.

I saye then: Haue they therefore stumbled, ye they shulde cleane fall to naughte? God forbyd: but thorow their fall is saluation happened vnto ye Heythen, that he mighte prouoke them to be zelous after them. For yf their fall be the riches of the worlde, and the mynishinge of thē the riches of the Heythen: how much more shulde it be so, yf their fulnesse were there? I speake vnto you Heythen: for in as moch as: I am ye Apostle of the Heythen, I wil praye myne office, yf I mighte prouoke them vnto zele, which are my fleshe, and saue some of them. For yf the losse of them by the recoucylinge of the worlde, what were that els, then as ye life were taken of the deed? Yf the begynnynge be holy, then is all ye dowre holy: § and ye rote be holy, then are the branchnes holy also.

But though some of ye branchnes now be brokë, and thou, whâ thou wast a wydde oluyre tre, art graffe in amonge them, and made partaker of the rote and sappe of the oluyre tre, boost not thy selfe agaynst the branchnes.

The 114. Chapter.

BESEEKE ye brethren by the mercyfulnesse of God, that ye geue ouer youre bodies for a sacrifice, ye is queyeke holy, and acceptable vnto God, which is youre reasonable seruyenge off God. And fashion not youre selues like vnto this worlde, but be chaunged thorow the renewyng off youre mynde, ye ye maye proue, what thinke that good, ye acceptable, a perfect wil of God is. For I saye thorow the grace ye is geue me, vnto euery man amoung ye: ¶ that no man esteme off hym selfe more, then it becommeth hym to esteme: but that he discretly judge of hym selfe, acordinge as God hath deale vnto euery man the measure of faith. ¶ For like as we haue many members in one body, but all the members haue not one maner of operacion: Euen so we beyne many are one body in Christ. But amoung oure selues euery one is the membre of another, and haue dyuers giftes, acordinge to the grace that is geuen vnto vs.  Ye man haue the giftes of propheteinge, let it be acordinge to the faith.

Let him that hath an office, wayte ypô the office: let him that teacheth, take hede to the doctrine: Let him that exhorteth, gene attedance to the exhortacion. Ye man haue gueueth, let he geue with synglenesse. Let him that ruleth, be diligent. ¶ Ye man shewe mercy, let him do it with chearfulness. Let loue be without dissimmulation. Hate that which is euell: Clene vnto that which is good. Be kynde one to another with brotherly loue. In geuynge honour go one before another. ¶ Be not slouthefull in the busynesse that ye haue in hande. Be feruent in the sprete. Applye youre selues vnto the tyme. Reioyse in hope, be pacient in trouble. Continue in prayer. Distribute vnto the necessitie of the syntes. ¶ Be glad to harbarow. Blesse the that persecute you. Blesse, a curse not. Be mery with them that are mery and wepe with them that wepe.

Be of one mynde amoung ye soules. Be not proude in youre awne consaytes, but The Epistle to the Romanes.

Chap. riiij.

Let every soule submytte him selue to the auctorite off the hyer powers. For there is no power but of God. The powers that be, are ordeyned of God: so that who so ever resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinaunce of God. And they that resist, shall receaue to them selues danacion. For rulers are not to be feared for good workes, but for euell. Yf thou wilt be without feare off the power, do well then, and thou shalt haue praye of the same: for he is the minister off God for thy wealth. But yf thou do euell, then feare, for he beareth not the swerde for naughte. For he is the minyster of God, a taker of vengeance, to punyse him that doth euell. Wherfore ye must nedes obeye, not onely for punyshme, but also because of conscience. For this cause must ye geue trybutse also. For they are Gods minysters, which matelye ye same defence.

Geue to every man therfore his dutye: tribute, to whom tribute belongeth: custome, to whom custome is due: feare, to whom feare belongeth: honoure, to whom honoure pertayneth. Owe nothinge to eny man, but to loue one another. For he that loueth another, hath fulfyllde the lawe. For where it is syaye: († Thou shalt not breake wedlocke: thou shalt not kyll: thou shalt not steale: thou shalt not bear false wittnesse: thou shalt not lust) and yf there be eny other commandement, it is comprehended in this word: ¶ Thou shalt loue thy neibour as thy selue. Loue doth his neibour no euell. Therfore is loue fulfyllde of the lawe.

And for so much as we know this, namely the tyme that the houre is now for vs to ryse from slepe. (For now is oure saluacion nearer, then when we beleued: the nighte is past, but the daye is come nye.) Let vs therefor cast awaye † ry * workes of darkness, and put on the armoure of lighte. Let vs walke honestly as in the daye, * not in excess off eatinge and in drokennesse, not in chamburyne and wantonnesse, not in stryfe and enuyenge: but put ye on the LORDE Iesus Christ. and make not prouysion for ry flesh, to fulfille the lustes of it.
The Epistle to the Romaynes.

The vb. Chapter.

We that are stronge ought to beare v yet fraysenes of them which are weake, and to stonde in oure awne consaytes. Let euery one of vs orde his selve so, that he please his neigbour vn to his welth, and ediuenge: For Christ pleased not himselfe, but as it is wrytten:  'The rebukes of them which rebuked the, are fallen vpon me. What so euuer things are wrytten a fore tyme, are wrytten for oure learynge, that we thorow pacience and comforte off the scriptures, might haue hope. The God of pacience and consolation graunte you to be like mynded one twardene another, acordinge vnto Jesu Christ, that ye beynge of one mynde, maye with one mouth prayse God the father of oure LORDE Jesu Christ.

Wherfore receaue ye one another, as Christ hath receaue you to the prayse off God. But I saye that Christ Jesus was a minystre of the circumcission for the trueht of God, to cofirme the promyses made vnto the fathers, and that the Heythen mighte praysse God because of mercy, as it is wrytten:  'For this cause wyl I praysse the amoge the Gentes, and syngne vnto thy name. And agayne he sayeth:  'Reioyse ye Heythen with his people. And agayne:  'Prayse the LORDE all ye Gentiles, and laude him all ye naciouis. And agayne Esay sayeth: There shalbe the rote of Iesse, and he that shalryse to rule the Gentiles, in him shal the Gentes lyse. The God off hope fyll you with all ioye and peace in beleuynge, y ye maye be plenteous in hope thorow  were power of the holy goost.

I my selue am full certified of you (my brethren) that ye youre selues are full of goodnes, fylled with all knowlege, so that ye are able to exhorte one another. Neuertheles (brethren) I haue somwhat more boldly wrytten vnto you, as one that putteth you in remembreance, for the grace that is geuene of God, that I shulde be a minystre of Jesu Christ amonge the Heythen, to declare the gospell of God, that the Heythen mighte be an acceptable offeryng vnto God, sanctified by the holy goost. Therfore maye I boost myselfe thorow Jesu Christ, that I medle with thinges pertyninge vnto God. For I durst not speake ought, excepte Christ had wroughte the same by me, to make the Heythen obedieth thorow wordes and dede, thorow the power of tokens and wonders, and thorow the power of the sprete of God, so that from Ierusale, and roude aboute vnto Illyricon, I haue fylled all with the Gospell of Christ. So hane I enforced my selue to preach  Gospell, not where Cristes name was knowne, lest I shulde buyde on another mans foundacion, but as it is wrytten: To whom he was not spoken of, they shal se:  'and they that haue not herde, shal vnderstonde. This is also the cause, wherfore I haue bene oft tymes let to come vnto you. But now synth I haue nomore place in these countrees, haunyge yet a desyre many yeares sence to come vnto you,
I will come to you: for I trust that I shall passe by waye and se you, and to be brouthe on my waye thitherwarde by you: but so, that I first refresh my selfe a little with you.

But now go I to Jerusalem, to mynister vnto the sayntes. For they of Macedonie and Achaia haue wyllingly prepared a common collection together, for the poore sayntes at Jerusalem. They haue done it wylfully, and their detters are they. * For ye Heythen be made partakers off their spiritual things, their dutie is to mynister vnto the in bodely things. Now when I haue performed this, and haue broughte the this frute sealed, I will take my journey by you in Spayne. But I am sure when I come vnto you, that I shall come with full blessynge of the Gospel of Christ.

I beseeke you brethen thorow oure LORDE Iesu Christ, and thorow the loue of the sprete, ye ye helpe me in my busynes with youre prayers vnto God for me, that I maye be deluyered from the vnbeleuers in Iewrye and that this my seruice which I do to Jerusalem, maye be accepted of the sayntes, ye I maye come vnto you with ioye by wyll of God, and refreshe my selfe with you. The God of peace be with you all. Amen.

COMMENDE vnto you Phebe our sister, which is a mynister of the congregacion of Cenchrea, that ye receaue her in the LORDE, as it be cometh the sayntes, and that ye helpe her in what soever busynesse she hath neade off you. For she hath succoured many, and myne awne selfe also.

Grete Prisca and Aquila my helpers in Christ Iesu, which for my life haue layed downe their awne neckes: vnto whom not I onely geue thankes, but all the congregacions of the Heythen. Grete the congregacion also in their house. Salute Epenetos my beloved, which is first frute amoge the of Achaia i Christ. Grete Mary, which hath bestowed much laboure on vs. Salute Andronicus i Junia my cosens, felowe presoners, which are awnecient Apostles, were before me in Christ. Grete Amplias my beloved in LORDE. Salute Vrban ourse helper in Christ, i Stachis my beloved. Salute Apelles approved in Christ. Salute them which are of Aristobulus housholde. Salute Herodion my kynszman. Grete the which are of Narcissus housholde in the LORDE. Salute Tryphena i Tryphosa, which haue laboured in LORDE. Salute my beloved Persida, which hath laboured moch i LORDE. Salute Rufus i chosen in LORDE: i his mother i myne. Grete Asyncritus, Phlego, Herman, Patrobas, Herman, i brethre with the. Salute Philologus i Iulia, Nerius i his sister, i Olympia, all the sayntes with the. Salute one another with an holy kyse. The cœgregation of Christ salute you.

I beseeke you brethen, marke them which cause deuysion geue occasions of euell, contrary to doctrine which ye haue learned, avoyde them. For they are soch, seare not the LORDE Iesu Christ, but their awne belly: thorow swete preachinges flateringe wordes, they diseaue hertes of innocentes. For youre obedience is published amonge all men, therfore am I glad of you.

But yet I wolde haue you wyse in that which is good, a symple in euell. 'The God of peace treate Sathan vnder youre fete shortly. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with you. § Timotheus my helper, L Lucius, Jason, Sopater my kynsmê salute you. § Tertius which haue wrtte this epistle in LORDE, salute you. Gaius myne ooste oost oost of whole cœgregation saluteth you. Erastus ye chaberlain of cite saluteth you Quartus a brother saluteth you. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with you all Amê.

To him i is of power to stablyshe you, according to my Gospell preachinge of Iesu Christ, wherby is vtted mystery which hath bene kepe secrete, sence worde begane, but now is opened, shewed by the scriptures of prophetes, at the comauudement of the everlasting God, to set vp i obedientie of the faith amonge all Heythen: to the same God, which alone is wyse, be praye thorow Iesu Christ for euers, Amen.

The first Epistle
of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The first Chapter.

PAUL, called to be an Apostle of Jesus Christ thorow ý will of God, and brother * Sosthenes, vnto the congregation of God which is at Corinthum, to them that are sanctified in Christ Iesus, sayntes by callinge, with all them that call vpon the name of oure LORDE Jesus Christ, in euery place both off theirs and oures. † Grace be with you and peace from God oure father, and from the LORDE Jesus Christ.

I thake my God allwayes on youre behalfe, for the fauoure of God which is geuè you in Jesus Christ, that in all poynte ye are made ryche by him, in euery worde, and in all maner of knowlege (euè as ý preachinge of Christ is confirmed in you) so that ye wante nothinge in euery gifte, and wayte but for the appeareinge of oure LORDE Jesus Christ: which shal strength you also vnto ý ende, that ye maye be blamelesse in the daye of oure LORDE Jesus Christ. ‡ For God is faithful, by whó ye are called vnto the fellishhippe of his sonne Jesus Christ oure LORDE.

But I beseeke you brethre thorow the name of oure LORDE Jesus Christ, that ye all speake one thinge, and let there be no discension amonge you, but that ye be perfecte in one meanyng. For it is shewed me (my brethren) of you, by them which are of ý housholde of Cłoes, that there is stryfe amonge you. I speake of that, which euery one of you sayeth: I holde of Paul. Another, I holde of † Apostle. The thirde, I holde of Cephas. The fourth, I holde off Christ. Is Christ then deuyed in partes? Was Paul crucified for you? Or were ye baptysed in ý name of Paul? I thanke God that I haue baptysed none of you, but Crispus and Gaius: lest euery shulde saye, ý I in myne awne name had baptised. I baptysed also ý housholde of Stepbana. Farthermore knowe I not, whether I baptysed euery other. For Christ sent me not to baptysye, but to preach the Gospell, not with wyszdome of wordes, lest ý crosse of Christ shulde haue bene made of none effecte.

For the worde of ý crosse is foolishnesse to the that perishe † but vnto vs which are saued, it is the power of God. For it is wryttë:  I wyl destoye the wyszdome of the wyse, æ wil cast away the vnderstandinge of ý prudêt. Where are the wyse? Where are ý scrybes? where are ý disputers of this worlde? Hath not God made the wyszdome of this worlde foolishnesse? For in so moch as the worlde by the wyszdome thereof knewe not God in his wyszdome, it pleased God thorow foolish preachinge to saue them ý beleue. For †† the Iewes reuyere tokens, and the Grekes axe after wyszdome. But we preach Christ the crucified: to the Iewes an occassion off fallinge, and vnto the Grekes foolishnes. But vnto them that are called (both Iewes and Grekes) we preach Christ the power of God and †† the wyszdome off God.

For the foolishnes of God is wyser then men: and the weake of God is streyger the men. Brethren loke on youre callinge, how that †† not many wyseme after the flesh, not many mightie, not many of hye degre are called: but that foolish is before the worlde, hath God chosen, that he mighte cofounde the wyse: And that weake is before ý worlde, hath God chosen, ye he mighte confounde the mightye. And the vyle and despysed before the worlde hath God chosen, yee and that which is nothinge, that he mighte destroye that which is oughte, that no flesh shulde reioyse in his presence. Of the same are ye also in Christ Iesu, which of God is made vnto vs wyszdome and *righteousnes, and + sancti- fienghe and redempcon, that, accordinge as it is wrytten: He that reioyseth, shulde reioyse in the LORDE.

A ND I brethre, whi I came vnto you came not with hye worde or hye wyszdome, to shewe vnto you the preachinge of Christ. For I shewed not forth my selfe amonge you that I knewe any thinge, saue onely Jesus Christ, euen the same that was crucified. And I was amonge you in weaknes, and in feare, and in moch tremblinge: and my worde and my preachinge was not with entysinge worde of mans wyszdome, but in shewinge of the spryte and of power: that youre faith shulde not stonde in the wyszdome of men, but in the power of God.

That we speake of, is wyszdome amonge the ye are perfecte: not ye wyszdome of this worlde, nether of the rulers of this worlde which go to naughte: but we speake of the wyszdome of God, which is in secrete and lyeth hyd: which God ordeyned before the worlde vnto our glorye: which none of ye rulers of this worlde knowe. For ye they had knowe it, they had nat crucifie the LORDE of glorye, but as it is wrytten: the eye hath not seene, and the eare hath not herde, nether hath it entred in to the hert of man that God hath prepared for them that love him.

But God hath opened it vnto vs by his sprete. For the sprete searcheth out all thinges, yee euen the deepenes of the God-heade. For what ma knoweth what is in man, saue the sprete of ma which is in him? Euen so no man knoweth what is in God, saue ye sprete of God. As for vs, we haue not receaueu the sprete of this worlde, but the sprete which cometh of God, so that we ca knowe what is good vs God: which we also speake, not with connynge worde of ma wrytten: but with the connyng worde of the holy goost, and judge spiritual matters spiritually. Howbeit the natural man per- ceueth nothinge of ye sprete of God. It is foolishnes vnto him, and he can not perceuie it: for it must be spiritually discerned. But he that is spiritually, discusseth all thinges, and he is judged of noman. For who hath knowne ye mynde of the LORDE? Or who shal enforme him? But we haue the mynde of Christ.

A ND I brethren, could not speake vnto you as vnto spiritual, but as vnto carnall, euen as vnto babes in Christ. §§ I gaue you mylke to drynke, and not meate, for ye mighte not then awaye withall, nether maye ye yet euen now, in so muche as ye are yet fleshly. For seyeinge there is enuyenge, stryfe, and discencion amonge you, ye are not fleshly, a walke after ye maner of men? For whan one sayeth: I holde of Paul: another, I holde of Apollo, are ye not the fleshly? What is Paul? What is Apollo? Euec mynisters are they, by whom ye are come to the beleue, and the same, accor- dinge as the LORDE hath geuen vnto every man. I haue planted, Apollo hath watred, but God hath geuen the increace. So then nether is he that planteth, eny thinge, nether he that watret, but God which gecueth the increace. As for him that planteth, and he that watret, ye one is as the other: but yet shal euerie one receaue his rewarde accor- dinge to his laboure. For we are Gods labourers, ye are Gods husbandry, ye are Gods buyldeinge.

Acordinge to the grace of God which is geuen vnto me, as a wyse buylder have I layed the foundacion, but another buyldeeth theron. Yet let euerie man take hede howe he buyldeith theron. For other foidacion can no man laye, then that which is layed, the which is Iesus Christ. But ye euy eny man buylde vpon this foundacion, gold, syluer, precious stones, tymber, haye, stobble, euerie ma worke shal be shewed. For the daye of the LORDE shal declare it, which shal be shewed with fyre: and the fyre shal trye

* Knowe ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the sprete of God dwelleth in you? Yf eny man defyle the telle of God, him shal God destroye. For the temple of God is holy, which ye are. Let no ma disceane himselfe. Yf eny man thinke himselfe wyse amoyge you, let him become a fool in this worlde, that he maye be wyse. For the wyszdome off this worlde is foolishnes with God. For it is wrytten: † He compaseth the wyse in their craftynesse. And agayne: § The LORDE knoweth the thoughtes of the wyse, that they areayne. Therfore let no man reioye in men. For all is youres, whether it be Paul or Apollo, whether it be Cephas or the worlde, whether it be life or death, whether it be presente or for to come. All is youres, but ye are Chrestes, and Christ is Gods.

The iii. Chapter.

L ET euerie man this wyse esteme vs, enen for the mynisters of Christ,* and stewardes of the secretes of God. Now is there no more requyred of the stewardes, then, that they be founde faithfull. † It is but a small thinge vnto me, that I shulde be indged of you, or of mans daye, nether judge I myne awne selfe. I knowe oughte by my selfe, yet am I not therby justified. †† It is the LORDE that judgeth me. Therfor judge ye nothinge before y tyme, vntyll the LORDE come, whiche shalrynge it to lighte that is byd in darknesse, and opene the counsels of y hertes, and the shal euerie one haue praye of God.

These thinges brethren haue I described in myne awne preson in Apollos for youre sakes, that ye myghte lerne by vs, that noman compete hygher of hym selfe, then aboue is wrytten, that one be not puf vp against another for eny mans cause. For who preferreth the? †† What hast thou that thou hast not receaued? ‡ Yf thou hast receaued it, why makest thou the thy boost, as through thou haddest not receaued it? Now ye are full, now ye are made riche, ye raigne without vs, and wolde God ye dyd raigne, that we might raigne with you.

Me thynketh that God hath set forth vs Apostles for the lowest off all, ‡‡euen as those that are appoynted vnto death. For we are a gaundryge stocke vnto ††y worlde and to the angels, and vnto men. We are fooles for Chrestes sake, but ye are wyse in Christ: We weake, but ye strenge: Ye honorable, but we despyed. ††Euen vnto this daye we hoger and thyrst, and are naked, and are boffetted with fystes, and haue no certayne dwellinge place, ‡§ and laboure and worke with oure awne handes. We are reuelyd, ‡‡and yet we blesse: we are persecuted, and suffre it: We are euell spoken of, and we praye: We are become as it were the very outswepinges of ††y worlde, yee the of scowringlye of all men vnto this tyme.

I wryte not this to shame you, but as my derae childre I warne you. For though ye haue ten thousande instructours in Christ yet haue ye not many fathers. For I haue ‡‡‡ boogotten you in Christ Iesu thorow ††y Gospell? Wherfore I exhorte you, ‡‡‡‡ be ye my folowers. For this cause haue I sent vnto you Timotheus (which is my derae sonne, and faithfull in the LORDE) that he maye put you in remembrance of my wayes, which are in Christ, euell as I teach euerie where in all congregacions. Some are puf vp, as though I wolde come nonore at you. But I wil come to you shortly (†††† y the LORDE wyl) and wyl knowe, not the wordes of the that are puf vp, but †† power. For the kyngdome of God is not † wordes, but in power. What wil ye? Shal I come vnto you with the rodd, or wil I haue and the sprete of mekenesse?

The v. Chapter.

THERE goeth a commen reporte, that there is whordom amoyge you, and soch whordome, as is not ony named amoyge the Heythen, ‡‡that one shulde haue his fathers wife. And ye are puf vp, and haue not rather sorowed, that he which hath done this dede, mighte be put fro amoyge you. For I verely as absent in body, but present in sprete, haue determyned allready as though I were present (oecernynge him that hath done this dede) in \( \frac{v}{i} \) name of oure LORDE Jesus Christ, wha ye are gathered together with my sprete, and with the power of oure LORDE Jesus Christ, * to deluyer him vnto Sathan for the destruction of the flesh, that the sprete maye be saued in the daye of the LORDE Jesus.

Youre reioysinge is not good. * Knowe ye not that a little leuen sowereth the whole lompe of dowe? Pourege out therefore the olde leuen, that ye maye be new dowe, like as ye are sweete bred. For we also haue an \( \frac{v}{i} \) Easter lambe, which is Christ, that is offerd for vs. Wherfore let vs \( \frac{v}{i} \) kepe Easter, not in \( \frac{v}{i} \) olde leuen, ner in the leuen of maliciousnes, and wickednes, but in the sweete bred of purenesse and of the trueth.

I wrote vnto you in the Epistle, that ye shulde haue nothinge to do with whoremogers, * that meant I not at all of the whoremongers of this worlde, ether of the couetous, or of extorcioners, or of the that worshippe ymages, for then must ye nedes haue gone out of the worlde.  But now haue I wrytte vnto you, \( \frac{v}{i} \) ye shulde haue nothinge to do with them: (Namely,) \( \frac{v}{i} \) there bë eny man that is called a brother, and is an whoremonger, or couetous, or a worshippere of ymages, ether a raylar, or a drôkard, or an extorcioner, * with soch shal ye not eate. For what haue I to do to judge them that are without? Do ye not judge the that are within? As for them that are without, God shal judge them.  Put awaye fro you him that is euell.

Chapter 3

A S concernyng the things wherof ye wrote vnto me, I answere: It is good for a man not to touche a woman. Neuertheles to avoyde whordome, let every man haue his awne wife, and let euery woman haue hir awne huszbande. Let the mæ geue vnto the wife due beneuolence: likewyse also the wife vnto ſ man. The wife hath not power ouer hir awne body, but the huszbande; ſ likewise the man hath not power ouer hir awne body, but the wife. *Withdrowe not youre selues one fro another, excepte it be with the consent of both for a tyme, that ye maye geue youre selues vnto fastinge and prayer, and thē come together agayne, lest Sathan tempte you for youre incontynèce. But this I saye of fanour, and not of commandemēt. Howbeit I wolde rather ſ all mē were as I am. Neuertheles euery one hath his proper gift of God: one thus, another so. To them verely ſ are vnmaried and to wedowes I saye: It is good for thē that they abyde also as I do. +But if ye can not absteyne, let them mary. For it is better to mary, then to burne.

But vnto them that are maried, commande not I, but the LORDE; ſ that the wife separate not hir selfe from the huszbande: but if ye separate her selfe, ſ she remayne vnmaried, or be reconciled to hir huszbande: and let not the huszbande put awaye his wife from hym.

As for the other, vnto thē saye I, not ſ LORDE: Yf eny brother haue an vnbeleuynge wife, and she is content to dwell with hym, let him not put hir awaye. And yf a woman haue an vnbeleuynge huszbande, and he is content to dwell with her, let her not put him awaye. For the vnbeleuynge huszbande is sanctified by the wife, and the vnbeleuynge wife is sanctified by the huszbande: or els were youre children vnclene, but now are they holy. But yf the vnbeleuynge departe, let hym departe. A brother or a sister is not boûde in soche cases, but God hath called vs in peace. ſ For what knowest thou O womā, whether thou shalt saue ſ mā? Or what knowest thou O man, whether thou shalt saue the woman? But euyn as God hath distributed vnto euery one ſ and as the LORDE hath called euery man, so let hym walke: and so ordene I in all congregacions.

Yf eny man be called beynge circumeysed let hym take no Heythenshippe ypon hym. Yf eny man be called in the Heythenshippe, let hym not be circumeysed. Circumeision is nothinge, and vncircumeision is nothinge, but the kepyng of the commandementes of God. Let euery one abyde in the callynge wherin he is called. +Art thou called a seruaunt, care not for it: neuertheles ſ thou mayest be fre, vse it rather. For he that is called in the LORDE beynge a seruaunt, is a fre man of the LORDE. Likewyse he that is called beynge fre, is a seruaunt of Christ. Ye are dearly boughte, be not ye the seruantes of men. Brethren let euery one wherein he is called, therin abythe with God.

As concernyng virgins, I haue no commandement of the LORDE, neuertheles I saye my goodmeanynge, as I haue optayned mercē of the LORDE to be faithfull. I suppose it is good for ſ present necessite: for it is good for a man so to be. Art thou bounde vnto a wife, seke not to be lowed: Art thou lowed frō a wife, seke not a wife. But if ye take a wife, thou synnest not. And yf a virgin mary, she synneth not. Neuertheles soch shal haue trouble in the fleshe. But I fauoure you.

Howbeit this I saye brethren: +ʼthe tyme is shorte. Furthermore this is the meynyng, ſ they which haue wyues, be as though they had none: and they that wepe, be as though they wepte not: and they that reioyse, be as though they reioysed not: ſ they that bye, be as though they possessed not: ſ they that vse this worlde, be as though they vsed it not. For the fashion off this worlde passeth awaye. †But I wolde that ye shuld be without care. titHe that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, how he maye please the LORDE. But he that is maried, careth for the thinges of the worlde, how he maye please his wyfe, and is deuyded. A woman and a virgin that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, that she maye be holy both in body ſ also in sprit. But she that is maried, careth for ſ thinges of the worlde, how she maye please hir huszbande.

This I saye for youre profit, not that I wil tangle you in a snaare, but for that which is honest and comly vnto you, that ye maye cōtynuallie cleue vnto the LORDE without hynderaunce. But ye fonie man thinke that it is vncomly for his virgin ye she passe the tyme of marriage, and ye nede so require, let him do what he lyseth, he synneth not, let the be coupled in marriage. Neuertheles he that purposeth surely in his hert, haueynge no nede, but hath power of his awne will, and determineth so in his hert to kepe his virgin, doth well. Fynally, he that ioyneth his virgin in marriage, doth well; but he that ioyneth not his virgin in marriage, doth better. *The wife is bounde to the lawe, as longe as his huszbande lyueth. But ye his huszbande slepe, she is at liberty to marry vnto whom she will, onely that it be done in the LORDE. But she is happier ye she so abyde after my judgment. I thinke verely that I also haue the sprete of God.

The viii. Chapter.

As touchinge thinges offred vnto Idols we are sure ye we all haue knowledge. Knowledge puffeth a man vp, but loue edifieth. Neuertheles ye eny man thinke ye he knoweth eny thinge, he knoweth not yet how he oughte to knowe. But ye eny man loue God, the same is knowne of him.

So are we sure now cōcernyng the meates offred vnto Idols, that an Idol is nothinge in the worlde, and that there is none other God but one. And though there be that are called goddes, whether in heauen or in earth (as there be goddes many and lordes many) yet haue we but one God, euene the father, of who are all thinges, and we in him: a one LORDE Iesus Christ, by who are all thinges, and we by him.

But every man hath not knowledge: for some make yet conscience ouer the Idol, and eate it as a thinge offred vnto Idols: and so their conscience beyng weake, is defyled. Neuertheles meate furthure not vse vnto God. Yf we eate, we shall not therfore be the better: ye we eate not, we shall not therfore be the lesse. But take heed that this youre liberty be not an occasion of fallynge vnto ye weake. For ye eny man se the (which hast knowledge) syt at the table in the Idols house, shal not his conscience whyle it is weake, be occasioned to eate of the Idol-offerings? And so thorow thy knowledge shal the weake brother perisethe, for who Christ dyed. But whan ye synne so against the brethren, and wouncle their weake conscience, ye synne agaynst Christ. Wherfore ye meate offende my brother, I wyl neuer eate flesh, lest I offende my brother.

The ix. Chapter.

A M I not an Apostle? Am I not fre? Haue I not sene Iesus Christ oure LORDE? Are not ye my worke in the LORDE? Yf I be not an Apostle vnto other, yet am I youre Apostle: for the seale of myne Apostelshippe are ye in the LORDE. Myne answere vnto them that axe me, is this: Haue we not power to cate and drynke? Haue we not power also to leade aboute a sister to wife, as well as other Apostles, and as the brethren of the LORDE, and Cephas? Or haue onely I and Barnabas not power this to do? Who goeth a warfare at eny tyme vpon his awne wages? Who planteth a ynyarde, and eate not of the frute thereof? Who fedeth a flocke, and eate not of the mylke of the flocke?

Saye I these thinges after the maner of men? Sayeth not the lawe the same also? For it is wrytten in the lawe off Moses: Thou shalt not mosell the mouth of the ox that tredeth out the corne. Doth God take thought for the oxen? Or sayeth he it not altogether for oure sakes? For no doute it is wrytten for oure sakes. For he that eareth, shulde eare vpon hope: and he throszeth, shulde troszhe vpon hope, ye he mighte be partaker of his hope. Yf we haue sowne vnto you spiritual thinges, is it a greate thighe ye we reape youre bodely thinges? But ye other be partakers of this power on you, wherfore are we not rather? Neuertheles we haue not vse of this power, but sufere all thinges, lest we shulde hynder the Gospell off Christ. Knowe ye not that they which laboure in the temple, haue their lyuynge of ye temple:

COMMENDE you brethren, that ye remembre me in all poyntes, and kepe the ordinannces, eué as I deluered them vnto you. But I certifie you, that Christ is the head of euery man. "As for ye man, he is the head of ye woman, but God is Christes heade. Euery man that prayeth or prophecieth, and hath eny thinge on his heade, shameth his heade. But euery woman that prayeth or prophecieth with vncovered heade, dishonesteth hir heade. For it is euern a lyke moch as yf she were shauen. Yf the womaé be not couvered, let hir heer also be cut of. But yf it be vncomely for a woman to have hir heer heade. Neuertheles the man oughte not to couer his heade, ‡‡ for so muche as he is the ymage and glory of God: but the woma is the glory of the man. §§ For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.

Nether was the man created for the womans sake, but the woma for the mans sake.

Therefore ought the woman to have a power upon hir heade, for the angels sakes. Neuer-theles nether is the man without y woman, nether the woman without the ma in the LORDE. For as the woman is of the man, euen so commeth the man also by the woman,
but all of God. Judge ye by youre selues, whether it be comly, y a woma praye before warne you of: I commende it not, that ye come together not after a better maner but after a worse. First, whan ye come together in the congreagation, I heare, that there are discensions amonoge you, and I partly beleue

it. §§ For there must be sectes amonoge you,
that they which are perfecte amonoge you,
mighte be knowne.

Now whan ye come together, the LORDES
supper can not be kepte. For whan it shulde

Haue ye not houses to eate and drynke in?
Or despysye ye y congreagation of God, and shame them that have not? What shal I prayse I you not. That which I delueryed

Wherefore who soever shall eate off this bred, and drynke off this cuppe of the LORDE vnworthely, shalbe giltye of the body and bloud of the LORDE. But let a man examine himselfe, and so let him eate of this bred, and drynke of this cuppe. For he that eateh and drynketh vnworthely, eateth α drynketh his awne damnacion, because he maketh no difference of the LORDES body. Therfore are there so many weake and sicke amōge you, and many slepe. For if we judged oure selues, we shulde not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastenened of the LORDE, that we shulde not be daned with the world. Therfore my brethren, whan ye come together to eate, tary one for another. But ye eny man honger, let him eate at home, that ye come not together vnto codempaciac. As for other things, I wil set them in order when I come.

The rii. Chapter.

A S concernyng spirituall giftes (brethren) I wolde not that ye were ignoraunt. Ye knowe that ye were Heythē and wente youre wayes vnto domé Idols, euē as ye were led. Wherefore I declare vnto you, ἃ that no man speakynge thorow the sprete of God, defyeth Iesu. And no man can saye that Iesus is the LORDE, but by the holy goost.

There are dyuerse giftes, yet but one sprete: and there are dyuerse offices, yet but one LORDE: and there are dyuerse operations. Yet is there but one God, which worketh all in all. The giftes of the sprete are geuen vnto euery man to profit the congregacion. To one is geuen thorow the sprete the viturance of wisdome: to another is geuen the viturance of knowledge according to the same sprete: to another, faith in the same sprete: to another, the giftes of healinge in the same sprete: to another, power to do miracles: to another, prophesieinge: to another, judgment to discrene spretes: to another, dyuerse tungs: to another, the interpretacion of tungs. These all doth ἃ same onely sprete worke, and distributeth vnto euery man, acordinge as he will.

For as the body is one, and hath yet many members, therefore all the members of the body though they be many, are yet but one body: euēn so Christ also. For we are all baptysed in one sprete to be one body, whether we be Iewes or Gentyles, whether we be bonde or fre, and have all ⦁ dronke of one sprete. For the body also is not one membre, but many. Yf the fote saye: I am not ἃ hande, therfore I am not a membre of the body, is he therfore not a membre of ἃ body? And yf the eare saye: I am not the eye, therfore am I not a membre of the body, is he therfore not a membre of the body? Yf all the body were an eye, where were then the hearinge? Yf all were hearinge, where then the smellinge? But now hath God set the members, euery one severally in the body, as it hath pleased him. Neuertheles yf all the members were one membre, where were then the body? But now are the members many, yet is the body but one.

The eye can not saye vnto the hande: I haue no nede of the: or agayne the heade vnto the fete, I haue no nede of you: but rather a greate deale the members of the body which seme to be most feble, are most necessary: and vpon those members of the body which we thinke least honest, put we most honestie on: and oure vncomly partes haue most beute on. For oure honest members neede it not. But God hath so measured ἃ body, and geuen most honoure vnto that membre which had nede, that there shulde be no stryfe in the body, but that the members shulde indifferently care one for another. And yf one membre suffer, all the membres suffer with him: and yf one membre be had in honoure, all the members are glad with him also. But ye are the body of Christ, and members, euery one of another.

And God hath ordeyned in the congregacion, first the ἡ Apostles, secoūly prophets, thirdly ἡ teachers, then doers of miracles, after that the giftes of healinge, helpers, gouerners, dyuerse tungs. Are they all Apostles? Are they all prophets? Are they all teachers? Are they all doers of miracles? Haue they all the gifts of healinge? Speake they all with tongue? Can they all interpret? But covet ye the best gifts. And yet shewe I you a more excellent waye.

The rii. Chapter.

THOUGH I spake with the tongue of men and angels, and yet had not loue, I were euene as soundinge brasse, or as a tynklinge Cymball. *And though I coude prophecy, τ vnderstode all secretes, and all knowlege, and had all faith, so t that I coude moue mouiaynes out of their places, and yet had not loue, I were nothinge. And though I bestowe all my goodes to fede ἡ poore, and though I gaue my body euene that I burned, and yet haue not loue, it profieth me nothinge.

Loure is pacient τ curteous, loue enuyeth not, loue doth not frowardly, is not pufte vp, dealeth not dishonestly, ἦ seeketh not hir awne, is not prouoked vnto anger, thynketh not euell, reioyseth not ouer inquyte, but reioyseth in the treuch, beareth all thinges, beleueth all thinges, hopeth all thinges, suffr eth all thinges.

Though prophecienyes fayle, or tongue ceasse, or knowlege perishe, yet loue fallemente neuer awayye. For oure knowlege is vnparfeete, and oure prophecienge is vnparfecte. But wha that which is perfecte, commeth, then shal the vnparfecte be done awayye. When I was a childe, I spake as a childe, I vnderstode as a childe, I ymagned as a childe. But as soone as I was a man, I put awayye chylkynge. Now we se thorow a glasse in a darke speakynge, but thē shal we se face to face. Now I knowe vnperfectly: but thē shal I knowe euē as I am knowe. Now abyldeth faith, hope, loue, these thre: but the greatest of these is loue.

The rii. Chapter.

LABORE for loue. Covet spirituall gifts, but specially that ye maye, prophecy. For he ἦ spake with tongues, spake not vnto men, but vnto God: for no man heareth him. Howbeit in ἦ sprete he spakeh misteries. But he that prophecyth, spakeh vnto men to edifienge, τ to exhortation, and to coforte. He that spakeh with tongues, edifieth himselfe: but he that prophecyth, edifieth the congregacion. I wolde that ye all spake with tongue, but rather that ye prophesie. For greater is he that prophesieth, then he that spakeh with τūges: excepte he also expounde it, that the congregacion maye haue edifienge. But now bretheren yf! I come vnto you, and spake with tongue, what shal I profet you, excepte I spake vnto you ether by reuelacion or by knowlege, or by prophecienge, or by doctryne?

Likewise is it also in ἦ thinges that geue sounde, and yet lyue not: whether it be a pype or an harpe, excepte they geue distyncte soundes from them, how shal it be knowne what is pyped or harped? And yf the trōpe geue an uncertayne sounde, who wil prepare him selfe to the battayll? Euen so ye like wyse, whan ye spake with tongue, except ye spake playne wordes, how shal it be knowne what is spokē? for ye shal but speake in ἦ ayre. So many kyndes of voyces are in the worlde, and none of them is without signification. Yf I knowe not now what ἦ voyce meaneth, I shalbe an aleaunte vnto him that spakeh: ἦ he that spakeh, shalbe an aleaunt vnto me. Euē so ye (for so much as ye couet spirituall gifts) seke ἦ voyce hauing plenty to the edifienge of the congregacion. Wherefore let him that spakeh with tongue, praye, that he maye interpretę also. Yf I praye with tongues, my sprete prayeth, but my vnparfecte bryngeth no man frute. How shal it be then? Namely thus: I wil praye with ἦ sprete, and wil praye with the vnparfecte also: I wil synge psalms in the sprete, and wil synge psalms with ἦ vnparfectinge also.

But when thou geuest thankes with ἦ sprete, how shal he that occupieth the rowme of the vnlearned, saye ἄμε at thy geuynge of thankes, seyne he knoweth not what thou sayest? Thou geuest well thankes, but the other is not edified. I thanke my God, that I spake with tongues more then ye all. Yet had I leuer in the cōgregacion to speake fuye wordes with my vnparfectinge ἦ I maye enfourme other also, rather then ten thousande wordes with tongue. § Brethren be not children in vnparfectinge, howbeit as concerninge maliciousnes be chilidre, but in vnparfectinge be perfecte. In the lawe it is wrytten: With other tongue with and with other lippes wyf I spake vnto this people, and yet shal they not so heare me, sayeth the LORDE. § Therfore are tongues for a token, not to thē that beleue, but to them that beleue not. Contrary wyse, prophecieng, not to them that beleue not, but to them which beleue.

If the whole congregacion now came together in to one place, spake all with tungen, and there came in they that are vnlearned, or they which beleue not, shulde they not saye, that ye were out of youre wyttes? But yf all prophecieng, and there came in one y beleueth not, or one vnlearned, he shulde be rebuked of them all, and judged of all, and so shulde the secrete of his hert be opened, and so shulde he fall dounw vpou his face, worshipping God, and knowleginge, that of a trueth God is in you. How is it then brethren? Whan ye come together, euery one hath a psalme, hath doctrine, hath a tunge, hath a reuelacion, hath an interpretacon. Let all be done to edifyenge. Yf eny man speake with tungen, let him do it him selfe beyng the seconde, or at the most him selfe beyng y thirde, and one after another, and let one interprete it. But yf there be not an interpreter, then let him kepe sylence in the congregacion, howbeit let him speake to himselfe and to God. As for the prophets, let two or thrse speake *and let the other judge. But yf eny reuelacion be made vnto another that sytteth, then let the first holde his peace.

Ye maye all prophecieng one after another that they all maye lerne, and that all maye haue comforte. And the spretes of the prophetes are subiecte vnto the prophetes. For God is not a God off discension, but off peace, like as in all congregacions off the sayentes. Let your wyues kepe sylence in the congregacion, for it shal not be permytted vnto the to speake, but to be vnder obedience, as lawe sayeth also. But yf they wyll lerne eny thinge, let them axe their husbtides at home. For it becommeth not wemè to speake in the congregacion. Or sponghe the worde of God from amonge you? Or is it come vnto you onely? Yf eny man thynke himselfe to be a prophet, or spiriutall, let him knowe what I wytte vnto you, for they are the commandementes of the LORDE. But yf eny man be ignoraunt, let him be ignoraunt. Wherfore brethren, couet to propheciye, and forbyd not to speake with tungen. Let all thinges be done honestly and in order.

The 2d. Chapter.

DECLARE vnto you brethern, the Gospell that I haue preached vnto you (which ye haue also accepted, and in the which ye stode, by the which also ye are saved) after what maner I preached it vnto you, yf ye haue kepte it, excepte ye haue beleued in vayne. For first of all I delynered vnto you that which I also receaued, how that Christ dyed foroure synnes acordinge to the scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose agayne y thirde daye acordinge to the scriptures, and that he was sene of Cephas, then of the twelue: after that was he sene of mo then fyne hundrthed brethern at once, wherof there are yet many alyne, but some are fallen aslepe. Afterwarde was he sene of Iames, then of all the Apostles. Last of all was he sene of me also, as of one borne out of due tyme. *For I am y lest of the Apostles, which am not worthy to be called an Apostле, *because I persecuted the congregacion of God. But by the grace of God I am that I am. And his grace in me hath not bene vayne, but I haue laboured more then they all: howbeit not I but the grace of God which is with me. Now whether it be I or they, thus haue we preached, and thus haue ye beleued.

But yf Christ be preached, that he is rysen from the deed, how saye then some amõge you, that there is no resurreccion of the deed? Yf there be no resurreccio of the deed, then is Christ not rysen. Yf Christ be not rysen, then is our preachinge in vayne, and your faith is also in vayne: yee and we are founde false witnesses of God, because we haue testified agaynst God, that he hath raiyned vp Christ, whom he hath not raiyned vp, yf the deed rysen not agayne. For yf the deed rysen not agayne, thë is Christ also not rysen agayne. But yf Christ be not rysen agayne, then yse youre faith in vayne, and ye are yet in youre synnes: they also that are fallè a slepe in Christ, are perished. Yf in this life onely we hope on Christ, then are we of all men the most miserable.

But now is Christ rysen from the deed, and is become * first fruites of them that sleepe. For by one man commeth death, and by one ¶ Eph. 3. b.  ‡ Act. 8. a. and 9. a.   Col. 1. h.

man the resurrection of the deed. For as they all dye in Adam, so shall they all be made aliyue in Christ, but every one in his order. The first is Christ, then they that beloge vnto Christ, when he commeth. Then the ende, wha he shal deluyer vp the kyngdome vnto God the father, when he shal put downe all rule, and all superiorite, g power. * For he must raynge, till he haue put all his enemies vnder his fete. The last enemye that shal be destroyed, is death, for he hath put all thinges vnder his fete. But wha he sayeth, that all thinges are put vnder him, it is manifyst that he is exalted, which put all thinges vnder him. When all thinges shall be subdued vnto him, then shal the sonne himselfe also be subieete vnto him, which put all thinges vnder him, that God maye be all in all.

Or els what do they which are baptised ouer y deed, yf the deed ryse not at all? Why are they then baptysed ouer the deed? And why stonde we in ioperdy euery houre? By oure reioysinge which I haue in Christ Iesu oure LORDE, I dye daylie. That I have foughte with beestes at Epheus after y maner of men, what hehelpeth it me, yf the deed ryse not agayne? * Let vs eate and drynke, for tomorrow we shall dye. Be not ye disseaced. Euell speakinges corrupte good maners. Awake righte vp, and synne not: for some haue not y knowledge of God. This I saye to youre shame.

But some man mighte saye: How shall the deed aryse? And with what maner off body shal they come? Thou foole, yf which thou sowest is not quyckened, excepte it dye. And what sowest thou? thou sowest not y body that shalbe, but a bare corne, namely of wheate, or of some other. But God geueth it a body as he wil, and vnto euery one of y sedes his owne body.

All fleszhe is not one maner of fleszhe, but there is one maner fleszhe of men, another of beastes, another of fishedes, another of byrdes. And there are heauenly bodies, and there are earthly bodies: but the heauenly haue one glory, and y earthly another. The Some hath one clearnes, the Moone hath another clearnesse, and the starres haue another clearnesse, for one starre excelleth another in clearnesse: Euen so the resurrection of the deed. It is sowne in corruption, and shall ryse in vncorruption: It is sowne in dishonoure, y shall ryse in glory: It is sowne in weakesse, and shall ryse in power: It is sowne a naturall body, y shall ryse a spirittuall body.

Yf there be a naturall body, there is a spirittuall body also. As it is wrytten: § The first man Adam was made in to a naturall life, and the last Adâ in to a spirittuall life. Howbeit the spirittuall body is not the first, but y naturall, and then the spirittuall. The first man is of the earth, earthly: y seconde mâ is frô beaue, beauely. As the earthy is, soch are also that are earthye: and as y heauenely is, soch are they also y are heaneily. And as we haue borne the ymage of the earthy, so shal we beare the ymage of the heauenely also. This I saye brethern, that flesh y bloude can not inheret y kyngdome of God: nether shall corrupcion inheret vncorrupcion.

Beholde, I saye vnto you a mystery: I We shall not all slepe, but we shall all be changed, and that sodely and in the twinklyng of an eyie, at the tyme of the last trompe. For the trompe shall blowe, and the deed shall ryse vnccorruptible, and we shall changgd. For this corruptible must put on vnccorruptiion, and this mortall must put on immortalitie. But when this corruptible shall put on vnccorruptiion, and this mortall shall put on immortalitie, the shal the worde be fulfilled that is wrytte: Death is swalowed vp in victory.  Death, where is thy stynge? Hell, where is thy victory? The stynge of death is synne: The strength of synne is the lawe. But thankes be vnto God,†† which hath gene vs the victory thowrourour LORDE Iesu Christ. Therfore my deare brethren, be ye stedfast, vmmouable, al wayre riche in the worke of the LORDE, for as much as ye knowe, that youre labour is not in vayne in the LORDE.

The second Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The first Chapter.

PAUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ, by the will of God, and brother Timotheus. Vnto the congregacion of God which is at Corinth, with all the sayntes which are in all Achaia. * Grace be with you, and peace frō God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesu Christ.

Blessed be God the father of our LORDE Iesu Christ, the father of mercy and y God of all confort, which comforteth vs in all oure trouble: in so much y we are able to conforte them that are in eny maner of trouble, with the same confort wherwith we oure selues are conforted of God. For as the affliccioνs of Christ are plenteous in vs, euyn so is oure cósolacion plenteous by Christ. But whether we haue trouble or conforte, it is done for youre welth. Yf it be trouble, it is done for youre conforte and health, which health sheweth hir power, in that ye suffre the same affliccioνs which we suffre. Yf it be conforte, it is done also for youre conforte and health. Therfore is oure hope fast for you, in as moch as we knowe, that, like as ye are partakers of the affliccioνs, so shall ye be partakers also of the consolation.

Brethren we wolde not haue you ignoraunt of oure trouble, which happened vnto vs in Asia, for we were greued out off measure passyng strength, so that we euen dispaered of life, and had concluded in oure selues y we must nedes dye. But this was done, because we shulde not put oure trust in oure selues, but in God, which rayseth vp the deed to life agayne: which deluyereth vs from so greate a death, and yet deluyereth daylie, On whom we trust, that he wil deluyer vs here after also, by the help of youre prayer for vs, that on oure behalfe many thankes maye be geuen by many personnes, for the gifte that is geuen vs.

For oure reioysinge is this, euyn the testimony of oure conscience, that in synqlenes a godly purenesse, not in fleshly wyszdome, but in the grace of God, we haue had oure conversacion in the worlde, but most of all with you. For we wryte nothinge els vnto you, then that ye rede and also knowe. Yee q I trust that ye schal fynde vs vnto the ende, euyn as ye haue founde vs partly.

For we are oure reioysinge, euν as ye also are oure δ reioysinge in δ daye of the LORDE Iesu. And in this confidence was I mynded the other tyme to come vnto you (that ye mighte haue yet another pleasure more) δ to passe by you in to Macedonia, δ to come againe out of Macedonia vnto you δ to be led forth to Iewrye ware of you.

When I thus wyse was mynded, dyd I vse lightnesse? Or are my thoughtes fleshly? Not so δ but with me yee is yee, and nay is naye. O faughtull God, that oure worde vnto you hath not bene yee and naye. For Gods some Iesu Christ, which was preached amonge you by vs (namely, by me and Siluanus and Timotheus) was not yee and naye, but in him it was yee. For all the promyses of God are yee in him, δ are Amē in him, to the prays of God by vs. But it is God which stablysheth vs with you in Christ, and hath anoynted us, δ and sealed us, and geuen the ernest of the sprete in oure hertes.

The ii. Chapter.

BUT I call God to recorde vnto my soule, that to favoure you* withall I came not agayne vnto Corinth. Not that we are lords over youre faith, but we are helpers of your faith, ye stonde in faith. But I determyned this with my selfe, that I wolde not come agayne to you in heuynes. For yt I make you sory, who is it that shall make me glad, but the same which is made sory by me? And the same hau I wyritten vnto you, lest wha I come, I shulde take heuynes of them, of whom I oughte to relouye: for so much as I haue this confidence in you all, that my ioye is the ioye of you all. For in greate trouble and anguys of hert wrote I vnto you with many teares: not yt ye shulde be sory, but that ye mighte perceane the loue, which I haue most specially vnto you.

But ye eny man hau haue caused sorowe, the same hau not made me sory, but partly, lest I shulde greue you all. It is sufficient, that the same man is so rebuked of many, so that from hence forth ye oughte the more to forgue him and to comforte him, lest he be swathowed vp in ouer moch heuynesse. Wherefore I exhorte you, that ye shewe loue vpó him. For therfore dyd I wyrite vnto you also, that I mighte knowe the profe of you, whether ye were obedient in all things. But loke vnto wha ye forgue eny thinge, I forgue hi also. For I also, ye I forgue ought vnto eny mā, that forgue I for youre sakes in the rowsine of Christ, lest we shulde be prevented of Satan. For his thoughtes are not vnknowne vnto vs.

But wha I came to Troada to preach the Gospell of Christ (and a dore was opened vnto me in the LORDE) I had no rest in my sprete, because I founde not Titus my brother: but I toke my leue of them, and wente awaye in to Macedonia. Yet thankes be vnto God, which allwaye geueth vs the victory in Christ, and openeth the sauoure of his knowelege by vs in euery place. For we are vnto God the good sauoure of Christ, both amongeth the ye are sauned, a amongeth them ye perishe. To these, the sauoure of death vnto death: but vnto ye other, the sauoure of life vnto life. And who is mete theerto? For we are not as many are, which choppe a chaunge with the worde of God, but ene out of purenesse, and out of God, in ye sighte of God, so speake we in Christ.

The ii. Chapter.

BEGYNNE we then agayne to praysye oure selnes? Or neade we (as some other) of pistles of commedacion vnto you or letters of commedacion from you? Ye are oure epistle wrytten in oure hertes: which is vnderstone and red of all me, in that ye are knouen, how that ye are the epistle of Christ, mynistrad by vs, and wrytte, not with ynke, but with the sprete of the lyuynge God: not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the hert. Soch trust haue we thorow Christ to God warde, not that we are sufficient of oure selnes to thynke eny thinge, as of oure selnes, but oure ablenesse commeth of God, which hath made vs able, to be mynisters of the new Testament: not of the letter, but of the sprete. For the letter kylleth, but the sprete geueth life.

But ye the mynistracion ye kylleth thorow the letter, and was figured in stones, was glorious, so that the childe of Israel mighte not beholde the face of Moses, for ye clearnesse of his countenance, (which glory neueretheles is done awaye) how shal not ye mynistracion of ye sprete be moch more glorious? For ye the office that preacheth damnacion be glorious, moch more doth the office that preacheth righteounesse euexde in glory. For ye other parte that was glorified is nothinge glorified in respecte of this excedinge glory. For ye that which is done awaye, be glorious, moch more shal ye which remayneth, be glorious.

Seynge then that we haue soch trust, we vse great boldnesse, and do not as Moses, which put a vayle before his face, so that ye children of Israel mighte not se the ende of it, that is done awaye. But their myydes are bynyed.  For vnto this daye remayneth the same coueringe vntake awaye in the olde Testament, when they rede it, which in Christ is put awaye. But euyn vnto this daye whan moses is red, the vayle hangeth before their hertes: Neuertheles wha they turne to the LORDE, the vayle shalbe taken awaye.  For the LORDE is a sprete: a where the spare of the LORDE is, there is liberty. But now the glory of \textsuperscript{v} LORDE appeareth in vs all with open face, and we are changed in to the same ymage, from one cleanernes to another, euë as of the sprete of the LORDE.

\textbf{The \textsuperscript{iii}i. Chapter.}

THERFORE seynge we have soch an office (euë as mercy is come vpon vs) we saynte not, but cast from vs the clokes of vnhonestye, and walke not in craftines: nether corruppe we the worde of God but open the trueth, and reporte oure selues to euery mans conscience in the sighte of God.

Yf our Gospell be yet hyd, it is hyd in them that are lost: amonge whom the God of this worlde * hath blunded \textsuperscript{v} myndes of them which beleue not, that \textsuperscript{v} lighte of the Gospell of the glory of Christ (t which is the ymage of God) shulde not shyne vnto them. For we preach not oure selues, but Jesus Christ to be the LORDE, and oure selues youre seruauntes for Jesus sake.

For God \textsuperscript{t} that commanded the light to shyne out of dareknesse, \textsuperscript{v} hath geuen a cleare shyne in oure hertes, \textsuperscript{y} by vs \textsuperscript{v} light of \textsuperscript{y} knowlege of the glory of God mighte come forth, in the face of Jesus Christ.

But this treasure haue we in \textsuperscript{y} earthen vessels, that \textsuperscript{y} power which excelleth might be of God, and not of vs. We are troubled on euery syde, yet are we not without shift. We are in pouerite, but not utterly without somwhat. We are persecuted, yet we are not forsaken. We are oppresse, eueryewe we perish not. \textsuperscript{t} We alwayes beare aboute in oure body the dyenge of the LORDE Jesus \textsuperscript{y} the life also of the LORDE Jesus might appeare in oure body. \textsuperscript{} For we which lyue, are alwayes deluered vnto death for Jesus sake, that the life also of Jesus might appeare in oure mortall flesh.

Therefore is death now mightie in vs, but life in you. But seynge that we haue the same sprete of the glory (acordinge as it is wrytten: \textsuperscript{tt} I beleued, and therfore haue I spoke.) we also beleue, \textsuperscript{g} therfore we speake, for we knewe that he, which raysed \textsuperscript{v} \textsuperscript{y} LORDE Jesus, shal rayse vs \textsuperscript{v} also by \textsuperscript{y} meanes of Jesus, and shal set vs with you. For all things do I for youre sakes, \textsuperscript{tt} that the plenteous grace by the thekesgenyng of many, maye redonde to the prayse of God. Therfore are we not weery, but thounge outwarde man be corruppte, yet the inwarde is renewed daye by daye. \textsuperscript{§} For oure trouble, which is but temporall and lighte, worketh an excedenghe and an eternall weighte of glorye vnto vs, which loke not on the thinges that are sene, but on them which are not sene. For \textsuperscript{v} thinges which are sene, are temporall: but the thinges that are not sene, are eternall.

WE knowe surely, \textsuperscript{y} if our LORDE\textsuperscript{y} house of this dwellynge were destroyed, we haue a buyllynge ordyne of God, an house not made with handes, but euerlastynge in heaven. \textsuperscript{} And in the same sighe we also after oure mision, which is from heaven: and longe to be clothed therwith, so yet, \textsuperscript{} yf that we be founde clothed, and not naked. For as longe as we are in this tabernacle, we sighe and are greued, for we had rather not be vnclotted, but to be clothed vpon, that mortalite mighte be swalowed vp of life. But he that hath ordeyne vs for this, is God, \textsuperscript{tt} which hath geuen vs the earnest of the sprete. Therfore are we allwaye of good cheare, and knowe, that as longe as we dwell here in the body, we are not at home with the LORDE: for we walke in faith, and se him not. Neuertheles we are of good comforte, and had leuer to be absent from the body, \textsuperscript{g} to be at home with the LORDE.

Wherfore, whether we be at home or fro home, we endoure oure selues to please him. \textsuperscript{tt} For we must all appeare before the judgment seate of Christ, \textsuperscript{y} euery one maye receaue in his body, acordinge to \textsuperscript{y} he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Seynge then that we knowe, how that the LORDE is to be feared, we fare fayre with men, but we are knowne well ynough vnto God: I trust also, that we are knowne in youre conscience. We praye not oure selues agayne vnto you, but geue you an occasion to reioyse of vs, \textsuperscript{y} ye maye haue to reioyse agaynst them, which reioyse after the outwarde appearance, and not after the hert. For ye we do to moch, we do it vnto God: ye we kepe measure, we do it for youre sakes. For the loute of Christ constrayneth vs, in as moch as we thus judge, that ye one be deed for all, then are all deed. And therfore dyed he for all, that they which lyue, shulde not hence forth lyue vnto them selues, but vnto him, which dyed for them and rose agayne.

Therefore hence forth knowe we noman after y flesh: and though we have nowe Christ also after the flesh, yet knowe we him now so nomore. Therefore ye any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Olde things are past awaye, beholde, all are become new. Neuertheles all things are off God, which hath reconcyled vs vnto himselfe by Jesus Christ, and hath geuen vs the office to preach the attonement. For God was in Christ, and) reconcyled the worlde vnto himselfe, and counted not ther synnes vnto them, and amonge vs hath he set vp the worde of y attonement. Now the are we messaungers in the rowme of Christ, euen as though God exhorted by vs. We beseeke you now therfore in Christes steade, that ye be at one with God: for he hath made him which knewe no synne, to be synne for vs, y we by his meanes shulde be that righteousnes, which before God is alowed.

The vi. Chapter.

WE as helpers therfore exhorte you, that ye receaue not y grace of God in vayne. For he sayeth: I haue herde the in the tyme accepted, and in the daye of saluation haue I succoured the. Beholde, now is the accepted tyme, now is the daye of saluation. Let vs geue no man occasion of euell, that oure office be not euell spoken of: but in all things let vs behaue oure selues as the * inynters of God: in moch pacience, in troubles, in necessities, in anguysshes, in strypes, in presonmentes, in vproures, in laboures, in watchinges, in fastynge, in purenesse, in knowlge, in longe sufferynge, in kyndnesse, in the holy goost, in loue vnfayned, in the worde of the trueh, in the power of God, by the armoure of righteousnes on the rightehande and on the lefte, by honoure and dishonoure, by euell reporte and good reporte: as diseauers, y yet true: as vnknowne, and yet knowne: y as dyenge, and beholde, we lyue: as chastened, and not kylded: as sorrowynge, and yet allwaye mery: as poore, y yet make many riche: as hauynge nothinge, y yet possessynge all things.

O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open vnto you, our hert is large. Ye are in no strayntnesse on oure behalfe: but where as ye are in strayntnesse, that do ye of youre owne hertely meanyngue. I speake to you, as to childe, that haue like rewardes with vs. Set youre selues therfore at large.

§§ Beare not a straunge yock with the vnbeleuers. For what fellishippe hath righteousnes with vnrighteousnes? What company hath lighte with darknesse? How agreeeth Christ with Belial? Or what parte hath the beleuer with the infydele? How acordeth y tiple of God with ymages? Ye are the temple of the lyuyng God, as sayeth God: I wyl dwell in them, and walke in them, y and wyl be their God, y they shalbe my people. Wherfore come out from amoge them, and separate youre selues (sayeth the LORDE) and touche no vnclene thinge, so wyl I receaue you, y be youre father, y ye shalbe my sommes and doughters, sayeth y Allmightie LORDE.

The vi. Chapter.

SEYNGE now that we haue soch promyse, (dearly beloued) let vs clenseoure selues from all ylythyne of the flesh and sprete, and growe vp to full holynes in y feare of God. Vnderstode vs righte. We haue hurte no man, we haue corrupte no man, we haue defrauded no man. I speake not this to co-demme you, for I haue shewed you before, that ye are in oure hertes, to dye and to lyue with you. I am very bolde toward you, I make moch boost of you, I am fyllled with conforte, I am exceedynge joyous in all oure tribulacion.  For whan we were come in to Macedonia, oure flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on euery syde: outwade was fightinge, inwarde was feare. Neuertheles God that comforteth the abiec, comforted vs by the comynge of Titus.
B Not onely by his commynge, but also by the cosolacion wherwith he was coforted of you, when he tolde vs youre desire, youre wepyng, youre ferueet mynde for me, so I now reioyse ye more. For where as I made you sorry by the letter, it repenteth me not, though I dyd repeete. For I se, that the same epistle made you sorry (though it were but for a cason). But now I reioyce, not that ye were sorry, but that ye were sory to repentance. For ye sorowed godly, so that in nothing ye were hurte by vs. For godly sorowe causeth repentance vnto saluation, not to be repented of: * but worldly sorowe causeth death. Beholde, where as ye haue had godly sorowe, what diligence hath it wrought in you? Yee a sufficiet answer, displeasure, feare, desire, a ferueet mynde, punyshment. For in all poynte vs haue shewed youre selues, that ye are cleare in that matter.

C Wherfore though I wrote vnto you, yet is it not done for his cause that dyd hurte, nether for his cause that was hurte, but that youre diligence (which ye haue for vs in the sighte of God) mighte be manifest with you. Therfore are we comforted, because ye are comforted: but exceedingly the more ioyed we, for the ioye of Titus, because his sprete was refresched of you all. I am therfore not now ashamed, though I boasted my selfe vnto him of you: but like as all is true that I haue spoken vnto you, eu en so is our boastinge vnto Titus founde true also. And his inwarde affeccion is more abundaunte towarde you, when he remembreth the obedience of you all, how ye receaue him with feare and treblynye. I reioyse, that I maye be bolde ouer you in all thinges.

The viij. Chapter.

I DO you to wit (brethren) the grace of God, which is geue in the congregacions of Macedo ny. For their reioysinge was most abundaunt, when they were tryed by moch trouble: though they were exceedinge poore, yet haue they geue exceedinge richely, and that in synglenesse. For to their power (I beare recorde), yee and beyonde their power, they were wyllinge of their awne acorde, and prayed vs with greate instance, that we wolde receaue their benefite and fellishippe of the thadreachinge that is done for the syntes. And not as we loked for, but gaue ouer them selues first to the LORDE, and afterwarde vnto vs by y wyll of God, so that we could not but desyre Titus, that like as he had begun afore he wolde euen so accomplish the same beniuolence amonge you. Now as ye are riche in all poynte, in faith and in worde, and in knowlde, and in all diligence, and in youre loue towarde vs, eu en so se that ye be plenteous also in this benyuolence. This I saye not as commaundenge, but seynge, other are so diligent, I proue youre loue also, whether it be perfecte or no. For ye knowe the liberalitie of oure LORDE Jesus Christ, which though he be riche, yet for youre sake he became poore, y ye thorow his pouerte mighte be made riche.

And my counsell herin I gene, for this is profitable for you, which haue begonne a yeare a goo, not onely to do, but also to wyll. But now perfourme the dede also, that like as there is a ready mynde to wil, there maye be a ready mynde also to perfourme the dede of that which ye haue. § For yf there be a wyllinge mynde, it is accepted acording to that a man hath, not acordinge to that he hath not. This is not done to the intent, that other shulde haue ease, and ye cobraunce, but that it be a lyke. Let youre abundaunce sucker their lacke in this tyme off derth, that their abundaunce also herafter maye supplie youre lacke, that there maye be equalite. As it is wrytten: He gathered mooch, had not the more: and he that gathered little, wanted nothinge. Thakes be vnto God, which put in the hert of Titus, the same diligence towarde you. For he accepted the request in dede, yee he was rather so well wyllnyng, that of his awne acorde, he came vnto you.

We haue sent with him that brother, whose prayse is in the Gospell thorow out all the congregacions. Not onely that, but he is chosen also of the congregacions, to be a felowe with vs in oure iourney, for this benyuolence that is mynstred by vs vnto the prayse of the LORDE, and to stereo vp youre prompte mynde, and to beware, lest eny ma reporte euell of vs because of this plenteousnes, which is mynstred by vs: ¶ and therefore make we provision for honest things, not onely before the LORDE, but also before men.

We haue sent with them also a brother of oures, whom we haue oft proued diligent in many things, but now more diligent. And this haue we done in great hope towards you, whether it be for Titus sake (which is my felowe and helper amonge you) or for our brethren (which are Apostles of the company of men, the praye of Christ.) Shewe now the profe off your loue and off yourboastinge of you, vnto these, and opely in the sighte of the company of men.

The 1st. Chapter.

Of the handreachinge vnto you sayentes, it is no nede for me to wryte vnto you: for I knowe youre redynesse of mynde, wherof I boast my selme amonge them of Macedonia, and saye: Achaia was ready a yeare agoo. And youre feruentnesse hath prouoked many. Neuerthelesse yet haue we sent these brethren, lest our rejoysinge ouer you shulde be in vayne in this behalfe, that ye mighte be ready, as I haue reported of you: lest when they of Macedonia come with me, and fynde you unprepared, we (I wyll not saye ye) shulde be ashamed in this presumpcon of boostinge.

Wherfore I thoughte it necessary to exhorte the brethren, to come before hande vnto you, for to prepare this blessynge promised afore, that it mighte be ready, so that it be a blessynge, and not a defraudynge. This I thinke: that ye which soweth litle, shal reape litle also, and he ye soweth plenteously, shal likewise reape plenteously, every one acordynge as he hath purposed in his hert, not grudgingly, or of compulsion. For God loueth a chearfull gever. God is able to make you riche in all grace, ye ye in all thinges hauynge sufficiet to the vtement, maye be riche to all maner of good workes. As is wrytte: He hath sparsed abrode geue to ye poore, his righteounes remayneth for euer.

He that geueth sede vnto the sower, shal mynestre bred also for fode, and shal multiply yourelyre, and increase the frutes of youre righteounes, that in all thinges ye maye be made riche vnto all singlenesse, which causeth thower vs, thankesgynge vnto God. For the hidreachinge of this collection not only suppleeth the nede off the sayentes, but also is abundance herin, that for this laudable mynistracion manye mighte geue thakes vnto God, and praye God for youre obedient professyng of the Gospell of Christ, yeoure synglennesse in distribyng vnto thee, and to all men, and in their prayer for you, which longe after you, for the abundant grace of God in you. Thankes be vnto God for his vnou speakeable giftes.

The 1st. Chapter.

PAUL my selme besoke you by the mekenes and softnesse off Christ, which when I am present amonge you, am of small reputation, but am holde toward you by reason of the many that are absent. I besoke you that I nede not be holde when I am present, yeoure vse vnto you boldnes wherwith I am supposed to be holde, agaynst some, which repute vs as though we walked after flesh: for though we walke in the flesh, yet fighte we not after a fleshly maner. For the wapens of oure warre are not fleshly, but mighte before God to cast downe stroge holds, wherwith we overthrowe ymanigacions, every hve thinge exalteth it selfe agaynst the knowlegye of God, and bryinge in to captynye all understandinge to the obedience of Christ; ye are ready to take vengeuance on all disobedience, whan youre obediee is fulfilled. Loke ye on thinges after ye vttre appearance?

Yf eny man trust of himselfe ye he is Christes, let him thinke this also by himselfe, ye like as he is Christes, euë so are we Christes also. And though I shulde boast my selme somewhat more of oure auctorite ye LORDE hath geue vnto ediffye and not to destroye, it shulde not be to my shame. This I saye, lest I shulde seme, as though I wente aboute to make you afrayed with letters. For the pistles (saye they) are sore and stronge, but his bodely presence is weke, and his speache rude. Let him ye is dought, thinke on this wyse, that as we are in worde by letters whi we are absente, soch are we also in dede what we are present. For we darre not reken or compare oure selues, vnto some that praye them selues: Neuerthelesse whylote they measure them selues by them selues, and holde onely of them selues, they understonde nothinge.
Howbeit we wil not boast oure selues aboue measure, but onely accordinge to the measure of the rule, wherwith God hath distributed vnto vs the measure to reach euven vnto you. For we stretche not oure selues to farre as though we had not reached vnto you. For euven vnto you haue we come with the Gospell of Christ, and boast not oure selues out of measure in other men laboures: Yee and we hope when youre faith is increased in you, that we wil come farther (acordinge to oure measure) and preach the Gospell vnto them that dwell beyonde you, and not to reioyse in that, which is prepared with another mans measure.

The ri. Chapter.

LET him that reioyseth, reioyse in the LORDE: for he y*prayseth himselfe, is not alowed, but he whο y LORDE prayseth. Wolde God ye could suffice me a little in my foloshnes, yet do ye forbear me. For I am gelous over you with godly gelousy. For I haue married you vnto one mä, to brynge a chaste virgin vnto Christ. But I feare, lest as y serpēt begyled Eue with his sutteltie, euē so youre wytttes shulde be corrupte from the synglenesse that is in Christ. For yf he that commeth vnto you, preach another Jesus, whom we haue not preached, or yf ye receaue another sprete, y y haue not receaue, or another Gospell which ye haue not accepted, ye might right well haue bene cōtent. For I suppose that I am no lesse thē the hye Apostles are. And though I be rude in speyngyne, yet am I not rude in knowlege. Howbeit amenē you I am knowne to the vtemost. Or dyē I synne therin because I submytted my selfe, that ye mighte be exalted?

For I preached vnto you the Gospell of God freely, and robbed other cōgregacions, and toke wages of thē, to preach vnto you. §And when I was present with you, and had nede, I was greeuous to no man: I for y which was lackinge vnto me, the brethren which came fro Macedonie, supplied. And in all things I kepte my selfe so, y I shulde not be greeuous to you, y so wyl I kepe my selfe. As surely as the truething of Christ is in me, this reioysinge shal not be taken fro me in the regions of Achaia. Wherfore? Because I shulde not loue you? God knoweth. Neuertheles what I do and wyl do, that do I to cut awaye occa-sion, from the which seke occasion, that they mighte boast the selues to be like vnto vs. For soch false Apostles y discatefull workers fashion them selues like vnto the Apostles of Christ. And that is no maruell: for Sathan himselfe is changed in to y fashion of anngell of light. Theirefore is it no greate thinge, though his mynisters fashion them selues as though they were the preachers of righteousnes, y whose ende shalbe acordinge to their dedes.

I saye agayne, lest eny man thanke that I am falshe: or els take me euuen now as a folke, y I maye boast my selfe a little also. That I speake now, that speake I not after the LORDE, but as it were in folishnes, whyle we are now come to bosteinge: Seynge that many boaste them selues after y flesh, I wil boast my selfe also. For ye suffre foles gladly, in so moch as ye youre selues are wyse. For ye suffre euuen yf a man brynge you in to bondage, yf a man put you to dishonesty, yf a man take ought frō you, yf a man exalte him selfe ouer you, yf a man smyte you on the face. I speake concerninge rebuke, as though we were weake.

Wherin so euere now euyn man darre be bolde (I speake falsishly therin darre I be bolde also. They are Hebrues, so am I. They are Israelites, euyn so am I. They are the sede of Abraham, so am I. They are the mynisters of Christ (I speake as a folke) I am more : in laboures more abūdaunt, in strypes aboue measure, in presonmentes more plentifully, in death oft. Of the lewes receaue I fyue tymes fortye strypes, one lesse. †Thryse was I beaten with roddes. ‡I was once stoned, §§I suffered thryse shyppwracke: nighte and daye haue I bene in the depe of the see: I haue oft iourneyed: I haue bene oft in pares of waters, in pares amonche murthurers, in pares amonche the lewes, in pares amonche the Heythen, in pares in cities, in pares in the wylderners, in pares upon the See, in pares amonche false brethēr, in laboure † trasuayle, in moch watchinges, in honger and thyst, in moch fastinges in colde and naked-nesse: Besyde those thynges which are out-

The rii. Chapter.

I T profiteth me nothinge (no doute) to boaste. Neuertheles I wil come to \( \psi \) visions and receulacions off the LORDE. I knowe a man in Christ aboue fourtenye yeares a goe (whether he was in \( \psi \) body, I can not tell: or whether he was out of the body, I can not tell, God knoweth.) the same was taken vp in to the thirde heauen: and I knowe the same man (whether he was in \( \psi \) body or out of the body, I can not tell, God knoweth) how that he was take vp in to Paradise, and herde wordes not to be spoken, which no man can vter. Here of will I boaste, but of my selfe wil I make no boaste, excepte it be of myne infirmytes. And though I wolde boaste my selfe, I dyd not foolishly, for I wolde saye the trueth. But I refrayne my selfe, lest eny m\( \bar{a} \) shulde thinke of me aboue \( \psi \) he seyth in me, or heareth of me. ‡And lest I shulde exalte my selfe out of measure because of the hye receulacions,
there is a waruyngge geuen vsnte my flesh,
euen \( \psi \) messauenger of Satan, to buffet me, that I shulde not exalte my selfe out of measure: for \( \psi \) which I besoughte the LORDE thryse, that it mighte departe fro me. And he sayde vsnte me: My grace is sufficiet for
the. For my strength is made perfecte throrow weakes. Very glad threfore wil I reioyse in my weaknesses, that the strength of Christ
maye dwell in me.

B Therfore am I contente in infirmities, in rebukes, in necessitie, in persecucions, in anguyshes for Christes sake: for wh\( \bar{a} \) I am weake, th\( \bar{e} \) am struge. I am become a sole boastinge my selfe: Ye haue copelled me.
For I oughte to be comended of you, \( \xi \) in so tokens of an Apostle wroghte am\( \bar{o} \)ge you, with all paci\( \bar{e} \)e, with signes, \( \xi \) with woders \( \xi \) with mightie dedes. For what is it, wherein ye are inferiours to the other congrecagions?

excepte it be \( \xi \) I haue not bene gremous vnto
you. Forgemu this wroge. Beholde, I am ready the thirde tyme to come vnto you, and wyl not be chargeable vnto you. ‡ For I seke not youre, but you. For \( \psi \) childre gladly besteowe, and wyl be bestowed for your am I loued agayyne.

But let it be so that I greued you not,
neuertheles for so much as I was craftye, I toke you with gyle. Haue I defrauded you by eny of the, wh\( \bar{o} \) I sent vnto you? I desyre Titus, \( \xi \) with him I sent a brother:
dyd Titus defraude you? Haue we not fotesteppes? Agayyne, thinke ye \( \psi \) we excuse oure soleus? We speake in Christ in the sighte off God. But all this (dearly beloued) is done for youre edifyenge. For I feare, lest whan I come, I shal not fynde you soch as I wolde: and lest ye shal fynde me soch as ye wolde not: lest there be amonge you, debates, evuyngges, wrathes, struynges, bacbytynes,

whysperinges, swellunges, vproures: lest whan
I come agayyne, God bringe me lowe am\( \bar{o} \)ge

And though we are weake in him, yet lyue we with him in the power of God amonge you.

* Prove youre selues, whether ye are in the faith, examine youre selues. Or knowe ye not youre selues, ÿ Jesus Christ is in you? Excepte ye be cast awayes. But I trust ye knowe, ÿ we are not cast awayes. I desire before God ÿ ye do no euell: not ÿ we shulde seme comendable, but ÿ ye shulde do ÿ which is good, ÿ let vs be as cast awayes. The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Galathians.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.
Paul rebuketh them, because they were fallen awaye from the gospell, sheweth his awne conversion, magnifeth his office and apostleshippe, and declareth himself to be equall with the hye apostles.

Chap. II.
He withstandeth Peter in the face, and proueth, that the lawe and circumcision are not necessary to saluacion.

Chap. III.
He rebuketh the vnstedfastnesse of the Galathians, shewinge the vnparfectnesse of the lawe, and declareth nevertheless that it was not geuen for naught.

Chap. IV.
Paul sheweth that thorow Christ we be delyuered from the lawe, and rebuketh the vthankfulness of the Galathians.

Chap. V.
He laboureth to drawe them awaye from circumcision, sheweth them the battayll betwixte the sprete and the flesh, and the frutes of them both.

Chap. VI.
He exhorteth them to brotherly loue, and one to beare with another. In the ende he warneth them to beware of circumcision.
The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Galatians.

The first Chapter.

PAUL an Apostle (not of men, nor by mā, but by Jesus Christ & by God the father, which raysed him vp frō ñ deed) & all the brethren which are with me. Vnto the cōgregaciōns in Galacia. *Grace be with you, and peace frō God the father, and oure LORDE Jesus Christ, which gaue him selve for oure synnes, that he mighte deluyer vs from this present euyl world, according to the wyll of God oure father, to whom be prayse for euuer and euuer. Amen.

I maruell ñ ye are so soone turned (from him that called you in the grace of Christ) vnto another Gospell: which is nothing els, but that there be some, which ttrouble you, and intende to peruerte the Gospell of Christ. Neuertheles though we oure selues, or an angell from heauë preach vnto you eny other Gospel, thē ñ which we have preached vnto you, the same be acursed. As we haue sayde afore, so saye we now agayne: Êf eny mā preach vnto you eny other thinge, thē ñ ye haue receauned, ñ same be acursed. Preach I men now or God? Or go I aboute to please men? Êf I shulde yet please men, I were not the seruaunt of Christ.

But I certifie ye brethren, ñ the Gospell which is preached of me, is not of men. For I nether receauned it ner lerned it of mā, but by the reuelacion of Jesus Christ. For ye haue herde of my convensoracion afore tyme in the Ieweshippe, thow that beyode measure I persecuted the cōgregacion of God, and spoyled it, and preuayled in the Ieweshippe aboue many of my companyons in my nacion, ñ was a moche more fervent manteyner of the tradicions of the fathers.

But when it pleased God which separateth me fro my mothers wombe, and called me by his grace, for to declare his sonne in me, that I shulde preach him thorow the Gospell amonge the Heythen, immediatly I commended not of the matter with flesh and bloude: nether came I to Jerusalem vnto them which were Apostles before me: but wente my wayes in to Arabia, and came agayne to Damascon. Then after thre yeare I came to Ierusale to se Peter, and abode with him fyfteene dayes. As for the other Apostles, I sawe none of them, saue Iames the LORDES brother.

The things that I wryte vnto you, beholde, ñ God knoweth, I lye not. After that wente I in to the coasts of Syria and Celicia: but of face I was vunowne to ñ Christen congregacion in Iewrye. Neuertheles they had herde onely, that: He that persecuted vs in tyme passed, preacheth now ñ faith which some tyme he destroyed: and they prayed God in me.

The 6. Chapter.

THEN after fourtene yeares, I wente vp a agayne to Ierusale with Barnabas, and toke Titus with me also. But I wente vp by reuelacion, and commened with thē of ñ Gospell, which I preach amonge the Heythen: but specially with thē which were in reputacion, lest I shulde runne or had runne in vayne. ÊBut Titus which was also with me, was not compelled to be circuysed, though he was a Greke: and that because of certayne incommers beynde false brother, which came in amge other, to spye out oure libertye, which we haue in Christ Iesus, that they might bryng vs in to bondage: To whom we gaue no rowme, no not for the space of an houre, as concernynge to be broughte in to subieccion: y the trueth of the Gospell mighte continue with you.

As for the that seemed to be greate, what they were in tyme passed, it maketh no matter to me. *For God loketh not on the outewarde appearance of men. Neuertheles they which seemed greate, taught me nothinge: but contrary wyse, when they sawe that the Gospell ouer the vncircumcision was comytted vnto me, as y Gospell ouer y circumcision was comytted vnto Peter. (For he y was mightie with Peter to the Apostleshipe ouer the circumcision, the same was mightie with me also amoge the Heythen) they perceaued the grace that was geuenn vnto me. Iames and Cephas and Ihon, which seemed to be pilers, gaue me and Barnabas y righte handes, and agreed with vs, that we shulde preach amonge the Heythe, and they amonge the Iewe: onely that we shulde remembre the poore, twhich thinge also I was diligent to do.

But wha Peter was come to Antioche, I withstode him in y face: for he was worthy to be blamed. For afore there came certayne from Iames, he ate with the Heythe. But wha they were come, he withdrew and separted himselfe, fearinge the which were of the circumcision. And the other Iewe dyssembled with him likewise, in so much y Barnabas was brought in to their sumulation also. But when I sawe that they walked not right after y trueth of the Gospell, I sayde vnto Peter openly before all: Yf thou beynge a Iewe, lyuest after the maner of the Gentyles, and not as do the Iewe, why causest thou the Gentyles then to lyue as do the Iewe?

†Though we be Iewe by nature, and not synners of the Gentyles, yet (in so mach as we knowe, that a man is not made righteous by the dedes off the lawe, but by the faith on Iesus Christ) we haue beleued also on Iesus Christ, y we mighte be made righteous by the faith of Christ, and not by the dedes of the lawe, because that by the dedes of the lawe no flesh shal be justified.

Yf we then which seke to be made righteous by christ, shulde be yet founde synners oure selues, is not Christ then the minyster of synne? God forbud. For yf I buyld e agayne y which I haue destroyed, then make I my selfe a tresparer. But I thorow the lawe am deed vnto the lawe, that I might lyue vnto God. I am crucified with Christ, yet do I lyue: neuertheless now not I, but Christ lyueth in me. For y life which I now lyue in y fleshe, I lyue in the faith of y sonne of God ywhich loued me, and gane himselfe for me. I cast not awaye the grace of God. For yf righteousnes come by the lawe, then dyed Christ in vayne.

The iii. Chapter.

O YE folishe Galathias, who hath bewitched you, that ye shulde not beleue the trueth? To whô Iesus Christ was descrebyed before the eyes and amonge you crucified. This onely wolde I lerne of you: Receaued ye the sprete by the dedes of the lawe, or by the preachinge of the faith? Are ye so vwyse? Ye beganne in the sprete, wolde ye ende now ãe in the fleshe? Haue ye suffred so muche in vayne? Yf it be els in vayne. He that gueueth you the sprete, and doth soch greate actes amoge you, doth he it thorow the dedes of the lawe, or by y preachinge of the faith? IlEuen as Abrahâ beleued God, and it was counted vnto him for righteousnes. Thus ye knowe, that they which are of faith, are Abrahams children.

The scripture sawe afore hâde, that God justifieth the Heythen thorow faith. Therefore shewed it glad tydings afore vnto Abraham, and sayde: * In the shal all the Heythen be blessed. So then they which be of faith, are blessed with faithfull Abraham. For as many as go aboute with the worakes of the lawe, are vnder y curse: For it is wryttë: ††Cursed be every man, which cîtynueth not in all thinges that are wryttë in the boke of the lawe, to do them. That no man is justified by the lawe in the sighte of God, it is euydet: ††For y just shal lyue by his faith.

The lawe is not of faith, ††but the mâ that

The Epistle to the Galatians.

Brethren, I will speak after the manner of men. Though it be but a más Testament, yet no man despyseth it, or addeth any thing therto, when it is confirmed. To Abraham and his seed were the promyses made. He sayeth not: In the sedes, as in many, but in thy seed, as in one, which is Christ. This Testament (I saye) which afore was confirmed to Christ warde, is not disanuall (that the promes shulde be made of none affecte) by the lawe† which was geuen beyonde foure hundreth and thirtie yeares therafter. § For ye the inheritaunce be gotten by the lawe, then is it not geuen by promes. But God gaue it frely vnto Abraham by promes.

Wherfore the serueth the lawe? ¶ It was added because of transgression, tyl the sed came, to the which the promes was made. ¶ And it was geuan of angels, by the hande of the  mediatoure. A mediatour is not a mediatour of one onely, but God is one.

Is the lawe then agaynst the promyses of God? God forbyd. Howbeit ye there had bene geuen a lawe which could haue geue life, the no doute righteousnes shulde come of the lawe. ¶ But the scripture hath shut vp all vnder sygne, that ye promes shulde come by the faith on Jesus Christ, geue vnto the that beleue. Before faith came, we were keppe and shut vp vnder the lawe, vnto the faith which shulde afterward be declared. Thus the lawe was oure scolemanister vnto Christ, that we might be made righteous by faith. But now that faith is come, we are nonne vnder the scolemanister. ¶¶ For ye all are the children of God by the faith in Christ Iesu. §§ For as many of you as are baptysed, haue put on Christ. Here is nether Iewe ner Greke: here is nether bode ner fre: here is nether man ner woman, for ye are all one in Christ Iesu. Yf ye be Christes, thè are ye Abrahàs seed and heyres acordynge to the promes.

BUT I saye: As longe as the heyre is a child, there is no difference betwene him and a seruaunt, though he be lorde of all the goodes: but he is vnder tutors and gouerners, vntyll the tyme appoynted of the father. Euen so we also, wha we were children, were in bondage vnder the outwarde tradicions. But when the tyme was fulfilled, God sent his sonne, borne of a woma, ¶¶ and put vnder the lawe, to redeeme them which were vnder the lawe, that we mighte receaue ye childchippe. ¶¶¶ For so much thè as ye are children, God hath sent the sprete of his sonne in to oure hertes, which cryeth: Abba, deare father. Wherfore now, thou art not a seruaunt, but a sonne. ¥f thou be a sonne, then art thou the heyre of God thorow Christ. Notwithstandinge when ye knewe not God, ye dyd seruyc vnto them, which by nature are no Goddes. But now seyng ye knowe God (ye rather are knowe off God) how is it ¶¶¶ that ye turne you backe agayne vnto the weake and beggerly tradicions, wher vnto ye desyre agayne a fresh to be in bondage?

Ye observer dayes and monethes, and ty mes and yeares. I am in feare of you, lest I haue bestowd laboure on you in wayne. Brethrè I bescke you, be ye as I am, for I am as ye are. Ye haue not hurte me at all. For ye knowe how that in weaknes after ye fleshe I preache ye Gospell vnto you at the first: and my tentacion which I suffred after the flesh, ye despyseth not, nether abhorred, but receaue me as an angell of God, yee euenn as Christ Iesu. How happy were ye then? For I beare you recorde, that ye if it had bene possible, ye had plucked out your eyes, and geue thyme vnto me. Am I therefore become your enemy, because I tell you ye truchth?

They are gelous ouer you amysse. Yee they wolde make you to fall backe, that ye mighte be feruët to thè warde. It is good to be feruët, so ye it be allwaye in a good thinge, and not onely when I am present with you. My litle children (of whom I trauayle in byrth agayne, vntyll Christ be fashioned in you) I wolde I were with you now, and could change my voice, for I stode i doute of you.

Tell me ye that wylbe vnder the lawe, haue ye not herde the lawe? For it is wrytten, that Abraham had two sone * the one by a bonde mayde, t the other by a fre woman. As for him that was of the bope mayde, he was borne after the flesh: but he which was of the fre woman, was borne by promes. These wordes betoken somwhat. For these women are the two Testamentes: The one from the mount Sinai, that goodeth vnto bondage, which is Agar. For Agar is called in Arabia the mount Sinai, and reacheth vnto Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with his children.

But Jerusalem that is abowe, is the fre woman, which is the mother of vs all. For it is wrytten: § Reioyse thou baren, that bearest no childre: breake forth and crye thou thy trauaylest not, for the desolate hath many mo childre, then she which hath an husbande. As for vs (brethren) we are the children of Isaac according to the promes. But as like at that tyme, he that was borne after the flesh, persected him was borne after the spryte, euen so is it now also. But what sayeth the scripture? * Put awaye the bonde mayden and hir sonne: for the sonne of the bonde mayde shall not be houye with the sonne of the fre woman. So now brethren, we are not children of the bonde mayde, but of the fre woman.

The b. Chapter.

STONDE fast thersore in the libertye wherwith Christ hath made vs fre, and be not wrappd agayne in the yocke of bondage. Behold, I Paul saye vnto you: If ye be circumcyzed, Christ profiteth you nothing at all. I testifie agayne vnto every man which is circumcyzed, that he is bounde to kepe the whole lawe. Ye are gone quyte from Christ, as many off you as wylbe made righteous by the lawe, and are fallen from grace. But we wate in the spryte of hope, to be made righteous by faith. ¶ For in Christ Iesus is circumcysion eny thinge worth nor vncircumcision, but faith which * by loute is mightie in operacion. Ye ranne well, who was a let vnto you, that ye shulde not obeye the trueth? Soch councell is not of him that hath callde you. ¶ A little leneth sowreth the whole lome of dowe.

I haue trust toward you in § LORDE, that ye wylbe none otherwise mynded. But he that troubleth you, shal beare his judgment, what so euer he be. Brethren yf I yet preache circumcision, why do I suffer persecution? then had the slander off the crosse ceasd. Wolde God they were roted out fro amoge you, which trouble you. But brethren, ye are called vnto libertie, onely let not youre libertie be an occasion vnto the flesh, but by loute sorde one another. For all the lawe is fullylled in one worde, namely in this: loue thy neibour as thy self. But ye of byte and deoure one another, take heed, that ye be not consumed one of another.

I saye: Walk in the spryte, and so shal ye not fulfill the lustes off the fleshe. For the flesh lusteth agaynst the spryte, and the spryte agaynst the flesh. These are contrary one to the other, so that ye can not do that which ye wolde: But and ye be led of the spryte, then are ye not vnder the lawe. ¶¶ The dedes of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adoutrye, whordome, vnclene, wantynes, Idolatrye, witchcraft, hatred, variandeeze, zele, wrath, stryfe, sedicion, sectes, envyenge, murther, dronkennes, glotony, and soch like: of the which I tell ye before, as I haue tolde you in tyme past, ¶¶ that they which commytte soch, shal not inheret the kyngdome of God. ¶¶ But the frute of the spryte, is loue, ioye, peace, longe sufferinge, gittenes, goodnes, faithfullnes, mekenesse, teparance, ¶¶ Agaynst soch is not the lawe: ¶¶ But they that are Christes, haue cruycifi their flesh, with the lustes and desyres.

The vi. Chapter.

Yf we lye in the spryte, let vs walke also in the spryte. Let vs not be vayne glorious, prouokinge one another, and envyenge another. Brethren, If ye my be ouertaken of a faute, ye which are spirituall, enforem he with a meke spryte: and consider thine owne selfe, that thou also be not tempted. ¶¶ Beare ye one anothers hurth, and so shal ye fulfyll the lawe of Christ. But yf eny man thinke himselfe to be somwhat (whan in dede he is nothinge) the same disceaueth himselfe. Let every man proue his owne worke, and thē shal he haue reiyoysinge in his awne selfe, and not in another. For * euery one shal beare his owne burthen. But let him that is taughte with the worde, mynister in all good thinges, vnto him that teacheth him. Be not diseaued, God wil not be mocked. For what soeuer a man soweth, that shal he reap. He that soweth vpon the flesh, shal of the flesh reap destruccion: But he that soweth vpon þ sprete, shal of the sprete reap life euerlastinge. § Let vs not be weery of well doynge; for wha the tyme is come, we shal reap without ceasinge. Whyle we haue tyme therfore, let vs do good vnto all men but specially vnto thē which are of þ housholde of faith.

Beholde, with how many wordes I haue wrytten vnto you with myne awne hande.

But God forbod that I shulde reiyoys, saue onely in the crosse of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, wherby the worlde is crucified vnto me, and I vnto the worlde. * For in Christ Iesus nether circiicision avayleth eny thinge, ner vncircumcision, but a new crea-

The Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Ephesians.

The first Chapter.

PAUL an Apostle of Iesus Christ by the will of God. To ye sayntes which are at Ephesus, o to the that beleue on Iesus Christ.

* Grace be with you and peace from God our father, o from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Blessed be God the father of our LORDE Iesus Christ, which hath blessed vs with all maner of spirituall blessynges in heavenly thynges by Christ according as he had chosen vs by him, or euer the foudnation of the worlde was layed, that we shulde be holy and without blame before him in loue, o ordeyned vs before, to receaue vs as children thorow Iesus Christ, according to the pleasure of his will, vnto the prayse of the glory of his grace, wherby he hath made us accepted in the Beloued, in whom we haue redempcion thorow his bloude (namely) the forgueenes of synnes.

acordyng to ye riches of his grace, which he hath shed vpon vs abundantly in all wysz-

done and prudence: and hath opened vnto vs the mystery of his will acording to his pleasure, which he had purposed in himselfe, it shulde be preached what the tyme was full come, that all things shulde be gathered together by Christ, both the things which are in heaven, and also the things that are vpon earth, euen by him, by whom also we are come to the inheritance we that were therto predestinate before, acordinge to his purpose of him, which worketh all things after his counseell of his owne wyll, that we mighte be to the praye of his glory, euen we that before beleued on Christ, on whom also ye beleued, after that ye herde the worde of trueth, namely the Gospel of youre salvacion: wherein whan ye beleued, ye were sealed with the holy sprete of promes, which is the ernest of ouren inheritance to our redeempcion, that we inheritance be his owne to the praye of his glory.

Wherefore I also, (in so much as I haue herde of the faith whiche ye haue in) LORDE Iesu, and of youre loue vnto all (ye saynetes) cease not to geue thankes for you, and make mention of you in my prayers, that God of our LORDE Iesu Christ, the father of glory maye geue vnto you the sprete of ywsdom, and open vnto you the knowlege of himselfe, and lighten the eyes of youre vnderstandinge, that ye maye knowe what is the hope of youre callynge, and what the riches of his glorious enheritaunce is vpon the saynetes, what is the exceedinge greatnesse of his power towardes vs, which beleue acordinge to his workynge of his mightie power, which he wroughte in Christ, when he rysede vp from the dead, and set him on his righte hand in heauely things, aboue all rule, power, and mighte, and dominacioun, and aboue all that maye be named, not onely in this worlde, but also in his worlde to come. And hath put all things vnder his fete, and hath made him aboue all things the head of the eongregation, which is his body, and the fulnesse of him that fylleth all in all.

The 15. Chapter.

And quckened you also, when ye were deed thorow trespasses and synnes, in the which in tyme past ye walked, acordinge to the course of this worlde, and after the prynce that ruleth in the ayre namely, after the sprete, which now worketh in the children of vnbeleue, amonge whom we also had oure conversacion in tyme past in the lustes of oure flesh, and dyd the wyll of the flesh and of the mynde, and were naturally the children of wrath, euen as well as other.

But God which is riche in mercy thorow his greate loue wherwith he loued vs euene whiche we were deed in synnes, hath quckened vs in Christ (for by grace are ye saued) and hath rysed vs vp with him, and set vs with him in heauely thinges thorow Christ Iesus, in tymes to come he mighte shewe the exceedinge riches of his grace, in kyndnesse to vs warde in Christ Iesu. For by grace are ye saued thorow faith, and that not of youre selues, for it is a giue of God, not of workes, lest euen ma shulde boast him selfe. For we are his workmanshipe, created in Christ Iesu vnto good workes, to which God ordeyned vs before, that we shulde walke in them.

Wherefore roembrace, that ye (which afore tyme were Gentylies after the flesh, and were called vnircircumcision, of the that are called circumcision after the flesh, which circumcision is made with the hande) that ye at the same tyme were without Christ, and reputed aleuntes from the comen wthal of Israel, and were strangers from the Testamentes of promes, therafore had ye no hope, and were without God in this worlde. But now ye that be in Christ Iesu, and afore tyme were farre of, are now made nye by the bloude of Christ.

For he is oure peace, which of both hath made one, and hath broken downe the wall, that was a stoppe betwene vs, and hath also thorow his flesh put awaye the cause off hatred (namely the lawe of the commandemethes contayned in the lawe wrytten) that of twayne he mighte create one new man in him selffe, and make peace, and to reconcyle both vnto God in one body thorow the crosse, and so he slewe the hatred thorow his owne selffe, and came forth and preached peace in the Gospel, vnto you which were afarre of, and to the that were nye. For thorow him we both haue intrauence in one sprete vnto the father.
Now therefore ye are nomore gestes and strangurers, but citizens with the sayntes, of the householde of God, buylde vp on * the foundation of your Apostles and prophets, where he is your heade corner stone in whom euery buyldeing coupled together, groweth to an holy temple in the LORDE, in whom ye also are buyldeing together, to be an habitacion of God in the sprete.

The iii. Chapter.

A For this cause I Paul am † a presoner of Jesus Christ for you Heythen, acording as ye haue herde of your office of the grace of God which is gueen me to you warde. For by ‡ reuelacion was this mystery shewed vnto me, as I wrote aboue in fewe wordes: wherby when ye rede it, ye maye perceau myne vnderstandyng in your office of Christ, which (mystery) in tymes past was not opened vnto the childrde of me as it is now declared to his holy Apostles and prophets by the sprete: namely, that the Heythen shulde be inheritours also, and of the same body, and partakers of his promes in Christ by the Gospell, wherof I am made a mynster acordinge to the gift of the grace of God, which is gueen to me acordinge to the workynge of his power.

Vnto me †† the least of all sayntes is this grace gueen, that I shulde preach amonge the Heythens your vnsearcheable riches of Christ, and to make all men se, what is the fellshepp of the mystery, which fre the begynnynge of the worlde hath bene hyd in God, which made all thinges thorow Jesus Christ: to the intent that now vnto the rulers and powers in heauen mighte be knowne by the congregacion the manifolde wyssdome off God, acordinge to your eternall purpose, which he hath shewed in Christ Jesus oure LORDE by whom we haue boldnesse and intranunce in all confidéce thorow faith on him. Wherfore I desyre that ye faynte not because of my tribulacions, y I  suffre for you, which is youraye prere.

For this cause I bowe my knees vnto the father of oure LORDE Jesus Christ, which is the true father, ouer all that is called father in heauen and in earth, that he graunte you acordinge to your riches of his glory) to be strengthened with power by his sprete in yourayde me, that Christ maye dwell in youre hertes by faith, that ye beynge ratet and grounded in lone, maye be able to coprehende with all sayntes, what is the brethd, and the length, and the deepth, and the hyeth; and to knowe the alone of Christ, which lone yet passeth all knowlege: that ye maye be fyllen with all maner of fulnesse of God.

Vnto him that is able to do exceedinge abundantly, aboue all that we axe or vnderstonde (acordinge to your power that worketh in vs) be praysie in the congregacion, which is in Christ Iesu, at all tymes for euer and euer, Amen.

The ivi. Chapter.

I Therefore which am presoner in the LORDE, exhorte you, that ye walke as it becometh youre callinge wherin ye are called, with all humpnles off mynde and mekenes, and longe sufferinge, forbearinge one another in love, and be diligent to kepe the vnite of the sprete thorow the bonde of peace. This I sayeth therfore, and testifie in the LORDE, that ye walke nomore as y other Heythen walke in the vanite of their mynde, blynded in their vnderstandinge, beynge strangers fro the life which is in God thorow the ignoraunce that is in them, because of the blyndnes of their hert: which beynge past repentauence, haue geneth them selues ouer vnto wan tonnes, to worke all maner of vn cleennes eu en with greynedye.

He that hath stollen, let him steale nomore: ¶ but let hym laboure rather, and do some good with his bondes, that he maye haue to geue vnto him that nedeth.

Let no filthy communicacion proceece out of youre mouth, * but that which is good to edifie withall, wha nede is, that it be gracious to heare. And gene not the holy sprete of God, wherwith ye are  sealed vnto y daye of redemption. † Let all byternes, and fearnes, and wrath, and roaringe, a cursed spe kayng be farre fro you with all maliciousnes. But be ye cyterne one to another, mercifull, †† and forgue one another, euc as God hath forgeoyn eu en in Christ.

The b. Chapter.

Be ye the ¶¶ folowers therfore of God as deare children, and walke in loue, eu en as Christ loued vs, and §§ gane him selfe for vs an offerenge and sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto God. As for whordome and all vn cleennes, or couetousnes, let it not be named amonge you, as it becommeth sayntes: ‡ ne ther fylthynes, ner folish talkyngye, ner ieste ryngye (which are not comly) but rather genyng of thakes. ¶¶ For be sure, that no whore monger, or vn cleane person, or couetous person (which is a worshipper off ymages) hath inheritaunce in the kyngdome of Christ and of God. ‡‡‡ (Let no man disceau ye with vayne wordes) for because of these commeth the wrath of God vpon the children of vn beleue. Be not ye therfore companions with them. For sometyme ye were darknesse, ‡‡ but now are ye lightes in the LORDE.

Walke as the children of lighte. ‡‡‡ (For the frute of the sprete is all maner of goodness, and righteou snes and truthe:) and proue what is pleasinge vnto the LORDE, and haue no fellechippe with y vnfruteful workes of darknes, but rather rebuke the. For it is shame eu en to name those thinges, which are done of them in secrete. But all thinges are manifest, when they are rebuked of the lighte. For what so euer is manifest, that same is lighte. Therfore sayeth he: ‡‡‡ Wake thou that slepest, and stonde vp fro the deed, and Christ shal gene the lighte.

‡‡‡ Take hede therfore how ye walke circumspectly, not as the vnyse, but as y wise, and rede me the tyme, for it is a miserable tyme. their husbanandes, as vnto the LORDE. * For the husbannde is the wyues heade, euene as Christ also is the heade of the congregacion, and he is the Sanioure of his body. Therefore as the congregacion is in subieccion to Christ, likewyse let the wyues be in subieccion to their husbanandes in all things.

Ye husbanandes love youre wyues, euene as Christ loued the congregacion, and gaue himselfe for it, to sanctifie it, and clenched it in the fountayne of water by the worde, to make it vnto himselfe a glorious congregacion, hauynge no spot ner wryntle, ner eny soch thinge, but that it shulde be holy and without blame.

So oughte men also to loue their wyues, euene as their awne bodies. He that loueth his wife, loueth him selfe. For no ma a euer yet hated his awne fleshe, but norisht and cherisched it, euene as the LORDE doth also the congregacion. For we are membes of his body, of his flesh and of his bones. § For this cause shal a man leaue father and mother, and cleue vnto his wife, and they two shal be one flesh: This is a greate secrete: but I speake of Christ and the congregacion. Nevertheles do ye so, that euery one of you loue his wife euene as himselfe: but let the wife feare hir husbannde.

Thi bi. Chapter.

Ye children, obey youre elders in the LORDE, for that is righte. Honour thy father and thy mother (¶ That is the first commandement, that hath eny promes) that thou mayest prosper, and lyue longe vpon earth. And ye fathers, prouoke not youre children vnto wrath, but brynge the vp in the nourtoure and informacion of the LORDE.

 Ye seruauntes, obey youre bodely masters, with feare and trembylyng, in synglenes of youre hert, euene as vnto Christ, not with seruoyne onely in the eye sighte, but men pleasers: but as the seruauntes off Christ, doynge the wyll off God from the hert with good wyll. Thynke that ye serue the LORDE and not m: and be sure, that what good soever a man doth, he shal receaue it agayne of the LORDE, whether he be bonde or fre.

The Epistle
of the Apostle S. Paul to the Philippians.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.
He exhortheth them to increase in loue, in knowledge and experience of godly thinges: maketh mention of his presonment at Rome, is glad to heare Christ preached, is content ether to dye or lyue, and prayeth them to lede a godly conversacion, to be of one mynde, and to feare no persecucion.

Chap. II.
He exhortheth them to vnite and brotherly loue, and to beware of strife and vayne glory:

And for a sure ensample he layeth Christ before them.

Chap. III.
He warneth the to beware of false teachers, whom he calleth dogges and enemies of Christ, and reprooow se owne righteousness.

Chap. IIII.
He salueth certayne of them, exhortheth them to be of honest conversacion, and thanketh them because of the prouysion, that they made for him beyng in preson.

The first Chapter.

PAUL and Timotheus the seruantes of Iesus Christ. Vnto all the sayntes in Iesus Christ, which are at Philippos, with the Bisshoppes and * mynisters.

Grace be with you and peace from God our father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

† I thanke my God, as oft as I remembre you (which I allwayes do in all my prayers for you all, and praye with gladnesse) because of youre felishippe which ye haue in the Gospell from the first daye vnto now, and am surely certified of this, y he which hath begonne that good † worke in you, shal go forth with it vntyl † daye of Iesus Christ: as it becommeth me to judge of you all, because I haue you in my hert, as those that are partakers with me of grace in my bondes, in defendinge and stablyshinge of the Gospell.

‡ For God is my § recorde, how I loge after you all euyn from the very hert rote in Iesus Christ. || And for the same I praye, y youre loue maye increase more and more in all maner of knowledge and in all experience, y ye maye proue what is best, that ye maye be pure, a soch as hurte no mans conscience, vnto the daye of Christ: fylled with the frutes of righteousness, which come by Iesus Christ vnto the glorye and prayse of God.

I wolde ye vnderstode brethren, that my busynes is happened vnto the greater furtheerance of the Gospell, so that my bondes in Christ are manifest thorow out all ye judgemet hall, and in all other places: In so much that many brethren in the LORDE, are boldened thorow my bodes, and darre more largely speake the worde without feare. Some (no doute) preach Christ of enuye and stryfe, but some of good wil. The one parte preacheth Christ off stryfe and not purely, supposynge to adde more aduersite vnto my bondes. The other parte of loue, for they knowe that I lye here for the defence of the Gospell.

What then? So that Christ be preached all maner of wayes (whether it be done by occasion or of true meaninge) I reioyce therin, and wil reioyce. For I knowe that the same shal chaunce to my saluacion, * thorow youre prayer and ministrynge of the sprete of Iesus Christ, as I loke for and hope, that in noathing I shalbe ashamed: but ý with all confidence (as alwayes in tymes past, eué so now) Christ shalbe magnified in my body whether it be thorow life or thorow death. For Christ is to me life, a death is to me auautage. But in as much as to lyne in ý flesh is frutefull to me for the worke, I wote not what I shal chose, for both these things lye harde vpon me. †I desire to be lowesd, a to be with Christ, which thinge were mosche better (for me) but to abyde in the flesh is more nedefull for you.

And this am I sure of, that I shal abyde, and continyue with you all, for the further-ance and ioye of youre faith, that ye maye abundantly reioyse in Christ Iesu thorow me, by my contraygne to you agayne. Onely let youre conversacion be ‡ as it bcommeth the Gospell of Christ, that whether I come se you, or els be absent, I maye yet heare of you that ye cōnygne in one sprete and one soule, labourynghe (as we do) to mayntayne the faith of the Gospell, and in nothinge feareinge youre aduersaries, which is to them a token off perdicion, but vnto you of saluacion, and that of God. For vnto you it is geuen, not onely that ye shulde beleue on Christ, but also suffre for his sake, and to haue euyn the same fighte, which ye haue sene in me, and now heare of me.

The iij. Chapter.

Yf there be amonge you eny consolacion in Christ, yf there be eny comforte of lough, yf there be eny felishippe off the sprete, yf there be eny compassion and mercy, fullflly my ioye, that ye drawe one waye, hauynge one lough, beyngge of one accorde, and of one mynde: that there be nothinge done thorow stryfe and vayne glory, but that thorow meke-ness of mynde euery man esteme another better then himselfe; and let euery man loke not for his awne profet, but for the profet of other.

Let the same mynde be in you, that was in Christ Iesu: which beyngge in the shappe of God, thought it not robbery to be equall with God, but made him selfe of no reputa-" cin, and take vpon him the shappe of a seruaunt, * became like another man, and was founde in his apparel as a man: he humbled himselfe, and became obedient vnto the death, euyn vnto the death of the crosse.

‖ Therefore hath God also exalted him, and geuen him a name, which is aboue all names, ¶ that in the name of Iesus euery kne shulde bowe, both of thinges in heauen, of thinges vpó earth, and of thinges vnder the earth, and that all tungen shulde confesse, that Iesus Christ is the LORDE vnto the prayse of God the father.

Wherfore my dearly beloved, as ye haue allways obeyed (not onely in my presence, but now also much more in my absence) euyn so worke out youre awne saluacion with feare and tremblynge.  For it is God which worketh in you both the will and the deed, euyn of his owne good wyll. Do all thinges without murmurynges and disputinges, that ye maye be faultles and pure, and the childre of God †† without rebuke, in the myddes of ý croked and peruerse nacion, †† amonge whom se that ye shyne as lightes in the worlde, holdinge fast the worde of life, vnto my reioysinge in the daye of Christ, that I haue not runne in vayne, neither laboured in vayne. §§ Yee and though I be offered vp vpó the offerynge a sacrifice of youre faith, I am glad, and reioyce with you all: be ye glad also, and reioyce ye with me.

I trust in the LORDE Iesus, to sende Ti-motheus shortly vnto you, that I also maye be of good comforte, when I knowe what case ye stonde in. For I haue no man that is so like mynded to me, which with so pure affecció careth for you: for all other seke their awne, not that which is Iesus Christes. But ye knowe the profite of him: for as a childe vnto the father, so hath he minystred vnto me in the Gospell. Him I hope to sende, as soone as I knowe how it wylly go with me. But I trust in the LORDE, that I also my selfe shall come shortly.

Neuertheles I thoughte it necessary to sende vnto you the brother Ephriditus, which is my companyon in laboure and felowe sou-" dyer, and youre Apostell, and my minystre at my noede, for so moche as he longed after you all, and was full of heuynes, because ye had herde that he was sicke. And no doute he was sicke, and that nye vnto death: but God had mercy on him, and not on him onely, but on me also, lest I shulde haue had sorowe vpon sorowe.

I haue sent him therefor the more haistely, that ye mighte se him, and reioyce agayne, and that I also mighte haue the lesse sorowe. Receaue him therefor in the LORDE with all gladnes,* and make moch of soche: for because of the worke of Christ, he wente so farre, that he came nye vnto death, and regarded not his life, to fulfyll that soruye which was lackynge on youre parte towarde me.

The iiij. Chapter.

MOROEUER my brethren, reioyce in the LORDE. Where as I wryte euere one thinge vnto you, it greueth me not, and maketh you the surer. Beware off dogges, beware of euell workers, beware off disenccion: for we are the circumsicion, euene we that serue God in the sprete, and reioyce in Christ Iesu, and haue no confidence in the flesh, though I haue wherof I mighte reioyce in y flesh. Yf any other ma thynke that he hath wherof he mighte reioyce in the flesh, moch more I, which was circysed on the eight daye, one of the people of Israel, of the trybe off Ben Iamin, an hebrue of the Hebrues: as concernynge the lawe †a Pharise: as concernynge feruentnes §I persecuted the congregacion: and as touching the righteousnes which is in the lawe, I was vunrebukable.

‖But the thinges that were vauntage vnto me, haue I counted losse for Christes sake. Yee I thynke all thinges but losse, for that excellent ‡knowledge of Christ Iesu my LORDE: for whom I haue counted all thinges losse, and do judge them but donge, that I mighte wynne Christ, § be founde in him, not hauntuyne myne awne righteousnes which commeth of the lawe, but by the faith of Christ (namely) the righteousnes which commeth of God in faith, to knowe him and the vertue of his resurreccion, and the felloshippe of his passion, that I maye be conformable vnto his death, yf by any means I mighte attayne to the resurreccion from the deed. Not that I haue attayne vnto it all ready, or that I am alreadye perfecte: but I folowe, yf I maye comprehende that, wherein I am comprehended off Christ Iesu. Brethren, I counte not my selfe yet that I haue gotten it: but one thinge I saye: I forget that which is behynde, and stretch my selfe vnto that which is before, †† preace vnto y marck apoynted, to optayne the rewardre of the hye callyenge of God in Christ Iesu.

Let vs therefor (as many as be perfecte) ‡ be thus wyse mynded: and yf ye be otherwise mynded, I praye God open euene this vnto you. Neuertheles in that wher vnto we are come, let vs procede by one rule, that we maye be of one accorde. †† Brethren, be ye ‡ folowers of me, and loke on the which walke euè so as ye haue vs for an esample. For many walke (off whom I haue tolde you often, but now I tell you wepynge) euè enemies of the crosse of Christ, whose euè is dammacion, †† whose God is the bely, § whose glory shalbe to their shame, which are earthly mynded. §§ But our conversation is in heauen, from whence we loke for the Saniuore Iesu Christ ‡ LORDE, †‖ which shall chaunge oure vyle body, † y it maye be like fashioned vnto his glorious body, according to ‡ workynge wherby he is able to subdue all thinges vnto himselfe.

The iiiij. Chapter.

The first Chapter

PAUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ by the will of God, and brother Timothenus.

To ye sayntes which are at Colossa and brethren that beleue in Christ.

Grace be with you and peace from God our father a frō the LORDE Iesu Christ.

*We geue thankes vnto God and the father of oure LORDE Iesu Christ, prayeng allwayes for you (sence we herde of youre faith in Christ Iesu, and of youre loute to all sayntes) for ye haue herde before by the worde of trueth in the Gospell, which is come vnto you, euē as it is in to all the worldes: and is frutefull, as it is in you, sence yd daye yē ye herde and knewe the grace of God in yē trueth, as ye learned of Epaphras oure deare felowe seruaunt, which is a faithfull mynister of Christ for you, which also declared vnto vs youre loute in the sprete.

For this cause we also, sence the daye yē we herde of it, ceasse not to praye for you, y desyre that ye mighte be fullfilled with the knowlege of his will, in all wyszdome and spirituall vnderstandinge, that ye mighte walke worthy off the LORDE, to please him in all things, and to be frutefull in all good works, and growe in the knowlege of God: yt to be strengthened with all power acordinge to the mighte of his glory, to all pacience and long-sufferinge with ioysulnes, and geue thankes vnto the father, which hath made vs mete for the enheritaunce of sayntes in lighte.

Which hath delyuered vs frō the power of darkenes, translated vs in to the kyngdome of his deare sonne (in whom we haue redempcon thorow his blonde, namely, the forugenese of synnes.) *Which is the ymage of the innysble God, first begottē before all creatures. For by him were all things created, that are in heauen and earth, things yvisble and thinges innysible, whether they be maiesties or lordshippes, ether rules or powers: All things are created by him and in him, and he is before all things, and in him all thinges haue their byenge.

And he is the heade of the body, namely, of the congrecacion: he is the begynnynge and first begotten from the deede, that in all thinges he mighte haue the preemenynce. For it pleased the father, that in him shulde dwell all fulnesse, and that by him all thinges shulde be reconciled vnto himselfe, whether they be thinges vpon earth or in heauen, that thorow the blonde on his crosse he mighte make peace euē thorow his owne selfe. And you (which were in tymes past straungers and enemies, because youre mynedes were set in euell workes) hath he now reconcyled in the body of his fesh thorow death, to make you holy, and vnblameble with out faute in his awne sighte, yf ye contynue grounded and stablished in the faith, and be not moued awaye from y hope of the Gospell, wherof ye haue herde: which is preached amonge all creatures y are vnder heauen, wherof I Paul am made a mynister.

YY Now ioye I in my sufferynges, which I suffre for you, and fulfill that which is beynde of the passions of Christ in my fesh, for his bodyes sake, which is the congrecacion, wherof I am made a mynister, acordinge to Godly office of preachinge, which is geuen vnto me amonge you, that I shulde richely preach the worde of God, namely, that mystery which hath bene hyd sence the worlde beganne, and sence the begynnynge of tymes: but now is opened vnto his sayntes, to whom God wolde make knowne the glorious riches of this mistery amōge Heythen: which (riches) is Christ in you, euē he that is the hope of glory, whō we preach, and warne all men, and teach all men in all wyszdome, to make euery man parfecte in Christ Iesu: Wherin I also laboure, and stryue acordinge to the workynge of him which worketh mightely in me.

The ij. Chapter.

WOLDE ye knewe what fightinge I haue for youre sakes, and for them of Laodicēa, and for as many as haue not sene my persone in the fesh, that their hertes mighte be comforted and knytt together in loute, to all riches of full vnderstōdinge, §§ which is in the knowlege of the mystery of God the father and of Christ, §§ §§ in whom are hyd all the treasures of wyszdome and knowlege.

This I saye, lest eny man shulde begyle you with entysinge worde. For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I present with you in the sprete: ioyngen, and beholdinge your rule and the stedfastnes of your faith in Christ. As ye haue threfore receaue Christ Iesu the Lorde, euene so walke in him, and be roted & bylded in him, and be stedfast in faith, as ye haue learned: be plentuous in the same in geuynge thankes.

Beware lest eny mä spoyle you thowre philosophy and discautfull vanitie after the tradicions of men, and after the ordinance of the worlde, and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fulnes of the Godheade bodely, and ye are complete in him, which is the heade of all rule and power: in whom also ye are circumcysed with circumcision without handes, by puttyng of the synfull body of the flesh: (namely) with the circumcision of Christ, in that ye are buried with him thorow baptyme: in whom ye are also rysen agayn thorow faith, that is wrought by the operacion of God, which raystonde vp from the deede.

And with him he quycckened you, whan ye were deed in synnes, and in the vnircircumsion of your flesh, and hath forgenen vs all synnes, and put out the handwrytinge that was agaynst vs (cötyned in the lawe wrytten) and that hath he taken out of the waye, and fastened it to the crosse: And hath spoyled rule and power, and hath made a shewe of them openly, and triumphed ouer them in his awne persone.

Let no man therfore trouble youre conscience aboute meate or drynke, or for a pece of an holy daye, as the holy daye of ye newe Mone, or of the Sabbath dayes, which are the shadowe of the things that were for to come: but the body selfe is in Christ. Let no man make you shote at a worke mark, which after his owne chosyne walketh in humberlemes and spirituallye of angels, things which he neuer sawe, and is vayne, and puf vp in his owne fleshly uynye: and holdeth not himselfe to the heade, wherof the whole body by toynettes and couples receaueyth norishment, and is knyt together, and so groweth to the greatnes that commeth of God.

Wherfore ye be deed with Christ from the ordinance of the worlde, why are ye holden the with such tradicions, as ye have lyued after the worlde? As whan they saye: Touch not this, taist not that, handle not that. All these things do hurte vnto men, because of the abuse of them, which abuse commeth onely of the commaundementes and doctrine of men: which thinges haue a shyne of wysdom to thorow chosen spiritualle and humberlemes, and in that they spare not the body, and do the flesh no worshippe vnto his nede.

The iii. Chapter.

Ye be rysen now with Christ, seke those thinges which are aboue where Christ is, sittinge on the righte hande of God. Set youre mynde on the thinges which are aboue, not on those thinges that are vpon earth. For ye are deed, and youre life is hyd with Christ in God. But whan Christ our life shal shewe himselfe, the shal ye also appeare with him in glory.

Mortifye threfore youre mëbres which are vpon earth, whordome, vncleneesses, vn-naturell lust, euell conceupisçeece, and coutesousnes, which is a worshypynge of Idols: for which thinges sakes the wrath of God commeth vpon the children of vnbelieue: in the which thinges ye walked some tyme, whan ye lyued in them.

But now put all awaye fro you: wrath, fearenesse, maliciousnes, cursed speakynge, fylthie worlde, out of youre mouth. Lye not one to another. Put of ye olde mä with his workes, and put on ye newe, which is reuened in knowlege after ye ymage of him that made him: where there is no Greke, Iewe, circumsicion, vnircircumsion, Barbarous, Sithian, bode, fre: but Christ is all and in all.

Now therfore as the electe of God, holy and beloved, put on tender mercye, kyndnes, humberlemes of myyne, mekenesse, longe sufferynge, forbeareinge one another, and forgiveynge one another, ye eny man haue a quarrell agaynst another. Like as Christ hath forgenen you, euene so do ye also. But aboue all thinges put on loute, which is the bonde of perfectnesse. And the peace of God rule in youre hertes, to the which (peace) ye are called also in one body: and se ye be thanfull.

Let ye worde of Christ dwell in you plentifully in all wyssdome. * Teach and exhort ye youre awne selues with psalmes and ymnes, and spirituall songes which have fauoure with them, synginge in youre hertes to the LORDE. † And what soever ye do in worde or worke, do all in the name of the LORDE Jesus, † and geue thanks vnto God the father by him.

§ Ye wyues, submytte youre selues vnto youre husbandes, as it is comly in the LORDE.

Ye husbandes, loute youre wyues, and be not byter vnto them.

¶ Ye children, obeye youre elders in all things, for that is well pleasynge vnto the LORDE.

Ye fathers, rate not youre children, lest they be of a desperate mynde.

† Ye seruauntes, be obedyent vnto youre bodely masters in all things, not with eye servyce as men pleasers, but in synglenes of hert, fearinge God. What so ever ye do, do it bertyly, even as vnto the LORDE and not vnto men. And be sure, that of the LORDE ye shall receaue the rewarde of eueritaunce: For ye serue the LORDEChrist. But he that doth wronge, shall receaue for the wronge that he hath done,  for there is no respecte of persons (with God.)

†† Ye masters, do vnto youre seruauntes that which is inst and equall, and knowe, † ye also haue a master in heauen.

The iii. Chapter.

CONTYNUE in prayere, and watch in the same with thankesgeuyng, and praye also together for vs, that God open vnto vs the dore of the worde, to speake the mystery of Christ, (wherfore I am also in bodes) that I maye vte v同 same, as it becommeth me to speake.  Walke wysely towarde them that are without, and redeyne tyume. Let youre speache be allwaye fauourable, seasoned with §§ salt, that ye maye knowe how to answere every man.

Tichicus the deare brother and faithfull mynyster † felowe seruaunt in § LORDE, shall tell you what case I am in. Whom I haue sent vnto you for the same purpose, that he mighte knowe how ye do, † that he mighte conforme youre hertes, with one §§ Onesimus a faithfull and beloued brother, which is one of you: they shall shewe you of all thinges, which are adonyge here. ¶¶ Aristarchus my preson felowe saluteth you, and §§ Marcus Barnabasses sisters sonne, touchinge whom ye receaued commandementes: ¥ If he come vnto you, receaue him, and Iesus, which is called Iustus, which are of the circumsicion. These onely are my helpers in the kyngdom of God, which were to my consolacion.

+++ Epaphras a seruaunt of Christ, which is one of you, saluteth you, allwaye laboureth ferently for you in prayers, † ye maye stonde perfecte and full, in all that is the wil of God. I beare him recorde, that he hath a feruent mynde for you, and for the at Laodicea, and at Hierapolis. Deare Lucas the Phisician saluteth you, and so doth +++ Demas. Salute the brethre, which are at Laodicea, and salute Nymphas, and the cögreciation which is in his house. And when the epistle is red of you, cause it to be red also in the cögreciation at Laodicea, † that ye likewyse reade the epistle of Laodicea. And saye to Archippus: Take hede to the office which thou hast receaued in the LORDE, that thou fulfull it. My salutacon with the hande of me Paul. Remembre my bodes. §§§ Grace be with you, Amen.

The first Epistle
of the Apostle S. Paul to the Tessalonicans.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.
He thanketh God for them, that they are so stedfast in faith and good workes, and receaueth the gospell with soch earnest.

Chap. II.
He putteth them in mynde of the godly consersacion that he led amonge them when he preached the gospell vnto them, thanketh God that they receaueth his worde so frutefully, and excuseth his absence.

Chap. III.
He sheweth how greatly he was reioysed, wha Timothy tolde him of their faith and love.

Chap. IIII.
He exhorteth them to stedfastnesse, to kepe them selues from synne and vnclenly consersacion, to loue one another: rebuketh ydilnesse, and speakeith of the resurreccion.

Chap. V.
He enfourmeth them of the daye of dome and comynge of the LORDE, exhorteith them to watch, and to regarde soch as preache Gods worde amongeth them.

The first Chapter.

PAUL and Siluanus and Timotheus.
Vnto the cogregation of the Tessalonyans, in God the father and in the LORDE Jesus Christ.
Grace be with you, and peace from God oure father and from the LORDE Jesus Christ.

"We geue thankes vnto God allwaye for you all, makynge monition of you in oure prayers without ceasynge, and call to remembraunce yourw worke in the faith, and yourw labour in loue, that you wene pacience in hope, which is oure LORDE Jesus Christ before God oure father: Because we knowe (brethren, beloued of God) how that ye are electe: for oure Gospell hath not bene with you in worde onely, but both in power and in the holy goost, and in moch certayntie, as ye knowe after what maner we were amonge you for youre sakes.

And ye became the folowers of vs and of the LORDE: and receaued the worde in moch affliccion with ioye of the holy goost: so that ye were an example to all that beleued in Macedonia and Achaia. For frō you was the worde of the LORDE noysed out, not onely in Macedonia & Achaia, but all quarters also is youre faith i God spred abreode so that it nedeth not vs to speake any thynge at all. For they them selues shewe of you, what maner of entrynge in we had vnto you, and how ye are turned vnto God from ymages, for to servethe the luyynge and true God, and to loke for his sonne from heauē: whom he raseyth vp from the deed, euyn Iesus, which hath deluyered vs frō the wrath to come.

The if. Chapter.

FOR ye youre seluowes (brethren) knowe of oure intrauce vnto you, how that it was not inayne, but as we had suffred afores, & we were shamefully intreated at Philippos (as and 4. e. | Act. 1. b. § 1ob. 3. c. || Act. 16. c.)
ye knowe) we were bolde in oure God, *to speake vnto you *Gospel of God with moch struyngye. For our exhortacion was not to brynge you to erroure ner yet to vnclennes, nether was it with gyle: but as we are alowed of God, that the Gospell shulde be commytted vnto vs to preache, euen so we speake, *not as though we wolde please me, but God, which tryeth our hertes.

For we have not gone aboute with flateringe wordes (as ye knowe) ner wayted for oure owne profit (†God is recorder) nether soughte we prayse of men, nether of you ner of any other, when we mighte haue bene chargeable vnto you as the Apostles off Christ, but we were tender amonge you. Like as a nornse cherisheth hir children, euen so had we hartely afeccion towards you, and wolde with good wyl haue dealte vnto you, not onely the Gospel of God, but oure lyues also, because ye were deare vnto vs.

Ye remembre brethren oure loure and trauayle. †For daye and nighte wroughte we (because we wolde not be chargeable vnto any of you) and preached the Gospell of God amonge you. Ye are witnesses, and so is God, how holily and lustly and vnblameable we behaued oure selues amōge you that beleue: as ye knowe, how that as a father his children, euen so exhorted we and comforted and besoughte every one of you, that ye wolde walke worthely before God, which hath called you vnto his kyngdome & glory. For this cause thanke we God without ceassynge, because that whā ye receaued of vs the worde of the preaching of God, ye receaued it not as ṳ worde of men, but (etu as it is of a trueth) the worde of God, which worketh in you that beleue.

For ye brethren are become the followers off †the congregacies off God which in Iewry are in Christ Iesu, so that ye haue suffred euen like thinges of youre kyngs men, as they haue suffred of the Iews. Which as they put the LORDE Iesus to death, and their wyne prophets, euen so haue they persecuted vs also, and please not God, and are cōtry to all men, forbyddinge vs to speake vnto the Heythen that they mighte be sanded, to fulfill their synnes allwayne: for the wrath is come vpon them allready vnto ṳ vttiesthmost.

But we (brethren) for as much as we haue bene kepeth from you for a season, as concernynge the bodely presence, but not in the hert, we haue haisted the more with great desire to se you personally. Therefore wolde we haue come vnto you, (I Paul) two tymes, ††but Sathan withstode vs. For who is our hope, or ioye, or crowne of ††reioysinge? are not ye it in ṳ sichte of oure LORDE Iesus Christ at his connynge? Yes ye are oure prayse and ioye.

The iii. Chapter.

WHERFORE sence we couldo no longer forbere, we thoughte it good to remayne at ††Athens alone, †sent Timotheus oure brother and mynister of God, and oure helper in ṳ gospel of Christ, to stablish you and to conforte you in youre faith, that nomans shulde be moued in these troubles: (for ye youre selues knowe, that we are euyn appoynted there vnto. And when we were with you, we tolde you before, that we shulde suffer tribulacion, euen as it is come to passe, †as ye knowe.) For this cause seynge I couldo no longer forbear, I sent, that I mighte haue knowlege of youre faith, lest happily the tempter had tempted you, and lest oure loure had bene in vayne.

But now that Timotheus is come frō you vnto vs, and hath shewed vs of youre faith and loue, †how that ye haue allwayne good remembrance of vs, desyringe to se vs as we also longe to se you: therefore brethren we haue consolacion in you in all oure trouble and necessite thorow youre faith. For now are we alvyue, yf ye stonde stedfast in ṳ LORDE. For what thanks can we recom-pēce to God agayne for you, because of this ioye that we haue concernynge you before oure God? We praye exceddingly daye and nighte, that we mighte se you presently, and fulfill that which is lackynge in youre faith.

God hymselfe oure father †oure LORDE Iesus Christ gyde oure iournye vnto you. But the LORDE increace you, †make you flowe ouer in loue one towarde another, and towarde all men (euen as we do towarde you) that youre hertes may be stable and vnblameable in holynes before God oure father, at the commynge of oure LORDE Iesu Christ with all his sayntes.

The iii. Chapter.

FURTHERMORE we beseeke you brethren and exhorte you in the LORDE Jesus, that ye increase more and more, euyn as ye haue receeued of vs how ye oughte to walke and to please God. For ye knowe what commandements we gaue you by oure LORDE Iesu Christ. For this is the * will of God, euyn youre sanctifiyng, that ye shulde absteyne from whordome, ¶ every one of you shulde knowe how to kepe his vessell in holynes and honour, ¶ not in the lust of concupiscence, ¶ as the Heythen which knowe not God. And that no man go to farre, ner defraude his brother in bargayninge. For the LORDE is the auenguer of all soch thinges, as we haue sayde ¶ testified vnto you afofe tyme. For God hath not called vs to vnclennesse, but vnto holynes. § He therefor that despyseth, despyseth not man, but God, ¶ which hath geuen his holy sprete in to you.

But as touchinge brotherly loue, ye nede not that I wryte vnto you, ¶ for ye youre selues are taught of God to loue one another: yee and that thinge ye do vnto all the brethren, which are thorow out all Macedonia. But we beseeke you brethren that ye increase yet more and more, and that ye study to be quyte, and to medle with youre awne busynesse, ¶ and to worke with youre awne haides, as we commanded you, that ye maye walke honestly towarde the that are without, and that nothinge be lackynge vnto you.

We wolde not brethren that ye shulde be ignoraunt concernyng them which are fallen a slepe, that ye sorrow not as other do which haue no hope. For yf we beleue that Jesus dyed and rose agayne, euyn so the also which slepe by Jesus, shal God brynge with him. For this we saye vnto you in the worde of the LORDE, ¶ that we which lyue and are remaynynge in the commynge of the LORDE, shal not come yer they which slepe. ¶ For the LORDE hymselfe shal come downe fro heaven with a shoute and voyce of ¶ Archangel and with the trompe of ¶ God, and the deed in Christ shal ayrse first: then shal we which lyue and remayne, be caught vp with them also in the cloudes, to mete the LORDE in the ayre, and so shal we euer be with the LORDE. Wherfore comforte youre selues one another with these wordes.

The v. Chapter.

BUT of ¶ tymes and seasons (brethren) it is no nede to wryte vnto you. For ye youre selues knowe perfectly, that ¶ the daye of the LORDE shal come euyn as a thiefe in the nighte. For when they shall saye: Tush, It is peace, there is no daunger, ¶ then shall soden destruction come vpö the, euyn as the payne of a woman trauitive with childle, and they shal not escape. But ye brethren are not in darknes, that that daye shulde come on you as a thiefe. Ye are alltogether children of lighte, and children of the daye, We are not of the night, nether of darknesse.

¶¶ Therfore let vs not slepe as do other, but let vs watch, and be sober. For they that slepe, slepe in the nighte: and they that be dronken, are drunken in the nighte. But let vs which are of the daye, be sober, armed with the brestplate of faith and loue, and with ¶ helmet of hope to saluation.

For God hath not appoynted vs vnto wrath, ¶ but to appoynte saluation by ¶ means of oure LORDE Iesu Christ, which dyed for vs: that whether we wake or slepe, we shulde lyue together with hym. Wherfore comforte youre selues together, and edifie one another, euyn as ye do.

We beseeke you brethren, ¶¶¶ that ye knoe them which labour amonge you, and haue the oversighte of you in the LORDE, and genue you exhortacion, that ye haue the the more in loue for their workes sake, and be at peace with them. We desyre you brethren, warne them that are vnryle, coforte the feble mynded, forbeare the weak, be pacient towarde all men. ¶¶¶ Se that none recompence euell for euell vnto eny man: but euery folowe that which is good, both amõde youre selues and to all men.

Reioyse alwaye, praye contynuall, ¶¶¶ in all thinges be thankfull: for this is the wyll of God in Christ Iesu towarde you. ¶¶¶ Quech not ¶ sprete: despyse not prophecies:

The seconde Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Tessaloniens.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.
He thanketh God for their faith and love, and prayeth for the increase of the same.

Chap. II.
He sheweth them that the daye of the LORDE shall not come, till the departinge fro the faith come first: and therfore he exhorteth them not to be disceaced, but to stonde stedfast in the things that he hath taught them.

Chap. III.
He desyreh them to praye for him that the gospell maye prosper, and geneth the warnynge to reprowe the yele, and ye they wil not laboure with their handes, that they shall not eate.

The first Chapter.
PAUL and Siluanus and Timotheus. To the congregacion of your Tessaloniens in God our father and in the LORDE Jesus Christ. Grace be with you, and peace from God our father, and from the LORDE Jesus Christ. We are bende to thanke God allwayes for you brethren, as it is mete: because that your faith groweth exceptingly, and the loue of euery one of you increaseth towarde another amoge youre selues, so that weoure selues make our boast of you (in the congreagions of God) of your pacie& and faith in all your persecucions and troubles that ye sufure, which is a token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye are counted worthy of the kyngdome of God, for the which ye also sufure. For it is a righteous thing with God, to recopence tribulacion vnto the ye trouble you: but vnto you which are troubled, rest with vs, * wha the LORDE Jesus shal shewe himselfe from heauen, with the angels of his power, and with flammynge fyre, to gene vengeaunce vnto them that knowe not God, * and to them selues make our boast of you (in the congreagions of God) of your pacie& and faith in all your persecucions and troubles that ye sufure, which is a token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye are counted worthy of the kyngdome of God, for the which ye also sufure.

that obeye not the Gospell of oure LORDE Jesus Christ. *Which shall be punished with everlasting damnacon, from thy presence of the LORDE, and from the glory of his power, whan he shal come to be glorified in his sayntes, and to become maruolous in all them that beleue: because ye have beleued our testimony vnto you of the same daye. Wherefore we praye allwayes for you, that oure God maketh you worthy of thy callynge, and fulfill all delection of goodness, and the worke of faith in power, that thy name of oure LORDE Jesus Christ maye be praysed in you, and ye in him, acordynge to the grace of oure God, and of the LORDE Jesus Christ.

The ii. Chapter.

A W E beseeke you brethren by the commynge of oure LORDE Jesus Christ, and in that we shal assemble vnto him, that ye be not sodeny mouned fro youre mynde, and be not troubled, nether by sprete, nether by wordes, ner yet by letter, which shulde seme to be sent from vs, as though thy daye of Christ were at hande. Let noman discease you by eny meanes. For the LORDE commeth not, excepte the * departynge come first, and that Man of synne be opened, euyn the sonne of perdicion, which is an aduersary, and is exalted abowe all thy is called God or Gods sernyce, so that he sytteth as God in the § temple of God, i and boasteth himselfe to be God

Remembre ye not, that when I was yet with you, I tolde you these thinges? And now ye knowe what witholdeth it, euë that it mighte be vterred at his tyme. (§* For the mystery of the inquyte worketh alreadly, till he which now onely letteth, be takë out of the waye.) And then shal that wicked be vterred, whom the LORDE shall consume with thy sprete of his mouth, §* shall destroye with the appearaunce of his commynge: euën him, whose commynge is after the workynge of Sathan §* with all lyenge power, and signes and wonders, and with all deceauablenes of vnrighteousnes amonge them that perisse, because they recheaued not the lone of thy trueth, that they might haue bene sauëd. Therefore shal God sende them strôge delusiou, that they shulde beleue lyes, §* all they might be dancë, which beleued not the trueth, but had pleasure in vrighteousnes.

But we are bounde to gene thanks allwaye vnto God for you, brethren beloued of the LORDE, because that God hath from the begynnynge chosen you to saluacion in the sanctifie of the sprete and in beleynge of the trueth, whervnto he hath called you by oure Gospell, to optayne the glory of oure LORDE Jesus Christ.

Therefore brethren stonde fast, and kepe the ordinaunces which ye haue lerned, whether it were by oure preachinge or by epistle. But oure LORDE Jesus Christ himselfe, and God oure father, which hath loued vs and geuen vs everlastinge consolacion, and a good hope thorow grace, confort ye hertes, and stabylsh you in all doctrine §* good doyng.

The iii. Chapter.

FURTHERMORE brethren §§ praye for vs, that the worde of God maye haue fre passage and be glorified as it is with you, and that we maye be deluyered from vnreasonable and euell moc. §§* For faith is not euerly mas. But the LORDE is faithfull, which shal stabylsh ye and kepe you from euell. We haue confidence in the LORDE to you warde, that ye both do and will do that which we commaund you. The LORDE gyde youre hertes vnto the loue of God and pacience of Christ.

§* But we requyre you brethren, in the name of our LORDE Jesus Christ, that ye withdrawe youre selues from euery brother that walketh inordinatly, and not after the institucion which he receaued of vs. For ye youre selues knowe, how ye oughte to folowe vs: for we behaued not oure selues inordinatly amonge you, nether toke we bred of eny man for naughty §§* but wroght with labour and traually night and daye, lest we shulde be chargeable to eny of you. Not but that we had auctorite, but to gene oure selues for an example vnto you to folowe vs. And when we were with you, this we warned you of, that if there were eny which wolde not worke, §* same shulde not eate. For we heare saye, that there are some which walke amonge you

The first Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to Timothy.

Vnto Timothy my naturall sonne in the faith.

Grace, mercy, and peace from God oure father, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

As I besoughte † to abyde still at Ephesus († when I departed in to Macedonia) euë so

- Act. 9. b.  † 1 Tess. 1. a.

do, that thou commaunde some, that they teach none other wyse, * nether geue hede to fables and genealogies, which are endlesse, and brede doutes more then godly edifyinge, which is by faith.† For ły chefe summe of the commandement is love of a pure hert, and of a good cōscience, and of faith vnfayned. From the which some haue erred, † haue turned vnto vayne iangelynge, wyllinge to be doctours of the scripture, and vnderstonde not what they speake, nether wher of they affirme.

† But we knowe that the lawe is good, yf a man vse it laufully, vnderstōdinge this, ‡ that the lawe is not geuen vnto the righ teous, but to the vnrighteous † dishebdient, to the vngodly † to synners, to the unholy † vncline, to murthurers of fathers and murthurers of mothers, to manslayers, to whore mongers, †† to the that defyle them selues with mankynde, to menstealers, to lyars, to perjured, † so forth yf there be any other things ‡ is cōtry to ły wholesome doctrayne, acordinge to ły Gospell of ły glory of the blessed God, which (Gospell) is cōmytted vnto me.

And I thanke Christ Iesu oure LORDE, which hath made me worde, for be counted me faithfull, † put me in office, wha before I was a blasphemer, † a persecuter, † a tyr raunt: but I optayned mercy, because I dyd it ignorantly in vnbereue. Neueretheles the grace of oure LORDE was more abūdaunt thorow ły faith ‡ love which is in Christ Iesu.

For this is a true sayenge, and by all meanes worthy to be receauned,  that Christ Iesu came in to ły worlde to save synners, of whom I am chefe. Notwithstanding for this cause optayned I mercy, that Jesus Christ mighte princypally shewe me in all longe pacience, to the ensembly of them which shulde beleue in him vnto eternall life. So then vnto God kyng euerlasting, immortal and †† invisible, and wyse onely, be honoure and prayse for euer and euer Amen.

This commandement commytte I vnto the (my sonne Timotheus) acordinge to ły prophecies which in tyme past were prophecied of the, that thou in them shuldest fighte a good fighte, hauyngee faith ‡ good conscience, which some haue put awaye frō them, and as concernynge faith haue made shypwreke: of whose nombre is †† Hymeneos and §§ Alexander, ††† whom I haue delyuered vnto Sathan, that they mighte be taught, nomore to blas pheme.

The ii. Chapter.

I EXHORT therefore, ły above all things, prayers, supplications, intercessions and geuynge of thakes he had for all men ††† for kynges, and for all that are in auctorite, that we maye lyue a quyte ‡ peaceable life in all godlynes and honestie. For that is good and accepted in ły sighte of God oure Sauioure, which will haue all men saued, and to come vnto the knowlege of ły truthe. For there is one God, and  one mediatour betwene God and men, (namely) the man Christ Jesus, which gaue him selfe a rausome for all men, that at his tyme it shulde be preached, whereunto ††† I am ordeyned a preacher † an Apostle (I tell ły truthe in Christ and lye not) a teacher of the Heythē in faith and in the truthe.

I will therafore that men pray ††† in all places, liftinge vp pure bides without wrath or downtyne. §§§ Likewyse also the women, that they araye them selues in comly apparell with shamfastnes and discrete behaueoure, not with broyded heer, or golde, or perles, or costly araye: but with soch as it becommeth wemen that profess godlynes thorow good worke. §§§ Let the woman lerne in sylence with all subieccion. I suffer not a woma to teach ††† ner to have auctorite ouer the man, but for to be in sylence. For Adam was first formed, and the Eue: Adam also was not diseauned, but the woman was diseauned, and hath brought in the trāgression. Notwithstanding thorow bearynge of children she shalbe saued, yf she continue in faith and in love ‡ in the sanctyfenge with discreencion.

The iii. Chapter.

THIS is a true sayenge: Yf a ma covet ‡ an office of a Bischoppe, he desyreth a good worke. But a Bischopp must be blamlesse, * the huszbāde of one wife, sober, discrete, manely, harberous, * apte to teach: Not genen to moch wyne, no fighter, not genen to filthy luere: but gentle, abhorrynge stryfe, abhorrynge couetousnes: + one that rul eth his awne house honestly, haunyge ob- cident children with all honestye. (But yf a man can not rule his owne house, how shal he care for the congregacion of God?) He maye not be a yoge scolar, lest he be puft vp, and fall in to the judgment of + euell speaker. He must also haue a good reporate of them which are without, lest he fall in to the rebuke and snare of the euell speaker.

Likewyte must the + mynister be honest, not double tonged, not genen to moch wyne, nether vnto fylthie luere, but haunyge the mystery of faith in pure conscience. And let them first be proued, and then let them mynister, yf they be blamelesse.

Euen so must their wyenes be honest, not euell speakers, but sober and faithfull in all things. Let the mynisters be, euery one the huzbhede of one wyfe, and soch as rule their children well, and their owne householde.

For they that mynister well, get them selues a good degree and greate libertie in the faith which is in Christ Iesus.

These things wyte I vnto the, trustinge shortly to come vnto the: but yf I tary lôge, that then thou mayest yet haue knowlege, how thou oughtest to behaye thy selfe in Gods house, which is the congregacion of the lyuynge God, the piler and grounde of trueth: and without naye, greate is that mystery of godlynes. § God was shewed in the flesh: was justifie in the sprete: II was sene of angels: was preached vnto the Heythene: was beleue on in the worlde: * was receaue in glory.

The vijij. Chapter.

THE sprete speaketh euylently, that in + latter tymes some shal# departe from the faith, and shal geue hede vnto spretes of errourre, and deuelish doctrynes, of them which speake false thorow yppocrisyse, and haue their coscience marked with ane white yron, forbyddinge to mary, and comauundynge to abstayne fro the meates, which God hath created to be receaue with genyge thankes of them which beleue and knowe the trueth.  For euery creature off God is good, and nothinge to be refused, ¥ is receaue with thankes- gueyng: for it is sanctifie by the worde of God and prayere. ¥¥ thou shalt put the brethren in remembrance of these thinges, thou shalt be a good mynister of Iesus Christ, §§ which hast bene irishid vp in the wordes of faith and of good doctryne, which thou hast followed hither to.

As for vngoostly and olde wyues fables, cast them awaye, but exercysse thy selfe vnto godlynes. For bodelye exercysse profyteth little, but godlynes is profytale vnto all thinges, as a thinge which hath promyses of the life that is nowe, and of the life for to come. This is a sure sayenge, ¥ of all partes worthy to be receaue. For therafore we laboure and suffer reuoke, because we hope in the lyuynge God, which is the Saviour of all men, but specially of these that beleue. Soch thinges comauunde thou and teach. §§ Let no man despysse thy youth, but be thou vnto them that beleue, an ensample, in worde, in counsaion, in lune, in + sprete, in faith, in pure- nesse.

Gene attendance to readynge, to exhortacion, to doctryne, vntyll I come. Be not negligent in the gift that is geuen the thorow prophecye, §§§ with layege on of the handes of the Elders. These thinges exercysse, and gene thy selfe vnto them, that thine increace maye be manifest vnto euery man. Take hede vnto thy selfe, and to learynge, cöynynge in these thinges. For yf thou so do, thou shalt saue thy selfe, and them that heare the.

The b. Chapter.

REBUKE not an Elder, but exhorte him a as a father: and the yoger men as brethren: the elder wemen as mothers: the yonger as sisters with all purenes. Honour wedowes, which are true wedowes. ¥¥ any wedowe haue children or neves, let them lerne first to rule their awne houses godly, and to recompence their elders. For ¥ is good a acceptabe before God. §§ But she that is a right wedowe, a desolate, puttteth her trust in God, a cöynyneth in prayer and supplicacion nighte and daye. But she that lyueth in pleasures, is deed, even yet a lyue. And these things commaunde, that they maye be without blame. * But yf there be eny man that prouydeth not for his awne, and specially for them of his householde, the same hath denyed the faith, and i is worse then an infydele.

Let no wedowe be chosen vnder thre score yere olde, and soch one as was ye wife of one man, and well reported of in good worke, yf she haue brought vp children well, yf she haue beeue: harberous, yf she haue washed the sayntes fete, yf she haue mynstred vnto the which were in aduersite, yf she were continually geuen to all maner of good worke. But ye younger wedowes refuse. For whan they haue begonne to waxe wanton agaynst Christ, then wil they mary, hauynge their damnacion, because they haue broke ye first faith. Besydes this they are ydell, and leme to ronne aboute frō house to house. § Not onely are they ydell, but also tryflinge ye busybodies, speakynge things which are not comly.

I wil therfore that the younger women mary, beare children, gyde the house, to geue ye aduersary no occasion to speake euell. For some are turned back already after Sathā. Yf eny man or woman that beleueth euell haue wedowes, let them make prouysion for the, and let not the congregacions be charged: that they which are righte wedowes, maye haue euough.

The Elders that rule well, are worthy of double honoure, most specially they which laboure in the worde in teachinge. For ye scripture sayeth: § Thou shalt not mosell the mouth of ye oxe ye treade thy euell corne. And:  The labourer is worthy of his rewardes.

Agaynst an Elder receaue none accusacion but vnder two or thre witnesses. Thē that synne, rebuke in the presence of all, that other also maye feare.

I testifie before God and the LORDE Jesus Christ, and ye electe angels, that thou obserue these things without haistie judgment, and do nothinge parcially. Laye hondes sodenly on no man, nether be partaker of other maes synnes. Kepe thy sole pure: Drynyke no lenger water, but use a little wyne for thy stomackes sake, and because thou art oft  tyymes sicke. Some mēs synnes are opē, so that they maye be judged afore hande: but some mens (synnes) shall be manifest herafter. Likeweys also good worke are manifest afore hāde: and they that are other wyse can not be hyd.

The vi. Chapter.

LET as many seruauntes as are vnder the a yocke, counte their masters worthy of all honoure, that the name of God and his doctrine be not euell spoken of. Se that they which haue beleuynges masters, despyze them not because they are brethren, but rather do seruye, for so moch as they are beleuynges, and beloued, and partakers of the benefite.

These thinges teach and exhorte. Yf eny ma teach otherwise, and aagree not vnto the wholesome wordes of our LORDE Jesus Christ, and to the doctryn of godlynes, he is put vp, and knoweth nothinge, but waysteth his brayne aboute questions and struynges of worde: §§ wherof sprynge envye, striefe, raylinges, euell surmysinges, vayne disputaciōs of soch men as haue corrupte myndes, §§ and are robbed of the trueth, which thynke that godlynes is luce: From soch separate thy selfe. Howbeit it is great avaütage, who so is godly, §§ and holde him content with that he hath.  For we broughte nothinge in to the worlde, therefore is it a playne case ye can cary nothinge out. §§ Whan we haue fode and rayment, let vs therwith be content. §§ For they that wylle be riche, fall in to the téptacion and smare, and in to many folishe ye noysome lustes, which drown men in destruction and damnacion. For Couetousnes is the rote of all euell, which whyle some lusted after, they erred from the faith, and tangled them selues with many sorowes.

§§§ But thou man of God, fyne soche thinges: §§ folowe righteousnes, godlynes, faith, loue, paucenie, mekenes: fighte a good fighte of faith: laye honde on eternall life, where vnto thou art called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.

I geue the charge before God, §§§ which quyckenen all thinges, a before Jesu Christ, which vnder Pontius Pilate witnessed a good witnessyng, that thou kepe the commaunde-
The second Epistle of the Apostle S. Paul to Timothy.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.
Paul exhorteoth Timothy to stedfastnesse and pacience in persecucion, and to continue in the doctrine that he had taught him. A commendacion of Onesiphorus.

Chap. II.
Like as in the first chapter, so here he exhorteoth him to be constant in trouble, to suffre manly, and to byde fast in the wholesome doctrine of our LORDE Iesus Christ.

Chap. III.
He prophesieth of the parelous tymes, setteth out yprocrites in their culours, telleth vs what they be within, for all their fayre faces outwardly. Perscucion for the gospell.

Chap. III.
He exhorteoth Timothy to be feruet in the worde, and to suffre adversite: maketh mension of his awne death, and bydeth Timothy come vnto him.

Wherfore I warne the, that thou stere vp γ gifte of God which is in the by puttynge on of my handes. *For God hath not geuen vs the sprete of feare, but of power, and of love, and of right vnder-stondynge.

† Be not thou ashamed therof of γ testimony of oure LORDE, nether of me, that am his presoner: but suffre thou aduersite also with the Gospell, acordinge to the power of God β which hath saene vs, and called vs with an holy eallyng: not acordinge to oure dedes, but acordinge to his owne purpose and grace, which was geuen vs in Christ Iesu before the tyme of the worlde, but is now declared openly by the apparenyg of oure Sauitoure Iesu Christ. ||Which hath taken awaye γ power of death, and hath brought life and immortalitie vnto lighte, thorow the Gospell: γ whervnto I am appointed a preacher and an Apostell, and a teacher of the Heythen: for the which cause I also suffre these thinges, neuertheles I am not ashamed. For I knowe whom I haue beleued, and am sure that he is able to kepe that which I haue commytted vnto his kepynge agaynst that daye.

Holde the after γ enample of the wholsome wordes, which thou hearest of me, concernynge faith and l组织开展 in Christ Iesu. This hye charge kepe thou thorow the holy goost, which dwelleth in vs. Thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia, be turned fro me, of which sorte are Phigelus and Hermogenes. The LORDE geue mercie vnto the house of Onesiphorus: for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my cheyne: but when he was at Rome he soughte me out very diligently, and founde me. But thou hast sene the experience of my doctrine, my fashzion of lyuynge, my purpose, my faith, my longsuffering, my love, my patience, my persecucions, my afflictions, which happened vnto me at Antioche, at Iconium, at Lystra, which persecucions I suffered paciently, and from the all the LORDE deleyuered me. ¶ Yee and all theye that wil lyue godly in Christ Iesu, must suffer persecucion. But the euell men and discceauers shal waxe worse and worse, disceauyne and beynge diseceaned.

But conteynue thou in the things that thou hast lerned, which also were committed vnto the, the seyne thou knowest of whos thou hast learned them, And for so much as thou hast knowne holy scripture of a childe, the same is able to make thy wyse vnto saluacion thorow the faith in Christ Iesu. §§ For all scripture genue by inspiracion of God, is profitable to teach, to impreue, to amende, and to instructe in righteousnes, that a man off God maye be perfecte, and prepared vnto all good workes.

The vij. Chapter.

I TESTIFYE therfore before God & before a the LORDE Iesu Christ, which shal come to judge the lyuynge and the deed, at his appearenye in his kyngdome: Preach thou the worde, be ferpert, be it in season or out of season: Improue, rebuke, exhorte with all longe sufferynge and doctrine. For the tyme wil come, when they shal not suffer wholesome doctrine, but after their awne lustes shal they (whose cares ytche) get them an heape of teachers, and shal turne their cares from the truth, and shalbe geuen vnto fables. But watch thou in all thinges, suffer aduersite, do the worke of a preacher of the Gospell, fulffull thine office vnto the vtttemost.

¶ For I am now ready to be offered, and the tyme of my departinge is at hande. I haue foughete a good fighte: I haue fulffiled the course: I haue keppe the faith. From hence forth there is layed vp for me a crowne of righteousnes, which the LORDE the righteous judge shal geue me in thy daye: Howbeit not vnto me onely, but vnto all them that loute his comynge. B For this cause left I the in Creta, that thou shuldest perfrome that which was lack-ynye, and shuldest ordyne Elders in euer cite, as I appoyncted §. Yf euy be blamelesse, the huszbande of one wife, haunyye faithfull children, which are not slaunderd of ryote, nether are dishobedient. † For a Bishoppe must be blamelesse, as the § stewardes of God: not wyffull, not angrye, II not geuen vnto moch wyne, no fghter, not greedy of filthye lucre: but barbarous, one that loueth goodnes, sober mynded, righteous, holy, temperate, and soch one as eleueth vnto the true worde of doctrine: that he maye be able to exhorte with wholsome lernynge, ζ to improve them that saye agaynst it.

For there are many dishobedient, and talkers of vanite, and disseauers of myndes: namely they of the circuision, whose mouthes must be stopped:  which peruerde whole houses, teachinge things which they oughte not, because of filthye lucre. One of them selues euen their awne prophet, sayde: †† The Cretayns are alwayes lyars, euell beastes, and slowe belies. This witnesse is true. Whertof rebuke them sharply, ψ they maye be sounde in the faith, and not to take heed vnto Iewes fables and commandementes of men, which turne them awaye from the trueth. †† Vnto ψ cleane are all things cleane: §§ but to the vncleane ζ vnbeleuers, there is nothinge cleane, but both their mynde ζ conscience is defyled. They saye that they knowe God, but with the dedes they denye him: for so moch as they are abhominable and dishobedient, and vnmete to all good workes.

The 11. Chapter.

B UT speake thou that which becommeth wholsome learmynge. That ψ elder men be sober, honest, discrete, sounde in the faith, in loue, in paciencie. And the elder wemen likewise that they shewe them selues as it becommeth holynes, that they be no false accusers, not geuen to moch wyne, that they teach honest thinges, that they enfoure the yonge wemen to be sober mynded, to loue their huszbandes, to loue their childrē, to be discrete, chaste, huswytully, good, III obedient vnto their awne huszbandes, that the worde of God be not euell spoken of. Exhorte the yonge men likewise, that they be sober mynded. Aboue all thinges shewe thy selfe "" an ensample good worke, with vncorupte doctrine, with honestly, with the wholsome worde which can not be rebuked:  that he which withstodeth maye be ashamed, haunyye nothinge in you that he maye disprayse.

†† Exhorte the seruauntes, to be obedient vnto their masters, to please in all things, not answeringe agayne, nether to be pykers, but to shewe all good faithfulnes, that in all thinges they maye do worshippe vnto the doctrine off God oure Sauxioure. For the grace off God that bryngeth Salvacion vnto all men, hath appeared, and teacheth vs, that we shulde denye vngodlynes, and †††wordly lustes: and that we shulde lyue discretly, righteously, and godly in this worlde, lokyng for that blessed hope and appearynge of the glory of ψ greate God and of oure Sauxioure Iesu Christ: §§§ which gau him selfe for vs, to redeme vs frō all vnrighteousnes, and to poure vs to be a peculiare people vnto him-

For we oure selues also were in tymes past, vnwyse, dishobedient, in errourre, seruynge lustes and dyuers maners of voluptuousnes, lyuyng in maliciouns and envye, full of hate, hatynge one another.

Of these things wolde I that thou shuldest speake earnestly, that they which are become beleuers in God, might be diligent to excell in good workes: for these things are good and profitable vnto me. Greate ioye and consolacion haue I in thy loue. For by the (brother) the sayntes are hertely refreszed. Wherfore though I haue great boldnes in Christ to commaunde the that which bocometh the, yet for loues sake I rather beseke y, though I be as I am, euë Paul aged, and now a presoner also of Iesus Christ. I beseke the for my sonne * Onesimus (whom I haue

For I wolde haue kepethim styll with me, that in thy styde he might haue mynistréd vnto me in ſ bondes of ſ Gospell: Neuertheles without thy mynyde wolde I do nothinge, that ſ good which thou doest, shulde not be of compulsion, but wyllingly.

Happily he therefore departed for a season, that thou shuldest receauethim for euer: not now as a seruaunt, but aboue a seruaunt, euyn a brother beloued, specially to me, but how moch more vnto ſ, both in ſ flesh and in the LORDE? Yf thou holde me for thy companyon, receauethim then euyn as my selfe.

But yf he haue hurte the, or oweth the oughte, that laye to my charge. I Paul haue wrytten it with myne awne hande, I wil recompençe it: so that I do not saye vnto ſ, how that thou owest vnto me euyn thine owne selfe. Euyn so brother, let me enjoye the in the LORDE: refresh thou my hert in the LORDE.

Trustinge in thine obedicce, I haue wrytten vnto the, for I knowe that thou wilt do more then I saye. Morouer prepare me lodginge, for I hope that thorow youre prayers I shalbe geuen vnto you. There saluteth the, Epaphras my felowe presoner in Christ Iesu, Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, Lucas, my helpers. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with youre sprete. Amen.

The first Epistle of the Apostle S. Peter.

The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I. He sheweth that thorow the abundaunt mercy of God we are begotten agayne to a lyuely hope: and how faith must be tried: how the salvacion in Christ is no newes, but a thinge prophesied of olde. He exhorteth them to a godly conversacion, for so moch as they are now borne a new by the worde of God.

Chap. II. He exhorteth men to laye asyd all yvce, sheweth that Christ is the foundacion wher vpon they be byult, prayeth them to absteyne fro fleshly lustes, and to obeye worldly rulers. How seruauntes shulde behauethem selues towardetheir masters. He exhorteth to suffre after the ensample of Christ.

Chap. III. How ywues ought to ordre them selues towardetheir huszbandes and in their apparell. The dutye of me towardetheir ywues. He exhorteth all men to vnite and loute, and paciently to suffre trouble. Of true baptyme.

Chap. IIII. He exhorteth men to ceasse from synne, to spende no more tyme in yvce, to be sober and apte to prayer, to loute ech other, to be pacient in trouble, and to beware that no man suffre as an euell doer, but as a Cristen man, and not to be ashamed.

Chap. V. A speciall exhortacion for all bishoppes or prestes to fede the flocke of Christ, and what their dutie is, and what rewarde they shal haue yf they be diliget. He exhorteth yonge personnes to submytt the selues to the elder, euery one to loute another, to be sober, & to watch, that they maye resist the enemye.
The first Epistle of the Apostle S. Peter.

The first Chapter.

Peter an Apostle of Iesu Christ, to the
that dwell here and there as strangers throw out Pontus, Galacia, Capadocia, Asia and Bithinia, electe acordinge to the fore-knowlege of God the father thorow sanctifiege of the sprete, vnto obedience and
• sprenklynge of the bloud of Iesus Christ.

Grace and peace be multiplied with you.

Blessed be God and the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which acordinge to his greate mercy hath begotten vs agayne vnto a lyuely hope by the resurreccion of Iesus Christ from the deed, to an vnкорruptible and and vnдеfyled inheritaunce, which neuer shall fade awaye, but is reservd in heauen for you that are kept by the power of God thorow faith to saluacion, which is preparde ready to be shewed in the last tyme: in the which ye shall reioyse, though now for a little season (yff nede requyre) ye are in heunyes thorow manyfold temptacions: that youre faith once tryed (bynge much more presious then the corrupt-ible golde that is tryed thorow the fyre) might be founde vnto laude, glory and honoure at the appearynge of Iesus Christ: whom ye haue not sene, and yet love him: in whom now ye beleue, though ye se him not. Euen so shal ye reioyce also with vnoutspakable and glorious joye, receaunynge the ende of youre faith, euyn the saluacion of youre soules.

Of which saluacion the prophets haue enquiryd and searched, which prophecied of the grace that shulde come vpon you: searchinge whan or at what tyme the sprete off Christ that was in them, shulde signifie, which (sprete) testifie before the passions that shulde come vnto laude, and the glory that shulde folowe after. Vnto the which (prophets) it was declared, that not vnto them selues, but \[\text{vtvo vs they shulde mynistre the things which are now shewed vnto you, by them which thowr v holy goost sent downe from heauen, haue preached vnto you the things which the angels deythe to beholde.}\]

Wherfore gyrdre op the yf lynyes off youre dyme, be sober, and trust perfectly on the grace that is brought vnto you, by the declarynge of Iesus Christ, as obedient childe, not faszhyonynge youre selues to youre olde lustes of ignorance: but as he which hath called you is holy, euene so be ye holy also in all youre conversacion: for it is wrytte: Be ye holy, for I am holy.

And ye so be that ye call on the father,
which without respecte of personnes judgeth accordynge to euery mans worke, se yf ye passe yf tyme of youre pilgrimage in feare:
and knowe, that ye were not redemed with corruptible syluer and golde, from youre vayne conversacion (which ye receaued by the tradicions of the fathers) but with the precious bloud of Christ, as of an innocet and vnдеyled lambe, which was ordeyned before the worlde was made, but is declared in these last tymes for youre sakes, which thorow him beleue on God, that rayesd vp from the deed, and hath gened him the glory, that ye might haue faith in hope in God: Euen ye which haue purfyed youre soules in obey-enge the trueth thorow the sprete, for to louse brotherly without faynyng, a ferently one louse another with a pure hert, as they that are borne a new, not of corruptible sede, but of vnкорruptible, euen by the lyuynge worde of God, which endureth for euer. For all flesh is as grasse, and all the glory of man is as the floure of grasse. The grasse withereoth, the floure falleth awaye, but the worde of the LORDE endureth for euer. This is the worde, that is preached amonge you.
WHEREFORE laye asyde all maliciousnes and all gyle, and yppocryse, and enviye, and all bacyntyng, a as new borne babes desyre that reasonable mylke, which is without corruption, that ye maye growe therin, ye so be that ye haue taistaw how frendly the LORDE is. Vnto whom ye are come, a as to the lyuynge stone, which is disallowed of men, but chosen of God and precious. And ye also as lyuynge stones are made a spirituall house, and an holy presthode, to offre vp spirituall sacrifices, acceptable vnto God by Jesus Christ. Wherefore it is conteyned in the scripture: ¶ Beholde, I put in Sion an heade corner stone, electe a precious, and he that beleueth on him, shall not be c有效期. Vnto you therfore which beleueth, he is precious: but vnto them that beleueth not, is ʃ same stone which the ʃ buylde res refused, made the heade stone in the corner,  and a stone to stomebl at, and a rock to be offended at, namely in thee which stomebl at ʃ worde, and beleueth not that wheron they were set.

 But ye are that chosen generation, that kyngly presthode, that holy nacion, that peculier people, ʃ ye shulde shewe the vertues of him, which hath called you out of darknesse in to his maruells lighte: ʃ ʃ ʃ Een you which in tyme past were not a people, but now are the people of God: which were not vnder mercy, but now haue optayned mercy.

Dearly beloved, I beseeke you as strangers and Pilgrims, ʃ ʃ absteyne fro the fleshly lustes, which lyghte against the soule, and lede an honest conversacion amonge the Heythen, ¶ that they which bacynte you as euell doers, maye se youre good worke, and prayse God in the daye of visitacion.

 Submitte youre selues vnto all maner ordinance of men for the LORDES sake: whether it be vnto the kynge as vnto ʃ chefe heade, or vnto rules, as vnto them that are sent of him, for the punishment of euell doers, but for the pryse of the that do well. For so is the will of God, that ye with well doyne shulde put to sylence the ignoraunce of falsemen: as fre, and not as haunge the libertye for a cloue of wickednes, but euell as the seruauntes of God. Honoure all men. Looke brotherly fellishippe. Fear God. ¶ ¶ ¶ Honoure the kynge.

 Ye seruauntes, obey youre masters with all feare: not onely ye they be good and courteous, but also though they be frowarde. For that is grace, ʃ a man for conscience towarde God endure grete, and suffre wronge. For what prayse is it, ye what ye be buffering for youre fautes, ye take it paciently? ʃ ¶ But ye whan ye do well, ye suffre wronge, and take it paciently, that is grace with God. For here vnto are ye called, for so much as Christ also suffred for vs, leauynge vs an ʃ ʃ ʃ ensample, that ye shulde folowe his fotesteppes, which dyd no synne, nether was there gyle founde in his mouth: §§ §§ which when he was reuyled, reuyled not agayne: wha he suffred, he threatened not: but commytted the cause vnto him, that judgeth righteously: ¶¶¶ which his owne selfe bareoure synnes in his body vpon the tre, that we shulde be deluyed from synne, a shulde lyne vnto righteouenes: by whose stresys ye were headed.¶¶¶ For ye were as shepe goinge astraye, but now are ye turned vnto the shepheard and Bisshoppe of youre soules.
But in conclusion be ye all of one mynde, one suffer with another, louse as brethren, be pitefull, be curteous. + Recopence not euell for euell, nether rebuke for rebuke: but contrary wyse, blesse: and knowe that ye are called theerto, euen þ ye shulde be heyers of þ blessinge. + For who so listeth to lyue, and woldeayne se good dayes, Let hym re-frayne his tonge from euell, and his lippes þ they speake no gyle. Let him esche euell, þ do good: Let him seke peace and ensue it. For þ eyes of the LORDE are over the righteous, þ his cares are open vtnto their prayers. But þ face of the LORDE beholdeth þ do euell. And who is it that can harme you, yf ye folowe that which is good? Notwithstandinge þ blessed are ye, yf ye suffer for righteousnes sake. + Feare not ye their threatnyng, nether be troubled, but sanctifie the LORDE God in youre hertes. Be ready allwayes to geue an answere to euery mā, that axeth you a reason of the hope that is in you, and that with mekenes þ feare, hauynge a good conscience, + that they which bace you as euell doers, maye be asheamed, that they haue falsely accused youre good censure in Christ.

For it is beter (yf the wyll of God be so) that ye suffer for well doyng, thē for euell doyng. For as moch as Christ hath once suffered for oure synnes, þ just for the vniust, for to brynge vs to God: þ was slayne after the flesh, but quyckened after the sprete.

In the which sprete he also wente, and preached vnto þ spretes that were in preson, which in tyme past beleued not, when God once a bode and suffered paciètly in the tyme of Noe, whyle the Arke was a preparynge: §§ Wherin fewe (that is to saye eight soules) were saued by water. Which signifieth þ baptyme þ now saueth vs: not þ puttinge awaye of the fyth of the flesh, but in þ a good conscīce cōsenteth vnto God by þ resurrection of Jesus Christ, which is on the righte hande of God, and is gone in to heave, angels, power and mighte subdued vnto hym.

The first Epistle of S. Peter.
Chap. iii.

For as moch then as Christ hath suffred for vs in þ flesh, arme youre selues likewise with the same mynde. ++ For he which suffreth in the flesh, ceaseth fro synne, þ hence forth (as moch tyme as yet remayneth in þ flesh) he shulde not lyue after the lustes of me, but after the wil of God. For it is ynough, þ we haue spent þ tyme past of the life, after the will of þ Heythen, whā we walked in wantanesse, lustes, dronkēnes, gloroty, ryotous drynknyng, þ abominable Idolatrye. And it semeth to þē a straunge thinge, þ ye rumne not also with them vnto the same exesse of ryote, þ speake euell of you. (Which shal geue acōptes vnto hi þ is ready to judge þ yquycke þ þ deed.) For vnto this purpose also was þ Gospell preached vnto the deed, þ they shulde be judged like other me þ þ flesh, but shulde lyue vnto God in þ sprete. The ende of all thinges is at hāde.

+++ Be ye therfore sober þ watche vnto prayers: but aboue all thinges haue feruent loue amonge you one to another. +++ For loue couereth the multitude of synnes. Be ye herberous one to another without grudginge, þ mynistre one to another, euerie one with the gift þ he hath receaued, as good stewardes of the manifolde grace of God. +++ Yf eny mā speake, let hi speake it as þ words of God. +++ Yf eny man have an office, let him execute it as out of the power þ God mynistrē vnto hi, þ God maye be praysed in all thinges thowr Jesus Christ, To whō be honoure and domynion for euer and euer Amen.

Derely beloved, maruell not at this heate (which is come amōge you to trye you) as though some straunge thinge happened vnto you: but reioyce, in as moch as ye are partakers of Christes passiō, þ whā his glory appeareth, ye maye be meri þ glad. +++ Yf ye be reuyled for þ name of Christ, blessed are ye, for þ sprete (which is þ sprete of glory þ of God) resteth vpon you. On their parte he is euell spoken of, but on youre parte he is praysed.

+++ But se that none of you suffre as a murthurer, or as a thefe, or as an euell doer, or as a busy body in other mens matters. Yf
The second Epistle of the Apostle S. Peter.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

For so much as the power of God hath geuen them all thinges pertayninge vnto life, he exhorte the to flye the corrupcion of worldly lust, to make their callyng seare with good workes and frutes of faith. He make th mention of his owne death, declaringe the LORDE Jesus to be the true sonne of God, as he himself hath sene vpon the mount.

Chap. II.

He prophecieth of false teachers, and sheweth their punyshment.

Chap. III.

He exhorte men to beware of such as wolde make the beleue, that the daye of the LORDE were slacke in commynge: prayeth them to lede a godlye life, and to seke verlye for the commynge of the LORDE, whose lorge tarienge is saluation, and because he wolde haue no man lost, but wolde receaue all me to repentance.
For we folowed not deceaueable fables, when we declared vnto you the power and commyng of oure LORDE Jesus Christ:
but with oure eyes we saw his maieste, when he receaued of God the father honour e prayse, by a voyce that came vnto him from the excellent glory, after this maner: §This is my deare sonne, in whom I haue deleyte, And this voyce herde we broughte downe fro heaven, when we were with him on the holy mount.

We haue also a sure worde of prophecie, and ye do well that ye take hede therunto, as vnto a lighte § that shyneth in a darke place vntyl the daye dawned, and the daye starre arye in youre hertes. And this shal ye knowe first, that no prophecie in the scripture is done of eny priuate interpretacion.
§ For the prophecie was neuer broughte by the wyll of man, but the holy men of God spake, as they were moued of y holy goost.

The 5. Chapter.

But there were false propheteis also amonge the people,  euen as there shalbe false teachers amonge you likewyse, which preuеly shal bryngye in damnable sectes, euen denyenge the LORDE that hath boughte them, and shal bryngye vpon them selues swift damnacion: and mш many shal folowe their damnable wayes, by whо the waye of the trueth shal be euell spoked of: and thorow cuytousnes shal they with fayned wordes make marchaudisise of you, vpо whо the judgement is not necligef in tarienge of olde, and their damnacion slepeth not.

§§ For vpо God spared not the angels that synned, but cast them downe with the cheynes of darknes in to hell, and deluyerete the ouer to be kepe vnto judgement: §§ Nether spared the olde worlde, but saued Noe the preacher of righteousnes himselfe brynge vpо eight, and broughte the floude vpо the worlde of the vngodly: §§And turned the cities of Sodom and Gomor in to azshes, ouerthre them, damned them, and made on them an en-samle, vnto those that after shulde lyue vngodly: And deluyerete Just Loth which was vexed with the vngodly conversacion of y wicked. For in so much as he was righteous

+ Grace and peace be multiplied with you thorow the knowlege of God and of Jesus Christ oure LORDE.

For so much as his godly power hath geuen vs all thinges (that pertaine vnto life and godlynes) thorow the knowlege of him that hath called us by his owne glorie and power, wherby the excellent and most greate promises are geue vnto vs: namely, that ye by the same shulde be partakers of the godly nature, yf ye fye the corrupte lust of the worlde: Geue ye al youre diligence therefore here vnto, and in youre faith mynister vertue: in vertue, knowlege: in knowlege, temperancy: in temperancy, pacience: in pacience, godlynes: in godlynes, brotherly loue: in brotherly loue, generall loue. For yf these things be plenteous in you, they will not let you be ydle nor vnfrutefull in y knowlege of oure LORDE Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these thinges, is blynde, a gropeth for the waye with the hate, and hath forgotten, that he was clenst from his olde syymes.

Wherfore (brethren) geue the more diligence to make youre callynge and eleccion sure: for yf ye do soch thinges, ye shal not fall, and by this meanes shal there be plenteously mynistrde vnto you an entyringe in vnto y euerlastinge kyngdome of oure LORDE and Sauioire Jesus Christ.

Therfore wil I not be necliget to put you allwayes in remembrance of soch thinges: though ye knowe them youre selues, and be established in the present trueth. Notwithstandinge I thinke it mete, as lоge as I am in this tabernacle, to store you vp by puttinge you in remembrance. For I am sure, that I must shortly put of my tabernacle, euen as oure LORDE Jesus Christ hath shewed vnto me. Yet wyl I do my diligene, that allwaye after my departyng ye maye haue wherewith to kepe these thinges in remembrance.

and dwelt amonge them, so that he must nedes se it and heare it, his righteous soule was greued from to daye to daye with their vpaulfull dedes. * The LORDE knoweth how to delyuer the godly out of tentacion, and how to reserve the vnjust vnto the daye of judgment for to be punyshed: but specially them that walke after the flesh in § lust of vnclenness, and despaye the rulers: beyng presumptuous, stubborne, and feare not to speake euell of the § are in auctorite † wha the angels yet which are greater both in power and might, beare not that blasphemous judgment agaynst them of the LORDE. † But these are as § brute beastes, which naturally are forthrowe to be taka and destroyed: § speaking euell of the they knowe not, and shal persisse in their owne destrucion, and so receaue § rewards of vnrightheousnes.

They counte it pleasure to lyue deliciously for a season: Spottes are they and fylthynes: lyuyng at pleasure and in disceauable wayes: feastynge with that which is youres, hauynge eyes full of aduotrye, and ç not cease from synne, entysinge vnstable soules: hauynge an hert exercysed with couetousness: they are cursed children, and haue forsaken the righte waye, and are gone astraye: folowinge the waye of ¶ Balaam the some of Bosor, which loued the rewarde of vnrightheousnes: but was rebuked of his inquitye. The tame and domme beast spake with más voyce, ç forbade the foolishnes of § prophet.

These are welles without water, ç § cloudes caried aboute of a tépest: to whoso § myst of darknesse is reserved for euer. For they speake § proude worde of vanite, vnto § vttmost, and entysing thorow wantannes vnto § luste of the flesh, euen them that were cleane escaped, and now walke in errore: and promise them libertie, where as they ther selues are seruantes off corrupcion.  For whom so euer a man is overcome, vnto the same is he in bondage. †† For yf they (after they have escaped from the fylthynes of the worlde, thorow the knowlege of § LORDE and Sauioyre Iesus Christ) are yet tangled agayne therin and overcomen," then is the latter ende worse vnto them then the begynnyng. For it had bene better for them, not to haue knowne the waye of rightheousnes, then after they haue knowne it, §§ to turne from the holy commaundement, that was genen vnto them. It is happened vnto them acordynge vnto the true proverbe: ¶¶ § dogg is turned to his vomyte agayne: and § sowe that was waszhed, vnto hir walowynge in the myre.

The 111. Chapter.

THIS is the seconde Epistle that I now wryte vnto you (ye dearly beloued) wherein I stere vp and warne youre pure mynde, that ye maye remembere the worde, which were tolde before of the holy prophets: and also the commaundement of vs, that be the Apostles of the LORDE and Sainioure.

This first vnderstonde, §§ that in the last dayes there shall come mockers, which will walke after their awne lustes, a saye: Where is the promes of his commynge? For sence the fathers fell on slepe, euery thinge contynmuth as it was from the begynnyng of § creature. This they knowe not (and that wyfully) how that the heauens were afore tyme also, and the earth out of the water, a was in the water by the worde of God, †† yet was the worlde at that tyme destroyed by the same with the floude. But the heauens which are yet, and § earth, are keppe in store by his worde, to be reserved †† vnto fyre agaynst the daye of judgment and damnacion of vngodly men.

Dearly beloued, be not ignoraunt of this one thinge, §§§ how that one daye is with the LORDE as a thousande yeare: and a thousande yeare as one daye. The LORDE is not slacke to fulfyll his promes (as some me counte slacknesse) but is ††† paciët to vs warde, ††† and wyly not that eny ma shulde be lost, but that every man shulde amende himselfe. Neuertheles * the daye of the LORDE shall come euene as a thefe in the nighte: in the which (daye) the heauens shall persise with a greate noyse, and the Elements shall melt with heate, and the earth and § workes that are therin, shall burne.

 Eze. 12. d. ††† Gen. 7. d. †††† 2 Tess. 1. b.

†††† Eze. 18. d. †††† Mat. 24. d. 1 Tess. 5. a.
Apec. 3. a.
Yf all these thinges shal perishe, what manner persons then ought ye to be in holy couersacion and godlynes, lokynge for and hastynge vnto the commynge of the LORDE? In the which the heauens shal perishe with fyre, and the clementes shal melt with heate. Neuertheles * we looke for a new heauen and a new earth (acordynge to his promes) wherein dwelleth righteousnes.

Wherfore dearly beloued, seynge that ye looke for soch thinges, be diligent, ye ye maye be founde before him in peace without spot and vndefyled: and counte the longsufferinge ofoure LORDE youre saluacion, Euen as ourde dearly beloued brother Paul (acordinge to the wyssdome genē vnto him) wrote vnto you: yee speakinge therof almost in all Epistles, wherin are many thinges harde to be vnderstonde, which they that are vnlerned and vnstable, peruerste, as they do the other scriptures also, to their awne danacion.

Ye therefore beloued, seynge ye knowe it before hande, beware, lest ye also be plucte awaye thorow the erreoure of y wicked, and fall from youre owne stedfastnes. But growe in grace, and in the knowlege of oure LORDE and Saniuore Iesus Christ. To him be prayse now and for euer, Amen.

Chap. ii.

Two little children, these things wryte I vnto you, that ye shulde not synne: and ye eny man synne, we haue an aduocate with the father, euven Jesus Christ which is righteous:

He that sayeth, I knowe him, and kepeth not his commaundemētes, is a lyar and the trueth is not in him. But who so kepeth his worde, in him is the loue of God perfecte in dede.

Brethren, wryte no new commaundement vnto you, but that olde commaundement, which ye haue herde from the begynnynge. The olde commaundement is the worde, which ye haue herde from the begynnynge. Agayne, the new commaundemēt wryte I vnto you, a thinge that is true in hym also in you: for the darknesse is past, and the true lighte now shyneth.

He that sayeth he is in lighte, and hateth his brother, is yet in darknesse. He lyeth his brother, abydeth in the lighte, and there is none occasion of euell in hym. But he that hateth his brother, is in darknes, and walketh in darknesse, and can not tell whither he goeth, for the darknesse hath blynded his eyes.

Babies, I wryte vnto you, that youre synnes are forgenue you for his names sake. I wryte vnto you fathers, how that ye haue knowne him which is from begynnynge.

I wryte vnto you yonge me, how that ye haue ouercome the wicked. I wryte vnto you litle children, how that ye haue knowne the father. I haue wrytten vnto you fathers, how that ye haue knowne him, which is frō the begynnynge. I haue wrytten vnto you yonge men, how that ye are stronge, and the worde of God abydeth in you, and ye haue ouercome that wicked.

Se that ye loue not the worlde, nether thinges that are in the worlde. Yf eny man loue the worlde, the loue of the father is not in hym: for all that is in the worlde (namely the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pryde of life) is not of the father, but of the worlde. And the world passeth awaye and the lust therof. But he that fulfylleth the myll of God, abydeth for euer.

Little children, it is the last houre, and (as ye haue herde that || Antechrist shal come) euon now are there many become Antechristes allready: wherby we knowe, that it is the last houre. They wente out || frō vs, but they were not of vs: for yf they had bene of vs, they wolde no doute haue contynued with vs. But that they maye be knowne, how that they are not all of vs.

But ye haue the |||| anoyntinge of hym is holy, and ye knowe all thinges. I haue not wrytten vnto you, as though ye knewe not trueth but ye knowe it, ye are sure, ye lye not. Who is a lyar, but he that denyeth Jesus is Christ? The same is Antichrist, denyeth the father and his sonne. Whosoeuer denyeth the sonne, the same hath not the father. Loke what ye haue herde now from begynnynge, let the same abyde in you. Yf ye which he herde from the begynnynge shall remayne in you, then shal ye also abyde in hym and in the father. And this is the promes ye hath promysed vs, euene eternall life.

This haue I wryttē vnto you cocerninge the that disseae you. And the anoyntinge which ye haue receaued of hym, dwelleth in you: ye nede not eny ma teach you, but as the anoyntinge teacheu you all thinges, euene so is it true, ye is no lye. And as it hath taughte you, euene so abide ye therin. And now babies, abyde in hit, why what he shal appeare, we maye be bolde, a not to be made ashamed of him at his commynge. Ye ye knowe ye he is righteous, knowe also that he which doth righteousnes, is borne of him.

The iiij. Chapt.

BEHOLDE what loue the father hath shewed on vs, ye we shulde be called the childre of God. Therfore ye worlde knoweth you not, because it knoweth not him. Dearly beloved, we are now ye childre of God, and yet hath it not appeared what we shalbe. But we knowe ye when he shal appeare, we shal be like him: for we shal se him as he is. And euery man ye hath this hope in him, pourgeth him selfe, cuen as he is pure. Who so euer comytteth synne, comytteth vnrighteousnes also, and synne is vnrighteousnes. And ye knowe that he appeare to take awaye oure synnes: and in him is no synne. Who so euer abydeth in him, synneth not: who soeuer synneth, hath not sene him nether knowe him.

Babes, let no man discease you. He that doeth righteousnes, euene as he is righteous. He that comytteth synne, is of the deuell: ye for the deuell synneth sence ye beginnynge. For this purpose appeare the sonne of God, to loue the workes of the deuell. || Who so euer is borne of God, synneth not: for his ye sedemayneth in him, he e ca not synne, because he is borne of God.  By this are the children of God knowe ye the children of the deuell. Who so euer doeth not righteousnes, is not of God, nether he that loueth not his brother.

For this is the tydinges which ye haue herde from the begynnynge, that ye shulde loue one another,  not as Cain, which was of the wicked, and swele his brother. And wherfore swele he him? cuen because his awne workes were euell, and his brothers righteous.  Maruayle not (my brethren) though the worlde hate you. We knowe ye we are traslated from death vnto life, because we loue the brethren. He that loueth not his brother, abydeth in death. §§ Who soeuer hateth his brother, is a manslayer. And ye knowe that a manslayer hath not eternall life abydinge in him.

Hereby haue we perceaued loue, that he ganne his life for vs, and therfore ought we also to geue oure lyues for the brethre. But he ye hath this worldes good, a seyth his brother haue rede, and shutte vp his hert fro him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? My little children, let ye not loue with worde nether with tongue, but with ye dede, and with the truth. Hereby knowe we, that we are of the verite, and can quyete oure hertes before him. But ye oure hert condemn vs, God is greater the oure hert, and knoweth all things. Dearly beloved, ye oure hert condemn vs not, then haue we a fre boldnes to God warde. §§ And what so euer we axe, we shal receaue it: because we kepe his comauendemes, and do those things, which are pleasant in his sighte.

And this is his comauendement, that we belene on ye name of his sonne Jesus Christ, and loue one another,  as he gane comauendement. And he that kepeth his comauendementes, dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby knowe we that he abydeth in vs, euene by the sprete which he hath geuen vs.

The iiiij. Chapter.

DEARLY beloved, beleue not ye every sprete, ‡‡ but proewe the spretes, whether they be of God. For many false prohetes are gone out in to the worlde. Hereby shal ye knowe the sprete of God: Every sprete which confesseth, that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God: And every sprete which confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not off God. And this is that sprete of Antechrist, off whom ye haue herde, how that he shal come, and euene now allready is he in the worlde. Little children, ye are off God, and haue overcome them: for greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the worlde. They are off the worlde, therfore speake they off the worlde, and the worlde herkeneth vnto them. We are of God, §§ and he that knoweth God, herkeneth vnto vs: he that is not of God, heareth vs not. Hereby knowe we the sprete of trueth, and ye sprete of errore.

DEARLY beloved, let vs loue one another, § for loue commeth of God. And euery one ye loueth, is borne of God, and knoweth God. He that loueth not, knoweth not God: for

Chap. v.

God is love. *By this appeared the love of God to us, that we mighte lyue and breake the lawe of sinne. But that we loved God, we knewe that we loved him that sent the sonne to make aonmendment for our synnes.

Dearly beloved, ye God so loved vs, we oughte also to love one another. +No man hath sene God at any tyme. Ye, for we love one another, God dwelleth in vs, and his love is perfecte in vs. Hereby knowe we that we dwell in him, and he in vs, because he hath geuen vs of his sprete. And we haue sene,+ testifye that the father sent the sonne to be the Saviour of the worlde. Whosoever now confesseth that Jesus is the sonne of God in him dweloth God, and he in God: and we haue knowne and believed the love that God hath to vs.

God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. Herein is the love perfecte in vs, that we shulde haue a free boldnesse in the daye of judgment: for as he is, euë so are we in this worlde. Fear not in love, but perfecte love casteth out feare: for feare hath paynefullnes. He that feareth, is not perfecte in love.

Let vs love him, for he loved vs first. Yf eny man saye: I love God, yet hateth his brother, he is a lyar. For he that loueth not his brother whom he seyth, how can he love God, whom he seyth not? And this commandement haue of vs, that he which loueth God, shulde loue his brother also.

The 5. Chapter.

W H O so euer belueth that Jesus is Christ, is borne of God. And who soeuer loueth him that begat, loueth him also which was begotten of him. By this we knowe that we loue Gods children, when we loue God, and kepe his commandements. For this is the love of God, that we kepe his commandements, and his commandements are not grievous. For all that is borne of God, ouer commeth the worlde: and this is the victory that ouercommeth the worlde, euë oure faith. Who is it ouercommeth the worlde, but he which belueth that Jesus is the sonne of God?

This is he that cômeth with water and bloude, euë Jesus Christ: not with water onely, but with water and bloude:+ And it is the sprete that beareth wytnesse: for the sprete is the truth. (For there are thre which beare recorde in heauen: the father, the worlde, and the holy goost, + these thre are one.) And there are thre which beare recorde in earth: the sprete, water and bloude, and these thre are one.

Yf we receaue the witnesse of men, the witnesse of God is greater: for this is the wytnesse of God, which he testified of his sonne. §§ He that belueth on ye sonne of God, hath the wytnes in himselfe. He that belueth not God, hath made him a lyar. And this is the recorde, euë ye God hath geuen vs euearlastinge life. ¶ And this life is in his sonne. He that hath the sonne of God, hath life: He that hath not the sonne of God, hath not life.

These things haue I wryttë vs to you, which belueth on the name of the sonne of God, that ye maye knowe, how that ye haue eternall life, and that ye maye belueth on ye name of the sonne of God. And this is the free boldnesse which we haue towards him, that yf we axe eny thinge acordinge to his will, he heareth vs. And yf we knowe that he heareth vs what so euere we axe, then are we sure that we haue ye peticions, which we haue desired of him.

Yf eny man se his brother syonne a synne not vnfoe death, let him axe, and he shall geue him life, for the ye synne not vnfoe death. There is a +synne vnfoe death, for the which saye I not that a man shulde praye. All vnrighteousnes is synne, and there is synne not vnfoe death.

We knowe, that whosoner is borne off God, hisneth not: but he that is begottë of God, kepeth himselfe, a wickèd touched him not. We knowe that we are of God, a the worlde is set altogether on wickednes. But we knowe, that the sonne of God is come, and hath geuen vs a mynde, to knowe him which is true: and we are in him ye is true, in his sonne Iesus Christ. This is the true God, and euearlastinge life. Babes kepe youre selues from ymage. Amen.

The second Epistle of S. John.

The summe of this epistle.
He wryteth vnto a certayne lady, reioyseth that her children walke in the trueth, exhorteth the vnto loue, warneth them to beware of soch disseuers as denye that Iesus Christ came in the flesh, prayeth them to continue in the doctrine of Christ, and to haue nothinge to do with them that bringe not this lernynge.

THE Elder. To ye electe lady and hir childe whom I loue in the trueth: not I onely, but all they also that haue knowe the trueth, for the truethes sake which dwelleth in vs, and shalbe with vs for euer.

Grace, mercy, and peace be with you fro the LORDE Iesus Christ ye sonne of the father in the trueth and in loue.

I am greatly reioysed, that I haue founde amongst thy children, them that walke in the trueth, as we haue receaued a commaundement of the father. And now lady I beseeke the (not as though I wrote a new commaundement vnto the, but the same which we haue had from the begynnynge) that we loue one another. And this is the loue, that we walke after his commaundementes.

This is the commaundement (as ye haue herde fro the begynnynge) that we shulde walke therin. * For many disseuers are come in to the worlde, which conffesse not ye Iesus Christ is come in the flesh: this is a disseauer and an Antechrist. Take hede to your seluus, that we lose not that which we haue wrought, but that we maye receaue a full rewarde. Who so euer transgresseth, and abydeth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God: he that abydeth in the doctrine of Christ, hath both the father and the sonne.

*Ye eny man come vnto you, and brynge not this doctrine, receaue him not in to the house, nether salute him: for he that saluteth him, is partaker of his euell dedes. I had many things to wryte vnto you: neuertheles I wolde not wryte with papyre and ygne, but I trust to come vnto you, and to speake with you mouth mouth, that our ioye maye be full. The children of thy electe sister salute the. Amen.

The third Epistle of S. John.

The summe of this epistle.
He is glad of Gaius, that he walketh in the trueth: exhorteth him to be louynge vnto the poore christen in their persecucion, sheweth the vnkynde deuylynge of Diotrephes, and the good reporte of Demetrius.

THE Elder. To the beloved Gaius, whom I loue in the trueth. My beloved, * thou doest faithfully what so euer thou doest to the brethren and to straunders, which haue borne wittnesse of thy lone before the congregacion: and thou hast done well that thou dyddest brynge them forwarde on their iourny, worthely before God. For because of his names sake they wente forth, and toke nothinge of the Heythen. We therfore oughte to receaue soch, that we mighte be helpers vnto the trueth.

I wrote to the congregacion, but Diotreps

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I. How God dealt louyngly with thē of the olde tyme in sendyng hem his prophetes, but moch more mercy hath he shewed vs in that he sent vs his owne sonne. Of the most excellent glory of Jesus Christ, which in all thinges is like to his father.

Chap. II. He exherteth vs to be obedient vnto the new lawe which Christ hath geuen vs and not to be offended at the infrimite and lowe degre of Christ: q why? it was necessary that for oure sakes he shulde take soch an humble state vpon him, that he might be like vnto his brethren.

Chap. III. He requyreteth vs to be obedient vnto the worde of Christ, which is more worthy then Moses.
The punyshment of soch as wyll nedes harden their hertes.

Chap. IV. The Sabbath or rest of the Christen. Punysh-ment of vnbeleuers. The nature of the worde of God.

Chap. V. Christ is oure hē prest, the seate of grace, and more excellent then the hē prestes of the olde lawe.

Chap. VI. He goeth forth with the thēge that he beganne in the latter ende of the fyʃt chapter, and exhorteth them not to faẏnt, but to be stedfast and pacient: for so much as God is sure in his promesse.

Chap. VII. He cōpareth the presthode of Christ vnto Melchisedech, but to be farre more excellent.

Chap. VIII. The office of Christ is more worthy then the prestes office of the olde lawe, which was vnperfecte, and therfore abrogate.

Chap. IX. The profit and worthynesse of the olde Testament, and how farre the new excelleth it.

Chap. X. The olde lawe had no power to clēse awaye synne, but Christ dyd it with offerynge vp his body once for all. An exhortacion to receaue this goodnesse of God thakestfully with pacience and stedfast faith.

Chap. XI. What faith is, and a commedacion of the same.
The stedfast beleue of the fathers in olde tyme.

Chap. XII. An exhortacion to bee pacient and stedfast in trouble and aduersite, vpon hope of everlast-inge rewarde. A commedacion of the new Testament abone the olde.

Chap. XIII. He exherteth vs vnto loue, to hospitallte, to thinke vpon soch as be in aduersite, to manteyne wedlocke, to avoyde cavetousnesse, to make moch of thē that preach Gods worde, to bewarre of straunge lernynge, to be content to suffre rebuke with Christ, to be thankfull
vnto God, and obedient vnto oure heads.
The first Chapter.

God in tyme past dyuersly s many wayes, spake vnto thy father by prophete, but in these last dayes he hath spoken vnto vs by his sonne, * whom he hath made heyre of all thinges, by whom also he made the worlde.

† Which (sonne) beyng the brightnes of his glory, a the very ymage of his substaunce, bearing vp all thinges with the worde of his power; hath in his owne persone poundred oure synnes, and is set on the righte hande of the majestie on hye: beyng euë as much more excellente angels, as he hath optayned a more excellente name then they.

For vnto which of the angels sayde he at any tyme: ‡ Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the? And agayne: Ⅰ I will be his father, Ⅱ he shalbe my sonne: And agayne, wha he bryngeth in the firste begotten sonne in to the worlde, he sayeth:  And all the angels of God shal worshippe him. Ⅱ And of the angels he sayeth: He maketh his angels spretes, Ⅲ his mynthesis flaumes of fyre. But vnto thy sonne he sayeth: †† God, thy seate endureth for euer Ⅰ euer: the cephter of thy kyngdome is a righte cepter. Thou hast loued righteounes, Ⅱ hated iniquyte: wherfore God (which is thy God) hath anointed the with the oyle of gladnesse aboven hye feloewes. †† And thou LORDE in Ⅱ begynnyinge hast layed the foundation of the earth, and Ⅲ heaues are the workes of thy handes, Ⅳ they shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shal waxe olde as doth a garnet, and as a vesture shalt thou chauenge them, and they shalbe chauenge. But thou art Ⅰ same, and thy yereas shal not fayle. Vnto which of the angels sayde he at any tyme: †† Syt thou on my righte hinde, till I make thyne enemies thy foule stole? Are they not all mynistrynge spretes, sent to mynister for their sake, which shalbe heyres of saluacion?

The iij. Chapter.

Wherefore we ought to geue the more hade vnto the thinges which we haue herde, lest we perishe. For Ⅰ the worde which was spoke by angels, was stedfast, and every transgression and dishobedience received a just recompence of reward, how shal we escape, Ⅱ we despysse so grea.te a saluacion: which †† after that it beganne to be preached by the LORDE himselfe,  was confirmed vpon vs, by them that herde it, God bearynge witnesse thereof, with tokens, wonders and dyuere poweres, and gifts of the holy goost acordinge to his awne wyll.

For vnto the angels hath he not subdued the worlde to come, whereof we speake. But one in a certayne place witnesseth Ⅰ sayeth: ††† What is man, that thou art myndefull of him? or the sonne of man, that thou vystest him? After thou haddest for a little season made him lower the Ⅰ angels, thou crownedst him with honour and glory, and hast set him above the workes of thy handes. Thou hast put all thinges in subieccion vnder his fete, †† In that he subdued all thinges vnto him, he lefte no thinge that is not put vnder him. Neuerthelesse now se we not all thinges yet subdued vnto him. But him, which for a little season was made lesse then the angels, we se that it is Jesus: which is ††† crowned with honour and glory for the sufferynge of death, that he by the grace of God, shulde taist of death for all men. For it became him, for whom are all thinges, and by whom are all thinges (after Ⅰ he had broughte many children vnto glory) that he shulde make the LORDE of their saluacion perfecte thorow sufferynge, for so moch as they all come of one, both he that sanctifieth, Ⅰ they which are sanctified.

For the which causeth sake, he is not ashamed to call them brethren, sayenge: Ⅳ I will declare thy name vnto my brethren, and in the mydes of the congregacion wil I praise the. And agayne: ††† I wyll put my trust in him. And agayne: Ⅳ beholde, here am I and my children, which God hath geuen me.

For as mouch then as the children haue flesh and bloude, ††† he also himselfe likewyse toke parte with them, ††† he thorow death, mighte take awaye the power of him, which had lordshippe ouer death, that is to saye, Ⅱ deuell: Ⅰ that he mighte deluyer the which thorow feare of death were all their life tyme in dauger of bodeage. For he in no place taketh on him the angels, but Ⅰ sede of Abraham taketh he on him. Wherefore in all things it became him to be made like vnto his brethren, that he mighte be mercifull and a faithfull hye prest in thinges concernynge God, to make agrement for the synnes of † people. † For in that he himselfe suffered and was tempted, he is able toucker them that are tempted.

Wherefore, as ‡ holy goost sayeth: ‡ Todaye ye shall heare his voyce, harden not youre hertes, ‡ as in the prouokynke in the daye of temptacion in the wyldernes, where youre fathers tempted me, proued me, and sawe my worke vnto yere longe. Wherefore I was greued with that generation, and sayde: They erre euuer in their hertes. But they knewe not my ways, so that I sware in my wrath, that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

Take hede brethren, that there be not in eny of you an euell hert of vnbelieue, to departe from the lyuyng God: but exhorte youre selues daylie, whyte it is called to daye, lest eny of you wake harde harted thorow ‡ disseatfulness of synne. For we are become partakers of Christ, ‡ as we kepe sure vnto ‡ ende the begynnynge of the substace, solong as it is sayde: Todaye, ye ye shall heare his voyce, harde not youre hertes, as in the procucacio. For some whan they herde, pronouked. Howbeit not all they ‡ came out of Egipte by Moses. But with whom was he displeased fourte yeares longe? Was he not displeased with them ‡ synned, whose carcasses were ouerthrown in ‡ wyldernesse? ‡ To whom say he, ‡ they shulde not enter in to his rest, but vnto ‡ beleued not? And we se ‡ they coulde not enter in because of vnbelieue.

Wherefore, (as ‡ holy goost sayeth: ‡ Todaye ye shall heare his voyce, harden not youre hertes, ‡ as in the prouokynke in the daye of temptacion in the wyldernes, where youre fathers tempted me, proued me, and sawe my worke fortye yeares longe. Wherefore I was greued with that generation, and sayde: They erre euuer in their hertes. But they knewe not my ways, so that I sware in my wrath, that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

Take hede brethren, that there be not in eny of you an euell hert of vnbelieue, to departe from the lyuyng God: but exhorte youre selues daylie, whyte it is called to daye, lest eny of you wake harde harted thorow ‡ disseatfulness of synne. For we are become partakers of Christ, ‡ as we kepe sure vnto ‡ ende the begynnynge of the substace, solong as it is sayde: Todaye, ye ye shall heare his voyce, harde not youre hertes, as in the procucacio. For some whan they herde, pronouked. Howbeit not all they ‡ came out of Egipte by Moses. But with whom was he displeased fourte yeares longe? Was he not displeased with them ‡ synned, whose carcasses were ouerthrown in ‡ wyldernesse? ‡ To whom say he, ‡ they shulde not enter in to his rest, but vnto ‡ beleued not? And we se ‡ they coulde not enter in because of vnbelieue.

Let vs make haist therefor to enter in to that rest, lest eny man fall after the same ensample of vnbelieue. For ‡ worde of God is quycke, and mightie in operacion, and sharper thence two edged swerde, and ‡ entreh thorow, euuen to the deuydinge of the soule ‡ the sprete, and of ‡ ioyntes ‡ the mary, and is a judger of the thoughtes ‡ intetes of the hert, nether is there eny creature invisible in ‡ sighte of him. But all things are naked ‡ bare vnto ‡ eyes of hi of who we speake.
The 6. Chapter.

SEYNGE then that we haue a greate hye prest, euë Iesus y soune of God, which is entred in to heauen, let vs holde oure profession. For we haue not an hye prest which ca not haue copassion on oure infrimities, but was in all pouyntes tæpted, like as we are, but * without syrne. Let vs theryfore go boldely vnto the *scate of grace that we maye receaue mercy, and fynde grace to helpe in the tyme of need.

For every hye prest that is taken frõ amõge men, is ordeyned for men in thinges pertaynynge to God, † to offer giftes and sacrifices for syne: which can haue copassion on the ignoraunt, and on them that are out of the waye, for so much as he himselfe also is composed aboute with infrimyte. Therefere is he bounde to offer for synnes, as well for hime selfe as for y people. And nomâ taketh y honoure vnto himselfe, but he that is called of God, § as was Aaron.

Euen so Christ glorified not himselfe to be made hye prest, but he y sayde vnto him: †† Thou art my soune, this daye haue I begotten the. As he sayeth also in another place: † Thou art a prest for euer after y order of Melchisedech.  And in y days of his fleshe, he offred vp prayers σ supplicacions, with strõge cryenge σ teares vnto him y was able to saue him frõ death: γ was herde also, because he had God in honoure. †† And though he was Gods soune, yet lerned he obedience, by those thinges which he suffred. And he beyng made perfecte, became the cause of euerlastinge saluacio, vnto all the γ obeye him, and is called of God an hye prest after the order of Melchisedech. Whereof we haue many thinges to saye, which are harde to be vertuate, because ye are dull of hearynge. †† For where as concernyng the tymé ye ought to be teachers, yet haue ye nede agayne, y we teach you the first preceptes of the worde of God: and are become such as haue nede of mylke, and not stronge meate. For every one that is fed yet with mylke, is vnexperte in the worde of righteousnes, for he is but a babe. But stronge meate belongeth vnto them y are perfecte, which

The 6i. Chapter.

WERFORE let vs leaue the doctrine a pertaynynge to the begynnyng of a Christen life, and let vs go vnto perfeccon: and now nomore laye y foundation of repentance from deed workes, and of faith towarde God, of baptyme, of doctrine, of layenge on of hîdes, of resurreccion of the deed, σ of eternall judgment. And so wil we do §§ yf God permittye. ‖ For it is not possible, that they which were once lighted, and haue taisted of the heauely gyfte, and are become partakers of the holy goost, € †† haue taisted of y good worde of God, and of the power of the worlde to come, yf they fall awaye (and concernyng them selues crucifye the soume of God afreszhe, and make a mocke off him) that they shulde be renued agayne vnto re- pentance.

For the earth, that drynketh in the ryne, which commeth oft vpon it, and bringeth forth herbes mete for them that dresse it, receaneth blessyng of God: But y grounded that beareth thornes and thistles, is nothing worth, and nye vnto cursyngue: whose ende is to be brent. Neuertheles (ye dearly beloued) we trust to se better of you, and y salvacio is nyer, though we thus speake.  For God is not vnrighteous, that he shulde forget youre worke and laboure of loue, which ye shewed in his name, when ye minystred vnto the sayntes, and yet minyster. Yee and we desyre, that euery one of you shewe the same diligence, to the stablyshinge of hope euene vnto the ende, that ye fynte not, but folowe them which thorow faith and paciécie inheret the promyse. For whan God made promes to Abraham, because he had none greater to sweare by, ††† he sweare by himselfe, and sayde: Surely I wil blesse the and multiplye y in dede. And so he abode paciécly, and op- tayned the promes.

As for men, they sweare by him that is greater then them selues: ††† and the ooth is the ende of all stryfe to confirme the thinge amõge them. But God, wyllinge very abun-dauntly to shewe vnto the heyres of promes the stablenes of his counsell, added an ooth y by two immutable thynge (in the which it is vnpossible y God shulde lye) we mighte have a stronge consolation: euene we, which are fled to holde fast the hope that is set before vs, which (hope) we haue as a sure and stedfast anker of oure soule. Which (hope) also entret h in, in to those thynge that are within y vaile, whither the forerunner is for vs entred in, euæ Iesus, which is made an hye prest for euere after y order of Melchisedech.

The vii. Chapter.

T HIS Melchisedech *kynge of Salem (which beyng prest of the most hye God, met Abraham as he returned agayne from the slaughter of the kynge, † blessed him, vnto whom Abraham also gaue thytes of all the goodes): first is by interpretacion kynge of righteousnes: after that is he kynge of Salem also (that is to saye, kynge of peace) without father, without mother, without kynne, and hath nether begynnynge of dayes, ner ende of life: but is likened vnto the sonne of God, and contynueth a prest for euere.

But consider how greate a man this was, to whom the Patriarke Abraham gaue thytes of the spoyles. ‡ And verely the children of Leui, when they receaued the presthode, haue a commandeament acordynge to the lawe, to take the thytes of the people, that is to saye, of their bretherede, though they also came out of the loynes of Abraham.

But he whose kynred is not counted amoge them, receaued thytes of Abraham and blessed him that had the promes. Now is it so without all naysayenge, that the lesse receaueth blessyng of y better. And here men that dye, receaueth thytes. But there he receaueth thytes, of whom it is wittnesse that he lymeth. And to saye the trueth, Leui himselfe also which receaueth thytes, payed thytes in Abraham: for he was yet in the loynes of his father Abraham, when Melchisedech met him.

Yf now therfore perfecion came by the presthode of the Leuites (for vnder the same (presthode the people receaued the lawe) what nedeth it then furthermore, that another prest shulde ryse after the order of Melchisedech, and not after the order of Aaron?

For yf the presthode be translated, the of necessite must the lawe be translated also. For he of whom these things are spoken is of another trybe, of the which neuer man serued at the altare.

For it is euidet, † that oure LORDE C spronge of the trybe of Iuda, to the which trybe Moses spake nothinge cœcynynge presthode, And it is yet a more euident thinge, yf after the symilitude of Melchisedech there aryste another prest, which is not made after y lawe of the carnall commandeament, but after the power of the endlesse life (* For he testifieth: Thou art a prest for euere after the order of Melchisedech) then the commandeament that wente before, is disanulled, because of his weaknesse, and vnprofitablenes. For the lawe made nothinge perfecte, but was an introducicen of a better hope, by y which hope we drawe yne vnto God. And for this cause is it a better hope, y it was not promised without an ooth. Those prestes were made without an ooth, but this prest with an ooth, by him that sayde vnto him: The LORDE swaxe, and wyl not repente: Thou art a prest for euere after the order of Melchisedech. Thus is Iesus become a stablischer of so much a better Testament.

And amonge them many were made prestes, because they were not sufferd to endure by the reason of death. But this man, because that he endureth euere, hath an enerlasting presthode. Wherfore he is able also euere to saue them, that come vnto God by him: a luyeth euere, || to make intercession for vs.

For it became vs to haue soch an hye prest as is holy, innocent, vndefyled, separate from synners, and made hyer then heauen: which nedeth not daylie (‡ as yonder hye prestes) to offre vp sacrifice first for his awne synnes, and then for the peoples synnes. For that dyd he once for all, when he offered vp him selfe.  For the lawe maketh men prestes which haue infirmitie: but the worde of the ooth, that came sence the lawe, maketh the same prest, which is perfecte for euermore.

The vii. Chapter.

seate of maioritie in heauı̂ : and is a mynister of holy things, and of the true Tabernacle, which God pitched, a not man. For every hye prest is ordered to offre giftes and sacrifices: Wherfore it is of necessite, y this man haue somewhat also to offer. For he were not a prest, yf he were vpone earth, where are prestes y acordynge to the lawe offer giftes (which prestes serue vnto the ensample and shadow of heauı̂lye things, even as the answere of God was geuen vnto Moses, when he was aboute to fynish the Tabernacle: *Take hede (sayde he) that thou make all things acordinge to the patrone shewed the in the mount.) But now hath he optayne a more excellent office, in as much as he is the mediator of a better Testament, which was made for better promyse. For yf that first (Testament) had bene fultes, then shulde no place have bene soughte for the secöde. For in rebukynge the he sayeth: †Beholde, the dayes wyll come (sayeth the LORDE) that I wyly fynish vpő the house of Israel, and vpone the house off Iuda, a new Testament: not as the Testament which I made with their fathers, in that daye when I toke them by the handes, to lede them oute of the loute of Egipte: †for they contynued not in my Testament, and I regarded them not, sayeth the LORDE.

For this is the Testament, that I will make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayeth the LORDE. I wyly geue my lawes in their mynde, and in their hertes wyly I wyte them: ‡And I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall not teach euery maui his neighbourge, and euery man his brother, sayenge: knowe y LORDE, for they shall knowe me from the leaste to the moste of them: for I will be mercifull ouer their vnrighteousnesse: And on their synnes a on their iniquitie wyly I not thynke eny more.

In that he sayeth: A new, he weereth out y olde. Now y which is borne out and waxed olde, is ready to vanishe away.

 The 14. Chapter. **

THAT first Tabernacle verely had ordin- anaunces, and serynynges off God and outwared holy-nesse. ††For there was made a foretabernacle, wherin was y candlisticke, and the table, and the shewe breed: and this is called y Holy. But behynde the seconde vayle was the Tabernacle which is called Holiest of all, which had the golden censor, and the Arke of the Testament ouerlaid rounde aboute with golde, wherein was the golden pot with Manna, and Aarons rodd: that flourished, and the tables of the Testament: Aboue therin were the Cherubins off glory ouershadowyng the Mercyseate: Of which things it is not now to speake per-

††For these things were thus ordeyned, the prestes wente allways in to the first Tabernacle, and execyed y servyce of God, ‡‡But in to the seconde wente the hye prest alone once in the yeare, not without bloude, which he offred for himselfe and for the ignoenus of the people. Wherwith the holy goost this signifeyth, that the IIwaye of holy-nes was not yet opened, whyle as yet the first Tabernacle was stondyng. Which was a symilitude for the tyme then present, in the which were offred giftes and sacrifices, and could not make perfecte (as partaynyng to the conscience) him, that dyd the Gods servyce onely with meates and drynkes, and dyuerse waszhinges, and justifienges of the flesh, which were ordeyned vnto the tyme of reformacion.

But Christ beyng an hye prest of good things to come, came by a greater and a more perfecte ‡‡Tabernacle, not made with handes, that is to seye, not of this maner buyllyng: nether by the bloude of goates or calues: but by his owne bloude entred he once for all in to the holy place, and hath founde eternall redemption. For yff the bloude off oxen and off goates, †††and the aszhes off the cowe whan it is sprenkled, haloweth the vn cleane as touchyng the puri-ficacion of the flesh, How much more shal the bloude of Christ (which thowre the eternall sprete ofred him selfe without spot vnto God) pourge oure conscience from deed workes, †††† for to serue the lyuyng God? And for this cause is he y ‡‡‡mediator of the new Testament, that thowre death which chaunshed for the redemption of those tresgressions (that were under the first Testament) they which were called mighte receaue the promes of eternall inheritance. For where soever is a Testament, there must also be the death of him that maketh the testament.

* For a Testament taketh auctorite when men are deed: for it is of no value, as longe as he that made it is alyue. For the which cause that first Testament also was not ordeyned without bloude. For when all the comman- dementes (accordinge to the lawe) were red of Moses vnto all the people, he toke \( \tilde{y} \) bloude of caluyes and of goates, with water and purple woll and ysoap, and sprenkled the boke and all the people, sayenge: This is the bloude of the Testament, which God hath appoynted vnto you. And the Tabernakle and all the vessels of the Gods servyce sprenkled he with bloude likewise. And almost all things are pourged with bloude after the lawe: and without sheddyng of bloude is no remyssyon. It is necessary then, that the symilitude of hea- venly things be purified with soche: but \( \tilde{y} \) heavenly things them selues are purified with better sacrifices, then are those.

For Christ is not entred in to the holy places \( \tilde{y} \) are made with handes (which are but symilitudes of true things) but in to the very heauen, for to apeare now before the face of God for vs: Not to offer himselfe oft as the hye prest entreth in to the holy place euery yeare with strangue bloude: for the must he often have suffred sence the worlde beganne. But now in the ende of the worlde hath he appeare once, to put synne to flight, by the offerynge vp of himselfe. And as it is appoynted vnto me \( \tilde{y} \) they shall once dye, and then cometh the iudgmet: \( \tilde{y} \) Eu\( \tilde{e} \) so Christ was once offered, to take awaye the synnes of many. And vnto them that loke for him, shal he appeare agayn without synne vnto saluacion.

The r. Chapter.

For the lawe \( \tilde{y} \) which hath but the shadowe off good things to come, to not the things in their awne fashion, can neuer by the sacrifices which they offer yeare by yeare continuallie, make the commers there vnto perfeccte: Els shulde they have ceased to hauene benc officd, because that the offerers once pourged, shulde haue had nomore conscience of synnes. Neuertheles in those sacrifices there is made but a remembranç of synnes euery yeare. †† For it is vnpossible \( \tilde{y} \) the bloude of oxen and of goates shulde take awaye synnes. Wherefore when he com- meth in to the worlde, he sayeth: * Sacrifice \( \tilde{y} \) offerynge thou woldest not haue, but a body hast thou ordeyned me. Burntofferynes and synneofferynes hast thou not alowed. * Then sayde 1: Lo, I come. In the begynnynge of the boke it is wrytten of me, that I shulde do thy wyl O God. Aboure whi he had sayde: Sacrifice and offerynge, and burnt sacrificæ \( \tilde{y} \) synneofferynes thou woldest not haue, neither hast alowed (which yet are offered after \( \tilde{y} \) lawe). The sayde he: Lo, I come to do thy wyl O God: there taketh he awaye the first, to stabylszyhe the latter: In the which wyl we are sanctified by the offerynge vp of the body of Iesus Christ once for all.

And euery prest is ready daylie mynistringe, and olymnes offereth one maner of offerynes, which can neuer take awaye synnes. But this man when he had offred for synnes, one sacrifice which is of value for euery, set him downe on the righte hande of God, and from hence forth tarieth, * tyll his foes be made his fote stole. For with one offerynge hath he made perfeccte for euery, the that are sanctified. And the holy goost also beareth vs recorder of this, euery when he sayde before: †† This is the Testament, that I wyl make vnto them after those dayes, sayeth \( \tilde{y} \) LORDE: I wyl gene my lawes in their hertes, and in their myndes wyl I wryte them, and their synnes and inqui- quiries wil I remembre nomore. And where remyssyon of these things is, there is nomore offerynge for synne.

Seynge now brethrè, that we have a * sure intrauence in to that Holy place, by the bloude of Iesu (which he hath prepared vnto vs for a new and lyunyng waye, thorow the vayle, that is to saye, by his flesh) and seynge also that we have an hye prest ouer the house of God, let vs drawe nye with a true hert in a full faith, sprenkled in oure hertes from an euell conscience, and washed in oure bodies with pure water: and let vs kepe the pro- fession of oure hope without wanyryng (for he is faithfull that hath promysed) and let vs considre one another to \( \tilde{y} \) proukinge of Ioue and of good works: and let vs not forsake the fellishippe that we haue amôge ourselues, as the maner of some is: but let vs exhorte one another, and that so moch the more, because ye se that the daye draweth nye.

* For yat vs symne wyfully after that we haue receaueu the knowleage of the truth, there remayneth vnto vs nymore sacrifice for symnes, but a fearfull lokyng for judgment, and violente fyre, which shall deuoure ã adversaries.  Æ He ã despyseth Moses lawe, dyeth without mercy vnder two or thre witnisses: Of how moch sorre punyshment (suppose ye) shal he be counted worthy, which treadeth vnder fote the sonne of God, and coûneth the bloude of ã Testament (wherby he is sanctified) an vnwholy thinge, ã doth dishonoure the sprete of grace? For we knowe him that hath sayde: Æ Vengeaunce is myne, I wil remcompence, sayeth the LORDE.

And agayne: Æ The LORDE shal judge his people. Æ It is a fearefull thinge to fall in to the handes of the lyuynge God.

But call ye to remembruance ã dayes ã are past, ã which after ye had receaueu lighte, ye endured a greate fighte off aduersaries: partly whyle all më wôdred ã gased at you for the shame and tribulacion that was done vnto you: and partly whyle ye became companuons of them which so passed their tymes. For ye haue suffred with my bôdes, and tok a worth ã spylyngle of youre goodies, and that with gladnes, knowynge in youre selues, how that ye haue in heauen a better ã an enduringe substaunce. Cast not awaye therfore youre confidence, which hath so greate a rewarde.  Æ For ye haue nede of pacience, that after ye haue done the wil of God, ye mighte receaue the promes.  Æ For yet ouer a little whyle, and then he that shal come, wyl come, and wyl not tary.   But the iust shal lyue by his faith: And ye that withdrawe himselfe awaye, my soule shal heue no pleasure in hym.  As for vs, we are not of those which withdrew them selues to dammacion: but of them that beleue to the wynynge of the soule.

The ri. Chapter.

FAITH is a sure confidence of thinges which are hoped for, and a certaynte of thinges which are not sene. By it ã Elders were well reported of. Thorow faith we understonde, that the worlde and all the thinges which are sene, were made of naughte by the worde of God.

†† By faith offered Abell vnto God a more plenteous sacrifice: by the which he optayned wytnesse, that he was righteous: God testifie-enge of his giftes, by the which also he byynge deed, yet speaketh.

†† By faith was Enoch také awaye, that he shulde not se death: and was not founde, because God had taken him awaye. For alore he was taken awaye, he had recorde that he pleased God. But without faith it is vnpossible to please God. For he that commeth vnto God, must beleue that God is, ã ã he is a rewarder of them that seke him.

†† By faith Noe honoured God, after ã he was warned of thinges which were not sene, ã prepared the Arke, to ã sauinge of his hous-holde: thorow the which Arke he condemned the worlde, and became heyre of the righ- eousnes, which commeth by faith.

" By faith Abraham (whâ he was called) obeyed, to go out in to the place, which he shulde afterwarde receaue to inheritance: and he wente out, not knowynge whither he shulde go.

By faith was he a straunger in the lôde of promes as in a straungue countre, ã dwelt in tabernacles: and so dyd Isaac ã Iacob, heyre with him of the same promes: for he lokéd for a cite which hath a foundacion, whose buylnder and maker is God.

By faith Sara also receaued strength to be ã with childe, and ã was deluyered of a childe when she was past age, because she iudged him to be faithfull which had promysed. And therfore spronge there of one (yea euen off one which was as good as deed concernynge the body) so many in multitude Æ as the starres off the skye, and as the sonde off the See shore, which is innumerable.

All these dyed acordinge to faith, and receaued not the promyses, but sawe the afare of, and beleued them, and saluted them: Æ and confessed, that they were strangers ã pilgrims vpo earth. For they that saye soch thinges, declare, that they seke a natural

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.
He exhorteth to gejoyse in trouble, to be feruent in prayer with stedfast beleue, to loke for all good thinges from aboue, to forsake all vye: and thankfully to receaue the worde of God, not onely hearynge it and speakinge of it, but to do therafter in dede. True religion or deducion what it is.

Chap. II
He forbyddeth to haue any respecte of personnes, but to regarde the poore as well as the ryche, to be lounyge and mercifull, and not to boast of faith where no dedes are: for it is but a deed faith, where no good workes folowe not.

Chap. III.
What good and euell commeth thorow the tonge. The dutye of such as be lerned. The difference betwixte the wyszdom of the gospell and the wyszdom of the worlde.

Chap. IIII.
Warre and fightinge commeth of volupteousnesse. The frendishippe of the worlde is enemye before God. An exhortacion to flye slaunder and the vanite of this life.

Chap. V.
He threateneth the wicked ryche me, exhorteath vnto pacience, to beware of swearyngge, one to knowlege his fautes to another, one to praye for another, and one to laboure to brynge another to the trueth.
The first Chapter.

AMES the seruant of God and of the LORDE Jesus Christ, sendeth greting to the xij. trybes which are scattered here & there. My brethren, counte it exceedingly ioye whi ye fall in to divers temptacions, for as moche as ye knowe, how ye the triyng of youre faith bringeth pacience: and let pacience haue her perfect worke, ye maye be parfecte and sounde, lakinge nothinge.

† Ye eny of you lacke wysdrome, let him axe of God, which geneth to all men indifferently, and casteth no man in the teth: and it shall be geneth him. But let him axe in faith and wauer not. For he that douteth, is lyke the wavves of ye See, test of the wynde, and caried with violence. Nether let ye man thynke that he shall receaue eny thige of LORDE. A waunynge mynde thave ys vsutable in all his waies.

Let the brother of lowe degree rejoice, in ye he is exalted: and the rich, in ye he is made lowe. For euell as the floure of ye grasse shal he vanyshe awaye. The Sonne ryssethe with heat and the grasse wydereth, a his floure falleth awaye, and the beautie of the fasion of it perisabeth: euene so shal the ryche man perissh with his abundance.

"Happy is the man that endureth in temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receaue the crowne of life, which the LORDE hath promised to them that loue him.

Let no man saye when he is tempted, ye he is tempted of God. For God tepteth not vnto euell, nether tepteth he eny man. But euery mache is tepted, drawne awaye, a entysed of his awne coccuspecce. Thiche lust hath conceauned, she bringeth forth synne, a synne when it is finyshed, bringeth forth deeth.

Erre not my deare brethren. § Every good gift, vnto every parfait gift, is from aboue, and cometh downe from ye father of light, with whom is noe variablenes, nether is he chauenged vnto darknes. ¶ Of his awne wil he bestowe with the wordes of life, that we shulde be the yfrest frutes of his creatures.

* Wherfore deare brethren, let every man be swite to heare, slowe to speake, and slowe to wrath. For the wrath of mache worketh not that which is righteous before God.

C Wherfore laye aparte all vylthyne, all superfluite of maliciousnes, receaue with mekues ye worde ye is grafted in you, which is able to save youre soules.  And se that ye be doers of ye worde and not heare only, deceauntinge youre awne selues. ¶¶ For ye eny heare the worde, and do it not, he is like vnto a mache that beholdeth his bodly face in a glasse. For asonne as he hath loked on himselfe, he goeth his wyne, and forgetteth immediatly what his fashhion was. ¶¶ But who so loketh in ye perfect lawe of libertie, and continueth therin (ye he be not a forgetfull hearer, but a doar of the worke) the same shalbe happie in his dede.

Yf eny man amoung ye soune deuoute, a refrayne not his tõge: but deceaue he are herte, this mannes deuocion is in vayne. Pure deuocion and vnfiled before God the father, is this: to visit the frendlesse and widoweres in their aduersite, and to kepe hym selupe vsropped of the ¥ worlde.

The ii. Chapter.

BRETHREN, haue not the faith of oure LORDE Jesus Christ ¥ LORDE of glory in III respecte of persons. Ye ther come in to youre copane a mache with a goldye ryng and in goodly apparell, a ther come in also a poore man in ylle raymet, a ye haue a respecte to hym ye weareth the gaye cloathinge ye saye vnto hi: Sit thou here i a good place, a saye vnto ¥ poore, stonde thou there or sit here vnder my fote stole: are ye not parcillall in youre selues, and haue judged after euyll thoughtes?

Harken my deare beloved brethren. ¥¥ Hath not God chosen the poore of this worlde, which are ryche in faught, and heyeres of the kyngdom which he promysed to the that loue him? But ye haue despised the poore. Are not the ryche they which oppresse ye: a they which drawe you before judges? Do not they speake euell of that good name after which ye be named.

† Ye ye fulfill the royall lawe acordinge to the scripture which saith: § Thou shalt loue thyne neigbour as thy selue, ye do well. But yt ye regarde one person more then another, ye comit synne, and are rebuked of the lawe as trasgressours. ¶¶ Whosoever shal kepe the whole lawe, and yet fayle in one poynet, he is gyltie in all. For he that sayde: Thou shalt not commit adulterie, sayed also: thou shalt not kyll. Though thou do none adul-terie, yet ye thou kill, thou art a transgresser of the lawe. So speake ye, and so do as they that shalbe judged by the lawe of libertie. *For ther shalbe judgement merciles to him that sheweth no mercy, & mercy reioiseth against judgment.

i What a vaylyth it my brethren, though a man saye he hath faith, when he hath no dedes? Can faith saue him? If a brother or a sister be naked or destitute of dayly fode, & one of you saue vnto them: Departe in peace, God sende you warmnes and fode: not withsthodinge ye geue them not tho things which are nedfull to the body: what helpeth it them? Euen so faith, ye if it haue no dedes, is deed in it selfe.

Ye a man might saye: Thou hast faith, and I haue dedes: Shewe me thy faith by thy dedes: and I wil shewe the my faith by my dedes. Beleuest thou thy ther is one God? Thou dost well. § The deuils also beleue and tremble.

Wilt thou vnderstode o thouayne man that faith with out dedes is deed: Was not Abraham oure father justified thorow workes when he offered Isaac his sonne vpon the aultar? Thou seist how thy faith wroght with his dedes, and through thy dedes was the faith made perfect: § the scripture was fulfilled which saith: ¶Abraham beleued God and it was reputed vnto him for rightewses: and he was called ¶frende of God. Ye se then how that of dedes a man is justified, and not of faith only.¶ Likewise also was not Raab the harlot justified thorow workes, when she receaued the messengers, and sent them out another waye? For as the body, with out the spretes is deed, euen so faith with out dedes is deed.

The iiij. Chapter

MY brethren, be not euery man a master, rembryaninge how that we shall receauce the more damnacon: for in many thinges we synne all. ¶If a man synne not in worde, the same is a perfecate man, & able to tame all the body. Beholde, we put bittes into the horses mouthes ¶ they shulde obeye vs, and we turne aboute all the body. Beholde also ¶ shylppes, which though they be so gret, and are dryuen of fearece windes, yet are they turned about with a very smale hulme, whither soeuer the violence of the gouernor wyll. Euen so the tōge is a lytll member, and bosteth great thinges.

Beholde how gret a thinge a lytll fyre kynketh, and the tonge is fyre, and a worlde of wyckednes. So is the tonge set amonge oure members, that it defilith the whole body, and setteth a fyre all that we have of nature, and is it selfe set a fyre euyn of hell.

All the natures of beastes, and of byrdes, and of serpentes, and thinges of the see, are meked and tamed of the nature of ma. But the tōge can no man tame. ¥t is an vruely euyn full of deedly poysen. Therwith blisse we God the father, and therwith curswe we men which ¶¶ are made after the similitude of God. Out of one mouth proceadeyth blessyng and cursythe. My brethren these things ought not so to be. DOTH a fountayne sende forth at one place swete water and bytter also? Can the fygge tree, my Brethren, beare olue beriies: ethere a vnle beare fygges? So can no fountayne geue bothe salt water and freshe also. If eny man be wyse and ended with laernynge amonge you, let him shewe the workes of his good couersacion in meknes that is coupled with wissdome.

But ye haue bitter enuyeenge and stryfe in youre hertes, reioyce not: neither be lyars agaynst the truth. This wiszdome descendeth not from above: but is erthy, and naturall, and dyuelishe. For where enuyeenge and stryfe is, there is vnstablenes and all maner of euell workes. But the wiszdome that is frō above, is fyrst pure, the pleasant, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good frutes, without judgyng, and without simulacion: yee, and the frute of rightewses is souen in peace, of the that mayntene peace.

The iiiij. Chapter

FROM whenceth commeth warre and fightynge amongeth you: come they not here hence? euyn of youre volupitousnesses that rayne in youre mēbres? Ye lust, and haue not. Ye envie and haue indignacion, and can not obtayne. Ye fight ¶ warre, and haue not, because ye axe not. Ye axe ¶ receaun not because ye axe amysse: eue to coseyme it vpō youre voluptuousnes. The * sprete y dwelleth in you, lusteth euend contrary to enuie: but geueth more grace.
Submit youre selues to God, and † resist the deuell, ε he wil flye fro you. Drawe yne to God γ he wil drawe yne to you. Clense youre hondes ye synners, and pourge youre cions: sorrowe ye and wepe. Let youre laughter be turned to mornyng, and youre ioye to henynes. * Cast dowe youre selues before the LORDE, and he shal lift you vp. Backbyte not one another, brethren. He that back-ybeth his brother, and he γ judgeth his brother, backbyteth the lawe, and iudgeth the lawe. But and yf thou iudge the lawe, thou art not an ausserer of the lawe: but a judge.

There is one laue geuer, which is able to saue
and to distroye. †What art thou that iudgest another man?
‡ Go to nowe ye that saye: to daye ε to morow let vs go into socie a citie and continue there a yeare, and bye and sell, and wynne: γ yet εa not tell what shal happē to is euem a vapoure that apereth for a lytell tyme, and the vanysheth awaye: For that ye ought to say: ‡γ the LORDE wil, and γf we in youre bostinges. All socie reioysynge is euell. Therfore † to him that knoweth how to do good, and doth it not, to him it is synne.

The 2. Chapter.

GOO to nowe ye riche men. Wepe, and howle onoure wretchednes that shall come vpon you. Youre riches is corrupte, youre garminete are motheaten. Youre golde
γ youre siluer are cancred, γ the rust of them shalbe a witnes vnsto you, γ shal eate youre fleszcze, as it were fyre. Ye haue heaped treasure togedder in your last dayes:  Be-holde, the hyre of the labourers which haue reped dowe youre feldes (which hyer is of you kept bace by fraude) cryeth: and the cryes of the which haue reped, are entred in to the cares of the LORDE Saaboth. Ye haue lived in pleasure on the earth and in wantaines. Ye haue noryshyd youre heretes, as in a daye of slaughter. Ye haue co-demned and haue killed the iust, and he hath not resisted you.

Be pacient thherefore brethren, vnto the comynge of the LORDE. Beholde, the hysbade man wayeth for the precious frute of γ earth, and hath longe patience there vpon, vntilli he receaue the eelyr and the latter rayne. Be ye also pacient thherefore, and sette youre heres, for the comynge of the LORDE draweth yne. Gродge not one against another brethren, lest ye be damned.
Beholde, the iudge stondeth before the dore.
Take (my brethren) the prophets for an ensample of sufferynge aduersitie, and of longe pacience, which spake in the name of the LORDE. Beholde we counte them happy which endure. Ye haue hearde ‡ of γ paciéce of Iob, and haue knownen what ende the LORDE made. For the LORDE is very pitifulfull and mercifull.

But aboue all things my brether, sweare
ε not, nether by heauν, δ nether by earth, nether by any other othe. Let youre ye be ye, and yeoure naye naye: lest ye faule in to ypocracy.
Ye εeny of you be euell vexed, let hi praye.
Ye εeny of you be mery, let him singe Psalms.
Ye γeny of you be deseased amonge you, let him call for the elders of the congregacion, γ let the praye ouer him, and anonyte him with oyle in the name of the LORDE: and γ prayer of faith shal saue the sicke, and the LORDE
shal rayse him vp: and γf he haue cοmmitted
synnes, they shalbe forseuen him.

Knowlege youre fautes one to anothere:
and praye one for another, that ye maye be healed. The prayer of a righteous man ayeyleth moche, γf it be fenyc.  Helias was a mα mortall euyn as we are, and he prayd in his prayer, that it might not rayne:
ε it rayned not on the earth by the space of three yeares and sixe monethes.  And he prayd agayne, and γ heauν gauε rayne, γ γ earth brought forth her frute.

Brethren, γf eny of you erre fro the trueth
and another convent him, let γ saye knowe that he which convented the synner from goynte astrayte out of his waye, shal saue a soule fro death, and shal hyde the multitude of synnes.

The Epistle of S. Jude.

The summe of this epistle.

He rebuketh soch as beyng blinded with their owne lustes, resist the trueth, \( \text{\textit{I}} \) that we maye knowe them the better, he sayeth they be soch as synne beastlyly agaynst nature, and despise rulers \( \text{\textit{2}} \). He exhorteith vs to edifie one another, to praye in the holy goost, to continue in loue, to looke for the comyng of the LORDE, and one to helpe another out of the fyre.

A\( \text{\textit{I}} \)UDAS the seruaunt of Iesus Christ, the brother off Iames. To the which are called, and sanctified in God the father, and preserved in Iesu Christ. Mercy vnto you, and peace and loue be multiplied.

Beloved, when I gaue all diligence to wryte vnto you of the commen saluation: it was needfull for me to wryte vnto you, to exhorte you, that ye shulde continually laboure in the faith which was once gue\( \text{\textit{2}} \) vnto the sayntes. *For there are certaine craftely crept in, of which it was wrytten afore tyme vnto soche judgement. They are vngodly, and turne the grace of oure God vnto wantanes, and denye God the onely LORDE, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

My minde is therfore to put you in remembrance, for as moche as ye once knowe this, how that \( \text{\textit{L}} \)ORDE (after that he had delivered the people out of Egypt) destroyed them which afterwarde beleued not. \( \text{\textit{4}} \)The angels also which kept not their first estate: but lefte their awne habitation, he hath reserved in everlastinge chaynes vnder darknes vnto the judgement of the greate daye: euen as \( \text{\textit{S}} \)odom and Gomor, and the citites aboute them (which in lyke maner defiled them selues with fornicacion and folowed strange fleshe) are set forth for an ensemble, and suffer the vengeuance of eternall fyre. Lykewyse these dremeres defyle the fleshe, despyse rulers, and speake euell of them that are in auctorite.

\( \text{\textit{9}} \)Yet Michael the archangel when he stroue agaynst the deuell, \( \text{\textit{9}} \) disputed aboute the body of Moses, durst not geue raylinge sentence, but sayde: the LORDE rebuke the. \( \text{\textit{11}} \)But these speake euell of those things which they knowe not: and what thinges they knowe naturally, as beastes which are without reason, in the thinges they corrupte them selues. \( \text{\textit{15}} \)Wo be vnto the, for they haue folowed the waye of Cain, and are vttrely geue to the erroure of Balaam for lukers sake, and peryszhe in the treason of Core.

These are spottes which of youre kindnes feast togedder, without feare, fedynghe the selues. \( \text{\textit{16}} \)Cloudes they are withouten water, caried about of wyndes, and trees without frute at gadringe tyme, twyse deed and plucked vp by the rotes. They are the ragenye waues of the see, fominge out their awne shame. They are wandrynge starres, to whō is reserved the myst of darcknes for euer.

\( \text{\textit{18}} \)Enoch the seuenth from Adam prophesied before of suche, saienghe: Behelde, the LORDE shal come with thousands of sayntes, to geue judgemen\( \text{\textit{c}} \) agaynst all men, and to rebuke all that are vngodly amonstre the, of all their vngodly dedes, which they haue vngodly committed, and of all their cruell speakynges, which vngodly synners haue spoken agaynste him.

These are murmurers, complainers, walkeinge after their awne lustes, whose mouths speake proude thinges. They haue mē in greate reverence because of avantage. But ye beloved, remembre the wordes which were spokene before of the Apostles of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, how that they tolde you vō their shulde be begylers in the last tyme, \( \text{\textit{6}} \)which shulde walke after their awne vngodly lustes. These are makers off sectes fleshlie, hauyenge no sprete.

But ye derlye beloued, edifie youre selues in youre most holy faith, prayenge in the holy goost, and kepe youre selues in the loute of God, lokinge for the mercy of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, vnto eternall life. And haue \( \text{\textit{D}} \)copassion on some, separatinge thē: and other saue with feare, pullinge them out of the fyre, and hate the fythly vesture of the fleshe.

Vnto hym that is able to kepe you, that ye faule not, and to present you faultlesse before \( \text{\textit{16}} \)presence of his glory with ioye, \( \text{\textit{y}} \) is to saye, to God oure saueoure which only is wyse, be glory, maiestie, dominion, \( \text{\textit{z}} \) power, now and for euer. The ryuer of the water of life, the frutefulnesse and light of the cite of God. The LORDE geneth euers his seruauntes warnyng of thinges for to come: The angel wyll not be worshipped. To the worde of God maye nothinge be added ner mynished there from.

I Iophon youre brother and cöpanyon in tribulacion, and in the kyngdome and paciéee which is in Iesu Christe, was in the yle of Pathmos for the worde of God, and for you witnessyng of Iesu Christe. I was in the spreté on a sondaye, and herde behynde me, a gret voyce, as it had bene of a trompe, sayenge: I am Alpha and Omega, the fyrst and the lyste. That thou seist, write in a boke, and sende it vnto the cogregacions which are in Asia, vnto Ephesus and vnto Smyrrna, and vnto Pargamos, and vnto Thiatira, and vnto Sardis, and vnto Philadelphia, and vnto Laodicea.

And I turned backe to se the voyce that spake to me. And whiche I was turned: I sawe seue golde candelstyckes, and in the myddes of the candelstyckes, one like vnto the sonne of man clothed with a lynnyn garment downe to the ground, and gyrd aboute the brest with a golden gyrdle. His heed, and his heares were whyte, as whyte woll, ▲ as snowe: ▲ and his eyes were as a flamme of fyre: and his fete like vnto brasse, as though they bréit in a fornace: and his voyce as the sounde of many waters. And he had in his right honde seue starres. ▲ And out of his mouth went a sharpe two edged swearde. And his ▲ face shone euens as the sonne in his strength.

And when I sawe hym, I fell at his fete, euens as deed. And he layde his right honde vpon me, sayenge vnto me: feare not. I am unto the angell of the congregacion of Ephesus wryte: These things sayth he that holdeth the seuen starres in his right honde, and walketh in the mydydes of the seuen golde candlestickes: I knowe thy workes, and thy labour, and thy pacience, α howe thou cannest not forbeare them which are euell: and examinest them which saye they are Apostles, and are not: α hast founde the lyars and hast suffered. And hast paciēce: and for my names sake hast labourd and hast not faynted. Neuertheless I haue somewhat agaynst the, for thou hast lefte thy fyrst louse. Remember therfore frō whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the fyrst workes. Or elles I wyl come vnto the shortly, and wil remoue thy cādelstycye out of his place, excepte thou repent. But this thou hast because thou hastest ý dedes of the Nicolaitans, which dedes I also hate. Let him ý hath eares, heare, what ý sprete saith vnto the congregacions. To him that ouercommeth, will I ý geue to eate of the tree of life, which is in the mydydes of ý paradise of God.

And vnto the angell of the coğregacion of Smyrna wryte: These thinges saith he that his fyrst, and the last, which was deed, and is aliuē: I knowe thy workes and tribulation and pouerute, but thou art ryche: And I knowe the blasphemy of them which call them selues Iewes and are not: but are the coğregacion of Sathan. Feare none of the things which thou shalt sofure. Beholde, ý deuell shal cast of you in to preson, to tempete you, and ye shall haue tribulation x. daies. Be faithfull vnto the deeth, and I wil geue ý a crowne of life. Let him that hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith to the congregacions: He that ouer cómeth, shall not be hurte of the seconde deeth.

And to the angell of the congregacion in Pergamos wryte: This saith he which hath the sharpe swearde with two edges: I knowe thy workes, and where thou dwellest, euhen where Sathan seat is, and thou kepest my name, α hast not denied my faith. And in my daies Antipas was a faithful wiltne of mine, which was slayne amone you, where Sathan dwellet. But I haue a fewe things agaynst the: that thou hast there, the that mayntayne the doctryne of  Balaam, which taung in Balak, to put occasion of syn before the children of Israel, that they shulde eate of meate dedicat vnto ydoles, and to commyt fornication. Euen so hast thou them that mayntayne ý doctryne of the Nicolaytans, which thinge I hate. But be cónter, or elles I wil come vnto the shortly, and wil fight agaynste thē with the swearde of my mouth. Let him ý hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith vnto the coğregaciones: To him that ouercommeth, wil I geue to eate māna that is hyd, and wil geue him a whyte stone, α in the stone a newe name wrytte, which no man knoweth, saunge he that receaueth it.

And vnto the angell of the coğregacion of Theatira write: This saith the sonne of God, * which hath his eyes lyke vnto a flame of fyre, whose fete are like brasse: I knowe thy workes and thy louse, servis, and faith and thy pacience, and thy dedes, which are mo at the last then at the firste. Not withstandinge I haue a fewe things agaynst the, that thou sufferest that woman ‡ Isabell (which called her selfe a prophete) to teache and to deceauce my seruantes, to make them committ fornicacion, and to eate meates offered vp vnto ydoles. And I gaue her space to repēt of her fornicacion, and she repented not. Beholde, I wil cast her into a bed, and them that commit fornicacion with her, in to gret aduersite, excepte they turne from their dedes. And I wil yflyl her childrē with deeth. And all the coğregacionis shal knowe, ý I am he which searcheth the reynes and hertes. And I wil gene vnto every one you acordynge vnto youre worke.

Vnto you I saye, and vnto other of the of

And wryte vnto the angell of the congregation of Philadelphia: this sayth he that hath the seven spirits of God, & the seven stars. I knowe thy workes, thou hast a name that thou lyuest, and thou art deede. Be awake, and styrke the thynge which remayne, that are reddy to dye. For I haue not founde thy workes perfecte before God. Remember therfore how thou hast receaue and hearde, and holde fast, and repent. Ye thou shalt not watche, I wil come on the as a thefe, and thou shalt not knowe what houre I wil come vpon you. Thou hast a fewe names in Sardis, which haue not defyled their garments: and they shal walke with me in whyte, for they are worthy. He that overcommeth, shalbe clothed in whyte araye, and I wil not put out his name out of the boke of life, & I wil çofesse his name before my father, and before his angels. Let him ç hath eares, heare, what the sprete sayth vnto the congregacions.

And wryte vnto the angell of the çongregacio of Thiatyra, as many as haue not this lernynge and which haue not knowne the depe of Sathan (as they saye) I wil put vpô you none other burthen, but ç which ye haue already. Holde fast till I come, and whosoeuer ouer-cômeth and kepeth thy workes vpô ç ende, to him wil I geue power ouer naciones, & he shal rule them with a rodde of yron: and as the vessells of a potter, shal he brake them to sheuers. Euê as I receaue of my father, so wil I geue him ç mornynge starre. Let him ç hath eares, heare, what the sprete sayth to the çongregacions.

The iii. Chapter.

Because thou hast kept the words of my patience, therfore wil I kepe the from the houre of temptacion, which will come vpon all the worlde, to tempte them that dwell vpô the earth. Beholde, I come shortly. Holde that which thou hast, that no man take awaye thy crowne. Him that ouer commeth, will I make a pyllar in the temple of my God, and he shal goo no more out.

And I will wryte vpon him, the name of my God, and the name of ç cite of my God, newe Jerusalem, which çometh downe out of heauen from my God, and I will wryte vpô him my newe name. Let him that hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith vnto the çongregacions.

And vnto the angell of the çongregacion, which is in Laodiciâ wryte: This sayth Amen the faithfull and true witness, the begynnynge of ç creatures of God. I knowe thy workes, ç thou art nether colde nor hot: I wolde thou were colde or hote. So then because thou art bitwene bothe, and nether colde ner hote I wil spew the out of my mouth: because thou saist thou art riche and incresyd with goodes and hast nede of nothinge, and knowest not how thou art wretched ç miserable, poore, blylene, and nakyd. I counsell the to bye of me golde tryed in the fyre, that thou mayste be riche: and whyte raymente, that thou mayste be colded, that thy fylthy nackedes do not apere: anoyn thine eyes with eye salue, ç thou mayste se.

As many as I loue, I rebuke ç chasen. Be feruent therfore and repent. Beholde, I stonde at the doore ç knocke. If any man heare my voyce and opene the doore, I wil come in vnto him and will suppe with him, ç he with me. To him that ouer çometh, will I graute ç to sytte with me on my seate, euê as I ouer cam and haue sytte with my father on his seate. Let him that hath eares, heare, what the sprete saith vnto the çongregacions.

The iii. Chapter.

After this I lokke, and beholde, a doore was open in heauê, and the fyrste voyce which I harde, was as it were of a trompet talkinge with me, which sayde: come vp hydder, and I wil shewe the thynge which must be fulfylled her after. And immediatly

Amen.

The iii. Chapter.

After this I lokke, and beholde, a doore was open in heauê, and the fyrste voyce which I harde, was as it were of a trompet talkinge with me, which sayde: come vp hydder, and I wil shewe the thynge which must be fulfylled her after. And immediatly

Amen.

Amen.
AND I behelde a boke wrytten with in \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) on the backside, sealed with seue\( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) seals. And I sawe a strige angell preachinge with a loude voyce: Who is worthy to open the boke, and to loose the seales therof? And no man in heauen nor in earth, neither vnder \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) earth, was able to open \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) boke, neither to loke thereon. And I wepte much, because no man was founde worthy to open and to rede the boke, neither to loke thereon.

And one of the elders sayde vnto me: wepe not: § Beholde, the lyon which is off the thyre of Iuda, \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) rote of Daviud, hath obtayned to op\( \text{\textgreek{e}} \) the boke, and to loue the seue\( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) seales therof. And I behelde, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) lo, in the myndes of the seate, and of \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) foure beastes, and in the myndes of \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) elders, stode a lambe as though he had bene kylded, which had seuen hornes and seue\( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) eyes, which are the seue\( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) spredes of God, sent in to all the worlde. And he came and toke the boke out of the right hode of him that sat vpon the seate.

And when he had taken the boke, the foure beastes and the xxiiiij. elders fell downe before the lambe, hauinge harpes and golden vialles full of odoures (which are \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) prayers of the sayntes) and they songe a newe songe sayenge: thou art worthy to take the boke \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) to op\( \text{\textgreek{e}} \) the seales therof: for thou wast kylded, and hast redeemed vs by thy bloud, out of all kynneddes, and t\( \text{\textgreek{g}} \)ges, and people, and nacions, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) hast made vs vnto oure God, kynges and prestes, and we shal raygne on \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) earth.

\( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) And I behelde, and I herd the voyce of many angilles aboute the trone, and aboute the beastes and \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) elders, and I herd thousand thousandes, sayenge with a loude voyce: Worthy is the lambe that was killed, to receaue power, and riches \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) wisdome, and strenght, and honoure and glory, and blesse\( \text{\textgreek{y}} \)enge. And all creatures, which are in heauen, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) on the earth, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) under the earth, \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) in the see, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) all \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) are in the, herd I sayenge: bles\( \text{\textgreek{y}} \)inge, honoure, glory, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) power, be vnto him, \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) sitteth vp\( \text{\textgreek{e}} \) the seate, and vnto the l\( \text{\textgreek{a}} \)be for euermore. And the foure beastes saide: Amen. And \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) xxiiiij. elders fell vpon their faces, and worshipped him that lyueth for euermore.

AND I sawe when the l\( \text{\textgreek{a}} \)be opened one of the seales, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) I herde one of the foure beastes saye, as it wer the noyse off thonder: come and se. And I sawe, and beholde there was a whyte horsse, and he \( \text{\textgreek{y}} \) sat on him had a bowe, and a crowne was geuen vnto him, and he went forth conqueryenge and for to ouercome. And where he opened the seconde seale, I herde the seconde beaste saye: come and se. And there went out another horsse that was reed, \( \text{\textgreek{g}} \) power was geuen to him that sat there on, to take peace from the earth, and that they shulde kyll one another. And there was genê vnto him a gret swearde.

And when he opened the thyrde seale, I herde the thyrde beeste saye: come se. And I behelde, and lo, a blacke horse: and he that sate on him, had a payre of balances in his honde: And I herde a voyce in the myydes of the foure beeastes saye: a measure of whete for a peny, and thre measures of barley for a peny: and oyle and wyne se thou hurte not.

And when he opened the fourth seale, I herde the voyce of the fourthe beeaste saye: come and se. And I looked, and behelde a pale horsse, and his name that sat on him was deeth, and hell followed after him, and power was genê vnto them over the fourthe parte of the earth, to kyll with swearde, and with honger, and with deeth, of the vermen of the earth.

And when he opened the fyfte seale, I sawe vnder the anltre, the soules of them which were kylledy for the worde of God, and for their testimony which they had, and they cryed with a lowde voyce sayenge: How longe tarest thou LORDE holy and true, to judge oure bloude on them that dwell on the earth? And longe whyte garmentes were geuen vnto euery one of them. And it was sayde vnto them, that they shulde reste for a lytle season, vntill the number of their felowes, and brethren, and of them that shulde be killed as they were, were fulfilled.

And I behelde when he opened the sixte seale, and loo, there was a gret earthquake, and euere sonne was as blacke as acke cloth made of heare. And the mone waxed euë as blone: and the starres of heauen fell vnto the earth, euene as a fygyree tree castith from her fygyres, when she is shaken off a mighty wynde. And heauen vanysched awaye, as a scroll when it is rolled togedder. And all mountayns and yles, were moued out of their places. And the kynges of euere earth, and the grete men, and the riche men, and the chefe captyynes, and the myghte men, and euery free man, hyd them selues in dennes, and in rockes of euere hyles, and sayde to the hyles, and rockes: fall on vs, and hyde vs from the presence of him that sytteth vpon the seate, and from the wrath of the lambe, for the grete daye of his wrath is come. And who can endure it?

AND after that sawe I foure angels stode on euere corner of the earth, holdinge euere wyndes of euere earth, euere wyndes shulde not blowe on euere earth, nether on euere see, nether on eny tre. And I sawe another angel ascende fro the rynginge of the sonne: which had the seale of euere lyninge God and he cryed with a loude voyce to the foure angelles (to whom power was geuen to hurt the earth and the see) sayenge: Hurt not the earth nether the see, nether the trees, till we have sealed the seruautes of oure God in their forheddes.

And I herde the nombre of them which were sealed, and there were sealed an c. and xliij. M. of all the trybes of the children of Israel. Of euere trybe of Juda were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Ruben were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Gad were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Asser were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Neptalym were sealed xij. M. Of euere trybe of Manasses were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Symeon were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Levi were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Issacar were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Zabulon were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Ioseph were sealed xij. M. Of the trybe of Beniamin were sealed xij. thousande.

After this I behelde, and lo, a gret multitude (which no man coulde nombre) of all naciones and people, and tonges, stode before the seate, and before the lambe, clothed with longe whyte garmentes, and palmes in their hondes, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayenge: saluacion be ascribed to him euere sytteth vpon the seate of oure God, and vnto the lambe. And all the angelles stode in the compasse of the seate, and of the elders and of the foure beeastes, and fell before euere seat on their faces, and worshipped God, sayenge, Amen: Blessinge and glory, wisdome and thanks and honour, and power and might, be vnto oure God for euermore Amen.

And one of the elders answered, sayenge vnto me: what are these which are arayed in longe whyte garnettes, and whence eam they? And I sayde vnto him: LORDE thou wotest. And he sayde vnto me: these are they which eam out of grete tribuilation and made their garmentes large, and made the whyte in the bloude of the lambe: therfore are they in the presence of the seate of God, and serue him daye and night in his temple, and he that sytteth in the seate, wyll dwell amonste them. They shal honger * no more, nether thyrst, nether shal the sonne lyght on them, nether any heate. For the labe which is in the myddes of the seate, shal fede them, and shal leade them vnto fountaynes of lyuynge water, and God shal wyse awaye all teares from theire eyes.

The viii. Chapter.

A ND when he had opened the seventh scale, there was silëce in heauen aboute the space of halfe an houre. And I sawe seuen angels stondinge before God, and to them were geuen seuen trompettes. And another angell cam and stode before the aultre, haunya ge a golden senser, and moch of odoure was geuen vnpo him, that he shulde offre of the prayers of all saynte vpyn the golden aultre, which was before the seate. And the smoke of the odoure which came of the prayers of all saynte, ascended vppe before God out of the angellies honde. And the angell toke the senser, and fylled it with fyre of the aultre, and caste it in to the earth, and voyces were made, and thôdrynges and lightnynges, and earthquake.

B And the seuen angels which had the seuen trompettes, prepared them selues to blowe. The first angell blewe, and there was made haule and fyre, which were myngled with bloud, they were cast in to the earth: and the thyrde parte of trees was burnt, and all grene grasse was brent. And the seconde angell blewe: and as it were a great mountayne burnynge with fyre was cast in to the see, and the thyrde parte of the see turned to bloud, and the thyrde parte of the creatures which had life, dyed, and the thyrde parte of shippes were destroyed.

And the thyrde angell blewe, and there fell a greate starre from heauen, burnynge as it were a lampe, and it fell in to the thyrde parte of the ryners, and in to fountaynes of waters, and the name of the starre is called Wormwod. And the thyrde parte of the waters was turned to Wormwod. And many men dyed of the waters, because they were made bytter. And the fourth angell blewe, and the thyrde parte of Sone was smyttynge, and thyrde parte of the mone, and thyrde parte of starres: so that the thyrde parte of them was darckned. And the daye was smyttynge, that the thyrde parte of it shulde not shine, and lyke wyse the nyght. And I be-helde, and herde an angell flyyenge thorowe the myddes of heautë, and sayenge with a lowde voyce: Wo, wo to the inhabiteres of the earth, because of the voyces to come of the trompe of the thrë angels which were yet to blowe.

The ix. Chapter.

A ND the fyfte angell blewe, I sawe a starre fall from heauen vnpo the earth. And to him was geuen the kyaye of the bottomlesse pyt. And he opened the bottomlesse pyt, and there arose the smoke of a greate fornace. And the sunne and ayer were darkned by the reason of the smoke of the pyt. And there came out of the smoke locustes vpon the earth: and vnto the was geuen power as the scorpions of the earth haue power. And it was sayde vnto them, that they shulde not hurt the grasse of the earth: nether eny grene thinge: nether eny tre: but onely those men which haue not the seale in their for-hedes, and to them was cómaundd, that they shulde not kyll the, but that they shulde be vexed fyue monethes, and their payne was as the payne that cómeth of a scorpion, when he hath stonge a man. And in those dayes shal men seke deeth, and shal not fynde it: and shal desyre to dyne, and death shal flye from them.

And the similitude of the locustes was lyke vnto horses prepared vnto battayll, and on their heads were as it were crownes, lyke vnto golde: and their faces were as it had bene the faces of men. And they had heere as the heere of wemen. And their tethe were as the tethe of lyons. And they had habber-gions, as it were habberergions of yron. And the sounde of their wynge, was as y sounde of charrettes whë many horses runne together to battayle. And they had tayles lyke vnto scorpions, and there were stynges in their tayles. And their power was to hurt më fyue monethes. And they had a kinge ouer them, which is the angel of the bottomlesse pyt, whose name in the hebrew tonge, is Abadon:

but in the greke tonge, Apollion. One wo is past, and beholde two woes come yet after this.

And the sixte angel blewe, and I herde a voyce from the fourc corners of the golden aultre which is before God, sayenge to the sixte angel, which had the trompe: Lowse the foure angels, which are bounde in the great ryuer Eufrates. And ryuer angels were lowsed, which were prepared for an houre, for a daye, for a moneth, and for a yeare, for to see the thyrde parte of men. And the nombre of horsmen of warre, were twenty tymes x M. And I herde ry nombre of them. And thus I sawe the horses in a vision, and them that sat on the baunge fyry habbergions of a yelowe and brymstony colour, and the heads of they horses were as the heads of lyons. And out of their mouthes went forth fyre, and smoke, and brymstone. And of these thre was the thirde parte of men killed: that is to saye, of fyre, smoke, and brymstone: which proceeded out of the mouthes of thee: For their power was in their mouthes and in their tayles: for their tayles were like vnto serpètes, and had heads, and with the they dyd hurt: And the remnant of the mie which were not killed by these plages, repèted not of the dedes of their hondes, they shulde not worshippe deuels, and ymageis of golde, and syluer, and brasse, and stone, and of wod, which nether can se, nether hare, nether go. Also they repented not of their murthour, and of their witchcraft, nether of their whordeone, nether of their thefte.

The vi. Chapter.

And I sawe another mightye angell come doune fro heauen, clothed with a cloude, and the rayne bowe vpone his head. And his face as it were ry Sonne, and his fete as it were pyllars of fyre: and he had in his honde a lytely boke open: and he put his right fote vpon ry see, and his lifte fote on ry earth. And cryed with a lowde voyce, as when a lyon roareth. And when he had cryed, seuen thondres spake their voyces. And when the seuen thondres had spoke their voyces, I was aboute to wryte. And I herde a voyce from heauen sayenge vnto me: seale vpon those thinges which the seuen thondres spake, and wryte them not.

And the angel which I sawe stonde vpon the se, and vpon the earth, lifte vppe his honde to heauen, and swore by him that fineth for euermore, which created heauen, and the thinges that there in are, and ry see, and the thinges which are therin: that there shalbe nomore tyme: but in the dayes of the voyce of the seuenth angel, when he shal beginne to bloue, the mistery of God shalbe fynisshed, as he preched by his seruantes the propheteis.

And the voyce which I herde from heauen, spake vnto me agayne, and sayde: go and take the lytely boke which is open in the honde of the angel, which stondeth vpon the see, and vpon the earth. And I went vnto the angel, and sayde vnto him: gene me the lytely boke. And he sayde vnto me: *Take it, and eate it vp, and it shal make thy belly better, but it shalbe in thy mouth as swete as hony. And I toke the lytely boke out of his honde, and ate it vp, and it was in my mouth as swete as hony, and as sone as I had eaten it, my belly was better. And he sayde vnto me: thou muste prophesy agayne vnto the people, and to the Heythen, and tongs, and to many kynges.

The vii. Chapter.

And there was geuen me a rede lyke a vnto a rodd, and it was sayde vnto me: *Ryse and mete the tèple of God, and the aultre, and them that worshippe therin: and the quyre which is within the temple, cast out, and mete it not: for it is geuen vnto the Gentyles, and ry holy cite shal they t readiness vnderfote xilij. monethes. And I wil geuen power vnto my two wytnesses, and they shal prophesy M. ij. c. and xi. dayes clothed in sacke cloth. These are two olyue trees, and two candelstykkes, stondinge before the God of the earth.

And by eny man wil hurt them, fyre shal procede out of their mouthes, and consume their enemies. And by eny ma wil hurt the, this wyse muste he be kylled. These haue power to shut heauen, that it rayne not in the dayes of their prophesyinge: and haue power ouer waters, to turne them to bloue, and to Smythe the earth with all maner plages, as oftene as they will.

And when they haue fynisshed their testimony, the beest that cam out of the bottomlesse pyt, shal *make warre agaynst thē, and shal ouer come them, and kyll thē. And their bodies shal lye in the strects of the greate cite, which spirittully is called zodom and Egypte, where oure LORDE is crucified. And some of the people and kynredes, and tonges, α of the naciës, shal se their bodies, thre dayes, and an halfe, and shal not suffre their bodies to be put in graves. And they that dwell vpō the earth, shal reioyce ouer them and be glad, and shal send gifts one to another: for these two prophetes vexed them that dwelt on the earth.

*And after three dayes and an halfe the sprette of life from God, entred in to them. And they stode vp vpon their fete: * greate feare came vpon them which sawe them. And they herde a greate voyce from heauen, sayenge vnto them: Come vp hidden. And they ascended vp in to heauen in a cloude, and their enemies sawe thē. And the same houre was there a greate earthquake, α the tenth parte of the cite fell, and in the earth-cell were slayne names of men seuen M. and the remnaunt were feared, and gane glory to God of heauen. The seconde wo is past, and beholde, the thyrde wo wyl come anone.

And there appeared a greate token in heauen. A woman clothed with the Sonne, and the mone vnder her fete, and vpon her heed a crowne of twelve starres. And she was with childe, and eryed trauaullinge in byrth, and payned redy to be delyuered. And there appeared another token in heauen, and beholde a greate reed dragon, hauinge seuen heads, and ten horns and seue crownes vpō his heads: and his tayle drue the thyrde parte of the starres, and cast them to the earth.

And the dragon stode before the womā, which was ready to be delyuered: for to de-voure her childe as sone as it were borne. And she brought forth a man childe, which shulde rule all nacionis with a rod of yron. And her sonne was taken vp vnto God, and to his seate. * And the woman fled in to wyldernes, where she had a place prepared off God, that they shulde fede her there a M. i. C. and lx. dayes.

And there was a greate batayll in heauen. Michael and his angels foughte with the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels, and preuayled not, nether was their place founde eny more in heauen. And the greate dragon that olde serpent (called the deuell and Sathanas) was cast out. Which diseued all the worlde. * And he was cast in to the earth, and his angelles were cast out with him also.

And I haue a lowde voyce, which sayde in heauen: Now is saluation, and strength and the kyngdome become oure Gods, and y power his Christes: For he is cast downe, which accused them before God daye and night. And they ouercame him by the bloude of the lambe, and by the worde of their testimony, and they loued not their lyues vnto the deeth. Therfore reioyce ye heauens, and ye that dwell in them. Wo to the inhabiteres of the earth, and of the see: for the deuell is come downe vnto you, which hath greate wrath, because he knoweth, that he hath but a short tymne.

And when the dragon sawe, that he was cast vnto the earth, he persecuted the woman, which brought forth the man childe. And to the woman were geue two wynges of a greate eagle 5that she might flye in to the wyldernes, in to her place, where she is noryszhed.

A

ND the seuenthe angell blew, and ther were made greate voyces in heauen, sayenge: the kyngdome of this worlde are oure LORDES and his Christes, and he shal reigne for euermore. And the foure and twentye Elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell vpon their faces, and worshipped God sayenge: we gene the thankes LORDE God allmyghte: which art and wast, and art to come, for thou hast receaved thy greate might, and hast rayned. And the Heythen were angry, α thy wrath is come, and the tymne of the deed that they shulde be judged, and that thon shuldest geue rewarde vnto thy seruauntes the prophetes and saynetes, and to thē that feare thy name, small 5 greate: and shuldest destroie them which destroie the earth. And the temple of God was opened in heauen, and there was sene in his temple the arke of his testament: and there followed lightnynges, and voyces, and thondrynges and earth quake, and a greate hayle.

The viii. Chapter.

And I saw a beast rise out of the sea, having seven heads, and x. horns, and upon his horns x. crownes, and vpó his heed, the names of blasphemy. And the beast which I saw was lyke a catt of the mountayne, and his fete were as the fete of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lyon. And vpó drago gane him his power and his seate, and greate auctorite: and I sawe one of his heads as it were wounded to death, and his dedly wounde was healed. And all the worlde wôdred at the beast, and they worshipped the dragon which gane power vnto the beast, and they worshipped the beast, sayenge: who is like vnto the beast? who is able to warre with him?

And there was geuen vnto him a mouth to speake greate thinges v blasphemies, and power was geuen vnto him, to do xlij. monethes. And he opened his mouth vnto blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle and them that dwell in heauen. And it was geuen vnto him to make warre with the sayntes, and to ouercome them. And power was geuen him ouer all kyned, tonge, and nacion: and all that dwell vpon the earth worship him: whose names are not wrytten in the boke of life of the lambe, which was kylded from the beginnyng of the world. Yf eny man haue an eare, let him heare. He that leadeth in to captiuitie, shall go in to captiuitie: He that killeth with a swarde, must be killed with vp swarde. Heare is the pacience, and the faith of the sayntes.

And I behelde another beast commynge vp out of the earth, and he had two horns like a lambe, and he spake as dyd the drago. And he dyd all that the first beast coulde do in his presence, and he caused the earth, and them which dwell therein, to worshippe the fyrst beast, whose deedly woude was healed. And he dyd greate wonders, so that he made fyre come downe from heau[n] in the sight of men. And decaewed them that dwelt on the earth by vpó means of those signes which he had power to do in the sight of the beast, sayenge to them that dwelt on the earth: that they shulde make an ymage vnto the beast, which had the wounde of a swarde and dyd lyue.

And he had power to geue a spryte vnto the ymage of the beast, and that the ymage of the beast shulde speake, and shulde cause, that as many as wolde not worshippe the ymage of the beast, shulde be kylded. And he made all bothe smale and greate, ryche and poore, fre and bond, to receaue a marke in their right hondes, or in their forheades. And that no man might by or sell, sawe he vpó had vpó marke, or the name of the beast, ether the nombre of his name. Here is wisdome. Let him that hath wyt, count the nombre of the beast. For it is the nombre of a man, and his nombre is xise hundred, thre score and sise.

The riiij. Chapter.

And I loked, and lo, a lambe stode on the moût Syon, and with him, C. and xliij. thousande hauynge his fathers name wrytten in their forheades. And I herde a voyce from heauen, as the sounde of many waters, and as the voyce of a greate thondre. And the voyce that I herde, was as the harpers that playe vpon their harpers. And they songe as it were a newe songe, before the seate, vpó before vpó foure beestes, and the elders, and no man coulde learne vpó songe, but the hundred and xliij. M. which were redeemed from the earth. These are they, which were not deffyled with wemen, for they are virgyns. These folowe the lambe whither soouer he goth. ¶These were redeemed from men, beyng the fyrst frutes vnto God and to the lambe, and in their mouthes was founde no gyle. For they are with oute spot before the trone of God.

And I saw an angel fly in the myddes of heaven hauing an everelastinge Gospell, to preache vnto them that syt and dwell on the earth, and to all nacions, kinreddes, and toges and people, sayenge with a loude voyce: Peare God, and gene honour to him, for the houre of his judgement is come: and worshippe him *that made heauen and earth, and the see, and the fountaynes off water. And there folowed another angell, sayenge: *She is fallen, she is fallen: euè Babilon that greate cite, for she made all nacions drynke of the wyne off hyr whordome.

And the thyrde angell folowed thè, sayenge with a loude voyce: Yf eny man worshipp the beest and his ymage, and receaue his marke in his forshed, or on his honde, the same shall drynke of the wyne of the wrath of God, which is pouered in the cuppe of his wrath. The rv. Chapter.

AND I saw another signe in heauen grett ¥ a mervellous, vii. angells havinge the seven laste plages, for in ¥ is fullylled the wrath of god. And I sawe as it were a glassye see, mingled with fyre, and them that had gotten victory of the beest, and of his ymage, and of his marke, and of the nombre of his name, stonde on the glassye see, hauinge ¥ harpes of God: and they songe the songe of Moses the seruant of God, and the songe of the lambe, saynge: Greate and maruellous are thy workes LORDE God almyghty, Iust and true are thy wayes, thou kynge of sayntes. ¥ Who shal not feare the O LORDE and gloryfie thy name? For thou only art holy, for all gêtles shall come and worshipp before the, for thy judgmenetes are made manyest.

And after that, I loked, and beholde, the temple of the Tabernacle of testimony was open in heauen, and the seuen angells came out of the temple, which had the seuen plages, clothed in pure and bryght lynne, and hauynge their brestre gyrded with golden gerdelles. The second angel poured out his vial upon the sea, and it became as blood of a great beast. And every skiff and every vessel that floated on the sea with merchant mariners, and every seabird and every passerby in the sea, was killed by the blood that issued from the vial of the second angel.

The third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and springs of waters, and they became blood. And every living thing, wherever he found it, died, because of the water that issued from the vials of the three angels' judgments.

The seventh angel poured out the last of the seven vials of God's wrath on the earth. And there was a great earthquake, as a huge firestorm, and a great tempest. And the sun became as black as pitch, and the moon became as red as blood, and the stars fell from the sky, as if they were ashes. And the clouds poured out a multitude of locusts, which entered the earth like a great army. And they bit and stung the people, just as a scorching heat does a field.

Chapter xviii.

And after that I saw another angel come downe frō heauen, hauinge great power, and ṣ earth was lyghtned with his bryghtnes. And he cryed mightely with a stronge voyce, sayenge: ṣ She is fallen, she is fallen, cœn greate Babilon, and is become the habitacion of devells, and ṣ holde of all foule spretes, and a cage of all vncomely and hatefull byrdes: for all naciōs haue dronken of the wyne of the wrath of her whordome. And the kynges of the earth haue committed fornicacion with her, and her marchauntes are wexed ryche of the abundance of her pleasures.

And I herde another voyce from heauen sayenge: ṣCome awaie from her, wy people, that ye be not partakers of her synnes, lest ye receaue of her plages. For her synnes are gone vp to heauen, and the LORDE hath remembred her wyckednes. Rewarde her euon as she rewarded you, and geue her doubbe aordinginge to her workes. And poure in doubbe to her in the same cuppe, which she fyllde vnto you. And as moche as she

These shal fyght with the lambe, and the lybre shal ouercominge them: For he is ṣ LORDE of all lorde, and kynge of all kynges: and they that are on his syde, are called, and chosen and faithfull.

And he saide vnto me: The ṣ waters which thou sawest, where ṣ whorre sytth, are people, and folke, and naciouns, and tonges. And the ten horrnes, which thou sawest vpon the beest, are they that shal hathe the whore, and shal make her desolate, and naked, and shall eate hir fleshe, and burne hir with fyre. For God hath put in their hertes, to fulfill his wyll, and to do with one consent, for to gene hir kyngdome vnto the beest, vntill the wordes of God be fulfyllde. And the womā which thou sawest, is that greate cite, which raingeth ouer the kynges of the earth.

The xvii. Chapter.

And that was, and is not, is euç the eght, and is of the seuen, and shal go in to destruction. ṣ And ṣ ten horrnes which thou sawest, are ten kynges, which haue not yet receaued the kyngdome, but shal receaue power as kynges at one houre with ṣ beast. gloryfied her selfe and lyued wantanly, so much poure ye in for her of punyszmemt, and sorowe, for she sayeth in her herte: ṣ I syt beinge a quene, and am no wyddowe, and shal se no sorowe. Therfore shal her plages come at one daye, death, and sorowe, and honger, and she shalbe brūt with fyre: for stronge is the LORDE God which shal judginge her.

And the kynges of the earth shal bewepe her and wayle ouer her, which haue committed fornicacion and lyued wantanly with her, when they shal se the smoke of her burnyngæ, and shal stoude a farre of for feare of her punyshment, sayenge: Alas, Alas, that greate cite Babylon, that mighty cite: For at one houre is thy judgment come. And the marchauntes off the earth shal wepe and wayle in them selues, because no man will bye their ware eny more, the ware of golde, and syluer, and of precious stones, off pearle, sylke, and purple, and skarlet, all Thynen wod, and all manner vessels of yuer, and all manner vessels of most precious wod, and of brasse, and of yron, synonomym and odours, and oyntmenites, and frankynsence, and wyne, and oyle, and fyne floure, and wheate, and catell, and shepe, and horses, and charrettes, and bodyes and soules of men.

And the apples that thy soule lustede after, are departed from the. And all thinges which were deyntie, and had in pryce, are departed from the, and thou shalt fynde them no more. The marchauntes of these thinges which were wexed ryche by her, shall stonde a farre of for feare of the punyshment of her, wepynge and waylinge, and sayenge: alas alas, that greate cite, that was clothed in sylke, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with golde, and precious stone, and pearles: for at one houre so greate ryches is come to naught.

And every shippæ gouernor, and all they that occupie shippes, and shippmen which worke in the see, stode a farre of, and cryed, when they sawe the smoke of her burnyngæ, and sayde: what cite is like vnto this greate cite? And they cast dust on their heads, and cryed wepynge, and waylinge, and sayde: Alas, Alas the greate cite, wherin were made ryche all that had shippes in the see, by the reason of her wares: for at one houre is she made desolate.

Rejoyce over her thou heauē, and ye holy Apostles, and prophete: for God hath geuen youre iudgments on her. And a mighty angell toke vp a greate stone lyke a mylstone, and cast it in to the see, sayenge: with suche violencē shal that greate cite Babylon be cast, and shalbe founde nomore. And the voyce of harpers, and musicians, and of pypers, and trompetters, shalbe herde no more in the: and no craftes man (of what soever craft he be) shalbe founde any more in the: * and the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde, shalbe herde nomore in the for thy marchauntes were prynces of the earth. And with thyn inchauntment were deceaued all nacions: and in her was founde the bloude of the prophetes, and of the sayntes, and of all that were slayne vpō the earth.

The rix. Chapter.

And after that, I herde the voyce of much people in heaven, sayenge: Alleluia. Saluacon and glory and honour, and power be ascribed to the LORDE oure God, for true and righteous are his iudgments, because he hath iudged the greate whore (which did corrupt ye earth with her fornicacion) and hath auenged the bloude of his seruautes of her hand. And agayne they sayde: Alleluia. * And smoke rose vp for euermore. And ²xxxiiij: elders, ² the foure beestes fell downe, and worshipped God that sat on the seate, sayenge: Amen: Alleluia. And a voice came out of the seate, sayenge: praise oure LORDE God all ye that are his seruautes, ² ye that feare him both small and great.

And I herde the voyce of much people, euē as ye voyce of many waters, ² as ye voyce of stronge thondrynges, sayenge: Alleluia, for God omnipotent raigneth. Let vs be glad and rejoyce, and geue honour to hym: for the mariaige of the labe is come, and his wife made her selfe ready. And to her was graunted, that she shulde be arrayed with pure and goody sylke. (As for the sylke, it is the rightewesnes of sayntes.) And he sayde vnto me: ²Blessed are they which are called vnto the Lambes supper. And he sayde vnto me:

AND I saw an angell come doune from heaven, hauinge the keye of the bottomlesse pyt, and a gret chayne in his honde,

And he took the dragon that olde serpent (which is the devell and Satan) and he bounde him a thousand yeares: and cast him in to the bottomlesse pyt, and he bounde him, and set a seale on him, that he shuld diseaue the people nomoare, tyll the thousand yeares were fulfilled. And after that muste he be loswed for a litle season.

And I sawe seates, and they sat vpon them, and the judgement was geuen vnto them: and I sawe the soules of them that were beheaded for the wittes of Isu, and for the worde of God: which had not worshipped the beest, neither his ymage, neither had taken his marke vpon their forheades, or on their hondes: and they lyued, and rayaigned with Christ a thousand yeare: but the other of the deed men lyued not agayne, vntill the thousand yeare were fynishyd. This is that first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath parte in the first resurrection. On soch hath the seconde deeth no power, but they shalbe the prestes of God and of Christ, and shal rayaigne with him a thousande yeare.

And when the thousand yeares are expyre, Satan shalbe loswed out of his preson, and shal goe out to deceaue the people which are in the foure quarters of the earth.

And I sawe Gog and Magog, to gadder them togedder to batayle, whose nombre is as the sonde off the se: and they went vp on the playne of the earth, and compad the tentes of the sayntes aboute, and the beloued cite. And fyre cam doune from God out of heauen, and deuoured them: ¶ and the deuell that diseaued them, was cast in to a lake of fyre and brymstone, where the beest and the false prophet were, and shalbe tormented daye and night for euermore.

And I sawe a gret whyte seate, and him that sat on it, from whose face felde awaye both the earth and heauen, and their place was nomoare founde. ¶ And I sawe the deed, both gret and small stonde before God: And the bokes were openned, and another boke was openned, which is (the boke) of life, and the deed were judged of the thinges which were wrytten in the bokes accordinge to their deedes: and the see gaue vp her deed, which were in her, and deeth and helle deluyered vp the deed, which were in them: and they were judged every man accordynge to his deedes. And deeth and helle were cast in to the lake of fyre. This is that second deeth. And whoseuer was not founde wrytten in the boke olfe, was cast in to the lake of fyre.

AND I sawe a newe heauen and a newe earth. For the first heauen, and the first earth were vanished awaye, and there was nomoare See. And I Hen sawe that holy cite newe Ierusalem come doune from God out of heauen, prepared as a bryde garnished for hys husband. And I herde a greate voyce from the seate, sayenge: beholde, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he wil dwell with them. And they shalbe his people, and God him selfe shalbe with the, and shalbe their God. ¶ And God shal wipe awaye all teares from their eyes. And there shalbe nomoare deeth, nether sorowe, nether shal there be eny more payne, for y olde thinges are gone. And he that sat vpon the seate, sayde: ¶ Beholde, I make all thinges newe. And he sayde vnto me: wryte for these wordes are faithfull and true.

And he sayde vnto me: it is done. §§ I am Alpha and Omega, the begynynge, and the ende. I wil geue to him that is a thyrst of the well of the water of life fre. He that ouercommeth, shal inheret all thinges ¶ I wil be his God, and he shalbe my sonne. But the fearefull and vnbelieuyng, and the abominable, and murthurers, and whormongers, and sorcerers, and ydolaters, ¶ all Iyars, shal hauue their parte in the lake, that burneth with fyre and brymstone, which is the seconde death.

And there came vnto me one of the seuen angels, which had the seuen vials full of the seuen last plages: and talked with me, sayenge: come hydder, I wil shewe the the bryde, y labes wylye. And he caryed me awaye in y prete to a greate and an hye mouyntayne, and he shewed me the great cite, holy Ierusale descendeinge out of heauen from God, haunyng the brightnes of God. And her shyngynge was lyke vnto a stone most precious, euyn a Iaspar cleare as cristall:
and at ý gates twolue angels: and names wrytten, which are the twolue trybes of Irael: on the est parte thre gates, and on the north syde thre gates, and toward the south thre gates, and from the west thre gates: and the wall of the cite had twolue fundacionys, and in them the names of the lambes twolue Apostles.

*And he that talked with me, had a golden rede to measure the cite with all, and the gates therof, and the wall thereof. And the cite was blyt foure square, and the length was as large as the bredth of it, and he measured the cite with the rede twolue M. forlonges: and the length and the bredth, and ý heyth of it, were equall. And he measured the wall thereof, an cxliij. cubittes, after ý measure of a man, which the angel had. And the byyldinge of the wall of it was, of Iaspar.

And the cite was of pure golde, like vnto cleare glasse: and ý fundacionys of the walles and of ý cite were garnyszed with all maner of precious stones. The first fundacion was a Iaspar, the seconde a Saphyre, ý thyrde a Calcedony, the fourete a Smaragde: the fytte a Sardonix: the sixt a Sardeos: the seventh a Crysolite, the eyght berall: the nynth a Topas: the tenth a Crysporasos: the eleuyeth a Jacyncte: the twelveth an Amatist.

And the twolue gates were twolue pearsle, and euery gate was of one pearle, and ý strete of the cite was pure golde, as a thoroweshyninge glasse. And I sawe no temple therin. For the LORDE God allmighty and the lambe is the temple of it, and the cite hath no nede of the Sonne, nether of the mone to lyghten it. For the bryghtnes of God doth light it: and the lambe is the lyght of it. And ý people which are saued, shal walke in the light of it: and the kynges of the earth shal bryngynge their glory vnto it. And the gates of it shal not be shut by daye. For there shalbe no nyght there. And there shal entre in to it none vncreanle thinge: nether what socuer worketh abhomination: or maketh lyes: but they which are wrytten in the lambes boke of life.

A ND he shewed me a pure ryuer of water of life cleare as cristall: *proceedinge out of the seate of God and of ý lambe in the myddes of the strete of it, and of ether syde of the ryuer was there wod of life: which bare twolue maner of frutes: and gave frute every moneth: and the leaues of the wodd serued to heale the people with all.

And there shalbe no more cursse, but the seate of God and ý labe shalbe in it: and his seruauntes shal serue him: And shal se his face, and his name shalbe in their for heads. And there shalbe no night there, and they nede no candle, nether light of the Sonne: for the LORDE God geneth the light, and they shal reygne for euermore.

And he sayde vnto me: these sayenges are faithfull, and true. And the LORDE God of the holy prophetes sent his angell to shewe vnto his seruauntes, the things which must shortly be fullylled. Beholde, I come shortly. § Happy is he ý kepeth ý sayege of ý prophesy of this boke. I am Ihon, which sawe these things and herde them. And whé I had herde and sene thé, I fell downe to worshippe before the fete of the angell which shewed me these things. And he saide vnto me: ℒ se thou do it not, for I am thy felowe seruaunt and the felowe seruaunt of thy brethren the prophetes, and of them, which kepe the sayenges of this boke. Worshippe God.

And he sayde vnto me: seale not the sayenges of the prophesy of this boke. For the tyme is at hode. ¶ He that doeth euell, let him do euell styll: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy styll: and he that is righteous, let him be more righteous: and he that is holy, let him be more holy. And beholde, I come shortly, and my reward with me, to geue euery mä acordinge as his dedes shalbe.

I am Alpha and Omega, ý begynnynge and the ende: the first ý the last. Blessed are they that do his commandementes, that their power maye be in the tree of life, and maye entere in thorow the gates in to the cite. ¶ For without are dogges and inchaunters and whormongers, and mortherers, and ydolaters, and whosoeuer loueth or maketh lesinges.

I Iesus haue sent myne angell, to testifie unto you these things in the congregacions. I am the rote and the generacion of David, and the bright mornyng starre. And the sprete and the bryde saye: Come. And let him that heareth, saye also: Come.* And let him that is a thyrst, come. And let whosoever wyll, take of the water of life fre. I testifie vnto euery man that heareth the wordes of prophesy of this boke t yf eny man shal addc vnto these things, God shal adde vnto him the plages that are wrytten in this boke. And yf eny man shal mynishe of the wordes of the boke of this prophesy, God shal take awaye his parte out of the boke of life, and out of the holy citie, and fro tho things which are wrytten in this boke. He which testifyeth these things, sayth: Yee I come quyckly, Amen. Euen so: come LORDE Iesu. The grace of oure LORDE Iesu Christ be with you all. Amen
