ΠΟΛΛΑΙ μεν άνθρωπος Γασσίται, μη δ'Αθανασίων.
ACUSTOMED in the present day to the highest degree of civil and religious liberty that man perhaps can ever expect to enjoy, free to express our opinions without the terrors of the stake or the tortures of the rack, to awe us into silence, or force us into dissimulation, it is with a mixture of curiosity and indignant surprise that we cast back our glance over a space of centuries, and see our ancestors struggling in all the mazes of ignorance and the labyrinths of superstition, alike passive under the mental tyranny of their monkish rulers and the bodily servitude of their despotic lords.

But every thing in this world changes, and excessive tyranny only more effectually prepares the way for perfect freedom. The minds of men in some degree induced to reason by the measures of Henry the Eighth, were no longer to be blinded by false pretences or intimidated by impotent threats; and the commencement of the Reformation dawned steadily and beautifully through the mists of papistic craft that the mental sloth of ages had permitted to accumulate.

It is difficult for us to imagine the despotic control at that time exercised over the whole faculties, whether physical or mental, of our ancestors; and it requires some effort to picture to ourselves the revivifying effect that must have attended the spreading of the reformed doctrines. Men, who had seldom exerted their reasoning powers, were at once invited to discuss theological difficulties, and to solve the deepest mysteries of religion; and as by the reformed tenets every matter was open for discussion, there were few bounds set to inquiry; but various tenets and various opinions were as quickly spread, as eagerly adopted.

At this critical moment a translation of that Book, by all allowed to be the only proper guide of conduct, the only safe chart by whose aid man could hope to steer through the stormy seas and dangerous shoals with which his course is surrounded, was published and set forth:
and its effect in hushing controversy and silencing factious clamour, may not unaptly be compared to that of the sun, when he breaks through the fast flitting clouds, and shining forth, dispels them by his brightness; and day, beautiful day, reigns in all its splendour.

The light that thus broke through the mental darkness of the reign of Henry the Eighth, fed as it was by the Holy Word of God, burnt purely and steadily; and although adverse winds and hostile gusts shook its flame for a time during the reign of Mary, they could not extinguish it, but left it to throw its calm and heavenly rays on our own and future ages.

That translation of the Bible is now for the second time reprinted,* and words of ours are not necessary either to point out its worth or to extol its merit, to cite it for its interest or celebrate it for its rarity—but it goes forth once again into the world as the labour of a man eminent for his piety and learning, as a faithful version of the original Scriptures, and as one of those means to which we may gratefully ascribe the establishment of our present national religion.

The name of our venerable translator seems to have been derived, not from his parents, but from his birthplace. Yorkshire, according to the best authorities, was his native county; and there can be no reasonable doubt that he was born in the parish of Coverham, in the district of Coverdale, in the North Riding. The year 1488 is given as the date of his birth, but the month and day cannot be ascertained. An obscurity, which no research has been sufficient to dispel, rests on his parentage and early education: we may presume that he spent his boyish days among the tranquil scenes of his native place, familiar with its sloping hills, verdant meadows, and cheerful trout streams, which, as they spread before the eyes of this active minded lad, would arouse many a beautiful thought, and inspire many a happy feeling. Coverham Abbey was situated in the neighbourhood of his birthplace, and perhaps it was by some of the brotherhood of that establishment that young Miles of Coverdale was instructed in the elements of learning.*

At what period he left Yorkshire we are not informed, but in early life he entered the Monastery of the Augustines at Cambridge, of which he afterwards became a brother. Previous to the visit of Erasmus in the year 1511, learning appears to have been at a low ebb at Cambridge; afterwards it revived, having received an impulse from the influence of that extraordinary man: great hostility, however, was manifested by many in the university towards his efforts for the revival of literature, for when the Greek Testament, which he had edited, first appeared in Cambridge, it was absolutely forbidden by the heads of one of the colleges. "They object to us," said Erasmus, "the feigned authority of synods, and magnify the great peril of the Christian faith, and the danger of the church, which they pretend to support with their shoulders, which are much fitter to prop a waggon." Among the scholars who mainly contributed to the restoration of sound learning in the university, Dr. Robert Barnes, who entered the Augustine Monastery in 1514, and became prior and master in 1523, stands preeminent. He cultivated a taste for classic literature, devoted himself to the study of the Scriptures, and after his conversion, became a leading champion of the Reformation. Coverdale, being one of the order of the Augustine friars, was associated with this distinguished individual, and probably derived great advantage from his friendship and instructions.

The priory of the Augustines rapidly advanced in literary reputation under the presidency of Barnes. Foxe says "he caused the house shortly to flourish with good letters, and made a great part of the house learned (who before were drowned in barbarous rudeness), as Master Cambridge, Master Field, Master Coleman, Master Burley, Master Coverdale, with divers others of the university that sojourned there for learning's sake."† Divine Providence was thus preparing our translator, by his habits of study and his distinguished attainments in scholarship, for the great work which has immortalized his name.

The principles of evangelical truth which were embraced by Barnes gradually spread, and many in the university began to rally round him and adopt his views. Drawn together by devout sympathies, they were accustomed to assemble for study, conference, and prayer; and that they might do this as much as possible unnoticed by their enemies, they chose as their place of resort, a house called "the White Horse," which had a private back entrance, convenient for the men of St. John's and King's College, who appear to have formed a considerable part of the assembly. One's imagination lingers over that old "White Horse," with its antiquated apartments, as a kind of infant school, where those babes in Christ were trained up under the care of the Great Teacher, for subsequent usefulness and honour. These meetings, however private, could not fail to attract attention; the house was contemptuously called "Germany," on account of its being thus associated with the principles of Luther; and circumstances at length required that the friends of truth should publicly declare themselves. Hence, on Christmas eve, Sunday 24th December, 1525,* Barnes preached at St. Edmund's Church, Trinity Hall, and boldly avowed his dissent from the superstitions and despotism of Rome. He took occasion in his discourse to make an attack on Cardinal Wolsey, and, if we are to believe what was said by his accusers, to ridicule his golden shoes, his pole-axes, pillars, golden cushions, crosses and red gloves. A vein of humour, and a habit of satirical and witty allusion to the manners of the times, and the abuses in the church, were in those days regarded as by no means unseemly in the pulpit, and were frequently indulged in with great effect by the advocates of the Reformation. The playful sallies, and the hard arguments of Barnes were offensive to the friends of Papacy and to the proud cardinal, and very shortly after the delivery of this famous sermon we find the preacher in trouble. He was apprehended, conveyed to London, and brought before Wolsey: convicted of heresy, the alternative was offered—to abjure or burn—poor human nature shrunk from the fiery ordeal, and in an evil moment Barnes signed his recantation.

"Master Coverdale" is mentioned by Foxe as one of the friends who accompanied the prior of the Augustines to London, stood by him in his trials, and assisted in the preparation for his defence the night before he met the cardinal. Such conduct indicates his faithful attachment to Barnes, and shows that he felt a strong sympathy with him in his religious views: but neither his master nor himself, at that time, saw the whole of the truth upon the grand points of the popish controversy. Coverdale was only feeling his way by degrees out of those paths of theological error in which he had been accustomed to walk. So far as he perceived the light, he was prepared to follow it.

Another name of a far different character here becomes connected with Coverdale's history. He was introduced to Cromwell, and the friendship of that extraordinary person led to very important consequences. The patronage of one who was then a favourite with Wolsey, and afterwards so distinguished a favourite with Henry VIII, must have greatly contributed to Coverdale's personal safety amidst the dangers that threatened the advocates of the Reformation; and, moreover, the pecuniary assistance, which there is no doubt that he received from the same quarter in his literary studies, and in his work of translation, were of great value; but though we are disposed to give Coverdale credit for honesty and courage, we admit that it is possible he was for a while somewhat fettered by his connection with this remarkable man. There is a letter from Coverdale to Cromwell, preserved among the State Papers, without date, which evidently belongs to the commencement of their acquaintance; perhaps it was written in the year 1527, or somewhat earlier.†

* See Foxe's Acts and Monuments. Townsend's edition, Vol. IV, Note 751. The correctness of this date is there established.
† The commissioners date it 1532, but they observe very justly, that it belongs to the commencement of Cromwell's patronage of Coverdale. Mr. Anderson, in his 'Annals of the Bible,' dates it 1531, but Cromwell's patronage had commenced much earlier, for we have a letter to him in August, 1527, from which it appears that Coverdale was then well known to Cromwell, if not in his employ. At the time this letter was written Coverdale was an Augustine Friar, but in 1528 he had thrown off the Augustine habit, and became a secular priest—a circumstance inconsistent with the late date assigned to this letter, unless as Mr. A. supposes, Coverdale afterwards resumed his friar's habit, which is a perfectly gratuitous and very improbable supposition. There seems no reason for referring the expression, "beginning to taste of Holy Scriptures," to the commencement of Coverdale's translation, but simply to his early studies of the sacred volume.
"Most singular good Master,

With due humility, I beseech unto your Mastership all godly comfort, grace, and prosperous health. For so much as your goodness is so great toward me, your poor child, only through the plenteousness of your favour and benevolence, I am the bolder of your goodness, in this my rude style, if it like your favour, to revocate to your memory the godly communication which your Mastership had with me, your orator, in Master Moor's house upon Easter Eve, amongst many and divers fruitful exhortations, specially of your singular favour, and by your most comfortable words, I perceive your gracious mind towards me.

Wherefore, most honourable Master, for the tender love of God, and for the fervent zeal that you have to virtue and godly study, (cordis genibus provolatus,) I humbly desire and beseech your goodness, of your gracious help. Now I begin to taste of Holy Scriptures; now, honour be to God I am set to the most sweet smell of holy letters, with the godly savour of holy and ancient doctors, unto whose knowledge I cannot attain, without diversity of books, as is not unknown to your most excellent wisdom. Nothing in the world I desire, but books as concerning my learning. They once had, I do not doubt but Almighty God shall perform that in me, which He, of his most plentiful favour and grace, hath begun. Moreover, as touching my behaviour, your Mastership's mind once known, with all lowliness I offer myself, not only to be ordered in all things as shall please your wisdom, but also as concerning the education and instruction of others, alone to ensue your prudent counsel; for whatever there is in you of counsel, nothing is impolitic, nothing but what is divine; for whatever you do, you do nothing inconsiderately, and you never boast that you are a chief philosopher: of the dew of heaven (after the manner of Jacob) you have obtained the chief blessing. From your mighty stream I long to drink, because, in your presence, I would not speak in a common manner. Farewell, thou ornament of literature, of councils, and of all virtues!

"From the Augustine's this May-day. Your child and heedman in Jesu Christ,

"Frere Myles Cor'dale."*

From this letter it appears, that Coverdale had recently been introduced to the rising favourite, and had received from him tokens of kindness which inspired his gratitude and confidence. Cromwell was favourable to the Reformation, and had devoted himself in early life to the reading of the New Testament. Coverdale wanted books to assist him in the study of the Scriptures, and the drift of the letter seems to be a delicate application for Cromwell's aid in that respect. The tone of submission and flattery adopted by Coverdale, was one of the vices of the age, in which he was too prone to indulge; and when comparing him with his great contemporary Tyndale, in this point of view, it is remarkable how superior the latter appears. The house in which the interview took place is supposed by Mr. Anderson† to have been Sir T. More's, and this connection between Coverdale and Sir Thomas, suggests another reason for the security which our translator enjoyed in those perilous times. He was still at Cambridge in the Augustine Priory, on the 25th of August of the same year, when he wrote the following letter to his patron:

In my most lowly manner, I commend me unto you, evermore desiring to hear of the preservation of your prosperity. So it is, I was required by Mr. George Lawson to deliver this writing to your Mastership mine ownself; notwithstanding, such an impediment hath chanced, that I must desire favour on your behalf for my excusation. For Master Moor's kinsman is not all well at ease, for he labours, it is certainly thought under fever, the fever being of that species that in regard to food, he foolishly turns away from it like a lunatic, but now it is discovered that he is almost rid of it. Wherefore, I beseech you to have me excused, and if I knew that my coming to London might stand with your favour, truly the bird was never gladder of day than I would be to come. But briefly, I am ready at your commandment, for it remains with you to command as you will the abilities of your Miles.

As for the rest, there is nothing divulged with us that is new, except the rumour among our order that one of our masters is accused of homicide, another is dilated for heresy, and a third is reported of the crime of theft, namely Master Stocks, junior; of which affair I will certify you afterwards, on its being made manifest. I have nothing more to say, every blessing attend you and yours. This may Christ the mighty grant, to whom be honour and dominion for ever.

"From Cambridge 27th August, 1527.

"Yours Milo Coverdale."

This letter would seem to show that Coverdale was at that time in Cromwell’s employ, and it expresses a readiness to obey his commands, which would have been more to the writer’s credit had it been somewhat qualified. But in Coverdale’s mind the truth through “the sweet smell of holy letters” was progressing: the superstitions and errors of popery were seen with increased vividness, and the mental exercises and conflicts of our translator led, eventually, to the renunciation of the friar’s cowl, and the bold and warm-hearted preaching of the reformed faith. In the blood-stained register of the Bishop of London, we find the following confession by Thomas Topley, an Augustine Friar, which throws light on the course adopted by Coverdale at this crisis in his history. “My mind,” says the confessor, “was much troubled with the said book ‘Wicliff’s Wicket,’ which did make the sacrament of Christ’s body, in form of bread, but a remembrance of Christ’s passion, till I heard Sir Myles Coverdale preach, and then my mind was sore withdrawn from the blessed sacrament, insomuch that I took it then for the remembrance of Christ’s body. Furthermore he said and confessed, that in the Lent last past, as he was walking in the field at Bumstead, with Sir Myles Coverdale, late friar of the same order, going in the habit of a secular priest, who had preached the fourth Sunday in Lent at Bumstead (29th March, 1528), they did commune together of Erasmus’ works, and also upon confession. This Sir Miles said, and did hold that it was sufficient for a man to be contrite for his sins betwixt God and his conscience, without confession made to a priest, which opinion this respondent thought to be true, and did affirm and hold the same at that time. Also he saith, that at the said sermon made by the said Sir Myles Coverdale at Bumstead, he heard him preach against worshipping of images in the church, saying, that men in no wise should honour or worship them, which likewise he thought to be true, because he had no learning to defend it.”† Coverdale had now taken a decided step:—faithful to his convictions, he confessed his Saviour before men. Perhaps it was with a lively remembrance of the treatment he had received in the early part of his history as an avowed reformer, that he wrote the following passage in his preface to a work entitled, ‘The Old Faith.’ “Alas! and woe to this unthankful world, for like as a great number that be in prison of Satan, will not come forth when they are called, and the door set open, but go on still stumbling in darkness when the lantern of light is offered them; even so if any man play a wise man’s part, and do as he is warned by God’s word, he shall have a sort of apish people, a number of dizzards, and scornful mockers; which because the man will not dance in the devil’s morrice with them, nor keep their company in the bondage of sin and vice; neither run with them into like confusion, as St. Peter calleth it, laugh him to scorn, and bleat out their tongues at him, even like fools and coxcombs of the world. And like as when a poor wretch cometh out of prison, he shall have more to stand gazing and gaping upon him, than to do him good, or to help him to his feet: even so now that God of his mercy hath called us out of Satan’s prison, and from the school of false doctrine, my lord’s fool, with his companions, standeth staring upon us, and mocketh us because we sit not still with other prisoners. There goeth a fellow of the new learning, saith one; there is one of these new-fangled gospellers, saith another; that is one of the new brethren, saith a third, he followeth the new faith.”‡

The bold step taken by Coverdale, and the confession made by Topley, belong to the year 1528; and the next year we find the former on the continent in company with the illustrious Tyndale; according to Foxe’s statement, meeting there by appointment, and assisting him in preparing the translation of the Pentateuch for the press; for which his recent studies in Holy Scripture, and his well known acquaintance with the original languages, which must surely have been commenced before this period, had in a good degree qualified him. The immediate cause of his leaving England, does not appear; but coupling the fact of his departure early in 1529, with the decided course he was pursuing in 1528, the common supposition that it was with a view to his personal safety, seems by no means improbable. *

In the year 1526, copies of Tyndale's version were stealthily brought over from the continent, and were scattered throughout England. The priest, the layman, the scholar, and the peasant, sought and obtained the blessed book, and many and touching are the tales related respecting its circulation and its use. Sometimes it was read in the secret chamber by the midnight lamp, or in the fields and forests far away from the haunts of men; and sometimes it was concealed from the prying search of enemies in warehouses, under heaps of flax; in cottages under the boarding of the floor; and in many other ways which pious ingenuity devised. The portion of God's word which the people now possessed, quickened their desire for the rest of the sacred volume; and the influence of Anne Boleyn, who for a time reigned supreme in the king's affection, disposed Henry to relax somewhat his severe opposition to the circulation of the Scriptures in English. Cranmer, who was raised to the primacy in 1533, publicly expressed his earnest desire to see the Bible in the hands of his fellow countrymen, and in the winter of 1534, four days before Christmas, stood up in the Chapter House of Old St. Paul's, amidst a convocation of the clergy, and moved that the king should be petitioned to translate the entire Scriptures into the English language.† The year 1535 may therefore be regarded as a critical era in the religious history of our country; when the people were waiting for the word of life, and some of the obstacles in the path of its progress were melting away.

Coverdale was the first to meet the existing spiritual want of his country. Where he went after he left Tyndale cannot now be shown; there is a chasm in his history from that time to the year 1535: but his publication then of the whole Bible, shows that during the interval, Providence had been preparing him for the performance of a great work. Judging from the result of his toil given to the world, we may fairly infer that he had been spending some years in study; which, whether it had direct reference or not to such an undertaking, certainly fitted him for it, and provided him with materials for its execution. The history of the origin and progress of his translation is involved in great obscurity. Three or four points only can be satisfactorily ascertained, the rest are left to probable conjecture. He states himself, in his prologue to the edition of the Bible published in 1550, that he undertook, as he was desired in the year 1534, to set forth this special translation. And he also states in his prologue to the translation the following particulars:—"Considering how excellent knowledge and learning an interpreter of Scripture ought to have in the tongues, and pondering also mine own insufficiency therein, and how weak I am to perform the office of a translator, I was the more loath to meddle with this work. Notwithstanding, when I considered how great pity it was that we should want it so long, and called to my remembrance that adversity of them, which were not only of ripe knowledge, but would also with all their hearts have performed that they began, if they had not had impediment; considering, I say, that by reason of their adversity it could not so soon have been brought to an end as our most prosperous nation would fain have had it; these, and other reasonable causes considered, I was the more bold to take it in hand, and to help me herein I have had sundry translations, not only in Latin, but also of the Dutch interpreters, whom (because of their singular gifts and special diligence in the Bible) I have been the more glad to follow for the most part according as was required. But, to say the truth before God, it was neither my labour nor desire to have this work put in my hand; nevertheless, it grieved me that other nations should be more plenteously provided for with the Scripture in their mother tongue than we; therefore, when I was instantly required, though I could not do so well as I would, I thought it yet my duty to do my best, and that with a good will." He also observes in his dedication, "as the Holy Ghost moved other men to do the cost hereof, so was I emboldened in God

* Mr. Anderson in his 'Annals,' &c., Vol. I. p. 239, supposes that Coverdale was sent over "to sound Tyndale," to see "whether he was a practicable man," and "to induce him to return to England," suppositions which reflect greatly on Coverdale's character, and for which there is not the shadow of proof. At this time Coverdale, according to our view of his history, had begun the study of Holy Scripture, and certainly was qualified from his attainments as a scholar to help Tyndale. We see no reason to discredit altogether Foxe's statement on this subject.

MEMOIR OF MYLES COVERDALE.

to labour in the same." From this then it appears, that he was desired by others to perform this work; that they supplied him with the pecuniary means; that the desire was expressed to him in the year 1534; that the adversity of some better qualified for the undertaking induced him to attempt it; and that he availed himself of other translations in completing his own. It is generally conjectured, and with much probability, that his patron Cromwell was the chief person who prompted him to the undertaking, and supplied him with funds. It seems almost equally probable that the party alluded to as better qualified than himself was Tyndale, whose adversity, by which his imprisonment most likely is intended, synchronises with the date 1534, when the desire was expressed to Coverdale that he should set forth a translation. This brings down the preparation of the work for the press to a very late period, and leaves but a very short time for its completion; for it plainly appears from the colophon to the book, that it was finished 4th October, 1535. Yet, after a very attentive consideration of the matter, we cannot see how, with Coverdale's own statement before us, we can suppose that the translator previously to that period was engaged on a version with an express view to its publication. We are fully aware of the difficulty which presses on this view of the case, arising from the very limited space of time assigned to Coverdale for completing so great a work; but that difficulty is considerably diminished by the following considerations: that according to our view of his history he had been for some time engaged in the study of the Holy Scriptures in the original; that most likely for his own private purposes, or with some general view to future usefulness, he had previously made and preserved translations of some parts of the Bible, a supposition by no means inconsistent with the modest terms in which he speaks of his attainments; that by his own acknowledgment he availed himself of the aid afforded by existing versions; and especially that he would avail himself of Tyndale's translation in those portions of the sacred volume which that noble veteran had already published. Though we have somewhat modified our views as to the actual amount of Coverdale's labour during the space in question, since we wrote some years ago the sketch of English Translators, we are still of opinion that he accomplished a herculean task. He looked at immortal souls and felt that their welfare waited on his labours; he looked into eternity and saw that the Bible was the only star which enlightened its gloom; he looked up to God and found in Him an all-sufficient helper in the task he had undertaken.

Coverdale mentions in his prologue sundry translations in Latin and Dutch, from which he had derived assistance, and in another place he limits the number to five—what translations he referred to by this acknowledgment it is very natural to inquire, but very difficult to determine. The Vulgate of course was included; the three versions executed by Pagninus, Leo Juda, and Luther are probably to be added, but as to the fifth, whether it were the Bible of Rudelius, or the Dutch version of 1526, or the Lower Saxon one of 1533, we are at a loss to decide; perhaps his reason for passing over in silence his large obligations to Tyndale's published versions, was that he felt any acknowledgment of assistance derived from that quarter would be prejudicial to the success of his work, as Tyndale and his translations had been denounced by the ruling powers in England. As to the place where our translator printed the volume, the question, like so many others connected with the origin of the version, can only be answered by conjecture. From a resemblance which the woodcuts bear to those found in Egenolph's books printed at Frankfort, it has been supposed by some that it was executed there; while others again, from the similarity of the type to that which is used in books printed by Forschover at Zurich, have concluded that he was the printer. Cologne also has been mentioned. Of these Zurich seems to have the best claim to the disputed honour; and to that city it is generally conceded. Could we ascertain that there was the place both of the preparation and printing of the book, the imagination would fondly linger over that cheerful and animated city, "embosomed among vine-clad knolls, meadows and orchards, and surmounted by forests, above and beyond which appear the loftier summits of the Albis," with our translator working in some little room, through the live-long day till after the sun had set behind those alpine heights, and then rising to his task again before the same sun gilded the opposite horizon.

* Mr. Anderson in his 'Annals of the Bible,' Vol. I. p. 555, supposes that the translation was commenced with a view to publication some time before, and that the setting forth relates to the printing of what was previously prepared. For the reasons stated above, we cannot adopt that view.

The competency of Coverdale to his task has been satisfactorily proved by Mr. Whitaker in his 'Critical Enquiry.' His learning, for the age in which he lived, was very considerable—it was acknowledged by his contemporaries, it is evidenced by his works. The author of the interesting History of Richmondshire, attributes to Coverdale a very curious epitaph, written in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, supposed to belong to the year 1538; which, if it were certainly his production, would confirm his claims to be considered a superior scholar, but most persons, it is apprehended, will feel a little sceptical about the date, on looking at the curious relic, and will be inclined to assign it to a later period. But while the scholarship of Coverdale is placed beyond dispute, it must be acknowledged that there are many renderings in his version so peculiar, that one is at a loss to find his authority for them; and what is still more remarkable, and deeply to be regretted, he differed from Tyndale in using the word penance and amendment, instead of repentance. Highly as we value the labours of Coverdale, we must greatly prefer, not only in this respect but as a whole, the version of his truly illustrious, though by the men of his generation, dishonoured contemporary. Nor can we help also deeply lamenting the style of extravagant subserviency and fulsome flattery adopted by Coverdale in his dedication to King Henry VIII; a style of address, which, though characteristic of the age, received no sanction from anything which proceeded from the pen of Tyndale. It should, however, in justice to Coverdale be added, that if his dedication be objectionable on account of its flattery, his prologue to the reader is worthy of the highest praise, and abounds in beautiful and profitable thought.

The reception which Coverdale's version met with on its arrival in England, is described by Fulke, in a report which he gives of part of a sermon which he heard the venerable father deliver in that famous old preaching place, St. Paul's Cross. The story related by Coverdale has been referred by Mr. Anderson to the history of the Bible printed in 1539 at Paris, under his superintendence; but that Bible was not Coverdale's translation, nor was it ever called by his name. It was a revision of Rogers' edition; Coverdale could not have referred to it as his own. The edition of 1535 always went by his name, and would certainly be understood to be meant by the audience who listened to his story. "I myself," says Fulke, "and so did many hundreds beside, hear that reverend father, M. Doctor Coverdale of holy and learned memory, in a sermon at Paul's Cross, upon occasion of some slanderous reports that then were raised against his translation, declare his faithful purpose in doing the same; which, after it was finished and presented to King Henry VIII, of famous memory, and by him committed to divers bishops of that time to peruse, of which I remember Stephen Gardiner was one: after they had kept it long in their hands, and the king was divers times sued unto for the publication thereof; at the last being called for by the king himself they redelivered the book; and being demanded by the king what was their judgment of the translation, they answered that there were many faults therein. 'Well,' said the king, 'but are there any heresies maintained thereby.' They answered 'that there was no heresies that they could find maintained thereby?' 'If there be no heresies,' said the king, 'then in God's name let it go abroad among our people.' According to this judgment of the king and the bishops, M. Coverdale defended his translation, confessing that he did now himself espy some faults which, if he might review it once over again, as he had done twice before, he doubted not but to amend: but for any heresy he was sure there was none maintained by his translation."†

Foxe inserts, in his 'Acts and Monuments,' certain injunctions bearing date 1536, in one of which "every parson or proprietary of any parish church" was required to provide a book of the whole Bible in Latin, and also in English, before the 1st of August, to be laid in the choir. This injunction is not found in Cranmer's 'Register,' in Wilkins' 'Concilia,' nor in Burnet's 'Collection of Records;'‡ whence it has been concluded that the clause given by Foxe is an interpolation; but it is far more probable that the clause was copied by the martyrrologist from a draft of the

† It is very astonishing that Mr. A. should misquote this in the following manner—"M. Coverdale (who had been corrector of the press) defended the translation." This gives countenance to Mr. A.'s theory; but the passage correctly quoted is opposed to it.
injunctions which, before they were issued and inserted in the 'Register,' underwent alteration. The clause in question, if inserted in the injunctions of 1536, must have referred to Coverdale's version, as no other version of the whole Bible was then published; and hence, according to the view just taken of the document, it would appear that the king's patronage of the book had been obtained, and that Cromwell prepared an order in favour of its circulation, but that some circumstance occurred to prevent the issue of the injunction. That circumstance probably was the death of Anne Boleyn, who perished on the scaffold in May, 1536, deplorèd by the friends of the English Reformation, which had been advanced by her influence, and was now checked by her removal. Lewis mentions a MS. book of devotions in the family of Francis West, Boxley, Kent, which once belonged to Anne Boleyn, containing a note in the queen's hand, referring to the "glad tidings of salvation being promulgated, published, and set at liberty by the grace poured into the heart of our prince," which note corroborates the idea of Henry having regarded Coverdale's translation with favour before the queen's death; and what more fully confirms and further explains the view we have taken of the case, is a passage contained in a contemporary writer, who informs us that "through the intercession of Queen Anne, the king at last granted that English Bibles might be printed, and placed in every church where the people might read them. Which concession of the king did not then take effect, because shortly after Queen Anne was beheaded."* But though Coverdale's translation never enjoyed the regal patronage of which there was once the promise, it was allowed for awhile to be circulated without hindrance; and if it never attained the popularity so justly acquired by subsequent versions, it enjoyed the honour of taking the lead in the goodly procession of English Bibles which have been so long, and of late in such gloriously augmented numbers, issuing from the press. Nor can we doubt that the reading of it, in multitudes of instances, proved the means of enlightening and regenerating the human mind.

Probably Coverdale was in England in the year 1537, when two works of his were published by Nicholson a printer in Southwark. But the important undertaking to which he devoted himself at this period, and which now claims our particular attention, was the superintendence of the printing of the great Bible.

Matthew's Bible appeared in 1537; it contained the whole of the version which had been prepared by Tyndale. That great man had laboured at the work in obscurity and exile, and then sealed the truth with his blood, the victim of treachery and malice. The book was edited by his friend Rogers, who soon after followed him, through the fires of martyrdom, to the rewards of heaven. A copy of this translation was conveyed to Cranmer, and filled his soul with joy: he forwarded the version to Cromwell, pronouncing it better than any other translation previously made. Cromwell recommended it to the king, who sanctioned it, authorising it: "to be bought and read within this realm;" thus patronising at last, though unwittingly, the labours of that very man, the honoured Tyndale, whom he had persecuted with relentless cruelty. The Bible became extremely popular, and surpassed in the public estimation the translation by Coverdale. But the clergy were not satisfied with it; the prologue and notes were charged with the taint of heresy, and a new translation was desired. Cromwell projected a new translation, which proved in fact a revision of Tyndale's work, the prologues and notes being omitted. This was the great Bible, the preparation of which he committed to Coverdale. The place selected for the printing of this book was Paris, which was eligible on account of the superior workmen and materials to be obtained there. In June, 1538, Coverdale, and Grafton the printer, who had accompanied him to Paris, were hard at work with their men, as the following letter testifies:

"After most humble and hearty commendations to your good lordship. Pleaseth the same to understand, that we be entered into your work of the Bible, whereof (according to our most bounden duty) we have here sent unto your lordship two ensembles; one in parchment, wherein we intend to print one for the king's grace, and another for your lordship; and the second, in paper, whereof all the rest shall be made; trusting, that it shall be not only to the glory of God, but a singular pleasure also to your good lordship the causer thereof, and a general edifying of the king's subjects, according to your lordship's most godly request. For we follow not only a standing text of the Hebrew, with the interpretation of the Chaldee and the Greek, but we set also, in a private table, the diversity of readings of all texts, with such annotations, in another table, as shall doubtless elucidate and clear the same, as well without any singularity of opinions, as all checkings and reproofs. The print, no doubt, shall please your good lordship; the paper is of the best sort in France. The charge certainly is great, wherein, as we most humbly require your favourabe help at this present, with whatsoever it shall please your good lordship to let us have, so trust we, if need require, in our just business to be defended from the papists by your lordship's favourable letters, which we most humbly desire to have (by this bearer, William Graye), either to the bishop of Winchester, or to some other whom your lordship shall think most expedient. We be daily threatened, and look ever to be spoken withal, as this bearer can farther inform your lordship; but how they will use us, as yet we know not. Nevertheless, for our farther assurance, where through we may be the abler to perform this your lordship's work, we are so much the bolder of your good lordship; for other refuge have we none, under God and our king, whom, with noble Prince Edward, and all you, their most honourable council, God Almighty preserve now and ever. Amen.

"Written at Paris the 23rd day of June, by your lordship's assured and daily orators,

The Bishop of Winchester was at that time ambassador in France; but he was soon succeeded by Bonner, then archdeacon of Leicester, who was directed by Cromwell, agreeably to Coverdale's request, to aid the enterprise. An application was also made by King Henry to his royal brother of France to permit the printing of the English Bible in Paris, to which consent was given, and the royal license was duly issued.

In the autumn the work was going on, as appears from the following letters:—

A Letter from Coverdale, Grafton, and Grey to Cromwell.

"After most humble and due salutation to your good lordship. Pleaseth the same to understand that your work going forward, we thought it our most bounden duty to send unto your lordship certain leaves thereof, specially seeing we had so good occasion, by the returning of your beloved servant Sebastian. And as they are done so will we send your lordship the residue from time to time. As touching the manner and order that we keep in the same work, pleaseth your good lordship to be advertised, that the mark §§ in the text signifieth, that upon the same (in the latter end of the book) there is some notable annotations, which we have written without any private opinion, only after the best interpreters of the Hebrews, for the more clearness of the text. This mark Q betokeneth, that upon the same text there is diversity of reading among the Hebrews, Chaldees, and Greeks, and Latinists, as in a table at the end of the book shall be declared. This mark * showeth that the sentence, written in small letters, is not in the Hebrew or Chaldee, but in the Latin, and seldom in the Greek, and that we nevertheless, would not have it extinct, but highly accept it for the more explanation of the text. This token † in the Old Testament giveth to understand, that the same text which followeth it, is also alleged of Christ or of some apostle in the New Testament. This (among other, our necessary labours) is the way that we take in this work; trusting verily, that as God Almighty moved your lordship to set us unto it, so shall it be to His glory, and right welcome to all them that love to serve Him and their prince, in true faithful obedience. As is only known to the Lord of Heaven, to whom we most heartily pray for your lordship's preservation.

"At Paris, 9th day of August, 1538, by your faithful orators,†

"Myles Coverdale.
"Richard Grafton.
"William Grey."

In the preparation of this edition, Coverdale was evidently influenced very much by the principle of expediency, to which he was wont to pay too great regard; and perhaps Cromwell had also given him directions respecting the course he pursued, with a view to meet the prejudices of the day. Passages from the Vulgate, unauthorised by the original, were introduced into the version, with a distinguishing mark. It gives the great Bible a peculiar character, and without Coverdale's statement in the foregoing correspondence, the supplementary matter with the curious marks prefixed, is calculated to puzzle the mere English reader.

Bonner, though raised to the see of Hereford, continued in his diplomatic appointment at Paris, and to all who are acquainted with the subsequent history of this notorious persecutor, it will appear somewhat surprising, when they are informed by Foxe, that the ambassador encouraged the printing of the English Scriptures, invited the printers to his house, visited them in return, dined with them at home, and generously paid the cost of the entertainment. But the bishop was willing at this price to secure the good opinion of Cromwell, who, as the special favourite of his prince, had it in his power amply to repay the services of his friends.

The house of "Francis Regnault," some quaint looking building, in the Paris of the sixteenth century, in all probability long since fallen to decay, was the scene of the honoured toils of our translator, and the industrious printers. To this worthy we are introduced by the letter annexed, in which Coverdale and Grafton solicit a favour on his behalf, in acknowledgment of his former kindness, and in the hope of his future service.

"After most humble and due salutations to your most honourable lordship. Pleaseth the same to understand, that we are instantly desired of our host (whose name is Francis Regnault, a Frenchman) to make supplication for him, unto your lordship. Whereas of long time he hath been an occupier into England more than forty years, he hath always provided such books for England as they most occupied; so that he hath a great number at this present, in his hands, as Primers in English, Missals, with other such like, whereof now (by the Company of the Booksellers in London) he is utterly forbidden to make sale, to the utter undoing of the man. Wherefore most humbly we beseech your lordship to be gracious and favourable unto him, that he may have licence to sell those which he hath done already; so that hereafter, he print no more in the English tongue, unless he have an English man that is learned, to be his corrector, and that the man well contented withal. He is also contented and hath promised before my lord elect of Hereford, that if there be found any notable fault in his books, he will put the same out, and print the leaf again. Thus are we bold to write unto your lordship in his cause (as doth also my lord elect of Hereford), beseeching your lordship to pardon our boldness and to be good lord unto this honest man, whose servant shall give attendance upon your lordship's most favourable answer. If your lordship show him this benefit, we shall not fare the worse in the readiness and due expedition of this your lordship's work of the Bible, which goeth well forward, and within few months will draw to an end, by the grace of Almighty God, who preserve your good lordship, now and evermore."

The year was drawing to a close,† and with it the noble work in which Coverdale felt so deep an interest. The printers were probably engaged on the last sheet or two, and the superintendent of the press was anxious to ascertain his patron's pleasure, concerning the annotations proposed to be introduced, a circumstance, by the way, which shows how completely the preparation of this volume was under Cromwell's control; so much so, that it ought in justice to bear his name.

A Letter from Coverdale to Cromwell.

"Right honourable and my singular good Lord,
"After all due salutations I humbly beseech your lordship that by my lord elect of Hertford I may know your pleasure concerning the annotations of this Bible, whether I shall proceed therein

* State Papers, Cromwell Correspondence, Vol. I. No. 115.
† A letter to Cromwell dated 30th October, is preserved among the State Papers. It relates entirely to a charge of disloyalty against a Mr. Beckyssall, whom Coverdale knew, and whose character he vindicates. "Neither," he says, "do I understand otherwise but at this present hour all we that be here of the king's nation are even of one heart and humble mind toward God and our sovereign."
or no. Pity it were that the dark places of the text, (upon the which I have always set a hand), should so pass undeclared. As for any private opinion or contentious words, as I will utterly avoid all such, so will I offer the annotations first to my said lord of Hereford, to the intent that he shall so examine the same, afore they be put in print, if it be your lordship's good pleasure that I shall so do. As concerning the New Testaments in English and Latin, whereof your good lordship received lately a book by your servant Sebastian, the cook, I beseech your lordship to consider the greenness thereof, which (for lack of time) cannot as yet be so apt to be bound as it should be: and whereas my said lord of Hereford is so good unto us to convey this much of the Bible to your good lordship, I humbly beseech the same to be defender and keeper thereof; to the intent that if these men proceed in their cruelness against us and confiscate the rest, yet this at the least may be safe by the means of your lordship, whom God the Almighty evermore preserve to his good pleasure. Amen.

"Written somewhat hastily, at Paris the 13th day of December. Your humble and faithful servoirt. " Myles Coverdale."*

The English and Latin Testaments referred to were of an edition which we shall hereafter notice; it is more to our present purpose to mark the indications which the letter gives of rising troubles. The work had proceeded smoothly—it was now to be interrupted. Clouds were gathering, dark and portentous, and soon the tempest burst. Before the letter could reach its destination, there came forth, in the name of the Inquisitor-General in Paris, an instrument, dated 17th December, 1538, prohibiting poor Francis Regnault, and all others whom it might concern, from completing the said Bible in the vulgar Britannic tongue, and from making away with or concealing the sheets already printed, unless they were seen by this same inquisitor. The Englishmen were summoned to attend before this ecclesiastical tribunal, which had thus dared to raise itself in opposition to the royal prerogatives: but stricken with terror, they made a hasty retreat, leaving behind them the unfinished sheets, which were seized by the inquisitors and doomed to the flames; but the lieutenant-general, whose horror of heresy was surpassed by his love of gain, preferred to sell a quantity of them for waste paper; and they became the property of a haberdasher, who bought them, says Foxe, "to lap caps in." But they were destined to a nobler use: Grafton providentially recovered them, and thus completed many of the copies of the Bible which had previously been sent over to England. The repurchase of the haberdasher's sheets appears, from what Foxe says, not to have been effected till the latter part of the year 1539; but we find from existing copies that the book was "finished in April, anno 1539," whence we are to conclude that the part which was wanting to complete the work was printed in London, and that some copies were perfected before the recovery of such part of the edition as had fallen into the haberdasher's hands. It may be added, that it seems a much smaller portion of the work was destroyed than is generally supposed; inasmuch, as the recovered sheets were sufficient to fill "four great dry futs."

Cranmer's name has generally been connected with this "great Bible," but without reason. He wrote a preface for the new edition of it published in 1540,† but he does not appear to have had any thing to do with its original preparation. Cromwell and Coverdale were the persons to whom the credit and honour of the work must be assigned, the former having projected, and the latter having executed the undertaking. The volume exhibits a revision of Matthew's Bible, and though the renderings often differ very considerably from those in Coverdale's version, it is not improbable that he was the reviser.

The patron of this great work, who, with his manifold infirmities of character, evinced a deep regard for the word of God, and a warm desire for its circulation, took steps to secure that important object as soon as the great Bible was complete, by issuing injunctions to the clergy, enjoining upon them to provide the whole Bible of the largest volume in English, and set up the same in some convenient place within their churches, that their parishioners might commodiously resort to the same and read it.‡

Great was the delight diffused through the community, by this concession of a spiritual right of which they had been long iniquitously debarred. "It was wonderful," says Strype, "to see with what joy this book of God was received, not only among the learned sort, and those that were noted for lovers of the Reformation, but generally all England over by the vulgar and common people, and with what greediness God's word was read, and what resort to places where the reading of it was. Every body that could, bought the book, or busily read it, or got others to read it to them, if they could not themselves; and divers more elderly people learned to read on purpose; and even little boys flocked among the rest to hear portions of the Holy Scriptures read." Both the eye of the poet, and the heart of the saint, must love to linger over the scene of the grey-headed sire, and the child with his curly locks, gathering round the well-spring of divine truth, and slaking their thirst at the living waters. The reading of the Bible in Old St. Paul's, * and in the aisles of many a cathedral and parish church, in the England of the sixteenth century, is one of those beautiful associations with the history of the olden time which an English protestant must fondly cherish.

The following letter to Cromwell by our translator refers to the license which had been granted to Nicholson to sell Bibles and Testaments, and solicits a similar license for the same person to print certain sermons† which Coverdale had prepared for the press, and which had been revised by the Archbishop of Canterbury. It probably belongs to the early part of the year 1539.‡

"After due consideration to your good lordship, I heartily and in most humble wise beseech the same, that inasmuch as the king's most excellent majesty, of his singular grace (by the means of your good lordship as God's instrument in that behalf) hath granted unto this bearer, James Nycolson, his gracious license and privilege, for the sale of his Bibles and New Testaments already printed; and forasmuch as his grace is also informed, and hath seen a part of our postils, or ordinary sermons, which the lord archbishop of Canterbury hath corrected, your lordship, according to your most loving and favourable manner of old, will help and further the said James Nycolson, to the king's most gracious privilege for certain years to print the same, considering the cost and charge that he hath had, not only for drawing of the said sermons out of Scripture, but also in preparing now of his letters and print for the setting forth of the same. This I most humbly require of your lordship, whom God preserve now and ever. Amen.

"Your lordship's humble and daily orator, Myles Coverdale."

Before Coverdale left London for Paris, it seems that he arranged the plan of a Diglot Testament in Latin and English, which he left his friend Nicholson to publish. He wrote the dedication, and permitted the use of his name in connection with the book. But when the volume reached him, he found it had been most carelessly edited and printed, and was "both base, insensible, and clean contrary not only to the phrase of our language, but also from the understanding of the text in Latin." He therefore repudiated the work, and prepared another edition himself, which was printed in Paris, and published with the special approval of Bishop Bonner. The book was dedicated to Cromwell, and Coverdale explains in that dedication the history of Nicholson's incorrect edition. The English printer, however, was bent on securing his own profit, and therefore published himself a new edition of the Diglot, and gave the name of "Johan Hollybushe" on the title-page.

It was probably in the year 1539 § that Coverdale was employed in Berkshire, in the service of his early friend and patron Thomas Cromwell, who had now attained to the dignity of Lord Privy Seal. The subjoined letters, while they prove Coverdale's zeal and activity in searching for popish publications, and in suppressing the worship of one of England's most popular saints, Thomas of Canterbury, also shed a very interesting light upon the character and proceedings of those times.

* Bonner, however, did not set up the Bibles till 1541.
† Are these the \"Fruitful Lessons\" included in his works published by the Parker Society?
§ These letters have been considered by Anderson and others, to belong to the year 1538; but the transactions to which Coverdale's letters refer, are described by Strype as taking place in 1539.—[Omn. I. 549.], and the first of the letters is indorsed \"Ao XXX.,\" which probably means the year of the king's reign, which would be from April 22, 1538, to April 22, 1539. That Coverdale returned to England after the interruption at Paris, and did not leave till 1540, appears from a letter just published in the volume of Coverdale's \"Remains,\" dated Frankfort, March 26th, 1548, in which he says \"I am now on my return to England after an exile of eight years.\" Twenty-two letters written by him during this period are published in the \"Remains.\" Most of these were written at Bergzabern, his stated place of residence. The correspondence is very interesting, and illustrates the piety and the zeal of this good man. They afford scarcely any particulars immediately relating to himself, but they evince much disinterested kindness towards others, and great anxiety for the promotion of religion.
"After my most humble and due salutation to your right honourable lordship, this is to advertise the same, that for lack of diligent inquisition and through overmuch suffrance there are in these countries (and so I fear me in many more) an innumerable sort of such popish books, as not only be incorrect, but are also great occasion to keep the king's subjects still in error, and to make them fall into such like inconvenience as did lately one John Cowper, whose accusation I trust your lordship hath received (or shall do) this week by the justice, in consideration of the premises I have (under your lordship's favourable correction) required the curate of Newbury to call for all such books as were either incorrect or against the king's most lawful act concerning Thomas à Becket, or the Bishop of Rome, by the means of the which request there are brought unto me in these two or three days a great number of such books; wherefore inasmuch as I perceive that this doth turn to the glory of God and to the honour of our most noble king, I humbly require your lordship to grant me authority, and to give me a charge and commandment by your letters, that wheresoever I understand any such unlawful books to be, I may correct them or cause them to be corrected. In the executing whereof I do not doubt but to win the parties, and to make them not only more fervent towards God and his word, but also to increase in due obedience towards the king's highness, whom with noble prince Edward, and you all of their most honourable council the mighty arm of God evermore preserve. From Newbury the vii day of February. Your favourable answer I most humbly require by this bearer my poor servant.

"Your lordship's humble and faithful servant,

"To the right honourable my singular good lord, the Lord Privy Seal."

"My right humble salutation. Considering my most bounden duty in seeking the honour of the king our sovereign lord, I am constrained to write again unto your good lordship for none other cause so much as to signify unto the same, that as me thinketh (I speak under correction) a great number of the priests of this realm are run in prenumire unto the king, inasmuch as they have not utterly extinct all such ecclesiastical service as is against his grace's most lawful supremacy and prerogative, for in the feast called Cathedra St. Peter a great part of their matins is plainly a maintenance of the Bishop of Rome's usurped power. This is evident in all the great matin books of the church of Newbury, and I doubt not but it is so likewise in many churches more. I found it the 7th day of this month, and I wonder at it, considering that it is so long since the act was made for the abolishing of all such usurped authority. This, my very dear and singular good lord, do I open and show only unto your lordship, neither doth any man else in the world know that I have uttered this thing, no, not this bearer, good Mr. Wyncheome, unto whom (for his true heart towards the king's highness, and love towards your lordship) I might utter right secret things. The ever living God that never failed your good lordship guide the same in doing the thing that is to his glory, and to the honour of our most gracious king. Amen. If it be your lordship's good pleasure I shall do ought further herein, I humbly beseech you to know the same by writing, or otherwise by the mouth of Mr. Wynchcombe.

"From Newbury the viii day of February. Your lordship's humble and faithful servant,

"To the right honourable and my very singular good lord, the Lord Privy Seal. This to be delivered, ad manus."

"In my most humble wise with like salutation to your right honourable lordship, this is to signify unto the same that, this 4th day of March, one Nicolas Hyde, and one John Greyse, of Henley-upon-Thames, came to me unto Newbury, reporting that in a glass window of our Lady Chapel, in the Church of the said Henley, the image of Thomas à Becket, with the whole feigned story of his death, is suffered to stand still: not only this, but that all the beams, irons, and candlesticks (whereupon tapers and lights were wont to be set up unto images) remain still untaken down, whereby the poor simple, unlearned people believe that they shall have liberty to set up their candles again unto images, and that the old fashion shall shortly return. Item, that one Thomas Woolley, of Henley, did forbid five of his neighbours his house for holding with the gospel, and said that he had evil will for receiving such men of the new learning. So that, in the said town of Henley, poor men are not only discouraged from the truth of God, but it appeareth also that the king's most gracious commandment is not put in execution. Now though Sir Walter Stoner, knight, be the king's justice of peace at Henley, yet (under your lordship's correction) I reckon great and notable negligence in the Bishop of Lincoln, who being so nigh thereby doth not weed out such faults; yea, I fear it be as evil or worse in many more places of his diocese.

"It is my duty also to signify unto your good lordship, the great oversight of the stationers of London, who for their lucre and gains are not ashamed to sell still such primers as corrupt the king's subjects. A great number of them have my neighbours brought unto me, and a great sort of other ungracious popish books (both contrary to God and the king's highness) have I taken up within the precincts of Newbury, and will do more, if your good lordship will give me authority, or bid me do it. Whereof I humbly beseech you (my most dear and singular good lord), to have your loving answer by the mouth of this bearer, young Mr. Wyncombe, and to know your good pleasure what I shall do with these popish books that I have already, whether I shall burn them at the Market Cross or no. Thus the everlasting God preserve your good lordship long to endure. Amen.

"From Newbury, 5th day of March. Your humble and faithful servant,

"MYLES COVERDALE.

"To the right honourable and my very singular especial good lord, the Lord Privy Seal. This to be presented, ad manus."*

In the course of 1540, probably about the time that he lost his patron Cromwell, he went to Germany, where for some time he resided. Tubingen became the place of his abode, and from the university of that city he received a diploma conferring on him the distinction of doctor of divinity. He was now chiefly dependent for support on literary labour, and the education of the young. During the lifetime of Cromwell, his resources probably had been supplied by the bounty of that extraordinary man. When the latter fell a victim to the resentment of his capricious master, our translator lost a friend to whom he was under many temporal obligations, and a patron whose influence somewhat affected the independence of his character, and guided his proceedings to a greater extent than was desirable. Coverdale seems to have leaned too much on Cromwell, to have submitted too implicitly to his directions: to have deferred too humbly to the judgment of that politic minister. He certainly did not possess that bold independence of mind which marked the course of his distinguished contemporary, Tyndale. The latter had the self-erectness of the oak, the former, like the vine, appeared to need some outward prop. After Coverdale left Tubingen he went to reside in the dominions of the duke of Deux-ponts, and being well skilled in the German language, and a man of literary and theological reputation, he was favourably noticed by the duke, and appointed to the benefice of Bergzabern. During his stay on the continent, but at what time or place cannot be ascertained, he married a pious woman, the sister of a lady, the wife of Macchabæus Alpinus, a distinguished Scotchman, who held a high appointment under the king of Denmark. Coverdale thus took a step which thoroughly identified him with the reformers who had abjured the celibacy of the priesthood, as one of the great evils of the church of Rome. About this time, probably, he wrote and published his translation of Calvin's treatise on the Sacrament, to which he subjoined "the order that the church and congregation of Christ in Denmark doth use." At the close of which tract he remarks, "Let no man be slack in his duty; but give God that which is his, and to the king the things that belongeth unto him." "This I say to stop the mouths and the blasphemous tongues of such as will not cease to rail on men, and to slander me (yea, even to the king's majesty), as though I were a perverter of common order, or took upon me to change the laws and to make new statutes. Nay, ye ungodly hypocrites, not so, but as I am sure that there is heavy damnation laid up for all such subjects as rebel or make sedition against the prince, or disobey the least commandment of God in their sovereign, even so I am assured that there is no less damnation prepared for those rulers or heads that make unjust laws and cruel statutes, to maintain their own lusts and oppress the poor."

In 1547 he was again in England, holding the appointment of almoner to Queen Catherine. At this time he enjoyed a high reputation for his learning and piety, and was one of the persons employed in the preparation of Erasmus's paraphrase of the New Testament for the use of English readers. He wrote the dedication of the second volume to Edward VI, and prefixed Tyndale's prologue to the epistle to the Romans, thus evincing the estimation in which he held the labours of his departed fellow exile. Probably he translated the former part of the volume as far as the end of the epistle to the Galatians.

Coverdale continued in the service of Catherine till her death, which happened in September, 1548. After the decease of Henry she married Lord Seymour, and went to reside at Sudley Castle, Gloucestershire, whither Coverdale accompanied his royal mistress. He officiated at her funeral, and carefully guarded the persons who were present against supposing that he gave his sanction to the popish ceremonies performed for the dead, some remains of which lingered in the service at these royal obsequies. The preacher requested "that none there should think, say, or spread abroad that the offering which was there done, was done any thing to profit the dead, but for the poor only: and also the lights which were carried and stood about the corpse were for the honour of the person, and for none other intent nor purpose."

After the death of the queen dowager, Coverdale was variously employed. He preached at St. Paul's Cross, on the 27th of April, 1549, when some Anabaptists did penance. In the summer of 1550, when Lord Russel went down into Devonshire, to quell the disturbances which arose from both civil and religious dissatisfaction to the existing government, Coverdale accompanied the army, with the view of subduing the popular mind to obedience and loyalty, by the gentle influence of argument and expostulation. After the victory of Exeter, he celebrated the event in a thanksgiving sermon. For these services, according to an entry in the council book of Edward VI, 20th of June, 1550, Coverdale received the sum of forty pounds. In this year also two new editions of our translator's Testament were printed, and one of the Bible. On the 18th of January, 1551, he was put upon a commission for the seizure and trial of heretics; a commission which was the renewal of a former one, unhappily distinguished by its intolerant proceedings against the unfortunate Joan of Kent. The new commission proceeded in the footsteps of the old one, and doomed to the stake a Dutch Arian. What part Coverdale took in the proceedings of the commission, or whether he took any part in them at all, we cannot determine. For the honour of his character, we hope that no considerations induced the reformer to implicate his name in the performance of deeds which must have been revolting to his benevolent heart; yet we cannot forget that men as kind as he, were so warped by the intolerant spirit of their age that, under the influence of a stern but most mistaken sense of duty, they refused all mercy to those whom they had convicted of heretical opinions.

The next glimpse we have of Coverdale is at Westminster, where, on the 7th of March, 1550 (O.S.), we find him preaching a funeral sermon for Lord Wentworth, who had been lord chamberlain, and at whose funeral special honour was done to his memory. Coverdale was on the road to high preferment. His office in the queen dowager's household, and the services he had performed for government, recommended him no doubt to the patronage of those who were in power, while his learning, active habits, and tried zeal in the cause of the Reformation, qualified him for some distinguished post in the English church. As early as the June of the preceding year mention is made in a letter from Peter Martyr then at Cambridge, of the probable promotion of Coverdale to the see of Exeter, in the room of Vesey, who from age and infirmity was unable to perform his episcopal duties. On the 14th of August, 1551, King Edward nominated Coverdale to the bishopric, Vesey having been induced to resign. But though by this appointment he was exalted to honour, and became possessed of influence, his pecuniary advantage was of small amount, as Vesey had alienated the revenues of the see to a very large extent. Indeed, such were the straitened circumstances of Coverdale, that he felt himself compelled to petition the king to relieve him from the payment of the first-fruits. Nor was it without considerable delay that he was able to proceed to his diocese: "such," says Strype, "were at that time the urgent affairs of state, or the secret hinderers of the gospel." Through Cranmer's influence matters were at length arranged; and on the 30th of August, Coverdale was consecrated at Croydon, bishop of Exeter. In the following September he was licensed to preach; a form which seems to have been necessary even for bishops in those days: and in the same month another and very curious license was granted him, allowing him and his wife Elizabeth, and five or six guests at their table, to eat maccat on fast days.*

* Rymer's Federa, Part V. Ed. VI. p. 2. No. 35.
On the 6th of October a commission was addressed to eight bishops, of whom Coverdale was one, together with eight civil and eight common lawyers, directing them to undertake a revision of the ecclesiastical laws of the realm. Strype states* that the commissioners diligently pursued their task, and completed it; but in consequence of the king's early death the contemplated measure of reform was never carried into effect. In the discharge of the secular duties of his episcopal office Coverdale was very diligent, for it appears from the Lords' Journals, in 1552 and 1553, that he was not absent from the sittings of the House more than three times altogether. But as the whole of the two sessions did not occupy quite four months, these engagements would not detain the bishop very long from his diocese, where in the discharge of his spiritual functions he was most exemplary.

The following character of Coverdale, during his residence at Exeter, is given by Hoker his contemporary, who was chamberlain of the city. "He preached continually upon every holy day, and did read most commonly twice in the week in some one church or other within this city. He was after the rate of his livings a great keeper of hospitality, very sober in diet, godly in life, friendly to the godly, liberal to the poor, and courteous to all men, void of pride, full of humility, abhorring covetousness, and an enemy to all wickedness and wicked men, whose company he shunned, and whom he would in no wise shroud or have in his house and company. His wife, a most sober, chaste, and godly matron, his house and household another church in which was exercised all godliness and virtue. No one person being in his house which did not from time to time give an account of his faith and religion, and also did live accordingly; and as he had a care for the good success in religion, so had he also for the direction of the government in ecclesiastical causes, and because he was not skilful therein, neither would be hindered from his godly studies, and be encumbered with such worldly matters, which, nevertheless, he would have been done in all uprightness, justice, and equity; he sent to Oxford for a learned man to be his chancellor, and by the ministry of the writer hereof, he procured and obtained one Master Robert Weston, doctor of the civil law, and afterwards lord chancellor of Ireland, unto whom he committed his consistory, and the whole charge of his ecclesiastical jurisdiction, allowing unto him not only all the fees thereunto appertaining, but also lodged and found him, his wife, family, horse and man, within his own house, and gave him a yearly pension of forty pounds. And surely the bishop was no more godly and careful of his part concerning preaching, but this man also was as diligent and severe in doing of his office without reproach of being affected or corrupted. And notwithstanding this good man was a blameless bishop, and lived most godly and virtuous, yet the common people, those old bottles, would receive no wine, could not brook or digest him, for no other cause but because he was a preacher of the gospel, an enemy to papistry, and a married man. Many devices were accounted against him for his confusion, sometimes by false suggestions, sometimes by open railing, and false libels, sometimes by secret backbitings, and in the end practised his death by imposing, but by the providence of God, the snares were broken, and he delivered."†

In 1550 a new edition of Coverdale's Bible was printed at Zurich, which was the last previous to the first edition in the present form published in 1833. It was reissued with a new title-page in 1533, and "set forth with the king's most gracious license." It must have been one of the last instances in which that license was given, for Edward, after a short and anxious reign, was removed to another world on the 6th of July of the same year. It proved a mournful day for the protestantism of England, and her faithful sons were soon made to feel the weight of papal intolerance.

On the 22nd August Coverdale was summoned to appear before the privy council at Richmond, and on the 1st of September he made his appearance, when he was ordered to await the council's further pleasure. On the 28th of the same month Vezey was reinstated in the see of Exeter, on the pretense that his previous resignation had been extorted from him by terror. Coverdale, however, though ejected from his bishopric, was not like the rest of the distinguished reformers committed to prison, but was suffered to remain at large, only giving sureties to appear before the council whenever summoned to do so. Yet the fear of persecution did not induce him to swerve from his steadfastness in the reformed faith, for we discover that when, after the famous public disputation at Oxford between the popish divines and Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, the other imprisoned brethren signed a declaration, stating their views of truth, and avowing their resolution, "when they cannot obey, but must disobey God, then to submit themselves with all patience and humility, to suffer as the will and pleasure of the higher powers shall adjudge," the faithful Coverdale shrunk not from signing the document in the following manner, "To these things above said, I, Myles Coverdale, late of Exon, consent and agree with these mine afflicted brethren, being prisoners, with mine own hand." The heroes of the protestant faith just named nobly perished at the stake, but Coverdale, through the mercy of Divine Providence, was permitted to escape.

On the 4th February, 1555, Rogers was led to Smithfield, the first of the illustrious band who there ascended in "chariots of fire" to heaven. Fourteen days after Rogers’s execution, Mary gave her permission to Coverdale to leave the country,—a very remarkable circumstance which requires explanation. He had married a lady who was sister to the wife of Macheabaus Alpinus, at that time chaplain to Christian II, king of Denmark, and professor of theology in the university of Copenhagen. He was a man of influence, and a favourite with the Danish sovereign, and through his intercession his royal master was induced to write to Mary on behalf of Coverdale. The king wrote on the 25th of April, 1554, soliciting the reformer’s liberation and pardon, to which Mary replied, that Coverdale was under restraint simply on account of certain debts which he owed to the crown. The king rejoined, in a letter dated the 24th of September, that he was glad it was only a debt that occasioned difficulty, and added that, as the bishopric had not been enjoyed long enough to afford Coverdale the means of paying anything, his majesty hoped that he would shortly be permitted to visit Denmark, and to "make declaration concerning the benefit of his welfare." Some months passed; Mary seemed unwilling to comply, but it would not do for her to disturb the friendly understanding which existed between the English and Danish courts, and therefore she tardily granted in the following February the king’s request.

Mr. Anderson, in his valuable work on the Annals of the Bible, suggests that there was another circumstance which contributed to Coverdale’s escape.* During the trial of Rogers, Gardiner, who presided over the iniquitous tribunal, on hearing the protomartyr’s observation, that the queen "would have done well enough but for Gardiner’s council," declared "the queen went before me, and it was her own motion," of the truth of which we have no doubt, for it is well known that Mary afterwards stimulated Bonner to his deeds of blood.† Mr. A. remarks, that Gardiner’s assertion placed the queen before the country in one of the most critical of all positions as the sole and imperative persecutor; and he adds, "there can be no doubt from what followed, had made her tremble not only for herself, but the husband on whom she at this time doated." He alludes to the well known circumstance of a Spanish divine being appointed to preach against religious persecution as a miserable artifice to lull the public mind; and then connects the permission given for Coverdale to leave the country with the examination of Rogers, as if it were intended by Mary to counteract the impression produced by Gardiner’s remark. It certainly appears very inconsistent with this that the queen should, a few weeks afterwards, permit the work of persecution to be resumed, and doom more victims to the stake;‡ and, as to the sermon of the Spanish friar, it seems to have been entirely a device of Philip’s to remove odium from himself, who was suspected of intending to introduce the inquisition to England. There is no evidence of Mary’s interfering in any way at this time to check the persecution, and soothe the minds of her subjects; and, as to the latter object, the release of Coverdale was too inconsiderable a circumstance to be likely to aid in its accomplishment. The interference of his Danish majesty was no doubt the main, if not the only, cause of the translator’s liberation.

On the 19th of February, 1555, Coverdale obtained his passport, and embarked, no doubt with great joy, for the shores of Denmark. Soon after he was gone, the lurid flames of persecution blazed over his native land, and sympathy with the sufferers for the truth, many of whom were doubtless well known to him, and well beloved, must have been mingled with his devout gratitude for the interposition of the Almighty in his escape. He was kindly received by the Danish king, through whose instrumentality he had escaped the "mouth of the lion," and it is said that his majesty offered him a benefice in the church of Denmark: but Coverdale, unacquainted with the Danish tongue, and anxious to be employed in preaching the gospel, preferred to cast in his lot among some English exiles at Wesel in Friesland. After remaining there a short time, he returned to the former scene of his labours; and on the 15th of September arrived at Bergzabern, at the request of his old friend, Wolfgang, duke of Deux-ponts. On the 15th of December, 1558, we find him at Geneva, where he joined in writing* a letter to the church at Frankfort, congratulating them on the accession of Elizabeth to the English throne, and entreating them to lay aside their present dissensions respecting ceremonial matters, the continuance of which would give so much joy to their enemies. The churches of the English exiles on the continent were at the time much distracted by controversies on points of ceremony and discipline; but there is no evidence of Coverdale having had any connection with them, save in the way indicated by the letter above noticed. It was in accordance with his gentle spirit to inculcate lessons of peace, though his well known attachment to the cause of scriptural truth evinced that he regarded the wisdom which cometh from above as "pure," and not permitting him to sacrifice principle in order to be "peaceable."

The name of Coverdale has sometimes been associated with the Genevan New Testament, published in 1557, but it is highly improbable that he was at Geneva so soon. The Genevan Testament, as appears from the preface, was the work of one person, a fact strangely overlooked by many authors, and this person there is good reason to believe was William Whittingham.† That he had some share in assisting the preparation of the Genevan Bible is not altogether improbable, as he was there a few months while the work was going on; but the principal part of the undertaking certainly rested with others, probably Whittingham, Gilby, and Sampson.‡

The accession of Elizabeth to the throne of England was a signal for the return of the protestant exiles, and among the rest, Coverdale soon found his way to his native land. On the 12th of November, 1559, Coverdale again took his place in the old pulpit of St. Paul's Churchyard, where the friends of the Reformation now once more gladly assembled to hear the faithful and warm-hearted instructions of their favourite teachers. The next notice of our reformer is discovered in connection with Archbishop Parker's consecration, in which ceremony Coverdale, with Barlow, Scory, Bale, and the suffragans of Bedford and Thetford, took a part. From this it would appear that Coverdale was still regarded as a bishop of the church of England, his deprivation in the reign of Mary being treated as illegal. It seems probable that the intention was to restore this old veteran to his diocese at Exeter, but that his conscientious scruples in reference to certain ceremonial matters enforced in the English church under Elizabeth, prevented him from enjoying his former dignity. At the consecration of Parker he appeared in a plain black gown, while his episcopal brethren were arrayed in surplices; and to the the end of his life it is well known that he retained his dislike to what he considered popish vestments. But though his conscience would not allow him fully to conform to the established order of things in the church, and he was thereby excluded from his former see, yet he does not seem to have relinquished his title to the episcopal character, for he signed himself throughout the rest of life, "Myles Coverdale, quondam Exoniensis."

Grindall, the bishop of London, was a friend to Coverdale. He sought to obtain for him the bishopric of Llandaff, looking upon him as a neglected man, and thinking perhaps that conformity to ecclesiastical laws about vestments might in his case be very well dispensed with. On the failure of other plans for his promotion and comfort, Grindall at length succeeded in making some provision for him by giving him the living of St. Magnus, near London-bridge. He was collated to the rectory on the 3rd of March, 1563; but poverty still clung to him, for he could not pay the first-fruits due to the queen. He wrote to Archbishop Parker the following letter on the subject.

"My duty considered in right humble and faithful wise. These are in like manner to beseech your grace, most reverend father, and my singular good lord, that as my good lord of London, tendering as well my weak and feeble age, as also my poor travails in God's husbandry within his diocese, hath most gently conferred upon me the benefice of St. Magnus in London, being in value an hundred marks or thereabouts

so it may please your grace to join with his lordship in suit for me to the queen's most excellent majesty, that in favourable consideration how destitute I have been of a competent living in the realm ever since my bishopric was violently taken away from me. I being compelled to resign, and how I never had pension, annuity, or stipend of it, these ten years: how unable also I am either to pay the first-fruits, or long to enjoy the said benefice, going upon my grave, as they say, and not like to live a year. Her majesty, at the contemplation of such reverend, honourable, and worthy suitors, will most graciously grant me her warrant and discharge for the first-fruits of the said benefice. And as I am bold most humbly to crave your grace's help herein, so am I fully persuaded, God willing, to show myself again as thankful, and in my vocation, during my short time, as faithful and as quiet as I can. Thus having uttered my boldness, I most humbly commit your grace and all yours to the mighty protection of God. From London, Jan. 29.

"Myl. Cov. quond. Exon."

The following letter relates to the same subject, and forms another affecting memorial of the poverty and sorrow of this eminent servant of Christ.

Bishop Coverdale to Sir William Cecil.

"My duty considered in right humble wise unto your honour. These are in like manner to beseech the same, that whereas my lord of London, tendering as well mine age as my simple labours in the Lord's harvest, hath very gently offered me the pastoral office and benefice of St. Magnus in London; even so it may please your honour to be means for me to the Queen's most excellent Majesty, that in favourable consideration, not only how destitute I have been ever sith my bishopric was taken from me, and that I never had pension, annuity, or stipend of it these ten years and upward; but also how unable I am, either to pay the first-fruits, or long to enjoy the said living, I going upon my grave, not able to live over a year, her Majesty at the contemplation hereof may most graciously grant me the first-fruits of the said benefice, which her highness must needs have again anew, when I am gone.

"Herefore (I praise God for it!) your honour hath ever been my special help and succour in all my rightful suits. If now, that poor old Myles may be provided for, it please your honour to obtain this for me, I shall think this enough to be unto me as good as a feast. Thus most humbly beseeching your honour to take my boldness in good part, I commit you, and all yours, to the gracious protection of the Almighty.

"From London, February 6th, [1564].

"Myles Coverdale, quond. Exon."

Poor Coverdale! His Divine Master, for wise and gracious purposes permitted him to struggle with many trials in his old age, for in the same year in which he was so teased by poverty, he was smitten with the plague, from which, through the goodness of God, he was restored and was permitted to resume his ministerial labours. It might have been expected that the remainder of his days would be spent in the enjoyment of peace and honour. He was now settled in his rectory, beloved by his parishioners, and highly esteemed by the friends of the Reformation. The University of Cambridge, in the year 1563, had conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity; and in the following year, had commissioned him as a deputy to confer a similar honour on Bishop Grindall; but despite of his piety, labours, usefulness, honour, and old age, this devoted servant of God was soon involved in difficulties again, owing to the stringent enforcement, by the ruling powers, of the ecclesiastical regulations relating to habits and ceremonies. A letter written on the 25th March, 1566, indicates that the veteran reformer was in trouble through his conscientious scruples about conformity to these regulations, and gives us some idea of his increasing infirmities.

Bishop Coverdale to the Rev. Mr. Robinson, Chaplain to Archbishop Parker.

"My duty considered in right humble and most hasty wise. Whereas, I am summoned to appear, with others, to-morrow afore my lord's grace, at Lambeth, I beseech your worthiness to be means for me unto his grace, that at this present I may be dispensed with; not only for that I am unwieldy, and could neither well travel by land, nor altogether safely by boat, but also for other considerations which this bearer, my dear friend, shall signify unto you by mouth. Thus being desirous of your gentle answer, I commend you and all yours to the gracious protection of God. March 25th, 1566.

"Your own in the Lord,

"Myles Coverdale. quond. Exon."
In the July of the same year he united with Humphrey and Sampson, two distinguished Puritans, in writing a letter to Farrell, Viret, Beza, and other divines on the continent, respecting the vestmentarian controversy, which, as it exhibits the opinions of Coverdale on the subject, and throws light upon his position at this time, we shall venture to insert, though it be rather long.

Myles Coverdale, Laurence Humphrey, and Thomas Sampson, to William Farrell, Peter Viret, Theodore Beza, and others.

"We must not only, honoured masters and brethren, appear troublesome to your reverences by so frequently addressing you by our friends and our letters, but must seem also very regardless of our duty to the church, by disturbing you, who are occupied in matters of far greater importance, with the relation of our trifles. Yet the unhappy condition of our times, and fresh troubles, compel us to have recourse to you, not only that you may be informed more fully of the state of our affairs, and our own opinions respecting them, but that we also may more fully understand your sentiments. Our affairs are not altered for the better, but alas! are sadly deteriorated. For it is now settled and determined, that an unleavened cake must be used in place of common bread; that the communion must be received by the people on their bended knees; that out of doors must be worn the square cap, bands, a long gown, and tippet; while the white surplice and cope are to be retained in divine service. And those who refuse to comply with these requirements, are deprived of their estates, dignities, and every ecclesiastical office; namely, brethren, by brethren and bishops, whose houses are at this time the prisons of some preachers; who are now raging against their own bowels; who are now imposing these burdens not only on their own persons, but also on the shoulders of others; and this too at a time when in the judgment of all learned men they ought to have been removed and abolished altogether. Thus you have the image and representation, such as it is, of our church. Now then, hear our opinion upon this state of things. We think that it must be assumed in this question, that the Jewish, Turkish, Christian, and Popish religions have each their own peculiar sacraments and signs; and that external profession ought to be the test and badge of any one's doctrine; and that we are to seek our pattern not out of the cisterns and puddles of our enemies, but from the fountain of the Scriptures, and of the churches of God; so as not to be connected by any similarity of rites with those from whose religion we are altogether abhorrent; which rule we read, was diligently observed by our forefathers in respect to the sabbath and passover of the Jews, the fastings of the Manichees, and the trine immersion of heretics. Nor, indeed, can we regard these things as altogether indifferent, when compulsion is made use of, and when too, they are branded with the mark of superstition; nor ought anything to be obtruded (on the church) by the authority of the sovereign, without its having been lawfully discussed in a Christian synod: nor ought agreement in ceremonies everywhere to be required of necessity, especially when it is in common with the enemies of the faith: nor is there any occasion in the church of Christ either for the Aaronic priesthood, or pharisaical ambition, that sacred garments should be worn now-a-days in the Christian temple, or that a dress not common, but distinct and peculiar, should be prescribed for ordinary use. But we think with Celestine, that the clergy should be distinguished from the people by their doctrine, not their garments; their conversation, not their dress; their purity of mind, not their adornment of person; lest we begin to hunger after novelties, tread under foot the order received from our forefathers, impose upon the minds and eyes of the simple, and make room for vain and unprofitable superstitions. Besides, as many of us as have cast out these things from the churches committed to our trust, cannot restore them without grievous offence and abominable impiety: and since a door would also be opened to other mysteries of iniquity, and the love of the godly be offended, and the pride and boldness of the wicked be encouraged, without even any pretence of edification; and since it is not lawful, according to St. Paul's rule respecting things indifferent, for every one to rest in his own persuasion, but that that should be regarded as lawful which is not displeasing to certain men; we considered it more for the good of the church to stand fast in our liberty with an accession of godly men on our side, than to depart from the opinion we have taken up, and the custom we have received, to the scandal of many, and the downfall of purer doctrine. This is our opinion, and also that of a most excellent personage. We now, most illustrious and very dear masters and brethren, request you by our most intimate communion in Christ, to point out the cynosure to us who are tossed about on the waves; and either to show us a better way if we are in error, or confirm us, when doubting, in our holy purpose. The question, we confess, is nice and difficult, whether it is better to yield to circumstances, or to depart; to admit the relics of the Amorites, or to desert our post? Either alternative is harsh, grievous, and productive of mischief both to ourselves and the church. Which is the better do you with your wonted wisdom declare, because we are lingering in suspense as in the last extremity. We also request of you and your brother ministers to put forth at the earliest opportunity some treatise on the nature of things indifferent, on ceremonies, on the sacerdotal habit; by which both our church and those of Saxony may be instructed, and the zeal of our sovereigns inspired to the demolition of all the distinctive marks of antichrist. We make it, lastly, our request, that you would admonish our bishops by letter not to persecute Joseph on account of a garment; nor to rend the church with such a schism for so slight a cause; but that even in the dissimilarity of rites they may preserve the sweetest harmony of spirit and brotherly love. For far be it from us to think of them otherwise than as becomes friends and brethren. The sum is this. We request these three things; your reply to the questions here proposed by us, and some treatise to all the churches generally; a letter to the bishops privately, and, if you please, to such of her majesty’s councillors as you may be acquainted with, so that this whole controversy may issue in a christian reconciliation, and not in a cruel separation. Communicate this letter to all your brethren, that we may hear what the Lord may speak out of the mouth of two or three witnesses. May the Lord Jesus preserve his church pure and inviolate even to the day of his just judgment! Your most devoted,

"July, 1566.

"Myles Coverdale, formerly bishop of Exeter,

"Laurence Humphrey,

"Thomas Sampson."*

Coverdale forfeited his benefice by conscientiously refusing to obey the act of uniformity, but he still continued to preach. "Many of the people," says Strype, "ran after Father Coverdale, who took that occasion to preach the more constantly, but yet with much fear, so that he would not be known where he preached, though many came to his house to ask where he would preach the next Lord’s day." He continued his labours till within a few months of his departure to a better world, which happened the 20th of May, 1567, in the 81st year of his age. He was buried in the church of St. Bartholomew, behind the Royal Exchange, and his funeral was attended by multitudes who revered his memory and bewailed his loss.

When the Church of St. Bartholomew was pulled down in 1840, careful search was made for Coverdale’s remains: they were discovered in a grave within the chancel. A particular account of the exhumation was drawn up, from which it appears that the skeleton was perfect, the skull alone being decomposed. The coffin was removed to the church of St. Mary Magnus, and now the bones of the translator repose within the walls which one echoed with his voice.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL DESCRIPTION

of

PRINTED IN 1535.

WHILE the reprint of this Bible cannot fail to be welcome to the public generally, there are many who, we feel certain, will not be dissatisfied to have some bibliographical details concerning so curious and valuable a work.

The book itself is printed in a very peculiar angular Swiss or German type. Its size is a small folio, and there is no name of place or printer in it.

The copies of this Bible known to exist, are those in the Libraries of the British Museum.—Bodleian. —Public Library, Cambridge.—King's College, Cambridge.—Sion College.—All Souls' College.—Trinity College, Dublin.—Lambeth Library.—Bapt. Mus. Bristol.—Duke of Sussex.—Earl of Leicester.—Earl Jersey.—Earl Spencer.—Dr. Coombe.—The late William Coombes, Esq.—George Offer, Esq.—B. Harrison, Esq.—Rev. R. Daley.—Lea Wilson, Esq.; and Mr. Reed."

"Of seven copies of this edition," says Mr. Cotton, "which I have seen, that in the British Museum is the only one that has the title-page, and even that is made up from two copies. Of the others, the Bodleian copy is by far the finest." Not only is the title-page of the one in the Museum made up from two copies, but it is even made up from two separate wood-cuts of the same design; for in the one, the texts in the scrolls are in English, in the other, in Latin.

One perfect title-page, however, is in existence, and is found in the beautiful copy of this edition in the Earl of Leicester's library at Holkham. It is as follows:

"BIBLIA

Bibliographical Description.

Douche and Latyn," was no doubt a bookselling artifice of the time, to make the work circulate better, as being intimately connected with the reformed doctrines, which were then equally well known by the term of German or Dutch doctrines. Nay, we are even told that the early reformers of that day were commonly called Germans, on account of their adoption of those reformed opinions which first sprung up in Germany. That Coverdale did not follow Luther's version, it only requires a very slight comparison of texts to prove; but he no doubt availed himself, where there occurred any difficult reading, of all the different means of assistance within his power, as indeed he himself intimates in his prologue to the reader.

The wood-cuts surrounding the title are the same as in the title-page of 1536, of which a facsimile is prefixed to the present reprint.

On the reverse of the title is, "The bokes of the whole Byble, how they are named in Englisyh and Latyn, how longe they are wrytten in the allega-cions, how many chapters every boke hath, and in what leafe every one begynneth." It contains, however, only references to the first four parts; those to the Apocrypha and the New Testament were probably on another leaf, which is missing in this copy (the Museum one).

Then comes the dedication, "Vnto the most victorious Prynce and our most gracous soueraigne Lorde, kynge Henry the eyght, kynge of Englonde and of Fraunce, lorde of Irlonde, &c." signed "Yourer graces humble subiecte and daylye oratour, Myles Couerdale." 5 pages. The Museum copy has "Quene Anne" in the dedication; Sion College has "Quene Jane;" Lambeth Library has a copy with each; the Bodleian has "Quene Anne;" All Souls' College has neither; Dr. Coombe's has neither; the late Mr. Coombes's has "Quene Anne."

Then "A prologue. Myles Couerdale Unto the Christen reader." 6 pages.

Then "The bokes of the hole Byble" &c., 2 pages. This is evidently part of another edition inserted in this copy (the Museum one), or rather this set of preliminary pieces do not belong to this title-page; since a portion of the same information is to be found printed on the reverse of the title-page.

The contents of "The first boke of Moses," 1 page.

"The first boke of Moses, called Genesis." Then should come, according to Herbert, a map of the Holy land. The four other books of Moses follow, with tables of contents prefixed to each: in all, fol. i—xc. Signature a i, to p vi, in sixes. The first leaf appears not to have any signature, or else it has been rubbed out in this copy (the Museum one), the second leaf being marked a ii.

Then comes a title-page: "The seconde parte of the olde Testament." with the names of the books contained underneath. This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse "The boke of Josua. What this boke conteyneth." Joshua to Hester, fol. ii—cxxx (the reverse of). Tables of contents at the commencement of each book. Signature a a ij, to v v vi, in sixes.

Then comes another title-page: "All the Pro-Bibliographical Description.

Prophets in Englishe." with the names of the books contained, underneath. This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, the contents of "the Prophet Esay." The contents prefixed to each Prophet. In all, fol. ii—cii, (the reverse of). Signature A a a ij, to R r vi, in sixes.

Another title-page: "Apocripha The bokes and treatises which amonge the fathers of olde are not reckened to be of like authorite with the other bokes of the byble, neither are they foude in the Canon of the Hebrue." Then follow the names of the books. At the bottom, "Vnto these also belongeth Baruc, whom we have set amge the prophetes next vnto Jeremy, because he was his scrybe, and in his tyme." This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, "The translatoure vnto the reader." containing some observations on the nature of these books. Underneath the contents of the first book. The contents are prefixed to each book, except to "Certayne chapters of Hester." "The songe of the iij children." "The story of Susanna," and "The story of Bel;" in all, fol. ii—lxxxi (the reverse of), falsely numbered lxxxi. Signature A ij to O v, in sixes, the last leaf blank.

Then the title-page: "The new testament." underneath, the books named. Also in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, the contents of "The gospel of S. Mathew." The contents before each book. In all, fol. ii—cxiii (the reverse of). Signature AA ij, to TT v, in sixes.

On the reverse of the last leaf, "Prynted in the yeare ofoure LORDE M.D.XXXV. and fynished the fourth daye of October."

At the beginning of Genesis are six cuts in wood, describing the six days' work of the creation; and in different parts of the work are other cuts, also in wood, some of them very spirited and well executed, representing the history therein mentioned, and most probably done, as before stated, by Sebald Behem of Nurembergh. There are also some initial letters of a very elegant character, from designs of Holbein.

This Bible, as will be seen by the above description, is divided into six parts, of which four have separate title-pages. That there should be no separate title-page to the first part is not strange, as it scarcely seemed to want one: but it is rather curious that there should be none to the third part; and that there never was any printed, and that it is not missing from the present copies, is clear, since the first leaf is numbered fol. i, which would not otherwise have been the case. The type, as before mentioned, is an angular Swiss or German. The title-page and its reverse are in the same letter as the body of the text. But the dedication, the prologue, the names of "the bokes of the whole Byble," and the contents of Genesis, are in a different character, and were most probably printed after the arrival of the volume in England. There are a few marginal references, which are in Roman letters. On fol. xlii. of part I. is a large wood-cut of the Tabernacle and its contents; this is repeated on the reverse of fol. lvi. The initial letter of Genesis is a large flourished text capital. A full page contains fifty-seven lines.

Whether this edition ever had a table of the Epistles and Gospels for the Sundays, &c. at the end, is not known. No copy has yet been found, that we are aware of, containing any such table; but it seems not improbable that it had, since we find one in the reprints in quarto and in folio, by Nicol- son, in 1537; and also in the edition of 1550.

It is not known how many copies of this edition were issued from the press, but the number must have been very great, when we consider that it was the first edition of the whole Bible in English ever offered to the public, at a time, when, excited by the writings daily put forth by the reformers, they were most eager to peruse it; and that Grafton, when he published Matthew's Bible in 1537, although of a much larger size, and consequently more expensive, ventured to print as many as 1500 copies.

This Bible was reprinted in folio and in quarto in 1537, by Nicholson, in Southwark, with a very few slight and trifling alterations. It was printed again in 1550, after which, what remained of the edition was issued in 1553, with a reprinted title-page and preliminary pieces. The edition of 1535 had a new title-page in 1536, of which, as before stated, a facsimile is prefixed to this edition.
VTNTO THE MOST VICTORIOUS PRYNECE AND OURE MOST GRACYOUS SOUERAINDE LORDE,

KYNGE HENRY THE EYGH,

KYNGE OF ENGLONDE AND OF FRAUNCE, LORDE OF IRLONDE. &c. DEFENDOUR OF THE FAyth, AND VNDER GOD THE CHEFE AND SUPPREME HAEDE OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLONDE.

 ¶ The ryght is just administracyon of the lawes that God gawne vnto Moses and vnto Iosua; the testimonye of faythfulnes that God gawne of David: the plenteous abundance of wysdome that God gawne vnto Salomon: the lucky and prosperous age with the multiplycation of sede whiche God gawne vnto Abraham and Sara his wyfe, be gerę vnto you most gracyous Prynce, with your dearest iust wyfe, and most vertuous Pryncesse, Queene Anne, Amen.

CAIPHAS beynge bysshope of that yeare, lyke a blynde prophete (not vnderstanding what he sayd) prophesied, that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that all the people shulde perysse: he meanyng, that Christ was an heretike, a deceiver of the people, a destroyer of the lawe, and that it was better thercfor to put Christ vnto death, the to suffice hym for to lyue, and to decease the people. where in very dexe Christ was the true prophete, the true Messias, and the onely true Saincie of the worlde, sent of his hevenely father to suffice the moste cruel, most shamefull, and most necessary death for our redempcyon: accordyng to y* meanyng of the prophecie truly vnderstondre.

Euen after the same maner y* blynde bysshoppe of Rome, (that blynde Baalam I saye) not vnderstanding what he dyd, gawe vnto your grace this tylte: Defendour of the fayth, onely becaus your hyghnes sufferyd your bysshoppes to burne Gods worde the rote of fayth, and to persecute the louers and mynnisters of y* same, where in very dexe the blynde bysshoppe (though he knewe not what he dyd) prophesied, that by the ryghteous administrayon and contynuaull diligence of youre grace, the fayth shulde be defended, that Gods worde the mother of Fayth with the frutes thereof, shulde have his full course thorowe out all Christendome, but specyally in your realme.

Yf your hyghnesse now of your pryncelye benigne wyll pardon me to compare these two bysshoppes (I meane bysshoppe Caiphas and the bysshoppe of Rome) their prophecies together, I doute not but we shal fynde them agree lyke brethren, though the one be a Iewe and the other a counterfayte Christian. Fyrst, Caiphas prophesied that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that the people shulde perysse. The bysshoppe of Rome also, not knowynge what he prophesied, gave youre grace this tylte: Defendour of the fayth. The trueth of both these prophecies is of the holy goost (as was Baalams prophecie) though they that spake the, knewe not what they sayd. The trueth of Caiphas prophecie is, that it was necessary for mans saluacyon, that Christ by his death shulde overcome death, and redeeme vs. And the trueth ofoure Baalams prophecie is, your grace in very dexe shulde defende the Fayth, Yee euen the true fayth of Christ, no dreames, no fables, no heresie, no papisticall inuencions, but the vn corrupted fayth of Gods most holy worde, which to set forth (prayed be the goodnes of God, and increase youre gracyous purpose) your hyghnes with youre most honorable counseil, applyeth all his studeye and Endeouer.

These two blynde bysshoppes now agree in y* vnderственно of theyr prophecies: for Caiphas taketh Christ for an heretike, Oure Balaäh taketh the worde of Christ for heresie. Caiphas iudgeth it to be a good deed to put Christ vnto death, that he shulde not deceaue the people. Oure Balaam calleth defendyng of the fayth, the suppressyng, kepyng secrete, and burnyng of the worde of fayth: lest the lyght thereof shulde etter his darynes: lest his owne Decreates & Decrees, his owne laves and constitutions, his owne statutes and innencions shulde come to none effecte: lest his intollerable exactions and vsurpacion shulde lose theyr strengthe: lest it shulde be knowne what a these and murtherer he is in the cause of Christ, and how haynous a traytoure to God and man in defraudynge all Christen kynges prynces prynces of their due obedience: lest we youre grace subiectes shulde hane eyes in the worde of God, at the last to spye out his crafty connyeaunce and iuglynges: and lest men shulde se, how sore he and his false Apostles hane deceaued all Christendome, specially youre noble realme of Englonde.

* Io. 11. 8.

* Name, 24. c.

Thus your grace seyth how brotherly the Iewysh hysshoppe and oure Balaam agree together, not onely in myter and outwarde apperarance: but as the one persecuted the Lorde Jesus in his owne persone, so doth the other persecute his worde and resysteth his holy ordynance in the auctorite of his anoynted kynges. For so moche nowe as the worde of God is the onely trueth that dryneth awaye all yyes, and discloseth all iuglyng and discate, therefore is oure Balaam of Rome so lothe that the scripture shulde be knowe in the mother tonge: lest ye kynges and prynces (speciallly above all other) were exercised therin, they shulde reclame and chalenge agayne theyr due auctorite, which he falsely hath vsurped so many yeres, and so to tye hym shorter: and lest the people beynge taught by the worde of God, shulde fall from y* false fayned obedience of hym and his disguysed Apostles, vnto the true obedience commaundeth by Gods owne mouth: as namely, to obey theyr prynce, to obey father and mother. &c. and not to steppe ouer father and mothers bely to enter in to his paynted religions, as his hypocrites teache: For he knoweth well ynowne, that ye cleare Sonne of Gods worde come ones to the heate of the daye, it shal drye awaye all the soule myst of his deuelysh doctrines. Therfore were it more to the maytensance of Antichristes kyngdome, that the worlde were styll in ignoraunce and blyndnes, and that the scripture shulde neuer come to lyghte. For the scripture (both in the olde testament and in the new) declareth most aboutidauntly that the office, auctorite and power geyen of God vnto kynges, is in earth abow all other powers: let them call the selues Popes, Cardynalles, or what so euer they will, * the worde of god declareth them (ynec and commandeth them vnder payne of dampnacion) to be obedient vnto the temporall swerde: As in the olde Testament all the Prophetes, Prestes and Leuites were. And in the new Testament * Christ & his Apostles both were obedient them selues, and taught obedience of all men vnto theyr prynces & temporall rulers: which here vnto vs in the worlde present the persone of God, and are called * Goddes in the scripture, bycause of the excellecy of theyr office. And though there were no mo auctorities but the same, to prone the peminence of the temporall swerde, Yet by this the scripture declareth planly, that as there is nothing aboue God, so is there no man aboue the kyng in his realme but that he onely vnder God is the chefe heade of all the cregregacyon and church of the same. And in token that this is true, there hath ben of olde antiquite (and is yet vnto this daye) a louynge cere monyse vse in your realme of Englonde, ye* wha your graces subiectes reade your letters, or begynne to talke or come of your hygnes, they move thyr bonettes for a signe * token of reuenerunce vnto your grace, as to their most soueraigne lorde * heade vnder God, which thyng no man vseth to do to eyn hysshoppe. wherby (ye oure vnderstondyng were nat blynded) we myght euysently perceane, that euen very nature teacheth vs the same, that scripture cIMAIdeth vs: and that lyke as it is agaynst Gods worde that a kyng shulde not be the chefe heade of his people, euen so (I saye) is it agaynst kynde that we shulde knowe any other heade aboue hym vnder God.

And that no prest nor hysshoppe is exempte (nor can be lawfully) from the obedience of his pryncie, the scripture is full both of strayte cIMAaundemetes, * practises of the holyest men. *Aaron was obedient vnto Moses, and called hym his lorde, though he was his owne brother. * Eleasar and Phineas were vnder the obedienc of Iosua. * Nathan the prophete fell downe to the grounde before kyng Daud, he had his Prynce in such reuerence (He made not the kyng for to kyss his fote as the bysshoppe of Rome maketh Emperorous to do) Notwithstandinge he spared not to rebuke hym, and that ryght sharply when he fell from the worde of God to adulterie & manslaughter. For he was not aforded to reprove hym of his sinnes, nonmore than Helyas the prophete stode in feare to saye vnto kyng Achar: † It is thon and thy fathers house that trouble Israel, because ye hane forsaken ye commandementes of the Lorde, and walke after Baal. And as Johan Baptyste durst saye vnto Kyng Herode: ‡ It is not lawful for the to take thy brothers wyfe. But to my purpose I passe over innumerable mo ensamples both of the olde Testament and of the new, for feare lest I be to tedious vnto your grace. Sūma, in all godly regiments of olde tyne the kyng and temperall jude was obeyed of euery man, and was alwyse vnder God the chefe and suppreme heade of the whole congregacyon, and deposed euon prestes when he sawe an vrgent cause, as Salomon dyd vnto Abiathar, who coulde than stonde agaynst the godly obedience of his prynce (excepte he wolde be at defaynance with God and all his holy ordinances) that were well acquaynted with the holy scripture, which so earnestly comendeth vnto euery one of vs the auctorite and power geuen of God vnto kynges and temperall rulers? Therefore doth Moses so strately forbyde the Israelites to speake so moche as an euell worde agaynst the prynce of ye people, moche lesse than to disobeye hym, or to withstonde hym. Doth not † Ieremy the prophete and ‡ Baruc also exhorte the people in captitaine, to praye for the prosperous welfare of the kyng of Babilon, and to obeye hym, though he was an infidele? In the new Testament wha oure sauioure Christ (hyng yet fre † Lorde of al kynges ‡ prynces) shewed his obedience in payenge the trybute to oure eusample, † dyd he not a miracle there in putttyng the pece of money in the fysshes mouth (that Peter myght paye the customer therwith) and all to stablysshe the obedience due vnto prynces? § Dyd not Ioseph and Mary the mother of our sauiour Christ departe fro Nazareth vnto Bethleé, so farre from home, to shewe their obedience in payenge the taxe to the prynce? And wolde not oure Sauioure be borne in the same obedience? || Doth not Paule pronounce hym to resyste God hym selle, that resysteth the auctorite of his prynce? And (to be shorte) the Aposte Peter † dothe not onely stablysshe the obedience vnto prynces and temporall rulers but affirneth playnly the kyng (and no bysshoppe) to be the chefe heade. Innumerable places mo are there in scripture, which bynde vs to the obedience of oure prynce, and declare vnto vs, that no man is nor can be lawfully excepte from the same: but that all the mynisters of Gods worde are vnder the temperall swerde: † Prynces onely to owe obedience vnto God as his worde.

And where as Anthichrist vnto youre graces tyme dyd thrust his heade into ye imperiall crowne of your hyghnes (as he doth yet with other nobel prynces mo) that lernde he of Sathã the authour of pryde, and therin doth he both agaynst the doctrine ‡ also agaynst ye ensample of Christe: whiche because his kyngdom was not of this worlde, meddled with no temporal matters, as it is euendly both by his wordes and practys: Luc. xii. Math. xxvi. Ioh. vi. Ioh. xviii, where he ye hath eyes to se, maye se: ‡ he ye hath eares to heare, maye heare, ye† Christes administracion was nothynge temperall, but playne spiritual, as he hym selle affirneth ‡ proueth in the fourth chapter of saynt Luke out of the prophete Esay: where all bysshoppes and prestes maye se, how farre they hyngynge and lowsyngge extendeth, and where in theyr office consisteth, namely in preychynge the Gospell. ‡c.

wherfore (most gracous prynce) there is no tongue I thinke, that can fully expresse and declare the vntollerable injuries, which have bene done vnto God, to al prynces and to the comynalidid of all christen realmes, sence they which shulde be onely the ministers of Gods worde, became lorde of the worlde, and thrust ye true and just prynces out of theyr rownes. whose herte wolde not pitie it (yee euén with lamentacyon) to remember but onely the vntollerable wronge done by that Antichrist of Rome vnto youre graces most noble predecessoure kyng Iohn? I passe ouer his pestilent pykyng of Peter pens out of youre realme: his stealynge awaye of youre money for pardons: benefices and bysshoprykes: his diisecuung of youre subiectes soules with his deuelyshe doctrynes and sectes of his false religions: his blondsheddyng of so many of your graces people, for bokes of the scripture. whose herte wolde not be grened (yee and that out of measure) to call to remembrance, how obstinate and disobedient, how presumptuous stubborne that Antichrist made the bysshoppes of youre realme agaynst your graces nobel predecessours in tymes past, as it is manyst in yᵉ Chronicles? I trust verye there be no suche now within youre realme: Yf there be, let them remembre these wordes of scripture: "Presumptuous goeth before destruction, & after a proude stomacke there foloweth a fall."

what is now the cause of all these vnlittleable and nomore to be suffered abominacions? Truely enen the ignoraunce of the scripture of God. For how had it els ben possyble, that such blyndnes shulde have come in to yᵉ worlde, had not yᵉ lyghte of Gods worde bene extyncte? How coulde men (I saye) have bene so farre from the true seruycye of God, and from the due obedience of thyr prynces, had not the lawe of God bene clene shut vp, depressed, cast asyde, and put out of remembrance? As it was afore the tyme of that noble kyng Iosias, and as it hath bene also amonge vs vnto youre graces tyme: by whose most ryghteous administraction (thorowe the mercyfull goodnes of God) it is now founde agayne, "as it was in the dayes of that most vertuous kyng Iosias. And prayes be the father, the sonne, and the holy goost worlde without ende, which so excellently hath endowed your Pryncely hert with such fermentes to his honoure, and to the welth of youre louynge subiectes, that I maye ryghtuously (by inst occasyons in youre persone) compare youre hyghtnes vnto that noble and gravcyng kyngye, yᵉ lanterne of lyghte amonge prynces, that feruent protectour and defender of the lawes of God: which commaundde straitly (as youre grace doth) that the lawe of God shulde be radd and taught vnto all yᵉ people: set the prestes to theyr office in the worde of god: destroyed Idolatry and false ydols: put downe all euell customes and abusyons: set vp the true honour of God: applied all his studye and endeuoure to the ryghteous administraction of the most vnкорrupte lawe of God. &c. O what felicete was amonge yᵉ people of Ierusalem in his dayes? And what prosperous health both of soule & body foloweth the lyke mynystration in youre hyghtnes, we begynne now (prayes be God) to hane experience. & For as false doctryne is the origenall cause of all euell plages and destruccion, so is yᵉ true executcye of the lawe of God the praichyng of the same, the mother of all godly prosperite. The onely worde of god (I saye) is the cause of all felicete, "it bryngeth all goodnes with it, it bryngeth lernynge, it gëdeth understandyng, it causeth good workes, it maketh children of obedience, breuely, it teacheth all estates theyr office and dnty. Seynge then that the scripture of God teacheth vs every thynge sufficiently, both what we oughte to do, and what we oughte to leue vndone: whome we are bounde to obey, and whome we shulde not obeye: therfore (I saye) it causeth all prosperite, and setteh every thynge in frame: and where it is taught and known, it lyghteneth all darkeneses, conforteth all sory hertes, leaueth no poore man vnhelped, suffreth nothyng anysse vnamended, leteth no prynce be disobeyed, permytteth no heresie to be praiched: but reformeth all thinges, amëdeth that is amysse, and setteh every thynge in order. And why? because it is genen by the inspiracyon of God, therfore is it en er bryngeth profyte and frute, by teachynge, by improuyng, by amendyng and reformyng all the yᵉ wyll receaue it, "to make them perfecte & make vertue all good worke.

Consideryng now (most gracys pryncye) the inestimable treasure, frute & prosperite euerylastyng, that God geneth with his worde, and trustyng in his infynyte goodnes that he wolde bryngeth my symple and rude laboure herin to good effecte, therfore as the holy goost mouned other më to do the cost heros, so was I boldened in God, to laboure in the same. Agayne, consderyng your pryncely majeste not onely to be my naturall soueraigne liege Lorde & chefe beade of yᵉ church of Englyde, but also the true my dutye and to belonge vnto my allegiaunce, when I had translated this Bible, not onely to dedicate this

MYLES COUERDALE.
A PROLOGE.
MYLES COUERDALE VNTO THE CHRISTEN READER.

CONSIDERYNGE how excellent knowllege and lernyng an interpreter of scripture oughte to have in the tongues, and pondering also myne owne insufficieny therein, γ σondrye translacyon: for in so much as euery byschopp had the knowllege of y* tongyes, he gane his diligence to have the Byble of his awne translacion.

The doctours, as Hirenues, Cyprianus, Tertullian, S. Iherom, S. Augustine, Hylarius γ S. Ambrose vpon dyverse places of the scripture, reade not y* texte all alyke.

Therefore oughte it not to be taken as euel, y* soch men as haue vnderständyng now in oure tyme, exer-cyse them selues in y* tongyes, γ gene their diligence to translate out of one language in to another. Yee we ought rather to geue god hye thanks therfor, which thorow his sprete stereth vp mēs myndes, so to exercise them selues therin. wolde god it had neuer bene left of after γ tyyme of S. Augustine, then shulde we wene haue come in to soch blindnes γ ignoraunce, in to soch erreours γ delusyons. For as soone as the Byble was cast asyde, γ nonore put in exer-cyse, then beganne euery one of his awne heade to wryte what so euere came in to his brayne and y* semed to be good in his awne eyes: and so grewe γ* darknes of mēs tradiçōs. And this same is γ cause γ we haue had so many wryters, which seldome made meçyony of γ* scripture of the Byble: γ though they some tyme aleged it, yet was it done so farre out of season γ so wyde from γ* purpose, that a ma maye well per-ceane, how that they neuer saue the oryginall.

his people, where as (lyke as whan many are shut-ynge together) every one doth his best to be nyest the marke. And though they can not all attayne thereto, yet shuteth one nyer then another, and bytteth it better then another, yee one can do it better the other. who is now then so unreasonable, so despyteful, and ennyous, as to abborre him ye doth all his diligence to hytte ye prycke, and to shute nyest it, though he mysse ye come not nyest the mark? Ought not soch one rather to be commëded, and to be helped forwarde, that he maye exerxyse himselfe the more therin?

For the which cause (acordyng as I was desyred) I tooke the more vpon me to set forth this speciall translacion, not as a checker, not as a reprouer, or despyser of other mens translacyons (for amonge many as yet I haue founde none without occasyon of greate thankesgenynge vnto god) but lowly ye faithfullly haue I folowed myne interpreters, ye that vnder correcte me. And though I haue fayled eny where (as there is noman but he myseth in some thyngne) I loue shall constyrr all to ye best without eny peruerse judgment. There is noman lyuyngne ye can se all thynges, nether hath god genen eny man to knowe evry thyngne. He that can do better then another, shulde not set him at naught ye vnder-stondeth lesse: Yee he that hath ye more vnderstondynge, ought to remembre that the same gyfte is not his but Gods, and ye goth God hath genë it him to teach ye enseurne the ignoraunt. Yf thou hast knowlege therfore to judghe where eny faute is made, I doute not but thou wilt helpe to amend it, ye loue be ioyde by thy knowlege. Howbeit wherin so ever I can perceyne by my selfe, or by the informacyon of other, that I haue fayled (as it is no wonder) I shall now by the helpe of God ouerloke it better ye amend it.

Now wil I exhorthe the (who so euer thou be ye readest scripture) ye thou fynde oughth therin ye thou vnderstondest not, or that aperareth to be repugnaunt, genë no temerarious ner haystye iudgmët therof: but ascyrbe it to thyne awne ignoraunce, not to the scrpytoure, thynke ye thou vnderstondest it not, or ye it hath some other meanynge, or ye it is happyly onersene of ye interpreters, or wronge prynted. Agayne, it shall greately helpe ye to vnderstonde scripture, ye thou marke not onely what is spoken or wrytten, but of whom, ye vnto whom, with what wordes, at what tyme, where, to what intent, with what circumstauence, consideryngne what goeth before, and what foloweth after.

For there be some thynges which are done ye wrytte, to the intente ye we shulde do lykewyse: as whan Abraham beleueth God, is obedient vnto his worde, ye defendeth Loth his kynsman from violent wronge. There be some thynges also which are wrytte, to the intente ye we shulde eschue soch lyke. As whan Dauud lyeth with Vrias wyfe, ye causeth him to be slayne. Therfore (I saye) when thou readest scripture, by wyse ye circumspecte: ye when thou commest to soch strange maners of speakyng ye darker sentences, to soch parables ye similitudes, to soch dreams or vysions as are hyd by thy vnderstondynge, compass them vnto God or to the gyfte of his holy sprete in them ye are better lerned then thou.

As for the commendacyon of Gods holy scripture, I wolde fayne magnyfe it as it is worthy, but I am farre vsnufficët thereto. Ye therefore I thoughte it better for me to holde my tonge, then with few wordes to prayse or commëde it: exhortynge ye (most deare reader) so to loye it, so to cleue vnto it, ye so to folowe it in thy daylye converusacyon, ye other men seynge thy good workes ye the frutes of ye holy goost in the, maye prayse the father of heauen, ye gene his worde a good reporte: for to lyne after the lawe of God, ye to leade a vertuous converusacyon, is the greatest prayse ye then canst genë vnto his doctryne.

But as touchynge the euell reporte and disprayse that the good worde of God hath by the corrupte and euell converusacyon of some, ye daylye heare it and profess it outwardly with theyr mouthes, I exhorte ye (most deare reader) let not ye offende the ner withdrawe thy mynde fro the loue of ye truthe, nether moue ye to be partaker in lyke vnthankfulnes: but seynge ye lighte is come in to the worlde, lone no more the worke of darknes, receauë not the grace of god in vayne. Call to thy remembraunce how loun-ynge ye mercyfull God is vnto the, how kyndly and fatherly he helpest the in all trouble, teacheth thyne ignoraunce, healthe the in all thy sycknesse, for-genueth the all thy synnes, feteth ye, geneth ye drynke, helpest ye out of preson, norysheth the in straunge countrees, careth for the, ye seyth ye thou wante nothinge. Call this to mynde (I saye) ye that earnestly, and consydre how thou hast receaued of god all these benefites (yee and many mo then thou canst desyre) how thou art bounde lykewise to shewe thy selue vnto thy neigbour as farre as thou canst, to teach him yf he be ignoraunt, to helpe him in all his trouble, to heale his sycknes, to forsgene him his offences, and that ballest, to fede him, to cherish him, to care for him, and to se yf he wante nothing. And on this behalfe I beseeke the (thou yf hast yf ryches of this worlde, and louest God with thy harte) to lyfte vp thyn eye, and soe how greate a multitude of poore people renne thorow everie towne: hate pitie on thynye awne flesh, helpe them with a good harte, and do with theym commell all that euer thou canst, that this vnsanefast beggynge maye be put downe, that these ydle folkes maye be set to laboure, g that soch are not able to gete theyr lynguyen, maye be prouyded for. At the leest thou yf art of counsell with soch as are in anciortye, geue them some occasion to cast theyr heads together, and to make prouysyon for the poore. Put the in remembrance of those noble cityes in other countreys, that by the anciortye of theyr prynces hane so rychely ad well provided for theyr poore people, to the greate shame g des-honestye of vs, yf we lykewyse receaungye yf worde of God, shewe not soch lyke frutes thereof. Wolde God yf those men (whose office is to maynteyne yf commow welth) were as diligent in this cause as they are in other. Let us beware by tymes, for after vnthankfulnes there foloweth euer a plage: the merciful hande of God he with vs, g defende vs that we be not partakers thereof.

Go to now (most deare reader) g syt the downe at the Lorde fete and reade his wordes, g (as Moses teacheth the Iewes) take them in to theyr herte, g let thy talkyng g communicacion be of them when thou sytest in thynye house, or goest by yf waye, whan thou lyest downe, g whan thou ryseth vp. And aboue all thynges fashyon thy lyfe, g conversation accordyng to the doctryne of the holy goost therin, that thou mayest be partaker of yf good promyse of god in the Bybyle, g be heyre of his blyssyng in Christ. In whom yf thou put thy trust, g be an vnfaie red reader or hearer of his wordre with thy hert, thou shalt fynde swetasenese theryn, g spye wonderous thynges, to thy vnderstandyng, to the anodyngye of all sedyngous sectes, to the abhorrnyng of thy olde synfull lyfe, g to the stablyshyng of thy godly conversacon.

In the first boke of Moses (called Genesis) thou mayest lerne to knowe the almightye power of god in creayng ye all of naught, his infinite wysdome in ordyng the same, his ryghteousnes in punyshynge yf ungodyly, his loue g fatherly mercy in comfortynge the righteous with his promes. g.

In the seconde boke (called Exodus) we se the myghtye arme of god, in delayinge his people from so greate bondage out of Egypte, and what prouysyon he maketh for them in the wildernes, how he teacheth them with his wholsome wordre and how the Tabernacle was made and set vp.

In the thryde boke (called Leuiticis) is declared what sacrifices the prestes g Leuites vsed, and what theyr office g ministracyyon was.

In the foure boke (called Numerus) is declared how the people are numbered and mustred, how the captaynys are chosen after yf trybes g kyndreds, how they vete forth to yf battayll, how they pitched theyr teyntes, g how they brake vp.

The fift boke (called Deuteronomium) sheweth how that Moses now beyng olde, rehearseth the lawe of god vnto yf people, putteth them in remembrance agayne of all the woders g benefites that god had shewed for them, and exhorteth them earnestly to lone yf Lorde theyr god, to cleane vnto hym, to put their trust in hym and to herken vnto his voyce.

After the death of Moses doth Issue brynge the people in to the lode of promes where God doth wondrous thynges for his people by Issue, which distributeth yf londe vnto them, vnto eueri trybe theyr possession. But in theyr wealth they forgot the goodness of God, so that oft tymes he gave the one in to the hande of theyr enemies. Neuertheles whan so euer they called faithfully vpoun hym, and converted, he deluyered them agayne, as the boke of Judges declareth.

In the bokes of the kynges, is describde the regimient of good and euell prynces, and how the decaye of all nacionys commeth by enel kynges. For in Ierusalem thou seyst what myscyfe, what ydolatrye g soch like abominacon foloweth, wha the kyngge is a maynteyner of false doctryne, ad causeth the people to syme agaynst God, which fallinge awaye from gods worde, increased so sore amonst them, that it was the cause of all theyr sorrow and misery, g the very occasion why Israel first and then Iuda, were caryed awaye in to captuynte. "Agayne, in Ios-phat, in Ezechias and in Iosias thou seyst the nature of a vertuous kyngge. He putteth downe the houses of ydolatrye, seyth that his prestez teach nothynge but y\(^s\) lawe of God, commandeth his lordez to go with them, and to se that they teach the people. In these kyngges (I saye) thou seyst the c\'odicyon of a true defender of y\(^s\) faught, for he spareth nether cost nor labour, to manteyne the lawes of God, to seke the welth q prosperite of his people, and to rote out the wicked. And where soch a prince is, thou seyst agayne, how God defendeth him and his people, though he haue newer so many enemies. Thus wente it with the in the olde tyme, and even after y\(^s\) same maner goeth it now with vs: God be praysed therefor, ad graunte vs of his fatherly mercy, that we be not vnthankfull: lest where he now goeth vs vs Iosaphat, an Ezechias, yee a very Iosias, he sende vs a Pharao, a Ieroboam, or an Acharab.

In the two first bokes of Esdras q in Hester thou seyst the delyuerance of the people, which though they were but fewe, yet is it vnto vs all a speciall co-forte, for so much as God is not forgetfull of his promes, but bryngeth them out of captuizte, accordyng he had tolde them before.

In the boke of Iob we lerne comforthe and pacience, in that God not onely punyseth the wicked, but proueth q tryeth the iust and righteous (howbeit there is noman innocent in his sighte) by dyuerse troubles in this lyfe, declaryng therby, y\(^s\) they are not his bastardes, but his deare sonnes, and that he loueth them.

In the Psalmes we lerne how to resorte onely vnto God in all oure troubles, to seke helpe at him, to call onely vpon him, to saile oure myndes by pacie\'e, q how we ought in prosperite to be thankfull vnto him.

The Proverbs and the Preacher of Salomon teach vs wysdome, to knowe God, oure owne selues, and the world, and how vayne all thyngez are, saue onely to cleue vnto God.

As for the doctryne of the Prophetes, what is it els, but an earnest exhortacion to eschue synne, q to turne vnto God ? a faughtfull promes of the mercy ad pardon of God, vnto all them y\(^s\) turne vnto him, and a threatenynge of his wrath to the vngodly ? sauyngte that here and there they prophecey also manifestly of Christ, of y\(^s\) expulsion of the Iewes, and callynge of the Heythen.

Thus moch thought I to speake of y\(^s\) olde Testament, wherein almyghtie God openeth vnto vs his myghtye power, his wysdome, his louynge mercy & righteousnesse; for the which cause it oughte of no man to be abhorred, despysed, or lyghtly regarded, as though it were an olde scripture y\(^s\) nothynge belo\'ged vnto vs, or y\(^s\) now were to be refused. For it is Gods true scripture q testimony, which the Lorde Jesus *commandeth the Iewes to search. who so euer beleueth not the scripture, beleueth not Christ, and who so refuseth it, refuseth God also.

The New Testament or Gospell, is a manyst and cleare testimony of Christ how God perfourmeth his oath and promes made in the olde Testament, how the New is declared and included in the Olde, and the Olde fulfylled and verified in the New.

Now where as the most famous interpreters of all gene sondrye iudgmentes of the texte (so farre as it is done by y\(^s\) preote of knowlege in the holy goost) me thynke noman shulde be offended there at, for they referrer their doynges in mekenes to the sprette of true in the congregacyon of god: q sure I am, that there commeth more knowlege and vnderstandinge of the scripture by theyr sondrie translacyons, then by all the gloses of oure sophistical doctours. For that one interprethet somthyng obscurely in one place, the same translathet another (or els he him selfe) more manifestly by a more playne vocable of the same meanyng in another place. Be not thou offended therfore (good Reader) though one call a scryfe, that another calleth a lawyer: or elders, that another calleth father q mother: or repentauce, that another calleth penance or amendment. For yf thou be not discaned by mens tradici\'os, thou shalt fynde no more dyuersite betwene these termes then betwene foure pens and a grote. And this maner haue I vised in my translacyon, callynge it in some place penance, that in another place I call repentance, and that not onely because the interpreters haue done so before me, but that the adversaries of the truth maye se, how that we abhorre not this word penance (as they vtruly reporte of vs) no more then the interpreters of latyn abhorre penitere, whan they reade repiscere. Onely our heretes desyre vnto God, is, that his people be not blyled in their vnderstanding, lest they beleue penance to be ought saue a very repenteance, amended, or conversyon vnto God, and to be an unfayned new creature in Christ, and to lyue accordyng to his lawe. For els shall they fal in to the olde blasphemy of Christes bloude, and beleue, that they the selues are able to make satisfaccion vnto God for theyr owne synnes, from the which erroure god of his mercy and pleseous goodnes preserve all his.

Now to conclude: for so much as all the scripture is wrytten for thy doctrine I ensample, it shalbe necessary for the, to take holde vpon it, whyle it is offerd the, yee and with ten handes to receaue it. And though it be not worthely ministrad vnto the in this translacyon (by reason of my rudnes) Yet yf thou be ferueth in thy prayere, God shal not onely sende it the in a better shappe, by the ministracyon of other that beganne it afore, but shall also moue the herdyes of them, which as yet medled not withall, to take it in hande, and to bestowe the gifte of theyr vnderstoodnyge theron, as well in our eage as other famous interpreters do in other languages. And I praye God, that thorow my poore ministracyon here in, I maye geue them that can do better, some occasyon so to do: exhorting the (most deare reader) in the meane whyle on Gods behalfe, yf thou be a heade, a Judge, or ruler of y° people, that thou a let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercise thyselfe therin both daye and nyghte, and be euer readyng in it as longe as thou lyuest: that thou mayest lerne to feare the Lorde thy God, τ not to turne asyde from the commandement, nether to the right hande ner to the lefte: lest thou be a knower of personnes in Judgmēt, 4 and wrest the rightes of the straunger, of the fatherles or of the wedowe, and so y° curse to come vpon the. But what office so euer thou hast 5 wyte ye and execute it, to the mayntenaunce of peace, to the welth of thy people, defendyng the lawes of God, and the lourers therof, and to the destrucyoun of the wicked.

4 Yf thou be a preacher, and hast the oversighe of the flocke of Christ, awake and fede Christes shepe with a good herte, 6 spare no laboure to do them good, seke not thy selue, 7 beware of fylthy lucre, but 7 he vnto y° flocke an ensample, in y° worde, in cōuersacyon, in loue, in feruentnes of y° sprete, and be euer readyng, exhortyng, 8 teachyng in Gods worde, that the people of God renne not vnto other doctrynes and lest thou thy selue (whan thou shuldest teach other) be founde ignoraunt therin. And rather then thou woldest teach the people any other thynge when Gods worde take the boke in thynge hande, 9 rede the worde v̄ē as they stonde therin (for it is no shame so to do, it is more shame to make a lye) This I saye for soch, as are not yet experete in the scripture, for I reprowe no preachyng without the boke as longe as they saye the truth.

Yf thou be a man that hast wyfe and childrē, first sloue thy wyfe, acordyngge to the ensample of the loue, therewith Christ loued the cogregacion, and remembre that so doyngge, thou louest euem thyselfe: yf thou hate her, thou hatest thine awne flesh: yf thou cherishe her and make moch of her, thou cherishest τ makest moch of thyselfe, for she is bone of thy bones, τ flesh of thy flesh. And who so euer thou be that hast childrē, 6 bryng them vp in the nourtour and informacion of the Lorde. And yf thou be ignoraunt, or art otherwise occupied lauffully that thou canst not teach them thy selve, then be euene as diligent to seke a good master for thy childrē, as thou wast to seke a mother to beare them: for there lieth as great weight in the one as in y° other. Yee better it were for the to be vnborne, then not to feare God, or to be euene brought vp. which thynge (I meane brynyngge vp well of children) yf it be diligently lokked to, it is the vpholdinge of all comon welthes: and the negligence of the same, the very decaye of all realmes.

Fynally, who so euer thou be, take these wordes of scripture in to thy herte, and be not onely an outwarde hearer, but a doer therafter, and practise thyselfe therin: that thou mayest fele in thine hert, the sweete promyses therof for thy consolation in all trouble, τ for the sure stablyshinge of thy hope in Christ, and haue euer an eyte to y° worde of scripture, that yf thou be a teacher of other thou mayest be within the boundes of the truthe, or at the leest though thou be but an hearer or reader of another mans doynges, thou mayest yet haue knowledge to judge all spretes, and be fre from ev ery erroure, to the vttre destruction of all sedicious sectes τ strangue doctrynes, that the holy scripture maye haue fre passage, and he had in reputation, to the worshippe of the author thereof, which is euene God himselfe: to whom for his most blessed worde be glory τ domynyon now τ euer. Amen.

And God sayde: let there be lightes in 5 firmament of heauen, to deuyde the daye from the night, that they maye be vnto tokēs, seasons, dayes, and yeares. And let them be lightes in 5 firmament of heauen, to shyne vpon the earth: And so it came to passe. And God made two greate lightes: one greater light to rule the daye, and a lesse light to rule the night, and (he made) starrs also. And God set them in the firmament of heauen, 5 they might shyne vpon earth, and to rule the daye and the night, and to deuyde the light from darcknes. And God sawe that it was good. Then of the euerynge and mornynge was made the fourth daye.

And God sayde: let the waters bryng forth creatures that moue and haue life, 5 fowles for to flye aboue the earth vnder the firmament of heauen. And God created greate whales, and all maner of creatures that lyue in the waters, which the waters brought forth euery one after his kynde: and all maner of fethered fowles, euery one after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good, and blessed them, saugyen: Growe, and multiplie, and fyll the waters of the sees, and let the fowles multiplie vpon the earth. Then of the euerynge and mornynge was made the fifth daye.

And God sayde: let 5 earth bryng forth grene grasse and herbe, that beareth sede: 5 frutefull trees, that maye beare frute, euery one after his kynde, hauynge their owne sede in them selues vpon the earth. And so it came to passe. And the earth brought forth grene grasse and herbe, 5 beareth sede euery one after his kynde, 5 trees bearing frute, 5 hauynge their owne sede in them selues, euery one after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good. Then of the euerynge 5 mornynge was made the thirde daye.

similitude after our licknesse, that he maye haue rule ouer the fysh of the sea, and ouer the foules vnder ț heauen, and ouer catell, and ouer all the earth, and ouer all wormes that crepe on ț earth. ț And God created man after his licknesse: after ț licknesse of God created he him, male & female created he them.

And God blessed them, and sayde vnto them: ț Growe, and multiply, and fyll the earth, and subdue it, ț haue domynion ouer the fish of the sea, and ouer the foules of the ayre, and ouer all the bestaes that crepe vpo the earth.

ț And God sayde: lo, I haue geuen you all maner herbes that beare sede vpon the whole earth, and all maner frutefull trees that beare sede, to be mate for you. And to all bestaes of the earth, and to all foules vnder the heauen, and to euery bestaes that hath life (vpon earth) all maner grene herbes to eate. And so it came to passe. ț And God behelde all ț he had made, and lo, they were exceedinge good. Then of the euenyenge and mornynge was made the sixt daye.

The ij. Chapter.

THUS was heauen and earth fyished with all their hoost, and thus in the seventh daye God ended his worke, which he had made, ț ț rested in the seuenth daye from all his workes which he had made: And blessed the seuenth daye, ț sanctified it, because ț in it he rested from all his workes, which God created and made.

These are the generationes of heauen and earth when they were created, in the tyme when the LORDE God made heauen and earth: before there was eny twayg vpon earth, and ouer there grew eny grene herbe vpon the felde. For the LORDE God had yet sent no rayne vpon ț earth, neither was there eny man to tyle the earth. But there arose a myst from the earth, ț watered all the loude. And ț LORDE God shope man euê of the moulde of the earth, ț brethed in to his face ț breth of life. ț And so was man made a lyuyenge soule.

The LORDE God also planted a garde of pleasure in Eden, toward ț east, and set man therin whom he had made. And the LORDE God caused to sprynge out of the earth all maner trees, pleasant to loke vpo, and good to eate: and the tre of life in the myddest of the garden, ț and the tre of knowlege of good and euell.

And out of Eden there wente a ryuer, to water the garden, and there deuyded it selfe in to foure heade waters. The first is called Phisone, which renneth abouthe all the londe of Heuyla. ț And there is founde golde, (ț the golde of that countrie is precious) and there is founde Bedellion, and the precious stone Onix. The second water is called Ghihon, which renneth abouthe the whole londe of ț Morias. The thirde water is called Hydrecell, which renneth towarde the east syde of ț Assirias. The fourth water is Euphrates.

And the LORDE God toke man, ț set him in the pleasant garden of Eden, to dresse it ț to kepe it. And the LORDE God commaunded man, sayenge: ț Thou shalt eate of all maner trees in ț garden: But of ț tre of knowlege of good and euell, shalt thou not eate. For loke in what daye so euere thou eatest therof, thou shalt dye the death.

And the LORDE God sayde: It is not good ț ma shulde be alone. I wil make him an helpe, ț to beare him company. And when God the LORDE had made of the earth all maner bestaes of the felde, ț all maner foules vnder the heauen, he brought them vnto man, to se what he wolde call the: For as ma called all maner of fininge soules, so are their names. And man gane names vnto all maner catell, ț vnto the foules vnder the heauen, and vnto all maner bestaes of ț felde. But vnto man there was founde no helpe, to beare him company.

Then the LORDE God caused an herde slepe to fall vpon man, and he slepeth. And he toke out one of his rybbes, and (in steade therof) he fyllde vp ț place with flesh. And the LORDE God made a woman, ț of ț rybble that he toke out of man, and brought her vnto him. Then sayde man: This is once bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She shalbe called woman, because she was taken of man. ț For this cause shal a man leue father and mother, and cleue vnto his wife, ț they two shalbe one flesh. And they were both naked, the man and his wife and were not ashamed.

The iiij. Chapter

BUT the serpent was sotyller then all the beasts of the field (which LORDE God had made) and sayde vnto the woman: Yee, hath God sayde in dede: Ye shall not eate of all maner trees in the garden? Then sayde the woman vnto the serpent: We eate of the frute of the trees in the garden: But as for the frute of the tre that is in the myddes of the garden, God hath sayde: Eate not ye of it, and touch it not, lest ye dye.

Then saide the serpent vnto the woman: *Tush, ye shall not dye the death. For God doth knowe, that in what daye so euer ye eate of it, youre eyes shalbe opened, and ye shall be as God, and knowe both good and euell. And the woman sawe that y tre was good to eate of, and lustye vnto the eyes, and a pleasant tre to make wyse, and toke of the frute of it, and ate, and gaue vnto his hirbande also therof, and he ate. Then were the eyes of them both opened, and they persecuad that they were naked, and sowed fygge leaves together, and made them aprunns.

And they herde the voyce of the LORDE God, which walked in the garden in the coole of the daye. And Adam hyd him self with his wyfe, from the presence of LORDE God amonge the trees of the garden. And LORDE God called Adam, and sayde vnto him: Where art thou? And he sayde: I herde thy voyce in the garden, and was afrayed, because I am naked, and therfore I hyd my self. And he sayde: who tolde the, that thou art naked? Hast thou not eaten of the tre, wherof I commaundad the, y thou shaldest not eate?

Then sayde Adam: The woman which thou gauest me (to beare me company) gaue me of the tre, and I ate. And LORDE God sayde vnto the woman: wherfore hast thou done this? The woman sayde: the serpent diseaunde me so, that I ate. Then sayde the LORDE God vnto the serpent: Because thou hast done this, cursed be thou aboue all catell and aboue all beasts of the felde. Vpon thy bely shalt thou go, earth shalt thou eate all the dayes of thy life. And I wyll put enemaye betwene the and the woman, and betwene thy sede and hir sede. The same shal treade downe thy head, and thou shalt treade him on the heele.

And vnto the woman he sayde: I will increase thy sorrow, when thou art with childe: with payne shalt thou beare thy childdre, and thy lust shal pertaine vnto thy husbande, and he shal rule the.

And vnto Adam he sayde: For so much as thou hast herkened vnto the voyce of thy wyfe, and hast eaten of the tre, wherof I commaundad the, sayenge: thou shalt not eate of it. Cursed be y earth for thy sake. With sorrowe shalt thou eate thereof, all the dayes of thy life. Thorenes and sthistles shalt it beare vnto the, and thou shalt eate the herbs of the felde. In the sweate of thy face shalt thou eate thy bred, tyll thou be turned agayne vnto earth, whiche thou art takè: for earth thou art, and vnto earth shalt thou be turned agayne.

And Adam called his wyfe Heua, because she is the mother of all lyunya. And the LORDE God made Adam a wyfe to him, of the bones of his bonnes. And the LORDE God sayde: lo, Adam is become as it were one of vs, euell all euell. But now lest he stretch his hande, and take alse of the tre of life, and eate, and lyue for euer. Then the LORDE God put him out of the garden of Eden, to tyll y earth, where he was takè. And he cast Adam out. And before the garden of Eden he set Cherubes, and a naked fyrie swerde, to kepe y wyse vnto the tre of life.

The iiiij. Chapter.

MORQUER Adam laye with Heua his wyfe, which coeaued a bare Cain, and sayde, I haue opteyned y man of the LORDE. And she proceeded forth, a bare his brother Abell. And Abell became a sheperde, but Cain became an husbande man. And it fortuned after certaine daies, that Cain brought of the frute of the earth, an ofirynge vnto y LORDE. And Abell brought also of the firstlings of his shepe, and of the fat of them. *And the LORDE had respecte vnto Abell, and to his offerynge: but vnto Cain and his offerynge he loked not. Then was Cain exceedinge wroth, and his countenaunce chaunged. And the LORDE sayde vnto Cain: Why art thou angrie? and why doth thy countenaunce chaunge? Is it not so? that if thou do well, thou shalt receaue it: but and if thou do euell, thy synne lyeth open in the dore? *Shal he then be subdued vnto thee, and wilt thou rule him? And Cain talked with Abell his brother.

And it happened, that when they were in the felde, Cain arose agaynst Abell his brother, and slew him. Then sayde the LORDE vnto Cain: Where is Abell thy brother? He sayde: I can not tell. *Am I my brothers keeper? And he sayde: What hast thou done? *The voyce of thy brethren bloude crieth vnto me out of the earth. And now shalt thou be cursed vpon the earth, which hath opened his mouth, and receaued thy brethren bloude of thine hande. Whan thou tyllest y grounde, she shall hensforth not geue hir power vnto the. *A vagabunde and a rennagate shalt thou be vpon y earth. And Cain sayde vnto y LORDE: *My synne is greater, then that it maye be forgenen me. Beholde, thou castest me out this daye from out of y londe, and from thy sight must I hyde my self, and must be a vagabunde and a rennagate vpon y earth. And thus shal it go with me: that who so fyndeth me, shall slaye me.

But the LORDE sayde thus vnto him: *Who so euer slayeth Cain, it shalbe auenged seuenfolde. And the LORDE put a marce vpon Cain, that no man which founde him, shulde kyll him. So Cain wente out from y face of the LORDE, and dwelt in the lande Nod, vpon the east syde of Eden.

And Cain laye with his wyfe, which conceaued and bare Henoch. And he buylded a cite, and called it after the name of his sonne Henoch. And Henoch begat Irad, Irad begat Mahuiael. Mahuiael begat Mathuiael. Mathuiael begat Lamech.

And Lamech toke him two wyues: *his wyfe was Zilla, the other Zilla. And Ada bare Iabel, of whom came they that dwelt in tentes and had catell. And his brothers name was Iuball: Of him came they that occupied harpes pypes. And Zilla she also bare Tubaleain, a worker in all connyngge pointes of metall yron. And Tubalcains sister was called Naema.

And Lamech sayde vnto his wyues Ada and Zilla: Heare my voye (ye wyues of Lamech) and herken vnto my wordes: for I haue slayne a man, and wounded my selfe: and (haue kylled) a yonge man, and gotte my self strypes. Cain shalbe auenged seue tymes: but Lamech seuen and seuentie tymes.

Adam laye yet with his wyfe agayne, & she bare a soune, and called him Seth. For God (sayde she) hath apoynted me another sede, for Abell, whom Cain slew. And Seth begat a soune also, and called him Enos. At the same tyme beganne men to call vpon the name of the LORDE.

The b. Chapter.

THIS is the boke of the generation of a man, in the tyme whan God created man, and made him after the symilitude of God. Male and female made he them, and blessed the, & called their names Man, in the tyme whan they were created. *And Adam was an hundred and thirtie yeare olde, and begat a soune, which was like his owne ymage, and called his name Seth: & lyued therafter eight hundreth yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundreth and thirtie yeras, and so he dyed.

Seth was an hundreth and fyue yeare olde, and begat Enos: & lyued therafter eight hundreth and seuen yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyene hundreth and twoyle yeras, and so he dyed.

Enos was nyentie yeare olde, and begat Kenan: and lyued therafter eight hundreth & fytene yeare, and begat sonnes & daughters. And his whole age was nyene hundreth and fyue yeras, and so he dyed.

Kenan was seuetie yeare olde, and begat Mahalaliel: and lyued therafter eight hundreth and fourtie yeare, and begat sonnes & daughters. And his whole age was nyene hundreth and ten yeras, and so he dyed.

Mahalaliel was thre score yeare olde & fyue, and begat Iared: and lyued therafter eight

* Heb. 11. a.  * Some reade: Let it be subdued vnto the, and rule thou it.
hundredth and thirtie yeares, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was eight hundredth, nyentie and fyue yeares, and so he dyed.

Iared was an hundredth and two sextie yeare olde, and begat Henoch: sixtie therafter eight hundredth yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundredth and two and sixtie yeares, and so he dyed.

Henoch was fyue and thre score yeare olde, and begat Mathusalal: and led a godly conversacion thre hundredth yeares thereafter, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was thre hundredth and fyue and thre score yeares. And for so much as he lyued a godly life, God toke him awaye, he was nomore sene.

Mathusalal was an hundredth sext and foure score yeare olde, and begat Lamech: and lyued therafter seuen hundredth and two and foure score yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundredth and nyne and tre score yeares, and so he dyed.

Lamech was an hundredth and two and foure score yeare olde, and begat a sonne, and called him Noe, and sayde: This same shall coforme vs in oure workes, and in the sorowe of oure hondes vpon the earth, which the LORDE hath cursed. After this he lyued fyue hundredth and fyue nyentie yeares, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was seuen hundredth seuen and seuentie yeares, and so he dyed.

Nae was fyue hundredth yeare olde, and begat Sem, Ham and Japhet.

The bi. Chapter.

So when men beganne to multiplie vpon the earth, and had begot them daughters, the children of God sawe the daughters of men, that they were favre, and toke vnto the wyues such as they liked. Then sayde the LORDE: My sprete shal not allwaye stryue with man, for he is but flesh also. I will yet geue him respyte an hundredth and twyste yeares. There were giaunts also in the worlde at that tyme. For whan the children of God had lyued with the daughters of men, and begotten them children, same (children) became mightie in the worlde, and men of renowne.

But when the LORDE sawe the wickednes of man was increased vpon the earth, and that all thought and imaginacion of their hert was but onely euell contynuallie, it repented him, that he had made man vpon the earth, and he sorowed in his hert, and sayde: I will destroye man kynde which I haue made, from the earth: both man, beest, worme, and foule vnder the heauen: for it repenteth me, that I haue made them. Neuertheles Noe founde grace in the sight of the LORDE.

This is the generation of Noe. Noe was a righteous and perfect man, and led a godly life in his tyme, and begat thre sonnes: Sem, Ham and Japhet. Notwithstandinge earth was corrupte in the sight of God, and full of myschefe. Then God loketh vpon earth: and lo, it was corrupte (for all flesh had corrupted his waye vpon the earth.)

Then sayde God vnto Noe: The ende of all flesh is come before me, for the earth is full of myschefe before them. And lo, I will destroye them with the earth. Make the an Arcke of Peye tre, and make chambers in it, and pitch it within and without with pitch and make it after this fashion: The length shal be thre hundredth cubites, the breadth fiftie cubites, and the heght thirtie cubites. A wynow shalt thou make aboue of a cubyte greate: but the dore shalt thou set in the mynddest in the syde of it: And the Arke shalt thou make with thre lofes one aboue another. For lo, I will bringe a floude of water vpon the earth, to destroye all flesh (wherin the breth of life is) vnder the heauen: All that is vpon earth, shal perish.

But with the wyll I make a couenaunt, and thou shalt go in to the Arke with thy sonnes, with thy wyfe, and with thy sonnes wyues. And of all creatures what so euere flesh it be, thou shalt bringe in to the Arke, euene a payre: the male and the female, that they maye lyue with the: Of foules after their kynde, of beasts after their kynde, and of all maner wormes of the earth after their kynde. Of euery one of these shalt there a payre goe in vnto the, that they maye lyue. And thou shalt take vnto the all maner of meate that maye be eaten, and shalte laye it vp in store by the, that it maye be meate for the and them. And Noe dyd acordinge to all that God commaunded him.

The vii. Chapter.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Noe: Go in to the Arcke thou g thy whole house: for the hauue I sene righteous before me at this tyme. Of all cleane bestes take vnto the seuen and seuen, the male and his female. And of vnclene bestes a payre, the male and his female. Like wyse of the foules vnder the heauen, seuen and seuen, the male and his female, that there maye be sede left a lyne vpon the whole earth.

For yet after seuen dayes, I wil sende raine vpon the earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes, and wyll destroye all maner of thinges that I have made, from of the face of the earth.

And Noe dyd all that the LORDE commaunded him. Sixe hundreth yere olde was he, wynde the water floude came vpon earth.

And he wente in to the Arcke, with his sonnes, his wyfe, and his sonnes wynes, for the waters of the floude. Of cleane bestes and of vnclene, of all fethered foules, all that crepeth vpon earth, wente vnto him to the Arcke by pares, a male and a female, as the LORDE commaunded him. And whene the seuen dayes were past, the water floude came vpon the earth.

In the sixe hundreth yeare of Noes age, vpon the seuentene daye of the seconde moneth, that same daye were all foules vnder the heauen, of all that crepeth vpon earth, opened vp and fowled vp. And then came a raine vpon that daye vpon the earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes.

Vpon the selfe same daye wete Noe in to the Arcke, with Sem, Ham and Iapheth his sonnes, and with his wyfe, and the thre wyues of his sonnes, and all maner of bestes after their kynde, all maner of catell after their kynde, all maner of crepynge thinges (that crepeth vpon the earth) after their kynde, and all maner of foules (what so euer coude flye) after their kynde: These wente vnto Noe in to the Arcke by coouples, of all flesh in whom was the breth of life. And these were the male of all maner of flesh, and wente in, acordinge as God commaunded him. And the LORDE shut (the dore) vpon him.

*Then came the water floude fourtie dayes vpon the earth, and the water increased, and bare vp the Arcke, and lift it vp ouer the earth. Thus the water preuayled, and increased sore vpon the earth, so that the Arcke wente vpon the waters. Yee the waters preuayled and increased sore vpon earth, that all the hye mountaynes vnder the whole heauen were covered. Fyfteene cubytes hye preuayled the waters ouer the mountaynes, which were covered.

Then all flesh that crepeth vpon earth, perished, both foules, catell, bestes, and all that moued vpon earth, and all men. What so euer had the breth of life vpon the drye londe, dyed.

Thus was destroyed all that was vpon the earth, both man and beast, both wormes and foules vnder the heauen: all these were destroyed from the earth, Saue Noe onely remayned, and they that were with him in the Arcke. And the waters preuayled vpon the earth, an hundreth and fiftie dayes.

The vii. Chapter.

THEN God remembred Noe and all the bestes, and all the catell that were with him in the Arcke, and caused a wynde to come vpon the earth: and the waters ceased, and the fountaynes of the depe and the wyndowes of heauen were stopte, and the rayne of heauen was forbydden, and the waters ranne styll awaye from the earth, and decreased after an hundreth and fiftie dayes.

Vpon the seuentene daye of the seuenthe moneth rested the Arcke vpon the mountaynes of Ararat. And the waters wete awaye and decreased vntyll the tenth moneth: for the first daye of the tenth moneth, the toppes of the mountaynes appeared.

After fourtie dayes Noe opened the wyndow of the Arcke which he had made, and sent forth a rauen, which flew out, and came agayne, vntyll the waters were dryed vp vpon the earth.

Then sent he forth a doue from him, to wete, whether the waters were fallene vpon the earth. But when the doue coude fynde no

restyng place for hir fete, she came agayn vnto him in to the Arke, for the waters were yet vpon the face of all the earth. And he put out his hande, and toke her to him in to the Arke.

Then he abode yet seuen dayes mo, a sent out the done agayn out of the Arke: a she returned vnto him aboute the euen tyde: and beholde, she had broken of a leaf of an olyue tre, a bare it in hir nebb. Then Noe perceaued, that the waters were abated vpon the earth. Neuertheles he taried yet seuen other dayes, and sent forth the done, which came nomore to him agayn.

In the sixte hundreth and one yeare of Noes age, vpon the first daye of y first moneth, the waters were dryed vp vpon the earth. Then Noe toke of the hatches of the Arke, and sawe y the face of the earth was drye. So vpon the seuen and twentieth daye of the seconde moneth the whole earth was drye.

Then spake God vnto Noe, and sayde: Go out of the Arke, thou and thy wyfe, and thy sones, and thy sones wyues with the. As for all the beasts that are with the, what so euer flesh it be (both foule a catell and all maner of wormes that crepe vpon the earth) let them go out with the, and be ye occupied vpon the earth, grawe and multiplye vpon the earth. So Noe wente out, with his sones, and with his wyfe, and with his sones wyues. All the beasts also and all the wormes, and all the foules, and all that crepte vpon the earth, wente out of the Arke, euery one vnto his like.

And Noe buylde an altare vnto y LORDE, and toke of all maner of cleane beasts a of all maner of cleane foules, and offerd brēt sacrifices vpon y altare. And y LORDE smelled the sweete sauoure, a sayde in his hert: I wyl hence forth curse the earth nomore for mās sake, for the imaginacion of mans hert is euell, euenn from the very youth of him. Therefore from hēc forth I will nomore smyte all that lyueth, as I haue done. Nether shall sowynge tyme and harvest, colde and heate Sommer and wynter, daye and night cease so longe as the earth endureth.

The ii. Chapter.

A ND God blessed Noe and his sones, and sayde vnto them: increase a mul-tiplye, and fyll the earth. The feare also and dred of you be vpon all beasts of the earth, vpon all foules vnder the heauen, and vpon all that crepeth on the earth, and all fyskes of the see be gueuen in to youre hūdes. All that moueth and hath life, be youre meate. 6 Euen as the grene herbe, so haue I gēue you all. 4 Onely eate not the flesh with the bloude, wherin the soule is: For the bloude of you wherin youre soule is, wyll I requyre of the hande of all beasts: and the soule of mā wyll I requyre of mans hande, 6 ye every mans soule of another hante.

Farthermore, God sayde vnto Noe and to his sones with him: 8 Beholde, I make my couenaut with you, and with youre sede after you, and with euery lyuynge creatures that is with you, both foule, catell, and all beasts vpon the earth with you, of all that is gone out of the Arke, what so euer beast of the earth it be: 4 And thus I make my couenaunt with you, that hence forth all flesh shal not be destroyed with the waters of eny floude, and from hence forth there shall come no floude to destroye the earth.

And God sayde: This is the token of my couenaunt which I haue made betwene me and you, and all lyuynge creatures amonge you for euermore: My bowe will I set in the cloudes, and it shal be the token of my couenaunt betwene me and y earth: so that whā I brynge cloudes vpon the earth, the bowe shal appeare in the cloudes. And then wyll I thynke vpon my couenaunt betwixte me and you and all lyuynge creatures in all maner of flesh: so that from hence forth there shall nomore come eny floude of water to destroy all flesh. Therfore shall my bowe be in the cloudes, that I maye loke vpon it, and remembre the euernafterly couenaunt, betwixte God and all lyuynge creatures in all flesh that is vpon earth. God sayde also vnto Noe: This is the tokē of the couenaunt, which I haue made betwene me and all flesh vpon earth.

The sones of Noe which wente out of the Arke, are these: Sem, Ham and Iapheth.
As for Ham, he is the father of Canaan. These are Noes thre sonnes, of whom all londes were ouerspred.

Noe beganne to take hede vnto of the grounde, planted a vyniarde. And dranke of the wyne, and was dronken, and laye vncouered in his tente. Now when Ha the father of Canaan sawe his fathers preuyties, he tolde his two brethren without. The toke Sem and Japhet a mantell and put it vpo both their sholders, and wente backwarde, and couered their fathers secretes: their faces were turned aside, they shulde not se their fathers preuyties.

So when Noe awaked from his wyne, and perceaued what his yonger sonne had done vnto him, he sayde: Cursed be Canaan, and a seruaunt of seruauntes be he vnto his brethren. He sayde morouer: Prayse be the Lorde God of Sem, and Canaan be his seruaunt. God increase Japhet, and let him dwell in the tentes of Sem, and Canaan be his seruaunt.

And Noe lyued after the floude three hundred fiftie yeare, so he lyued after the floude thre hundreth and fiftie yeare, and so he dyed.

This is the generacion of the childre of Noe, Sem, Ham, and Iaphe, they begat childre after the floude.

The childre of Iaphet are these: Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Mesche, and Thuras. The childre of Gomer are these: Ascanas, Riphat and Togarma. The childre of Javan are these: Elia, Tharsis, Cithim, and Dodanim: Of these are deuided the Isles of Heithen in their countree, euery one after his speach, kyndred and people.

The childre of Ham are these: Chus, Misraim, Phut and Canaan. The childre of Chus are these: Seba, Hevila Sabtha, Rayma and Sabthecha.

The childre of Rayma are these: Sheba and Dedah. Chus also begat Nemrod, which beganne to be mightie in the earth, and was a mightie hunter in the sight of the Lorde. Therof commeth the prouerbe: This is a mightie hunter before the Lorde like as Nemrod. And the originall of his kyngdome was Babel, Erech, Acad and Chalme in londe of Synear. Out of that lode came Assur, and buylded Ninive, and strete of the cite, and Calah, and Ressen betwene Ninive and Calah: This is a grete cite.

Mizraim begat Ludim, Enamim, Leabim, Naphtuhim, Pathermus and Cashuhim, from whence came the Philistynes and Caphthorims. Canaan also begat Zidon his eldest sonne, Heth, Iebusi, Emori, Girgosi, Hius, Arki, Sini, Arudai, Zemari Hamati: fro whence y kyndreds of Canaanites are dispersed abrode. And Coastes of Canaanites were fro Sidon forth thorow Gerar vnto Gasa, till thou commest vnto Sodoma, Gomorra, Adama, Zeboim, vnto Lasa. These are the children of Ham in their kyndreds, tungen, londes people. And Sem which is father of all the children of Eber, the elder brother of Iaphet, begat childre also. And these are his children: Ela, Assur, Arphachad, Lud, Aram. The childre of Aram are these: Vz, Hul, Gether and Mas.

And Arphachad begat Sala, and Sala begat Eber. Eber begat two sonnes: the name of the one was Peleg, because that in his tyne the worlde was deuyded, and his brothers name was Jaketan, And Jaketan begat Almodad, Saleph, Hazarmaphet, Itaras, Hadarom, Vsal, Dikela, Obal, Abimael, Seba, Ophir, Hevila Iobab: All these are childre of Jaketan. And their dwellynge was from Mesa, till thou comest vnto Sephar a mountayne of east. These are childre of Sem in their generacions, tungen, londes and people.

This is now generation of children of Noe in their kyndredes people. Of these were people vpon earth spread a brode after floude.

This is the ri.Chapter.

Morouer all the worlde had one tongue. Now as they wente toward the East, they founde a playne in londe of Synear, there they dwelt, saide one to another: Come on, let vs make bryck and burne it. And they toke bryck for stone, slime for morter, and sayde: Come, let vs byulde a cite a tower, whose toppye maye reache vnto heau, ye we maye make vs a name, afore we be scatred abrode in all londes. Then came Lorde downe, to se cite a tower, ye childre of mene had buylded. And Lorde saide: Beholde, the people is one,
Milea the daughter of Haran, which was father of Milea and Isca. But Sarai was baren, and had no child.

Then took Terah Abram his sonne, Lot his sonne Harans sonne, Sarai his daughter in lawe, his sonne Abrams wife, carried them with him from Vi in Chaldea, to go in to the lande of Canaan. And they came to Haran, dwelt there. And Terah was two hundred yeare yeare olde, and dyed in Haran.

The ir. Chapter.

AND the LORD said vnto Abram: 'Get thee out of thy countre, and from thy kynde, and out of thy fathers house, in to a londe which I will shew the. And I will make of the a mightie people, and wyll blesse the, and make the a great name, yee thou shalt be a very bleslyng. 'I will blesse them that blesse the, and curse them that curse the: and in the shal all the generations of the earth be blessed.

Then wente Abram out, as the LORD commaunded him, and Lot wente with him. Fyue seuentie yeare olde was Abra, when he wente out of Haran. So Abram toke Sarai his wife, and Lot his brothers sonne, with all their goddes which they had gotten, and soules which they begat in Harâ, and departed to go in to the londe of Canaan. And whie they were come in to the same londe, he wente thorow, tyll he came vnto the place of Sichem, and vnto the Okegroue of More: for the Cananites dwelt in the lode at the same time.

Then the LORD appeared vnto Abra, and said: 'This londe wil I geue vnto thy sede. And there he buylde an altare vnto the LORD, which appeared vnto him. The brake he vp fro thence, vnto a mountayne laye on east syde of the cite of Bethel, pitched his tent: so he had Bethel on the west side, and Ay on east syde: there buylde he an altare also vnto the LORD, called upon the name of the LORD. Afterwarde departed Abram farther, toke his journye southwarde. But there came a derth in the londe.

Then wente Abram downe in to Egipte to kepe himself there as a straunger, for the derth was sore in the londe. And whan he was come nye for to entre in to Egipte, he sayde vnto Sarai his wife: Beholde, I knowe thou art a fayre woman to loke vpoun. Now when the Egipcians se the, they wil saye: She is his wife, and so shal they slaye me, and sene the alyue. Therfore I pray y saye thou art my sister, that I maye fare the better by reason of the, and that my soule maye lyue for thy sake.

Now when he came in to Egipte, y Egipcians sawe y woman, y she was very faire: a Pharaos prynces sawe her also, a prayed her before him. Then was she brought in to Pharaos house, and Abram was well intreted for his sake: and he had shepe, oxen, and he Asses, servauntes, maydes, she Asses and Camels.

But the LORDE plagued Pharaos his house with greate plages, because of Sarai Abras wife. Then Pharaos called Abrá vnto him, and sayde: Why hast thou dealt thus with me? Wherfore tolddest thou not me at the first, y she was thy wife? Why saydest thou then, that she was thy sister? Wherfore I toke her to my wife. And now lo, there is thy wife, take her, and go thy waye. He gaue his officers also a charge ouer him, to conveye him out, and his wife, and all that he had.

The riij. Chapter.

So Abrá departed out of Egipte, with his wife, a with all y he had, a Lot with him also, towarde y south. Abram was very rich in catell, silver a golde. And he wente on forth from the south vnto Bethel, vnto the place where his tent was at y first, betwene Bethel and Ay: euyn vnto y place where he had made the altare before, a where he called vpon the name of the LORDE. Lot also which wente with him, had shepe, greate catell a tentes: so y the londe was not able to receauie them, that they myght dwell together: for the substaunce of their riches was so greate, that they coude not dwell together. And there fell a strife betwene the hirdmen of Abrams catell, and the hirdmen of Lots catell. The Cananites also and the Pheresites dwelt at that tyme in the londe.

Then sayde Abram vnto Lot: O let there be no strife betwene me and thee, and betwene my hirdmen and thine, for we are brethre. /Is not all the whole londe open before the? Deperate fro me, I praye the. Yf thou wilt go to the left hande, I wil take the right: Or yf thou wilt go to the right hande, I wil take the left. Then Lot lift vp his eyes, and behelde all the countrie rounde aboute Iordâ, that it was a plenteous countrie of water. For before the LORDE destroyed Sodoma and Gomorra, it was rounde aboute Zoar, euyn as the pleasauant garden of the LORDE, and as the londe of Egipte.

Then Lot chose all the coastes of Iordâ, and take his journe towarde y East. And so the one brother departed from the other. Abram dwelt in the lande of Canaan, and Lot in the cities of the same coastes, and pitched his tent towarde Sodome. But y men of Sodome were wicked, and synned exceedingly agaynst the LORDE.

Now when Lot was departed from Abram, the LORDE saide vnto Abram: Lift vp thine eyes, and loke from the place where thou dweltest, northwarde, southwarde, easternde, and westwarde: for all the londe that thou seist, wyll I geue vnto the 'and to thy sede for euer, and wyll make thy sede as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can nombre the dust of the earth, he shall nombre thy sede also. Arise, and go throu the londe, in the length and breth, for I wyll geue it vnto the.

So Abram removed his tent, and wepte and dwelt in yekroge of Mamre, which is in Ebron, and buylded there an altare vnto the LORDE.

The riij. Chapter.

And it chauined in the tyme of Amraphel the kyng of Synear, Arioch the kyng of Ellasar, Kedorlaomer the kyng of Elam, a Thyeal the kyng of y Heithen, That they made warre with Bera y kyng of Sodome, and with Birsa the kyngge of Gomorra, a with Sineab the kyngge of Adama, a with Sameab the kyngge of Zeboim, and with the kyngge of Bela, which is called Zoor. These came all together in to the brede valley, where now the salt see is: for twelue yeares were they subiectes vnto kyngge Kedorlaomer, a in the thirteenth yeare they fell from him. Therfore in the fourteenth yeare came Kedorlaomer, and the kyngges y were with him, a smote the Giaumtes in Astaro Rahaim, a

Then came one that had escaped, and tolde Abram the Aleaunt, which dwelt in the Okegroue of *Mamre the Amoyrte, which was the brother of Escol כ Aner: for these were confederate with Abram.  מ

Now when Abram herde כ his brother was taken, he harnessed his bonde seruauntes borne in his owne house, thre hundrith כ eightene, כ followed after them vntill Dan, כ deuyded the, כ fell vpo them by night with his seruauntes, and smote the, כ and chased them awaye vnto Hoba, which lieth on the left hande of the cite of Damasos, כ and brought agayne all the goodes, and also his brother Lot, and his goodes, כ wemen also and the people. But Abram sayde vnto the kyngge of Sodome: I lift vp my honde vnto the LORDE the most hye God, possessor of heauen and earth, that I wyll not take of all that is thyne, so much as a threde or a shue lachet, lest thou shuldest saye: I haue made Abram ryche: Saue oneley that which the yonge men haue spent, and the men Aner Escol and Mamre, that wente with me, let them take their parte.  מ

The rb. Chapter.

It happened after these actes, כ the worde of כ LORDE came vnto Abrá in a vysion, and sayde: Feare not Abram, I am thy shylde and thy exceadinge greate rewarde. But Abram sayde: LORDE LORDE, what wilt thou geue me? I go childles, and the seruament of my house (this Eleasar of Damascos) hath a sonne. And Abram sayde morouer: Beholde, vnto me hast thou geuen no sede: and lo, the sone of my houshould shall be myyne heyre. And beholde, the worde of the LORDE spake vnto him, and saide: He shal not be thine heyre, but one that shall come out of thine owne body, he shal be thine heyre. And he bad him go forth, and sayde: Loke vp vnto heauen, כ and tell ý sterres: Canst thou nombre them? And he sayde vnto hym: כ Euen so shal thy sede be.  מ

Abram beleued the LORDE, כ and was counted vnto hym for rightouenes. כ And he sayde vnto hym: I am כ LORDE, כ brought the from Vr out of Chaldea, to geue ý this londe to possesse it. Beholde, by huszbande the herkened and sede a despysed whan wente SARAI partes. SARAI Abrams wife bare him no children: but she had an handmayde an Egipcianc, whose name was Agar, and sayde vnto Abram: Beholde, the LORDE hath closed me, that I can not beare. Go in (I praye the) vnto my myaye: peraduenture I shalbe multiplied by her, more then by myself. And Abram herkened vnto the voyce of Sarai. Then Sarai Abrams wife toke Agar hir mayde y Egipcianc (after they had dwelt ten yeare in the londe of Cauaan) and gae her vnto hir husbandeAbrâ, to be his wife. And he wente in vnto Agar, and she conceaued. Now whan she saw y she had conceyued, she despysed hir mistresse.

Then sayde Sarai vnto Abram: I must suffere wronge for thy sake. I layde my mayde by the: but now because she seyth, that she hath conceaued, I must be despysed in hir sight: the LORDE be judg betwene me and the. And Abram sayde vnto Sarai: Beholde, thy mayde is vnder thine auctorite, do with her, as it pleaseth the.

Now whan Sarai dealt hardly with her, she flee from her. But the angell of the LORDE founde her bessyde a well of water in the wildernesse (euen by the well in the waye to Sur) and sayde vnto her: Agar Sarais maide, whence commest thou? a wylth wylt thou go? She sayde: I fle fro Sarais mastresse. And the angel of the LORDE sayde vnto her: Returne to thy mistresse agayne, and submitte thyself vnder hir hande.

And the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto her: Beholde, I wil so encrease thy sede, that it shall not be nombred for multitude. And the angell of the LORDE sayde further vnto her: Beholde, thou art with childe, 8 shalt bringe forth a sonne, and shalt call his name Ismael, because the LORDE hath herde thy trouble. He shal be a wyde man. His hande agaynst every man, and euer mans haude agaynst him: and he shall dwel ouer agaynst all his brethren.

And she called the name of the LORDE y spake vnto her: Thou art the God that seist me. For she sayde: Of a suertye I haue sene the back partes of him that sawe me. Therfore called she the well: The well of the liuinge that sawe me. Which (well) is betwene Cades and Bared.

And Agar bare Abram a sonne, 9 and Abram called his sonnes name which Agar bare him, Ismael. And Abram was foure score yeare olde and sixe, when Agar bare him Ismael.

Now whan Abram was nyentye yeare olde and nyene, the LORDE appeare vnto hym, 8 sayde vnto hym: *I am the allmightie God, waile before me, s be vnco-rupte. And I will make my couenaunt betwene me s the, and wyl multiplye the excedingly. Then fell Abram vpon his face.

And God talked furthur with him, and sayde: Beholde, It is I, and hawe my couenaunt with the, and thou shalt be a father of many people. Therfore shalt thou nomore be called Abram, but thy name shal be Abraham: 9 For I haue made the a father of many nacions, 8 I wil multiplye the excedingly, and wil make people of y; * yee and kynges also shal come out of the. Morouer I wil make my couenaunt betwene me and the, to thy sede after the thorow out their posterities, that it maye be an euerlastinge couenaunt, so that I wyll be the God of the, and of thy sede after the. And vnto the and to thy sede after the, will I geue the lande, wherein thou art a straunger: euen all the lande of Canaan for an euerlastinge possession, and will be their God.

And God sayde morouer vnto Abraham: Kepe my couenaunt then, thou and thy sede after the. This is my couenaunt which ye shal kepe betwene me and you, and thy sede after y thorow out their posterities. Every manchilde that is amonge you, shalbe circumcysed: and ye shal circumcysde the fore skynne of youre fleshe. This same shalbe a token of the couenaunt betwene me and you. Every manchilde when it is eight dayes olde, shall be circumcysed thorow out youre posterities: In like maner all housholyd folkes borne at home, or bought, or any other also that is a straughter and not of thy sede. Thus shal my couenaunt be in youre flesh for an euerlastinge couenaunt. And yf there shalbe any manchilde vncircumcysed in the fore skynne of his fleshe, his soule shalbe rote out from his people, because he hath broken my couenaunt.

And God sayde vnto Abraham: Sara thy wyfe shall nomore be called Sarai, but Sara shalbe his name: for I will blesse her, and geue the a sonne of her. * I wil blesse her, and people shall come of her, yee and kynges of many people. Then fell ABRAHÁ vpó his face, and laughed, and sayde in his hert: Shal a childe be borne vnto me that am an hundrith yeare olde? And shal Sara y is nyentie yeare olde, beare? And ABRAHÁ sayde vnto God: O that Ismael might lyue in thy sight. Then sayde God: Yee euen Sara thy wyfe shall beare the a sonne, and thou shalt call his name Isaac: for with him wil I make my euerlastinge couenaunt, and with his sede after him. And as concernynge Ismael also, I haue herde thy request: Beholde, I haue blessed him, and will increase him, and multiplye him exceedingly. "Twolue prynces shal he beget, and I wyll make a greate nacion of him.

But my couenaunt wyll I make with Isaac, whom Sara shal beare vnto the, euë this tyme twolue moneth. And he left of talkyng with him, and God wente vp from Abraham. Than toke Abraham his sonne Ismael, and all the seruauntes borne in his house, and all that were bought, (as many as were men children in his house,) and circumcysed the foreskynne of their fleshe, euë the same daye, as God had sayde vnto him. And Abraham was nyentie yeare olde and nyne, when he cut of the foreskynne of his fleshe. As for Ismael, he was thirtene yeare olde, when the foreskynne of his fleshe was circumcysed. Even vpon one daye were they all circumcysed: Abraham, and Ismael his sonne, and all the men in his house, (whether they were borne at home, bought, or any other strauenger:) they were all circumcysed with him.

The xviii. Chapter.

And the LORDE appeare vnto him in the Okegrove of Mamre, as he sat in his tent dore in the heat of the daie. And as he lift vp his eyes, and loked, beholde, there stode thre men ouer agaynst him. And when he sawe them, he ranne to mete them from his tent dore, and bowed him selfe downe vpon the grounde, and sayde: /LORDE, yf I haue founde fauour in thy sight, go not by thy seruaunt. There shalbe brought you a little water, y ye shall wash youre fete, y rest youre selues vnder the tre. And I wyll fet you a morcell of bred, to conforte youre hertes withall, and then shal ye go youre wayes, for therfore are ye come to youre seruaunt. They sayde: do euë so as thou hast spoken.

Abraham wente a pace in to the tent to Sara, and sayde: * Make haist, mengle thre pecke of fyne meele, kneade it, and bake cakes. And he ranne to the beastes, fet a calf that was tender and good, and gaue it vnto a yonge man, which made it ready at once. And he toke butter and mylke and of the calfe that he had prepared, and set it before the, stode him selfe by them vnder the tre, they aete. Then saide they vnto him: where is Sara thy wyfe? Then sayde the LORDE: How can I hyde from Abraham, th thinges that I wil do? seyenge he shal be a greate and mightie people, and all th people vp6 earth shalbe blessed in hym? For I knowe him that he wil

There is a crie at Sodome and Gomorra, which is greate, tg their synnes are exceedinge greuous: thorefore will I go downe g se, whether they haue done all together, acordinge to that croue, tch which is come before me, or not, that I maye knowe. And the men turned their face, and wete towards Sodome. But Abraham stode still before y LORDE, and stepte vp to hym, and sayde:

Wilt thou then destroye the righteous with the vngodly? *Peraduenture there maye be fiftie righteous within that cite: wilt thou destryoe those, and not spare the place, for fiftie righteous sake that are therein? That be farre fro the, t thou shuldest do this, and to slaye the righteous with the vngodly, and that the righteous shulde be as the vngodly. That be farre from the. Shulde not the judge of all the worlde do acordinge to right? And the LORDE sayde: Yf I fynde fiftie righteous at Sodome in the cite, I wil spare all the place for their sakes.

Abraham answered, and sayde: O se, I haue taken vpon me to speake vnto the LORDE, howbeit I am but *g*dust and ashes. Peraduenture there maye be fyue lesse then fiftie righteous therein: Wilt thou then destryoe the whole cite because of those fyue? He sayde: yf I fynde fyue and fourtie therein, I will not destryoe them.

And he proceded further to speake vnto him, and sayde: Peraduenture there might be fourtie founde therein. And he sayde: I wil do nothinge vnto them for those fourties sake. Abraham sayde: Oh let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yet more. Peraduenture there might be thirtie founde therein. And he sayde: Yf I fynde thirtie therein, I will do nothinge vnto them. And he sayde: O se, I haue taken vpon me to speake vnto my LORDE.

Peraduenture there might be twentie founde therein. He answered: I wil not destroye them for those twentyes sake. And he sayde: O let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yet once more. Peraduenture there might be ten founde therein. He saide: I wil not destroye them for those ten sake.

And the LORDE wente his waye, when he had left talkyng with Abraham. And Abraham returned vnto his place.

The rix. Chapter.

IN the eueneuyge came the two angels vnto Sodome. *And lot sat vnder the gate of the cite. And whè he sawe them, he rose vp to mete them, and bowed him selfe downe to the gronde vpon his face, & sayde: Se lordes, turne in (I praye you) in to youre seruauntes house, and tarye all night: let youre fete be washen, so maye ye yrse tommorow by tymes, and go youre waye. Neuertheles they sayde: Nay, but we wil lyde in the stretes all night. *Then compelled he them sore: and they turned in vnto him, and came in to his house. And he made them a feast, and bakked swete cakes, and they ate. But before they wente to rest, the men of the cite of Sodome came and compased the* house round aboute, yonge and olde, all the people from all quarters, and called Lot, and sayde vnto him: Where are the mè that came vnto the to night? Bringe them out here vnto vs, * that we maye knowe them.

And Lot wente out at the dore vnto the, and shut the dore after him, and sayde: *O brethren, do not so wickedly. Beholde, I haue two daughters, which yet haue knowne no man: them will I brynge out vnto you, do with them as it liketh you. Onely do nothinge vnto these men of God, for therefor are they come vnder the shadowe of my rofe. But they sayde: Come thou hither. Then sayde they: Camest not thou onely herin as a stranger, and wilt thou now be a judge? Wel, we will deale worse with the thè with them.

And they pressed sore vpon the man Lot. And when they ranne to, and wolde haue broken vp the dore, the men put out their handes, and pulled Lot vnto them in to the house, and shut to the dore. And the men at the dore of the house were Smyttè with blynndnesse both small and great, so that they coude not fynde the dore.

And the men saide vnto Lot: Hast thou yet here eny sonne in lave, or sones or daughters? Who so euer belongeth vnto the in the cinte, brynge him out of this place: for we must destroye this place, because the crye of them is greate before the LORDE, which hath sent vs to destroye them. Then wente Lot forth, and spake to his sones in lave, which shulde haue maried his daughters, and sayde: O stonde vp, and get you out of this place, for the LORDE will destroye this cinte. Neuertheless they toke it but for a sporte.

Now when the mornynge arose, the angels caused Lot to spede him, and saide: *Stonde vp, take thy wife and thy two daughters which are at hande, that thou also perishe not in the synne of this cinte. But whyle he prolonged the tymne, the men caught him and his wife, and his two daughters by the hande (because the LORDE was mercifull vnto him,) and brought him forth, * set him without the cinte. And when they had brought him out, they sayde: Saue thy soule, and loke not behynde the, nether stonde thou in all this cunte: Saue thy self vpon the mountayne, that thou perish not. Then sayde Lot vnto the: Oh no my LORDE, beholde, in as moch as thy seruaunt hath founde grace in thy sight, now make thy mercy greate, which thou hast shewed vnto me, in that thou sauest my soule aluye. I can not saue my self vpon the mountayne. There might some mysfortune fall vpon me, that I shulde dye. Beholde, here is a cinte, that I maye fyfe vnto, and it is a litle one: let me saue myself there in. Is it not a litle one, that my soule maye lyue?

Then sayde he vnto him: Beholde, I haue loked vpon the in this poynete also, that I will not overthowre the cinte, wherof thou hast spoken. Haist the, and saue thy selfe there: for I can do nothinge tyll thou be come thither. Therefor is the cinte called Zoar. And the Sonne was vp vpon the earth, when Lot came in to Zoar.

*Then the LORDE caused brymstone and fyre to rayne downe from the LORDE out of heauen vpon Sodoma and Gomorrh, and ouerthowre those cities, the whole region, and all that dwelte in the cities, and that that grew vpon the earth. *And his wife loked behynde her, and was turned in to a pillar of salt.

Abraham rose vp early in the mornynge, and gat him vnto the place, where he had stonde before the LORDE, and turned his face towarde Sodoma and Gomorrh, and all the londe of that cunte, and loked. And beholde, there rose vp a smoke from that cunte, as it had bene a smoke of a fornace. For when God destroyed the cities of the region, he thought vpon Abraham, and conueyed Lot out of the cities which he ouerthowre, wherein Lot dwelt.

And Lot departed out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountaynes with both his daughters (for he was afrayed to tary at Zoar) and so remayned he in a cauee with both his daughters.

Then sayde * elder vnto the younger: Oure father is olde, and there is not a man more vpon earth, that can come in vnto vs after the maner of all the worlde. Come therfore, let vs gene oure father wyne to drynke, and lye with him, that we maye saue sede of oure father. So they gau their father wyne to drynke that same night. And the elder daughter wente in, and lye with her father:

*Leui. 18. c.  "Judic. 19. b. 2 Pet. 2. c.  4 Re. 6. d. 5 Sap. 10. b. 6 Es. 13. d. Iere. 50. g.
and he perceaued it not, nether when she laye downe, ner when she rose vp.

On the morow the elder sayde vnto the yonger: Beholde, yesternight laye I with my father: let vs geue him wyne to drynke this night also: that thou mayest go in and lye with him, that we maye saue sede of oure father. So they gaue their father wyne to drynke that night also: And the yonger arose like wyse, and laye with him: γ he perceaued it not, nether when she laye downe, ner when she rose vp.

Thus were both the daughters of Lot with childe by their father. And the elder bare a sonne, and called him Moab, of whom come ¥ Moabytes vnto this daye. And ¥ yonger bare a sonne also, and called him the sonne Ammi, of whom come the children of Ammon vnto this daye.

A

For Abraham, he departed thence, in to the south countre, and dwelt betwixte Cades and Sur, and was a straunger at Gerar, and sayde of Sara his wife: She is my sister. Then Abimelech the kinge of Gerar sent for her, and caused her be fett awaye.

But God came to Abimelech by night in a dreame, sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou art but a deed man, for the womans sake which thou hast taken, for she is a mans wife. Neuertheless Abimelech had not yet touched her, and sayde: LORDE, wilt thou sley a righteous people? Sayde not he vnto me: she is my sister? Yee and sayde not she her self also: he is my brother? With a pure hert γ with innocent handes haue I done this.

And God sayde vnto him in a dreame: I knowe that thou dyddest it with a pure hert, and therfore I kepe the, that thou shuldest not synne agaynst me, nether haue I suffered the to touch her. Now therfore deluyer the man his wyfe ageyne, for he is a prophet: and let him pray for γ, and thou shalt lyue. But and γ thou deluyer her not ageyne, be sure, that thou shalt dye the death, and all that is thine.

Then Abimelech rose vp by tymes in the mornynge, and called all his seruauntes, and tolde all these thinges in their ears, and the men were sore afayed, and Abimelech called

Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Wherfore hast thou done this vnto vs? And what haue I offended γ, that thou shuldest brynge on me and on my kygude so greate a synne? Thou hast not dealt with vs, as a man shulde deale. And Abimelech saide morouer vnto Abraham: What sawest thou, γ thou hast done this thinge?

Abraham sayde: I thought: Peraduenture there is no feare of God in this place, γ they shall sleye me for my wifes sake, And of a trueth she is my sister, for she is my fathers daughter, but not my mothers daughter, and is become my wife. So when God charged me to wadre out of my fathers house, I sayde vnto her: Shew this kyndnes vpon me, that, where so euer we come, thou saye of me, that I am thy brother.

Then toke Abimelech shepe and oxen, seruauntes and maydens, and gaue them vnto Abraham, and deluyed him Sara his wyfe ageyne, and sayde: Beholde, my londe stondeth open before the, dwell where it liketh the. And vnto Sara he sayde: Beholde, I haue geuen thy brother a thousande syluer pens: lo, he shalbe vnto the a couerynge of the eyes, for all that are with the, and euer where, and a sure excus.

As for Abraham, he prayed vnto God: Then God heale Abimelech, and his wyfe, and his maydens, so that they bare childre. For afor the LORDE had closed all the matrices of Abimelechs house, because of Sara Abrahams wife.

The 11. Chapter.

THE LORDE also vysited Sara, accordinge γ as he had promysed: γ dealt with her, euen as he had sayde. And Sara was with childe, and bare Abraham a sonne in his olde age, euen in the tyme appoynted, like as God had spoken vnto him afor. And Abraham called his sonne which was borne vnto him (who Sara bare him) Isaac, and circumsized him the eight daye, like as God commaunded him. An hundreth yeare olde was Abrahã, when his sonne Isaac was borne vnto him.

And Sara sayde: God hath prepared a joye for me, for who so euer heareth of it, wyll reioyse with me. She sayde morouer: Who wolde haue saide vnto Abraham, that

T • Heb. 11. c. d Mat. 1. a. e Josh. 24. a. f Gen. 17. b.
Sara shulde geue children sucke, and beare him a sonne in his olde age? And the childe grew, and was weened. And Abraham made a greate feast, in y daye when Isaac was weened.

And Sara sawe the sonne of Agar the Egipecian (whom she had borne vnto Abraham) that he was a mocker, and sayde vnto Abraham: "Cast out this bonde mayden and hir sonne, for this bonde maydès sonne shall not be hyre with my sonne Isaac. This worde displeased Abraham sore, because of his sonne.

Neuertheles God sayde vnto him: let it not displease the because of the childe and the hand mayde: What so euer Sara hath sayde vnto the, folowe it, for in Isaac shall the sede be called vnto the. As for the bonde maydens sonne, I wyll make a people of him also, because he is of thy sede.

Then Abraham rose vp early in the mornynge, and toke bred and a botell with water, and put it vpon Agars sholders, and gaued her the childe, and sent her away. Then departed she, and wandred out of the waye in wyldernes beside Berseba. Now when the water in the botell was out, she layed the childe vnder a bush, and wente, and sat hir downe ouer on other syde, a bowe shote of. For she sayde: I can not se the childe dye. And she sat hir downe ouer on other syde, and lifte vp hir voyce, and wepte.

Then God herde the voyce of the childe, and the angell of God called vnto Agar out of heauen, and sayde vnto her: What ayleth the, Agar? Feare not, for God hath herde thy voyce of the childe, where he lyeth. Aryste and take the childe, and holde him by the hande, for I wyll make a greate people of him. And God opened hir eyes, that she sawe a well of water.

Then wente she and fyllèd yt botell with water, and gauèd yt childe drynke. And God was with the childe, which grew vp, and dwelt in wyldernes, and became a connyng archer, and dwelt in wyldernes of Pharan, and his mother toke him a wyfe out of the londe of Egipte.

At the same tyme talked Abimelech and Phicol his chefe captayne with Abraham, and sayde: God is with in all that thou doest.

Therefore sweare now vnto me by God, that thou wilt not hurt me, ner my children, ner my children children: but that thou shalt shewe vnto me (and to the londe wherin thou art a straunger) the same kyndnesse that I haue done vnto the.

Then sayde Abraham: I wyll sweare. And Abraham rebuked Abimelech for the well of water, which Abimelechs seruauntes had taken awaye by violence. Then answered Abimelech: I knewe not who dyd it, neither dyddest thou tell me, and I haue not herde of it but this daye.

The toke Abraham shepe and oxen, and gaue them vnto Abimelech, and they both made a bonde together. And Abraham set seuen lambs by them selues. Then sayde Abimelech vnto Abraham: What meane those seuen lambs, which thou hast set by them selues? He answered: seue lambs shalt thou take of my hande, that they maye be wytnes vnto me, that I haue dydded this well. Therfore is the place called Berseba, because they swere there both together. And so they made the bonde at Berseba.

Then rose Abimelech and Phicol his chefe captayne, and departed agayne in to the londe of Philistynes. And Abraham planted trees at Berseba, and called vpon the name of the LORDE, by euerlastinge God, and was a straunger in the londe of the Philistynes a longe season.

After these actes God tempted Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Abraham. And he answered: I am here. And he sayde: Take thy sonne, this onely sonne of thine, euè Isaac whom thou lostest, and go thy waye in to the londe of Moria, and offre him there for a burnt offerynge, vpon a mountayne that I shal shew the. Then Abraham stode vp by tyme in the mornynge, and saddled his Asse, and toke with him two yonge men, and his sonne Isaac, and cloue wodd for the brennt offerynge, gat him vp, and wente vp vnto the place, wherof the LORDE had sayde vnto him.

Vpon the thirde daye Abraham lift vp his eyes, and sawe the place a farre off, and sayde vnto his yonge me: Tary ye here with the After these acts it fortuned, that it was told Abraham: Beholde, Milca hath borne children also vnto thy brother Nahor: namely, 1 Hus thy eldest, and 2 Bus his brother, and Kemnel, of whom came the Syrians: and Cesed, and Haso, and Pildas, and Iedlaph and Bethuel. And Bethuel begat Rebecca.
These eight dyd Milca beare vnto Nahor Abrahams brother. And his concubyne called Rehuma, bare also: namely, Theba, Sahran, Thahas, and Maacha.

SARA was an hundred and seuen and a twentye yeare olde: so longe lyued she, and dyed in the head cite which is called Hebron, in the lande of Canaan. 3 Then wente Abraham, to mourne and wepe for her.
Afterwarde he stode vp from his course, and talked with the Hethites, said: I am a stranger and an indweller amonge you, geue me a possession to bury in with you, that I maye bury vp my coarse by me.

Then the Hethites answered Abraham, and sayde vnto him: O heare lorde, thou art a prynce of God among vs: bury thy dead in the best of oure sepulcres, there shall none of us forbyd, that thou shuldest not bury thy deed in his sepulcre. Then Abraham stode vp, and thanked the people of vs londe:
namely the Hethites.

And he talked with them, and sayde: If it be youre will that I burye my coarse by me, heare me the: speake for me to Ephron the sonne of Zoar, that he maye gene me the double caue, which he hath in vs ende of his felde. For a reasonable money let him gene me it, for a possession to bury in amoge you.
For Ephron dwell amonge the Hethites.

Then answered Ephron the Hethite vnto Abraham, that the Hethites might heare, before all that wente out and in at the gates of his cite, and sayde: No my lorde, but heare me: As for the felde, and the cane also that is therin, I geue it the: and in the sight of my people I geue it the, to burye thy deed in.

Then Abraham thanked the people of the londe, and talked with Ephron, that the people of the londe might heare, and sayde: Heare me then, Receane of me the money that I Ephraim answered Abraham, and sayde vnto hym: Heare my lorde: The fele is worth foure hundreth Sycles of syluer: but what is that betwixte me and the? Burye thy deed. Abraham herkened vnto Ephraim, and weyed him the money which he had sayde, that the Hethites might heare: namely foure hundreth syluer sycle of currant money amongst marchauntes.

Thus Ephrons fele (where in the dubble cane is) which lyeth ouer before Mamre, euene the fele and the cane, was made sure for Abrahmes owne good, with all the trees of the fele also rounde aboute, in the sight of the Hethites, and of all that go out and in at the gates of his cite. Then Abraham buried Sara his wife in the dubble cane of the fele, that lyeth ouer before Mamre (that is, Hebron) in the londe of Canaan. So the fele and the cane therein was made sure of the Hethites vnto Abraham, for a possession to bury in.

The 11. Chapter.

ABRAHAM was olde and well stricken in age, and the LORDE had blessed him in all things. And he sayde vnto his eldest seruaunt of his house, which had the rule of all his goodes: Laye thine hede vnder my thye, that I maye make the swearde by the LORDE the God of heauen and earth, that thou take no wife vnto my sonne amongst his daughters of Canautes, (amonge whom I dwell) but that thou goe in to my countre, and to my owne kyndred, and brynge my sonne Isaac a wife.

The seruaunt sayde: What and the woman wyl not folowe me in to this countre? shal I then cary thy sonne agayne in to yonder londer, where thou camest out of? Abraham sayde vnto him: Beware of that, that thon brynge not my sonne thither agayne. The LORDE, the God of heauen, which toke me fro my fathers house and from the londe of my kyndred, and that talked with me, and sware also vnto me, and sayde: Vnto thy sonne my wyll I geue this londe: Euen he shall sende his angell before the, that thou maiest brynge my sonne a wife from thence. But yf the woman wyll not folowe the, thou art discharged of this ooth: onely brynge not my some thither agayne. Then his seruaunt layed his hede vnder his master Abrahams thye, and sware the same vnto him.

So the seruaunt toke ten Camels of the Camels of his master and departed, and had with him of all manner of goodes of his master, and gat him vp, and departed vnto Mesopotamia, to the cite of Nahor. Then let he the Camels lye downe without before the cite besyde a well of water in the enemyng, aboute the tyme that the women vset to go forth, and to drawe water. And he sayde: O LORDE, thou God of my master Abraham, mete me to daye, and shew mercy vnto my master Abraham. Lo, I stonde here besyde the well of water, vnto the mens daughters of this cite wyll com e forth to drawe water: Now yf there come a damsell, to whom I saye: bowe downe thy pytcher, let me drynke, and yf she saye: drynke, and I wyll geue thy Camels drynke also: That same be she, whom thou hast proued for thy seruaunt Isaac: that I maye knowe by y same that thou hast shewed mercy vpon my master.

And or euere he had left of speakeynge, beholde, Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel (which was the sonne of Milca, that was the wyfe of Nahor Abrahams brother) came forth, and bare a pytcher vpon hir shulder, and she was a very fayre damsell of face, and yet a virgin, and vnknowe of eyn man: She wente downe to the well, and fylled hir pytcher, and came vp agayne. Then ranne the seruaunt to mete her, and sayde: Let me drynke a little water out of thy pytcher. And she sayde: drynke syr.

And haistely let she downe the pytcher in hir hande, and gane hir drynke. And when she had euene him drynke, she sayde: I wyll drawe for thy Camels also, tyll they have dronke ynow. And she made haist, and poured out hir pytcher in to the trough, and ranne agayne to the well to drawe, and drew for all his Camels. The man marvelled at her, and helde his tonge, tyll he knewe whether the LORDE had prospered his journey or not.

Now when the Camels had all dronken, he toke a golde earing of half a Sycle weight, and two bracelets for hir handes, wyenge ten Sycles of golde, and sayde: Doughter, whose art thou? tell me. Is there rowme for

* Gen. 47, g.  b Gen. 29, a. Deut. 7, a.  * Gen. 11, d.  e Gen. 15, d.
Then the man bowed himself, and thanked the LORDE, and sayde: Praysed be the LORDE the God of my master Abraham, which hath not withrawn his mercy and his truth from my master, for the LORDE hath brought me the waye to my masters brothers house. And the damsell ranne and tolde all this in hir mothers house. And Rebecca had a brother called Laban.

And Laban ranne to the man without by the well syde: and that came by the reason that he sawe the earynges, and the bracelettes vpon his sisters handes, and herde the wordes of Rebecca his sister, that she sayde: thus spake the man vnto me.

And when he came to the man, beholde, he stode by the Camels at the well syde. And he sayde: Come in thou blessed of the LORDE, wherfore stonden thou without? I haue dressed the house, and made rowme for thy Camels. So he brought the man in to his house, and vnbridled the Camels, and gaue them litter and promuer, and water to wash his fette, and the mens that were with him, and set meate before him.

Neuertheles he sayde: I wil not eate, till I haue fyrst tolde myne earde. They answered: Tell on. He sayde: I am Abrahams seruaunt, and the LORDE hath prospered my master richely, so he is become greate: and he hath geuen him shepe and oxe, syluer and golde, seruauntes and maideus, Camels and Asses: yee and Sara my masters wife hath borne my master a sonne in hir olde age: vnto him hath he geuen all that he hath.

And my master hath taken an ooth of me and saide: Thou shalt not take a wife for my some amonge the daughteres of the Cananites, in whose lande I dwell, but go thy waye to my fathers house and to myne owne kyndred, and there take a wyfe for my sonne. But I sayde vnto my master: What and the woman wyll not folowe me? Then sayde he vnto me: The LORDE (before whom I walke) shall sende his angell with the, and prosper thys journey, that thou mayest take a wyfe for my sonne of myne owne kyndred, and of my fathers house. And so when thou commest to my kyndred, ye they geue her not vnto y, thou shalt be discharged of myne ooth.

So I came this daye vnto the well of water, and sayde: O LORDE thou God of my master Abraham, Yf thou hast prospered my journey that I goe: Beholde, I stonde here by the well of water: Now yf there come forth a virgin to draw water, and I saye vnto her: geue me a little water to drinke out of thy pitcher, and she saye vnto me: Drynke thou, and I will drawe water for thy Camels also: that the same be the woma, which the LORDE hath prouyded for my masters sonne. Now or euer I had spoken out these wordes in my hert, beholde, Rebecca commeth forth with a pitcher vpon hir shulder, and goeth downe to the well, and draweth.

Then sayde I: geue me a drinke. And immediatly she toke downe the pitcher fro hir shulder, and sayde: drinke, and I will geue thy Camels drinke also. So I dranke, and she gaue the Camels also to drynke. And I axed her, and sayde: Doughter, whose art thou? She answered: I am thy daughter of Bethuel the sonne of Nahor, whom Milca bare vnto him. Then layed I the earinge vpon hir face, and the bracelettes vpon hir handes, and bowed my selfe, and thanked the LORDE, and praysed the God of my master Abraham, which had brought me right waye, to take my masters brothers daughter vnto his sonne.

Yf ye be they then that shew mercy and faithfulnes vnto my master, tell me: Yf not, yet tell me, that I maye turne me to thy right hande or to the left.

Then answered Laban and Bethuel, and sayde: This is come of the LORDE, therefore can we saye nothinge agaynst the, nether euell ner good. There is Rebecca before the, take her, and go thy waye, that she maye be thy masters sonnes wife, as the LORDE hath sayde. When Abrahams seruaunt herde these wordes, he bowed him selfe vnto the LORDE, flat vpon the earth, and toke forth jewels of syluer and golde, and mynethinge, and gaue them vnto Rebecca. But vnto hir brethren and the mother, he gaue spices. Then he ate and dronke, and the men also that were with him, and taried there all night.

But in the mornynge he arose, and sayde: Let me departe vnto my master. Neuertheless hir brother and hir mother sayde: Let the damsell tary with vs at the leest ten dayes, and then shall she go. Then sayde he vnto them: holde me not, for the LORDE hath prospered my journey: let me go, that I maye departe vnto my master. Then sayde they: let vs call the damsell, and axe her, what she sayeth there. And they called Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Wilt thou go with this man?

And she answered: Yee I wyll go with him. So they let Rebecca their syster go with hir horse and Abrahams seruaunt, and his men. And they blessed Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Thou art oure syster, growe in to many thousandes tymes thousands, and thy sede possesse the gates of his enemies.

So Rebecca gat hir vp with hir damsels, and satt them vpon the Camels, and wente their waye after the man. And the seruaunt toke Rebecca, and departed.

As for Isaac, he was comynyng from * the well of * liuynge * seynge, for he dwelt in the south countre, and was gone forth to his meditacions in the falde aboute the euyn tynede. And he lift vp hir eyes, and sawe, that there were Camels comynyng. And Rebecca lift vp hir eyes, and sawe Isaac. Then lighted she of the Camell, and sayde vnto * seynge: * What man is this, that commeth agaynst vs in the falde? The seruaunt sayde: The same is my master.

Then toke she hir cloke, and put it aboute her. And the seruaunt tolde Isaac all the earande that he had done. Then Isaac brought her in to his mother Saras tent, and toke Rebecca, and she became his wife, and he loued her. So Isaac was comforted ouer his mother.

The 17th Chapter.

ABRAHAM toke another wife called Ketura, which bare him Simram * Iaksan, Medan * Midian * Ieszbak and Suah. Iaksan begat Seba and Dedan. The children of Dedan were Assurim, Latusim, and Lemuim. The children of Midian were Epher, Hanoch, Abida and Eldaa. All these are the children of Ketura. And Abraham gaue all his goddes vnto Isaac: As for the children that he had of the concubynes, he gaue them giftes, and (whyle he yet lyued) he sent the awaye from his sonne Isaac, eastward in to the east countre.

This is the age of Abraham which he lyued; euen an hundred and fyue and seuentye yeare, and fell sicke and dyed in a good age, when he was olde, * hadd he lyued ynoough and was gathered vnto his people. And his sonsne Isaac and Ismael buried him in the double caue in the falde of Ephron the sonne of Zoar the Hethite, which lyeth ouer before Mamre, * in the falde that Abraham bought of the Hethites. There was Abraham buried with Sara his wife. And after the death of Abraham God blessed his sonne Isaac. And he dwelt by the well of the lyuynge and seynge.

This is the generacion of Ismael Abrahams sonne, whom Agar Saras mayde the Egipecian bare vnto him. And these are the names of Ismaels children, of whom their kynredes are named. The eldest sonne of Ismael, Nebaioth, Cedar, Abdeel, Mibsan, Misma, Duna, Masa, Hadar, Thema, Iethur, Naphis, and Kedma. These are the childre of Ismael with their names in their countres and citiies twelue londeprynces. And this is the age of Ismael, euen an hundred and seuen and thirtie yeare, and he fell sicke and dyed, and was gathered vnto his people. He dwelt from Heuila vnto Sur towards Egipte, as men go to the Assyrians. And he dyed in the presence of all his brethren.

This is the generacion of Isaac the sonne of Abrahâ. Abraham begat Isaac. Isaac was fourtye yeare olde, when he toke to wyfe Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel * Syran of Mesopotamia, * Sister of Laban the Syrian.

Isaac besought the LORDE for his wyfe (because she was baren) and the LORDE was intreated, and Rebecca his wyfe conceaued. And the children stroue together in hir wombe. Then sayde she: Yf it shulde go so with me, why am I then with childe? And she wente for to axe the LORDE. And the LORDE sayde vnto her: Two maner of folke are in thy wombe, and two maner of people shall be deuyed out of thy body, and the one nacion shall overcome the other, * and the greater shall serue the lesse.

Abraham begat Isaac. Isaac was fourtye yeare olde, when he toke to wyfe Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel * Syran of Mesopotamia, * Sister of Laban the Syrian.

Isaac besought the LORDE for his wyfe (because she was baren) and the LORDE was intreated, and Rebecca his wyfe conceaued. And the children stroue together in hir wombe. Then sayde she: Yf it shulde go so with me, why am I then with childe? And she wente for to axe the LORDE. Now when the tyme came that she shulde be deleyuered, beholde, there were two twyns in hir wombe. The first that came forth, was reed, all rough as an hyde, and they called him Esau. Anone thereafter came his brother forth, which helde the hele of Esau with his hand, and they called him Iacob. Thre score yeare oldde was Isaac, whan they were borne. And when the boyes were growne vp, Esau became an hunter, an husbande man. As for Iacob, he was a symple man, and dwelt in the tents. And Isaac loued Esau, because he ate of his venison. But Rebecca loued Iacob.

And Iacob dight a meace of meate. The came Esau from the feld, and was weery, and sayde vnto Iacob: Let me proue of ye reed meace of meate, for I am fayntie (therfore is he called Edom.) But Iacob sayde: Sell me this daye thy byrthright. Esau answered: Lo, I must dye nevertheless, what good then shall my byrthright do me? Iacob sayde: Then sweare vnto me euyn this same daye, And he sweare vnto him, and so he solde his byrthright vnto Iacob. Then Iacob gane him bred and that meace of ryse. And he ate and dronke, and stode vp, and wente his waye. And so Esau regarded not his byrthright.

There came a derth in the londe, passynge the other that was in Abrahams tyme. And Isaac wente to Gerar, vnto Abimelech the kyng of the Philistynes. Then the LORDE appeared vnto him, and sayde: Go not downe in to Eipte, but tary in the lande that I shall saye vnto the. Be thou a straunger in this lande, and I will be with the and blesse the. For vnto the and thy sedy will I geue all this londe, and wyll perfourme myne oath that I sweare to thy father Abraham. And I wyll multiplye thy sedy as the starres of heauen, and vnto thy sedy will I geue all this londe, and thorow thy sedy shall all naciones be blessed, because Abraham was obedient vnto my voyce, and kepte myne ordinances, my commandements, my statutes, and my lawes.

So Isaac dwelt at Gerar. And when the men of the same place axed him of his wife, he sayde: she is my sister. For he was afrayed to saye: she is my wife, (thinkinge thus:) they might slaye me for Rebecca's sake, for she was beutifull to looke vnto. Now when he had bene there a longe season, Abimelech the kyng of the Philistynes loket out at a wynod, and sawe Isaac sportinge with Rebecca his wife.

Then Abimelech called Isaac, and sayde: Beholde, she is thy wyfe, why saydest thou then: She is my sister? Isaac answered him: I thought, I might peraduenture have die thus because of her. Abimelech saide: Why hast thou then done this vnto vs? It coude lightly have come to passe, that some of the people might haue lyen with thy wyfe, and so haddest thou broughte synne vpo vs. The Abimelech commaundad all the people, and sayde: Who so toucheth this man or his wyfe, shal dye the death.

And Isaac sowed in that londe, and foide the same yeare an hundrèth busshels, for the LORDE blessed him. And he became a greate man, wente forth, and grew, tyll he was exceedinge greate, so that he had moch good in shepe and greate catell, and a greate housholde. Therfore had the Philistynes envye at him, and stopped all the welles, that his fathers seruauntes had dydged in the tyme of Abraham his father, and fyllad them with earth, In so moch that Abimelech also himself sayde vnto him: Departe from vs, for thou art farre mightier then we.

Then departed Isaac from thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there. And when he was satled, he caused to dydgy vp the welles agayne, that they had dydgy vp in his father Abraham's tyme, which the Philistynes had stopte after the death of Abraham, and he called the after the same names that his father had named them withall.

Isaacs seruauntes also dydged in the valley, and there they founde a well of luyinge water. But the hyrmen of Gerar stroue with Isaacs hyrmen, and saide: The water is oures. Then called he the well Eseck, because they had done him wronge.

Then dydgy they another well, and stroue for that also: therfore called he it Sytyna. So he gatt him from thence, and dydgy... another well, for which they stroue not: therfore he called it Rehoboth, and sayde: Now hath the LORDE made vs rowme, and letten vs growe in the londe. Afterwarde he departed thence vnto Berseba.

And the LORDE appeared vnto him the same night, and sayde: I am the God of thy father Abraham, feare thou not, for I am with the, and wyll blesse the, and multiplye thy sede for my seruaunt Abrahams sake. Then buylded he an altare there, and called vpon the name of the LORDE, and pitched his tent there, and there his seruauntes dydged a well.

And Abimelech wente vnto him from Gerar, and Ahusath his frende, and Phicol his chefe captayne. But Isaac sayde vnto them: Wherfore come ye to me? seyng ye hate me, and haue put me away frome you? They sayde: We se with open eyes, that the LORDE is with the, therfore we dyued that there shulde be an ooth betwixte vs and the, and that we wolde make a bonde with the, that thou do vs no harme, like as we have not hurte the, and as we haue done nothinge vnto the, but all good, and let the departe in peace.

As for the, thou art y blessed of the LORDE. Then Isaac made them a feast, and they ate and dronke. And on the morow they arose, and sware one to the other. And Isaac let them go, and they departed from him in peace.

The same daye came Isaacs seruauntes, and tolde him of the well that they had digged, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde water. And he called it Saba. Therfore is y cite called Bersaba vnto this daye.

WHAN Esau was fourtie yeare olde, he toke wyues: Judith the daughter of Beri the Hethite, and Basmath the daughter of Elon the Hethite: both these were disobedient vnto the sprete of Isaac and Rebecca. And it came to passe when Isaac was olde, his eyes waxed dymme of sight, and he called Esau his greater sonne, and sayde vnto him: My sonne. He answered him: Here am I. And he sayde: Beholde, I am olde, and knowe not whan I shal dye. Now therfore take thy geer, thy quyuer and thy bowe, and get the forth to the felde, and take me some venyson, and make me meate (soch as I loue) and brynge it me herein, that I may eate, y my soule maye blesse the, before I dye.

But Rebecca herde these wordes, that Isaac sayde vnto his sonne. And Esau wente his waye in to the felde, to hunte venyson, and to brynge it home. Then sayde Rebecca vnto Iacob hir sonne: Beholde, I haue herde thy father talkinge with Esau thy brother, and sayenge: Brynge me venyson, and make me meate, that I maye eate, and blesse the before y LORDE, yer I dye. Now therfore my sonne, heare my voyce, what I commaunde the: Go thy waye to the flocke, and fetch me two good kyddes, that I maye make meate of them for thy father, soch as he loueth: this shalt thou brynge in vnto thy father, that he maye eate, that he maye blesse the before his death.

Neuertheles Iacob sayde vnto Rebecca his mother: Beholde, my brother Esau is rough, and I am smooth: then might my father per-aduenture fele me, and I shulde seme vnto him as though I begyled him, and so brynge a curse vpon me and not a blessyng: Then sayde his mother vnto him: That curse be vpon me my sonne, folowe thou my voyce: go thy waye and fetch it me. So he wente his waye, and fetched it, and brought it vnto his mother.

Then his mother made meate, acordinge as his father loued, and toke Esaus hir elder sonnes costly rayment (which she had with her in y house) and put them vpon Iacob hir yonger sonne. But the kyddes skynnes put she aboute his handes, and where he was smooth aboute the neck: and so she put the meate with bred (as she had made it) in hir sonne Iacobes hande.

And he brought it in vnto his father, and sayde: My father. He answered: here am I, who art thou my sonne? Iacob sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne, I haue done as thou saydest vnto me: aryse, syt vp, and eate of my venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. But Iacob sayde vnto his sonne: My sonne, how hast thou founde it so soone? He answered: The LORDE thy God brought it to my hande.

Thé sayde Isaac vnto Iacob: Come neare my sonne, that I maye fele the, whether thou be my sonne Esan or not. So Iacob wéte vnto Isaac his father. And whan he had felt him, he sayde: The voyce is Iacobs voyce, but the handes are the handes of Esau. And he knew him not, for his handes were rough like as ¶ handes of his brother Esau. And he blessed him.

And he sayde vnto him: art thou my sonne Esau? He answered: Yee I am. Then sayde he: Bringe me here then to eate of thy venyson my sonne, ¶ that my soule maye bless the. Then he brought it him, and he ate: and he brought him wyne also, and he dranke. And Isaac his father sayde vnto him: Come nye, and kyss me my sonne. So he came nye, and he kyssed him.

Then smelde he the sauoure of his clothes, and blessed him, and sayde: Beholde, the smell of my sonne is as ¶ smell of the felede, which ¶ LORDE hath blessed.* God gene the of the dew of heauen, and of the fatnesse of the earth, and plentuousnes of corne and wyne. Naciones be thys seruauntes, and people fall downe at thy fote. Be thou lorde ouer thy brethren, and thy mothers children fall downe at thy fote. ¶ Cursed be he, that curseth the: and blessed be he, that blesseth the.

Now whan Isaac had made an ende of blessinge, and Iacob was seace gone out from his father Isaac, his brother Esau came from his hunting, and made meate also, and brought it vnto his father, and sayde vnto him: Arys my father, and eate of thy sonnes venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. Then answered him Isaac his father: Who art thou? He sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne. Then was Isaac exceedingly amased aboue measure, and saide: Who? Where is then the hunter that brought me, and I haue eaten of all afore thou camest, and haue blessed him? And he shall be blessed still.

Whan Esau herde these wordes of his father, he cried loude, and was exceadeynge sory, and sayde vnto his father: O blesse me also my father. But he sayde: Thy brother came with sottyte, and hath taken thy blessinge awaye. Then sayde he: He maye well be called Iacob, for he hath vndermined me now two tymes. My byrth right hath he awaye, and beholde, now taketh he awaye my blessinge also.

And he sayde: Hast thou not kepte one blessynge for me? Isaac answered, and sayde vnto him: I haue made him lord over ¶, and all his brethren haue I made his seruauntes. With corne ¶ wine haue I prouyded him. What shal I do vnto the now my sonne? Esau sayde vnto his father? Hast thou not one blessinge more my father? O blesse me also my father.

And he lift vp his voyce, ¶ wepte.¶ Then Isaac his father answered and sayde vnto him: ¶ Beholde, thou shalt haue a fat dwelldinge vpon earth, ¶ of ¶ dew of heauen from aboue: with thy swerde shalt thou get thy lyuynge, and shalt serue thy brother. And it shall come to passe, ¶ thou shalt put of his yock," and plucke it from thy neck.

And Esau bare euell wyll vnto Iacob. ¶ because of the blessinge that his father had blessed him withall," and sayde in his herte: The tymne wyll come shortly, that my father shall mourn, for I wil slaye my brother Iacob. Thes was it tolde Rebecca of these wordes of his elder sonne, and she sent, and bad call for Iacob hir younger sonne, and saide vnto him: Beholde, thy brother Esau threateneth the, that he wil slaye the. And now my sonne heare my voyce: Get the vp, and flye vnto my brother Laban in Haran, and tary there with him a whyle, ¶ tyll the luxuriouss of thy brother be swaged, and till his wrath against ¶ be turned from the, and he forget what thou hast done vnto him. So wyll I then sende for the, and cause the be fetched from thee. Why shulde I be robbed of you both in one daye?

And Rebecca sayde vnto Isaac: I am weery of my life, because of the daughters of Heth: ¶ If Iacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, ¶ which are as the daughters of this londe, what shall this life then profit me?

THEN called Isaac his sonne Iacob and ¶ blessed him, and charged him, ¶ sayde vnto him: Take not a wife of the daughters of Canaan, but get the vp, and go in to Mesopotamia vnto the house of Bethuel thy mothers father, and take ¶ there a wife of ¶ daughters of Laban thy mothers brother. How we came.

Then when Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and let him departe in to Mesopotamia, that he might goe in to Mesopotamia vnto Laban the sonne of Bethuel of Siria, ye brother of Rebbecca, his and Esau's mother.

Now when Esau sawe that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and let him departe in to Mesopotamia, that he might take a wife there: and that, as he blessed him, he charged him, *sayde: Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan, and that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone vnto Mesopotamia: seyenge also that Isaac his father loked not gladly vpon the daughters of Canaan, he wente his waye vnto Ismael, and besyde the wyues that he had afore, he toke "Mahaloth the daughter of Ismael (Abrahâs sonne) the sister of Nebaioth, to wife.

As for Jacob, he departed from Bersaba, and wente vnto Haran and came to a place, where he taried all night: for the Sonne was downe. And he toke a stone of that place, and put it vnder his heade, and layed him downe in that same place to slepe. And he dreamed, and beholde, there stode vpon that earth, a ladder, whose toppe reached vnto the heauen. And beholde, the angels of God wente vp and downe vpon it, and the LORDE stode vpon it, and sayde:

"I am the LORDE God of thy father Abraham, and the God of Isaac: The londe that thou lyest vpon, wyl I geue vnto thee, and to thy sed: and thy sed shall be as dust of that earth. And thou shalt sprede forth vnto the west, east, north, and south: and thorow the and thy sed shall all the kynreds vpon earth be blessed. And beholde, I am with thee, and wyll kepe the where so euer thou goest, wyl bryinge the hither agayne in to this lande: for I wil not leane the, thyly I haue made good, all that I haue promysed the.

Now when Jacob awaked from his slepe, he saide: Surely the LORDE is in this place, and I knew not. And he was afraid, and sayde: How fearfull is this place? here is no thinge els but an house of God, a gate vnto heanê. And Jacob arose early in the morninge, and toke the stone f that he had layed vnder his heade, and set it vp, and poured oyle vpon it. And he called the place Bethel, but afore the cite was called Luz. And Jacob made a vowe, and sayde: *Ye God wyll be with me, and kepe me in this journey I goe geue me bred to eate, and clothings to put on, and brynge me peaceably home agayne vnto my father: The shall the LORDE be my God, and this stone that I haue set vp, shall be an house of God: and all that thou geuest me, I wyl geue the the tenth therof.

Then Jacob got him vp vpon his fete, and wente in to the east countre, loked aboute him, and beholde, there was a well in the fielde, and vnder a tre, vnder the tre was a flocke of shepe therby, for the flockes dranke of the well. And there laye a greate stone at the welles mouth, and thyther they vsed to brynge the flockes, and to route the stone from that mouth of the well, and to geue the shepe drynke, so they put the stone agayne vpon the welles mouth in to his place.

And Jacob sayde vnto them: Brethren, whèc be ye? They answered: we are of Haran. He sayde vnto them: Knowe ye Laban the sonne of Nahor? They answered: We knowe him well. He sayde: *Is he in good health? They answered: he is in good health. And lo, there commeth his daughter Rachel with the shepe. He sayde: It is yet hye daye, is not yet tyme to druyne in the catell: geue the shepe to drynke, goe youre waye, fede them. They answered: We can not, toll all the flockes be brought together, and toll we route the stone from the welles mouth, so geue the shepe drynke.

Whyle he yet talked with them, Rachel came with his fathers shepe, for she kepeth shepe. When Jacob sawe Rachel *doughter of Laban his brothers brother, and the shepe of Laban his mothers brother, he wete, routed the stone from the welles mouth, and gave his mothers brother shepe to drynke, and kyssed Rachel, lift vp his voyce, and wepte, and tolde her, he was his fathers brother, and *sonne of Rebbecca. Then ranne she, and tolde her father.

Whan Laban herde of Jacob his sisters sonne, he ranne to mete him, and enbraced him, and kyssed him, and brought him in to his house.

And so he tolde him all this matter. Thë sayde Laban vnto him: Wel, thou art my bone and my flesh. Abyde with me a moneth longe. But after that saide he vnto Iacob: Because thou art my brother, shalst thou therefore serue me for nought? Tell me, what shall thy wages be. Laban had two doughters, the eldest was called Lea, and the yongest Rachel. And Lea was tender eyed, but Rachel was beutyfull and well fauoured of face, and Iacob loued her well, and sayde: I will serue the seuen yeaare, for Rachel thy yongest doughter. Laban answered: It is better that I geue her the, then vnto another: tary thou with me.

So Iacob serued seuen yeaare for Rachel, and they sermed vnto him but fewe dayes, he loued her so well. And Iacob saide vnto Laban: geue me my wyfe, for the tyme is come that I shulde Iye with her. The Laban bad all the people of that place, and made a mariage. But at eué he toke his doughter Lea, and brought her in vnto him, and he laye with her. And Laban gane Zilpa his mayde vnto his doughter Lea to be hir mayde.

But on the morow, beholde, it was Lea. And he sayde vnto Laban: Why hast thou done this vnto me? Haue not I serued þr for Rachel? Why hast thou then begyled me? Laban answered: It is not the maner in orre coun tre, to mary the yongest before the eldest. Holde out this weke, þ I will geue the this also, for the seruye þ thou shalt do me yet seuen yeaeres more. Iacob dyd so, þ he lede out þ weke. Then gane he him Rachel his doughter to wyfe. And Laban gane Bilha his mayde vnto Rachel his doughter to be hir mayde. So he laye with Rachel also, þ loued Rachel more þe Lea, and serued him yet seuen yeaeres more.

But when the Lorde sawe, that Lea was no thinge regarded, he made her frutefull, and Rachel baren. And Lea conceaued, and bare a sonne, whom she called Ruben, and sayde: The Lorde hath loked vpon my aduersite. Now wyll my hyszbande loue me. And she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: The Lorde hath herde that I am despysed, and hath genë me this also, and she called him Simeon. She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll my hyszbande kepe me company agayne, for I haue borne him thr er sonnes, therefore called she his name Leui. She conceaued þr fourth tyme, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll I geue thankes vnto the Lorde, therefore called she him Iuda, and left bearynge.

WHEN Rachel sawe that she bare no children vnto Iacob, she had enuie at her sister, þa saide vnto Iacob: Geue me childrë also, or els I am but deed. But Iacob was very wroth at Rachel, þa sayde: Am I then in Gods steade, which kepeth þ frute of thy wombe from þ? Neuertheles she sayde: Beholde, there is Bilha my mayden, lye with her, þ she maye beare vpon my lappe, þ that I maye be increased by her. And so she gane him Bilha hir mayden to wyfe.

And Iacob laye with her. So Bilha conceaued, and bare Iacob a sonne. Then saide Rachel: God hath geuen sentence vpon my syde, and herde my voyce, and geue me a sonne, therfore called she him Dan. Bilha Rachels mayde conceaued agayne, and bare another sonne vnto Iacob. Then sayde Rachel: God hath turned it with me, and my sister, and I haue gotë the vpper hande. And she called him Nephthali.

Now whan Lea sawe that she had left bearynge, she toke Silpa hir mayde, and gane her vnto Iacob to wyfe. So Silpa Leas mayde bare Iacob a sonne. Then saide Lea: This is good lucke, þ she called him Gad. After this Silpa Leas mayde bare Iacob another sonne. Then sayde Lea: Well is me, for the daughters will call me blessed, and she called him Asser.

Ruben wente out in the tyme of þ wheate haruest, and founde Mandragoras in the felde, and brought them home vnto his mother Lea. Then sayde Rachel vnto Lea: Geue me some of thy sonnes Madragoras. She answered: Hast thou not ynowe that thou hast taken awaye my hyszbande, but wilt take awaye my sonnes Madragoras also? Rachel saide: Wel, let him lye with the this night for thy sonnes Mandragoras. Now whan Iacob came home at euen from the felde, Lea went forth to mete him, and sayde: Thou shalt lye with me, for I haue bought the for my sonnes Mandragoras.

And he slepte with her that night. And God herde Lea, and she conceaued, and bare Iacob the fifth sonne, sayde: God hath rewarded me, because I gave my mayden vnto my husbande, and she called him Isachar. Lea conceaued yet agayne, and bare Iacob the sixte sonne, and sayde: God hath endeued me with a good dowry. Now wyll my husbande dwell with me agayne, for I haue borne him sixe sones, she called him Zabulon. After that she bare a daughter, whom she called *Dina.

Neuertheles God thought vpo Rachel, and herde her, and made her frutefull. Then she conceaued, and bare a sonne, and sayde: God hath taken awaye my rebuke, and she called him Ioseph,* and sayde: God gene me yet another sonne.

Now when Rachel had borne Ioseph, Iacob sayde vnto Laban: Let me go, departe in to my place and vnto myne owne lande: geue me my wyues and my children, (for the which I haue serued the) I maye go: for thou knowest, what seruyce I haue done the. Laban sayde vnto him: Can I not fynde faoure in thy sight? I perceau, that God hath blessed me for thy sake. Appoynte thou the rewarde, I shall geue the. But he sayde vnto him: Thou knowest how I haue serued the, and what maner of catell thou hast vnder me. Thou haddest but little afore I came hither, but now is it growne in to a multitude, and the LORDE hath blessed thy shepe for my sake. And now when shall I loke to myne owne house also? He sayde: What shal I then geue the?

Iacob sayde: Thou shalt geue me nothinge at all, but ye thou wilt do this for me ye I saye, then wyll I fede and kepe thy shepe agayne. I wyll go thrrow all thy flockes to daye, and separate thou from amongeth them all the shepe that be spotted and partye coloured, and all blacke shepe amongeth the lambs. Now loke what shalbe partie coloured and spotted amouge the kyddes, the same shal be my rewarde: so shal my rightousnessteifie with me to daye or to morrowe, when it cometh vnto my rewarde before the, so that, what so ever is not spotted and partye coloured amongeth the kyddes, and blacke amouge the lambs, let that be theft with me.

Then sayde Laban: Beholde, let it be so as thou hast sayde. And that same daye he sundered out the speckled and partye coloured goates, and all the spotted and partye coloured kyddes (where there was eny whyte vpon them) and all that was blacke amongeth the lambs, and put them vnder the hande of his children, and made rowne of thre dayes journey wyde betwixte him and Iacob. So Iacob kepte the residue of Labans flocke.

But Iacob toke staues of grene wyllies, hasell and of chestnottrees, and pylled whyte strekes in them, and layed the staues that he had pylled, in the drynkinge troughes before the flocke, which came there to dryneke, that they shulde conceaue, when they came to dryneke. So the flockes conceaued ouer their staues, and brought forth speckelde, spotted and partye coloured.

Then Iacob parted his lambs, and put them to the flocke vnto the spotted: and all that was blacke in Labans flocke, that put he vnto the spotted. And he made him a flocke of his owne, which he put not vnto Labans flocke. Neuertheles in the first buckynge tyme of the flockes, he layed the staues in the drynkinge troughes before the eyes of the flockes, that they shulde conceaue ouer the staues. But in the latter buckynge tyme he layed them not in. So the later were Labans, but the firstlinges were Iacobes. Thus the man became excedinge riche, so that he had many shepe, maydens *seruauntes, Camels and Asses.

The 1771. Chapter.

He herde also of ye wordes of Labans children, that they sayde: Iacob hath brought all our fathers good vnto him self; of our fathers good hath he gotten these riches. And Iacob behelde Labans countenaunce, he beholde, it was not towarde him as yesterdaie and yervyesterdaye.

And the LORDE sayde vnto him: De parte agayne to thy fatherlade, and to thy kynred, I wyll be with the. Then sent Iacob and bad calf Rachel and Lea in to the fele to his flockes, and sayde vnto them: I se youre fathers countenaunce, that it is not towarde me like as yesterdaie and yervyesterdaye: but the God of my father hath bene with me. And ye knowe, that I haue serued youre father with all my power.

And he hath discoueued me, and chaunged my wages now ten tyms. But God hath not

Then sayde Laban vnto Iacob: What hast thou done, that thou hast stollen awaie my hert, and caried awaye my daughters, as though they had bene taken captuyue with y swerde? Wherfore kepetst thou that secrete, that thou woldest fyre, and hast stollen awaye fro me, and toldest me not, that I might haue brought the on the waye with myrth, with synginge, with tabretttes and harpes? and hast not suffred me to kyssye my children and daughters? Thou hast done foolishly, and so moch might I haue made, that I coude haue done you euell: but youre fathers God saide yesterayde vnto me: Bewarre, that thou speake nothinge vnto Iacob but good. And for so much then as thou woldest nedes deparre, and longedest sore after thy fathers house, why hast thou stollen away my goddes? Iacob answered and sayde vnto Laban: I was afrayed, that thou shuldest haue taken away thy daughters fro me: but loke by whom thou fyndest thy goddes, let the same dye here before oure brethren. Scke that thine is by me, and take it awaye. (But he knew not, that Rachel had stollen them.) Then wente Laban in to Iacobes tent and in to Leas tent, and in to both the maydens têtes, and founde nothinge: and out of Leas tente he wente in to Rachels tent. Then toke Rachel the ymage, and layed them vnder the Camelles strauwe, and sat downe vpon them. But Laban searched the whole tent, and founde nothinge. Then sayde she vnto her father: Be not angrie my lorde, that I can not ryse vp vnto the: for it goeth with me after the maner of wemen. So he sought, and founde not the ymages.

And Iacob was wrath, and chode with Laban, answered he sayde vnto him: What haue I trespassed or offended, y thou art so whote vpon me? Thou hast searched all my houshode stuff, y what hast thou founde of thy houshode stuff? Laye it here before my brethren y hande, y they maye iudge betwene vs both. Twentye yeare haue I bene with the: thy shepe y goates haue not bene vnfrutefull, the rammes of thy flocke haue I not eaten: Loke what was ^torne of beastes, I brought it not vnto y, I was fayne to paise it my selfe: thou requyredest it of my hande, whether it were stollen fro me by daye or by night. Thus haue I serued twentye yeare in thy house, fourtene yeares for thy doughters, & sixe for thy flocke, and ten tymes hast thou chanuged my rewarde: if the God of my father the God of Abraham, and the feare of Isaac had not bene on my syde, thou haddest lented me go away emptye. But God hath loked vp myne aduersite and laboure, and rebuked the yesterdaie.

Laban answered and sayde: The doughters are my doughters, & the children are my children, and the flockes are my flockes, & all that thou seist is myne. What can I do this daye vnto these my doughters, or to their children whom they haue borne? Now therefore come on, let vs make a couenaunt (I say thou) which maye be a wytnesse betwene me and the. Then toke Iacob a stone, & set it vp (for a pilere or markstone) and sayde vnto his brethren: Gather stones. And they toke the stones, and made an heape, & ate vpone the same heape. And Laba called it Iega Sahadutha, but Iacob called it Gilead: (ether of them after the properte of his language.)

Then sayde Laban: This heape be wytnesse betwene me and the this daye (therefore is it called Gilead) and a testimony, for he sayde: The LORDE loke betwene me and ye whan we are departed one from other: y, thou vexe my doughters, or take other wyues vnto them. There is no ma with vs, but lo, God is the wytnesse betwene me and the. And Laban sayde morouer vnto Iacob: Beholde, this is the heape, and this is the marckstone that I haue set vp betwixte me and the: the same heape be wytnesse, and the same marckstone also be wytnesse, yf I passe ouer vnto the, or yf thou passe ouer this heape the marckstone vnto me, to do eny harme. The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, and the God of their fathers, be judge betwene us.

And Iacob swarte vnto him by the feare of his father Isaac. And Iacob offered an offerynge vpon the mount, and called his brethren to eate bred. And when they had eaten, they taried vpone the mount all night. But vpon the morow Laban rose vp early, kyssed his children, & doughters, & blessed the, & departed, and came agaynse vnto his place. As for Iacob, he wente on his journey, & the angels of God met him. And when he sawe them, he sayde: It is Gods hoost, t called the same place Mahanaim.

Iacob sent messaugers before him to his brother Esau, *in to the lande of Seir, of the feld of Edom, & commanded the, & sayde: Saye thus vnto my lorde Esau: Thy seruaunte Iacob sendeth this wordes: I haue bene out with Laban, & haue bene hither to amonge strauangers, & haue oxen & Asses, shepe, seruauntes & maydes, & haue sent forth to shewe it the my lorde, y I might fynde faunoure in thy sight.

The messaugers came agayne vnto Iacob, and sayde: We came vnto thy brother Esau, & he commeth forth also agaynst the with foure hundred men. Then was Iacob sore afryed, and wist not what waye to turne him self, & deuyed the people that was with him, and the shepe, and the oxen, & the Camels in to two droues, & sayde: Yf Esau come vpon the one droue, and smyte it, the other shal escape.

Iacob sayde morouer: O God of my father Abrahã, God of my father Isaac, LORDE thou that saydest vnto me: Departe agayne to thine owne londe and to thy kyndred, and I wylye do the good: I am to litle for all the mercies and all the truth that thou hast shewed vnto thy seruaunt (for I had nomore but this staff when I wente ouer this Iordan, and now am I become two droues) deluyer me from the hande of my brother, for the haide of Esau, for I am afryed of him, lest he come and smyte me the mother with the children. Thou saydest: I wyll do the good, and wyll make thy sede as the sonde of thy see, which can not be nombred for multitude.

And there he taried that night, and toke of such as came to hande, "a present vnto his brother Esau, two huderth she goates, twentye he goates, two hundreth shepe, twentye rammes and thritte myleke camels with their foales, fourtye kyne, ten bullockes, twentye she Asses with ten foales, and put them in the handes of his seruauntes, every floc by them selues, & sayde vnto them: Go ye forth before me, I put a space betwixte one floc after the other, and commanued the first and sayde:

axeth the: Whose art thou? z whyther goest thou? and whose are these that thou drynest before the? Thou shalt saye: They be thy seruaunt Iacobs, which sendeth a present vnto his lorde Esau, and commeth behynde vs him self.

Thus commaundedy he the seconde also, and the thirde, and all them that folowed the flockes, and sayde: Like as I haue tolde you, so speake ye vnto Esau, whan ye mete him, and saye vnto him also: Beholde, thy seruaunt Iacob is behynde vs. For he thought: I wyll reconeyle him with the present that goeth before me, after wyll I se him my self, peraduenture he shall receaue me to grace.

So the present wente before him, but he taried in the tente the same night, and rose vp in the night, and toke his two wyues and the two maydens and his eleuen sonnes, and wente vnto the foorde of Iacob, toke them and caried them over the water, so that all that had came ouer, and taried him self alone on this syde.

"Then wrestled there a man with him vntyll the breake of the daye. And when he saw he might not ouercome him, he touched the senowe of his thye, and his thye shrancke in wrestlinge with him. And he sayde: Let me go, for the daye breaketh on. But he answered: I will not ley, excepte thou blesse me. He sayde: What is thy name? He answered: Iacob. He sayde: Thou shalt nomore be called Iacob, but Israel, for thou hast struyen with God and with men, and hast preuayled. And Iacob axed him, sayde: Tell me, what is thy name? But he sayde: Why axest thou what my name is? And he blessed him there. And Iacob called the place Peniel, for I haue sene God face to face, and my soule is recovered. And as he came ouer fro Peniel, sayde he Sonne rose vp vpon him, that he halted vpon his thye. Theryfore eate the children of Israel no vane vpon the senow yf thye seconde this daye, because vane vpon the senow of Iacobs thye was touched.

The xxiiiij. Chapter.

Iacob lift vp his eyes, saw his brother Esau comynge with foure hundreth men: and he deuyded his children vnto Lea vnto Rachel, and to both the maydēs, and set the maydēs with their children before, and Lea with hir childre after, and Rachel with Joseph hynder most. And he wente before them, and bowed him self to the grounde seuen tymes, yll he came to his brother. *But Esau ranne to mete him, and embraced him, and fell aboute his neck, kyssed him, and wepte, and lift vp his eyes, and sawe the wyues with the children, and sayde: What are these with the? He answered: They are the children, which God hath geuen vnto thy seruaunt. And the maydēs came forth with their children, and dyd their obeysaunce vnto him.

Lea came forth also with hir childre, and kneeld vnto him. Afterwarde came Joseph and Rachel forth, and kneeld vnto him likewise. And he sayde: What meanest thou with all the droue that I met? He answered: that I might fynde grace in the sight of my lorde. Esau sayde: I haue ynoyng my brother, kepe that thou hast. Iacob answered: Oh nay, but yf I haue founde grace in thy sight, receaue my present of my hande (for I sawe thy face, as though I had sene the face of God) and be at one with me. Take this present in good worth, that I haue brought, for God hath geuen it me; I have ynoyng of all things. So he compelled him to take it.

And he sayde: Let vs go on and take oure journey, I will go in thy company. But he sayde vnto him: My lorde, thou knowest that I haue tender children by me, and small and greate catell also, which are yet but yonge: yf they shulde be dryue ouer in one daye, the whole flocke wolde dye. Let my lorde go on before his seruaunt. I will dryue after fayre and softly, (there after as the catell and the children can go,) yll I come to my lorde in Seir. Esau sayde: Yet wil I leave some of my people with the. He answered: What nede is it? Let me but onely fynde grace in the sight of my lorde.

So Esau departed againe the same daye towards Seir, and Iacob toke his journey towarde Sucoth, and buylded him an house, and made tētes for his catell. Theryfore is the place called Sucoth.

Afterwarde came Iacob peaceablie vnto the cite of Sichem, which lyeth in the lande of Canaan, after that he was come agayne out of Mesopotamia, and pitched before the cite, and bought a piece of londe of the children of Hemor  the father of Sichem for  an hundred pens. There pitched he his tent, and there he set vp an altare, and called vpon the name of the mightie God of Israel.

The  Chapter.

Then Hemor the father of Sichem wente forth vnto Iacob to come with him. In the meane season came Iacob sones from  felde. And when they herde it, it greued the men, and they were very wroth, that he had wrought folly in Israel, and liyen with Iacob sdaughters: for so was not the vse to do.

Then comened Hemor with the, and sayde: My sone Sichems hert longeth for youre daughter, O geue him to wife: make frendship vs, and geue vs your daughters, and take ye our daughters, and dwell with vs, the londe shall be open vnto you, dwell and occupie, and haue youre possessions therin. And Sichem sayde vnto his father and brethren: Let me fynde grace with you: loke what ye appoynte me, I will geue it: requyre the dowrye and gift of me hardly, I wyl geue it accordinge as ye wyl ax, onely geue me the damsell to wife.

Then Iacob ssons answered Sichem and Hemor his father (and spake disceatfully, because their sister Dina was defyled)  sayde vnto them: That can we not do, to geue oure sister to an vnincircumcised man: for that were a shame vnto vs.

Neuertheles we wyl consente vnto you, ye wyllbe like vnto vs, and be circumcised as many as are males amongeth you: then will we gene you our daughters, and take your daughters vnto vs, and dwell with you, and be one people. But ye wyll not herken vnto vs, to be circumcided, then wyl we take oure daughter, and go oure waye.

These wordes pleased Hemor and his sonne wel, and the yonge man deferde not to do the same, for he had lust to Iacobs daughter: and he was holden in honour above all in his fathers house. Then came Hemor and Sichem his sonne vnder  gate of cite, and comened with the citizens of the cite, and saide: These men are peaceable with vs, and will dwell in the londe and occupie: now is the londe brode of both the sydes, we wyl take their daughters vnto vs, and geue them oure daughters.

But then wyll they consent vnto vs, to dwell by vs, and to be one people with vs, ye we circumyese all the men children amonge vs, like as they are circumcysed: their catell and goodes, and all that they haue, shal be ours, ye we consent vnto them, that they maye dwel with vs.

And they herkened vnto Hemor and Sichem his sonne, as many as wente out and in at  gate of his cite, and circumcised all the males, that wented out and in at his cite. And vpon the thirde daye (when it was paneull to them)  the two sones of Iacob Simeon and Leui Dinas brethren, toke  man his swerde, and wente boldly in to the cite, and slew all the males, and slew Hemor also and Sichem his sonne with the edge of the swerde, and toke their sister Dina out of Sichems house, and wente their waye.

Then came Iacob ssons ouer the slayne, and spoyled the cite (because they had defyled their sister) and toke their shepe, oxen, Asses, and what so euer was in the cite and in the londe, and all maner of goodes: All their children and wyues toke they captuye, and spoyled all  was in the houses.

And Iacob sayde vnto Symeon and Leui: Ye haue brought it so to passe, I stynke before the inhabiters of this londe,  Cananites and Pheresites, but a small nombre: Yf they gather them selues now together against me, they shal slaye me, so shal I be destroyed with my house. But they answered: Shulde they the deal with oure sister as with an whoore?

And God sayde vnto Iacob: Get the vp,  and go vnto Bethel,  dwell there, and Then sayde Iacob vnto his housholde and to all y were with him: Put awaye from you y straunge goddes, that are amonge you, and clense youre selues, and chaunge your clothes, and let vs get vp, and go vnto Bethel, that I maye there make an altare vnto the God, * which herde me in the tyme of my trouble, and hath bene with me in the waye that I have gone.

Then gane they him all the straunge goddes that were vnder their handes, and their earynges, and he buried them vnnder an Oke that stode besyde Sichem, * departed. And there came a feare of God vpon the cities that laye roide aboute, so that they followed not after y sonnes of Iacob. So came Iacob vnto Lus in y lande of Canaan (which is called Bethel) and all the people that were with him, and there he byuldled an altare, and called y place Bethel, because the LORDE appeared vnto him there, when he fled from his brother. Then dyed *Debora Rebecceas nurse, and was buried beneth Bethel vnder the Oke, and it was called the Oke of lamentacion.

*And God appeared agayne vnto Iacob, after that he was come out of Mesopotamia, and blessed him, * saide vnto him: *Thou art called Iacob, neuertheles thou shalt nomore be called Iacob, but Israel shal be thy name. And so was he called Israel.

And God sayde vnto him: *I am the All mightie God, be frutefull and multiplye: peoples and a multitude of people shall come of the, and Kynges shall come out of thy loynes: and the lande that I gaue vnto Abraham and Isaac, wyll I gene vnto the, * wyl gene it vnto thy sede after the. So God departed from him, from y place where he talked with him. And Iacob set vp a piller of stone, in the place where he talked with him, * poured drynk-offerynges theron, and poured oyle vpun it. And Iacob called y place where God talked with him, Bethel.

And it chaunse, that when Israel dwelt in that londe, Ruben went * and laye with Bilha his fathers concubynye, and that came to Israel's cares.

And Iacob had twolue sonnes. The sonnes of Lea were these: Ruben Iacob's first borne sonne, Simeon, Leui, Juda, Issachar, * Zabulõ. The sonnes of Rachel, were Joseph and Ben Iamin. The sonnes of Bilha Rachels mayde: Dan, and Nepthali. The sonnes of Sipla Leas mayde: Gad and Aser. These are * sonnes of Iacob, which were borne vnto him in Mesopotamia. The children of Reguel are these: Nahath, Sera, Samma, Mis. These are the children of Basmath Esau's wife.

The children of Ahalibama Esau's wife, the daughter of Ana, that was the childe of Zibeon (which she bare vnto Esau) are these: Ieus, Iaelam and Korah. These are the princes amóge the childe of Esau. The children of Eliphas the first sonne of Esau, were these: The prince Themau, y prince Omar, the prince Zepho, the prince Kenas, the prince Korah, the prince Gaetham, the prince Amaeleck. These are the princes of Eliphas in the lade of Edó, and are the children of Ada.

And these are the children of Reguel Esau's sonne: y prince Nahath, y prince Serah, y prince Samna, y prince Misa. These are y princes of Reguel in y londe of y Edomites, y they are y children of Basmath Esau's wife. These are the children of Ahalibama Esau's wife: The prince Ieus, y prince Iaelam, the prince Korah. These are the princes of Ahalibama, y daughter of Ana Esau's wife.

These are y children of Esau and their princes. He is Edom. The children of Seir y Horite y dwelt in the londe, are these: Lothan, Sobal, Zibeon, Ana, Dison, Ezer and Disan. These are the princes of the Horites, all children of Seir in the londe of Idumea. But y childe of Lothan were these: Horí, y Hémá, y Lothás sister was called Thimma.

The children of Sobal were these: Aluá, Manahat, Ebal, Sepho and Oná. The children of Zibeó were: Aia and Ana. This is the same Ana y foude t Mules in y wyldernes, whá he kepte his fathers Zibeons Asses. The children of Ana were: Dison, y Ahalibama, y is y daughter of Ana. The children of Dison were: Hemdan, Eszban, Iethrá and Charan. The children of Ezer were: Bilhan, Seuá, t Ackán. The children of Disan were: Vz and Arán.

These are y prices of y Horites: The prince Lothan, y prince Sobal, y prince Zibéo, y prince Ana, y prince Dison, y prince Ezer, y prince Disan. These are the princes of the Horites, which ruled in y londe of Seir. The kynge that reigned in the londe of Edumea (before the childe of Israel had any kynge) are these: Bela y sonne of Beor was kynge in Edumea, y name of his cíte was Dinhaba. And whá Bela died, Iobáb y sonne of Serah of Bosra was kynge in his steade. When Iobab dyed, Husam out of y lode of the Themanites was kynge in his steade. When Husam dyed, Hadad y sonne of Bedad (which slewe y Madianites in y Moabites felde) was kynge in his steade, y name of his cíte was Auith. When Hadad dyed, Samla of Masrecc was kynge in his steade. Whá Samla died, Saul of Rehobot by y water syde, was kynge in his steade. When Saul dyed, Baal Hana the sonne of Aehbor was kynge in his steade. Whá Baal Hana the sonne of Aehbor dyed, Hadad was kynge in his steade, y name of his cíte was Pagu, y his wives name was Mehet Abeel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mesahab. Thus are the princes of Esau called in their kyngred, places y names: The prince Thymma, y prince Alua, y prince Ietheth, the prince Ahalibama, the prince Ela, the prince Pynom, the prince Kenas, y prince Themau, y prince Miibzar, the prince Magdiel, y prince Frá. These are the princes in Edumea, like as they dwelt in y lade of their possessions. And Esau is y father of y Edomites.

IACOB dwelt in y lande, wherin his father was a stranger, namely in the lade of Canaá. And these are y generacios of Iacob. Joseph was seuentye year old, whá he became a keper of the catell with his brethren, y the lad was with the children of Bilha y Silpa his fathers wyues, and tolde their father of y euell reporte y was of the. Israel louted Joseph more the all his childe because he had begoté him in his olde age, and he made him a cote of many colours.

Now whá his brethren save, y his father louted him more the all his brethren, they had...
And what did they saye: Hearde you what I dreamed, and tolde his brethren therof. That they hated him ye more, for he sayde: Heare ye what I dreamed. Me thought we were byndlinge sheeues vpó felde, my shefe arose, and stode vp, and youre sheeues rounde aboute made obeysaunce vnto my shefe.

Then sayde his brethren vnto him: Shalt thou be our kinge, and hane domynio ouer vs? And they hated him yet ye more, because of his dreame. And he had yet another dreame, which he tolde his brethren, sayde: Beholde, I had yet another dreame: Me thought the Sonne of Moone eluen starres made obeysaunce to me. And wha this was tolde his father and his brethren, his father reproved him, sayde vnto him: What maner of dreame is this, thou hast dreamed? Shall I thy mother, thy brethren come before vpó the groiide? And his brethren had envie at him. But his father marcked this sayenge.

Now wha his brethren were gone forth to kepe their fathers carreth in Siche, Israel sayde vnto Joseph: Do not thy brethren kepe the carreth in Siche? Come, I wil sende vnto the. He answered: Here am I. And he sayde: Go thy waye, and loke whether it be well with thy brethren and with thy carreth, and brynge me worde agayne how it is. And he sent him out of the valley of Hebron, to go vnto Sicheh.

Then a certayne man founde him, wandringe out of his waye in the felde, which axed him, and sayde: Whom sekest thou? He answered: I seke my brethren: tell me I pray the where they kepe. The man sayde: They are gone from hence, for I herde them saye: let vs go vnto Dothan. Then folowed Joseph after his brethren, and founde them at Dothan.

Now when they sawe him a farre of, afore he came at the, they denied them to slye him, and sayde one to another: Lo, there came the dreamer, come on, and let vs slye him, cast him in a pytter, and saye: a wicked beast hath deuoured him: the shal it be sone, what his dreames are.

When Ruben herde that, he wolde have deuyoured him out of their handes, sayde: O let vs not sly a soule. Ruben sayde morouer vnto him: Shed no blnde, but cast him in to this pytter y is in the wyldernes, laye ye no hades vpon him. (He wolde haue deuyoured him out of their hades, y he might haue brought him agayne vnto his father.)

When Joseph now came to his brethren, they strypped him out of his cote, that partye coloured cote which he had vpon him, toke him and cast him in to a pytter. But the same pytter was emptye, and no water in it, they sat them downe to eate. In the meine season they lift vp their eyes, and sawe aCopy of Israelites coppyng from Gilead, with their camels, which bare spycyes, balne, and myrrre, and were goinge downe in to Egipte.

Then saide Iuda vnto his brethren: what helpeth it vs, that we slye onre brother, and hyde his bloude? Come, let vs sell him vnto the Israelites, that oure handes be not defyled vpon him, for he is oure brother, oure flesh and bloude. And they herkened vnto him.

And as the Madianites maunchant men wente by, they drew Joseph out of the pytter, and solde him vnto the Israelites (for twyte syluer pens) which brought him in to Egipte.

Now when Ruben came agayne vnto the pytter, founde not Joseph therin, he rent his clothes, and came agayne to his brethren and he saide: The lad is not yonder, whyther shal I go? Then toke they Iosephs cote, slawe a goate, and dypped the cote in y bloude, and sent awaie that partie coloured cote, and caused it be brought vnto their father and he saide: This haue we founde, loke, whether it be thy sonses coate, or no.

But he knewe it, and he saide: It is my sonses coate, a wicked beast hath deuoured him, a rauyshinge beast hath rauysched Joseph. And Iacob rent his clothes, and put a sack cloth aboute his loynes, mourned for his sonne a longe season. And all his sonses daughters came vnto him to coforte him. But he wolde not be coforted, saide: With sorowe wil I go downe in to the graue vnto my sonne. And his father wepte for him. But the Madianites solde him in Egipte vnto Pharaoh Pharaos chefe Marshall.

The rrviii. Chapter.

Fortuned at the same time, wente A downe from his brethren, got him to a man called Hyra at Odollam. And there Iuda sawe a maid of Cannaas daughter called Sua, and toke her. And whiche he had lyen with her, she conceaued and bare a sonne, whom she called Er.

And she conceaued agayne, a bare a sonne who she called Ona. She proceeded yet further, a bare a sonne, who she called Sela. And whiche she had borne him, she left of bearinge.

And Iuda gawe his first sonne Er a wife, whose name was Thamar. But he was wicked before the LORDE, therefore the LORDE slew him. Then sayde Iuda vnto his sonne Onan: Go lie with thy brothers wife, and marye thyself with her, that thou mayest rayse vp sede vnto thy brother. But when Onan knewe that the sede should not be his owne, when he laye with his brothers wife, he let it fall vpon the earth and destroyed it, so he should not gueue sede vnto his brother. This thinge that he dyd displeased the LORDE sore, and he slewe him also.

Then sayde Iudas vnto Thamar his sonnes wyfe. Remayne a wyddow in thy fathers house, tymly my sonne Sela be grome: for he thought: peraduenture he might dye also like as his brethren. So Thamar wente hir waye, and remained in hir fathers house. Now what many dayes were past, she daughter of Sua Iudas wife dyed. And when Iuda had left mourninge, he wente vp vnto Thimmath to clyppe his shepe with his shepheard Hyra of Odollam.

Then was it tolde Thamar: beholde, thy father in lawe goeth vp vnto Thimmath, to clyppe his shepe. Then put she of wyddowes garmentes that she had vpon her, covered and dysgesed hir self, and sat hir downe without the porche by the wyre syde toward Thimmath. For she sawe that Sela was grome, and she was not gueuen vnto hir to wyfe.

Now when Iuda sawe her, he thought it had bene an whoore, for she had covered hir face: and he gat hir to her in the waye, and saide: I praye the let me lye with the, for he knewe not that it was his daughter in lawe. She answered: What wilt thou geue me, that thou mayest lie with me? He sayde: I wil sende the a kydd from the flocke. She answered: Geue me a pledge then, ytli thou sende it me. He sayde: What pledge wilt thou that I gueue the?

She answered: Thy signet, and thy bracel, and thy staff that thou hast in thy haid. Then he gav it her, and laye with her, and she was with childe of him. And she gat hir vp, and wente hir waye, and layed of hir cloke, and put on hir wyddowes garmentes agayne.

Iuda sente the kydd by his shepheard of Odollam, to fetch the pledge agayne from the woman, and he founde her not. Then axed he the men of the same place, where is the whoore sat without in the waye? They answered: There hath no whoore bene here. And he came agayne vnto Iuda, and saide: I haue not founde her, morour y men of the same place saide: that there hath no whoore bene there. Iuda sayde: Let her take it vnto her, lest we happily be shamed, for I haue sent the kydd, and thou hast not founde her.

After thre monethes it was tolde Iuda: Thamar thy daughter in lawe hath plaid the whoore: and beholde, by whordeome is she gotten with childe. Iuda sayde: brynye her forth, that she maye be brest. And when she was brought forth, she sente vnto hir father in lawe, and sayde: By the man y owethe these, am I with childe. And she sayde: Knowest thou whose is this signet, this bracelet ag this staff? Iuda knewe the, saide: She is more righteous then I, for I gane hir not my sonne Sela: But he laye nomore with her.

When the tyme came that she shulde be deluyered, there were two twyns founde in hir wombe. And as she was now in tranelynge, the one put out his hande. Then the mydwife toke and boide a reed thred aboute it, and saide: This shal come out first. But when he pluckte in his hande agayne, his brother came forth. And she sayde: Wherfore is there a rent mayde for thy sake? And he was called Phares. Afterwarde came his brother forth, which had y reed thred aboute his hande, and he was called Zarah.

The 1334 Chapter.

Ioseph was brought downe in to Egiphte, Potiphar an Egipciant Phraes chiefe marshall bought him of y Ismaelites, brought him downe. And y LORDE was with Ioseph, in so moch y he became a luckye ma, was in his master’s Egipecians house. And his master sawe his the LORDE was with him: for what so euer he dyd, the LORDE made it to prosper in his hade: so his founde fauoure in his masters sight, was his seruant. He made him ruler of his house, and put all that he had, vnder his hande. And from the tyne forth that he had made him ruler of his house and all his goodes, the LORDE blessed the Egipecians house for Iosephs sake; and there was nothinge but the very blesseynge of the LORDE in all his house in his house in the field, therefore left he all his he had, in Iosephs hande. And medled with nothinge himselfe, save onely the bred that he ate. And Ioseph was fauyre of bewtye, and well fauoured of face.

And it fortuned after these actes, that his masters wife cast hir eyes vpon Ioseph, and sayde: Slepe with me. But he denyed, and said vnto her: Beholde, my master knoweth not what is in his house, and all that he hath, that hath he put vnder my hande. And there is no man so greate in the house as I, and he hath kepte nothinge fro me, excepte the: for thou art his wife. How shulde I then do so greate euell, and syne agaynst God? But she spake soch wordes vnto Ioseph daylie. Neuertheles he herkened not vnto her, to slepe by her, or to be in her company.

It fortuned vpon a tyne, that Ioseph wente in to the house to do his busynesse, and there was none of his folkes in the house thereby. And she caught him by his garment, and sayde: Slepe with me. But he left the garment in hir hande, and fled, and gat him out of the house.

Now wha she sawe that he had left his garment in hir hande, and fled out, she called the folkes in the house, and said vnto them: Lo, he hath brought vs in the Hebrue, to do vs shame. He came in here vnto me, to sleepe by me: but I cried with loude voyce. And whan he herde that I made a noyse, he left his garment here by me, and fled, and ranne out.

And she layed vp his garment by her, till his master came home, and tolde him euyn the same wordes, and sayde: The Hebrue seruaunt whom thou broughtest here vnto vs, came in here to me, for to do me shame. But whan I made a noyse and cried, he left his garment here by me, and fled out. Whan his master herde the wordes of his wyfe which she tolde him, and sayde: Thus hath the Hebrue seruannt done vnto me, he was very wroth.

Then his master toke him, and put him in the preson, *wherin the kiniges presoners laie. And there he laye in preson. But the LORDE was with him, and had mercy vpon him, and causd him to synde fauoure in the sight of the officer of the preson, so that he committed all the presoners of the preson vnto his hadies: that what so euer were done, might be done by him. For the officer of the preson sawe, the LORDE was with him in all his was vnder his handes, and that what so euer he dyd, the LORDE made it to come prosperously to passe.

The x. Chapter.

And it fortuned after this, that the kyng of Egipte chefe butlar and chefe baker offended their lorde the kyng of Egipte. And Pharao was angrie with them, and causd them to be put in preson in the chefe marshals house, where Joseph laye presoner. And the chefe marshall put Ioseph vnto them, he might serue them. And so they were in preson for a season.

And they dreamed, both the butlar and the baker in one night, every man his owne dreame, and every dreame had his interpretacio. Now in the mornynge when Joseph came in vnto them, and sawe that they loked sadly, he axed them and sayde: Why loke ye so sadly to daye? They answered: We haue dreamed, and haue no man to declare it vnto vs. Ioseph sayde: Interpretinge belongeth vnto God, but tell it me yet.

Then the chefe butlar tolde Ioseph his dreame, and said vnto him: I dreamed that there was a vyne before me, which had thre branche, and it budded, grewe and bare blossoms, and the grapes therof were ryple. And I had Pharao cuppe in my hande, and toke (the grapes) and wronge the in to the cuppe, and gau Pharao the cuppe in his hade.

Ioseph sayde: This is the interpretacio: The thre branche are thre dayes, and ouer thre dayes shall Pharao take the, and put the in thine office agayne, that thou mayest geue him the cuppe in his hade after the olde maner, wha thou wast his butlar. But

THE rli. Chapter.

And after two yeares Pharaoh had a dreame, how that he stode by a water syde: and beholde, out of the water there came seuen goodly kyne, fatted, and wente fedinge in the medow. After these he sawe other seuen kyne come out of the water, which were euell fannede and leane fleshe, and wente by the kyne vpon y water syde: and the euell fannede leene kyne ate vp the seuen goodyly and fatt kyne. Then Pharaoh awaked.

And he slepte agayne, and dreamed the seconde tyme. And he sawe that seuen eares of corne grewe vpon one stalke, full and good. Afterward he sawe seuen thynne and blased eares come vp, and the seuen thynne eares denouered the seuen greate and full eare. Then Pharaoh awaked, and sawe that it was a dreame. And when it was daye, his sprete was troubled, and he sente out, and caused to call all the soythsayers in Egipte as all the wyse men, and tolde them his dreame. But there was none, that coude tell Pharaoh the interpretation of it.

Then spake the chefe butlar vnto Pharaoh, and sayde: This daye do I remembre my wyte. Whan Pharaoh was angrie with his seruantes, and put me in preson with y chefe baker in y chefe marshals house, we dreamed both in one night euery mæ his dreame, hauinge his owne interpretation. Then was there with vs a yonge man an Hebrue, the chefe marshals seruaunte, vnto whom we tolde it, and he declared oure dreames vnto vs, vnto euery mæ acordinge to his dreame. And as he declared it vnto vs, so came it to passe. For I was restored vnto myne office, and he was hanged.

Then Pharaoh sent and called for Joseph and they let him out of the dongeon. And he let himself be shauen, and chauenged his clothes, and came in vnto Pharaoh. Then saide Pharaoh vnto him: I haue dreamed a dreame, and there is no man that can interprete it: but I haue herde tell of the, that wha thou hearest a dreame, thou declarest it. Joseph answered Pharaoh, and sayde: God shall geue Pharaoh a prosperous answere, yee well without me.

Pharaoh sayde vnto Joseph: I dreamed that I stode by a water syde, and beholde, out of the water there came seuen kyne, fattfleshed and goodly, and wente fedinge in y medow. And after them I sawe other seuen kyne came out, thyme, euell fanned and leenfleshed. So euell fannede sawe I neuer in all the lande of Egipte. And the seuen leene and euell fannede kyne, ate vp the seuen first fat kyne. And when they had eate them vp, a man coude not perceau that they had eaten them, as were euell fannede as they were afore. Then I awaked.

And I sawe agayne in my dreame seuen eares of corne, growinge vpó one stalke, full and good. Afterwarde there spronge vp seuen wythrde eares, thyme and blased, and the seuen thynne eares denouered the seuen good eares. And I haue shewed it vnto my soithsayers, but they can tell me nothinge therof.

Joseph answered Pharaos: Both Pharaos dreams are one. God sheweth Pharaos what he wil do. The seuen good kyne are seuen yeares, and the seuen good eares are seuen yeares also. It is one dreame. The seuen leene and euell fauoured kyne, that came vp after them, are seuen yeares. And the seuen thynne and blasted eares, shalbe seuen yeares of derth. This is now the thinge which I tolde Pharao, that God sheweth Pharao, what he wyll do.

Beholde, there shall come seuen yeares with greate plenteounes in ¥ whole lande of Egipte, and after the same there shall come seuen yeares of derth, so that all this plenteounes shalbe forgotten in ¥ lande of Egipte: and the derth shall consume the lande, so that the plenteounes shal not be perceaued in the lande, because of the derth that commeth thereafter, for it shall be very greate. Where as Pharao dreamed the seconde tyme, it signifieth that this thinge is surely prepared of God, and that God will shortly brynge the same to passe.

Let Pharao now prouyde for a man of vnderstandinge ¥ wyszdome, whom he maye set ouer the lande of Egipte, and se that he ordene officers in the londe, and take ¥ fifth (parte) of the lande of Egipte in the seuen plenteounes yeares, and gather all ¥ foode ¥ shal come of the plenteounes yeares, that they maye laye vp corne under Pharao power for sustenaunce in the cities, and kepe it, ¥ there maye be foode founde prepared for the lande in the seuen deare yeares, which shall come vpon the lande of Egipte, that the lande be not destroyed of honger. The sayenge pleased Pharao well and all his seruautes. And Pharao sayde vnto his seruauntes: How might we fynde soch a man, in whom is the sprete of God? And sayde vnto Ioseph: For so moch as God hath shewed ¥ all this, there is none of soch vnderstandinge ¥ wyszdome as thou.

Thou shalt be ouer my house, and acordinge vnto thy worde* shall all my people obeye: onely in the kynges seate wyll I be more then thou. And he sayde: Beholde, I haue set the ouer the whole lande of Egipte. And he toke of his ringer from his hāde, and gaue it Ioseph in his hāde, and clothed him with whyte sylke, and honge a cheyne of golde aboute his neck, and made him ryde vpō the seconde charret: and caused it be proclaimed before him, that men shulde bowe their knees vnto him, as to him whō Pharao had set ouer the whole lande of Egipte.

And Pharao sayde vnto Ioseph: I am Pharao: without thy wyll shall no man moue his lande or his fote in all the lāde Egipte. And he called him * Zaphnath Paena, that is to say: An expounder of secrete thinges, or a man to whō secret thinges are opened. * Gen. 46. c. * Act. 7. b. and he gaue him a wife, euens Asnath the daughter of Potiphar the prest of On. So Ioseph wente out, for to vset the lande of Egipte. (And he was thirtie yere olde, when he stode before Pharao.) And he departed from Pharao, and wente thorow all the lande of Egipte.

And the londe dyd so those seuen plenteounes yeares, and they gathered all the foode of the seuen yeares that were in the lande of Egipte, ¥ layed it in the cities. Loke what foode grewe in the felde rounde aboute euer cite, they put it therin. So Ioseph layed vp the corne in stoare, and that moch aboue measure, as the sonde of the se: in so moch ¥ he left of nombringe of it, for it coude not be nombred.

* And vnto Ioseph there were borne two & sonnes (before ¥ derth came) whom Asnath the daughter of Potiphar prest of On bare vnto him. And the first called he Manasses: for God (sayde he) hath caused me to forget all my laboure, and all my fathers house. The seconde called he Ephraim: for God (sayde he) hath caused me to growe in ¥ lande of my trouble.

Now whan ¥ seuen plenteounes yeares were ended in Egipte, then beganne the seuen deare yeares to come, ¥ wherof Ioseph had sayde. And there was derth in all landes, but in all the lāde of Egipte there was foode. Now whan the lande of Egipte beganne to suffre honger also, the people cryed vnto Pharao for bred. But Pharao sayde vnto all ¥ Egipecians: Go vnto Ioseph, what he sayeth vnto you, ¥ doo. So whan there was derth in all ¥ lāde, Ioseph opened all ¥ was by hym, ¥ solde vnto the Egipecians. Thus ¥ derth presume in the lāde, ¥ all countrie came to Egipte to bye at Ioseph: for the derth was mightie in all landes.

The rlij. Chapter.

WHAN Iacob sawe that there was moch A corne in Egipte, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Why gape ye? Beholde, I heare that there is much corn in Egipte, go downe and bring awaye corn, if we make lyue, we not dye. So Josephs ten brethren wente downe to bye corn in Egipte. As for Ben Iamyn Josephs brother, Iacob wolde not let him go with his brethren, for he sayde: Some myspointune might happen vnto him. So ye childe of Israel came to bye corne, amongst other ye came with them: for there was derth also in ye lande of Canaan. But Joseph was governoure in the lande, and solde corn vnto all the people in the lande.

Now whan his brethren came to him, they fell downe to the grounde before him vpon their faces. And he sawe them, and knewe the, and helde him selfe strange towards them, and talked roughly with them, and saide vnto them: Whence come ye? They sayde: Out of the lande of Canaan to bye vytayle. Neuertheles though he knewe them, yet knewe they not him. And Joseph thought vpon ye dreams that he had dreamed of them, and sayde vnto them: Ye are spyes, and are come to se where the lande is open.

They answered him: No my lorde, thy seruauntes are come to bye vytayle: we are all one mans sonnes, we are vnfyayned, and thy seruauntes were neuer spyes. He sayde vnto the: No, but ye are come to se where the lande is open. They answered him: We thy seruauntes are twolue brethren, the sonnes of one man in the lade of Canaan, and the yongest is with oure father: as for one, he is awaye.

Joseph sayde vnto them: This is it that I sayde vnto you: spyes are ye. Here by wyll I proue you: By the life of Pharao ye shall not get hence, excepte youre yongest brother come hither. Sende awaye one of you to fetch youre brother, but ye shalbe in preson. Thus wyll I trye out youre wordes, whether ye go aboute with trueh or not: for els, by the life of Pharao ye are spyes. And he put the together in warde thre dayes longe.

Vpon the thirde daye he sayde vnto the: If ye wil lyue, the do thus, for I feare God: If ye be vnfyayned, let one of youre brethren lyue bounde in youre preson: but go ye youre waye, and cary the necessarie foode, and brynge me youre yongest brother, so wyll I beleue youre wordes, that ye shall not dye. And so they dyd.

And they sayde one to another: This haue we deserved against oure brother, in that we sawe the anguish of his soule, whan he besought vs, and we wolde not heare him: therfore cometh now this trouble vpon vs. Ruben answered them, and saide: Tolde not I you the same, whan I sayde: * O synne not agaynst lad, but ye wolde not heare. Now is his bloude required. But they knew not that Joseph understode it, for he spake vnto the by an interpreter. And he turned him from them, and wepte. Now whan he had turned him to them agayne, and talked with them, he toke Symon from amongst them, and bounde him before their eyes, and commaunded to fyll their sacks with corne, and to put every mans money in his sack, and to gene every one his expenses by the waye. And so was it done vnto them.

And they laded their corn vpon their Asses, and departed thence. But whan one opened his sack to gene his Asse prouender in the Iyne, he spied his money in his sack mouth, and sayde vnto his brethren: My money is restored me agayne: lo, it is in my sack. Then their heres fayled them, and they were afrayed amongst them selues, and sayde: Wherfore hath God done this vnto vs?

Now whan they came home to Iacob their father in the lade of Canaan, they tolde him all that had happened vnto them, and sayde: The man that is lorde of the londe, spake roughly to vs, and toke vs for spyes of the countre. And whan we answered: we are vnfyayned, and were neuer spyes, but are twolue brethren the sonnes of oure father: one is awaye, and the yongest is yet this daye with oure father in the lade of Canaan, He sayde: Hereby wyll I marke, that ye are vnfyayned: Leave one of youre brethren with me, and take foode necessary for youre houses, and go youre waye, and brynge youre yongest brother vnto me: so shal I knowe that ye are no spyes, but vnfyayned: the shal I delyuer youre brother also, and ye maye occupie in the lande.

And whan they opened their sacks, every man fount his boundell of money in his sacke. And whan they and their father sawe, that it was the bundles of their money, they were afrayed.

Then sayde Iacob their father: Ye haue robbed me of my children. Ioseph is awaye,
The 1. boke of Moses.

Chap. rlu. Simeon is awaye, and ye will take Ben Iamin awaye: It goeth all ouer me. Ruben answered his father so sayde: Yf I brynge him not to the agayne, then slaye my two sones: deluyer him but in to my hande, I wyl brynge him agayne vnto the. He sayde: my sone shall not goe downe with you: for his brother is deed, and he is left alone. Yf eny mysfortune shulde happen vnto him by the waye y ye go, ye shulde bringe my graye hayre with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

The rlu. Chapter.

BUT the derth oppressed y lande. And when all the vytales that they had brought out of Egipte were spent, Iacob their father sayde vnto them: Go agayne, and bye vs a little foode.

The Iuda answered him, and sayde: The man swere vnto vs, and sayde: ye shal not se my face, excepte youre brother be with you. Yf so be now that thou wilt sende oure brother with vs, we wil goe downe, and bye the foode. But yf thou wilt not sende him, we wyl not goe downe. For the man sayde vnto vs: Ye shall not se my face, excepte youre brother be with you.

Israel sayde: Wherfore haue ye done this euell vnto me, to tell y man, that ye had yet a brother? They answered: The man enquired so strately of vs and of oure kynrede, so sayde: Is youre father yet a lyue? Haue ye yet a brother? Then tolde we him, as he axed vs. How coulde we knowe, that he wolde saye: brynge youre brother downe with you? Then sayde Iuda vnto Israel his father: Let the lad goe with me, that we maye get vs vp and take oure iourny, and lyue, and not dye, both we and thou, and oure childrē. * I will be suertye for him, of my handes shalt thou require him. Yf I brynge him not vnto the agayne, so set him before thine eyes, I wil beare y blame my life longe. For yf we had not made this tarienge, we had now bene come agayne twyse.

Then sayde Israel their father vnto the: Yf it must nedes be so, then do this: take of the best frutes of the lande in youre saces, and brynge the man a present: a curtesy balme, and hony, and spycyes, and myrre, and dates, and almondes. Take other money with you also, and the money that was brought agayne in your sace mouthes, cary it agayne with you: peraduenture it was an oversight. And take youre brother, get you vp, so go agayne vnto the man. The Allmightie God geue you mercy in the sight of y man, that he maye let you haue youre other brother, and Ben Iamin. As for me, I must be as one, that is robbed of his children.

Then they toke the present, and other money with them, and Ben Iamin, got the vp, and wente in to Egipte, and stode before Ioseph. Then Ioseph behelde them with Ben Iamin, and sayde vnto the ruler of his house: Bringe these men in, and sley, so make ready, for they shal dyne with me at noone. And the man dyd as Ioseph bad him, so brought the men in to Iosephs house.

When they were brought in to Iosephs house, they were afrayed, and sayde: We are brought hither because of the money, that came agayne in oure saces at the first, to pyke a quarell with vs, and to laye sometinge to oure charge, and to take vs for bonde seruauntes with oure Asses.

Therefore came they to y man, that was ruler of Iosephs house, and talked with him at the doore, and sayde: Syr, we came downe at the first to bye foode, and when we came in the Iune, and opened oure saces, beholde, euery mans money was in his sack mouth with full weight: threfore haue we brought it with vs agayne, so haue brought other money with vs also, to bye foode: but we can not tell, who put oure money in oure saces.

He sayde: Be content, feare you not, youre God euens y God of youre fathers hath geue you y treasure in youre saces, I haue youre money. And he brought forth Simeon vnto them, and led them in to Iosephs house, and gaue them water to wash their fete, so gaue their Asses prouender.

And they made readye y present, ageynst Joseph came at noone: for they herde, y they shulde dyne there. Now when Ioseph wente in to the house, they brought him home y present that they had, and fell downe to the grounde before him. But he welcommed them curteously, and sayde: Is youre father (that olde man which ye tolde me of,) in good health? Is he yet lyue? They answered: Thy seruaunt our fathers father is in good health, Behold, let them bow downe before thee.

And he lift vp his eyes, and saw his brother Ben Iamins his mother's sonne, and said:

*Is this thegostest brother, that ye tolde me of? And he sayde morourer: God be mercifull unto the my sonne. And Joseph made haist (for the grounde of his hert was hyndled towardes his brother) and sought how he might wepe, a wente in to his chamber, and wepte there.

And whan he had washed his face, he wente out, and refrayed him self, and sayde: set bred (on the table.) And they brought vnto him by himself, and vnto them by the selues, and to the Egyptes also that ate with them, by them selues. (For the Egyptes darre not eate bred with the Ebrues, that is an abomination vnto them.) And they were set ouer agaynst him, the first borne acordinge to his first byrth, and the yongest after his youth. They marueled at it amonge them selues, and there were brought them sundrye meates from his table. But Ben Iamins parte was fyue tymes more then the other. And they dronke, and were mery with him.

The 111. Chapter.

And Joseph commaunded the ruler of his house, and sayde: Fyll the mens sackes with foode, as much as they maye carye, and put euery mans money in his sacke mouth, a put my syluer cuppe in the sack mouth of the yongest with the money for vyvayles. He dyd as Joseph had sayde. And on the morow whan it was daye, they let y men go with their Asses.

But whan they were out of the cite, and not come farre, Joseph sayde to the ruler of his house: Vp, and folowe after the men, and whan thou ouertakest them, saie vnto them: Wherfore haue ye rewarded euell for good? Is not that it, that my lorde drynket out of? and that he prophesieith withall? It is euell done of you, that ye haue done.

And whan he had ouertaken them, he sayde the same wordes vnto them. They answered him: Wherfore saieth my lorde soch wordes? God forbyd, that thy seruauntes shulde do eny soch thinges? Beholde, the money that we foude in oure sackes mouthes, that brought we vnto the agayne, out of the lande of Canaan: how shulde we then haue stollen either syluer or golde out of thy lorde's house? Loke by whom it shall be founde amonst thy seruauntes, let him dye: yee and we also wyll be my lorde's bondmen. He sayde: let it so be, as ye haue spoken. Loke by whom it shall be founde, let him be my seruaunt, but ye shalbe harmlesse.

And they made haist, and toke downe euery man his sack to the grounde, and euery man opened his sack: And he searched a beganne at the greatest vnto the yongest, and the cuppe was founde in Ben Iamins sacke. Then rente they their clothes, and euery man lade the burthen vpon his Asse, a wente agayne vnto the cite. And luda wente with his brethren vnto Iosephs house (for he was there yet) and they fell before him on the groide. Ioseph sayde vnto them: What maner of dede is this, that ye haue done? Knewe ye not, that soch a man as I am, can prophye?

Iuda sayde: What shall we saye vnto my lorde? or how shal we speake? and what excuse shal we make? God hath founde out vy wickednesse of thy seruauntes. Beholde, we and he, by whom the cuppe is founde, are my lorde's seruauntes. But he sayde: God forbyd that I shulde do so. The man by whom the cuppe is founde, shall be my seruaunt, but go ye vp in peace vnto youre father.

The stepte luda vnto him, and sayde: My lorde, let thy seruaunt speake one worde in thine eares my lorde, be not displeased at thy seruaunt also, for thou art eu as Pharao. My lorde axed his seruauntes, and sayde: Haue ye yet a father or brother? Then answered we: We haue a father, which is olde, and a yonge lad begotten in his age, and his brother is deede, a he is left alone of his mother, and his father loueth him.

Then saydest thou: Brynge him downe vnto me, and I wil se him. But we answered my lorde: The lad can not come from his father, if he shulde come from him, he were but a deede man. Then saydest thou vnto thy seruauntes: Yf youre yongest brother come not hither with you, ye shall se my face no more. Then wente we vp vnto thy seruaunt my father, and tolde him my lorde's wordes. Then sayde oure father: Go youre waye agayne, and bye vs a little foode. But we sayde: We can not go downe, excepte oure youngest brother be with vs, then will we go downe: for we darre not loke the man in the face, yf oure youngest brother be not with vs. Then sayde thy servaunt my father vnto vs: Ye knowe that my wife bare me two sonnes, one wente out fro me, and I sayde: he is torne in peces. *Yf ye take this fro me also, and eny mysfortune happè him, than shal ye brynge my gray heer with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

If I nowe com come home vnto my father, * the lad be not with me (seynge his soule hangeth by the soule of this) than shall it come to passe, that yf he se not the lad there, he shal dye. So shal we thy servauntes brynge the gray heer of thy servaunt oure father with sorowe downe to the graue. For I thy servaunt became suertye for the lad vnto my father, and sayde: yf I brynge him not agayne, I will beare the blame all my lyfe longe. Therefore let thy servaunt byde here in stead of y lad, to be my lorde bonde man, and let the lad go vp with his brethren. For how can I go vp vnto my father, yf the lad be not with me? Then shulde I se the mysery that shulde happen vnto my father.

The rlb. Chapter.

Then coude not Ioseph refrayne him self before all them that stode aboute him: and he commaunded euery man to go out from him, and there stode no man by him, when Ioseph vttred him self vnto his brethren. And he wepte loude, so that y Egiptians and Pharaos housholde herde it. * And he sayde vnto his brethren: I am Ioseph, is my father yet alyue? And his brethren could not answere him, they were so abashed before his face. But he sayde: Come nye vnto me. And they came nye. And he sayde: I am Ioseph youre brother, * whom ye solde in to Egipte. And now vxe not youre selues, a thynke not y there is eny wrath, because ye solde me hither. + For God sent me hither before you, for youre lyues sake. For these are now two yeares, that y derth hath bene in the lande, and there are yet fyue yeares behynde, wherin there shalbe no plowinge ner haruest.

But God sent me hither before you, y he might let you remayne vpon earth, and to same youre lyues by a greate deluyerance. And now, it was not ye then that sent me hither, but God which hath made me a father vnto Pharaos, a lorde ouer all his house, and a prync in the whole lande of Egipte. Haist you therfore, and go vp vnto my father, and saye vnto him: Thy sonne Ioseph sendeth the this worde: God hath made me lorde in all Egipte, come downe vnto me, tarye not, thou shalt dwel in the lande of Gosen, and be with me: thou and thy children, and thy childrè, thy small and greate catell, and all that thou hast. There wyll I make proynsioun for the (for there are yet fyue yeares of derth) that thou perish not with thine house, and all that is thynke. Beholde, youre eyes and the eyes of my brother Ben Iamin se, that I myne owne self speake vnto you by mouth. Shewe my father all my worship in Egipte, and all that ye haue sene: haist you, and come downe lither with my father.

And he fell aboute his brother Ben Iamyn his neck, and wepte, and Ben Iamyn wepte vpon his neck also. And he kyssed all his brethren, and wepte vpon them. And afterwarde talked his brethren with him. And this tydinges came in to Pharaos house: Iosephs brethren are come, which pleased Pharaow well, and all his servauntes.

And Pharaos spake vnto Ioseph: Saye vnto thy brethren: Do thus, lade youre beasts, go youre waye, and whan ye come in to the lande of Canaan, take youre father and youre housholde, and come vnto me, I wyll geue you of the goodies in the lade of Egipte, so that ye shall eate the fatt in the lande. And he commaunded them, Do thus, Take you charrettes out of y lade of Egipte for youre children and wynes, and brynge youre father, and come, and regarde not youre housholde stuff: for the goodies of all the lade of Egipte shalbe yours.

The children of Israel dyd so, and Ioseph gane the charrettes accordyng to Pharaos commandement, and expenses by the waye, and gane them all, vnto euery one a change of rayment: but vnto Ben Iamin he gane thre hundreth syluer pens, and fyue change of rayment. As for his father, he sent him ten Asses laden with goodies out of Egipte, and ten Asses with corne and bred, and vytayles for his father by y waye. So he sent awaye.
his brethren, and sayde vnto them: Stryue not by the waye.

Thus they departed out of Egipte, and came to the lande of Canaan vnto Iacob their father, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy sonne Joseph is yet aluye, and is a lorde in all the lande of Egipte. But his hert wauered, for he beleued them not. Tho tolde they him all the wordes of Joseph, which he had sayde vnto them. And when he saw ye charrettes that Joseph had sent to fetch him, his sprete reuyued, he sayde: I haue ynow, that my sonne Ioseph is yet a faine I wil go, and se him, before I dye.

The rlbi. Chapter.

ISRAEL toke his journey with all that he had. And when he came to Berseba, he offred offerynes vnto ye God of his father Izaac. And God spake vnto him in a vision by night: Iacob Iacob. He sayde: here am I. And he sayde: I am ye mightie God of thy father, be not afrayed to go in to Egipte, for there wyl I make a greate people of the. I wyll go downe with the, wil brynge the vp also. And Ioseph shal laye his hande vpon thine eyes.

Then Iacob gat him vp from Berseba, and ye children of Israel caried Iacob their father with their children and wyues vpon the charrettes that Pharao had sent to carry him. And they toke their catell & substance which they had gotten in the lande of Canaan, and so came in to Egipte: Iacob all his sede with him, his children & his children children with him, his doughters, and the doughters of his children, all his sede.

These are ye names of the children of Israel, which came in to Egipte, Iacob all his sonnes. The first borne sonne of Iacob: Ruben. The children of Ruben: Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron and Charmi. The children of Simeon: Iemuel, Iamin, Ohad, Iachim, Zohar and Saul the sonne of the Cananitish woman. The childe of Leui: Gerson, Cahath & Merari. The childe of Juda: Er, Onan, Sela, Phares & Serah. But Er and Onan dyed in the lande of Canaan. The childec of Phares: Herson and Hamul. The children of Ischar: Thola, Phua, Iob & Semron. The children of Zabulon: Sered, Elon and Iahleeel. These are the childec of Lea, which she bare vnto Iacob in Mesopotamia with his daughter Dina. These all together with sonnes & daughters make thre thirtie soules.

The childec of Gad: Zipheon, Haggi, Suni, Ezbon, Eri, Arod and Arlei. The children of Asser: Iemma, Iesua, Iessi, Bria & Sera their sister. The children of Bria: Heber and Malchiel. These are the children of Silpa, whom Laban gauue vnto Lea his daughter, and she bare vnto Iacob these sixtene soules.

The childec of Rachel Iacobs wife: Ioseph and Ben Iamin. And vnto Ioseph in ye lande of Egipte were borne Manasses and Ephraim, whom Asnathe the daughter of Potiphera prest of On bare vnto him. The children of Ben Iamin: Bela, Becher, Asber, Gera, Naamah, Ehi, Ros, Mupim, Hupim and Ard. These are the children of Rachel, which were borne vnto Iacob, fourtene soules alltogether.

The children of Dan: Husim. The childec of Nephtali: Iahzeel, Guni, Iezer, Sillem. These are the children of Bilha, whom Laban gauue vnto his daughter Rachel, she bare Iacob these seuen soules. All the soules ye came with Iacob in to Egipte, which proceeded out of his loynes (besyde the wyues of his childec) are alltogether sixe & sixtie soules.

Iosephs childec which were borne vnto him in Egipte, were two soules: so that all the soules of the house of Iacob which came in to Egipte, were seuentye.

And he sent Iuda before him vnto Ioseph, to shew him the waye to Gosen, & they came in to the lande of Gosen. Then Ioseph bended his charett fast, and wente vp to mete Israel his father vnto Gosen. And when he sawe him, he fell aboute his neck, & wepte sore vpon his neck. Then sayde Israel vnto Ioseph: Now am I content to dye, for so much as I haue sene thy face, that thou art yet aluye.

Ioseph sayde vnto his brethren, to his fathers house: I will go vp, tell Pharao, saye vnto him: My brethren & my fathers house are come vnto me out of the lande of Canaan, and are kepers of catell (for they are men that deale with catell:) their small & greate catell, and all that they haue, haue they brought with them. Now ye Pharao call you, and saye: what is youre occupacion? then ye shal saye: Thy seruauntes are men y haue dealt with catell from our youth vp hythereto, both we our fathers, that ye maye dwell in the lande of Gosen: for the Egipcians abhorre all kepers of catell.

The rlvij. Chapter.

A THEN came Joseph, and tolde Pharao, a sayde: My father and my brethren, their small greate catell, all they have, are come out of the lande of Canaan: behold, they are in the lande of Gosen. And he toke fyue of his brethren, a presented them vnto Pharao. Then sayde Pharao vnto his brethren: What is youre occupacion? They answered: Thy seruauntes are kepers of catell, we and our fathers also. And they sayde moroner vnto Pharao: We are come to dwell with you in the lande, for thy seruauntes haue no pasture for their catell, so sore doth the derth oppresse the lande of Canaan. Now therefore let thy seruauntes dwell in the lande of Gosen.

Pharao sayde vnto Joseph: Thy father and thy brethren are come vnto thee: the lande of Egipte is open before the, let them dwell in the best place of the lande, se y they dwell euyn in the lande of Gosen. And ye thou knowest that be men of actiuyte amoinge thee, make the rulers of my catell.

Joseph brought in Iacob his father also, a set him before Pharao. And Iacob thanked Pharao. But Pharao axed Iacob: How olde art thou? Iacob sayde: The tyme of my *pylgremage is an hudedreth and thirtie yeares: little and euell is the tyme of my pilgrimage, and attayneth not vnto the tyme of my fathers in their pylgremages. And Iacob thanked Pharao, and wete out from him.

So Joseph prepared dwellings for his father and his brethren, a gaue them a possession in the lande of Egipte, euyn in the best place of the lande, namely, in the lande of Raemses, as Pharao commaund. And he made proyson for his father and his brethren, and all his fathers house with bred, euyn as yonge children.

There was no bred in all the londe, for the derth was very sore: so y the lande of Egipte the lande of Canaan were famished by y reason of the derth. And Joseph brought together all the money that was founde in Egipte and Canaan, for y corne that they bought. And he layed vp all the money in Pharao's house.

Now whan money fayled in the lande of Egipte and Canaan, all the Egipcians came vnto Ioseph, a saide: Geue vs bred. Why suffrest thou vs to dye before y, because we are without money? Ioseph saide: Brynge hither youre catell, so wil I geue you for youre catell, seyuge ye are without money. Then brought they their catell vnto Ioseph. And he gaue the bred for their horses, shpe, oxen and Asses. So he fed them with bred y yeare, for all their catell.

Whan y yeare was ended, they came vnto him the next yeare, a saide vnto him: We wil not hyde it from oure lorde, y not onely the money, but all the catell also is spent vnto oure lorde: there is nothing left more for oure lorde, but onely our body oure lande. Wherefore suffrest thou both vs to dye, and oure londe? Take vs and oure lade for bred, that we and oure lande maye be bonde vnto Pharao: geue vs sede, that we maye lyue and not dye, a y the lande become not a wildernes.

So Ioseph toke all the lande of Egipte in for Pharao: for the Egipcians solde every man his lande, because y derth was so mightie vpon them: and so the lode solde euery city, from one syde of Egipte vnto the other, expecte the prestes londe, that toke he not in: For it was ordered of Pharao for the prestes, that they shulde eate that which was appoynted them, which he gaue them, therfore they neded not to sell their londes.

Then sayde Ioseph vnto the people: Beholde, I haue taken possession of you and youre lande this daye for Pharao, Beholde, there hane ye sede, sowe the londe, and of the corne ye shall geue the fifth parte vnto Pharao: foure partes shalbe yours, to sowe the londe for youre sustenance, and for youre houses and children.

They sayde: Let vs but lyue, a fynde grace before the oure lorde, we wyl gladly be Pharao's seruauntes: So Ioseph made the a lawe vnto this daye ouer the Egipcians londe, to geue Pharao the fifth parte, expecte the prestes londe, which was not bonde vnto Pharao.

So Israel dwelt in Egypt in the land of Gosen, and had it in possession, and grew and multiplied exceedingly. And Jacob lived seventeen years in the land of Egypt, so that his whole age was an hundred and seventy years.

Now when the time came that Israel shulde dye, he called Joseph his sonne, and sayde vnto him: Ye I haue founde grace in thy sight, *then laye thine honde vnder my thye, *thou shalt shewe mercy and faithfullnes vpon me, and not burye me in Egypte, but I will lye by my fathers, and thou shalt carie me out of Egypte, *burye me in their buryall. He sayde: I wil do as thou hast sayde. But he sayde: Then sweare vnto me. And he swear vnto him. Thic Israel bowed himselfe towards the bed heade.

As AFTER this it was tolde Joseph: Beholde, thy father is sicke. And he toke with him his two sonses Manasses and Ephraim. Then was it tolde Iacob: beholde, thy sonne Joseph cometh vnto y. And Israel toke a corage vnto him, *sat vp vpo his bed, *sayde vnto Joseph: The Allmightye God appeared vnto me at Lus in thy lade of Canaan, *blessed me, *sayde vnto me: Beholde, I will cause *thou to growe *and increase *and shalt make a multitude of people of *the *will geue this lade vnto thy sede after *for an everlastinge possession. Therefore shal now thy two sonses *Manasses vnto Ephraim (which were borne vnto the in Egypte, before I came hither vnto the) be myne, like as Ruben *and Simeon. As for those that thou begettst after *thou shalt be thine owne. But these shalbe named with the names of their brethren in their inheritance.

And wha I came out of Mesopotamia, Rachel dyed by me in the lande of Canaan, by the waye, when there was yet but a feldes brede vnto Eprath: and I buried her in the waye towards Ephrath, which now is called Bethlehem.

And Israel loked vpon Josephs sonnes, *sayde: What are these? Joseph answered: They are my sonses, which God hath geuen me here. He sayde: Brynge thic hither to me, *I maye blesse thic. (For Israels eyes were heuy for age, *he coude not well see.)

And he brought the vnto him. So he kysse them, *embraceth thc, *saide vnto Joseph: Beholde, I haue sene thy face, which I thought not: *so God hath caused me to sse thy sede also. And Joseph toke them from his lappe, and they fell downe to the grounde vpon their face.

And Israel saide vnto Joseph: Beholde, I dye, *God shall be with you, *brynge you agayne in to *lande of youre fathers. *I haue geuen the a pce of londe, without thy brethren, which I gat with my swerde and my bowe out of the hande of the Amorites.

Chap. I. The 1. boke of Moses.

Rube my first sonne, * thou art my power and the begynnynge of my strength, chefe in gouernunce, a chefe in auctorite. Thou passest forth swiftly as water. Thou shalt not be the cheuest: For thou hast clymed vp vpon thy fathers bed, even than defyledest thou my couch with goyng vp.

Symeon and Levi brethren, their deadlye weapons are perlous instrumentes. In to their secretes come not my soule, and my worshipe be not joyned with their congregation: *for in their wrath they slew a man, and in their self wyll they boughed an oxe. Cursed be their wrath, because it is so feare: and their indignacion, because it is so rigorous. I wil denye them in Iacob, and scater them in Israel.

Iuda, thou art he. Thy brethren shall prayse thee: for thy hede shall be in thine enemies neck: thy fathers children shall stoupe vnto the. * Iuda is a yonge lyon, thou art come vp hye my sonne, frō the spoyle.  He kneeld downe and couched himself as a lyon q as a lionesse: who wil rayse him vp? The cepter shall not be remoued frō Iuda, nor a master frō his fete, tyll the Worthy come, and vnto him the people fall. He shall bynde his foale vnto the wyne, and his Asses colte to the noble braunch. He shall wash his garment in wyne, and his mantell in the bloude of grapes. His eyes are roudier then wyne, and his thetyr whyther then mylck.

Zabulon shal dwell in the hauen of the see, and in the porte of shippes, and shal border vpon Sydon.

Isachar shal be a stronge Asse, a laye him downe betwixte the borders. And he saw rest, that it was good, and the lande, that it was pleasant. And bowed downe his shoulder to beare, and became a seruaunt vnto trybute.

Dan shal be indge in his people, as well as a trybe in Israel. Dan shalbe a serpent in the waye, and an edder in the path, and byte the horse in the heles, that his ryder maye fall backwarde. LORDE I loke for thy saluation.

As for Gad, a wapened hoost of men shal fall violently vpon him, but he shal hurte them in the hele.

Of Asser cōmeth his fat bred, and he shal geue delicates vnto kynges.

Nepthali is a swift hynde, and geneth goodly wordes.

The frutefull sonne Ioseph, that flourishing sonne to loke vpon, the doughters go vpō the wall. And though the shoters angered him, stroue with him, and hated him, yet his bowe bode fast, and the armes of his hādes were made strōge by the handes of the Mighty in Iacob. Of him are come herdmen stones in Israel. Of thy fathers God art thou helped, τ of the Allnightie art thou blessed, with blesynes of heauen from above, with blessinges of the depe lyeth vnder, with blesynes of brestes in wombes. The blessinges promised vnto thy father and my fore elders go mightily, after the desyre of the hyest in the worlde: these shal light on Iosephs heade, and on the topp of his heade, that was separate from his brethren.

Ben Iamin, a rausynghe wolfe. In the mornynge shal he decoure the praye, but in the enenyge he shal deuyde the spoyle.

All these are the twelue trybes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake vnto them, when he blessed them, euery one with a sundrye blesyne.

And he commanded them, and sayde vnto them: I shal be gathered vnto my people, † burye me with my fathers in the cane which is in the felde of Ephron the Hethite, in the dubble cane that lyeth ouer against Mamre in the lande of Canaan, which Abrahā bought with the felde of Ephron the Hethite for a possession to burye in. There buryed they Abrahā τ Sara his wife, there buried they Issac also τ Rebecca his wife: there buried I Lea, in the good of the felde τ of the cane therin, which was bought of the Hethites.

And when Iacob had ended this commaundement vnto his children, † he pluckte his fete together vpon the bed, and died, and was gathered vnto his people. The fell Ioseph vpon his fathers face, and wepte, and kyssed him.

The 1. Chapter.

AND Ioseph comûnded his seruaûtes τ Pludios, to embawme his father. And the Phisicians embawme Israel, tyll fourtye dayes were ended (for so longe endured the dayes of embawminge) τ the Egipcians bewarely him seuentyte dayes.
Now when the mournynge dayes were ended, Ioseph spake vnto Pharaoh his housholde, saying: Yf I haue founde fauoure in your sight, the speake vnto Pharaoh and sayde: My father hath taken an ooth of me, saying: Beholde, I dye, bury me in myne owne grave, which I dydged for myselfe in the lade of Caanaan. Therfore wyl I now go vp, and burye my father, and come agayne. Pharaoh saide: Go thy waye vp, and burye thy father, acordinge as thou hast sworne vnto hym.

So Ioseph wete vp, to burye his father. And there were with him all Pharaos seruauites were the elders of his courte, and all the elders of the lande of Egipte, and his brethren, and his fathers householde. Onely their children, shepe he oxen left they in the lade of Gosen, and tooke their journey vp with him, vp charretes and horses, and the company was excedinge greate.

Now whan these came to the playne of Atad, they made there a very greate and bytter lamentacion, and he mourned for his father seuen dayes. And wha the people in the lande (the Cananites) sawe the mournynge in the playne of Atad, they sayde: The Egiptiases make there greate lamentacion. Therfore is the place called: The lamentacion of the Egiptiases, which lyeth beyonde Iordane.

And his children dyed as he had commaunded them, and caried him to the lade of Caanaan, and buried him in the double cawe, that Abraham bought with the feld for a possession to bury in, of Ephron the Hethite owner agaynst Mamre. So Ioseph toke his journey agayne in to Egipte with his brethren, and with all those that went vp with him to burye his father, when they had buried him.

But Iosephs brethren were aeraied, wha their father was deed, and sayde: Ioseph might happily have indignacion at vs, and recompense vs all the euell that we dyd vnto him, therfore let they saye vnto hym: Thy father commaunded before his death, and sayde: Thus shal ye saye vnto Ioseph: O forge thy brethren the offence and their synne, that they dyd so euell vnto the. O forge new this trespasse of vs the seruauentes of thy fathers God. But Ioseph wepte, when they spake so vnto hym.

And his brethren wente, and fell downe before him, and sayde: Beholde, here are we thy seruauentes. Ioseph sayde vnto thes: Feare ye not, for I am vnder God. Ye thought euell ouer me, but God hath turned it vnto good, to do as it is come to passe this daye, for the saunyng of moch people. Therfore be not ye now aeraied, I wyl care for you and youre children. And he comforted them, and spake louingly vnto them.

Thus dwelt Ioseph in Egipte with his fathers house, and lyued an hundreth and ten yeare, and sawe Ephrayms children, vnto his thirde generation: In like maner the children of Machir the sonne of Manasses, beget children also vpon Iosephs lappe.

And Ioseph sayde vnto his brethren: I dyed, and God wyl vsyset you, and brynge you out of this lande, to the lande that he sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. Therfore toke he an ooth of the children of Israel, and sayde: Whan God shal vsyset you, thy eare my bones frō hence. So Ioseph dyed, wha he was an hundreth and ten yeare olde, and they embawmed him, layed him in a chest in Egipte.

The first Chapter.

A THESE are the names of the children of Israel, that came with Jacob into Egypt: every one came in with his house, Ruben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issacar, Zabulon, Benjamin, Dan, Nephtali, Gad and Aser. And of all the souls that came out of the loynes of Jacob, there were seventy.

As for Joseph, he was in Egypt all ready. Now when Joseph was dead, and all his brethren, and all they that layed at that tyme, the children of Israel grewe, and increased, and multiplied, and became exceedinge mightie. And for so much as the mydywyes feared God, he made them houses. Then Pharaos commanded all his people and sayde: All the sonnes that are borne, cast in to the water, but let all the daughters lyue.

The next Chapter.

And there went forth a man of the house of Leui, and took a daughter of Leui. And the wife conceived and bare a sonne. And when she saw it was a proper childe, she hyd him thre monethes. And when she coude hyde him no longer, she toke an Arke of redes, and dawped it ouer with slime and pitch, and layed the childe therin, and set it amonye the redes by the waters broynke. But his sister stode a farre of, to wete what wolde come of him.

And Pharaos daughter came downe, to wash herself in the water: And hir maidens walked by the water side: and when she saw the Arke amonye the redes, she sent one of hir maydens, and caused it to be fet. And when she opened it, she saw y childe: and beholde the babe wepte. Then had she pitye vpon it, and sayde: It is one of the Hebrues children.

Then sayde hisyster vnto Pharaos daughter: Shal I go, and call the a nurse of the Hebrues women, to nurse y childe? Pharaos daughter sayde vnto her: Go thy waye. The mayde wente, and called the childes mother. Then sayde Pharaos daughter vnto her: Take this childe, and nurse it for me, I wyll geue y thy rewarde. The woman toke the childe, and nursed it.

And when the childe was grewne, she brought it vnto Pharaos daughter, and it became hir sonne, and she called him Moses. For she sayde: I toke him out of the water. Vpon a tyme whan Moses was greate, he wente forth vnto his brethren, and loked vpon their burthens, and sawe, that an Egipcian smote one of his brethren y Hebrues. And he loked rounde aboute him: and when he sawe that there was no man, he slew the Egipcian, and buried him in the sonde.
The next daye he wente forth also, and sawe two men of the Hebrews sryuyngge togethe, and sayde to the vngodly: Wherfore smytest thou thy nebboure? But he sayde: * Who made the a ruler or judge ouer vs? Wilt thou slaye me also, as thou sluest the Egyptian? The was Moses afrayed, and sayde: How is this knowne? And Pharao herde of it, and sought for Moses, to slaye him. But Moses fled from Pharao, and kepe him in the lande of Madiad, and set him downe by a wells syde.

The prest Madiad had seuen daughters, which came to drawe water, and fylled the troughes, to goue their fathers shepe to drinke. Then came the shepherdres, and drooke the awaye. But Moses gat him vp, and helped them, and gave their shepe to drynke. And when they came to Reguel their father, he saide: How came ye so soone to daie? They sayde: A man of Egipte deluyer vs from thy shepherdres, and drew vs vp, and gaue the shepe to drynke. He sayde vs to his daughters: Where is he? Wherfore let ye the man go, that ye called him not to eate with vs?

And Moses was content to dwell with the man. And he gaue Moses his daughter Zipora, which bare him a sonne, and he called him Gerson, for he saide: I am become a straunger in a straunge lande. And she bare him yet a sonne, whom he called Elieser, and sayde: The God of my father is my helper, and hath deluyed me from Pharaos hade.

But after this in processe of tyme, the kyng e of Egipte dyed. And the childre of Israel sighed ouer their laboure, and cried. And their crie ouer their laboure, came before God. And God herde their coypeynete, a remembre his couenaunt, t with Abraham Isaac and Iacob. And God loked vpon the childre of Israel, and God knew it.

The uij. Chapter.

Moses keppe the shepe of Iethro his father in lawe prest of Madiad, droue the shepe on the backsyde of the wyldernes, and came to the mountayne of God, Horeb. *And the angell of God appeared vnto him in a flame of fyrre out of the bush. And he sawe that fyr bren th with fyrre, and yet was not consumed, and saide: I wil go hence, and se this greate sight, why? f bren bren.

When the LORDE sawe, that he wente his waye to se, God called vnto him out of the bush, and sayde: Moses, Moses. He answered: Here am I. He sayde: Come not hither, put thy shues of thy fete, for the place where vpon thou stonden, is an whyly groode. And he sayde morouer: I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, * God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. And Moses couered his face, for he was afrayed to loke vpon God.

And the LORDE sayde: I haue sene the trouble of my people in Egipte: * haue herde their crie ouer those that oppresse them. I knowe their sorowe, and am come downe to deluyer them from the power of the Egipcians, and to carey them out of that lode, in to a good and wyde londe, even in to a londe that floweth with mylke and hony: namely, vnto the place of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuytes & Iebusites. For so moch now as the complaynte of the children of Israel is come before me, * haue sene their oppression wherewith the Egipcians oppresse them: Go now thy waye therefore, * I wil sende the vnto Pharaos, that thou mayest brenghe my people the children of Israel out of Egipte. Moses sayde vnto God: Who am I, * I shulde go vnto Pharaos, and brenghe the children of Israel out of Egipte?

He sayde: I wyll be with the: * this shall be the token, * I haue sent the. When thou hast brought my people out of Egipte, ye shal serue God vpon this mountayne. Moses sayde vnto God: Beholde, when I come to the childre of Israel, and saye vnto them: The God of youre fathers hath sente me vnto you, * they saye vnto me: What is his name? what shal I saye vnto them? God saide vnto Moses: I wyll be what I wyll be. And he sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto * children of Israel: I wyll be hath sente me vnto you. And God sayde morouer vnto Moses: * Thus shalt thou saye vnto the children of Israel: The LORDE God of youre fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, * God of Iacob hath sente me vnto you, this is my name

And he thrust it in to his bosome, \( \tau \) take it out: beholde, the\( \acute{e} \) was it leper like snowe, And he saide: Put it in to thy bosome agayne. And he put it agayne in to his bosome, \( \tau \) take it out: beholde, the\( \acute{e} \) was it turned againe as his flesh. Yf they wil not beleue the, ner heare \( \acute{y} \) voyce of the first token, yet shall they beleue the voyce of the seconde token. But yf they wil not beleue these two tokens ner heare thy voyce, then take of the water of the ryuer, and poure it vp\( \acute{e} \) on the drye londe: so shall the same water \( \acute{y} \) thou hast tak\( \acute{e} \) out of \( \acute{y} \) ryuer, be turned vnto bloude v\( \acute{p} \) \( \acute{y} \) drye londe.

But Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: "Oh my LORDE, I am a man that is not eloqui\( \acute{e} \), from yesterdays \( \acute{y} \) yeryesterday, \( \tau \) sence the tyne \( \acute{y} \) thou hast spoken vnto thy seruaunt: for I have a slowe speach, \( \tau \) a slowe tynge. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Who hath made the mouth of man? Or who hath made the domme, or the deaf, or the seynge or \( \acute{y} \) blynde? Haue not I the LORDE done it? Go now thy waye therfore, I wil be with thy mouth, \( \tau \) teach the what thou shalt saye.

But Moses sayde: My LORDE, sende whom thou wilt sende. Then was the LORDE very angrie at Moses, and saide: Do not I knowe then, \( \acute{y} \) thy brother Aaron the Leuite is well spoken? And beholde, he shall go forth to mete \( \acute{y} \) \( \tau \) when he seth the, he shall reioyce from his hert. Thou shalt speake vnto him, \( \tau \) put the wordes in his mouth: \( \tau \) I wil be with thy mouth \( \tau \) his, and teach you what ye shall doo: \( \tau \) he shall speake vnto the people for the. He sha\( \acute{e} \) be thy mouth, \( \tau \) thou shalt be his God. And take in thine hande this staff, wherwith thou shalt do tokens.

Moses w\( \acute{e} \)te, and came agayne vnto Iethro his father in lawe, and sayde vnto him: Let me go (I praye the) that I maye ture agayne vnto my brethre, which are in Egipte, and see whether they be yet alyue. Iethro sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. The LORDE sayde also vnto him in Madian: Go thy waye, ture againe in to Egipte, for \( \acute{y} \) m\( \acute{e} \) ar deed, that sought after thy life. So Moses toke his wife, and his sonnes, and carried them vpon an Asse, \( \tau \) wente againe in to the lande of Egipte, \( \tau \) ture the staffe of God in his hande. And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: When thou comest agayne in to Egipte, se \( \acute{y} \) thou do...
All the wonders (before Pharaoh) which I have put in thy hand. But I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go. And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh: Thus saith the Lord; Israel is my firstborn son; and I say unto thee: Let my people go, or else I will smite thee with a plague. If Pharaoh will refuse to let them go, he hath said that he will harden his heart. And the Lord said: Ye shall go in and out with a heavy hand upon Pharaoh, that he may let Israel go from his land. And I will do wonders in Pharaoh, and in all his servants, and in all his land; that he may know that I am the Lord.

And as he was by the waye in the Inne, the Lord met him, and wolde haue slayne him. Then toke Zipora a stone, and circumcised the foreskynne of hir sonne, and touched his fete, and sayde: A bloody brydegrome art thou vnto me. The he let him go. But she sayde: A bloody brydegrome, because of the circumcision.

And the Lord said vnto Aaron: Go and mete Moses in the wildernes. And he wote, that he met him on the mount of God, and kissed him. And Moses tolde Aaron all the wordes of the Lord, which had sent him; and all the tokens he had charged him withall. And they wote, that gathered all the elders of the children of Israel. And Aaron tolde all the wordes, that the Lord had spake vnto Moses; and dyd the tokens before the people, and the people beleued. And when they herd the Lord vysited the children of Israel, and loked vpon their trouble, they bowed them selves, and worshipped.

The 6. Chapter.

Afterwarde wente Moses and Aaron, and spake vnto Pharaoh: Thus sayeth the Lord the God of Israel: let my people go, that they maye kepe holy daye vnto me in the wildernes. Pharaoh answered: What felowe is the Lord, that I must heare his voyce, and let Israel go? I knowe not the Lord, nether wil I let Israel go.

They sayde: The God of the Hebrewes hath called vs. Let vs go now therfore three dayes journey in the wildernes, and do sacrifice vnto the Lord our God, that there happen not vs pestilence or swerde. The says: Why make ye not people (thou Moses and Aaron) to leave their worke? Get you hice to youre laboure. Pharaoh saide moroner: Beholde, ye people are to many in y lande, and yet wil ye byd them cease from their laboure.

The same daye therfore dyd Pharaoh commaunde the workmasters of the people, and their officers, and sayde: Ye shall not gather and geue the people eny more strawe, to burne bryck, as yesterdaye and vryesterdaye. Let them go, and gather them strawe thame selues. And the nombre of the brycke which they made yesterdaye and vryesterdaye, shall ye laye vpon them neuertheles, and mynsish nothinge thereof: for they are ydle. Therfore crye they and saye: We wil go, and do sacrifice vnto oure God. Let the men be kepte downe with laboure, that they maye haue to do, and not to turne them selues to false wordes.

Then wente the workmasters of the people their officers out, and spake vnto the people: Thus sayeth Pharaoh: There shall no strawe be geuen you, go your waye your selues, and get you strawe, where ye can fynde it. But of youre laboure there shall nothinge be mynsished. Then were the people searted in all y lande of Egypte, to gather stubble, that they might haue strawe.

And the workmasters haistied them forward, saying: Fulfil youre daye worke, like as whan ye had strawe. And the officers of the children of Israel, whom Pharaohs workmasters had set ouer them, were beaten, and it was saide vnto them: Wherfore haue ye not fulfilled youre appoynted daye worke to daye yesterdaye, like as in tymes past?

Than wente the officers of the children of Israel, and cõplayned vnto Pharaoh: Wherfore wilt thou deale thus with thy seruauntes? Thy seruauntes haue no strawe geuen the, yet must we make the brycke that are appoynted vs. And beholde, thy seruauntes are beaten; thy people are euell intreated.

Pharaoh sayde: Ye are ydle, yidle are ye, therefore saye ye: we will go, and do sacrifice vnto the Lord. Go now yore waye therfore, let worke: there shall no strawe be geuen you, but the nombre of bryckeshal ye delaue.

Then sawe the officers of the children of Israel, that it was not amended, for it was sayde: ye shal mynsish nothinge of the daye worke of the brycke. And when Moses and Aaron from Pharaoh, they came forth to mete them, sayde vnto them: The Lord loke vpon you, and judge it, for ye haue made the sauerre of vs to stynke before Pharaoh and his seruauntes, and haue geuen them a swerde in their handes, to slaye vs.
But Moses came agayne vnto the LORDE, and sayde: LORDE, wherfore dealest thou so euell with this people? Wherfore hast thou sent me? For sence the tyme that I wente in vnto Pharao, to speake vnto him in thy name, he hath dealt euell with this people, and thou hast not deluyered thy people. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Now shalt thou se, what I will do vnto Pharao, for thorow a mightie hande must he lete them go, thorow a mightie hande: must he drye them from him out of his londe.

The vi. Chapter.

A ND God spake vnto Moses, & sayde vnto him: I am the LORDE, & I appeared vnto Abraham, Isaac & Iacob, an Allmightie God: but my name, LORDE, haue I not shewed vnto them: My couenaunt also haue I made with them, that I will geue them the londe of Canaan, the londe of their pilgremage, wherin they have bene straungers. Morover I haue herde the complaynte of the children of Israel, whom I Egipcians oppressse with laboure, and haue remembred my couenaunt.

Therefore saye vnto the childre of Israel: I am the LORDE, & wil brynge you out from youre burthens in Egipte, & wil rydd you from youre laboure, and wil delyuer you thorow a stretched out arme greate iudgmetes, and will receaue you for my people, & wil be youre God: so that ye shal know, that I the LORDE am youre God, which brynge you out from the burthen of Egipte, and will brynge you in to the lande, ouer the which I haue lift vp my hande, to geue it vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, & same wil I geue vnto you for a possession. I the LORDE.

Moses tolde this vnto the childre of Israel. But they herkened not vnto him, for very anguysh of sprete, for sore laboure. The spake the LORDE vnto Moses, & sayde: Go thy waye, & speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egypte, he let the childre of Israel go out of his lande. But Moses spake before the LORDE, & sayde: Beholde, childre of Israel herke not vnto me, how shulde Pharao the heare me? And I am also of vncrecumcised lyppes.

So the LORDE spake vnto Moses & Aaron, & gave the a commandement vnto the childre of Israel, vnto Pharao the kyng of Egipte, they shulde brynge the childre of Israel out of Egipte.

These are the heads of the house of their fathers. The children of Ruben the first sonne of Israel, are these: Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron, Carmi: These are the generations of Ruben.

The children of Simeon are these: Issmuel, Iamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zophar, and Saul the sonne of the Canaanitish woman: These are the generations of Symeon.

These are the names of the childre of Levi in their generations: Gerson, Kahath and Merari: Levi was an hundreth and seuen and thirtie yeare olde. The children of Gerson are these: Libni and Semei in their generations. The childre of Kahath are these: Amram, Iezeer, Hebron, Vsiel. Kahath was an hundreth and thirtie yeare olde. The children of Merari are these: Maheli and Musi. These are the generations of Levi in their kynreds.

And Amram toke his vnclcs daughter Ieghebed to wife, which bare him Aaron viij. Moses. Amram was an C. viij. thirtie yeare olde. The childre of Iezeer are these: Korah, Nepheg, Sichri. The children of Vsiel are these: Musael, Elzaphan, Siblyri.

Aaron toke Elizaba daughter of Aminadab Nahassons sister to wife, which bare him Nadab, Abihu, Eleasar, Ithamar.

The childre of Korah are these: Assir, Elkana, Abiassaph. These are the generations of Korahites. Eleasar Aarons sonne toke one of the douthers of Putiel to wife, which bare him Phineas. These are the heades amonst the fathers of the generations of the Leuites.

This is the Aaron of Moses, vnto whom the LORDE sayde: Bringe the childre of Israel out of the lande of Egipte with their armes. It is they (namely Moses & Aaron) who spake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egipte, they might brynge the children of Israel out of Egipte. The same daie spake the LORDE vnto Moses in the lande of Egipte, & sayde: I am the LORDE, speake thou vnto Pharao thy kyng of Egipte, all I saye vnto you. And he answered before  LORDE: Beholde, I am of uncircumcised lippes, how shall Pharao the heare me?

The viij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, I have made the a God ouer Pharao, a Aarô thy brother shall be thy prophet. Thou shalt speake all  LORDE commaunde: but Aaron thy brother shall speake vnto Pharao, he maye let the childe of Israel goe out of his lande. Neuertheles I wil harden Pharaoh hert,  I maye multiplie my tokens wonders in the londe of Egipte. And Pharao shall not heare you,  LORDE, when I shal stretch out my hande vpon Egipte, and brynge the children of Israel out from amonge them.

Moses and Aaron dyd as LORDE commaunded them. And Moses was foure score yeare olde, a Aaron thre foure score yeare olde, when they spake vnto Pharao. And  LORDE sayde vnto Moses a Aaron: When Pharao seythed vnto you: Shew ye wonders, then shalt thou seyde vnto Aaron: Take thy staff, and cast it before Pharao, it shall turne to a serpent.

Then wete Moses a Aaron in vnto Pharao, dyd as the LORDE commaunded them. And Aaron cast his staff before Pharao before his seruauntes, it turned to a serpêt. Then Pharao called for  wyse men a Sorcerers. And the Sorcerers of Egipte also dyd like wyse with their Sorceries, and euery one cast his staff before him, they turned vnto serpentes. But Aarons staff denoue their staues. So Pharaoh hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto them, euery as the LORDE had sayde.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: The hert of Pharao is hardened, he refuseth to let  people go. Get  vnto Pharao in the morning, beholde, he shall come  water, mete thou him vp the waters brynke, take  staff which turned to a serpêt, in thine hande, saye vnto him: The LORDE God of the Hebrues hath sent me vnto thee, sendeth  word: Let my people go, that they maye serue me in the wyldernes: but hither to thou woldest not heare.

Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Hereby shalt thou knowe,  LORDE. Beholde, with the staff  I haue in my hande, wil I smyte the water which is in  ryuer, it shall be turned in to bloude: so that the fishes in the ryuer shall dye, the ryuer shall stynke: it shall greue the Egipcians to drynke of  water of the ryuer.

And  LORDE speake vnto Moses: Saye vnto Aaron: Take thy staff, stretch out thine hâde ouer  waters of Egipte, ouer their ryuers  breaks  ponds, ouer all water poles, they maye be turned to bloude, that there maye be bloude in all  lande of Egipete, both in vessels of wodde and stone.

Moses a Aaron dyd as  LORDE commaunded them, lift vp the staff, smote the water  was in the ryuer, before Pharoa his seruauntes, all the water in the ryuer was turned in to bloude, the fish in the ryuer dyed, the ryuer stanke, so  the Egipcians could not drynke of the water  ryuer, there was bloude in all the lande of Egipte. And the Sorcerers also of Egipete, dyd like wyse with their Sorceries. But Pharaoh hert was hardened, he herkened not vnto the, like as the LORDE had sayde. And Pharaoh turned hym self, wente home, set not his hert there on. All the Egipcias dydged roude aboute  ryuer, for water to drinke: for they could not drynke of  water out of the ryuer. And this endured seuen dayes longe, that the LORDE smote the ryuer.

The viij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go thy waye to Pharao, speake vnto him: Thus saieth the LORDE: Let my people go, they maye serue me: If thou wilt not let the go, beholde, I wil smyte all  borders of thy lode with frogges, so  the ryuer shall scraule with frogges: these shall clyme vp, come in to thine house, in to thy chamber, where thou slepest, vpon thy bed, and in to the houses of thy seruauntes, amongeth thy people, in to thine ouens, and vpon thy dowe: and the frogges shall come vp vpon the, and vpon thy people, and vpon all thy seruauntes.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saye vnto Aaron: Stretch forth thine hande with thi staff ouer the streames, \\r and let frogges came vpon the londe of Egipte. \\r And Aaron stretched his hand ouer the waters \\r in Egipte, there came vp frogges, so the londe of Egipte was couered. \\r
The Sorcerers also dyd likewise, with their \\r Sorcerirs, caused frogges to come vp ffo \\r the lode of Egipte. The called Pharao for Moses \\r and Aaron, sayde: Praye the LORDE for me, \\r he may take awaye the frogges fro me \\r and my people, I will let you go, they maye do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. \\r Moses sayde: Haue thou the honoure before \\r me, appoynte me, wh\, I shall praye for \\r and thy seruauntes and for thy people: \\r the frogges maye be dryuen awaye fro the \\r thy house, remayne onely in the ryner. \\r
He sayde: Tomorrow, He sayde: Euen as thou \\r hast sayde, thou mayest knowe, there is \\r none like vnto the LORDE our God: And \\r the frogges shall be tak\ from the, fro the \\r gathered the together, here an heape, \\r an heape, the lande stanke of them. But \\r when Pharao sawe he had gotten breth, \\r his hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto \\r
the, euens as the LORDE had sayde. \\r
And the LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saithe \\r vnto Aaron: Stretch out thy staff, smyte \\r the dust vpon the earth, there maye be lyse \\r in the whole lode of Egipte. They dyd so. \\r And Aaron stretched out his hande with his \\r staff, smyte the dust of the earth, there \\r were lyse vpon men and vpon catell: All \\r the dust of the lande was turned vnto lyse in all \\r
the lande of Egipte. \\r
The Sorcerers also assayde likewise with \\r their Sorcerirs they might brynge forth lyse, \\r but they coude not. And lyse were vpon \\r men and catell. Then sayde Sorcerers vnto \\r Pharao: It is the fynger of God. But Pharao \\r hert was hardened, he herkened not vnto \\r
the, euens as the LORDE had sayde. \\r
And sayde vnto Moses: Get vp tomorow by tymes, stonde before Pharao: \\r beholde, he will go vnto the water, speake \\r thou vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE: let \\r my people go, they maye serue me: if not, \\r beholde, I wil cause cruel wormes (or flyes) \\r to come vpon the, thy seruauntes, thy people, \\r thy house, all the Egipcians houses, the \\r felde, and what theron is shall be full of \\r cruell wormes: the same daye wil I separate \\r the londe of Gosen, wherin my people are, \\r so no cruell worme shalbe there, that thou \\r mayest knowe, that I am the LORDE in the \\r myddest of the earth. And I wil set a de-

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go in to Pharao, and speake vnto him: This sayeth the LORDE God of Hebreus:

let my people go, ñ they maye serue me. Yf thou wilt not, but holde them longer, beholde, the hande of the LORDE shall be vpon thy catell in the feld, vpon horses, vpon Asses, vpon Camels, vpon oxen, vpon shepe with a very sore pestilence. And ñ LORDE shall make a diuersioun betwene the catell of the Israelites ñ the Egipcians, so ñ there shall nothinge dye of all that the children of Israel haue. And ñ LORDE appoynted a tyme, and sayde: Tomorow shall the LORDE do this vpon earth.

And the LORDE dyd the same on the morow. And there dyed of all manner of catell of the Egipcians: but of ñ catell of ñ childrë of Israel there dyed not one. And Pharao sent thither, ñ beholde, there was not one of the catell of Israel deed. But Pharao hert was hardened, so ñ he let not ñ people go. Then sayde ñ LORDE vnto Moses ñ Aaron: Take youre handes full of aszshes out of the fornance, ñ let Moses sprenkled it towards heauen before Pharao, that it maye be dust in all the lande of Egipte, ñ that there maye be sores ñ blaynes vpon men ñ vpon catell in all the lande of Egipte.

And they take aszshes out of ñ fornance, ñ stodde before Pharao, ñ Moses sprenkled it towards heauen. Then were there sores and blaynes vpon men ñ vpon catell, so that the Sorcerers mightnot stode before Moses by reason of the sores. For there were sores vpõ the Sorcerers as well as vpon all the Egipcians. But the LORDE hardened Pharao hert, so that he herkened not vnto them, eae as the LORDE had sayde vnto Moses.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: Get the vp tomorrow by tymes, ñ stonde before Pharao, ñ speake vnto him: Thus sayeth ñ LORDE God of the Hebreues: let my people go, ñ they maye serue me, els wyll I at this tyme sende all my plages in to thine hert, ñ vpon thy seruautes ñ vpon thy people: that thou mayest knowe, ñ there is none like me in all londes. For I will now stretch out my haunde, ñ smyte the ñ thy people with pestilence, so ñ thou shalt be roded out from the earth. Yet haue I ñstered ñ vp for this cause, euen to shew my power vpon ñ, and that my name might be declared in all londes.

Thou holdest my people yet, ñ wilt not let them go, beholde, tomorow aboute this tyme will I cause a mightie greate hayle to rayne, such as hath not bene in the londe of Egipte, sence the tyme that it was groued, hither to. And now sende thou, ñ same thy catell, ñ all ñ thou hast in the feld: for all men ñ catell that shalbe founde in the feld, ñ not brought in to the houses, ñ the hayle fall vpon them, they shall dye. Now who so feared the worde of the LORDE amonge Pharao seruauntes, caused his seruauntes ñ catell to flye in to the houses: but loke whose hertes regarded not the worde of ñ LORDE, left their seruauntes and catell in the feld.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses:

Strech out thy hande towards heauen, that it maye hayle vpon all the lande of Egipte, vpon men, vpon catell, ñ vpon all herbes of the feld in the lande of Egipte. ñ So Moses stretched out his staffe towards heauen, and the LORDE causethd it to thonder ñ hayle, so ñ the fyre ranne alonge vpon the earth. Thus the LORDE hayled ñ rayned vpon the londe of Egipte, so that the hayle ñ fyre wente so horrorfully together, as neuer was in all the lade of Egipte, sens the tyme that there were people therin. And the hayle smote the whole land of Egipte, all that was vpon ñ feld, both men ñ catell, ñ smote all the herbes vpon the feld, ñ brake all the trees vpon ñ feld, saue onely in the lande of Gosen, where the childrë of Israel were, there it hayled not. Then sent Pharao ñ called for Moses ñ Aaron, ñ sayde vnto them: Now haue I synned, ñ LORDE is righteouse, but ñ my people are vnsgodly. Yet pryte ye vnto the LORDE, that the thonder ñ hayle of God maye cease, then wyll I let you go, that ye shal tary here no longer. Moses sayde vnto him: When I am come out of the cite, I wyll stretch out myne handes vnto the LORDE, so shal the thonder cease, ñ there shall be none more hayle: that thou mayest knowe, that the earth is the LORDES. ñ But I knowe, ñ both thou ñ thy seruauntes feare not yet the LORDE God. Thus the flax and the barlye were smytten: ñ for the barlye was shot vp, ñ ñ flax was bouilled: but the wheate and ñ rye were not smytten, for they were late sowne.

So Moses wente from Pharao out of ñ cite, ñ stretched out his handes vnto ñ LORDE. And ñ thonder ñ the hayle ceassede, ñ the rayne dropped not vpõ the earth. But whã Pharao
The 1. Chapter.

And the LORDE said unto Moses: Go in vnto Pharaon, for I haue hardened his hert, and the hertes of his seruauntes. So Pharaos hert was hardened, ye he let not the childre of Israel go, euë as the LORDE had sayde by Moses.

Moses and Aaron wente in vnto Pharaon, and spake vnto hym: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of the Hebrues: How longe refuseth thou to submyt thy self vnto me, to let my people go, they maye serue me? If thou wilt not let my people go, beholde, tomorrow will I cause greshoppers to come vpon all places, they maye cower the lande, so ye the lande can not be sene, ye they shal eate vp thy hayle: ye shall eate vp all youre greene trees vpon the felde, ye shall fyll all thy seruauntes houses, ye all the Egipcians houses: such as thy fathers ye thy fathers fathers haue not sene, sens the tyne ye they were vpon earth vnto this daye. And he turned hym, ye wente out from Pharaon. Then saide Pharaos seruauntes vnto hym: How longe shall we be snared after this maner? Let the men go, that they may serue ye LORDE their God. Knowest thou not yet, ye Egipcie is destroyed? Moses and Aaron were brought agayne to Pharaon, vnto whom saide vnto them: Go youre waye, ye serue ye LORDE youre God. But who are they ye shall go? Moses sayde: We wil go with yonge ye olde, with sonnes and doughters, with shepe and oxë: for we haue a feast of the LORDE. He sayde vnto the: Let it be so, the LORDE be with you: shulde I let you go ye youre childre also? loke that ye haue not some myschefe in háde. Not so, but go ye that are men, and serue the LORDE, for that was youre desire. And they thrust them out from Pharaon.

The saide ye LORDE vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hande ouer ye londe of Egipcie, for the greshoppers, they maye come vpó ye londe of Egipcie, eate vp all the herbes in the londe, with all ye escaped the hayle. Moses stretched out his staff ouer ye lande of Egipcie, ye the LORDE brought an east wynde in to the londe all ye daye and all ye night, ye in the mornynge, the east wynde brought the greshoppers. And they came ouer the whole lande of Egipcie, and lighted in all places of Egipcie, so exceedinge many, that before tyme there were neuer soch, neither shalbe here after: for they covered the londe, and made it darcke. And they ate vp all the herbes in ye londe, ye all the frutes vpon the trees which remayned from ye hayle, ye left no grene thinge behinde in the trees ye herbes vpon the felde in all the lande of Egipcie.

Then Pharaon called for Moses and Aaron in all ye haist, ye saide: I haue synned against the LORDE youre God, ye agaynst you: forgeue me my synne this once also, ye pray the LORDE youre God, ye he maye take away fro me this death onely. And he wete out from Pharaon, ye prayed vnto the LORDE. Thee the LORDE turned a maruelous strege west wynde, and toke vp the greshoppers. They cast them in to the reed see, so that there was not one left in all the quarters of Egipcie. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, that he let not the childre of Israel go. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hâde towards heaven, that it be so darck in the londe of Egipcie, ye it maye be felt. And Moses stretched out his hâde towards heaven, the was there a thickke darknesse in all the londe of Egipcie three dayes, so ye in three dayes no ma sawe another, nor rose vp from ye place where he was. But with the childre of Israel there was light in their dwellings. Then Pharaon called for Moses, ye said: Go youre waye ye serue the LORDE: onely leaye youre shepe ye youre oxen here: let youre childre go with you also. Moses sayde: Thou must geue vs offeringes and brent offerynges, that we maye do sacrifice vnto the LORDE oure God. Oure catell shal go with vs, and there shal not one hoope be left behynde: for we must take therefor for the seruyce of the LORDE oure God. Morover we knowe not wherewithall we shal serue ye LORDE, till we come thither. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, ye he wold.
not let them go. And Pharoah sayde vnto him: Get the hence fro me, v beware, that thou come nomore in my sight: For lke what daie so euer thou comest in my sight, thou shalt dye. Moses answered: Euc as thou hast sayde, I wil come no more in thy sight.

The ri. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I wil yet brynge a plage vpon Pharoah and Egipte: after shall he let you go from hence, shall not onely let all go, but also dye you hence. Therfore saye now vnto the people, every man borowe of his neiboure, every woman of her neibouresse, Jewels of syluer and golde: for the LORDE shall gene the people faoure in the sight of Egiptias. And Moses was a very greate man in the lande of Egipte, in sight of Pharoas seruantes, in the sight of the people.

And Moses sayde: Thus sayseth the LORDE: At mydnight wil I go out in the lande of Egipte, and all shall first borne in the lande of Egipte shall dye: from Pharoas first sonne (by sytteth vpon his soate) vnto the first sonne of the mayde seruante which is behynde my myll: all the first borne amonge the catell: there shall be a greate crie in all the lande of Egipte, soch as nother was, nor shalbe. But amonge all the chilดร of Israel there shall not a dogg quatch with his tonge, fro men vnto catell, ye ye maye knowe, howe the LORDE hath put a differenc betwixte Egipte Israel. Thé shall all these thy seruantes come downe vnto me, and shal at my fote, saye: Get the out, thou all the people that are vnder the. After that wyl I departe. And he wete fro Pharoah with a wroth full displeasure. The LORDE saide vnto Moses: Pharoah herkeneth not vnto you, many woders maye be done in lade of Egipte. And Moses and Aaron dyd all these woders before Pharoah: but the LORDE hardene his hert, he wolde not let chilдр of Israel go out of his londe.

The ri. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses and Aaron in the londe of Egipte: This moneth shal be with you first moneth at it ye shall begynne the monethes of the yeare. Speake ye vnto all the congregacion of Israel, saye: Vpon tenth daye of this moneth let euery one take a labe (or a kydd) where a householder is, to euery house a labe. But if the householde be to few for a lambe, thee let him his neiboure is next vnto his house, take it according to the nombre of soules, and counte to the lambe, what euery man maye eate. But it shaull be a lambe without blemish, a male, of a yeare olde. From amonge the lambe labe goates shaull ye take it.

And ye shall kepe it vnto fourthene daye of the moneth. And euery man of the congregacion of Israel shal slaye it aboute the eueninge. And they shall take of his bloude, and stryke it on both the syde postes of the dore, and on the ypperdore post of the house, that they eate it in. And so shal they eate flesh same night, rosted at the fyre, unleuended bred, and shal eate it with swore sawse. Ye shaull not eate it rawe, ner sdden with water, but onely rosted at the fyre, his heade with his fete and pertenance. And ye shall leave nothyng of it ouer vntyll the mornynge: but any thinge be left ouer vntyll the mornynge, ye shaull burne it with fyre.

Of this maner shaull ye eate it: Ye shaull be gyrded aboute youre lbyname, and haue youre shues vpon youre fete, and stanes in youre handes, and ye shaull eate it with haist: for it is LORDES Passeeour. For in the same night wil I go thorow the londe of Egipte, and shaull eate all the firstborne in the londe of Egipte, from men vnto catell, vpon all the goddes of Egipte wil I do execucion. Even I the LORDE. And the bloude shaull be youre token, vpon the houses wherin ye are: when I se the bloude, I maye passe ouer, and that the plage happen not vnto you, to destroye you, when I smyte the londe of Egipte.

And this daye shaull ye haue for a remembran, and ye shaull kepe it holy for a feast vnto the LORDE, ye all youre posterities, for a perpetuall custome. Seven dayes shaull ye eate unleuended bred: namely, vpon the first daie shaull ye leaue of with leuended bred in youre houses. Who so euer eateth leuended bred from the first daie vnto seventhe soule shaull be roted out from Israel. The first daie shaull be called holy amongeth you, and the seuenthe also. No maner of worke shall ye do therin, saue what belongeth to the meate for all maner of soules, that onely maye ye do for you. And kepe you to leuened bred.

For euen vpon that same daye wil I bryng yore armies out of the londe of Egipte, therfoure shall ye and all youre posterityes kepe this daye for a perpetuall custome. Vpon the eftirte daye of the first moneth, "at euen, shall ye eate vnleuened bred, vnto the one and twentye daye of the moneth, at euen: so that there be no leuened bred founde in yore houses seuen dayes. For who so euer eateth leuened bred, that soule shall be rote out from the congregacion of Israel, whether it be a strangeuer or borne in the londe.
Therfore eate no leuened bred, but onely vnleuened bred in all youre dwelligynes.

And Moses called all the Elders of Israel, and sayde: "Chose out, and take to evey housholde a shepe, and kyll Passeouer vnto the LORDE; and take a bunch of ysope, and dypp it in the bloude in the basen, and stryke it vpon the vpverposte and vpon the two syde postes, and none of you goe out at the dore of his house vntilly y mourninge, for the LORDE wyll go aboute and plage the Egipcians. And when he seyth the bloude vpv the vpverposte, and vpon the two syde postes, he wyll passe ouer the dore, and not suffer the destroyer to come in to youre houses to plage. Therfore kepe this custome for the and thy children for euuer,

And when ye be come in to y londe that the LORDE shal geue you, (as he hath sayde) then kepe this seruice." And when yore children saye vnto you: What seruice is this, that ye haue? Ye shal saye: It is the sacrifice of the LORDES Passeouer, which passed ouer by the children of Israel in Egipte, whan he plaged the Egipcians, and saueth ouer
ges. Then the people bowed them selues, and worshipped. And the children of Israel wente and dyd, as the LORDE had commanded Moses and Aaron.

"And at myndight the LORDE smote all the firstborne in the londe of Egipte: from Pharaos first sonne (which sat vpon his seate) vntyll the first sonne of the presoner that was in the preson, and all the firstborne of the catell. Then Pharaos arose y same night, and all his seruauntes, and all the Egipcians, & there was a greate crye in Egipte: for there was no house wherein there was not one deed.

And he called for Moses and Aaron in y night, and sayde: "Get you vp, and departe out from my people, ye and the children of Israel:
go youre waye, and serue the LORDE, as ye haue sayde: and take youre shepe and youre oxen with you, as ye haue sayde, and departe, and blesse me also. And the Egipcians were feare vpon the people, to dryue them haistely out of the londe, for they saide:
we are all but deed.

And the people toke the rawe dowre, before it was leuened (for their foode) bounde in their clothes vpon their shulders. And the children of Israel had done as Moses sayde, and borowed jewels of syluer and golde, and clothes of the Egipcians: the LORDE also had geuen the people fanoure in the sight of the Egipcians, that they lent them, and so they spoyled the Egipcians.

Thus y children of Israel toke their journey from Rameses to Suchoth, sixe hundred thousand men of fote, besyde childre. There wente with them also moch como people, and shepe, and oxen, and exceedinge many catell.

And of the rawe dowre that they brought out of Egipte, they baked vnleuended cakes:
for it was not leuened, in so moch as they were thrust out of Egipte, and coude not tary:
nether had they prepared them eny other meate.

The tymre y children of Israel dwelt in Egipte, is foure hundred and thirtie yeares.
Whan the same were ended, the whole hoost of the LORDE wente out of the londe of Egipte in one daye. Therfore shall this night be kepte vnto the LORDE, because he brought them out of the londe of Egipte:
And the children of Israel shall kepe it vnto
the LORDE, they and their posteritizes.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses and Aaron: This is the maner of the kepynge of Passeouer: There shal no straunger eate of it.
But who so is a bought seruaunt let him be circumcyzed, then eate therof. A straunger and an hyred seruaunt shal not eate of it.
In one house shal it be eate. Ye shal cary none of his flesh out of the house, and ye shal not breake a bone of him. The whole congregacion of Israel shal do it.

But if there dwel a stranger with the, & wil holde Passover vnto the LORDE, let him circumsyce euery one that is male, and then let him come first, and do it, and be as one that is borne in the londe: for there shal no vncircumsyced eate thereof. One maner of lawe be vnto him y is borne in the londe, & vnto the strangier y dwelleth amoge you. And all the childre of Israel dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses & Aaron. So vpó one daye the LORDE brought the childre of Israel out of the lode of Egipte with their armyes.

The viij. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & saide: Sanctifie vnto me euery firstborne, & breaketh all maner of Matrices amonche the childre of Israel, both of men & catell: for they are myne. Then saide Moses vnto y people: Thinke vpó this daye, in the which ye are gone out of Egipte from the house of bódage, how y LORDE brought you out fró thence with a mightie hāde. Therfore shall ye eate no sowre dowe. This daye are ye gone out, euē in y moneth of Abib.

Now whā y LORDE hath brought y in to y lande of y Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Huites & Iebusites, which he sware vnto thy fathers to gene y (euē a londe that floweth with mylke & hony) then shalt thou kepe this seruyce in this moneth. Seue dayes shalt thou eate vnleneued bred, & vpon the seuenth daye is the LORDES feast: therfore shalt thou eate vnleneued bred seue dayes, that be no sowre dowe, nor sowred bred sene in all thy quarters.

And thou shalt tell thy sonne at the same tyme, & saie: Because of that, which y LORDE dyd for me, when I departed out of Egipte. Therfore shalt it be a signe vnto y in thine hande, and a token of remembrance before thine eyes, that the lawe of y LORDE maye be in thy mouth, how that y LORDE brought the out of Egipte with a mightie hande: Therfore kepe this maner yearly in thy tyme.

When the LORDE now hath brought y in to y lande of the Cananities (which he sworne vnto the and thy fathers) & hath geuen it the, then shalt thou sunder out vnto the LORDE all that breaketh the Matrice, and firstborne amonge thy catell, soch as is male.

The firstborne of the Asse shal be taken out with a shape: but if thou reade it not, then breake his neck. All the firstborne of men amonge thy children shalt thou redeeme.

And when thy childe axeth the to daire or tomorrow: What is this? Thou shalt saye vnto him: The LORDE brought vs out of Egipte from the house of bondage with a mightie hande: for when Pharao was lost to let vs go, the LORDE slew all the firstborne in the londe of Egipte, from the firstborne of men vnto y firstborne of the catell: therfore I vnto the LORDE all that breaketh y Matrice, byngle a male, and y firstborne of my children I redeeme. And this shal be a signe vnto the in thine hande, and a token to thinke vpon before thine eyes, how that the LORDE brought vs out of Egipte with a mightie hande.

Now when Pharao had let y people go, God led them not the waye thorow the lode of the Philistynes, which was y nexte: for he thoughte: The people might repēt, whā they se warre, and so turne in agayne in to Egipte. Therfore led he the people aboute, euē the waye thorow the wyldernes by y reed see. And the childre of Israel emptyed out of the londe of Egipte. And Moses toke Josephs bones with him, & for he toke an oath of the children of Israel, and sayde: God will surely ryset you, therfore cayre awaye my bones with you from hence.

So they take their journey frō Suchoth, & pitched their tentes in Etha in y wyldernes. And y LORDE wete before the by daye in a piler of a cloude, to lede the y right waye: and by night in a piler of fyre, that he might shewe the light to walke both by daye and night. The piler of the cloude departed neuer from the people by daye, and the piler of fyre departed not from the the by night.

The viij. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & saide: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and byd them that they turne aboute, & pitch their tentes before the valley of Hyroth, betwixte Migdol y the see towards Baal Zephō, and there pitch y tentes right ouer by the see. For Pharao shall saye of the children of Israel: They can not tell how to get out of the londe, the wyldernesse hath shut them in. And I wyll harden his hert, y he shal folowe after them, x I wil get me honoure vpon Phaara, and vpon all his power. And y Egipcias shal knowe, y I am the LORDE. And they dyd so.

And whan it was tolde y kinge of Egipte, y his people fled, his hert x his seruauntes were turned agaynst y people, x saide: Why haue we done this, that we haue let Israel go, y they shulde not serue vs? And he bounde his charrettes fast, and toke his people with him, and toke sixe huderth chosen charrettes, and the other charrettes besyde that were in Egipte, and the captaynes ouer all his: for the LORDE hardend y hert of Pharaon kyng of Egipte, that he folowed after the children of Israel. And the children of Israel wente out with an hye hande.

And the Egipcians folowed after the, x ouertokke them (where they had pitched by y see) with horses and charrettes, and horsmen, and with his power, in the valley of Hyrrath toward Baal Zephon. And whan Phaara came nuye them, x the children of Israel lift vp their eyes, and beholde, y Egipcians wente behinde the, and they were sore arrayed, and cried vnto the LORDE.

And sayde vnto Moses: Were there no graues in Egipte, y thou hast brought vs awaye to dye in the wyldernes? Wherfore hast thou done this vnto vs, that thou hast caried vs out of Egipte? Is not this it, that we sayde vnto the in Egipte? Leaue of, x let vs serue the Egipcians: for it were better for vs to serue the Egipcians, then to dye in the wyldernes? Moses sayde vnto the people: y Fear ye not, stonde still, and beholde, what a saluacon the LORDE shal shewe vpon you this daye: y ye Egipcians whom ye se this daye, shal ye neuer se more for euer: the LORDE shal fight for you, onely quyete your selues.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Wherfore criest thou vnto me? Speake vnto y children of Israel, y they goe forwarde. But lift thou vp thy staf, x stretch out thine hädde ouer y see, y parte it asunder, y the children of Israel maye go in thorow y middest of it vpon the drye grounde. Beholde, I wyll harden y hert of the Egipcians, y they shall folowe after you. Thus wyll I get me honoure vpon Phaara, x vpon all his power, vpöz his charrettes and horsmen: and the Egipcians shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I haue gotten me honoure vpon Phaara, vpon his charrettes, and vpon his horsmen.

Then the angell of God y wente before the armies of Israel, removed, and gat him behynede them: and the cloudy pelier removed also from before them, and stode behinde the and came betwixte the armies of the Egipcians and the armies of Israel. It was a darke cloude, and gane light that night, so that all the night longe these and they coude not come together.

Wha Moses now stretched forth his hâde over y see, y the LORDE caused it to passe awaye thorow a mightie eastwynde all that night, and made the see drye, x and y water deuyded it self a sunder. And the children of Israel wente in thorow the middest of y see vpon the drye grounde: and y water was vnto them as a wall, vpon their right hande vpöz their lefte. And y Egipcians folowed, x wente in after the, all Pharaos horses, x charrettes, x horsmen, euë in to y middest of y see.

Now whan the mornynge watch came, the LORDE loked vpöz the armies of the Egipcians out the pelier of fire and y cloude, x troubled their armies, and smote the wheles from their charrettes, x ouerthrew them with a stome. Then sayde the Egipcians: y Let vs flye from Israel, the LORDE fighteth for the against the Egipcians.

But y LORDE saide vnto Moses: Stretch out thyne hande over the see, that y water maye come agayne vpon the Egipcians, vpon their charrettes, and horsmen. Then Moses stretched out his hande over the see, and the see came agayne before daye in his course and strength, and the Egipcians fled against it. Thus the LORDE ouerthrew them in the myddest of the see, so that the water came agayne, and couered y charrettes and horsmen, and all Pharaos power which folowed after them in to the see, so that there remayned not one of them. But the children of Israel x wente drye thorow y myddest of the

Then sang Moses and the children of Israel this song unto the Lord, and they sang it from Egypt":

I will sing to the Lord a new song; I will sing praise to the Lord with my lyre. When I remember the deeds of the Lord, the things he has done for our fathers: he brought up Israel out of Egypt, his people who were oppressed; he led them with a cloud and protected them with his wings; they were not afraid of the fearsome things of the night: Repelling the envious one, he made the sea a path for them, and the mighty waters a way.

The Lord is my strength and my song, he has become my deliverance. This is my God, I will magnify him; he is my father's God, I will exalt him. The Lord is the right hand of war; the Lord is his name. The chariots of Pharaoh are like the sea; his horsemen like the waves; and the chariots of Pharaoh and his army he hurled into the sea. The Lord is my strength and my song; he has become my deliverance.

The Lord is like a mighty man; he stands as a warrior before them. He rebukes the nations, he makes them tremble under his power. He filled the earth with his power, and by his might he ruled from the beginning. He broke the heads of lions, scattered the heads of dragons, he hurled them into the sea and said: What shall we drink? And Moses cried: Let me lay down to sleep. When thou stretchedest out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them up. Thou of thy very mercy hast led this people, whom thou hast delivered, and with thy strength hast brought them unto the dwelling of thy sanctuary.

When ye nacions heered this, they raged, sorowe came upon the Philistynes. Then were ye princes of Edom afrayed, tremblelyng came vpon ye mightie of Moab, all the indwellers of Canaan waxe faynte harte.

Let feare and drede fall vpon them thowor ye greate arme, that they maye be as styll as a stone, tyll thy people (O Lord) be gone thowor, tyll thy people whom thou hast gotten, be gone thowor. Brynge them in, and plante them vpon the mountayne of thy efterhitance, vnto thine place that thou hast made for thyne owne dwellynge: euen to thy temple (O Lord) which thy handes hase prepared. The Lord shall be kyng for euer a euer. For Pharaoh wente in to the see with horses, and charlettes, and horsemen, and the Lord made the see fall agayne vpon them.

But the children of Israel wete drye thowor the myddest of the see. And Miriam the prophetisse, Aarons sister, tolke a tymbrell in hir hande, and all the women folowed out after her with tymbrels in a daunce. And Miriam sang before thee: O let vs syng vnto the Lord, for he hath done gloriously, man and horse hath he ouer throwne in the see.

Moses caused the children of Israel to departe out from the reed see, vnto the wyldernes of Sur, they wente thre dayes in ye wildernes, they founde no water. Then came they to Marath, but they coude not drinke water byternees, for it was very byter. Therefore was it called Marah, (by is byternees.) Then they people murmured against Moses, and sayde: What shal we drynke? And Moses cried vnto the Lord, which shewed him a tre: this he put in ye water, the was it swete. There he made the a statute, and a lawe, and tempted them, and sayde: Ye thou wylt herken vnto the voyce of the Lord thy God, ye do that which is right in his sighte, and geue eare vnto his commandementes, ye kepe all his statutes, then wyll I laye vpon none of the sicknesses, that I laye vpon Egypte, for I am the Lord thy surgione.
AND they came vnsto Elim, where there were twelve wells of water, and seuentie palme trees, and there they pitched by water syde. From Elim they take their Journey, and the whole congregacion of the children of Israel came in to the wyldernes of Sin (where lyeth betwene Elim and Sinai) vpon the fiftene daye of the seconde moneth, after that they were departed out of the londe of Egipte. And the whole multitude of the children of Israel murmured agaynst Moses and Aaron in the wyldernes, and saide vnto them: Wolde God we had dyed in the londe of Egipte by the hande of the LORDE, when we sat by flesh pottes, and had bred euery nynge to eate: for ye haue brought vs out in to this wyldernes, to cause this whole multitude dye of honger.

The sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: beholde I wyll rayne you bred from heauen, and let the people go out, and gather daylye, what they neede, that I maye proue whether they walke in my lawe or not. But vpon the sixe daye they shal prepare the selues, that they maye brynge in twyse as moch as they gather daylye.

Moses and Aaron sayde vnto all the children of Israel: At euen ye shall knowe, that the LORDE hath brought you out of the londe of Egipte, and in the wyldernes shall ye se the glory of the LORDE: for he hath herde youre grudgings agaynst the LORDE. For what are we, that ye grudge agaynst vs?

Moses sayde moroeuer: At euen shal the LORDE geue you flesh to eate, and in the wyldernes bred euery nynge: because the LORDE hath herde youre grudgings, that ye haue grudged agaynst him. For what are we? Yore murmuring is not agaynst vs, but against the LORDE. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Speake vnto the whole multitude of the children of Israel: Come forth before the LORDE, for he hath herde youre murmuringes.

And whyle Aaron spake thus vnto the whole congregacion of the childre of Israel, they turned them towarde the wyldernes: and beholde, the glory of the LORDE appeared in a cloude, and the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I haue herde the murmuringe of the children of Israel. Tell them: At euen shall ye haue flesh to eate, and in the mornynge shal ye be fylled with bred, & ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE your God.

And at euen the quayles came vp, and couered the tentes: and in the mornynge the dewe layde rounde aboute the tentes. And whan the dew was fallë, beholde, there laye a thinge in the wyldernesse, thynne and small, as the horefrost vpon the grounde.

And whan the children of Israel sawe it, they saide one to another: This is Ma. For they wyst not what it was. But Moses sayde vnto them: It is the bred that the LORDE hath geue you to eate. This is it that the LORDE hath commaunded: Every one gather for himself as much as he eateth, and take a Gomor for every heade, acordinge to the nombre of the soules in his tente.

And the children of Israel dyd so, and gathered some more, some lesse. But whan it was measured out with the Gomor, he gathered moche, had not the more: and he gathered litle, wanted nothinge, but euery one gathered for himself, as much as he ate. And Moses sayde vnto them: Let no mainge ought therof vntyll the mornynge. But they harkened not vnto Moses. And some left of it vntyll the mornynge. Then waxed it full of worms and stanke. And Moses was angrie at them.

And euery mornynge they gathered for them selues, as moch as euery one at: but as soone as it was whote of the Sonne, it melted awaye. And vpon the sixe daye they gathered twyse as moch of bred, two Gomors for one. And all the rullers of the congre-gaciôn came in, and tolde Moses. And he sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORDE hath sayde: Tomorow is the Sabbath of the holy rest of the LORDE: loke what ye wil bake, that bake: and what ye wil seethe, that seethe and that remayneth ouer, let it remayne, ye it maye be kepte vntyll the mornynge. And they let it remayne tyll the morow, as Moses commaunded. Then stanke it not, nether was there eny worme therin. Tho sayde Moses: Eate that to daye, for to daye is the Sabbath of the LORDE, to daye shal ye fynde none in the felde. Sixe dayes shal ye gather it, but the seuenth daye is the Sabbath, wherin there shal be none.

* Nu. 11. a.  Num. 11. d.  † Some reade: What is this?  2 Cor. 8. b.
But vpon the seuenth daye there wente out some of the people to gather, and founde no thinge. Then sayde þ LORDE vnto Moses: *How longe refuse ye to kepe my commandementes and lawes? Beholde, þ LORDE hath geuen you the Sabbath, therefore vpon the sixte daye he geuen you bred for two dayes: threfore let euery man now byde at home, and noman goe forth of his place vpon the seventh daye.

So the people rested vpo þ seventh daye. And the house of Israel called it Man, and it was like Coriander seede, and whyste, *and had a taist like symnels with hony.

And Moses sayde: This is it that þ LORDE hath commanded: Fill a Gomer therof to be kepte for youre posterities, þ they maye se the bred, wherewith I fed you, when I brought you out of þ y lande of Egipte. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Take a cruse, and put a Gomer full of Man therin, *and laye it vpon the LORDE, to be kepte for youre posterities, as the LORDE commanded Moses. So Aaron layed it vpon there for a testimonie to be kepte.

*And the children of Israel ate man fourty yeares,yll they came vnto a lande, where people dwelt: euyn vntyll they came to þ borders of the lande of Cannaate they Man. A Gomor is the tenth parte of an Epha.

ND the whole multitude of the children of Israel wete on their journeies out of the wyldernes of Sin (as the LORDE comandeth þe) þ pitched in Raphidim. *Then had the people no water to drynke. And they choode with Moses, *sayde: Geue vs water, þ we maye drynke. Moses sayde vnto þe: Why chyde ye with me? Wherforetep te ye þ LORDE? But when the people thyrsted there for water, they murmured against Moses, *sayde: Wherfore hast thou causd vs to come out of Egipte? to let vs, oure children, and oure catell dye of honger?

Moses cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: What shal I do with this people? They are all most ready to stone me. *The LORDE saide vnto him: Go before the people, *and take some of the elders of Israel with þ, and take in thine hande thy staff, wherwith thou smotest the water, and go thy waye: Beholde, *I will stonde before the vpon a rock in Horeb, there shalt thou smyte the rocke, so shall there water runne out, that the people maye drynke. Moses dyd so before the elders of Israel. *Then was that place called Massa Meriba, because of the chydninge of the children of Israel, and because they tempted þ LORDE, and sayde: Is the LORDE amonge vs, or not?

Then came Amaleck, *sought against Israel in Raphidim. And Moses sayde vnto Iosua: Chose vs out men, goe out, *and fight against Amaleck, tomorrow wil I stode vpo the toppe of the hyll, *and haue þ staff of God in my hande. And Iosua dyd as Moses bade him, *and fought against Amaleck. Moses *said Aaron, *Hyr wente vpo to þ toppe of the hyll. And whan Moses helde vp his hyde, Israel had the victory: *but whan he let downe his hande, Amalek had the victory.

But Moses haides were heuy, threfore toke they a stone, *and layed it vnder him, that he might syt vpon it. *And Aaron *Hyr stayed vp his haides, the one vpon the one syde, and the other vpon þ other syde. So his handes were stedfast vnto þ Sonne wente downe. And Iosua discomfited Amaleck, *his people thorow the edge of the swerde.

And þ LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Wryte this for a remembraunce in a boke, *and sette it vnto þ y eares of Iosua: *for I wyl null rote Amaleck from vnder heauen, so that he shall nomore be remembred. And Moses byyled an altar vnto the LORDE, and called it: *The LORDE Nissi, for he sayde: The battayll of the LORDE shalbe against Amaleck thorow an hande vnder the defence of God from childe to childe.

ND whan Iethro *re prest in Madian, *Moses father in lawe herde of all þ God had done with Moses *his people of Israel, how þ the LORDE had brought Israel out of Egipte, he toke Zipora Moses wife, whom he had sent backe, with her two sones. The one was called Gerson, for he saide: *I am become a straunger in a straunge londe.

Deu. 9. d. *Jud. 4. c. *Nu. 24. d. 1 Re. 15. a. *That is: The LORDE is he that lifteth me vp.

*Exod. 2. d.
And the other was called Eliasar, for he sayde: The God of my fathers hath bene my helpe, and hath deliuered me from Pharaos swerde.

Now whā Íethro Moses father in lawe, and his sonnes and his wife came vnto him in the wyldernes by the mounte of God, where he had pitched his tent, he sent worde vnto Moses: I Íethro thy father in lawe am come vnto the, and thy wife and both hir children with her. Then wente Moses forth to mete him, and dyd obeysaunce vnto him, and kyssed him. And when they had saluted ech other, they wente in to the tente.

Then Moses tolde his father in lawe all that the LORDE had done vnto Pharao and the Egipcians for Israels sake, and all the tranayle that had happened them by y waye, and how the LORDE had deliuered them. Íethro rejoysed over all y good that the LORDE had done for Israel, y he had deliuered them from the hāde of the Egipcians. And Íethro sayde: Prayset be the LORDE, which hath deliuered you from the hande of the Egipcians and of Pharao, (and) that knoweth how to deliuer his people from the Egipcians hande. Now I knowe, that the LORDE is greater thē all goddes, because they dealt proudly with them. And Íethro toke brentofferynges, and offered vnto God. Then came Aaron and all y elders of Israel to eate bred with Moses father in lawe before God.

On the next morow sat Moses to judge the people, and the people stode rōide aboute Moses from the mornyng aboutyll y euene. But whan his father in lawe sawe all that he dyd with the people, he sayde: What is this, that thou doest with the people? Wherfore syttest thou alone, and all y people stonde rounde aboute from the morninge vntyll the euene? Moses answered him: The people come to me, ò axe counsell at God: for whan they haue eny thinge to do, they com to me, that I maye judge betwixte every one ò his neighbour, and shewe them the statutes of God, and his lawes.

His father in lawe sayde vnto him: It is not well that thou doest. Thou wearest thy self, and the people that is with the. This busynesse is to sore for the, thou canst not perfourme it alone. But herken vnto my voyce, I will geue the counsell, and God shalbe with the. Be thou vnto the people to God warde, and brynge the causes before God, and prouide them with statutes and lawes, that thou mayest shewe thē the waie wherein they shulde walke, and the workes that they shulde do.

But loke out amonge all the people, for honest men, that fear God, soch as are true, ò hate couetousenes: make these rulers ouer them, some ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten, that they maye alwaye judge the people. But where there is eny greate matter, ò that they bryngge the same vnto the, and judge the small causes them selues: so shall it be lighter for the, yf they bear the burthen with the. Yf thou shalte do this, then mayest thou endure the thinge that God chargeth the withall, and all this people maie go peaceably vnto their place.

Moses herkened vnto the voyce of his father in lawe, and dyd all that he sayde. And he chose honest men out of all Israel, and made them heads ouer the people, some ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten, that they might alwaye judge the people. As for soch causes as were herde, they brought them vnto Moses, and judged the small matters them selues. So Moses let his father in lawe departe in to his owne londe.

In the thirde moneth after that the children A of Israel were gone out of the londe of Egipte, they came the same daye in to the wyldernes of Sinai (for they were departed from Raphidim, and wold in to the wyldernes of Sinai) ò and there they pitched in the wyldernes ouer against the mounte. And Moses wente vp vnto God.

And the LORDE called vnto him out of the mount, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the house of Iacob, and tell the children of Israel: Ye haue sene what I haue done vnto the Egipcians, and how I haue borne you vpon Aegles wynges, ò brought you vnto my self. Yf ye wyll harken now vnto my voyce, and kepe my couenant, ye shal be myne owne before all people: for the whole earth is myne: and ye shall be vnto me ò a presterly kingdome, and an holy people. These are the wordes that thou shalt saye vnto the children of Israel.

Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and layed before them all these wordes, that the LORDE had commanded. And all the people answered together, and sayde: *All that the LORDE hath sayde, will we do.

And Moses tolde the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE agaynse. And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, I will come vnto the in a thicke cloude, that the people maye heare my wordes, which I speake vnto the, and beleue the for euer. And Moses shewed the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go vnto the people, and sanctifie the to daye and to morow, they they maye wash their clothes, and be ready against the thirde daye: for vpon the thirde daye shall the LORDE come downe vpon mount Sinai before all the people. And set markes rounde aboute the people, and saye vnto them: Beware, that ye go not vp in to mount, nor touch ye border of it. For who so euer toucheth mount, shal dye death. There shall no hide touch it, but he shall either be stone, or shot thorow: whether it be beest or man, it shall not lyue. When the horne bloweth, then shal they come vp vnto the mounte.

Moses wente downe from the mount vnto the people, and sanctified them. And they waszshed their clothes. And he sayde vnto them: Be ready agaynst the thirde daye, and no man come at his wife.

Now when the thirde daye came (and it was early) it beganne to thonder and lighten, and there was a thicke cloude vpon the mount, and a noyse of a trompet exceadinge mightie. And the people that were in the tentes, were afrrayde. *And Moses brought the people out of the tentes to mete with God, and they stode vnder the mount.

But all mount Sinai smoked, because mount Sinai came downe vp with fyre. And the smoke therof wente vp as the smoke of a fornace, so that the whole mount was exceadinge terrible. And the noyse of the trompet wente out, and was mightie. Moses spake, and God answered him loude. Now when the LORDE was come downe vpon mount Sinai, euon vpon the toppe of it, he called Moses vp vnto toppe of the mount. And Moses wente vp.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto him: Go downe, and charge the people, they they presse not vnto the LORDE to se him, and so many of them persihe. The rulers also that come nye vnto mount, shal sanctifie them seluues, lest the LORDE smyte the. But Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: The people can not come vp vpon mount Sinai, for thou hast charged vs, & sayde: Set markes aboute the mount, and sanctifie it.

The LORDE sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, get downe. Thou and Aaron with the shalt come vp: but the rulers and people shall not presse to come vp vnto mount, lest he smyte the. And Moses wente downe to the people, and tolde them.

The 17. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake all these wordes, and sayde: *I am the LORDE thy God, which have brought the out of the londe of Egypte from house of bondage.

Thou shalt have none other Goddes in my sight. Thou shalt make no graven ymage ner eny symulitude, nether of it that is aboue in heauen, nether of it that is beneth vpon earth, nether of it that is in the water vnder the earth. Worshipe them not, and serue them not: for I the LORDE thy God am a gelouse God, vysitinge synne of the fathers vpon the children, vnto thirde and fourth generation, of them that hate me: And do mercye vpon many thousandes, that loue me, and kepe my commandements.

Thou shalt not take the name of mount LORDE thy God in vayne. *For the LORDE shal not holde him vngiltie, that taketh his name in vayne.

For in sixe daies the LORDE made heauen and earth, and the see, and all that therin is, and rested vpon the seuenth daye: therefore the LORDE blessed the seuenth daye, & halowed it.

*Honoure thy father and thy mother, that thou mayest lyne longe in the londe, which the LORDE thy God shal geue the.

C Thou shalt not kyll.
    Thou shalt not breake wedlocke.
    Thou shalt not steale.

    Thou shalt not *lust after thy neibbour's house.

    Thou shalt not lust after thy neibbour's wife, ner his seruaunt, ner his mayde, ner his oxe, ner his Asse, ner all that thy neibbour hath.

And all the people sawe the thonder and the lightennyge, and the noyse of the trompet, and how that the mountayne smoked, and were afrayed, and stackerd, & stode afrar of, and sayde vnto Moses: *Talke thou with vs, we wil heare: and let not God talke with vs, we might els dye. And Moses sayde vnto the people: Be not afrayed, for God is come to proue you, and that his feare maye be before youre eyes, & ye synne not.

D And the people stode afrar of. But Moses gat him in to the dareke cloude, where in God was. And the LORDE spake vnto him: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the children of Israel: Ye haue sene, that I haue talked with you from heauen: therfore shal ye make no thinge with me: goddes of syluer and golde shal ye not make you.

Make me an altare of earth, wher vpon thou mayest offer thy burntofferynges, & peaceofferynges, thy shepe and thine oxen. For loke in what place so euer I make ÿ remembranue of my name, there wil I come vnto the, and blesse the.

*And yf thou wilt make me an altare of stone, thou shalt not make it of hewen stone: For yf thou lift vp thy thole vpon it, thou shalt vnhalowe it. Morouer thou shalt not go vp vpon steppes vnto myne altare, that thy shame be not discovered before it.

The 1111. Chapter.

AND he sayde vnto Moses: Come vp vnto the LORDE thou Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and the seuentie elders of Israel, and worshippe aferre of. But let Moses onely come vnto the LORDE, and let not them come nyce, and let not the people also come vp with him.

Moses came and tolde the people all the wordes of the LORDE, all the lawes. Then answered all the people with one voyce, and sayde: ¶ All these wordes that the LORDE hath sayde, wyl we do.

Then wrote Moses all the wordes of the LORDE, and gat him vp by tymes in the mornynge, and buylded an altare vnder a mount with twolue pilers, accordinge to the twolue trybes of Israel: and sent twolue yonge me of the children of Israel, to offre burntofferynges, and peace offerenges theron of bullockes vnto the LORDE.

And Moses toke the half parte of the bloude, and put it in a basen, the other half sprentkele he vpon the altare: and toke the boke of the couenaunt, and cried in the eares of the people. And when they had sayde: All these wordes that the LORDE hath sayde, wil we do, he herken vnto him: Moses toke the bloude, and sprentkele it vpon the people, and sayde: Beholde, this is bloude of the couenaunt that the LORDE maketh with you vpon all these wordes.

Then wente Moses Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and the seuentie elders of Israel vp, and sawe God of Israel. Vnder his fete it was like a stone worke of Saphyre, as the fashion of haueu, wha it is cleare, he put not his hande vp the pryncippall of Israel. And when they had sene God, they ate dronke.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Come vp vnto me vpon the mount, and remayne there, and maye geue the tables of stone, and lawe comandaumëtes ɣ I have wrytten, which thou shalt teach thè. Then Moses gat hym vp τ his mynister Issua, τ wente vp in to the mount of God, τ sayde vnto the elders: Tary ye here,yll we come to you agayn: beholde, Aaron and Hur are with you, ɣf eny mii haue a matter to do, let him brynge it vnto them.

Now wha Moses came vp in to ɣ mout, a cloude couered ɣ mount: ɣ the glory of ɣ LORDE abode vpon mount Sinai, ɣ couered it with the cloude sixe dayes, ɣ vpon the seuenthe daye he called Moses out of ɣ cloude. And ɣ fashion of ɣ glory of ɣ LORDE was like a cōsmyngfe fyre vpon the topp of ɣ mount in the sight of the children of Israel. And Moses wente in to the myddest of the cloude, and ascended vp in to the mount, and abode vpon the mount fourtye dayes ɣ fourtye nightes. ɣ

The 17b. Chapter.

AND ɣ LORDE talked with Moses τ sayde: ɣSpeake vnto ɣ childdre of Israel, ɣthey geue me an Heue offerynge, ɣtake the some of every man, that hath a fyre endlynghe hert therto. And this is the Heue-offerynge that ye shal take of them: Golde, syluer, brasse, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte tywned sylke, goates hayre, reed skynnes of rammes, doo skynnes, Fyrre tre, oyle for lampes, spyces for the anoynytynge oyle, and for swete incense. Onix stones and set stones for the ouerbody cote and for the brestlappe. And they shall make me a Sanctuary, that I maie dwell amongeth. Like as I shal shewe ɣ a patron of the Habitation, and of all the ornamentes therof, so shal ye make it.

Make an Arke of Fyrre tre two cubytes τ a half longe, ɣa cubyte τ a half brode, and a cubyte τ an half hye: this shalt thou ouer lye with pure golde within and without, τ make an hye vpó it a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and east fourynges of golde, τ put them in the four corners of it, so that two rynges be vpon the one syde, and two vpó the other syde. And make staines of Fyrre tre, and ouer laye them with golde, and put them in the rynges alongeth by the sydes of the Arke, to beare it withall: and they shal abyde stylly in the rynges, τ not be take out. And in ɣ Arke thou shalt laye the wytnesse, that I wyl geue the. Thou shalt make a Mercyseate also of pure golde, two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubyte τ a half brode.

And thou shalt make two Cherubyns of beaten golde vpó both ɣ endes of the Mercyseate, ɣ the one Cherub maye be vpon the one ende, τ the other vpon the other ende, τ so to be two Cherubyns vpon the endes of the Mercyseate. And the Cherubyns shall sprede out their wynges ouer an hye, ɣ they maye couer ɣ Mercyseate with their wynges: ɣ ɣ either of their faces maye be right ouer one against another, and their faces shal loke vnto the Mercyseate.

And thou shalt set ɣ Mercyseate aboue vpon the Arke. And in the Arke thou shalt laye the wytnesse, ɣ I shal geue the. ɣ From ɣ place wyll I testifie vnto ɣ, and talke with the, namely, from ɣ Mercyseate (betwixte the two Cherubyns) which is vpon the Arke of wytnesse, of all that I wyl cómaunde ɣ vnto the children of Israel.

Thou shalt make a table also of Fyrre tre, two cubytes longe, and one cubyte brode, and a cubyte and a half hye, and ouerlaye it with pure golde, and make a crowne of golde rounde aboute it, and an whope of an hāde brede hye, and a crowne of golde vnto ɣ whope rounde aboute.

And vnto it thou shalt make foure rynges of golde, on the foure corners in the foure fete of it: harde vnder the whope shall ɣ rynges be, to put in staves and to beare the table with all: and thou shalt make the staines of Fyrre tre, τ ouerlaye them with golde, ɣ the table maye be borne therwith.

Thou shalt make also his diszhesh, spones, pottes, and flat peeces of pure golde, to poure out and in. ɣAnd vpon the table thou shalt all waye set shewbred before me.

Morouer thou shalt make a candelsticke of fyne beaten golde, ɣwhere vpon shall be the shaft with braunches, cuppes, knoppes, and floures. Sixe braunches shall procede out of the sydes of the candelsticke, out of euery syde thre braunches. Euery braunch shalt hau thee cuppes, (like allmondes) thre knoppes, and thre floures. These shalbe the sixe braunches of the candelsticke. But the shaft of the candelsticke it selfe shall haure cuppes, knoppes and flourres, and alwaie a knoppe under two braunches, of the sixe that proconede out of the candilisticke. For both the knoppes and braunches shall proconede out of the shaft, all one pece of fyue beaten golde.

And thou shalt make seuen lampes aboue there on, that they maye geue light one ouer agaynst another, and snoffers and out quenchers of pure golde. Out of an hundreth pounde weight of pure golde shalt thou make it, with all this apparell. *And se that thou make it after the patrone that thou hast sene in the mount.

The 76vi. Chapter.

And thou shalt make a coueringe also of goates helyer for a tente ouer the habitacion, *of euery curteynes. The length of one curteyne shalbe eight and twentye cubytes, and all the shalbe like, and shalbe coupled fyue and fyue together, one vnto the other. And thou shalt make loupes of yalowe slyke by the edge of euery curteyne, where they shalbe coupled together, that there maye be euere two and two fastened together vpon their edges: fiftie loupes vpon euery curteyne, that one maye fasten the other together. And thou shalt make fiftie buttons of golde, wherwith the curteynes maye be coupled together, one to the other, that it maye be one couerynge.

Thou shalt make a couerynge also of euery curteyne shalbe thirtie cubytes, the brede foure cubytes. And all the euery shalbe alike grete: fyue shalt thou couple together by the selues, sixe also by them selues, thou mayest dubble the sixte curteyne in the fore front of the Tabernacle. And vpon euery curteyne thou shalt make fiftie loupes vpon the edges of them, that they maie be coupled together by the edges. And fiftie buttons of brasse shalt thou make, and put the buttons in to the loupes, that the tent maye be coupled together, and be one couerynge.

As for the remnaunt of the curteynes of the tente, thou shalt let the halfe parte hange ouer behynde the tente, vpon both the sydes a cubyte longe, the resydue maye be vpon the sydes of the Tabernacle, couer it vpon both the sydes.

Besydes this couerynge thou shalt make a couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes. And aboue this a couerynge of doo skynnes.

Thou shalt make bordes also for the habitacion, of Fyrre tre, which shall stonde: one borde shalbe ten cubytes longe, a cubyte a halfe brode. Two fete shal be one borde haue, that one maye be set by the other.

Thus shalt thou make all the bordes for the Tabernacle: Twentye of them shalt stode towaerde the south, which shalt haue fourtye sokettes vnder them, two sokettes vnder euery borde for his two fete.

Likewise vpon the other syde towaerde the north there shall stonde twentye bordes also, and fourtye sokettes of syluer, two sokettes vnder euery borde.

But behynde the habitacion towaerde the west thou shalt make sixe bordes, and two bordes mo for the two corners of the habitacion, that euery one of them both maye be coupled from vnder vp with his corner borde, and aboue vpon the heade to come euene together with a clape: so that there be eight bordes with their syluer sokettes, wherof there shalbe sixtene, two vnder euery borde.

And thou shalt make barres of fyre tre, fyue for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes vpon the other syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes behindie the Tabernacle towaerde the west. And the barres shalt thou shute thorow myydest of the bordes, and faste alltogether from one corner to the other. And thou shalt ouerlaye the bordes with golde, and make their rynges of golde, that the barres maye be put therin. And the barres shalt thou ouerlaye with golde, and so shalt thou set vp the Tabernacle, acordinge to the fashion as thou hast sene vpon the mount.

And thou shalt make a vayle of yalowe slyke, scarlet, purple, whyte twyned sylke. And Cherubyns shalt thou make theron of broderd worke, and shalt hange it vpon foure pilers of Fyrre tre which are ouerlayed with golde, hauyng knoppes of golde, and foure sokettes of syluer. And the vayle shalt thou festen with buttons, and set the Arke of wyntes within the vayle, that it maye be vnto you a difference betwixte the holy and the Most holy.

And thou shalt set the Mercy seate vpon the Arke of wytnesse in the Most holy. But set the table without the vayle, and the candlesticke ouer agaynst ý table vpon ý south syde of the Tabernacle, that the table maie stonde on the north syde.

And in the dore of the Tabernacle thou shalt make an hanginge, of yalowe sulke, purple, scarlet and whyte twyned sulke. And for the same hanginge thou shalt make fyue PILERS of Fyrre tre, ouerlayed with golde, with knoppes of golde. And shalt cast fyue sokettes of brasse for them.

The xviii. Chapter.

AND thou shalt make an ALTARE of Firre tre, "fyue cubytes longe g brode, ý it maye be foure square, g thre cubytes hye: thou shalt make hornes vpon the foure corners of it, g shalt ouer laye it with brasse. Make ashpânes, shoues, basens, fleshokes, cole pânes. All ý apparell therof shalt thou make of brasse. Thou shalt make a gredyron also like a net, of brasse, g foure brasen rynges vpon the foure corners of it: from vnder vp aboute the altare thou shalt make it, so that the gredyron reach vnto ý mynddest of the altare. Thou shalt make stauas also for the altare, of Firre tre, ouer layed with golde, and shalt put the stauas in the rynges, that the stauas maye be on both the sydes of ý altare, to beare it withall. And holowe with bordes shalt thou make it, like as it is shewed the in the mount.

And to ý habitacion thou shalt make a courte, an hangyng of whyte twyned sulke: vpô ý one syde an C. cubytes lóge towarde the south, g xx. PILERS vpon xx. brasen sokettes, g the knoppes with their wholes of sulyer. Likeweys vpon ý north syde there shall be an hanginge of an C. cubytes lóge, twenty PILERS vpon twenty brasen sokettes, and their knoppes with their wholes of sulyer.

But vpon the west syde the breth of ý courte shall haue an hanginge of fiftie cubytes longe, g ten PILERS vpon ten sokettes. VPô the east syde also shall the breth of the courte haue fiftie cubytes, so that the hangyng haue vpon one syde fyfiene cubites, and thre PILERS vpô thre sokettes: And vpon ý other syde fiftene cubytes also, and thre PILERS vpô thre sokettes.

And in the courte gate there shalbe an hangyng twenty cubytes breode, of yalowe sulke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sulke, wrought with nedle worke, and foure PILERS vpon their foure Sokettes. All the PILERS rounde aboute the courte shall haue sulyer whopes, g sulyer knoppes, g sokettes of brasse. And the length of ý courte shall be an húdred cubytes, the breth fiftie cubytes, the heygth fyue cubytes, of whyte twyned sulke and ý sokettes therof shalbe of brasse. All ý vessels also of the habitacion to all maner seruycy, and all the nailes of it, and all the nailes of the courte shalbe of brasse.

Commaunde ý children of Israel, ý they bringe vnto ý the most cleare g pure oyle oyle beaten, to gene lighte, ý it maye all waye be put in the lapes in the Tabernacle of wytnes without the vayle, that hangeth before the wytnes. And Aaro and his sonnes shal dresse it from the euenyng vntyll ý mornynge before the LORDE. This shalbe vnto you a perpetuall custome for youre posterities amonge the children of Israel.

The xviii. Chapter.

AND thou shalt take vnto the Aaron thy brother and his sonnes fro amonge the childre of Israel, that he maye be my prest: namely Aaron g his sonnes Naðab, Abiðu, Eleazer and Ithamar: g thou shalt make holy clothes for Aaró thy brother, honorable and glorious, g shalt speake vnto all them that are wise of hert, whom I haue fyllen with the sprete of wiszdom, that they make garmentes to Aaron for his consecration, that he maye be my prest.

These are ý garmentes which they shall make: a brestlapp, an ouerbode cote, a tunycle, an albe, a myter and a girdell. Thus shal they make holy garmentes for thy brother Aaró and his sonnes, that he maye be my prest. They shall take therto golde, yalow silke, scarlet, purple, and whyte sulke.

The ouerbody cote shal they make of golde, yalow sulke, scarlet, purple, g whyte twyned sulke of broderl worke, that it maye be festened together vpon both the sydes by ý edges therof. And his gyrdell vpô it shal be of ý same workmaschipp g stuff, euon of golde.

yallowe sylke, scarlet, purple, ᵖ whyte twyned sylke. And thou shalt take two Onix stones, and grave in them the names of the children of Israel. Syxe names vpon the one stone, and the sixe other names vpon the other stone acordinge to the order of their age. This shalt thou do by the stonegrauers that grave signettes, so that they maye be stones of remembrance for the children of Israel, that Aaron maye beare their names vpon both his shulders before the LORDE for a remembrance.

Thou shalt make hokes of golde also, and two wretche cheynes of pure golde, and shalt fasten them vnto the hokes.

The brestlape of judgment shalt thou make of broderd worke, euens after the worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke. Foure square shall it be and dubble, an hande breth longe, and an handebreth broke. And thou shalt fill it with foure rowes full of stones. Let the first rowe be a Sardis, a Topas, and a Smaragde. The seconde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dyamonde. The thirde: a Ligurios, an Achat, and an Ametyst. The fourth: a Turcas, an Onix, and a Iaspis. In golde shall they be sett in all the rowes, and shal stonde acordinge to ᵗ twelue names of the children of Israel, grauen of the stonegrauers, euery one with his name acordinge to the twelue trybes.

And vpon the brestlape shalt thou make wretchen cheynes by ᵗ corners of pure golde, and two golde rynges, so, that thou faste the same two rynges vnto two edges of the brestlape, and put the two wretche cheynes of golde in the same two rynges, that are in two edges of the brestlape. But the two endes of ᵗ two wretchen cheynes shalt thou fasten in the two hokes vpon the ouerbody cote one ouer agaynst another.

And thou shalt make two other rynges of golde, and fasten them vnto ᵗ other two edges of ᵗ brestlape, namely to ᵗ borders thereof, wherwith it maye hange on the ynsyde vpon the ouerbody cote. And yet shalt thou make two rynges of golde, and fasten them vpon the two edges beneth to the ouerbody cote, vpon the outsyde one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together. And the brestlape shall be fastened by his rynges vnto the rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yalow lace, that it maye lye close vpon the ouerbody cote, and that the brestlape be not lowed from the ouerbody cote.

Thus shall Aaron beare the names of the children of Israel in ᵗ brestlape of judgment vpon his hert, when he goeth in to the Sanctuary, for a remembrance before the LORDE allwaye. And in the brestlape of judgment thou shalt put ᵗ light and perfectnesse, that they be vpon Aarons hert, when he goeth in before the LORDE, and that he maye beare the judgment of the children of Israel vpon his hert before the LORDE allwaye.

Thou shalt make the tunykle also to the ouerbody cote all of yallowe sylke, and aboue in the myddest there shall be an hole, and a bonde folden together rounde aboute the hole, that it rente not. And beneth vpon the hemme thou shalt make pomgranates of yallowe sylke, scarlet, purple rounde aboute, and belles of golde betwixte the same rounde aboute: that there be euere a golden bell and a pomgranate, a golden bell and a pomgranate rounde aboute the hemme of the same tunycle. And Aaron shall haue it vpon him whā he mynistrēth, that the soude therof maye be herde, when he goeth out and in at the Sanctuary before the LORDE, that he dye not.

Thou shalt make a foreheade plate also of pure golde, and grave therin (after the workmanshipe of the stone grauer): the holynes of the LORDE, ᵖ with a yalow lace shalt thou fasten it vnto the fore front of the myter vpon Aarons fore heade, ᵗ Aaron maie so beare ᵗ synne of the holy thinges, which the childrē of Israel halowe in all their giftes and Sanctuary. And it shall be allwaye vpon his fore heade, that he maye reconcyle them before the LORDE.

Thou shalt make an albe also of whyte sylke, and a myter of whyte sylke, and a gyrdle of nedle worke.

And for Aarons sonnes thou shalt make cotes, gyrdles and bonetes, honorable and glorious, and shalt put them vpon thy brother Aaron and his sonnes, and shalt anoynte them, and fyll their handes, and consecrate them, that they maye be my prestes. And thou shalt make them lymen breches, to couer the flesh of their preuities, from the loynes vnto the thyes. And Aaron and his sones shall haue them on, when they go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or go vnto the altare to mynister in the Holy, that they beare not their synne, and dye. This shalbe a perpetuall custome for him, and his sene after him.

* THIS is it also, that thou shalt do vnto them, that they maye be consecrat prestes vnto me. * Take a yonge bullocke, and two rammes without blemish, vnleuended bred, & vnleuended cakes myxte with oyle, and waferes of swete bred tempered with oyle: Of wheate floure shalt thou make them all, and put them in a maunde, & brynge them in the maunde, with the bullocke & two rammes.

And thou shalt brynge Aaron & his sones vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of winnesse, & wash them with water, & take the garments, and put vpon Aaron the albe and the tunycle, & the ouer body cote, & the brestlapphe to & ouer body cote, & shalt gyrdle him on the out syde vpon the ouer body cote, and set the myter vpon his heade, and the holy crowne vpon the myter: and shalt take the anointinge oyle, and pour it vpon his heade, and anoynte him.

Thou shalt brynge forth his sones also, & put the albes vpon them, and gyrdle both Aaron & them with gyrdles, & set the bonnetes vpon their heades, that they maye have the presthode for a perpetuall custome.

And thou shalt fyll the hides of Aaron and his sones, and brynge forth the bullocke before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. * And Aaron and his sones shall laye their hides vpon the heade of the bullocke, and thou shalt shely the bullocke before the LORDE, at the dore of the tabernacle of wytnesse, and shalt take of his bloude, and put it vpon the hornes of the altare with thy fynger, and poure all the other bloude vpon the botome of the altare.

And thou shalt take all the fat that couereth the bowelles and the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kyndes with the fat that is aboue them, and burne them vpon the altare. But the bullockes flesh, skynne and donge, shalt thou burne with fyre without the hoost: for it is a synneofferynge.

* As for the other ramme, thou shalt take him, and Aaron with his sones shall laye their handes vpon his heade, and thou shalt slaye him, and take of his bloude, and put it vpon the typphe of the right eare of Aaron and his sones, and vpon \(thombe of their right handes, and vpon the greate too of their right fete, and thou shalt sprenkelle the bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute, and shalt take of the bloude vpon the altare and the anointinge oyle, and sprenkelle it vpon Aaron and his vestymentes, vpon his sones and their vestymentes. So shall he and his clothes, his sones and their clothes be consecrat.

*Then shalt thou take the fat of the ramme, the rompe, and the fatt that couereth \(bowelles, the net vpon the leuer, and the two kyndes with the fatt that is aboute them, and the right shulder (for it is a ramme of consecration) and a symmel of bred, and an oyled cake, and a wafer out of the maunde of the vnleuended bred \(that stondeth before \(LORDE, and put all in to the handes of Aaron and of his sones, and waue it vnto the LORDE. The take it out of their handes, and burne it vpon the altare for a burnt offerynge, to be a swete sauoure vnto \(LORDE. For it is the LORDES sacrifice.

\And thou shalt take the brest of the ramme of Aarons consecration, & shalt waue it before \(LORDE, \(shall be his parte. And thus shalt thou halowe \(Wanobrest & \Heueshulder (& waue & heauen) of \(ramme of the consecration of Aaron & his sones: And it shalbe a perpetuall custome for Aarons and his sones of \(children of Israel: for it is an Heue offerynge, and the Heue offerynge shalbe the LORDES dewte of the children of Israel, in their deade offerynges and Heue offerynges which they do vnto the LORDE.

And the holy garments of Aaron shall his sons haue after him, that they maie be anoynted therin, t y their handes maye be fyllled. a Looke which of his sonsse shalbe prest in his steade, the same shall put them on seue dayes, that he maye go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, to mynister in the Sanctuary. But the ramme of consecracion shalt thou take, and seeth his flesh in an holy place. And Aaron with his sones shall eat the flesh of the same ramme with the bred in the maunde, at the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse: for there is an attonement made therwith, to fyll their handes, that they maye be consecrated. A straunger shall not eate thereof, for it is holy.

But yf eny of the flesh of the consecracion, and of the bred remaine vntyll the mornynge, thou shalt burne it with fyre, and not let it be eaten, for it is holy. And thus shalt thou do with Aaron and his sones all that I haue commaunded y. Seuen dayes shalt thou fyll their handes, and offer a bullocke daylie for a synne offerynge, because of them y shal be reconciled. And thou shalt halowe the altare, when thou reconclyest it: t shalt anoynte it, that it maye be consecrated. Seuen dayes shalt thou reconycle the altare, t consecrate it, that it maye be an altare of the Most holy. Who so wyl touch the altare, must be consecrated.

And this shalt thou do with the altare: c Two lambe of one yeare olde shalt thou offer every daye vpon it: the one lambe in the mornynge, and the other at euenn. And to one lambe a tenthe deale of wheate flour, meanged with y fourth parte of an Hin of beaten oyle, and y fourth parte of an Hin of wine for a drynk offerynge. With the other lambe at euenn shalt thou do like as with y meate offerynge and drynk offerynge in the mornynge, for a swete saunoure of sacrifice vnto t LORDE. This is the daylie burntofferinge amongethe your posteritie, at the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE, where I will proteste vnto you, and talke with the. There will I proteste vnto the children of Israel, and be sanctified in my glory, and wyl halowe the Tabernacle of wytnes and the altare, and consecrate Aarô and his sones, to be my prestes. And I wyl dwell amonge the children of Israel, t wyl be their God: so y they shall knowe, how that I am the LORDE their God, which brought them out of the londe of Egipte, that I might dwell amonge them, euon I the LORDE their God.

The Chapter.

THOU shalt make also an incense altare A to burne incense, of Fyrre tre, a cubyte longe t brode, eauen foure squared, and two cubytes hye with his hornes, t shalt ouerlaye it with pure golde, the rofe t the walles of it rounde aboute, and the hornes thereof, t a crowne of golde shalt thou make rounde aboute it, and two golde rynges on ether syde vnder the crowne, that there maye be stanes put therin, to beare it with all.

The stanes shalt thou make of Fyrre tre also, and ouerlaye the with golde: and shalt set it before the vylye, that hangeth before the Arke of wytnesse, and before the Mercy seate y is vpon the wytnesse, from whence I wyl proteste vnto the. And Aaron shall burne swete incense theron euery morninge, which he dresseth the lampes. In like maner when he lighteth the lampes at euenn, he shall burne soch incense also. This shall be the daylie incense before the LORDE amongethe youre posteritie.

Ye shall put no strange incense therin, t offer no burntofferbye, ner meatofferynge, nether drynkofferynge theron. And vpon y hornes of it shall Aaron reconcile once in a yeare, with y bloude of the synneofferynge, which they shall offer that are reconcyled. This shall be done amongethe youre posteritie for this is the most holy vnto the LORDE.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: When thou nombrest the heads of the children of Israel, then shall euery one gene vnto the LORDE the reconcilelinge of his soule, y there happ not a plagge vnto them, when they are nombred. Euery one that is tolde in the nombre, shall gene half a Sycle, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary: t one Sycle is worth twentye Geras. This half Sycle shalbe y LORDES Heue offerynge. Whoso is in the nombre from twenty yeare and above, shall gene this Heue offerynge vnto y LORDE. The riche shall not gene more, and the poor shall not be under less in the half Sufficient, which is given unto the Lord to be an Hebraic offering for the reconciliation of their souls.

And this money of recollection shall thou take of the children of Israel, and put it to the Gods service of the Tabernacle of testimony, that it may be a remembrance unto the children of Israel, before the Lord, that he may let himself be reconciled over their souls.

And the Lord spake unto Moses, and said: "Thou shalt make a brassen laver also with a fote of brass to wash, and shall set it betwixt the Tabernacle of testimony and the altar, and put water therein, that Aaron and his sons may wash their hands and feet therout, when they go in to the Tabernacle of testimony, or to the altar, to minister unto the Lord, with offerings in sacrifice, they dye not. This shall be a perpetual custom for him and his sons among his posterity.

And the Lord spake unto Moses, and said: "Take unto the spices the best, fyu hundred Sycles of Myrrh, and of Cynamō half so much, even two hundred and fiftye, and of Kalmus two hundred and fiftye, and of Cassia fyu hundred (after the Sycle of the Sanctuary) an Hin of oyle olye, and make an holy anointinge oyle, after the craft of the Apotecary.

And there shall be thow anointe the Tabernacle of testimony, the Ark of testimony, the laver with his apparel, candlesticke with his apparel, the altar of incense, the altar of burnt offerencies with all his apparel, the laver with his fote: and thus shalt thou consecrate them, that they may be most holy: for who so wil touch the, must be consecrated. Thou shalt anointe Aaron also, and his sons, and consecrate them to be my preste.

And thou shalt speake unto the children of Israel, and saye: This oyle shall be an holy oymeunt vnto me amonge your posterity: It shall not be poured vpon mans body, nether shall thou make any soch like it, for it is holy: therfore shall it be holy vnto you. Who so maketh any soch like, or eueth a straunger therof, the same shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

And the Lord spake unto Moses: Take vnto the spices: Balme, Stacte, Gal-ban, and pure frankencense, of one as much as of another, and make incense thereof (after the craft of the Apotecary) mingled together, that it maye be pure holy. And thou shall beat it to powder, and shalt put of the same before the wyntes in the Tabernacle of wyntes, from whence I wil proteste vnto the, but it shall be holy vnto the for the Lord.
Who so maketh soch to cense therwith, shalbe roted out from amoghe his people.

The Lord spake unto Moses, and said: "I haue called by name Bezaleel the sonne of Uri the sonne of Hur, of the tribe of Iuda, and haue filled him with such wisdom and knowlege, and to worke with all manner of connyng worke, in golde, syluer, brasse, to graue stones connyngly, and to set them, to earne well in tymbre, and to make all maner worke. And beholde, I haue geuen him Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisamach of the tribe of Dan, to be his companyon, and haue geuen wysdome in to the hertes of all that are wyse, that they shall make all that I haue commanded the: the Tabernacle of testimony, the Ark of testimony, the Mercyseate theron, and all the ornamentes of the Tabernaucle: the table and his apparell, the candlesticke and all his apparell, the altar of incense, the altar of burnt offerencies with all his apparell, the laver with his fote, the mynistrye vestimentes of Aaron preest, and the garmentes of his sonnes to serue like preste, the anointinge oyle, and the incees of spyces for the Sanctuary. All that I haue commanded the, shal they make.

And the Lord spake unto Moses, and said: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: "Kepe my Sabbath, for it is a token betwene me and you, and youre posterity, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lord which haloweth you: therfore kepe my Sabbath, for it shall be holy vnto you. Who so vnhaloweth it, shal die the death:
For who so doth eny worke therin, shalbe roted out from amonghe his people.

Sixe daies shall men worke, but vpon the Sabbath.
seventh daye is the Sabbath * the holy rest of the LORDE. Who so doth any worke vpon the Sabbath daye, shall dye the death.

Therefore shall the children of Israel kepe the Sabbath, that they maye kepe it also amonge their posteritie for an euerlastynge comenaut. An euerlastynge token is it betwixte me and the children of Israel. For in sixe dayes made the LORDE heauēa daye, but vpon ye seventh daye he rested, and was refreshed.

"And when the LORDE had made an ende of talkinge with Moses vpon the mount Sinai, he gave him two tables of witnesse, which were of stone, and wrytten with the fyinger of God.

The rrieve. Chapter.

But when the people sawe that Moses made lõge taryenge to come downe fro the mount, they gathered the together against Aaron, & sayde vnto him:
"Vp, and make vs goddes, to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this man Moses, that brought vs out of Egipte. Aaron sayde vnto them:
"Plucke of the golden earynges from the eares of youre wyues, of youre sonses, & of youre doughters, brynge them vnto me. Then all the people pluckte of their golden earynges from their eares, & brought them vnto Aaron. And he toke them of their handes, & fashioned it with a grauer. d And they made a molten calfe, and sayde: These are thy goddes (O Israel) that brought the out of the londe of Egipte.

When Aaron saved that, he buylded an altare before him, and caused it be proclaimed, and sayde: Tomorrow is the LORDES feast. And they arose vp early in the mornynge, and offred burntofferynge, and brought dead-offerynge also: Then the people set them dounne to eate and drynke, & rose vp to playe.

"But the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go get the dounne, for thy people whom thou broughtest out of the londe of Egipte, have marred all: they are soone gone out of the waie, which I commanued them. They have made them a molten calfe, and have worshipped it, & offred vnto it, & sayde: These are thy goddes (O Israel) that brought the out of the londe of Egipte.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I se,

"that it is a styffnecked people, and now suffer me, that my wrath maye waie whote ouer them, & that I maye consume them, so wil I make a greate people of the.

But Moses was sought the LORDE his God, & sayde: Oh LORDE, wherfore wil thy wrath waie whote ouer thy people, whom thou hast brought out of the lode of Egipte with great power, & a mightie hande? Wherfore shulde the Egipcians speake, & saye: He hath brought the for their myschefe, to slaye them in the mountaynes, and to destroye the vterly from the earth? O turne the from the feareness of thy wrath, & be gracious ouer the wickednesse of thy people. Remembre thy seruantes Abraham, Isaac, & Israel, vnto whom thou wast earst by thynke owne self, and saydest: I wil multiplye youre sade as the starres of heauen, and all the londe that I haue promysed you, wil I gene vnto youre sade, & they shall inheret it for euer. Thus the LORDE repented of the euell, which he sayde he wolde do vnto his people.

Moses turned him, & wente dounne from the mount, and in his hande he had the two tables of wytnesse, which were wrytte vpon both the sydes, and were Gods worke, & the wrytinge was the wryttinge of God therin. Now whan Iosua herde the noyse of þe people, as they shouted, he sayde vnto Moses: This is a noyse of warre in the hoost. He answered: It is not a noyse of them that haue the victorie, and of them that haue the worse, but I heare a noyse of synginge at a daunse.

Whan he came naye vnto the hoost, and sawe the calfe, and the daunseyng, he was moued with wrath, and cast the tables out of his hande, and brake them beneth the mount.

And he toke the calfe that they had made, and brennt it with fyre, and stamped it vnto poulder, and strowed it in the water, & gaue it vnto the children of Israel to drynke, & sayde vnto Aaron: What dyd this people vnto the, that thou hast brought so greate a synne vpon them?

Aaron sayde: Let not the wrath of my lorde waie feare: thou knowest, that this is a wicked people. They sayde vnto me: Make vs goddes to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this man Moses, I brought vs out of the londe of Egipte. I sayde vnto them: Who so hath golde, let him plucke it of, and geue it me: and I cast it in the fyre, therof came this calfe.

Now when Moses sawe, that the people were nacked (for Aaron, whan he set them vp, made them nacked to their shame) he wete in to the gate of the hoost, and sayde: who so belongeth vnto the LORDE, let him come hither vnto me. Then all the children of Leui gathered them selues vnto him, and he sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: Euerie man put his swerde by his syde, and go thorow in and out from one gate to another in the hoost, and slaye euery man his brother, frende, a neghbour.

The children of Leui dyd, as Moses sayde vnto them. And there fell of the people the same daye thre thousande men. The sayde Moses: Cosecrate youre handes this daie vnto the LORDE, euery man vpon his sonne and brother, that the prayse maye be geuen ouer you this daie.

On the morow Moses sayde vnto the people: Ye haue done a greate synne. Now I wil go vp vnto the LORDE, ye peraduenture I maye make an attonement for youre synnes.

Now wha Moses came agayne vnto ye LORDE, he sayde: Oh this people haue done a greate synne, a haue made them goddes of golde. *Now for geue them their synne: ye not, the wype me out of thy boke, that thou hast wryten. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: What? Him that synneth against me, wil I wype out of my boke. Go thou th thy waye therfore, and bryng ye people thither as I haue sayde vnto the, §Beholde, myne angell shall go before the. But in the daye of my visitacion I wyll yset their synnes vpon them. So the LORDE plaged the people, because they made ¥ calfe which Aaron made.

The 13th Chapter.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go, departe hence, thou and the people, whom thou hast brought out of the londe of Egipte, vnto ¥ londe that I sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and sayde: ¥ vnto thy sede wil I geue it, § and I wyll sende an angell before the (and cast out the Cananites, Amorites, Hethites, Pherezites, Heites and Iebrus-ites) in to the londe that floweth with mylke and hony, for I wyll not go vp with the: § for thou art an hardnecked people, I might consume the by the waye. Whan the people herde this enuell tydings, they sorrowed, and no man put on his best rayment.

And ¥ LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Speake vnto the children of Israel: Ye are a styfnecked people, I must once come sodenly vpon thee, and make an ende of the. And now put of thy goodly araye from the, ¥ I maie knowe what to do vnto the. So the children of Israel laied their goodly araye from the, euyn before the mount Horeb.

Moses toke the Tabernacle, ¥ pitched it without afarre of from ¥ hoost, and called it the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And who so euery wilded axe any question at the LORDE, wente out vnto the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the hoost. And whan Moses wente out vnto the Tabernacle, all the people rose vp, and stode euery one in his tent dore, and loked after Moses, tyll he was gone in to the Tabernacle. ¶ And whan Moses entred in to the Tabernacle, the cloudy pyler came downe, and stode in the dore of the Tabernacle, and he talked with Moses. And all the people sawe the cloudy pyler stonde in the dore of the Tabernacle, and rose vp, and worshipped, euery one in his tent dore.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses face to face, as a man speakeyth vnto his frende. And whan he turned agayne to the hoost, ¥ yonge mæ Iosua ¥ synne of Nun ¥ his minister, departed not out of ¥ Tabernacle. And Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: Beholde, thou saydest vnto me: Bryng ye people vp, and lettest me not knowe, whom thou wilt sende with me, § yet hast thou sayde: I knowe the by name, and thou hast founde grace in my sight. Let me knowe thy waye therfore, whereby I maye be certified, ¥ I fynde grace in thy sight: And consyder yet, that this people is thy people.

He sayde: My presence shal goe before the, there with wyll I lede the. But he sayde vnto him: ¥ thy presence goe not, then cary vs not vp from hence: for wherby shal it be knowne, y I and thy people hauie founde favour in thy sight, but in y thou goest with vs? that I a thy people maye hauie some preemynence before all people that are vpon the face of the earth. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I wyll do this also that thou hast sayde, for thou hast founde grace in my sight, and I knowe the by name.

He sayde: Oh let me thē se thy glory. And he sayde: I wyll cause all my good go ouer before thy face, and wyll let the name of y LORDE be called vpon before the. "And I shewe mercy, to whom I shewe mercy: and haue compassion, on whom I haue compassion. And he sayde morouer: Thou mayest not se my face, * for there shall no mā lyue, y seyth me. And y LORDE sayde farthermore: beholde, there is a place by me, there shal thou stōde vpon the rocke. Now whan my glory goeth forth, I wil put y in a clīfte of y rocke, a my hande shal holde styll vpō the, tyll I be passed by. And when I take awaye myne hande from the, thou shalt se my back partes, but my face shal not be sene.

The 1. Chapter.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Hewe the two tables of stone, b like as y first were, that I maye wryte in them the wordes, y were in the first tables, which thou brakest: and be ready in the mornynge, that thou mayest come vp early vnto mount Sinai, and stonde me vpon the toppe of the mount. And let no man come vp with the, that there be no man sene thowere all y mount: and let nether shepe ner oxen fede before the mount.

And Moses hewed two tables of stone, like as the first were, a arose early in the mornynge, a wente vp vnto mount Sinai, as y LORDE commaunded him, a toke y two tables of stone in his ūbde. Thē came the LORDE downe in a cloude. And there he stepte vnto him, a called vpō y name of y LORDE. And whan y LORDE passèd by before his face, he eryed: LORDE LORDE, God, mercifull a gracious, a longe sufferinge, and of greate mercy and truth, thou that kepest mercy in stoeare for thousandes, and forgesteuen wickednes, trespace and synne (before whom there is no man innocent) b thou that visitest the wickedenesse of the fathers vpon y children and children children, vnto the thirde and fourth generation.

And Moses bowed him self downe vnto the earth, and worshiped him, and sayde: LORDE, yf I haue founde grace in thy sight, the let the LORDE go with vs (for it is an hard necked people) that thou mayest haue mercy vpon oure wickednes and synnes, and let vs be thyne inheritance.

And he sayde: Beholde, I make a couenaunt before all thy people, a wil do wonders, such as haue not bene done in all londes, and amounge all people. And all y people amōge whom thou art, shal se y worke of y LORDE, for a terrnyble thinge shall it be, y I wyl do with the. Kepe that I commaunde y this daye. Beholde, I wyl east out before the: y Amorites, Cananites, Hethites, Phæretes, Huytes and Iebusites. ¶ Bewarre, that thou make no couenaunt with the indwellers of the lande y thou commest in to, lest they be cause of thy ryue in the myddest of the: but their alters shalt thou ouerthrowe, a breake downe their goddes, and rote out their groaues: for thou shalt worship no other god. For y LORDE is called gelous, because he is a gelous God: lest (yf thou make any agreement with the indwellers of the loude, and whan they go a whoringe after their goddes, and do sacrifice vnto their goddes) they s call y, and thou eate of their sacrifice, and lest thou take of their daughters vnto thy sonnes to wyues, and the same go a whoringe after their goddes, a make thy sonnes go a whoringe after their goddes also.

Thou shalt make y no goddes of metall. ¶ The feast of swete bred shalt thou kepe. Seuen daies shalt thou eate unleaued bred, like as I commaunded the in the tyrne of the moneth Abib: for in the moneth Abib thou wentest out of Egipte. All y first breaketh the Matrix, is myyne, soch as shalbe male amōge thy catell, y breake the Matrix, whether it be oxe or shepe. But the first of thyne Asse shalt thou bye out with a shepe: yf thou redeeme it not, then breake his necke. All the first borne of thy children shalt thou redeeme.

Sixe dayes shalt thou laboure, vpon ye seuenth daye shalt thou rest both from plowinge and reapyng. The feast of newes shalt thou kepe with the firstlings of the wheate harvest: and the feast of yngaderynge at ye yeares ende. Thryse in a yeare shall all youre men children appeare before the Gouernoure, euyn the LORDE and God of Israel.

When I shall cast out the Heithen before the, 3 enlarge thy borders, there shall no man desire thy lode: for so much as thou goest vp thre tymes in the yeare, to appeare before ye LORDE thy God. Thou shalt not offer the bloude of my sacrifice with leued bred. And the offerynge of the Easterfeast shall not remayne ouer night vntill the mornynge. The firstlings of ye first frutes of thy lode shalt thou brynge in to the house of the LORDE thy God. 4 Thou shalt not seith a kydd, whyle it is yet in his mothers mylke.

And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: wyyte these worde, for because of these worde haue I made a couenaunt with the 4 with Israel. And he was there with the LORDE fourtie dayes and fourtynye nightes, and ate no bred, and dranke no water. And he wrote in the tables the wordes of the couenaunt, euyn ten verses.

Now wha Moses came downe fro mount Sinai, he had the two tables of wytnesse in his hande, 5 wyster not ye skynye of his face shyned, because he had talked with him. And wha Aaron 6 all the childre of Israel sawe ye skynye of his face shyned, they were afrayed to come nye him. The Moses called them. And they returned vnto him, both Aaron 7 all the cheifest of the coggregacion. And he talked with them. Afterwarde came all the childre of Israel vnto him. And he commaundeth, 8 all ye LORDE had sayde vnto him vpon the mount Sinai. Now when he had made an ende of talkyng with th6, 9 he put a couerynge vpó his face. And when he wete in before 9 LORDE to talke with him, he toke ye couerynge of, till he wete out agayn. And when he came forth 9 spake with the childre of Israel what was commaundeth him, th6 the childre of Israel sawe his face, how ye skynye of his face shyned: so he put the couerynge vpó his face agayn,yll he wente in agayn to talke with him.

The 136. Chapter.

A ND Moses gathered all the coggregacion a of childre of Israel together, and sayde vnto them: This is it, 7 the LORDE hath commaunded you to do: 8 Sixe dayes shall ye worke, but the seventh daye shall ye kepe holy: a Sabbath of the LORDES rest. Who so euer doeth any worke therin, shall dye. Ye shal kyndle no fyre vpon the Sabbath daye in all youre dwellynges.

And Moses sayde vnto 8 whole coggregacion of the childre of Israel: This is it, that the LORDE hath commaunded: 9 Geue from amonge you Heue offerynes vnto 8 LORDE, so that every one brynge the LORDES Heue offerynes with a fre hert: golde, syluer, brasse, yallowe sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte sylke, and goates hayre, reed skynnes of rammes, doo skynnes, and Fyrre tre, oyle for the lampes, and spycyes for the amoyntinge oyle and for swete incense. Onix stones, and stones to be set in 8 ouerbody cote, and for the brestlappe.

And who so is wyse of hert amongst you, let him come, 9 make what the LORDE hath commaunded: namely, the Habitacion with the tent 8 couerynge thereof, the rynges, bordes, barres, pilers 10 sokettes: The Arke with the staves thereof, the Mercyseate 8 the vayle: the table with his stanes 8 all his apparell: 8 the shewbred: The caldilsticke of light and his apparell, and his lampes, 8 the oyle for the lightes: The altare of incense with his staines: The amoyntinge oyle and spycyes for incense: The hangynge before 8 Tabernacle dore: The alter of burntofferynge with his brasen gredyon, staves and all his apparell: The laver with his fote: The hanginges of the courte, with the pilers and sokettes therof, 9 the hangynge of the courte dore: The nales of the habitacion and of 9 courte with their coardes: The mynistringe garmente for the servyce in the Holy, 9 holy vestimentes of Aaron the prest with the vestimentes of his sonnes for 9 prestes office.

Then wente all the coggregacion of the childre of Israel out fro Moses, 9 enery one brought the gift of his hert: 9 all that they
And hee auer foide by him yalow slyke, scarlet, purple, whyte slyke, goates hayre, reed skynnes of rames, and Doo skynnes, brought it. And who so auer houe up slyuer a brasse, brought it for Heue offerynge vnto the LORDE. And who so auer founde Fyrre tre by him, brought it for all maner of worke of the Gods seruice. And soch wemen as were wyse herted, spanne with their hades, and brought their sponne worke of yalow slyke, scarlet, purple, and whyte slyke. And soch wemen as had hye vnderstondinge in wyszdome, spanne goates hayre.

As for prynces, they brought Onix stones, and set stones, for ouerbody coate, and for the brystlappe, and spyces, and oyle for lightes, and for the anoynfinge oyle, and for swete incense. Thus the children of Israel brought fre wylynge offerynge, both man and wemen, for all maner of worke, that the LORDE had commanded by Moses, to be made.

And Moses saide vnto the childrë of Israel: Beholde, LORDE hath called by name Bezaleel sonne of Vri, sonne of Hur of the trybe of Iuda, hath fylled him with the sprete of God, that he maie haue wyszdome, vnderstondinge, knowledge for all maner of worke, to worke conynglyngel golyne, slyuer and brasse, to grane precious stones and to set them, to carue in wodd, to make all maner of conynge worke, and hath geue instrucion in his hert, both him and Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisanach of the trybe of Dan. These hath he fylled with wyszdome of hert, to make all maner of worke, to carue, to broder, to worke with nedle worke, with yalow slyke, scarlet, purple and whyte slyke, and with weuyngge to make all maner of worke, and to deuyse conynge worke.

Then wrought Bezaleel and Ahaliab all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wyszdome and vnderstondinge to knowe, how they shulde make all maner worke for the seruice of the Sanctuary, acordinge vnto all the LORDE commaunded. And Moses called for Bezaleel and Ahaliab, all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wyszdome in their hertes, namely, all sox as wyllingly offered them selues there, came to laboure in the worke. And they receaued of Moses all the Heue offerynge, that the children of Israel had brought for the worke of the seruice of the Sanctuary, that it might be made: every morninge brought they their willinge offerynes vnto him.

Then came all the wyse men wrought in the worke of the Sanctuary, every one fro his worke that he made, and every vnto Moses: The people bryngeth to moch, more the nede is for the worke of this seruice, which the LORDE hath commaunded to make. The commaunded Moses, that it shulde be proclaimed thorow out the hoost: No man bryngeth more to the Heue offerynge of the Sanctuary. Then were the people forbydden to bryngeth: for there was stuff ynoough for all maner of worke, that was to be made, and to moch.

So all wyse herted men amonge the wrought in worke of the Habitation, made ten curtaynes of whyte twyned slyke, yalow slyke, scarlet, purple, with Cherubyns of brodered worke. The length of one curtayne was eight and twentye cubites, and the breeth foure cubites, were all of one measure: he coupled the curtaynes fyue and fyue together one to the other.

And made yalow loupes a longe by edge of every curtayne, where they shulde be coupled together: fiftie loupes vp euery curtayne, whereby one might be coupled to another. And made fiftie buttons of golde, and with the buttons he coupled the curtaynes together one to the other, that it might be one couerynge.

And he made curtaynes of goates hayre (for the tent ounte the habitation) of thirtie cubytes longe, foure cubytes brode, all of one measure, coupled fuyre together by them selues, and sixe by them selues, made fiftie loupes a longe by edge of euery curtayne, whereby they might be coupled together, made fiftie buttons of brasse, to couple fuyre together withall. And made ouer tent a couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes, and ouer that a couerynge of Doo skynnes.
And made stondinge bordes for the Habitation, of Fyrre tre, evry one ten cubytes longe, and a cubyte and a half brode, and two fete vnto every one, wherby one might be ioyned to another: that on the south syde there stode twentye of the same bordes: and made fortye syluer sokettes there vnder, vnder evrye bordo two sokettes for his two fete. In like maner for the other syde of the Habitation toward the north, he made twentye bordes also with fortye syluer sokettes, vnder evrye bordo two sokettes: But behynde the Habitation vpon the west syde, he made sixe bordes, and two other for the corners of the Habitation behynde, that either of them both might be ioyned with his corner bordore from vnder vp, and aboue vpon the heade to come together with a clame: so that there were eight bordes, and sixtene sokettes of syluer, vnder evrye one two sokettes.

And he made barres of Fyrre tre, fyne for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Habitation, and fyne vpon the other syde, and fyne behynde toward the west: and made the barres to shute thorow the bordes, from the one ende to the other, and ouerlayde the bordes with golde. But their rynges made he of golde for the barres, and ouerlayde them with golde.

And made Cherubyns vpon the hangyng with broderd worke, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte twyned sylke. And made for the same, foure pilers of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayde them with golde, and their knoppes of golde, and cast foure sokettes of syluer for them.

And made an hanginge in the Tabernacle dore, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke, of nedle worke, and fyne pilers therto with their knoppes (vpon ouerlayde their knoppes and whopes with golde) and fyne sokettes of brasse there to.

The 1736. Chapter.

And Bezaleel made the Arke of Fyrre tre, two cubytes and a half loge, a cubyte and a half brode, and a cubyte a half hye, and ouerlayde it with fyne golde within and without, and made a crowne of golde vnto it rounde aboute, and cast for it foure rynges of golde to the foure corners of it, vpon every syde two. And made staves of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayde the on with golde, and put them in the rynges a longe by the sydes of the Arke, to beare it withall. And he made Mercyseate of pure golde two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubyte and a half brode, made two Cherubyns of fyne beaten golde vpon the two endes of the Mercyseate: One Cherub vpon the one ende, and the other Cherub vpon the other ende: and the Cherubyns spredde out their wynges aboue an hye, and couered the Mercyseate ther with: and their faces stode one ouer agaynst the other, and loked vnto the Mercyseate.

And he made a table of Fyrre tre, two cubytes longe, a cubyte brode, and a cubyte a half hye, and ouerlayde it with fyne golde, and made there a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and made vnto it an whoope of an hande bredth hye, and made a crowne of golde rounde aboute the whoope. And for it he cast foure golde rynges, put them in the foure corners by the fete harde by the whoope, that the staves might be therin, to beare the table withall: made the staves of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayde the with golde, to beare the staves withall. And the vessels vpon the table made he also of fyne golde: the disshes, spones, flat peces and pottes, to pour in and out withall.

And he made the candilistick of fyne beaten golde, where vpon was the shaft with braunches, cuppes, knoppes, flooure. Sixe braunches proceaded out of the sydes therto, vpon either syde thre braunches: vpon every braunch were thre cuppes like allmôdes, with knoppes and floour. Vpon the candilistick self were foure cuppes with knoppes and floours, vnder every two braunches a knopp. The knoppes braunches therto proceaded out of it, and were all one pce of fyne beaten golde. And he made the seuen lampes with their snoffers with outquenchers of pure golde. Of an hidreth weight of golde made he it, and all the apparell thereof.

He made also the altare of incense, of Fyrre tre, a cubyte longe and brode, eauen foure squared, and two cubytes hye with the hornes of it, and ouerlayde it with fyne golde, the toppe and the sydes of it rounde aboute, and the hornes therto, and made a crowne vnto it rounde aboute of pure golde, two golde rynges vnder the crowne on both the sydes, to put the staves therin, and to beare it withall: the stanes mad he of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayde them with golde.

A ND the altare of burntoffrynges made he of Fyrre tre, \( \varphi \) fyue cubytes loge \( \zeta \) brode, eauen foure squared, \( \zeta \) thre cubytes hye. And made foure homes, which proceeded out of the foure corners therof, and ouerlaied it with brasse. And he made all maner of vessels for the altare, cauldrons, shouels, basens, fleshokes, and colepannes all of brasse. And vnto the altare he made a brasen gredyon of net worke rounde aboute, from vnder vp vnto the myddest of the altare, \( \zeta \) cast foure rynges in the foure corners of the brasen gredyon, for the stanes: which he made of Fyrre tre, and ouerlaied them with brasse, and put them in the rynges by the sydes of the altare, to beare it withall, and made it holowe with bordes.

And he made the Lauer of brasse, \( \tau \) his fote also of brasse vpon the place of \( \delta \) hooft, that laye before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

And he made the courtre on \( \delta \) south syde: hangynges an hundreth cubytes longe, of whyte twyned sylke, with the twyte pilers therof, and twentye sokettes of brasse: but the knoppes and whoopes of syluer. In like maner vpon the north syde an hundreth cubytes with twentye pilers, and twentye sokettes of brasse, but their knoppes \( \tau \) whoopes of syluer. Vpon the west syde fiftie cubytes with ten pilers and \( \tau \) sokettes, but their knoppes and whoopes of syluer. Vpon the East syde fiftie cubytes. Fiftene cubytes vpon either syde of the courte dore, with thre pilers and thre sokettes: So that all the hanginges of the courte were of whyte twyned sylke, and the sokettes of the pilers were of brasse, \( \zeta \) their knoppes and whoopes of syluer: their heads were ouerlaied with syluer, \( \tau \) all the pilers of the courte were whooped aboute with syluer.

And the hangyng in \( \delta \) courte gate made he with nedle worke, of yalowe sylke, scarlet, \( \zeta \) purple, \( \beta \) whyte twyned sylke, twentye cubytes longe, \( \varphi \) fyue cubytes hye, after the measure of the hanginges of the courtre: foure pilers also therto, \( \tau \) foure sokettes of brasse, and their knoppes of syluer, and their heads ouerlaied, and their whoopes of syluer. And all the nales of the Habitation and of the courte rounde aboute, were of brasse.

This is now the summe of the Habitation of wytnesse (which was counted at the c\-maundem\-et of Moses to \( \delta \) Gods seruice of the Leuites vnder the h\-ade of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest) which Bezaleel the sonne of Vri, the sonne of Hur of the trybe of Iuda made, all as the LORDE com\-manded Moses. And with him Ahalia\-y the sonne of Ahisamach of the trybe of Dan, a connyng grauer, to worke nedle worke, with yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, \( \beta \) whyte sylke.

All the golde \( \varphi \) was wrought in all this worke of the Sanctuary (which was geuen to the Wawe offerlyng) is nyne \( \tau \) twenty hundreth weight, seuen hundreth \( \zeta \) thirtie Sycles, after \( \delta \) Sycle of \( \delta \) Sanctuary. * The syluer \( \varphi \) came of the congregacion, was fyue score hundreth weight, a thousande, seuen hundreth, fyue and seuentye Sycles, after \( \delta \) Sycle of the Sanctuary: so many heads so many half Sycles, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary, of all that were nombred from twenty yeare olde and aboue, euen syxe hundreth thousande, thre thousande, fyue hundreth and fiftie.

Of the fyue score hundreth weight of syluer, were cast the sokettes of the Sanctuary, and the sokettes of the mayle, an hundreth sokettes of the fyue score hundreth weight, an hundreth weight to euery sokett. Of the thousande, seuen hundreth and fyue and seuentye Sycles were made the knoppes of the pilers (and their heads ouerlaied) and their whoopes.

As for the Wawe offerlyng of brasse, it was seuentye hundreth weight, two thousande and foure hundreth Sycles: Whereof were made the sokettes in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the brasen altare, and the brasen gredyon therto, and all the vessels of the altare, and the sokettes of \( \delta \) courte rounde aboute, and the sokettes of \( \delta \) courte gate, all \( \delta \) nales of the Habitation, \( \tau \) all \( \delta \) nales of \( \delta \) courte rounde aboute.

O f the yalowe sylke, scarlet, \( \zeta \) purple, they \( \alpha \) made Aarons mynstringe vestimentes, to do seruyce in the Sanctuary, as \( \delta \) LORDE comaunded Moses.

And he made the ouer body cote, of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, \( \beta \) whyte twyned sylke, and bett the golde in to thinne plates, and cut it in to wyres, that it might be wrought among the yelowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte sylke, a made it so, that y ouerbody cote came together by the edges on both the sydes. And his gyrdel was after the same craft a worke: euë of golde, yelowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte twyned sylke, as the LORDE commanded Moses.

And they wrought two Onix stones, set rounde aboute with golde, grauen by the stone grauer with the names of the children of Israel: and fastened them vpö the shullders of the ouerbody cote, that they might be stones of remembrance vnto the children of Israel, as the LORDE commanded Moses.

And they made the brestlappe after the craft a worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yelowe sylke, scarlet, purple, a whyte twyned sylke, so that it was four square a dubble, an hande breth longe and brode, and fyllèd it with foure rowes of chynes. The firste rowe was: a Sardis, a Topas, and a Smaragde. The seconde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dyo-

And the brestlappe they made wrythen cheynes of pure golde, and two hokes of golde, a two golde rynges, and fastened the two rynges vpö the two edges of the brestappe: and y two wrythen cheynes put they in the two rynges vpö the corners of the brestlappe. But the two endes of y wrythen cheynes put they to the two hokes, a fastened them vpö the corners of the ouer body cote, one ouer agaynst another.

And they made two other rynges of golde, a fastened them to the other two corners of the brestlappe by the edge of it, that it might hange vpö the out syde of the ouerbody cote. And they made yet two other golde rynges, which they put beneth vpö the two corners of the ouerbody cote, one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together, that the brestlappe might be fastened by his rynges vnto y rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yelowe lace, that it might lye close vpö y ouerbody cote, and not be lowesed from y ouerbody cote, as the LORDE commanded Moses.

And he made the tunycle vnto the ouerbody cote, wrought all of yelowe sylke, a the hole therof abone in the myddest, a a bonde foldé together rounde aboute the hole, that it shulde not rente. And beneth vpö y hemme of it, they made pomgranates of yelow sylke, scarlet, purple, a whyte twyned sylke: a they made bellés of pure golde, which they put betwixte y pomgranates rounde aboute vpon the hemme of the tunycle, a bell a pomgranate, a bell a pomgranate rounde aboute, to do seruice in, as the LORDE commanded Moses.

And they made abes also wrought of whyte sylke for Aaron a his sonnes, a y myter of whyte sylke, and the goodly bonetts of whyte sylke, and breeches of twyned whyte lynnen, and the girdle of nedle worke euyn of whyte twyned sylke, yelow sylke, scarlet, and purple, as the LORDE commanded Moses.

They made the fore heade plate also to y holy crowne, of pure golde, and wrote therin with grauen worke: the holynes of the LORDE, and fastened a yelowe lace theron, to tye it vnto the myter aboue, as the LORDE commanded Moses.

Thus the whole worke of y Habitacion of y Tabernacle of wytnesse, was fynished. And the children of Israel dyd all that the LORDE commanded Moses, a brought the Habitacion vnto Moses: the Tabernacle a all the apparell therof, the buttons, bordes, barres, pilers, sokettes, y couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes, the couerynge of doo skynnes, a the vayle, y Arke of wytnesse with the staues therof, the Mercyseate, the table a all his apparell, a the shewbred, the candilistcke, with the lampes prepared, and all his apparell, a oyle for the lightes, the golden altare, the anoyntinge oyle a incense, the hanginge in the Tabernacle dore, the brasen altare, a his brasen gredyron with his staues, a all his apparell, a lauer with his foote, the hangynge of y courte with the pilers a sokettes therof, y hanginge in the courte gate with his pilers a nales, a all the ordynance for the seruice of the Habitacion of y Tabernacle of wytnesse, y mynistring vestiments of Aaro y prest, to do seruice in y Sanctuary, a the garmetes of his sonnes, y they might execute y prestes office. Acordinge to all that y LORDE commanded Moses, euë so dyd the children of Israel in all this seruice. And Moses sawe all y worke, y they dyd it euë as y LORDE had commanded, and he blessed them.
The 11. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, saying: In the fyrste dayes of the first moneth shalt thou set vp the Tabernacle of the Habitacion of wynteses, and shal put the Arke of wyntes therin, and hange the vayle before the Arke. And thou shalt bringe in the table, and garnish it, and brynge in the candlestickes, and put the lampes theron. And goldc altare of incense shalt thou set before the Arke of wyntesse, and hange vp the hanginge in the dore of the Habitacion. But the alate of burntofferynges shalt thou set before the dore of the Habitacion of the Tabernacle of wyntesse: and the lauer betwixte the Tabernacle of wyntesse and the altare, and put water therin, set the courte rounde aboute, and hange vp the hanginge in the courte gate.

And thou shalt take the anointynge oyle, and anoynte the Habitacion and all that is there in, and shalt consecrate it, and all the apparell therof, that it maye be holy. And thou shalt anoynte the altare of burntofferynges and all his vessels, and consecrate it, that it maye be most holy. The lauer also his fote shalt thou anoynte consecrate.

And thou shalt bryngé Aaron his sonnes vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of wyntesse, and wash them with water, put the holy vestimentes vpon Aaron, and anoynte him, and consecrate him, that he maye be my prest. And thou shalt bryngé his sonnes also, and put the albes vpon them, and anoynte them, as thou hast anoynted their father, they maye be my prestes. And this anointynge shall they haue for an everlastinge presthede amonge their posteritie.

And Moses dyd all as the LORDE commaunded him.

Thus was the Tabernacle set vp in the seconde yeare vpon the first daye of the first moneth. And when Moses reared it vp, he fastened the sokettes and the bordes, and barres, and set vp the pilers, and spred out the tent over the Habitacion, and put the cornerynge of the tent aboue an hye, as the LORDE commaunded him. And he take the wyntesse, and layed it in the Arke, and put the staues in the Arke, and set the Mercysate aboue vpon the Arke, and brought the Arke in to the Habitacion, and hanged the vayle before the Arke of wyntes, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set the table in the Tabernacle of wyntesse, in the corner of the Habitacion vpon the north syde without the vayle, and prepared bred theron before the LORDE as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set in the candilistickes also, euene ouer agaynst the table, in the corner of the Habitacion vpon the south syde, and put the lampes theron before the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded him. And the golden altare set he in also before the vayle, and brenet sweete incense theron, as the LORDE commaunded him. And hanged vp the hanginge in the Tabernacle dore. As for the altare of burntofferynges, he set it before the dore of the Habitacion of the Tabernacle of wyntesse, and offred burntofferynges and meate offerfrynges theron, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And the lauer set he betwixte the Tabernacle of wyntesse and the altare, and put water therin to wash withall. And Moses, Aaron and his sonnes washed their hades and fete ther at: for they ought to wash the, when they wente in to the Tabernacle of wyntesse, or when they wente vnto the altare, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set vp the courte rounde aboute the Habitacion and the altare, and hanged vp the hanginge in the courte gate. Thus Moses fynished the whole worke.

Then a cloude covered the Tabernacle of wyntesse, and the glory of the LORDE filled the Habitacion. And Moses could not go in to the Tabernacle of wyntesse, whyle the cloude abode theron, and the glory of the LORDE filled the Habitacion.

And whan the cloude remoued from the Habitacion, then wente the children of Israel forth, as oft as they toke their iournye. But if the cloude remoued not, then toke not they their iournye, tyll the daie that it remoued: for in the daye tyme was the cloude of the LORDE vpon the Habitacion, in the night season was fyre therin, in the sight of all house of Israel, in all their iournies.

The first Chapter.

And the LORDE called Moses, and spake vnto him out of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde: Speake vnto thy childre of Israel, saie vnto them: Who so euer amoge you wyl brynge an offerynge vnto the LORDE, let him brynge it of thy catell, euen of the oxen, of the shepe.

If he wyl brynge a burnt-offerynge of thy oxen (or greate catell) th[e] let him of a male without a blemish, before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, to reconyle him self before the LORDE, let him laye his hande vpon the heade of the burnt-offerynge, then shal he be reconyled, so God shalbe mercifull vnto hym.

And he shall kyll the yonge oxe before the LORDE: and the prestes Aarons sonnes shal bryngye the bloude, and sprengle it rounde aboute vpon the altare, that is before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the skynne shalbe layde from of the burnt-offerynge, and it shalbe hewen in peces. And the sonnes of Aaron the prest shal make a fyre vpon the altare, and laye wod abowe theron: and the peces, the heade, and the falt shal they laye vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre on the altare. But the bowels, legs, and bowels shal be waszshen with water, and the prest shal burne alltogether vpon the altare for a burnt-sacrifice:

this is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

If he wyl ofere a burnt-sacrifice of the small catell, that is, of the lambe or goate, then let hym ofere a male without a blemish. And he shall kyll it before the LORDE, euyn at the corner of the altare on the norte syde before the LORDE. And the prestes Aarons sonnes shal sprengle his bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and it shal be hewen in peces. And the prest shall laye them with the heade and the falt, vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre on the altare. But the bowels and the legges shal be waszshen with water. And the prest shal ofere it alltogether, and burne it vpon the altare for a burnt-sacrifice. This is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

But if he wyl offere a burnt-sacrifice of foules vnto the LORDE, then let hym ofere it of the turtill doues or of yonge pigeons. And the prest shal brynge it vnto the altare, and wrynge the neck of it a sander, that it maye be burnt vpon the altare, and let the bloude of it runne out vpon the sydes of the altare, and the cropp of it with the fetheres shalbe cast vpon the heape of aszshes byside the altare towaerde the east, and he shall deuyde the wynge of it, but not breke the cleane of. And thus shall the prest burne it vpon the altare, euyn vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre, for a burnt-sacrifice. This is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

* Exo. 29. g.  † Exo. 29. b.  Leui. 3. a.
WHAN a soule wyll offre a meatofferynge vnto the LORDE, then shal it be of fyne floure, and he shal poure oyle vpon it, and put frankencense theron, so brynge it vnto Aarons sonnes the prestes. Then shal one of them take his hande full of the same floure, and oyle with all the frankècense, and burne it for a remembrance vpon the altar. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. *As for *y remnant of the meatofferenge, it shalbe Aarons and his sonnes. This shalbe *y most holy of the offerenges of the LORDE.

But *y he wyll brynge a meatofferenge of that which is baken in the ouen, then let him take swete cakes of wheate, mixte with oyle, and vnleuended wafers anoynted with oyle.
Neuertheles *y thy meatofferenge be eny thinge of that which is fryed in the panne, then shal it be of fyne swete floure myxte with oyle: And thou shalt cut it in peces, *y poure oyle theron: so is it a meatofferenge.
But *y thy meatofferenge be ought broyled on the gredyon, then shalt thou make it of fyne floure with oyle. And the meatofferenge that thou wilt make of suche thinges for the LORDE, shalt thou brynge vnto *y prest, which shal brynge it vnto the altar, *y shal Heue vp the same meatofferenge for a remembraunce, and burne it vpon the altar. This is an offerenge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. *As for the remnant, it shal be Aarons and his sonnes. This shal be the most holy of the offerenges of the LORDE.
All the meatofferenges that ye wil offre vnto the LORDE, shal ye make without leue.
For there shal no leue nor hony be burnt for an offerenge vnto the LORDE. But for the offerenge of the firstlinges shal ye offer the vnto the LORDE. Neuertheles they shal come vpon no altar for a swete sauoure.

All thy meatofferenges shalt thou *t salt.
And thy meatofferenge shalt neuer be without *t salt of the couenaunt of thy God: for in all thy offerenges shalt thou offre salt.

But *y thou wilt offre a meatofferenge of the first frutes vnto *y LORDE, then shalt thou drye that which is grene, by the fyre, *y beate it small, and so offre the meatofferenge of thy first frutes. And thou shalt put oyle vpon it, and laye frankencense theron, so is it a meatofferenge. And then shall the prest beate it, and burne of the oyle with all the frankècense for a remembrance. This is an offerenge vnto the LORDE.

BUT *y his offerenge be a deedofferenge of greate catell (whether it be oxe or cowe) then shal he offre soch as is without blemish before the LORDE, *y shall laye his hande vpon the heade of it, and kyll it before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prestes Aarons sonnes, shall sprenkle the bloude rounde aboute vpon the altar, and shal offre of *y deedofferenge vnto the LORDE:
namely, all the fat that is within, and the two kydneys with the fat that is theron vpon the loynes, and the nett on the leuer vpó the kydneys also. And Aarons sonnes shall burne it vpon the altar for a burnotfferenge, even upon the wod that lyeth on the fyre. This is an offerenge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

*Y his deedofferenge be of small catell, whether it be male or female, it shal be without blemish: *Yf it be a lambe, then shall he brynge it before the LORDE, *y shall laye his hande vpon the heade of it, and sleye it before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aarons sonnes shal sprenkle his bloude rounde aboute upon the altar, and so offre of the deedofferenge vnto the LORDE: namely, all the fat that is within, and the two kydneys with the fat that is theron vpon the loynes, *y the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneys also. And the prest shall burne it vpon the altar, for *y meate of the offerenge vnto *y LORDE.

But *yf his offerenge be a goate, and bringeth it before the LORDE, he shal laye his hande upon the heade of it, and kyll it before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aarons sonnes shall sprèkle the bloude rounde aboute vpó the altar, *y shall offer therof a sacrifice vnto the LORDE: namely, the fat *y couereth the bowels, and all the fat *y is within, the two kydneys with the fat that is theron vpon the loynes, *y the net on the leuer vpon the kydneys. And the prest shall burne it vpó the altare, for the meate of the sacrifice to a swete sauoure.

*All the fat is the LORDES. Let this be a perpetuall lawe amonge youre posteritie in all youre dwellyngees, that ye eate no fatt, ner bloude.

The iii. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & sayde: Speake vnto the childrē of Israel, and saye: Whan a soule synneth thorow ignorauence in any commandement of the LORDE, which he ought not to do: As namely, ye a prest which is anoynted, synne, that he make the people do amyse, he shall bryng for synne that he hath done, a yonge bullocke without blemyshe vnto the LORDE for a synofferynge. And the bullocke shal he bryng to the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE, & laie his hāde vpō his heade, & kyll him before be LORDE. And ye prest ye is anoynted, shall take of his bloude, & bryng it in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And he shall dyppe his fynger in to the bloude, & sprenkle therwith seue tymes before the LORDE, towards the vayle of ye Holy. And he shall put of the same bloude vpon the horns of the altere of incense, y stondeth before be LORDE in the Tabernacle of wytnesse: & all the bloude of the bullocke shal he poure vpon the botome of the altar of burntofferinges, y stondeth at the entrine in of ye Tabernacle of wytnesse. And all the fat of the synofferynge shal he Heue vp: namely, the fat y couereth the bowels, & all the fat y is within, y two kydeynes with the fat that is thron vpon the lōynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydeynes also (like as he Heueth it from the oxe in the deadofferynge) and shall burne it vpon the altar of burntofferinges. But the skynne of the bullocke, & all the flesh, with the heade & legges, & the bowels and the donge, shall he cary altogether out of the hoost, in to a cleane place, where y aszshes are poured out, & shal burne it vpō wodd with fyre.

Whan the whole congregacion of Israel synneth thorow ignorauence, & the dede be hyd from their eyes, so y they do ought agaynst any of the commandementes of the LORDE, which they shulde not do, & come afterwaerde to the knowledge of the synne that they haue done, they shall bringe a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and set him before ye dore of ye Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the Elders of the congregacion shall laye their handes vpon his heade before the LORDE, κ kyll y bullocke before the LORDE. And ye prest ye is anoynted shal bryng of ye bullockes bloude in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, κ dyppe ther in with his fynger, and sprenkle therwith seven tymes before the LORDE, euë before the vayle of the Holy. And shall put of the bloude vpon the horns of the altar, y stondeth before the LORDE, in the Tabernacle of wytnesse: & all y other bloude shal he poure vpō the botome of ye altar of burntofferinges, y stondeth before the dore of ye Tabernacle of wytnesse. But all his fett shal he Heue vp, & burne it vpō the altar: ye shal do with this bullocke, as he dyd with ye bullocke of the synofferynge: Thus the prest shall make an attoneuent for them, & it shall be forgenen them. And the bullocke shall he bryng without the hoost, and burne him, as he brenet ye first bullocke. This shalbe ye synofferynge of the congregacion. Whan a prynce synneth, & doth agaynst the commandement of the LORDE his God, ye he ought not to do, ye offendeth ignorauently, ye commeth to the knowledge of his synne ye he hath done, he shall bringe for his offeringe an he goate without blemyshe, ye laye his hande vpō the goates heade, ye slaye him in ye place where ye burntofferinges are slayne before ye LORDE. Thē shal ye prest take of ye bloude of ye synofferynge with his fynger, and put it vpon the altar of burntofferinges, ye poure the other bloude vpon the botome of the altar of burntofferinges. But all the fat of it shal he burne vpō the altar, like as the fat of the healthofferynge. And so the prest shall make an attoneuent for his synne, and it shall be forgenen him.

Whāi a soule of ye comon people synneth ignorauently, doinge any thinge agaynst the commandement of the LORDE, ye he ought not to do, ye so offendeth, ye commeth to ye knowledge of the synne ye he hath done, he shall bringe for his offeringe a she goate without blemyshe, for the synne ye he hath done, and shal laye his hande vpon the heade of the synofferynge, ye slaye it in the place of the burntofferinges. And the prest shall take of
The bloude with his fynge, \( \text{&} \) put it vpon the hones of \( \text{&} \) | altare of burntofferynges, \( \text{&} \) | pour all the bloude vpon the botome of the altar.
But all the fat of it shal he take awaie, like as he taketh awaie the fat of the dead offerynge, and shal burne it vpon the altar for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. And so shal the prest make an attonement for him, and it shal be forgenue him.

But \( \text{&} \) he brynge a lambe for a synofferynge, then let him brynge a female without blemyshe, and laye his hande vpon the heade of the synofferynge, \( \text{&} \) kyll it for a synofferynge, in the place where the burntofferynges are slyayne.
And the prest shall take of \( \text{&} \) | bloude with his fynge, \( \text{&} \) put it vpon the hones of the altar of burntofferynges, \( \text{&} \) pour all the bloude vpon the botome of the altar. But all \( \text{&} \) fat therof shall he take fro it, like as he dyd the fat of the lambe of the healthofferyng, \( \text{&} \) shall burne it vpon \( \text{&} \) altare for the LORDES sacrifice. And so \( \text{&} \) prest shal make an at tonement for the synne that he hath done,
and it shal be forgenue him.

The b. Chapter.

WHAN a soule synneth, \( \text{&} \) he hære a cursynge, and is wytnesse therof, or hath sene it, or knowe it, \( \text{&} \) telleth it not, \( \text{&} \) he is gillie of a trespace. Or when a soule
* toucheth eny vnclene thighe, whether it be \( \text{&} \) carion of an vnclene beast, or catell, or worme, \( \text{&} \) was not awarre of it, he is vnclene, and hath offended. Or when he toucheth an vnclene man (what vn clenesse so euer a man is defyled withall) \( \text{&} \) was not awarre of it, \( \text{&} \) afterwarde cometh to \( \text{&} \) knowelege therof, \( \text{&} \) same hath offended. Or when a soule swareth, so \( \text{&} \) he pronounceth with his mouth to do euell or good (what so euer it be that a man pronounceth with an oath) \( \text{&} \) was not awarre of it, \( \text{&} \) afterwarde cometh to the know lege therof, he hath offended in one of these.

Now whan it so is, \( \text{&} \) he hath offended in one of these, \( \text{&} \) is enfourmed therof, what he hath synned, he shal bringe vnto \( \text{&} \) LORDE for his trespace of this his synne \( \text{&} \) he hath done, a female from the flocke, either a yewe or a she goate for a synofferynge: so shal the prest make an attonement for him concernynge his synne. \( \text{&} \) But \( \text{&} \) he be not able to brynge a shepe, then let him brynge vnto \( \text{&} \) LORDE

\( \text{&} \) Leui. 24. c. \( \text{&} \) Agg. 2. b. \( \text{&} \) 2 Cor. 6. c. \( \text{&} \) Leui. 12. d. \( \text{&} \) Exo. 30. b.

for his offence that he hath done, two turtill doues or two yonge pigeons: one for a syn offerynge, the other for a burntofferynge, and brynge them to the prest: Which shal make the first a synofferynge, and fyst wringe the neck of it, so that he plucke it not cleane of,
and sprenkle with the bloude vpon the sydes of the altar, and let the residue of the bloude blyde out vpon the botome of the altar:

This is the synofferynge. As for the other, he shal make it a burntofferynge, after the maner therof. And thus shal the prest make an attonement for him concernynge the synne that he hath done, \( \text{&} \) it shall be forgenue him.

But \( \text{&} \) he be not able to brynge two turtill doues or two yonge pigeons, then let him brynge his offeringe for his synne, a tenth deale of an Epha of fyne floure for a syn offerynge. But he shall put no oyle theron, ner laye frankenciene vpon it, for it is a syn offerynge. And he shal brynge it vnto the prest, \( \text{&} \) prest shal take his hād full of it for a remembrance, and burne it vpon the altar for an offeringe vnto the LORDE. This is a synofferinge. And so shal the prest make an attonement for him, concernynge his synne that he hath done, \( \text{&} \) it shal be forgenue him.

And the remaunt shall be the prestes, like a meatofferynge.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, \( \text{&} \) sayde:
| If a soule trespace, so \( \text{&} \) thorow ignoraunce he offendeth in any thinge \( \text{&} \) is halowed vnto the LORDE, he shal brynge his trespaceofferinge vnto the LORDE, euen a ramme from \( \text{&} \) flocke without blemyshe, worth two Sycle of syluer; after the Sycle of the Sanctuary, for a trespace offerenge: and loke what he hath offended in the halowed thinge, he shall make restitucion, \( \text{&} \) gene the fifth parte more thereto. And he shall deluyer it vnto \( \text{&} \) prest, which shall make an attonement for him with the ramme of the trespace offeringe, \( \text{&} \) it shall be forgenue him.

Whan a soule synneth, and doth ought agaynst eny comanaundement of the LORDE, \( \text{&} \) he shulde not do, \( \text{&} \) is infourmed therof, he hath trespassed, \( \text{&} \) is giltie of the synne. And he shal brynge from the flocke a ramme with out blemyshe (that is worth a trespaceofferinge) vnto the prest, which shal make an at tonement for him concernynge his ignoraunce which he dyd, and was not awarre, and it shalle forgen him. This is the trespace-offerynge, because he trespaied agaynst the LORDE.

Ye And y LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Whan a soule synned, or trespaied agaynst the LORDE, so that he denuyed vnto his ne Nabour that which he gaued him to kepe, or that was put vnder his hande, or that he hath violently taken awaye, or gotten vnrighteously, or founde that was lost, and denyth it with a false ooth, what so euer it be, wherin a man synned agaynst his ne Nabour. Now whan it commeth so to passe, "that he synned after this manner, or trespaied, he shal restore agayne that he toke violently awaye, or gat wrongeously, or that was geuen him to kepe, or that he hath founde, or what so euer it be aboute y which he hath sorne falsely, he shall restore it agane whole altogether, and geue the fift parte more therto, even to him that it belonged vnto, the same daye that he synned his trespace offerynge. But for his trespace he shall brynge for the LORDE (euen vnto the prest) a ramme from the flocke without blemyshe, that is worth a trespass offerynge. Then shal the prest make an attonement for him before the LORDE, and all that he hath synned in, shalbe forgen him.

The 6th Chapter.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commaunde Aaron and his sonnes, and sayde: This is the lawe of the burntofferynge. The burntofferynge shall burne vpon the altaile all night vntyll the mornynge. But the fyre of the altaile onely shall burne tharon. And prest shall put on his lyen albe, and his lyen breches vpon his flesh, and shal take vp the asishes, that the fyre of the burntofferynge vpon the altaile hath made, and shal pour them beside the altaile. Then shal he put of his rayment, and put on other rayment, and carry out the asishes without the hoost, in to a cleane place. The fyre vpon the altaile shal burne, and neuer go out. The prest shall kyndle wod theron euery mornynge, and dresse the burntofferynge vpon it, and burne the fur of the deed offerynges tharon. The fyre shal euere burne vpon the altaile, and neuer go out.

And this is the lawe of the meatofferynge, which Aarons sonnes shall offer before the LORDE vpon the altaile. One of them shall Heue his handfull of fyne floure of y meatofferynge, and of the oyle, and all the frankencense that lyeth vpon the meatofferynge, and shall burne it vpon the altaile for a sweate saunoure a remembrance vnto the LORDE. As for the remnauent, Aaron and his sonnes shall eat it, and vnleuued shall they eat it in the holy place, namely, in the courte of the Tabernacle of witnesse. With lesch shall they not bake their porcion, which I haue geuen them of my offerynges. It shalbe vnto them most holy, as the synofferynge and trespass offerynge. All the males amonge the children of Aaron shall eate of it. Let this be a perpetuall lawe for youre posteritie in the sacrifices of the LORDE. No man shall touch it, excepte he be consecrated.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: This shalbe the offerynge of Aaron and of his sonnes, which they shall offer vnto the LORDE in the daie of their anoyntinge. The tenth parte of an Epha of fyne floure for a meatofferynge daylie, the one half parte in the mornynge, the other half parte at euyn. In the panne with oyle thou shalt make it, and brynge it fryed, and in peces shalt thou offer it for the sweate saunoure of the LORDE. And the prest which amonge his sonnes shalbe anoynted in his steade, shall do this. This is a perpetuall dewtye vnto the LORDE. It shalbe burnt alltogether: for all the meatofferynges of the prest shalbe consumed with the fyre, and not be eaten.

And y LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes, and sayde: This is the lawe of the synofferynge: In the place where thou slayest y burntofferynge, shalt thou slaye the synofferynge also before the LORDE. This is most holy.

The prest that offereth the synofferynge, shal eat it in the holy place, in the courte of y Tabernacle of wytnesse. No man shal touch y flesh therof, excepte he be halowed. And yf euy garment be sprenkled with the bloude of it, it shalbe washe in the holy place, And the earthe pot that it is sodden in, shalbe broken. But yf it be a brasen pot, it shalbe scoured, and resed with water. All y males amonge the prestes shall eate therof, for it is most holy. Notwithstandinge all synofferynge whose bloude is brought in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse to make an attonement, shall not be eaten, but burnt with fyre.

The vii. Chapter.

A ND this is the lawe of the trespace-offerynge, and it shal be most holy. In the place where the burntofferynge is slayne, shall the trespaceofferynge be slayne also, q there shall of his bloude be sprenkled rounde aboute vpon the altare. And all his fat shal shalbe offered: the rompe and the fat \( \tilde{y} \) couereth the bowels, the two kyndneys with the fat \( \tilde{y} \) is theron vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kyndneys also. And the prest shall burne it vpon the altare for an offerynge vnto the LORDE. This is a trespace-offerynge.

All the males amonge the prestes shal eate it in the holy place, for it is most holy: euen as the synofferynge, so shall the trespace-offerynge be also, they shall both haue one lawe: and it shal be the prestes, that reconcyleth with thyr. Loke which prest offereth eny mans burntofferynge, the skynne of the same burntoffrynge that he hath offered, shalbe his. And euery meatofferynge that is baken in the ouen, rosted vpon the gredyron, or fryed in the panne, shalbe the prestes \( \tilde{y} \) offereth it. And euery meatofferynge \( \tilde{y} \) is myngled with oyle, or drye, shal belongeth vnto all Aaron sonnes, vnto one as well as another.
And this is \( \tilde{y} \) lawe of the healthofforynge, that is offerd vnto the LORDE. * If they wyll offer a sacrifice of thankesgeyngynge, then shal they offer vnleuended cakes mingled with oyle, and sweete waferes straked over with oyle, and fryed cakes of fyne flourre mingled with oyle. This offerygynge also shal they brynge vpon a cake of leuended bred, to the thankofferynge of his healthofferynge: and of them all he shal offer one for an Heuereofferynge vnto the LORDE. And it shalbe the prestes, that sprenkleth the bloude of the healthofferynge. And the flesh of the thankofferynge in his healthofferynges, shalbe eaten the same daye that it is offerd, and there shall nothinge be left ouer vntyll the morningyng.

And whether it be a vowe or a fre wyl-offerynge, it shalbe eaten the same daye that it is offerd: \( \tilde{y} \) ought be left ouer vntyll the mornynge, yet maye it be eaten. But loke what remayneth vnto \( \tilde{y} \) thirde daye of the flesh that is offerd, it shalbe brennt with the fyre. And \( \tilde{y} \) eny man vpon the thirde daie eate of \( \tilde{y} \) offerd flesh of his healthofferynge, he shal not be accepted that offerd it. Nether shall it be rekened vnto him, but it shalbe refused. And loke which soule eateh therof, the same is giltie of a mystede.

And the flesh that tooucheth eny vnclene thinge, shal not be eaten, but burnt with the fyre. But who so euer is cleane of body, shal eate of the flesh: and the soule that eath of \( \tilde{y} \) flesh of \( \tilde{y} \) healthofferynge which belongeth vnto the LORDE, his vnclenas be vpon him, and he shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

And when a soule toucheth eny vnclene thinge, whether it be an vnclene man, catell, or eny other abomination that is, and eath of the flesh of the burntofferynge, that belongeth vnto the LORDE, the same shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

And the LORDE talketh with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel,
* Ye shall eate no fat of oxen, lambes, and goates: nevertheless the fat of it that dyeth alone, and of soch as is torne of wyldbe beastes, that maye ye occypye to all maner of vses, but ye shal not eate it.

For who so euer eateh the fat of \( \tilde{y} \) beest that is geuen vnto the LORDE for an offeryngynge, the same soule shalbe roted out from his people. Morover, \( \tilde{y} \) ye shal eate no bloude, nether of catell, ner of foules, where so euer ye dwell. What soule eateh eny bloude, the same shall be roted out from his people.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Who so wyll offer his healthofferynge vnto the LORDE, the same shal also brynge with all, that belongeth vnto \( \tilde{y} \) healthofferynge for the LORDE. But he shal brynge it with his hande for the offerygynge of the LORDE: namely the fat vpon the brest shal be brynge, with the brest, to be a Wauofferyynge before the LORDE. And the prest shall burne the fat vpon the altare, and the brest shalbe Aarons and his sonnes.

And the right shulder shal they gene vnto
the prest for a gift of their healthofferynges.
And loke which of Aarons sonnes offereth the bloude of the healthofferynges, and the fat,

ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, saying: Take Aaron and his sonnes with him, and their vestimentes, and the anointinge oyle, and a bullocke for a synoffryenge, two rammes, and a maunde with vuleuended brede, and call the whole congregacion together, before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. Moses dyd as the LORDE commaunded him, and gathered the congregacion together vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORDE hath commaunded to do."

And he toke Aaron and his sonnes, and waszshed them with water, and put the albe vpon him, and girde him with the girdell, and put vpon him the yalowe tunicle, and put the ouerbody cote vpon him, and girde him vpon the ouerbody cote, and put the brestlappo theron, and in the brestlappo light and perfectnesse: And set the mytery vpon his heade. And vpon the mytery euens above his forehead, put he a plate of golde on the holy crowne: as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And Moses toke the anointinge oyle, and anointed the Habitacion, and all that was therein, and consecrated it, and sprinkelde thercwith euens tymes vpon the altar, and anoynted the altare with all his vessels, the laver with his fote, that it might be consecrated: and poured the anointinge oyle vpon Aarons heade, and anoynted him, that he might be consecrated.

And he brought Aarons sonnes, and put albes vpon them, and girde them with the girdelle, and put bonettes vpon their heads, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he caused bringe a bullocke for a syn offryenge. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, and then was he slayyne. And Moses toke of the bloude, and put it vpon the horns of the altar rounde aboute with his fynger, and purified the altar, and poured the bloude vpon the botome of the altar, and consecrated it, that he might reconcyle it. And took all the fat vpó the bowels, the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kyndes with the fat theron, and burned it vpon the altar. But the bullocke with his skynne, flesh, albes, burned he with fyre without the hoost, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he brought a ramme for a burntofferynge. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, and then was he slayyne. And Moses sprinkelde of the bloude vpon the altar rounde aboute, hewed the ramme in peces, and burned the heade, the peces, and the fât. And waszshed the bowels and the legges with water, and so burned the whole ramme vpó the altar. This was a burntofferynge for a sweete saunoure, euens a sacrifice vnto the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded him.

He brought also the other ramme of the offerynge of the consecracjon. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, and then was it slayne. And Moses toke of his bloude, and put it vpon the type of Aarons right eare, and vpon the thomb of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fote.

And he brought Aarons sonnes, and put of the bloude vpon the type of the right eare of them, and vpon the thombes of their righte handes, and vpon the greate toes of their righte fete, and poured the resydue of the bloude vpon the altar rounde aboute. And he toke the fat and the rompe, and all the fat vpon the bowels, and the nett vpon the leuer, the two kyndens with the fat theron, and the righte shulder. And out of the maunde of vnleuended bred before the LORDE, he toke an vnleued cake, and a cake of oyled bred, and a wafer, and layed them vpò the fat, and vpò the righte shulder, and put aliogether vpò the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes, and wauned it for a Wauofferynge before the LORDE.

And afterwarde toke he all agaynve from their hondes, and burned them on the altar, euyn vpò the burntofferynge: for it is an offerynge of consecration for a swete saunoure, euyn a sacrifice vnto y LORDE. And Moses toke the brest, and wauned it a Wauofferynge before the LORDE, of the ramme of the offerynge of consecration: the same was Moses parte, as the LORDE commanded Moses. And Moses toke of y anoyntinge oyle, of the bloude vpò the altar, sprenckled it vpò Aaron his vestimentes, vpò his sonnes vpò their vestimentes, and so cosecrated Aaron his vestimentes, his sonnes and their vestimentes with him.

And he sayde vnto Aaron his sonnes: Seeth y flesh before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, there eate it, of the bred vpò the altar, sprenckled it vpò Aaron his vestimentes, vpò his sonnes vpò their vestimentes, and it is cosecrated me, sayde: Aaron his sonnes shall eate it. As for y which remayneth of the flesh vpò the altar, ye shal burne it with fyre. And in seue dayes shall ye not departe from y dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, vntyll the daye, the dayes of youre consecration offerynges be at an ende: for seue dayes must youre handes be cosecrated, as it is come to passe this daye: The LORDE hath cosecrated to do it, that ye might be reconcled. And ye shal tary before the Tabernacle of wytnesse daye and night seuen dayes longe, shal kepe y watch of LORDE, that ye dye not, for thys am I cosecrated. And Aaron with his sonnes dyd all, that y LORDE commanded by Moses.

The 8. Chapter.

And vpon the eight daye Moses called Aaron and his sonnes, and the Elders in Israel, and sayde vnto Aaron: Take vnto the a yonge calfe for a synofferynge, and a ramme for a burntofferynge, both without blemsh, and brynge them before the LORDE, and speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Take an he goate for a synofferynge: and a calfe, and a shepe, both of a yeare olde, and without blemsh for a burntofferynge: and an oxe and a ramme for an healthofferynge, that we maye ofrfe before the LORDE: and a meatofferynge myngled with oyle. For to daye shal the LORDE appeare vnto you.

And they toke what Moses commanded before y dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the whole cogregation came nye, and stode before the LORDE. Then sayde Moses: This is it, which the LORDE commanded that ye shulde do, and then shall the glory of y LORDE appeare vnto you. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Go vnto y altar, and offer thy synofferynge and thy burntofferynge, and make an attionemct for the and for the people. Then offer the peoples ofrfferynge, and reconcle them also, as the LORDE hath commanded.

And Aaron wente vnto the altar, and slewe y calfe for his synofferynge, his sonnes brought the bloude vnto him. And he dypte his fynger in the bloude, and put it vpò the horns of the altar, and poured y bloude vpò y botome of the altar. As for the fat and the kyndens the net vpò the leuer of the synofferynge, he burnt the vpò the altar, as the LORDE commanded Moses. The flesh also and the hyde burnt he with fyre without the hoost.

Afterwarde he slewe the burntofferynge, and Aarons sonnes brought the bloude vnto him, sprenckled it rounde aboute vpò the altar. And they brought him the burntofferynge in peces, the heade: he burnt it vpò the altar. And he washed the bowels and the legges, and burnt them aboue vpò the burntofferynge on the altar.

Then brought he the ofrfferynge of the people, and toke the goate, that synofferynge of the people, and slewe it, and made a synofferynge therof, as of the fyrst. And brought the burntofferynge, and dyd as the lawe is: and brought the meatofferynge, and toke his handfull, and burnt it vpò the altar, besyde the burntofferynge of the mornynge.

Afterwarde slewe he the oxe and the ramme for the healthofferynge of the people. And his sonnes brought him the bloude, which he sprenkled vpon the altar ronde aboute. But the fat of the ox e of the ramme, the rompe, and the fat that couereth the bowels, e the kyndeyes, e the net vpon the heuer, all soch fat laied they vpon the brest, and burnt the fat vpon the altar. But the brest and the *right shulder waued Aaron for a Wauedeforreyenge before the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And Aaron lift vp his hide ouer the people, and blessed them, and came downe from the worke of the synofferynge, burntofferynge, and healthofferynge. And Moses and Aaron went in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And when they came out agayne, they blessed the people. Then appeared the glory of the LORDE vnto all the people. For there came *a fyre from the LORDE, and vpon the altar it consumed the burutofferynge and the fat. Whan all the people sawe that, they rejoysed, and fell vpon their faces.

The r. Chapter.

A ND þ sonnes of Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, *toke ether of the his censoure, e put fyre therin, e layd incens e vpon it, and brought strange fyre before the LORDE, e which he commaundde them not. Then wente there out a fyre from þ LORDE, and consumed them, so that they dyed before the LORDE. Then sayde Moses vnto Aaron: This is it, that the LORDE sayde: I wil be sanctified vpó them that come nye me, and before all the people wil I be glorified. And Aaron helde his peace.

Moses called Misaell and Elzaphan the sonnes of Vsiel Aarons vnCLE, and sayde vnto them: Go to, and carie youre brethren out of the Sanctuary, without the hooe. And they wente, and caried them forth in their albes without the hooe, as Moses sayde.

Then sayde Moses vnto Aaron e to his sonnes Eleasar and Ithamar: *Ye shall not vnconer youre heads, ner rente youre clothes, that ye dye not, and the wrath come vpon the whole congregacion: Let youre brethren of the whole house of Israel bewepe this burngyne, which the LORDE hath done. As for you, ye shall not go out from the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, lest ye dye: for the anoyntinge oyle of the LORDE is vpon you. And they dyd as Moses sayde.

The LORDE spake vnto Aaron, e sayde: *Thou e thy sonnes with the shal drinke no wyne ner stronge drynke, whan ye go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse: that ye dye not. Let this be a perpetuall lawe vnto all youre posterities: þ ye maye haue knowlege to discerne, what is holy and vnholye, what is cleane e vnCLEane: þ that ye maye teach the children of Israel all the lawes, which the LORDE hath spoken vnto you by Moses.

And Moses sayde vnto Aaron, and vnto Eleasar and Ithamar his sonnes that were left: *Take the remnaunt of the meatofferyng in the sacrifices of þ LORDE, and eate it without leuen besyde the altar, for it is most holy, even in the holy place shal ye eate it. For it is thy dutie and thy sonnes dutie in the sacrifices of the LORDE: for thus am I commaundde. But the Wauebrest and the Heueshulder shal be eate, and thy sonnes and thy daughters with the in a cleane place. For this dutie is geuen vnto the and thy children in the deedofferynges of the children of Israel. For the Heueshulder and the Wauebrest to the offerynes of the fat, shalbe brought in, that they maye be waue for a Waueofferenge before the LORDE. Therefore is it thine and thy childrens for a perpetuall dutie, as the LORDE commaundde.

And Moses sought for the goate of the synofferynge, and founde it burnt. And he was angrie at Eleasar and Ithamar þ sonnes of Aaron, which were left aluye, and sayde: Wherfore haue ye not eaten the synofferynge in the holy place? for it is most holy, þ he hath geuen it you, that ye mighte beare þ synne of the congregacion, to make agrement for them before the LORDE. Beholde, the bloude of it came not in to the Sanctuary: Ye shalde haue eaten it in the Sanctuary, as I was comaundde.

Aaron sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, this daye haue they offerd their synofferynge þ their burntofferynge before þ LORDE. And it is chaume me after this maner. And shalde I eate of the synofferynge to daye, þ be mery before the LORDE? Whan Moses herde that, he was content.

AND § LORDE talked with Moses & Aaron & sayde: Speake vnto & childre of Israel, and saye: “These are the beestes which ye shal eate amōge all ye beestes vpo earth: What so euer hath hoffe, d deuydeth it in to two claves, c cheweth cud amongst the beestes, that shal ye eate. But loke what cheweth cud d hath hoffe, a deuydeth it not, as the Camell, the same is vn cleane vnto you, & ye shal not eate it. The Conyes chew cud, but they deuyde not the hoffe in to two claves, therafore are they vn cleane vnto you. The Hare cheweth cud also, but deuydeth not h hoffe in to two claves, therafore is he vn cleane vnto you. And the Swayne deuydeth h hoffe in to two claves, but cheweth not the cud, therafore is it vn cleane vnto you. Of the flesh of these shall ye not eate, ner touch their carcasses, for they are vn cleane vnto you.

These shall ye eate of all that are in the waters: What so euer hath fynnes and scales in the waters, sees ryuers, that shal ye eate. But what so euer hath not fynnes and scales in the sees and ryuers, amongst all moue in the waters, of all that lyue in the waters, it shalbe an abominacion vnto you, so that ye eate not of their flesh, and that ye abhorre their carcasses. For all that haue not fynnes scales in the waters, shall ye abhorre.

And these shal ye abhorre amongst foules, so that ye eate them not: The Agle, the Goshauke, the Cormoraunte, the Vultur, Kyte, and all his kynde, and all Rauens with their kynde: the Estrich, Nighterow, the Cocow, the Sparow haue with his kynde, the little Oule, the Storke, the greate Oule, Backe, the Pellycane, the Swanne, the Pye, the Heron, laye with his kynde, the Lapwynge, and Swalowe. And what so euer crepeth amongst the foules, and goeth vpon foure fete, shalbe an abominacion vnto you. Yet these shal ye eate of the foules that crepe and go vpon foure fete: euene those that haue no knyes abone vpon legges, to hoppe wodd vpon earth. Of these maye ye eate, as there is the Arbe with his kynde, and the Selaam with his kynde, & the Hargol with his kynde, & the Hagab with his kynde. But what so euer els hath foure fete amongst the foules, it shalbe an abominacion vnto you, and ye shal take it for vn cleane. § Who so euer toucheth the carcasse of soch, shall be vn cleane vntill § euene: and who so euer beareth the carcasse of eny of these, shall wash his clothes, and shalbe vn cleane vntyll the euene.

Therfore euerie beest that hath hoffe, and deuydeth it not in to two claves, c cheweth not cud, shalbe vn cleane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth soch, shalbe vn cleane. And what so euer goeth vpon handes amongst ye beestes that go vpon foure fete, shalbe vn cleane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth the carcasses of the, shalbe vn cleane vntyll euene. And he ye beareth their carcasse, shall wash his clothes, and be vn cleane vntyll the euene: For soch are vn cleane vnto you.

These shalbe vn cleane vnto you also, amongst the beestes that crepe vpon earth: Welles, the Mouse, the Tode, euery one with his kynde, the Hedgehogge, the Stellio, the Lacerte, the Snaile, and the Moule, these are vn cleane vnto you amongst all that crepe. Who so euer toucheth the deed carcasse of the, shalbe vn cleane vntyll euene. And what so euer eny soch deed carcasse falleth vpon, it shalbe vn cleane, what so euer vessell of wodd it be, or rayment, or skynne, or bagge. And euery vessell that eny thinge is occupied withall, shalbe put in the water, and is vn cleane vntyll the euene, and then shal it be cleane. § All maner of earthen vessell that eny soch carcasse falleth in to, shal all be vn cleane that therin is, ye ye shal breake it. All meate which is eate, that eny soch water commeth in to, is vn cleane: § all maner of drynke that is dronke in all maner of soch vessell, is vn cleane. And what so euer eny soch carcasse falleth vpon, it shalbe vn cleane, whether it be ouen or kettell, so shal it be brokè, for it is vn cleane, and shalbe vn cleane vnto you. Neuertheless the fountaynes, welles, poundes of water are cleane. But who so euer toucheth their carcasses, is vn cleane.

And though the deed carcasse of eny soch fell vpon the sede that is sowne, yet is it cleane. But whan there is water poured vpon the sede, and afterwarde eny soch deed carcasse falleth theron, then shal it be vn cleane vnto you.

When a beest dyeth that ye maye eate, he that toucheth the deed carcasse therof, is
Who so eateth of unclean carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be unclean vntyll the euen. Likewyse he that beareth unclean carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be unclean vntyll the euen.

What so euer crepeth vpon earth, shall be an abomination vnto you, and shall not be eaten. And what so euer crepeth vpon ye belly, or all that goeth vpon four ye or mo fete, amōge all that crepeth vpon earth, shall ye not eate, for it shalbe an abomination vnto you. Make not youre soules abominable, and defyle you not in them, to stayne youre selues: for I am the LORDE youre God. Therefore shal ye sanctifie youre selues, that ye maye be holy, for I am holy. And ye shal not defyle youre selues on any maner of crepyng beest, that crepeth vpon earth: for I am the LORDE, which brought you out of the lande of Egipte, that I might bee youre God: therfore shal ye be holy, for I am holy.

This is the lawe ouer ye beestcs and soules, * all maner of soules of crepyng beestes in the waters, and all maner of soules ye crepe vpon earth: that ye maie knowe to discerne what is vncleane * cleane, and what maner of beestes are to be eaten, and which are not to be eaten.

The riez. Chapter.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses * a Aaron, * sayde: Whan there ryseth vp any thinge in the skynne of a mans fleshe, whether it be a scabbe or a glisteringe whyte (as though there wolde be a leprosy in the skynne of his fleshe) shal he be brought vnto Aaron the prest, or to one of his sonnes amongst ye prestes. And whan the prest seyth the plage vpon the skynne of the fleshe, that the hayres are turned to whyte, and it seme deper in that place then the other skynne of his fleshe, then is it surely a leprosy, therefore shal the prest loke vpon him, and iudge him vncleane.

But whan there is eny whyte plecke in the skynne of his fleshe, and yet seme no deper then the other skynne of the fleshe, and the hayres be not turned to whyte, the shal the prest shut him vp seuen dayes, and on seuenthe daye loke vpon hym: ye the plage seme vnto hym as afore, * hath frett no deper in the skynne, then shal the prest shut him vp yet seuen dayes mo. And whan he loketh on hym agayne vpon the seuenthe daye, and fyndeth, that the plage be darkish, and hath frett no deper in the skynne, the shal he iudge him cleane, for it is but a skyrfe, and he shal wash his clothes, * then is he cleane.

But whan the scabbe fretteth farther in the skynne (after that he is sene of the prest, and judged cleane) and he be now sene of the prest agayne: whan the prest seyth the, ye the scabbe hath frett farther in the skynne, he shal iudge hym vncleane, for it is surely a leprosy.

Whan a plague of leprosy is vys a man, he shalbe brought vnto the prest. Whan he seyth and fyndeth, that there is whyte rysen vp in the skynne, and the hayre turned vnto whyte, and there be rawe fleshe in the sore, Chap. xxxii.

The xii. boke of Moses.

The is it surely an olde leprosy in þe skynne of his flesh, therfore shal the prest judge him vnclaene, and not shut him vp, for he is vnclaene alreadie.

But whan the leprosy breaketh out in the skynne, and coureeth the whole skynne, from the heade vnto the fote, all that the prest can se, So whan the prest loketh vpon it, and fyndeth, that þe leprosy hath couered all the flesh, he shall judge him cleane, for so mouch as it is turned all in to whyte vpon him, for he is cleane.

Notwithstondinge þf there be rawe flesh there, in the daye whan he is loked vpon, þe is he vnclaene. And whan the prest seyth þf rawe flesh, he shall judge him vnclaene, for he is vnclaene, it is surely a leprosy. But þf the rawe flesh chaunge agayne, and be turned in to whyte, then shall he come vnto the prest. And whan the prest loketh vpon him, and fyndeth, that the plage is turned to whyte, he shall judge him cleane, for he is cleane.

Whan there is a byle in the skynne of eny mans flesh, and healeth agayne, and afterwarde in the same place there arysse vp eny whyte thinge, or a glysterynge whyte somewhat reedish, he shal be sene of the prest. So whan the prest, seyth, that it appeareth to be lower then the other skynne, and the hayre turned to whyte, then shall he judge him vnclaene, for it is surely a plage of leprosy broken out of the byle. But þf the prest se and fynde, that the hayres are not whyte, and it not lower then the other skynne, and is darkish, he shal shut him vp seuen dayes.

Ýf it hath fretter farther in the skynne, then shal he judge him vnclaene, for it is surely a plage of leprosy. But þf the glysterynge whyte abyde styll, and freate no farther, þe is it but a prynte of the byle, and the prest shal judge him cleane.

Whan the skynne of eny mans flesh is hurt with fyre, and the prynte of the burninge be reedish or whyte, and the prest loketh vpon him, and fyndeth the hayre turned to whyte vpon the mark of the burnynge, þe it appeare deper then the other skynne, þe is there surely a leprosy brokë out of þy prynte of þy burnynge: therfore shal þy prest judge hi vnclaene, for it is a plage of leprosy. But þf the prest se and fynde, that þe hayre vpon the prynte of the burninge is not turned vnto whyte, þ is no lower then the other skynne, and is darkish also, he shall shut him vp seuen dayes.

And vpon the seuenth daye he shall loke vpon him: ÿf it hath fretter farther in þe skynne, then shal he judge him vnclaene, for it is a leprosy. But þf it stode styll vpò the mark of the burnynge, and fret no farther in the skynne, and is darkish, then is it a sore in þe mark of the burnynge, þe prest shal judge him cleane, for it is but the prynte of the burnynge.

Whan a man or woman is skyruye vpon the heade or beerd, and the prest seyth the mark, and fyndeth that it appeareth deper then the other skynne, and the hayre be there golde and thynne, then shal be judge vnclaene: for it is a skyrfe of leprosy of the heade or of the beerd. But þf the prest se that þe skyrfe appeare no deper þe the skynne, and that the hayre is not of a pale colour, he shall shut him vp seuen dayes. And vpon the seuenth daye whan he loketh, and fyndeth, that the skyrfe hath fretter no farther, and there be no golden hayre there, and that the skyrfe appeare no deper then the other skynne, then he shal shut him vp yet seuen dayes moy. And vpon the seuenthe daye wha he loketh, and fyndeth that the skyrfe hath fretter no farther in the skynne, and that it appeareth no deper then the other skynne, then shal he judge him cleane. And he shal wash his clothes, for he is cleane. But þf the scabbe freate farther in the skynne (after þe he is judged cleane) and the prest loketh, and fyndeth, that þe scabbe hath fretter farther in the skynne, then shal he seke nomore for golden hayres, for he is vnclaene.

Neuerthelessse þf he se that the scabbe stondeth styll, þe that pale hayres are there ryseen vp, þen is þe scabbe holde, and he is cleane, therfore shal þe prest judge him to be cleane.

Wha there is eny glysterynge whyte vpon the skynne of the flesh of a man or woman, and the prest seyth there that the glysterynge whyte vanisheth: then is it but a whyte scabbe ryseen vp in þe skynne, þ is he is cleane.

Whan the hayres fall out of the heade of a man or a woman, so that he is balde, the same is cleane. Ýf they fall out of his fore heade, then is he fore heade balde þ cleane. But þf there be a whyte reedish sore in the balde head, or balde fore heade, then is there a leprosy rysen vp in the balde heade or balde foreheade: therfore shal \( \tilde{y} \) prest loke vp on him. And whan he fyndeth the whyte reediysh sore rysen vp in his balde heade or balde fore heade, then shall \( \tilde{y} \) skynne of the fleshe be as leporous, therfore is he a leporous man and vnclene. And the prest shall judge him vn-clene, because of \( \tilde{y} \) same sore vp\( \tilde{o} \) his heade.

Who so now is leporous, his clothes shall be rent, and the heade bare, \( \tilde{y} \) the lippes moffled, and shall in euere wyse be called vnclene.

"And as longe as the sore is vp on him, he shall be vnclene, dwell alone, and haue his dwellinge without the hoost.

When the plagge of leprosy is in a cloth, whether it be wollen or lynnen, in the warpe or weft, whether it be lynnen or wollen, or in a skynne, or in euere maner thynge that is made of skynne. And when \( y \) plagge is pale or reedish in the cloth or skynne, either in the warpe or weft, or in euere maner thynge that is made of skynne, the same is surely the plagge of leprosy, therfore shall the prest loke vp on it. And when he seyth the plagge, he shall shut vp seuen daies. And vp\( o \) on the seuenthe daye when he seyth that \( y \) plagge hath frett farther in the cloth, in the warpe or weft, in a skynne or in euere maner thynge that is made of skynne, then is it a fretinge plagge of leprosy, and is vnclene. And the cloth shall be burnt, either warpe or weft, whether it be wollen or lynne, or euere thynge made of skynne, wherin is euere such plagge. For it is a plagge of leprosy, and shall be burnt with fyre.

But \( y \) the prest se that the plagge hath frett no farther in \( y \) cloth, either in the warpe or weft, or euere thinge made of skynne, then shall he commaunde to wash the thinge that the plagge is in, and shall shut vp other seuen daies. And when the prest seyth (after that the plagge is waszshen) \( y \) the plagge is not chaughe before his eyes, and hath frett no farther also, yet is it vnclene, \( y \) shall be burnt with fyre: for it is depe freted inwarde, and hath made skyrfes. Neuertheles when the prest seyth that the prynte is vanished after the washinge of it, then shall he rente it out of the cloth, and of the skynne, out of the warpe or weft. But \( y \) it appeare eny more in the clothe (either in the warpe, or in the weft) or euere maner thinge made of skynne, slye the lambe, where the synofferynge and burntofferynge are slyne, namely, in the holy place. For as the synofferynge, so is the trespace offerynge the prestes also, for it is most holy.

And the prest shall take of the bloude of the trespace offerynge, and put it vpon the typp of ý right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fote. Afterwa rde shall he take of the oyle out of the Logg, and poure it in to his awne left hande, and dyppe his right fynger in the oyle that is in his left hande, and sprenke the oyle with his fynger seuen tymes before the LORDE. As for the remaunt of the oyle in his hande, he shall put it vpon the typp of the right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, ý vpon the greate too of his right fote. Afterwa rde shall he take of the oyle out of the Logg, and poure it in to his awne left hande, and dyppe his right fynger in the oyle that is in his left hande, and sprenke the oyle with his fynger seuen tymes before the LORDE. But the remaunt of the oyle in his hande, shall he poure vpon the heade of him that is clensed, and make an attonnement for him before the LORDE. And he shall make the synofferynge, and reconeyle him that is clensed, because of his vnclennesse. And afterwa rde shall he slewe the burntofferynge, and shall ofre it vpon the alter with the meatofferynge, and make an attonnement for him, ý than is he cleane.

But ýf he be poore, and gette no moch with his hande, then let him take one lambe for a trespaceofferynge to wane it, to make an attonnement for him, and a tenth deale of fyne flour myngled with oyle for a meatofferynge, and a Logg of oyle, ý two turtyll doues, or two yonge pigeons which he is able to get with his hande, let the one be a synofferynge, the other a burntofferynge: and let him brynge them vpon the eights daye of his clensyng vnto the prest before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE.

Then shall the prest take the lambe for the synofferynge, and the Logg of oyle, and shall wane them all before the LORDE, and sley the lambe of the trespace offerynge: and take of ý bloude of the same trespaceofferynge, and put it vpon the typp of the right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his righte fote, and poure of the oyle in to his awne lefte hande, and with his right fynger sprenke the oyle that is in his left hande, seuen tymes before the LORDE.

As for the remaunt of the oyle in his hande, he shall put it vpon the typp of the right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, ý vpon the greate too of his right fote, euyn aboue vpon the bloude of ý trespaceofferynge. The other oyle in his hæde shall he poure vpon the heade of him ý is clensed, to make an attonnement for him before the LORDE. And afterwa rde of the one of the turtill doues or yonge pigeons (according as his handes are able to get) he shall make a synofferynge, of ý other a burntofferynge, with the meatofferynge: and so shall the prest make an attonnement for him that is clensed before the LORDE.

Let this be the lawe for the leper, which is not able with his hande to get, that belongeth vnto his clensyng.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Whan ye are come in to the lande of Canaan, which I geue you to possesse: and ýf there happen a plauge of leprosy in any house of youre possession, then shal he that owneth the house, come and tell the prest, and saye: Me thynke there is as it were a plauge of leprosy in my house. Then shal the prest commaunde to rydde all thynge out of the house or euer the prest go in to se ý pluge, lest all that is in the house be made vnclene. Afterwa rde shall ý prest go in, to se the pluge.

Now whan he loketh, and fyndeth ý there be holowe strakes yalowe or reedish in the walles of the house, ý they sene to be lower then the wall byside, then shall he go out at the dore of the house, and shut vp the house for seuenthe dayes. And vpon the seuenthe daye whan he commeth, and seyth that the pluge hath fretten farther in the walles of the house, the shall he commaunde to breake out the stones wherin the pluge is, ý to cast the in a foule place without the cite, ý the house to be scraped with rounde aboute, and the dust ý is scraped of, to be poured without ý cite in an vnclene place, ý to take other stones, and put them in the place of the other, and to take other playster, and playster the house.

Whan the pluge then commeth agayne, and breake forth in the house, after ý the stones are broké out, the playster scraped of, and the

D the LORDE talked with Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saie vnto hym: Whan a man hath a runnyng yssue from out of his flesh, þy same is vn cleane: but þe is he vn cleane by the reason of this yssue, whan his flesh is fretten of þy yssue or wunde. Every bed where on he lyeth, þ what so euer he sytteth vpon, shalbe vn cleane.

And he that toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vn cleane vntyll the euę. And he þ sytteth where he sat, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vn cleane vntyll the euę. Who so toucheth his flesh, shal wash his clothes, þ bathe him self with water, and be vn cleane vntyll the euę. Whan he sytteth vpon him that is cleane, þ y some shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, þ be vn cleane vntyll the euę.

Whan he hath the bloude ysse of his flesh, she shalbe vnto him, and all clothes, and every skynne that is stained with soch sede, shalbe wash with water, þ be vn cleane vntyll the euę. A woman, by whom soch one lyeth, shalbe bathe her self with water, and be vn cleane vntyll the euę. Whan a woman hath the bloude ysse of her flesh, she shalbe put a parte vij. daies in to a sondrie place. Whan so euer toucheth her, shal be vn cleane vntyll the euę. And all that she lyeth vpon (as longe as she is put parte) shalbe vn cleane. And that she syt-teth vpon, shalbe vn cleane. And whan so euer shalbe hir bed, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vn cleane vntyll the euę. And whan so euer toucheth eny maner thing that she hath sytted vpon, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vn cleane vntyll the euę.

* Leuit. 6. d. and 11. c.
And if a man lye with her (whyte she is put a parte) he shal be vncleane seven dayes, and the bed that he laye vpon, shalbe vncleane.

But when a woman hath hir blokke yssue a longe season, not onely at the tyme of hir naturall course, but also out of the tyme of hir naturall course, then shall she be vncleane so longe as she hath the yssue: euë as she is at the tyme when she is put aparte, so shall she be vncleane here also. What so euer she lyseth vpon all the tyme of hir yssue, shalbe as hir bed, when she is put aparte. And all that she sytteth vpon, shalbe vncleane, as is hir vnclenesse, when she is put aparte. Who so euer toucheth any of them, shal be vncleane, and shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, me be vncleane vntyll the euen.

But if she be cleane of hir yssue, the shal she nome seuen dayes, afterwarde shall she be cleane: and vpon the eight daye shall she take two turtell doues, or two yonge pigeons, and bynye them vnto the prest before the dore of the Tabernacle of wyntesse. And the prest shall make of the one a synofferynge, of the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for her before the LORDE, as concernynge the yssue of hir vnclenesse.

Thus shal ye se that the childre of Israel kepe them selues from their vnclenesse, that they dye not in their vnclenesse, whan they defyle my habitation, which is amoge you. This is the lawe ouer hir that hath a runnyge sore, me him whose sede departeth from hir in slepe, so that he is vncleane therof. And ouer her that hath hir bloude yssue, and who so euer hath a runnyge sore, whether it be man or woman, and when a man lyeth with her that is vnclean.

The xvi. Chapter.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses (after that Aarons two sonnes were deed, * when they offered before the LORDE) & sayde: Speake vnto Aaron thy brother, y he go not at all tymes in to the ynamner Sanctuary, within the vale before the Mercyseate, which is vpon the Arke, y he dye not: for I will appeare in a cloude vpon y Mercyseate. But herewithall shal he go in, euen with a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and with a ramme for a burntofferynge, and shal put on the holy lymmen albe, and haue lymmen breches vpon his flesh, and gyrdle him with a lymne girdell, and haue the lymmen myter vpon his heade.

For these are y holy garmentes: & he shal bathe his flesh with water, & put them on: & of the cogenesis of the childre of Israel he shal take two he goates for a synofferynge, and a ramme for a burntofferynge.

And Aaron shal bynye the bullocke his owne synofferynge, & make an attonement for himself and his house: and afterwarde shal he take the two goates, and present them before the LORDE, euene before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnesse, and shall cast lottes ouer the two goates: the lot of the one goate for the LORDE, and the other for the fre goate. And the goate that y LORDES lot fell vpon, shal he offer for a synofferynge. But the goate, that the fre goates lot fell vpon, shal he present alyue before y LORDE, to make an attonement for him, and to let the fre goate go in to y wyldernes. And so shal he bynye the bullocke of his synofferynge, and make an attonement for him and his housholde, and shal kyll him.

And he shal take a censor full of coales from the altare that stondeth before the LORDE, and his handfull of beaten incense, and bynye them in within y vayle, and put the incense vpon the fyre before y LORDE, that the cloude of the incense maye couer the Mercyseate, which is vpon the witnesse, that he dye not. & he shal take of the bloude of the bullocke, and sprenkyle it with his fynger toward the Mercyseate on the foreyesde. Seuen tymes shal he sprenkyle of the bloude thus with his fynger before the Mercyseate. Thë shal he kyll the goate which is the peoples synofferynge, & bynye in of his bloude within the vayle, & shall do with his bloude, as he dyd with the bloude of the bullocke, and sprenkyle therwith also on the foysyde toward the Mercyseate, and so shal he reconcile the Sactuary from the vnclenesse of the childre of Israel, and frõ their trespasses in all their synnes. Thus shal he do vnto the Tabernacle of wyntesse, which is the habitation with them amog thei vnclenesses.

No man shalbe in the Tabernacle of witnesse, when he goeth in to make an attone-* Exo. 40. c.  3 Re. 8. b.  † Heb. 9. b.  ‡ Leui. 4. a.

And when he hath made an end of reconciling the Sanctuary, and the Tabernacle of witness, and the altar, he shall bring the heifer goate.

The shalt Aaron laye both his hades vpó ý heade of him, ę confess euere him all the mysdedes of ý childre of Israel, ę all their trespaces in their synnes, ą shall laye the vpó ý heade of the goate, ę by some man ý is at hande, shalt he let him runne in to the wildernes: ý the goate maye so bearre all their mysdedes vpó the him to ý wyldernesse, and he shall leave him in the wyldernesse.

And Aaron shall go in to the Tabernacle of witness, and put of the lymenes clothes, which he put on whâ he wente in to ý Sanctuary, and shall leave them there, and bathe his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his awne rayment.

And he shall go forth, and make his burnt-offeringe, and the burnt-offeringe of the people, and make an attonement both for himself and for the people, and burne the fat of the syn-offerynge vpó the altar. But he ý carried out the fre goate, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, ą then come in to the hoost.

The bullocke of the syn-offerynge, and ý goate of the syn-offerynge (whose bloude was brought in to the Sanctuary to make an attonemént) shalbe carried out of ý hoost, ą brent with fyre, both their skynnes, flesh, and donge. And he that burneth them, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and then come in to the hoost.

And this shalbe a perpetuall lawe vpó you: ą Upon the tenth daye of the seventh moneth shalt ye humble youre soules, and do no worke, whether it be one of youre selues, or a strauner amonge you. For in this daye is yourattonemént made, that ye maye be elensed from all youre synnes before the LORDE: therfore shall it be a fre Sabbath vpó you, and ye shall humble youre soules. Let this be a perpetuall lawe.

But the prest that is anoynted, and whose hande was yyllen to be prest in his fathers steade, shall make this attonement, and shall put on the lynnen clothes, namely the holy vestimentes, so shall he recóyele the holy Sactuary, and the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the altar, and ý prestes, and all the people of the congregacion. ą This shall be a perpetuall lawe vpó you, that ye reconcile ý children of Israel from all their synnes once a yeare. And Moses dyd, as the LORDE commaunded him.

The Chapter.

And ý LORDE talked with Moses, ą and sayde: Speake vpó Aaron ý his sonnes, ą to all ý childre of Israel, ą saye vpó them: This is it that ý LORDE hath commaunded: What so euere he be of ý house of Israel, ý kylleth an oxe, or lâbe, or goate in the hoost, or out of the hoost, and bryngeth it not before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, that it maye be brought vpó the LORDE for an offerenge before the Habitacion of ý LORDE, the same shall be gitle of bloude, as though he had shed bloude, and soch a man shall be roted out from amonge his people.

Therfore shall the children of Israel brynge their offerenges (that they will offer vpó the wyde felde) before the LORDE, even before the dore of the Tabernacle of witness, vpó the prest, ą there offer their health-offerenges vpó the LORDE. And the prest shall sprenkle the bloude vpó the altar of the LORDE before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and burne the fat for a swete saouore vpó the LORDE: and they shall offer their offerenges nomore vnto deuels, with whom they go a whorynge. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe vpó them amonge their posterities.

Therfore shalt thou saie vpó thè: What man so euere he be of the house of Israel, or a strauner also that is amonge you, which offereth a burnt-offerenge or any other offerenge, and bringeth it not before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse to offer it vpó the...
LORDE, he shall be roted out from among his people.

And what man so euer it be (either of the house of Israel, or a straunger amonge you) that eateth eny maner of bloude, agaynyst hym wyll I set my face, and wil rote him out from amonge his people: for the soule of that body is in the bloude, and I haue geuen it you for the altare, that youre soules maye be reconcyled ther with: For the bloude that is in the soule maketh attouement. Therfore haue I sayde vnto the children of Israel: No soule amonge you shall eate bloude, no ner eny straunger that dwelleth amonge you.

And what man so euer it be amonge you (whether he be of the house of Israel, or a straunger amonge you) that at the hustynge taketh a beest or foule which maye be eaten, he shall poure out the bloude of the same, and couer it with earth: for all flesh lyueth in the bloude.

And I haue sayde vnto the children of Israel: Ye shall eate the bloude of no body: for the life of all flesh is in his bloude. Who so euer eateth it, shalbe roted out. And what so euer soule eateth that which dyed alone, or that was torne of wylde beestes (whether he be one of youre selues or a straunger) the same shal wash his clothes, and bathe himself with water, and be vnclaene vntyll the euyn, and then is he cleane. But ye he wash not his clothes, nor bathe him self, then shal he beare his synne.

The xvii. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and saide: Speake vnto the childe of Israel, and saye vnto them: I am the LORDE your God, Ye shall not do after thy worke of the lande of Egypte, wherin ye dwelt: nether after the doynges of the lande of Canaan, in to the which I will brynge you. Ye shall not walke after their customes, but after my lawes shall ye do, and my statutes shal ye kepe, that ye meye walke therin: for I am the LORDE your God. Therfore shal ye kepe my statutes and my lawes. For the man that doth the same, shal liue therin, for I am the LORDE.

No man shall come at his nexte kynswoman, to vncover hir preuytie: for I am the LORDE.
Thou shalt lye with no maner of beest, to defyle thy self therwith. And no woman shall haue to do with a beest, for it is abhominacion.

Ye shall defyle youre selues in none of these things. For ye Heithen (whom I wil cast out before you) haue stayned them selues in all these, and the londe is defyled there thorow. And their wickednesse vy I vsyet vpó them, so that the londe shal spue out the indwellers therof. Therfore kepe ye my statutes and lawes, and do not one of these abhominacions, nether one of youre awne selues nyr the straunger amonge you (for all soch abhominacions haue ye people of this lode done which were before you, and haue defyled the lande) that the lande spue not you out also, when ye haue defyled it, as it spewed out the Heythë, that were there before you. For who so euer commytte these abhominacions, the same soules shalbe roted out from amonge their people. Therfore kepe ye my statutes, that ye do not after ye abhominable customs, which were before you, that ye be not defyled therwith: For I am the LORDE youre God.

The 2d Chapter.

And the LORDE spake to Moses, and sayde: Speake to the whole congregation of the children of Israel, and saye vnsto them: Ye shall be holy, for I am holy, euen the LORDE youre God. Euerie one feare his father and his mother. Kepe my holy dayes: for I am the LORDE youre God. Ye shall not turne youre selues vnto Idols, ye shall make you no goddes of metall: for I am the LORDE youre God.

And when ye wyll offer healthofferynges vnto the LORDE, then shal ye offer the, that he maye be mercifull vnto you, and ye shal eate the same daye that ye offer them, and on the morow: what so euer is left on the thirde daye, shalbe burnt with fyre. But ye euy man eate therof vpon the thirde daye, then is he vnholie, and shal not be accepted, and the same eater shal beare his synne, because he hath vnhaulew the Sanctuary of the LORDE: and soch a soule shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

When thou reapest thy londe, thou shalt not reap downe the vttmost borders of it rounte aboute, ner gather it all cleane vp. Euen so likewise thou shalt not placce thy vnyarde cleane also, ner gather vp the grapes that are fallen downe, but shalbe leate them for ye poore and straungers: for I am the LORDE youre God.

Ye shal not steale, nether lye, ner deale falsely one with another.

Ye shall not swere falsely by my name, so to vnhalowe the name of thy God: for I am the LORDE.

Thou shalt do thy neibbour no wronge, ner robbe him: The workmen's laboure shal not byde with the vntyll the morynge.

Thou shalt not curse the dead. Thou shalt put no stombligne blocke before ye blinde, but shalfe thy God: for I am the LORDE.

Ye shall not deale wrongeously in judgment, nether shal ye accepte the persone of the poore, ner honour the parsonne of the greate, but thou shalt judge thy neibbour righteously.

Thou shalt let no preuy accuser go anowe thy people. Nether shalt thou stone againyst thy neibbour blode: for I am thy LORDE.

Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine hert, but shalt tell thy neibbour his faute, that thou beare not synne for his sake.

Thou shalt not auenge thy self, ner beare enell will against the childre of thy people.

Thou shalt loue thy neibbour, as thy self: for I am the LORDE.

My statutes shal ye kepe, that thou let not thy catell goyne with beestes of another kynde: nether sowe thy yfelde with myngled seder. And let no garment come vpon the, is mixte with wollen and lynnern.

When a man lyeth with a woman, and hath to do with her, which is a bonde woman, and hath bene medled withall of another man, but not lowesed out, ner hath opytayned fredome, it shalbe punyshed, but they shall not suffre death, because she was not fre. But he shal brynge for his trespace vnto thy LORDE (even before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytinesse) a ramme for a trespace offerynge: and the prest shal make an attonement for him with the trespass offerynge before the LORDE, concerneynge the synne that he hath ye shall circumcise the foresynne of the same with their frutes: three yeares shall ye holde them for vn circumcision, so that ye eate them not; but in the fourth yeare shall all their frutes be holy and prayed vnto j LORDE. In the fift yeare shall ye eate the frutes, and gather them in: for I am j LORDE youre God.

Ye shal eate nothinge with bloude. Ye shall not regarde f foules cryengye, ner chose out dayes.

Ye shal shawe no crownes vpô youre head, nether shalt thou clyppe thy becone cleane off.
Ye shal rente out no markes in youre body (for eny that is deed) ner make letters vpô you: for I am the LORDE.

Thou shalt not holde thy daughter to whordome, that the londe fall not to whor-dome, and waxe full of wickednesse.

Kepe my holy dayes, and stonde in awe of my Sanctuary: for I am the LORDE.

Ye shal not turne youre selues to f Soyth sayers, and axe nothinge at the expounders of tokens, that ye be not defyled by them: for I am the LORDE youre God.

Thou shalt ryse vp before a graye head, and shalte geue reuerence vnto the aged. For thou shalt feare God: for I am j LORDE.

When there dwelleth a straunger amongeth you in youre londe, ye shall not vexe him.
He shal dwell with you, even as one that is at home amongeth you, f thou shalt looke him as thy selfe: for ye youre selues also were strangers in the lande of Egipte. I am the LORDE youre God.

Ye shall not deale wrongeously in judgmêt, with meteyarde, with weight, with measure:
A true balance, a true weight, a true Epha,
a true Hìn shalbe amôge you. For I am the LORDE youre God, which brought you out of the londe of Egipte, that ye shulde kepe v do all my statutes and lawes: for I am the LORDE.

ND the LORDE talked with Moses, and saide: Tell the children of Israel:

Who so enuer he be amonge the children of Israel, (or eny straungere that dwelleth in Israel) which gueeth of his sede vnto Moloch, the same shall dye the death: the people of the lance shall stone him, f I wyll set my face agaynst that man, and wyll rote him out from amôge his people, because he hath gueen of his sede vnto Moloch, and defyled my Sanctuary, v whenalowe my holy name. And though the people of the londe loke thorow the fyngers vpon that man, which hath gueen of his sede vnto Moloch, so that they put him not to death, yet wyll I set my face agaynst the same man, f agaynst his generation: And him, and all that go a whorlynge with him after Moloch, wyll I rote out from amonge their people.

Ye shal turne him to f saythysayers and expounders of tokens, so that he goeth a whorlynge after them, I wyll set my face agaynst the same soule, and wyll rote him out from amonge his people. f Sanctifie youre selues therefore, f be holy: for I am holy euen youre
God. And kepe ye my statutes, and do them: for I am j LORDE that sanctifieth you.

Who so euer curseth his father or his mother, shall dye the death: "his bloude be vpon him, because he hath cursed his father or mother.

He that breaketh wedlocke with eny mas wife, shal dye the death (both the adnouterer and f aduouteresse) because he hath broken wedlocke with his neighbours wife.

Ye eny man lye with his fathers wife, so f he vncoure his fathers preuyte, they shall both dye the death: their bloude be vpô the.

Ye eny man lye with his daughter in lawe, they shall dye both of them, for they haue wrought abomination: their bloude be vpon them.

Ye eny man lye with the mankynde, as with womankind, they haue wrought abomination, & shal both dye the death: their bloude be vpon
them.

Ye eny man take a wyfe, and hir mother therto, the same hath wrought wickednesse: he shalbe burnt with fyre, and so shal they also,
that there be no wickednes amôge you.

Ye eny man lye with a beest, he shall dye
the death, and the beest shal be slavyne.

Yf a woman medle with a beest, so she haue to do with it, thou shalt put her to death, and the beest also, they shall dye the death: their bloude be vpon them.

Yf eny man take his sister, his fathers daughter, or his mothers daughter, and se hir preuyte, and she agayne se his secretes, it is a wicked thing. They shall be roted out in the sight of their people. For he hath vncovered his sisters preuyte, he shal beare his synne.

Thou shalt not vncover the preuyte of thy mothers sister, and of thy fathers sister: for soch one hath vncovered his nexte kynswoman, and they shall beare their synne.

Yf eny man lye with his vnclés wyfe, the same hath vncovered the preuyte of his vncle: they shall beare their synne, without children shal they dye.

Yf eny man take his brothers wyfe, y is an vn cleane thing: they shalbe without children, because he hath vncovered his brothers secretes.

So kepe now all my statutes and my lawes, and do them, y the lorde whither I bryngye you to dwell therin, spewe you not out. And walke not ye in the statutes of the Heithen, which I shal cast out before you. For all soch thinges have they done, and I haue abhorred the.

But I saye vnto you: Ye shall possesse their londe. For I wyll geue you to enheritance a londe, that floweth with mylke and hony. I am the LORDE your God, which have separated you from the nacion, that ye also shulde separate the cleane beestes frō the vn cleane, and the vn cleane foules from the cleane: that to defyle youre soules vpon beestes, vpon foules and all that crepeth on the grounde: which I have separated vnto you, that they shulde be vnclene. Therefor shall ye be holy vnto me: for I the LORDE am holy, which have separated you frō the nacion, that ye shulde be myne.

Yf a man or woman be a sothysayer or an expounder of tokens, the same shall dye the death: they shalbe stoned, their bloude be vpon them.

Ye shall holde holy vnto your God, and not vnhalowe y name of your God: for they offre the sacrifice of the LORDE, the bred of their God, therefor shal they be holy.

They shall take no whore, ner one that is defyled, or y is put awaye from hir husbande, for he is holy vnto his God: therefor shal he sanctifie him self, for he offreth the bred of thy God. He shall be holy vnto the, for I am holy, even the LORDE that sanctifieth you.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Moses:

A Spake to y prestes y sonnes of Aaron, y saye vnto the: A prest shall defyle him self vpō no soule of his people, but vpon his nexte kynde y belongeth vnto hym: as vpon his mother, vpō his father, vpō his soune, vpō his daughter, vpon his brother, y vpō his sister, which is yet a virgin, y hath bene no mans wife (which belongeth vnto him) vpon her maie he defyle himself. Morover he shal not defyle him self vpō eny ruler in his people, to vn halowe him self.

§ He shall make no crowne also vpon his heade, ner shawe of his beerd, nether shal they cut out eny markes i their fleshe. They shalbe holy vnto their God, and not vnhalowe y name of their God: for they offre the sacrifice of the LORDE, the bred of their God, therefor shal they be holy.

They shall take no whore, ner one that is defyled, or y is put awaye from hir husbande, for he is holy vnto his God: therefor shal he sanctifie him self, for he offreth the bred of thy God. He shall be holy vnto the, for I am holy, even the LORDE that sanctifieth you.

Yf a prestes daughter fall to whoring, she shalbe burnt with fyre, for she hath shamed hir father. He that is hye prest amonys his brethren, vpō whose heade the anoyntinge oyle is poured, and his hande fylled (y he might be arayed with the vestiments) shal not vncover his heade, ner cut his clothes, y shall come at no deed, y shal defyle him self nether vpon father nor mother. And y LORDE talked with Moses, y sayde: Speake vnto Aaron, y saie: Yf there be a blenuysh vpō eny of thy sede in youre generacions, the same shall not preasse to offre the bred of his God: *For who so euer hath a blemish vpon him, shal not come nere, whether he be blynde, lame, with an euell fauoured nose, with eny myszshappen membre, or ye hath a broken fote or hande, or isroke backed, or hath eny blemish in the eye, or is gleyd, or is skyrvyte or scaulde, or hath his stones broken.

Who so euer now of the sede of Aaron ye prest hath eny blemish ypò him, shal not come nye to offfe ye sacrifice of the LORDE. For he hath a deforme. Therfore shall he not preasse vnto the bred of his God, to offfe it. Notwithstandinge he shal eate of the bred of his God, both of the holy, ye of ye most holy: but he shal not go in to ye vayle, ner come nye the altare (for so moch as he hath a blemish ypò him) ye he vnhalowe not my Sactuary. For I am ye LORDE ye sanctifieth the. And Moses spake this vnto Aaron ye to his sones, and to all the children of Israel.

The rixi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses ye sayde: Speake vnto Aaron ye his sones, ye they absteyne from ye halowed thinges of the childre of Israel, which they haue halowed vnto me, ye ye vnhalowe not my holy name: for I am ye LORDE. Saie now vnto them ye their posteritie: Who so euer he be of youre sede, ye commeth nye vnto the holy thinges, which the childre of Israel haule vnto the LORDE, ye so defyleth hem self vpon the same, his soule shal perishe before my face: for I am the LORDE.

Who so euer of the sede of Aaron is a leper, or hath a runnyng yssue, shal not eate of the holy thinges, tyll he be clensed. Who so toucheth eny vnclene thinge, or whose sede departeth from him by night, or who so toucheth eny worme that is vnclene vnto him, or a mæ ye is vnclene vnto him, ye what so euer defyleth hi, loke what soule toucheth eny soch, is vnclene vntyl the euen, ye shall not eate of the holy thinges, but shall first bath his flesh with water. And wha ye Sonne is gone downe, and he cleane, then maye he eate therof, for it is his foode. Loke what dyeth alone, or is rent of wylde beestes, shall he not eate, ye he be not vnclene theron: for I am ye LORDE. Therfore shal they kepe my lawe, ye they lade not synne vpon them, ye dye therin, when they vnhalowe them selues in it. For I am ye LORDE, ye haule them.

A straunger shal not eate of the holy thinges, ner an houesholde gest of the prestes, ner an hyred seruaunt. But ye prest bye a soule for his money, ye same maye eate therof. And loke who is borne in his house, maye eate of his bred also. Neuertheles ye of the prestes daughter be a strauengers wife, she shal not eate of the Heneofferinges of holynes. But ye she be a wedowe, or deuoured, or hane no sede, ye commeth agayne to his fathers house as afore (when she was yet a mayden in hir fathers house) then shal she eate of hir fathers bred. But no straunger shal eate thereof.

Who so els eate of the halowed thinges, vnwyttynge, shal put ye fifth parte there vnto, and geue it vnto the prest with the halowed thinge, that they vnhalowe not ye halowed thinges of the children of Israel, which they Heue yp vnto the LORDE, lest they lade them selues with myszdoinge and trespace, wha they eate their halowed thinges, for I am ye LORDE which halowe the.

And ye LORDE talked with Moses ye sayde: Speake vnto Aaron ye his sones, ye to all ye childre of Israel: ye What so euer Israelite or straunger in Israel wyll do his offerynge, whether it be their vowe, or of fre wyll, that they wyll offfe a burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, to reconcyle them selues, it shal be a male, and without blemish, of the oxen, or lambe or goates. ye What so euer hath eny blemish, shal they not offfe, for they shal fynde no faoure therewith.

And who so wyll offfe an healthofferinge vnto the LORDE to separate out a vowe, or of fre wyll, oxen or shepe, it shalbe without blemish, ye it maye be accepted. It shal haue no deformite. Ye it be blynde, or brokë, or wounded, or haue a wën, or skyrve, or scabbed, they shal offfe none soch vnto the LORDE, ner put an offerynge of eny soch ypò the altare of the LORDE.

An oxe or shepe ye hath myszshappe membres, or no rompe, mayest thou offfe of a fre wyll: but to a vowe it maye not be accepted. Thou shalt offfe also vnto the LORDE nothinge ye is brused, or broken, or rent, or cutt out, ye ye shal do no soch in youre londe. Morouer ye shall offfe no bred vnto youre God of a strauingers hande: for it is marred of him, and he hath a deformeitie, threfore shal it not be accepted for you.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Whi an ox, or lihe, or goat is brought forth, it shal be seuen days with the dame, and vpon the eights daye therafter it maie be offered vnto the LORDE, thie is it accepted. Whether it be oxe or lambe, it shall not be slayne with his yonge in one daye.

But wha ye wil offre a thakoffiringe vnto the LORDE ye it maye be accepted, ye shal eate it the same daye, kepe nothinge ouer vntyll the mornynge: for I am the LORDE. Therefore kepe now my commandements, and do them: for I am the LORDE, ye ye vnhalowe not my holy name, that I maye be halowed amonge the children of Israel. For I am he that halowe you, eué ye LORDE, which brought you out of ye lode of Egipte, eué I maye be youre God: Euen I ye LORDE.

The rruij. Chapter.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto ye children of Israel, and saye vnto them: These are ye feastes of the LORDE, which ye shal call holy days. Sixe dayes shalt thou worke, but the seuenthe day is the rest of the Sabbath, and shalbe called holy. Ye shal do no worke therin, for it is the Sabbath of the LORDE, where so euer ye dwell.

These are the feastes of the LORDE, ye called holy, which ye shal call youre feastes:

* Vpon ye fourenthe daye of ye first moneth at seuent, is the LORDES Easter. And vpon ye fifthene daye of the same moneth is the feast of vnhleuended bred of the LORDE. Then shall ye eate vnhleuended bred seuen dayes.

The first daye shalbe called holy amonge you, ye shal do no worke of bodeage therin, seué daies shal ye offre vnto ye LORDE. The seuenthe daie shalbe called holy likewise, wherin ye shal do no worke of bondage also.

And ye LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the childre of Israel, and saye vnto them: When ye come in to the lande I shall gene you, and reape downe youre haruest, ye shal bryngye a shefe of youre haruest vnto the prest, the shal the shefe be wauned before the LORDE, that ye maye be accepted: but this shal the prest do the nexte daye after the Sabbath. And ye same daye that youre shefe is wauned, shal ye offre a burntoffiringe vnto the LORDE, of a lambe which is without blemish and of one yeare olde, with the meatoffirynge, two tenth deales of fyne flourne mengled with oule, for an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE: ye the drynoffirynge also, eué the fourth parte of an Hyn of wyne.

And ye shall eatte neither bred, nor cakes, nor furmenty (of new corne) till the same daye that ye brynge an offerynge vnto youre God. This shalbe a lawe vnto youre posterieues, where so ener ye dwell.

Then shal ye nombre (from the nexte daye after the Sabbath, when ye brought ye Wuneshewe) seuen whole wekes, vntyll the nexte daie after ye seueth weke, namely, fifte deies, shal ye nombre, and offre new meatofferynges vnto the LORDE. And out of all youre dwellynges shal ye offre, namely, two Wane loanes of two tenth deales of fyne flourne leuended, and baken for the first frutes vnto ye LORDE. And with youre bred ye shal bryngye seuen lambes of one yeare olde without blemish, and a yonge bullocke, and two rammes: this shalbe the LORDES burntoffirynge, meatoffirynge, and drynoffirynge. This is a sacrificue of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

Morover ye shal offre an he goate for a synoffirynge, and two lambes of a yeare olde for an healthoffirynge. And ye prest shal wane it vpon the bred of the first frutes before the LORDE with the two lambes. And they shalbe holy vnto the LORDE, and shal be the prestes. And this daie shal ye proclame, for it shalbe called holy amongethe you: no seruyle worke shal ye do therin. A perpetuall lawe shal it be amongethe youre posterieues, where so ener ye dwell.

*Whan ye reape downe y barring of youre londe, ye shal not cut it cleane downe v pon the feld, ner gather vp al, but shal leave it for the poore and straungers. I am the LORDE youre God.

And ye LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Vpon the first daye of the seuenthe moneth shal ye hauie the holy rest of the

F And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Vpon the fiftene daye of the seuenth moneth, is the feast of Tabernacles seuen dayes vnto the LORDE. The first daye shal be an holy couocacion: no seruyle worke shal ye do therin. Seuen dayes shal ye offre vnto the LORDE. The euene daye shalbe an holy couocacion vnto you also, and ye shal offre vnto the LORDE: for it is the daye of gatheringe together: No seruyle worke shal ye do therin. These are the holy daies of the LORDE, which ye shall proclaim and holde for holy couocacions, that ye maye offre vnto the LORDE burntofferinges, meatofferinges, drynkofferinges and other offeringes, euerie one accordance to his daye, besyde the Sabbathes of the LORDE, and youre giftes, and vowes, and frewyofferinges, that ye offre vnto the LORDE.

G So vpon the fiftene daye of the seuenth moneth, whan ye haue brought in the increase of the londe, ye shal kepe the LORDES feast seuen dayes longe. The first daye shalbe kepe holy daye, and the eight daye shalbe kepe holy daye also. And vpon the first daie ye shal take of your dailye fruitfull trees, branches of palme trees, bowes of thicke trees, and WWEllies of the broke, and seuene dayes shal ye be mery before the LORDE your God: and thus shal ye kepe the feast vnto the LORDE seuen dayes in the yere. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe amonge your posterities, that they kepe holy daye thus in the seuenth moneth. Seuen dayes shal ye dwell in bothes. Who so euer is an Israelitish borne, shal dwell in bothes, that they which come after you, maye knowe, how that I made your children of Israel to dwell in bothes, when I brought them out of the lode of Egipte. I am the LORDE youre God. And Moses tolde the children of Israel these holy daies of the LORDE.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, a sayde: Conaunde the children of Israel, that they brynge pure oyle olyue beaten for lightes, that it maye be allwaye put in the lampes, withoute before the vape of wytnesse in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aaron shall dresse it allwaye at euens in the morynge before the LORDE. Let this be a perpetuall lawe vnto your posterities. The läpes shal he dresse vpon the pure candilistcke before the LORDE perpetually.

And thou shalt take fyne floure, and bake twelue cakes thereof: two oftenth deales shal be every cake haue, and thou shalt laye them sице upon a rowe vpo the pure table before the LORDE. And vpon the same shalt thou laye pure frankencense, that it maye be bred of remembrance for an offeringe vnto the LORDE. Every Sabbath shal he prepare the before the LORDE allwaye, and receaue them of the children of Israel for an euerlastinge couenaunt. And they shalbe Aarons sonnes, which shal eate them in the holy place. For this is his most holy of the offeringes of the LORDE for a perpetuall dewyte.

And there went out an Israelitish womans sonne, which was the child of a man of Egipte (amonge the children of Israel) and stonde in the hoost with a man of Israel, *and named the name of God blasphemously, cursed. Then brought they him vnto Moses. His mothers name was Selomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan. * And they put him in preson, till they were inforrned by the mouth of the LORDE.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Brynge him that cursed, out of the hoost, and let all the that herde it, laye their handes vpon his heade, and let the whole congregacion stone him. And saye vnto the childrē of Israel: † Who so euer blasphemeth his God, shall beare his synne: and he that blasphemeth the name of the LORDE, shal dye the death. The whole congregacion shal stone him. As the straunger, so shal he of the housole be also. Yf he blaspheme the name, he shal dye.

He that slayeth a man, shall dye y death, but * he that slayeth a beest, shall paye for it. Soule for soule. And he that maymeth his neigbour, it shall be done vnto him, euен as he hath done: broke for broke, † eye for eye, tothe for tothe: euен as he hath maymed a man, so shal it be done vnto him agayne, so that, who so slayeth a beest, shall paye for it: But he that slayeth a man, shall dye. There shall be one maner of lawe amonge you, to y straunger as to one of youre selues: for I am the LORDE youre God.

Moses tolde the children of Israel. And they brought him that had cursed, out of y hoost, and stoned him. Thus dyd the childrē of Israel as the LORDE commandde Moses.

The 17th Chapter.

And the LORDE talked with Moses vpon mount Sinai, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: * When ye come in to the londe, y I shal geue you, the londe shal rest vnto the LORDE, so that thou sowye thy feldes sixe yeares, and sixe yeares cut thy vynes, and gather in the frutes. But in the seventh yeare the lode shal haue his Sabbath of rest for a Sabbath vnto the LORDE, wherin thou shalt not sowye thy feldes ner cut thy vynes.

Loke what groweth of it self after thy har-nest, thou shalt not reape it. And the grapes that growe without thy labouroure, shalt thou not gather, for so much as it is the yeare of the londes rest: * But the rest of the londe shall thou kepe for this intent, that thou mayest eate therof, thy seruaunte, thy mayde, thy hyrelinge, thy gest, thy straiger with the, thy catell, and the beestes in thy londe. All the increase shal be meate.

And thou shalt nombre seuen of these yeares Sabbathes, that seuen yeares maye be tolde seuen tymes, and so the tyme of the seuen yeare Sabbathes make nyne and fourtye yeares. Then shalt thou let the blast of the horne go thorow all youre londe, vpon the tenth daye of the seuenth moneth, euen in y daye of attonement. And ye shal halowe the fiftieth yeare, and shall call it a fre yeare in y londe, for all them that dwell therin: for it is the yeare of Jubilye. ‡ Then shall euery one amonge you come agayne to his possession and to his kynred: for the fiftieth yeare is y yeare of Jubilye. Ye shal not sowe ner reape it that groweth of it self, ner gather the grapes, that growe without labour. For the yeare of Jubilye shal be holy amonge you. But loke what the feldes beareth, that shall ye eate. This is the yeare of Jubilye, wherin ye shall come againe euery man to his owne.

Now whan thou sellest ought vnto thy neigbourre, or byest any thinge of him, there shal none of you oppresse his brother: but acordinge to the nombre of the yeare of Jubilye shalt thou bye it of him: and acordinge to the nombre of the yeares of increase shall he sell it vnto the. Acordinge to the multitude of the yeares shal thou rayse the pryce, and acordinge to the fewnnesse of the yeares shalt thou mynish the pryce: for he shall sell it vnto the acordinge to the nombre of the increase. Therfore let no man de-fraude his neigbourre, but feare thy God. For I am the LORDE youre God. Wherefore do after my statutes, and kepe my lawes, so y ye do them that ye maye dwell safe in the londe. For the londe shal geue you hir frute, so that ye shal have ynough to eate, and dwell safe therin.

And yf ye wolde saye: What shall we eate in the seuenth yeare, in as mouch as we shall not sowe, ner gather in oure increase? I wyll sende my blessynges vpon you in the sixte yeare, that it shal bryngye forth frute for thre yeare: so that ye shal sowye in y eight yeare, and eate of the olde frute vntyl the nyeneth yeare, that ye maye eate of the olde tyll new frutes come agayne. Therfore shall ye not sell the londe for euer, *for the lode is mine.

And ye are straungers and indwellers before me.
And in all youre lande shall ye gene the londe to lowse.

* When thy brother waxeth poore, and selleth thy possession, and his nexte kynszmâ commeth to him, yhe maye redeeme it: then shall he redeeme that his brother solde.
But when a man hath none to redeeme it, and ca get so much with his ende as to redeeme one parte, then shall it be reahkaned how many yeares it hath bene solde, and the remnant shall be restored vnto him to whom he solde it, yhe maie come agayne to his possession.
But yf his haund can not get so much, as to haue one parte agayne, the shal it yhe solde be styll in the hande of the byer vntyll yeare of Iubyle.
In y same shal it go out, and returne to his owner agayne.

He that selleth a dwellinge house within the walles of the cite, hath an whole yeare respety to lowse it out agayne: that shall be the tyme, wherin he maye redeeme it.
But yf he redeeme it not afore the whole yeare be out, then shal he that bough it, and his succours kepe it for euer, and it shall not goe out lowse in the yeare of Iubyle.
Neuertheles yf it be an house in a vyllage that hath no wall aboute it, it shall be counted like vnto the felde of the cotre, and maye be redeemed and shal go out fre in the yeare of Iubyle.

The citie of the Leuites, and the houses in the citie that their possession is in, maye allwaye be redeemed.
Who so purchaseth ought of the Leuites, shal leave it in the yeare of Iubyle, whether it be house or cite that he hath had in possession.
For the houses in the citie of the Leuites are their possession amoung the children of Israel.
But the felde before their citie shal not be solde, for it is their awne for euer.

When thy brother waxeth poore, and falleth in decaye bysede the, thou shalt receaue him as a straunger, or gest, that he maye lyue by the: and thou shalt take no vsury of him, ner more then thou hast geue, but shalt feare thy God, that thy brother maye lyue bysede the.
For thou shalt not lende him thy money vpon vsury, ner deluyer him thy meate vpon vaughte.
For I am the LORDE youre God, which haue brought you out of the lode of Egipte, to gene you the lande of Canaan, and to be youre God.

* When thy brother waxeth poore besyde the, and selleth himself vnto the, thou shalt not holde him as a bôde mâ: but as an hyred seruaunte and as a soiourner shal he be with the, and serue the vntyll yeare of Iubyle.
Then shal he departe lowse from the, of his childre with him, yshal returne to his awne kinred, and to his fathers possession: for they are my seruauntes, whom I brought out of the londe of Egipte.
Therfore shal they not be solde like bondmen.
And thou shalt not raigne ouer them with crueltie, but shalt feare thy God.
But yf thou wylt haue bôde seruauntes and maydens, thou shalt bye them of the Heithen, that are rounde aboute you: of the children of the soiourners and straungers amounge you, and of their generacions with you, and that are borne in youre londe, the same shal ye haue for bonde seruauntes, yshal possesse them, yf youre children after you for an euerlastinge possession, these shalbe youre bondmen.
But ouer youre brethren the children of Israel, there shal none of you raigne ouer another with crueltie.

When a straunger or soiourner waxeth ryche by the, and thy brother waxeth poore besyde him, y sellethe him self vnto y straunger or soiourner by the, or to eny of his kinne, then shall he haue right (after that he is solde) to be redeemed agayne.
And eny of his brethren maye lowse him out: or his vncle or his vncles sonne, or eny other kynszman of his kyured:
Or yf his awne haande getteth so much, he shall lowse him self out, and shal reken with him that bought him, from y yeare that he solde him self, vntyll the yeare of Iubyle.
And y money shal be counted acordinge to the nombre of the yeares that he was solde, and his wages of the whole tyme shalbe rekened withall.

Yf there be yet many yeares vnto y yeare of Iubyle, then shal he (acordinge to the same) gene the more for his deluyeraunce, thereafter as he is solde.
Yf there remayne but few yeares vnto the yeare of Iubyle, then shall he gene agayne thereafter for his redempcion.
And his wages from yeare to yeare shall he reken withall, and thou shalt not let

Ye shall make you no Idols nor ymage, and ye shall reare you vp no pilere, ne set vp eny markstone in youre londe, to bowe youre selues thereto. For I am the LORDE youre God. Kepe my Sabbathes, and stonde in awe of my Sanctuary. I am the LORDE.

Ye shall chace youre enemies, for the other raigne cruelly ouer him in thy sight. But ye he bye not him self out after this maner, then shal he go out fre in the yeare of Jubilee, and his childe with him: for the children of Israel are my seruauntes, which I haue brought out of the londe of Egipte. I am the LORDE youre God.

Ye shall make you no Idols ner ymage, and ye shall reare you vp no pilere, ne set vp eny markstone in youre londe, to bowe youre selues thereto. For I am the LORDE youre God. Kepe my Sabbathes, and stonde in awe of my Sanctuary. I am the LORDE.

And I wyl set my face against you, and ye shal be slayne before youre enemies. And they that hate you, shal have dominion ouer you. And ye shall set vp, wha no man chaseth you.

But ye wyl not harken vnto me for all this, then wyl I make it ye seven tyme more, to punysh you for youre synnes, that I maye breake vp pryde of youre strength, and wyl make youre heauen lyke yron, and youre earth as brasse: and youre trauaile and laboure shall be but lost, so that youre londe shall not gene hir increase, and the trees in the londe shal not brynge forth their frute.

Ye shall eate youre bred in plenteoueness, and shal dweel safe in youre londe. I wil geue peace in youre londe, so that ye shall sleepe, and no man shal make you afraied. I wyl ryd euell beestes out of youre londe, and shal not swerde go thorow youre londe.

But ye wyl not ye seven tyme more, to punysh you for your synnes, that I maye breake vp pryde of your strength, and wyl make youre heauen lyke yron, and youre earth as brasse: and youre traualie and laboure shall be but lost, so that youre londe shall not gene hir increase, and the trees in the londe shal not brynge forth their frute.

Ye shall eate of your londe, and let it be soule, for the trees of your londe shal bringe forth their frute. And the threeshinge tymne shal reache vnto the wyne haruest, and the wyne haruest shal reache vnto the sowynge tymne. And ye shal eate your londe in plenteoueness, and shall dweel safe in your londe. I wil geue peace in your londe, so that ye shall sleepe, and no man shall make you afraied. I wyl ryd euell beestes out of your londe, and there shall not swerde go thorow your londe.

Ye shal chace your enemies, for the other raigne cruelly ouer him in thy sight. But ye he bye not him self out after this maner, then shal he go out fre in the yeare of Jubilee, and his childe with him: for the children of Israel are my seruauntes, which I haue brought out of the londe of Egipte. waist, and brynge youre churches to naught, and wyl not smell youre swete odoures.
Thus wyl I make the londe desolate, so that youre enemies shall dwell therin, and make it waist: but you will I scater amonst the Heythen, and drawe out the swerde after you, so that youre londe shall be waist, a youre cities desolate.

Then shall the londe rejoyse in hir Sabbathes, as longe as it lyeth wayst, and ye be in the enemies londe. Yee then shal the londe kepe holy daye, and rejoyse in hir rest, as longe as it lieth wayst, because it coude not rest in youre Sabbathes, whan ye dwelt therin.
And as for them that remayne of you, I wyl make them faynte harte in the londe of their enemies, so that a shakynge leaf shall chace them. And they shall flye from it, as though a swerde persected them, and shall fall noman folowyng vpon them. And they shall fall one vpon another (as it were before the swerde) and noman yet chacyng them. And ye shall not be so bolde, as to withstande youre enemies, and shal periske amonst the Heythen, and the londe of youre enemies shal eate you vp.

And they that are left of you, shal pyt awaye in their myszedee, euyn in the enemies londe, and in the myszedees of their fathers shall they consume awaye. Then shall they knoweledge their myszedees, and the myszedees of their fathers in the trespace, wherwith they haue trespassed agaynst me, and walked contrary vnto me. Therfore wyl I also walke contrary vnto the, and wyl brynge them in to the enemies londe.

Then shal their vncreemysed herte be tamed. And then shal they ende their myszedees. And I shal thinke vpo my couenaunt with Iacob, and vpon my couenaunt with Isaac, and vpon my couenaunt with Abraham, and wyl thinke vpon the lode. As for the londe, when it shalbe left of them, it shal rejoyse in hir Sabbathes, euyn then, when it lyeth waist, and they tylle it not. And they shall make attonement for their myszedees, because they despyssed my lawes, a their soules refused my statutes. Morowe I haue not so refused them, that they shulde be in the enemies londe: nether haue I so ytterly abhorred them, that I wolde brynge them to naught, and breake my couenaunt with them:

for I am y LORDE their God. And for their sake wyl remembre my first couenaunt, wha I brought them out of y londe of Egipte in the sight of the Heythen, y I might be their God. Euen I the LORDE.

These are the ordinaunces, statutes and lawes, which y LORDE made betwixe him and the children of Israel vpon mount Sinai, by the hande of Moses.

The xvii. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, y sayde: Speake to y children of Israel, y saye vnto them: Yf eny man make a speciall vowe vnto y LORDE, so y he prysye a soule, then shal this be the valuacon: A mā of twentye yeare olde vnto the thre score yeare, shal thou set at fiftie syluer Sycles, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary: but a woman at thirtie Sycles. Yf it be fyue yeare olde vnto twentye yeare, thou shalt set it at twentye Sycles, whan it is a man child: but a woman at ten Sycles. Yf it be a moneth olde vnto fiue yeare, thou shalt set it at fyve Sycles of syluer, whan it is a māchilde: but a woman at thre Syluer Sycles. Yf he be thre score yeare olde and aboue, thē shal thou set him at fiftene Sicles wha it is a mā: a womā at tē Sicles. Yf he be to poore so to be set, thē let him present himself to y prest, a y prest shall value him. Neuertheles he shal value him, acordinge as y hāde of him that vowed, is able to get. But yf it be a beest y maye be offred vnto y LORDE, all y is offred vnto y LORDE of soch, is holy: it shall not be alterned nor chaunge, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good. Yf eny man chaunge it, one beest for another, then shal they both be holy vnto y LORDE. But yf y beest be vnclene which maye not be offred vnto y LORDE, thē shal it be set, before y prest, and y prest shall value it, whether it be good or bad, a it shall stonde at the prestes valuyng. But yf eny man wil bye it out, he shal geue the fift parte more, to that it was set at.

Whan eny mā sanctifieth his house vnto the LORDE for y Sanctuary, the prest shall value it, whether it be good or bad. And as the prest valueth it, so shal it stonde. But yf he y sanctifieth it, wyl redeeme it, he shal geue y fift parte of syluer therto, aboue that it was set at: So shal it be his.
Yf eny man halowe a pece of lode of his heretage vnto the LORDE, it shal be set acordinge to y it bareth. Yf it beare an Homer of barlye, it shal be valued at fiftie Sycles of syluer. But yf he halowe his londe immediately from the yeare of Jubilie forth, then shal it be set acordinge to y value therof. Yf he have halowed it after the yeare of Jubilie, then shal the prest reketh it, acordinge to y yeares y remayne vnto y yeare of Jubilie, 4 therafter shal he set it the lower.

But yf he y sanctified the londe, wil redeeme it agayne, then shal he geue the fifth parte of syluer thereto, aboue that it was set at: So shal it be his. Yf he wil not lowse it out, but selleth it vnto another, then shal he redeeme it nomore: but the same londe whan it goeth out fre in y yeare of Jubilie, shal be holy vnto the LORDE, as a dedicated felde, and shalbe the prestes inheritance.

Yf eny man halowe vnto the LORDE a felde, which he hath bought, and is not his inheritance, then shal the prest reketh it, what it is worth vnto the yeare of Jubilie, 4 the same daye shal he geue the pryce that it is set at, vnto the LORDE for the Sanctuary. But in y yeare of Jubilie it shal returne vnto him that bought it, y it maye be his inheritance in the londe. All maner of prysinge shalbe made acordinge to the Sycle of the Sanctuary. One Sycle maketh xx. Geras.

And ye shal nombre them according to their armyes thou and Aaron, and of euerie trybe ye shal* take vnto you one captayne ouer his fathers house.

These are the awncient men of the congre-gacion, the captaynes amonge the trybes of their fathers, which were heads and prynces in Israel.

And Moses ð Aaron toke them (like as they are there named by name) and gathered the whole cogeracjion together also, þ first daye of the seconde moneth, and rekened the after their byrth, acordinge to their kynreds and fathers houses by their names, fro twete yeare and aboue, heade by heade, as the LORDE commaunded Moses, and nomberd them in the wyldernes of Sinai.

The children of Ruben Israels first sonne, their kynreds ð generations after their fathers houses, in þ nombre of their names heade by heade, all þ were males, from twentye yeare ð aboue, and were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Ruben, sixe and fouertye thousande, and fyue hundreth.

The children of Simeon their kynreds ð generations after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names heade by heade, all that were males from twete yeare and aboue, and were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Symeon, nyne and fiftie thousande and thre hundreth.

The children of Gad their kynreds and generations after their fathers houses in þ nombre of the names, from twentye yeare and aboue, all that were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Gad, fyue and fouertye thousande, sixe hundreth and fiftie.

The children of Iuda their kynreds and generations after their fathers houses in þ nombre of the names, from twentye yeare and aboue, all that were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Iuda, foure and seuentie thousande, sixe hundreth.

The children of Ischar their kynreds ð generations, after their fathers houses in þ nombre of the names from twentye yeare ð aboue, all that were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Ischar, foure and fiftie thousande and foure hundreth.

The children of Zabulon their kynreds and generations after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names from twentye yeare ð aboue, all that were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Zabulon, seuen and fiftie thousande and foure hundreth.

Iosephs children of Ephraim, their kynreds ð generations after their fathers houses in þ nombre of the names, from twete yeare ð aboue, all þ were able to go forþ to þ warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Ephraim, fouertye thousande ð fyue hundreth.

The children of Manasse their kynreds ð generations, after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names from twentye yeare ð aboue, all þ were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Manasse, two ð thirtie thousande ð two hundreth.

The childre of Ben Iamin their kynreds and generations, after their fathers houses, in the nombre of the names from twentye yeare ð aboue, all that were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Ben Iamin, fyue and thirtie thousande and foure hundreth.

The children of Dan their kynreds and generations after their fathers houses, in the nombre of the names, from twentye yeares and aboue, all that were able to go forþ to the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Dan, two and thre score thousande, and seuen hundreth.

The childre of Asser their kynreds ð generations, after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names, from twentye yeare ð aboue, all þ were able to go forþ to þ warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Asser, one ð fouertye thousande and fyue hundreth.

The childre of Nephthali, their kynreds and generations after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names, from twentye yeare ð aboue, all that were able to go forþ vnto the warre, were nomberd to the trybe of Nepthali, thre and fiftie thousande and foure hundred.

These are they whom Moses and Aaron nombred with \( \frac{1}{2} \) twolue princes of Israel, whereof euery one was ouer \( \frac{1}{2} \) house of their fathers. *And the summe of the children of Israel after their fathers houses, from twentye yeare and above (what so euer was able to go forth to the warre in Israel) was sixe \( C \) thousande, thre thousande, fyue \( C \) fiftie. But the Louites after the trybe of their fathers, were not nombred amongeth them.

\( \frac{3}{5} \) And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and saide: The trybe of Leui shalt thou not nombre, nor take the summe of them amongeth \( \frac{1}{2} \) children of Israel: but shalt appoynte them to the Habitacion of wytnesse, and to all \( \frac{1}{2} \) apparell therof, and to all that belongeth therto. †And they shall beare the Tabernacle \( g \) all the ordinance therof, and shal wayte vpon it, and shal pitch their tentes rounde aboute it. And when men shal go on their iourney, the Leuites shall take downe \( \frac{1}{2} \) Tabernacle. And when the hoost pitch their têtes, they shal set vp the Tabernacle. And \( yf \) a strange preasse nye vnto it, he shall dye. The children of Israel shal pitch their tentes, euery one in his awne armie, and by the baner of his awne companye. But the Leuites shall pitch rounde aboute the Tabernacle of wytnesse, that there come no wrath vpon \( \frac{1}{2} \) congregacion of the children of Israel: therfore shal the Leuites wayte vpon the Habitacion of wytnesse. And the children of Israel dyd all, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The iiij. Chapter.

\( \frac{2}{3} \) And \( \frac{1}{2} \) LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, \( q \) sayde: The children of Israel shal pitch rounde aboute \( \frac{1}{2} \) Tabernacle of wytnesse, euery one vnder his banner \( g \) tokens, after their fathers houses.

On the East syde shal Iuda pitch with his banner \( q \) hoost, their captayne Nahasson the sonne of Aminab. And his armie in the summe, foure \( g \) seuentie thousande and siche hundredth. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Isachar pitch, their captayne Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar: and his armie in the summe, foure and fiftie thousande and foure hundredth. The trybe of Zabulon also, their captayne Eliab the sonne of Helon: his armie in the summe, seuen and fiftie thousande and foure hundredth.

So \( \frac{1}{2} \) all they which beloinge to \( \frac{1}{2} \) hoost of Iuda, be in the summe an \( C \) siche and foure thousande, \( g \) foure hundredth be longinge to their armie, \( q \) they shall go before.

On the South syde shal lye the pauylions \( q \) baner of Ruben with their hoost, their captayne Elizur \( y \) sonne of Sedeur: \( q \) his armie in the summe, siche \( g \) fourtie thousande, \( g \) fyue \( C \). Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Simeon pitch, their captayne Selumiel \( y \) sonne of Zuri Sadai: \( g \) his armie in \( y \) summe, nyne and fiftie thousande, and thre hundredth. The trybe of Gad also, their captayne Eliasaph \( y \) sonne of Dегuel: \( g \) his armie in the summe, fyue \( C \) fourtie thousande, siche hundredth \( q \) fiftie. So that all they which belonge to the hoost of Ruben, be in the summe, an hundredth, one \( q \) fiftie thousande, foure hūdrehent and fiftie, belonginge to their armie. And they shall be the seconde in the iourney.

After that shall the Tabernacle of wytnesse go with the hoost of the Leuites euе in \( y \) myydes amōge the hoostes: \( q \) as they lye in their tentes, so shal they go forth also, euery one in his place vnder his baner.

On the West syde shal lye \( y \) pauylions \( q \) baner of Ephraim with their hoost: their captayne Shallab \( l \) Lisamah sonne of Amihud, and his armie in the summe, fourtie thousande and fyue hundredth. Nexte vnto him shal \( y \) trybe of Manasse pitch, their captayne Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur: his armie in the summe, two and thirte thousande \( q \) two hūdrehenth. The trybe of Benjamin also, their captayne Abidan the sonne of Gedeoni: his armie in the summe, fyue and thirte thousande \( q \) foure hundredth. So \( y \) all they which belonge to the hoost of Ephraim, be in the summe, an hundredth thousande, eighth thousande, \( q \) an hūdrehent, belonginge to his armie. And they shall be the thirde in the iourney.

On the North syde shal lye \( y \) pauylions \( q \) baner of Dan with their hoost: their captayne Ahiesser \( y \) sonne of Ammi Sadai, his armie in the summe, two and sixtye thousande and seuē hundredth. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Aser pitche: their captayne Pagiel \( y \) sonne of Oehran, his armie in the summe, one and fourtie thousande, and fyue hundredth.

* Exo. 12, f. Num. 11, c.
† 1 Par. 14, d.
saide: Beholde, I haue taken the Leuites from amonge the children of Israel, for all the first borne that open the Matrix amonge the children of Israel, so that the Leuites shalbe myne. For the first borne are myne, sence it tythe that I smote all the first borne in the lande of Egipte, wha I sanctified vnto me all the first borne in Israel, from me vnto catell, that they shulde be myne. I the LORDE.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the wyldernesse of Sinai, and sayde: NOMBRE the children of Leui after their fathers houses and kynreds, all that are males of a moneth olde and aboue.

So Moses nombred them acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, as he had commaunded. And these were the children of Leui with their names: Gerson, Kahath, Merari. The names of the children of Gerson in their kynreds, were: Libni and Semei.

The children of Merari in their kynreds, were Maheli and Musi. These are the kynreds of Leui after their fathers houses.

These are the kynreds of Gerson: The Libnites and Semeites, the summe was founde in nombre, seven thousande and fyve hundreth, of all that were males of a moneth olde and aboue. And the same kynreds of the Gersonites shal pitche behinde the Habitation on the west syde: Let Eliasaph the sonne of Lael be their ruler. And they shal waite vpon the Tabernacle of wytnesse, of the habitation, and of the tent, and couerynges therof, and the hangynge in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, the hangynge aboute the courte, the hangynge in the courtedore, which (courte) goeth aboute the habitation and the alter, and the cortes of it, all that belongeth to the seruycy therof.

These are the kynreds of Kahath: The Amramites, the Iezeharites, the Hebronites, and Vsielites, all that were males of a moneth olde in nombre eight thousande and sixe hundreth, waytinge vpon the Tabernacle of the Sanctuary, shal pitchon the south syde of the Habitation: Let Elisaphan the sonne of Vsiel be their ruler. And they shal kepe the Arke, the table, the candilistcke, the altere and all the vessels of the Sanctuary, to do seruyc in, and the vayle, and all that belongeth to the service thereof. But the chefe of all the rulers of the Leuites, shalbe Eleasar the sonne of Aron the prest, ouer them that are apoynted to kepe the watch of the Sanctuary.

These are \( \xi \) kynreds of Merari: The Mahelites and Musites, which were in nombre sixe thousande and two hundreth, all that were males of a moneth olde and aboue: Let Zuriel \( \xi \) sonne of Abihail be their ruler, and they shall pitche vpon the north syde of the Habitacion. And their office shalbe to kepe the bordes, and barres, and pilers, and sokettes of the Habitacion, and all the apparell therof and that serueth thereto: \( \xi \) pilers also aboute \( \xi \) courte, with the sokettes, and males, and cordes.

But before the Habitacion and before \( \xi \) Tabernacle on the East syde shal Moses \( \xi \) Aaron \( \xi \) hys sonnes pytche, that they maye wayte vpon the Sanctuary, \( \xi \) the children of Israel. *Yf any other prease thereto, he shal dye.

"All the Leuites in the summe, whom Moses and Aaron nombred after their kynreds, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, all that were males, of a moneth olde and aboue, were two and twentye thousande.

And \( \xi \) LORDE saide vnto Moses: Nombre all the first borne, that are males amoung the children of Israel, of a moneth olde and aboue, and take the nombre of their names. *And \( \xi \) Leuites shalt thou take out vnto me the LORDE, for all \( \xi \) first borne of \( \xi \) children of Israel, \( \xi \) the catell of the Leuites for all the first borne amoung the catell of \( \xi \) children of Israel. And Moses nombred all the first borne amoung the children of Israel, as the LORDE commaunded him. And in the nombre of the names of all the first borne, that were males of a moneth olde \( \xi \) aboue, in their summe, there were foude two and twentye thousande, two hundreth, and thre and seuentynye.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, \( \xi \) sayde: Take the Leuites for all \( \xi \) first borne amoung the children of Israel, \( \xi \) the catell of the Leuites for their catell, \( \xi \) the Leuites maye be myne the LORDES. *But the redemption money of the two hundreth thre \( \xi \) seuentynye \( \xi \) remayne of the first borne of the children of Israel, aboue the nombre of the Leuites, shalt thou take, euon fyue Sycles of euery heade, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary \( \xi \) (one Sycle is worth twentye Geras) \( \xi \) the money \( \xi \) remayneth ouer their nôbre, shalt thou gene vnto Aaron and his sonnes.

Then toke Moses \( \xi \) redemption money (that remayned ouer aboue the nombre of the Leuites) from \( \xi \) first borne of the children of Israel, euen a thousande, thre hundreth, and fyue and thre score Sycles, after \( \xi \) Sycle of the Sanctuary, \( \xi \) gaued it vnto Aaron and his sonnes, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The iiiij. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses \( \xi \) Aaron, \( \xi \) sayde: Take \( \xi \) summe of the children of Kahath from amonge the children of Leui, after their kynreds \( \xi \) fathers houses; from thirtie yeare and aboue vntill fiftie yeare, all that are mete for the warre, that they maye do the worke in the Tabernacle of witnesse. This shal be the office of the children of Kahath in the Tabernacle of wytynesse, which is most holy.

When the hoost breaketh vp, Aaron and his sonnes shall go in, and take downe the vayle, and couer the Arke of wytnesse therwith, and laye the couerynge of doo skynnnes vpon it, and sprede a whole yalowe clothe aboue theron, and put his staues therin. And vpon the shewes table shal sprede a yalowe clado also, and set theron the dishes, spones, flatpees and pottes to poure out and in, and the daylie bred shal lye vpon it, and they shal sprede a purple clado therouer, and couer it with a couerynge of doo skynnnes, and put the staues of it therin.

And they shal take a yalowe clado, and couer the cadilstick of light therwith, and his lampes, with his snoters and outquenchers, and all the oyle vessels that belonge to the seruyc, and aboue all this shal they put a couerynge of doo skynnnes, and put it vpon staues.

So shal they sprede a yalowe clothe ouer the golden altare also, and couer the same with a couerynge of doo skynnnes, and put it vpon staues. All the vessels that they occupye in the Sanctuary, shal they take, and put a.
yeowe clothe ther ouer, & couer them with a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put them vpon stauen. They shal swepe the ashes also from the altare, and sprede a clothe of scarlet ouer it, and set all his vessels theron, that they occupye vpon it: colepannes, fleshokes, shouels, basens, with all the apparell of the altare, and they shal sprede a couerynge of doo skynnes theron, and put his stauen thereto.

Now when Aaron and his sones haue done this, and haue couered the Sanctuary & all the ornamentes therof, when the hoost breaketh vp, *then shal the children of Kahath go in, that they maye beare it, and the Sanctuary shall they not touche, * lest they dye. This is the charge of the childrè of Kahath in the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

And Eleasar the sonne of Aaron ¤ prest, shal haue the office, to prepare the oyle for the light, and the spyces for the incense, and the daylie meat offerynge, and the anointyng oyle, to order the whole habitation, & all that therin is, in the Sanctuary and the ornamentes therof.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, & sayde: Ye shal not destroye the trebe of the kynred of the Kahathites amouge the Leuites, but this shal ye do with them, ¶ they maye lyue & not dye, ¶ if they touche the most holy. Aaron and his sones shal go in, and appoynte euery one vnto his office & charge. But they shal not go in, presumptuously to loke vpo the Sanctuary, lest they die.

And ¶ LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron & sayde: Take the summe of the children of Gerson also, ¶ after their fathers hous e kynred, from thirtie yeare & aboue, vntyll fiftie yeare, ¶ appoynte them all ¶ are mete for the warre, to haue an office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

This shalbe the office of the kynred of the Gersonites, euë to serue & to beare. They shal beare the curtyanes of the habitation and of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and his couerynge and the couering of doo skynnes, that is aboue theron, and the hangeinge in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the hangeinge aboute the courte, which goeth aboute the habitation and the altare, and their cordes, and all the instrumentes ¶ serue for thee, and all that belongeth to their occypience. Acordinge vnto the worde of Aaron and of his sones, shal all the office of the children of Gerson be done, what so euë they shall beare and occupye. And ye shal se, that they wanye vpon all their charge. This shall be ¶ office of ¶ kynred of ¶ childre of ¶ Gersonites in ¶ Tabernacle of witnes. And their waytynge shall be vnder ¶ hede of Ithamar, the sonne of Aerö the prest.

The children of Merari after their kynred and fathers house, shaltho appoynte also, from thirtie yeare and aboue, vnto fiftie yeare, all that are mete for the warre, ¶ they maye haue an office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. But vpon this charge they wanye accordinge to all their office in ¶ Tabernacle of witnesse, that they beare the bordes of the Habitacion, and the barres, and pilers, and sokettes: the pilers of the courte also ronde aboute, and the sokettes and nales and cordes, with all their apparell, accordinge to all their seruye. And vnto euery one shall ye appoynte his porcion of charge to waiete vpon the apparell. Let this be the office of the kyred of the children of Merari, all that they shall do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse vnder the hande of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest.

And Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of the congregacion, nombred the children of ¶ Kahathites, accordinge to their kynreds and houses of their fathers, from thirtie yeare and aboue, vntyll fyttye yeare, all that were mete for the warre, to haue office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the summe was, two thousande, seuen hundreth and fyttye. This is the summe of the kynred of the Kahathites (which all had seruye in the Tabernacle of witnesse) whom Moses and Aaron nombred, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The children of Gerson were nombred also in their kynreds and fathers houses from thirtie yeare and aboue vntyll fyttye, all that were mete for the warre, to haue office in ¶ Tabernacle of witnesse, and the summe was two thousande, syxe hundreth and thirtie. This is ¶ summe of the kinred of the childre of Gerson, which all had to do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, accordinge to ¶ worde of ¶ LORDE.

The children of Merari were nombred also accordinge to their kynreds and fathers houses, from thirtie yeare and aboue vntyl fiftie, all that were mete for the warre, to haue office in the Tabernacle of witnesse, a the summe was thre thousande, and two hundrude. This is the summe of the kynred of the childe of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The summe of all the Leuites, whom Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of Israel tolde, after their kinreds and fathers houses, from thyrtie yeare and aboue vntyl fiftie, all that wente in to do every one his office, and to beare the burthen in y Tabernacle of wytnesse, was eight thousande fyue hundrude and foure score, which were nombred acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses, every one to his office a charge, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The b. Chapter.

A ND y LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commande the children of Israel, y they put out of the hoost * all y lepers, and all that haue yssues, and that are defyled vpon the deed, both men and womé shall they put out of the hoost, that they defyle not their tentes, wherein I dwell amonge them. And y children of Israel dyd so, and put them out of the hoost, as y LORDE had sayde vnto Moses.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, y saye lyke saye vnto them: Whan a man or woman doth a synne to any body, and offendeth therwith agaynst the LORDE, then hath that soule a trespass vpon it. + And they shall knoweledge their synne, that they haue done, and shall make amends for their trespass, euen with the whole summe, and put y fifth parte more therto, and geue it vnto him, agaynst whom they haue trespassed. But yf there be noman to make the amends vnto the offence y he hath trespassed agaynst him, then shal the reconcilelyng be made vnto the LORDE for the prest, byesdes the ramme of the attonement, wherewith he shalbe reconcilelyng.

Likewyse all the Heueofferyngs of all that the children of Israel halowe vnto the LORDE, and offre vnto the prest, shal be his. And who so haloweth eny thinge, it shalbe his. And who so geueth the prest eny thinge, it shalbe his also.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan eny mans wife goth asyle, and trespasseth agaynst him, y eny ma lye with her fleshyle, and the thinge be yet hyd from his eyes, and is not come to light that she is defiled, and he can brynge no witnesse agaynst her (for she was not take therin) and the sprete of gelousye kyndleth him, so that he is gelous ouer his wife: whether she be vnclene or not vnclene, then shal he brynge her vnto the prest, and brynge an offerlyng for her, euen the tenth parte of an Epha of barlye mee, and shal pour ouoyle theron, nor put frankensence vpon it: for it is an offerlyng of gelousye, and an offerlyng of remembraunce, that remembreth synne.

Then shall the prest brynge her, and sett her before the LORDE, and take of the holy water in an earthen vessell, and put of y dust that is on the floore of the habitacion, in to the water. And he shal set the wife before y LORDE, and vncover her heade, and the offerlyng of remembraunce which is an offerlyng of gelousye, shall he laye vpon her handes. And the prest shal haue in his hande bytter cursinge water, and shall conuere the wife, a saye vnto her: Yf no man haue lyè with the, and thou hast not gone asyde from thy husbannde, to defyle thy selfe, then shall not these better cursinge waters hurte the. But yf thou hast gone asyde from thy husbannde, so that thou art defyled, and some other man hath lyen with the besyde thy husbannde, then shal the prest conuere the wife with this curse, and shal saye vnto her: The LORDE sett the to a curse and a conuursacion amonge thy people, so that the LORDE make thy thye rote, and thy wombe to berst. So go this cursed water in to thy body, that thy wombe berst, and thy thye rote. And the wife shal saye: Amen Amen.

So the prest shall wryte this curse in a byll, and wash it out with the water, and shall geue the wife of the bytter cursinge waters to dryne. And wha the cursinge water is gone in her, so y it is better vnto her then shal the prest take the gelousye offerlyng out of the wyues hande, and waue it for a meatofferlyng before the LORDE, and offre it vpon the altar: namely, he shall take an handful of the meatofferynge for his remembrance, a burne it vp the altar, and then give the wife the water to drink. And wha she hath dronken the water, ye she be defyled and have trespassed against hir husbande, then shal the cursinge water go in to her, and be so byther, that hir wombe shal berst, and hir thye shal rote, and the wife shal be a curse amonge hir people. But ye the same wife be not defyled, but is cleane, then shall it do her no harne, so that she maye be with childe.

This is the lawe of gelousy, whan a wyfe goeth asyde from hir husbande, and is defyled: Or when she preste of gelousy kyndleth a man, so that he is gelous over his wyfe, he brynge her before the LORDE, and that gy freste do all with her acordinge vnto this lawe. And she man shal be glitise of the synne, but the wife shal bear hir myszdeede.

The vi. Chapter.

A

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: When a man or woman separateth them selues, to vowe a vowe of abstynence vnto the LORDE, he shal absteyne from wyne and ströge drynke. Vyneger of wyne a of stronge drynke shal he not drynke, ner that is pressed out of grapes: he shall nether eate fresh ner drye grapes, so longe as his abstynence endureth. Moroer he shall eate nothinge that is made of the wyne tre, from the wyne cornel vnto the hulle.

As longe as the vowe of his abstynence endureth, there shall no rasoure come vpon his heade, tyll the tyme be out which he abstyneth vnto the LORDE, for he is holy.

And he shall let the heer of his heade growe, and stonde bare openly. All the tyme ouer he abstyneth vnto the LORDE, shal he go to no deed. Nether shall he defyle him selfe at death of his father, of his mother, of his brother, or of his sister. For the abstynence of his God is vpon his heade, and whole tyme of his abstynence shall he be holy vnto the LORDE.

And ye it chauce any man to dye sodenly before him, then shal he heade of his abstynence be defyled. Theryfore shal he shawe his heade in the daye of his clensyng, that is vpon the seventh daye: and vpon ye eight daye shal he brynge two turtill doutes, or two yonge pigeons, vnto the prest before y dore of the Tabernacle of wyntesse. And the prest shall make the one a synofferynge, and the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for him, because he defyleth him selfe vpon ye deed, and so shal he halowe his heade the same day, that he maye holde out the tyme of his abstynence vnto the LORDE, and he shal brynge a lambe of a yeare olde for a trespaceofferynge. But ye daies afore shal be but lost, because his abstynence was defyled.

This is the lawe of the absteyner. Whan the tyme of his abstynence is out, he shal be brought before the dore of the Tabernacle of wyntesse. And he shal brynge his offeringe vnto the LORDE, euene he lambe of a yeare olde without blemyshe for a burntofferinge, a she lambe of a yeare olde without blemyshe for a synofferynge, and a ramme with out blemish for an healthofferynge, a maude with vuleuended cakes of fyne flourie myngled with oyle, and swete waferes anoynted with oyle, a heer mett offerynges treyckofferynges.

And the prest shall brynge it before the LORDE, and shall make his synofferynge and his burntofferynge, and the ramme shall he make an healtthofferynge vnto the LORDE, with maunde of the vulcaned bred. His meatofferynge and drinkofferynge shal he make also. And he shall shawe the head of the absteyners abstynence before the dore of the Tabernacle of wyntesse, and shall take the head heer of his abstynence, and cast it vpon the fyre that is vnder ye healthofferynge.

And the sodden shulder of the ramme shall he take, and an vuleuended cake out of the maunde, and a swete wafer, and laye them vpon the handes of the absteyner: (after that he hath shauen of his abstynence.) And he shal Wawne them before the LORDE. This is holy for the prest with the Wawne brest, and Heue shulder. After that, maye the absteyner drynke wyne. This is the lawe of the absteyner, which voweth his offeringe vnto the LORDE for his abstynence, besydes that, which his hande can get. As he hath vowed, so shall he do acordinge to the lawe of his abstynence.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sones, and saye: Thus shal ye saye vnto the childre of Israel, whan ye blesse them.

* The LORDE blesse the, and kepe the.
The LORDE make his face to shyne vpó the, and be mercifull vnto the.
The LORDE lift vp his countenaunce vpon the, and geue the peace.
For they shal put my name vpó the children of Israel, that I maye blesse them.

The bij. Chapter.

And whan Moses had set vp the Habitacion and anoynted it, and sanctified it with all the apparell therof: and had anoynted and halowed the altare also with all his vessels, Then offred the captaynes of Israel, which were the rulers in their fathers houses.

For they were the captaynes amonge þy kynreds, and stode over þe that were nombred. And they brought their offerynes before the LORDE, sixe covered charrettes, and twolue oxen, for euery two captaynes a charret, and an oxe for every one, and brought them before the habitacion.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Take it of them, that it maye serue for the mynistracion of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and geue it vnto the Leuites, vnto euery one acordinge to his office. Then toke Moses the charrettes and oxen, and gaue them vnto the Leuites.

Two charrettes and foure oxen gaue he vnto þy children of Gerson acordinge to their office: and foure charrettes and eight oxen gaue he vnto the children of Merari acordinge to their office, vnder the hande of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest.

But vnto the children of Kahath he gaue nothyng, because þey had an holy office vpon them, and must beare vpó their sholders. And the captaines offred to the dedicacion of the altare, in the daye whan it was anoynted, and offred their offerynes before the altare.

And þy LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Let euery captayne bryng his offerynge vpon his daye to the dedicacion of the altare.

His gifte was a syluer charger, worth an hundreth and thirtie Sycle: A syluer boule, worth seuentye Sycle (after the Sycle of the Sanctuary) both full of fyne floure myngled with oyle for a meatofferynge: And a golde spone, worth ten Sycles of golde, full of incense: A bullocke from amonde the greate catell, a ramme, a lambe of a yeare olde for a burntofferinge, an he goate for a synofferynge: And for an heath offerynge two oxen, fyue rammes, fyue he goates, and fyue lambes of a yeare olde. This is the gifte of Ahira the sonne of Enan.

This is the dedicacion of the altare, what tymne as it was anoynted, vnto the which ye captayne of Israel offered these twolue syluer chargers, twolue syluer boules, twolue spones of golde: every charger conteynyng an hundreth and thirtie Sycle of syluer, and euery boule seuentye Sycles. So that ye summe of all the syluer in the vessels, was two thosande and foure hundreth Sycles (after the Sycle of the Sanctuary). And the twolue spones of golde full of incense, conteyned euery one ten Sycles, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary: So that the summe of the golde in the spones, was an hundreth and twentye Sycles.

The summe of the catell for the burntofferinges, was twolue bullockes, twolue rammes, twolue lambes of a yeare olde with their meatofferynges: And twolue he goates for synofferynges. And the summe of the catell for the heathofferynges, was foure and twelte oxen, thre score rammes, and thre score he goates, thre score lambes of a yeare olde. This is the dedicacion of the altare, after that it was anoynted.

And whan Moses wenote in to the Tabernacle of wytnes, he might be commoned withall, he herde the voyce speakyng vnto him fró of the Mercye seate, which was vpó the Arke of wytnes betwixte the two Cherubins, from thence was he commoned withall.

The biij. Chapter.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to Aaron, ye saye vnto him: Whan thou settest vpó ye lapes, thou shal, set the so, that they maye all seye geue light aboue vpó ye candlistick. And Aaron dyd so, set vpó ye lapes vpó ye candlistick, as LORDE commaunded Moses. The worke of ye candlistick was of beate golde, both vpó ye shal, vpó ye floure thereof: Acordynge to ye visioun ye LORDE had shewed Moses, euyn so made he the candlistick.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Take the Leuites fró amonde the children of Israel, and seynest them. But thus shalt thou do with them, that thou mayest seynest them. Thou shalt sprinkle purifieng water vpon them, and lett a rasure go over their whole body, and washe their clothes, and then are they cleane. Then shall they take a yonge bullocke, and his meatofferynge of fyne floure myngled with oyle. And another yonge bullocke shalt thou take for a synofferynge.

And thou shalt brynge the Leuites before the Tabernacle of wytnes, and gather together the whole congregation of the children of Israel, and brynge the Leuites before the LORDE. And the children of Israel shall laye their handes vpon the Leuites. And Aaron shall wane ye Leuites before the LORDE for the children of Israel, that they maye mynistre in the seruyce of the LORDE.

And the Leuites shall laye their handes vpon the heedes of the bullockes, and the one shall be made a synofferynge, the other a burntofferinge vnto the LORDE, to make an attowment for the Leuites. And thou shalt set the Leuites before Aaron and his sonnes, and wane them before the LORDE, and so shalt thou separate them from the children of Israel, that they maye be myne. Thé shall they go in, that they maye do seruyce in the Tabernacle of wytnes. Thus shalt thou seynest the, wane them: for they are my gifte of the children of Israel, and I have taken them vnto me for all that openeth the Matrix, namely for the first borne of all the children of Israel.

For every first borne amonste the children of Israel is myne, both of men and of catell, sens the tymne that I smote all the first borne in the lande of Egipte, and sanctified them vnto myself, and toke the Leuites for all the first borne amonste the childre of Israel, and gave them for a gifte vnto Aaró and his sonnes from amonste the children of Israel, ye they shulde do the seruyce of the children of Israel.

in the Tabernacle of witnesses, to make attonement for the children of Israel, that there be not a plague among the children of Israel, yf they will yne ḥ Sanctuary.
And Moses with Aaron and the whole con-gregatio of the childrē of Israel, dyd with the Leuites all as the LORDE had commaundéd Moses. And they purified the Leuites, and waszshed their clothes. And Aaron wauned them before the LORDE, and made attonement for them, that they might be cleane.
After that wente they in, to do their office in the Tabernacle of witnesses before Aaron and his sones: as the LORDE commaned Moses concernynge the Leuites, euen so dyd they with them.
And the LORDE spake vnto Moses σ sayde: This is it that belongeth vnto the Leuites: * From fyue and twenty yeare and aboue, shal they go in to the office of the Tabernacle of witnesses. But frō fiftye yeare forth, they shall ceasse from the waitinge of the seruyce therof, and shall mynister nomore, but shal appoynte their brethren to waite and to serue in the Tabernacle of wynesye: but the office shall not they execute. Thus shalt thou do with the Leuites in their seruyces, that euery one maye wayte vpon his awne charge.

The ṭ. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the wildernes of Sinai, in ṭ first moneth of the seconde yeare that they were departed out of the lande of Egipte, σ sayde:
* Let the children of Israel kepe Easter in his season, euen vpon the fourtene daye of this moneth at euem, in his season shall they kepe it, acordinge to all the statutes σ lawes therof. And Moses spake to ṭ childrē of Israel, ṭ they shulde kepe Easter. And they kep Easter vpō the fourtene daye of the first moneth at euem in the wildernes of Sinai. Acordinge to all that the LORDE commaned Moses, euene so dyd the children of Israel.

Then were there certayne men defyled of a deed man, so that they could not kepe Easter vpon that daye: these came before Moses and Aaron the same daye, and sayde vnto him: We are defyled of a deed mā: wherfore shulde we be despyshed, that we must not bringe oure giftes in his season amonge the children of Israel? Moses sayde vnto them: Stonde stil, I wil heare what the LORDE commandesth you.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, σ saye: Whā eny man is defyled of a deed coarse, or is gone farre from you over the feldes, or is amonge youre kynszfolkes, yet shall he kepe Easter, but in the seconde moneth vpō ḥ fourtene daye at euem, and they shall eate it with vuleuedend bred and sowre sawse, and shall leave none of it vntyll the mornynge, ther breake eny bone therof, and shal kepe it acordinge to all ḥ maner of ḥ Easter.

But he that is cleane, and not gone in a journey, and is negligent to kepe the Easter, the same soule shall be roeted out from amōge his people: because he brought not his gift to the LORDE in his season, he shal beare his synne. And when ther dwelleth a straunger amonge you, he shal kepe Easter also vnto the LORDE, σ shal holde it acordinge to ḥ ordinancce and lawe of ḥ Easter. This statute shall be vnto you alike, to the straunger as to him that is borne in the londe.

And ṭ same daye ṭ the Habitacion was set vp, a cloude covered it vpō the Tabernacle of witnesses, σ at euem there was a symlitude of fyre vpon the Habitacion vntill the mornynge. So came it to passe allwaye, ḥ the cloude covered it by daye, σ the similitude of fyre by night. And when the cloude was takē vp from the Habitacion, then the children of Israel wente on their iourney. And loke in what place the cloude abode, there the childrē of Israel pitched their tentes. Acordinge to the worde of the LORDE toke the children of Israel their iourney, and acordinge to his worde pitched they their tentes. So longe as the cloude abode vpon the Habitacion, they laye stil. And when the cloude taried many dayes vpon the Habitacion, the childrē of Israel werte vpon the LORDE, σ wente not on their iourney.

And when it chaunced that the cloude abode vpō ḥ Habitacion eny space of dayes, then pitched they acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, σ after the worde of the LORDE wente they on their iourney. Whan the cloude was there from the euennyng vntyll the mornynge, and so was taken vp, then wete they on their journey: and whether it was take vp by daye or by night, they journeyed. But when it taried vpon the habitacion two dayes, or a moneth, or a longe season, then laye the children of Israel, and journeyed not: and so when it was taken vp, they wente on their journey. For acordinge to the mouth of the LORDE they laye, and after the mouth of the LORDE they journeyed, so they kepeth the LORDES watch, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The r. Chapter.

The LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Make the two trumpettes of beaten syluer, that thou mayest vse them, to call the congragation together, and when the hoost shal breake vp. When they blowe with both, then shal the whole congragation gather them selues together vnto the before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnesse. When they blowe but with one, then the captaynes, the rulers ouer the thousands in Israel shall gather them selues together vnto the. When ye trompe, then shal the hoostes that lye on the East syde, breake vp. And when ye trompe the seconde tyme, the hoostes that lye on the South syde, shal breake vp. For ye shall trompe, when they shal take their journeys. *But when ye congregacion is to be gathered together, ye shal blowe, and not trompe. This blowinge with the trumpettes shal the sonnes of Aaron the prest do. And it shall be youre lawe for euer amonge youre posterities.

When ye go to a battayll in youre londe agaynyst youre enemies ye vxe you, ye shall trompe with the trumpettes, that ye maye be remembred before the LORDE youre God, and deluyered from youre enemies.

Like wyse whan ye are mery, and in youre feast dayes, ye in youre new Monethes, ye shal blowe with the trumpettes ouer youre burnt-sacrifices ye healthofferinges, ye it maie be a remembrace vnto you before youre God. I am the LORDE youre God.

Vpon the twentye daye in the seconde moneth of the seconde yeare, arose the cloude from the habitacion of witnesse. And the childre of Israel wente on their journey out of the wyldernesse of Sinai, and the cloude abode in the wyldernesse of Paran, First brake vp (acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.) Namely, the baner of the hoost of Iuda wente forth first with their armies, and ouer their hoost was Nahasson the sonne of Aminadab. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Isachar was Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Zabulon was Eliab the sonne of Elon. *And the habitation was taken downe, and the children of Gerson and Merari bare the habitation.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of Ruben with their armies, and ouer their hoost was Elizur the sonne of Sedeur. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Simeon was Selumiel the sonne of Zuri Sadai. And Eliasaph the sonne of Deguel ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Gad. Then wente the Kahathites forwarde also, and bare the Sanctuary, and caused ye habitacion be set vp agaynst they came.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of the children of Ephraim with their armies, and ouer their hoost was Elisama the sonne of Amihud. And Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Manasse. And Abidan the sonne of Gedeoni ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of the children of Dan with their Armyes, (and so were all the hoostes vp) and Ahieser the sonne of Ammi Sadai was ouer their hoist. And Pagiel ye sonne of Ochran, ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Asser. And Ahira the sonne of Enan ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Nephthali. Thus the childre of Israel wete forth with their armyes.

And Moses spake vnto his brother in lawe, Hobab the sonne of Raguel of Madian: We go vnto the place, of the which ye LORDE sayde: I wil geue it you: Come now with vs thorefore, and we wil do ye best with the, for the LORDE hath promised good vnto Israel. But he answered: I wil not go with you, but wil go in to myne awne londe vnto my kynred. He sayde: Oh nay, leae vs not: for thou knowest where is best for vs to pytche in the wyldernes, and thou shalt be oure eye. And ye thou goest with vs, loke what good the LORDE doth vnto vs, the same wil we do vnto the. So they departed from the mount.

of the LORDE three dayes iourney, a the Arke of the LORDES coenuant wente before them those three dayes iourney, to shewe the where they shulde rest. And y cloude of the LORDE was ouer them in the daye tyme, when they were out of y tetes.

And when the Arke wente forth, Moses sayde: *Aryse LORDE, let thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate the, flye before the. And when it rested, he sayde: Come agayne O LORDE vnto the multitude of the thousands of Israel.

The ri. Chapter.

A ND when y people waxed vnpatien, *it displeased sore y eares of y LORDE. And when the LORDE herde it, his wrath waxed whote, y the fyre of y LORDE burnt amoge them, so y it cosumed the vtemost of y host. Thë cries the people vnto Moses, And Moses prayed vnto the LORDE. So y fyre quenched. And the place was called Tabera, because the fyre of the LORDE burnt among them.

Then the commen sorte of people y was amoge them, fell a lustinge, and sat y wepte with the children of Israel, and sayde: Who will gene vs flesh to eate? We remembre the fish, the we ate in Egypte for naught, y Cucumbers, Melouns, lekes, ouyons, y gar-leke: But now is oure soule dried awaye, oure eyes se nothinge then the Manna.

B The Manna was like Coriader sede, and to loke vpon, like Bedellion. *And the people ranne here and there, a gathered it, a grounde it in Milles, and beate it in morters, and baked it in paines, and make cakes of it, and it had a taist like an oyle cake. And when y dew fell vpon the tetes in the night, y Manna fell therwith.

Now when Moses herde the people wepte amoge their kynreds, every one in his têt, then the wrath of the LORDE waxed exceedinge whote. And it greued Moses also. And Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: Why vexest thou thy seruante? And why fynde not I fauoure in thy sight, y thou layest y burthen of all this people vpô me? Haue I the cœceaued all this people, or begotten them, that thou shuldest saye vnto me: Cary them in thine armes (as a nurse beareth a childe) vnto the londe, that thou hast sorne vnto their fathers? Where shal I get flesh, to geue all this people? They wepe before me, and saye: Geue vs flesh, that we maye eate. I am not able to beare all this people alone, for it is to heuy for me. And yf thou wylt deale thus with me: O kyll me then, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, that I se not my wretchedesse.

And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: Gather vnto me seuentye men amongethe Elders of Israel, whom thou knowest y they are the Elders in y people and officers ouer them, and brynge them before the Tabernacle of witnesse, and set them there with the: then wil I come downe, and talke with the euene there, a take of thy sprete that is vpon the, and putt it vpon them, that they maye beare the burthen of the people with the, y thou beare not all alone.

And vnto y people thou shalt saye: Sıctify youre selues agaynst morrowe, y y ye maye eate flesh: for youre wepyngye is come in to the eares of the LORDE, ye that saye: Who shal geue vs flesh to eate? for we were well at ease in Egypte. *Therfore shal the LORDE geue you flesh to eate, not one daye, not two, not fyue, not ten, not twentye dayes longe, but a moneth longe, tyll it go out at youre noses, and tyll ye lothe it: euene because ye haue refuseth the LORDE, which is amone you, and haue wepte before him, a sayde: * Wherfore wente we out of Egypte?

And Moses sayde: Sixe hundreth thousand fote men are there of the people amoge whom I am, and thou sayest: I will geue you flesh to eate a moneth lóge. Shal the shepe and oxen be slayne to be ynoth for them? Or shall all the fishes of the see be gathered together, to be sufficient for them? The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: * Is the LORDES hande shortened then? But now shalt thou se, whether my wordes shall be fulfilled in dede, or no?

And Moses wete out, and tolde the people y worde of the LORDE, and gathered the seuentye men amongeth the Eldest of the people, a set them rounde aboute the Tabernacle. Then cam the LORDE downe in a cloude, y spake vnto him, a toke of the sprete y was vpon him, a put it vpon the seuentie Elders.

And when the sprete rested vpon them, they prophesied, and ceased not.

But in the hooe there remainede yet two men, of whom the one was called Eldad, y other Medad, y the sprete rested vpo them. For they were wrytten vp also, y yet were they not gone out vnto the Tabernacle, and they prophesied in the hooe. Then ran there a lad, y tolde Moses, y sayde: Eldad and Medad prophesie in the hooe. Then answered Josue y sonne of Nun Moses seruaunte (whom he had chosen) and sayde: My lorde Moses for bydde them. But Moses sayde vnto him: Art thou gelous for my sake? * wolde God, y all the people of y LORDE coulde prophesie, and that y LORDE wolde geue them his sprete. So Moses and the Elders of Israel gat them to the hooe.

Then wente out the wynde from y LORDE, * caused quayles to come from the see, * scatred thicber ouer the hooe, here a dayes jour- ney, there a dayes journe rounde aboute y hooe, two cubytes hye aboue y earth. Then the people stode vp all that daye and all y night, and all the nexte daye, and gathered quayles: and he that gathered the leest, gathered ten Homer, * they kyldem them rounde aboute the hooe.

But whyle y flesh was yet betwene their tethe, * or euer it was vp, the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote amongethe people, * and slewe them with an exceedinge greate slaughter. Therfore is the same place called the granes of lust, because the voluptuous people were buried there. From the lust-graes * toke the people their journe vnto Hazeroth, and abode at Hazeroth.

The rii. Chapter.

And Miriam * Aaron spake agaynst Moses because of his wife the Mo- rian * which he had taken, because he had takë a Morian to wife, and they sayde: Doth the LORDE speake onely thorow Moses? Speaketh he not also by vs? * And the LORDE herde it. * But Moses was a very meke man, aboue all men vpon earth. And haistely spake the LORDE vnto Moses, and to Aaron, and to Miriam: Go out ye thre vnto y Tabernacle of wytnesse. And they wente out all thre.

* Then came the LORDE downe in the cloudy piler, * stode in the dore of the Taber- nacle, * called Aaron * Miriam, * they both wete out. And he sayde: Heare my wordes: Yf eny man be a prophet of the LORDE, vnto him wil I shewe my self in a vision, or wil speake vnto him in a dreame. But not so with my seruaunt Moses, * which is faithful in all my house. * Mouth to mouth speake I vnto him, * he seth the LORDE in his fashion, not thorow darke wordes or licknesse: Wherfore were ye not arrayed then to speake agaynst my seruaunt Moses?

And y wrath of the LORDE waxed whote oute them, * he turned him awaye, and y cloude also departed from the Tabernacle. * And beholde, then was Mirian become leporous, as it were snowe. And Aaron turned him vnto Miriam, and sawe that she was leporous, and sayde vnto Moses: Oh my lorde, put not the synne vpon vs, which we have foolishly committed and synned, that she be not as one that commeth deed out of his mothers wombe: It hath eaten vp half his flesh alreadye.

But Moses cried vnto the LORDE, * sayde: Oh God, heale her. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Yf hir father had spytte in hir face, shulde she not be ashamed seuen dayes? * Let her be shut out of y hooe seuen dayes, after y let her be receauned agayne.

So Miriam was shut out of the hooe seuen dayes, * the people wente no farther, till Miriam was receauned againe. Afterwarde departed the people from Hazeroth, * and pitched in y wildernesse of Paran.

The riiij. Chapter.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, * sayde: Sende forth men to spy out y lande of Canaan (which I wil geue vnto y children of Israel) of every trybe of their fathers a man, and let them all be soch as are captayne amonge them. Moses sente the out of the wildernes of Paran, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, soch as were all heades amongethe children of Israel, and these are their names:

We Deut. and < And Let

grapes, and they wente vp vnto the mountaynes, and loke vpon the londe how it is: and the people that dwell therin, whether they be strong or weak, fewe or many; and what maner of lande it is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad: they be fenced with walles, or not: and what maner of lande it is, whether it be fatt or lean, and whether there be trees therin, or not. Be of a good corage, and bringe of the frutes of the londe. It was euen aboute the tyme, that grapes are first ryte.

They wente vp, and spied the londe, from y\textsuperscript{1} wildernes of Zin, vntyll Rehob, as m\textsuperscript{e} go vnto Hemath. They wente vp also towarde the south, and came vnto Hebron, where Ahiman was, and Sesa and Thalmai, the children of Enack (Hebron was bykelde seven yeare before Zoa in Egipte.)

And they came to the ryuer of Escol, and there they cut downe a cluster of grapes, and caused two to bear it vpon a staffe, pomegranates also and fynges. The place is called the ryuer of Escol, because of the cluster of grapes, which the children of Israel cut downe there.

And when they had spied out the londe, they turned bake againe after fourtye daies, and wente, and came to Moses and Aaron, to the whole congregacion of y\textsuperscript{1} children of Israel in to y\textsuperscript{1} wyldernesse of Paran, eu\textsuperscript{e} vnto Cades, and brought them worde agayne, and to the whole congregacion, how it stode, and let them se the frute of the londe, and tolde them, and sayde: W\textsuperscript{e} came in to y\textsuperscript{1} londe, whither ye sent vs, where it floweth with mylke and hony, and this is the frute therof: savynge that stronge people dwell therin, and the cities are exceedinge stronge and greate. And we sawe the children of Enack there also. The Amalechites dwell in the south countrie, the Hethites, and Iebnsites and Amorites dwell vpon the mountaynes, but the Cananites dwell by the see, and aboute Iordane.

Howbeit Caleb styrled y\textsuperscript{1} people that was agaynst Moses, and sayde vnto them: Let vs go vp, and conquer the londe, for we are able to overcome it. But the men that wente vp with him, sayde: \textsuperscript{5} We are not able to go vp agaynst that people, for they are to stronge for vs. And of the londe that they had searched, they brought vp an euell repporthe amonge the childr\textsuperscript{e} of Israel, and saide: The l\\textsuperscript{ae} that we have gone thorow to spye out, eateth vp the indwellers therof: and all the people that we sawe therin, are men of greate stature. We sawe giaantes there also, yee giaantes as the children of Enack: and we seumed in oure sighte as y\textsuperscript{e} greshoppers, and so dyd we in their sighte.

T\textsuperscript{HEN} the whole congregacion toke on, and cryed, \textsuperscript{c} and the people wepte \textsuperscript{y} night. And all the childr\textsuperscript{e} of Israel murmured agaynst Moses and Aaron, and the whole congregacion sayde vnto them: Oh that we had dyed in the londe of Egipte, or that we might dy e yet in this wyldernes. Wherfore bryngeth the LORDE vs in to this londe, that oure wyues shulde fall thorow the swerde, and oure children be a praye? Is it not better, that we go agayne in to Egipte? And they sayde one to another: Let vs make a captayne, and go in to Egipte agayne.

But Moses & Aaron fell vp\textsuperscript{o} their faces before \textsuperscript{y} whole congregacion of the multitude of the childr\textsuperscript{e} of Israel. & Isoua \textsuperscript{y} sonne of Nun, & Caleb \textsuperscript{y} sonne of Iephune (which also had spied out the londe) rente their clothes, & spake to the whole congregacion of the children of Israel: The londe \textsuperscript{y} we have walked thorow to spye it out, is a very good lande. If the LORDE haue lust vnto vs, he shal brynge vs in to the same londe, a gewe it vs, which is a lađe that floweth with mylke a hony. But in anye wyse rebell not ye agaynst the LORDE, a feare not a people of this lande, for we wil eate the vp as bred. Their defence is departed fro them, but the LORDE is with vs, be not ye afrayed of them.

And all the people, bad stone them with stones. Then appeared the glory of the LORDE in the Tabernacle of witnesse vnto all the children of Israel, a the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: How longe shal this people blasphem me? And how longe wil it be, or they beleue me, for all the tokēs that I have shewed amongeth them? a I wil smyte them with pestilence a destroye the, a wil make of the a greater a mightier people then this is.

But Moses sayde vnto a LORDE: Then shal a Egipcians heare it (for with thy power lust thou brought this people from amogo-
the) so shal it be tolde the inhabitants of this lande also, which haue herde, a thou O LORDE art amongst this people, a thou art ersene from face to face, a that thy cloud costeth over them, a that thou goest, before them in the cloudy piler on the daye tyme, and in the lyrie piler on the night season. If thou shuldest now slaye this people as one man, then the Heythen that haue herde so good reporte of the, shulde saye: a The LORDE was not able to brynge the people in to the londe, that he sware vnto them, therefore hath he slayne them in the wyldernes.

So let the power of the LORDE now be greate, acordinge as thou hast spoken and sayde: The LORDE is of longe sufferaunce and of greate mercy, and forgueuth synne and trespace, and lenaeth no man innocent, a ysiseth the myszdele of the fathers vpon the children in to the thirde and fourth generation. O be gracious now vnto the synne of this people acordinge to thy greate mercy, like as thou hast forborne this people also, uer from Egipte vnto this place. And the LORDE sayde: I haue forgyuen it, as thou hast saide. But as trulye as I lyue, all a worlde shall be full of my glory. a For of all because they brought vp a myszreporte of the lande, that it was euell. But Isusa the sonne of Nun, and Caleb y somme of Iephune were left aluyne, of the men that wente to spye out the lande. And Moses spake these wordes vnto all the children of Israel. Thë toke the people great sorowe.

And they arose early in y mornynge, and wente vp to the topp of y mountayne, and sayde: "Lo, here are we, and will go vp to the place, wherof the LORDE hath sayde: for we have symned. But Moses sayde: wherfore go ye on this maner beyonde y wors of the LORDE? It shall not prosper with you: go not vp (for y LORDE is not amoge you) y ye be not slayyne before youre enemies. For the Amalechites and Cananites are there before you, y shal fall thorow y swerde, because ye haue turned youre selues from the LORDE, and the LORDE shal not be with you. But they were blinded to go vp to the topp of the mountaine: neuertheles the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt g Moses came not out of the hooste. Then came downe y Amalechites g Cananites which dwelt vpon that mountayne, and smote them and hewed them, euen vnto Horma.

The xv. Chapter

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, g saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande of youre dwellinge, which I shall geue you, and do sacrifice vnto the LORDE, whether it be a burntofferinge, or an offeryng for a speciall vowe, or a freewill offeringe, or youre feast offerenges, that ye maye make a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE, of oxen or of shepe.

He y wil ofre now his gift unto y LORDE, shall brynge for the meatofferinge a teth deale of fyne floure myngled with oyle of the fourth parte of an Hin, and wyne for y drynkyofferinge the fourth parte of an Hin also: to the burntofferinge, or any other offeringe, when a lamb is offerde. But whi there is a ramme offered, thou shalt make the meatofferenge two teth deales of fyne floure myngled with oyle, of the thirde parte of an Hin, and y thirde parte of an Hin of wyne also for a drynkyofferinge: this shal thou offer for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

But yf thou wilt offer an ox for a burntofferinge, or for a speciall vowe offerenge, or for an healthofferinge vnto the LORDE, thou shalt brynge to the ox, the meatofferinge, euyn thre teth deales of fyne floure minglyed with half an Hin of oyle, t half an Hin of wyne for a drynkyofferinge. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. Thus shalt thou do with an ox, with a ramme, with a lambe, and with a goate. Acordinge as the nombre of the offerenges is, therafter shall the nombre of the meatofferenges and drynkyofferenges be also.

He that is one of youre selues, shall do this, that he maye offer a sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. And yf there dwell a stranger with you, or is amoge youre kynderfolkes, and wil do an offerenge vnto the LORDE for a swete sauoure, the same shal do as ye do. Let there be one statute for the whole cögrecacion, both vnto you and to the strangers. A perpetuall statute shal it be vnto youre posterities, that the stranger be ene as ye before y LORDE. One lawe, and one ordinaunce shall be vnto you and to the stranger that dwelleth with you.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, g sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande, in to y which I shal brynge you, so that ye eate the bred of the londe, ye shal heue vp an Heueofferenge vnto the LORDE, namely, a cake of the firstlinges of youre downe shal ye geue for an Heueofferenge:* as the Heueofferenge of the barne, euen so shal ye geue the firstlinges of youre downe also vnto the LORDE, for an Heueofferenge amonge youre posterities.

And whan ye thorow ignorance ouer se any of these commaundementes, which the LORDE hath spoken by Moses, and all y the LORDE hath commaunded you by Moses (from the daye that the LORDE beganne to commaunde for youre posterities) and the cögrecacion do ought ignorantly, thë shal the whole congregacion offer a yonge bullocke from amonge the greate catell to a burntofferinge, for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE, with his meatofferinge and drynkyofferinge as the maner is, and an hegoate for a synyofferenge. And so shal the prest make an attonement for the whole congregacion.

of the children of Israel, and it shalbe for-} guen them: for it is an ignoraunce. And y they shal bryngye these their giftes for an offerynge vnto the LORDE, and their synofferynge before the LORDE for their ignorance, and it shalbe foruenge the whole congregation of the childe of Israel,

the stanger also ye dwelthe amongst you, for so much as all the people is in soch ignoraunce.

Ye one soule synne thorow ignoraunce, * the for a synofferynge. And the prest shal make an attancement for such an ignorannt soule with the synofferinge for the ignorance before the LORDE, that he maye reconcile him, and it shalbe foruenge him. And it shal be one lawe, (that ye shal do for ye ignorance) both vnto him that is borne amongst the children of Israel, and to the stanger that dwelth amongst you.

* But ye a soule do ought presumptuously, whether he be one of youre selues or a stranger, he hath depysed the LORDE:

his people: because he hath depysed the worde of the LORDE, and hath left his commandement vndone: that soule shall vterly perishe, his synne shalbe vpon him.

Now whyle the children of Israel were in the wyldernesse, they founde a man gathery-nge stickes vpon the Sabbath daye. And they that founde him gatherynge stickes, brought him vnto Moses and Aaron, and before the whole congregation. *And they put him in preson, for it was not declared what shulde be done vnto him. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: The man shall dye the death, the whole congregation shal stone him without the hooste. Then the whole congregation brought him out of ye hooste, and stoned him that he dyed, as ye LORDE commaunded

Moses.

And ye LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Speake to the childe of Israel, ye saye vnto the, they make them gardes vpon ye quarters of their armourment amongst all youre posterities, and put yalowe rybandes vpon the gardes in ye quarters. And ye gardes shal serve you, ye ye maye loke vpon the, and remembre all the counmandementes of the LORDE, ye do them:

that ye order not youre selues after ye mean-yange of youre awne herte, ner go a whoronyng after youre awne eyes. Therfore shal ye remembre and do all my counmandementes, and be holy vnto youre God. I am the

LORDE youre God, which brought you out of the lande of Egipte, to be youre God.

Euen I the LORDE youre God.

The xvi. Chapter.

A ND Corah the sonne of Iezehar the A sonne of Kahath, the sonne of Leui, with Dathan and Abiram the sonne of Eliab, and On the sonne of Peleth, ye sonnes of Rub, stode vp agaynst Moses, with certayne men amongst the childe of Israel, two hundreth fyfte captayne of the congregation, councelers, famous men. And they gathered together selues against Moses a Aaron sayde vnto them: Ye make to moche a doo, for all the congregation is holy euer one, and the LORDE is amongst them: Why lyfte ye soules vpon then aboute the congregation of the LORDE?

Whan Moses herde ye, he fell vp his face,

a sayde vnto Corah, a to all his company:

Tomorow shal ye LORDE shewe who is his,

a who is holy to come vnto him. Who so euer he choseth, ye same shal come vnto him.

This do: Take ye censors, thou Corah a all thy company, a do fyre therin, a put incense theron to morrowe before the LORDE: then whom so euer the LORDE choseth, the same shall be holy. Ye make to moche a doo, ye children of Leui.

And Moses sayde vnto Corah: Heare ye childre of Leui, Is it not ynowh vnto you,

God of Israel hath separated you fro ym multitude of Israel, ye shalde come nye hym, to do the seruyce of the dwellynge place of the LORDE, and stonde before the people to mynister vnto them? He hath caused the and all thy brethren the childre of Leui with the, to come nye vnto hym: and now ye seke

the presthode also. Thou and all thy companye conspyre agaynst the LORDE. What is Aaron, that ye shulde murnour against hym?

And Moses sent to call Datha a Abira a sonnes of Eliab. But they sayde: We wil come vp. Is it to litle ye thou hast brought vs out of that lande of Egipte (ye floweth with mylke a hony) to kyll vs in ye wildernesse:

but thou must raigne ouer vs also? How goodly well hast thou brought vs in to a lande, that floweth with milke and hony, 2 guē vs feldes and vyniardes in possession? Wilt thou put out these mens eyes? We will not come vp.

Then was Moses very wroth, 2 saide vnto 2
LORDE: Turne 2 not vnto their meatofferinges.
I haue not takē so moche as an Asse frō thē, nether haue I hurte any of thē. And Moses sayde vnto Corah: Tomorow be thou 2 al thy companie before 2 LORDE, thou, and they, 2 Aaron. And take every one his censer, and put incense therin, and come before the LORDE, euery one with his censer (that is two hundred and fiftie censers) and both thou and Aaron take either his censer.

And euery one toke his censer, and put fyre therin, and layed incense theron, and came before the dore of the Tabernacle of witness, and Moses and Aaron also. And Corah gathered 2 whole congregacio against thē before the dore of the Tabernacle of witness.

But 2 glory of the LORDE appeared before 2 whole congregacion. And 2 LORDE spake vnto Moses 2 Aaron, 2 saide: Separate youre selues frō this congregacio, 2 I maye shortly consume them. And they fell vp their faces, 2 saide: O God, thou God of the speres of all flesh, ye one man haue synned, wilt thou therefor be wroth over the whole congregacion? And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, 2 saide: Speake to the congregacio, and saye: Come vp from 2 dwellynge of Corah, and Dathan, and Abiram.

And Moses stode vp, 2 wente vnto Dathan
2 Abiram, 2 the Elders of Israel followèd him,
2 he spake to 2 cogregacio, 2 saide: Departe frō 2 tentes of these vngodly mē 2 touche nothinge 2 is theirs, ye ye pershe in eny of their sinnes. And they gat them vp from the dwellynge of Corah, Dathan, 2 Abiram.
But Dathan and Abirā came out, and stode in the dore of their tentes, with their wynes, and sonnes and children.

And Moses sayde: Hereby shal ye knowe, that the LORDE hath sent me, to do all these workes, and that I haue not done them of myne awne hert. 2f These men dye the comon death of all men, or be vysited as all men are vysited, then hath not the LORDE sent me. 2b But 2 LORDE make a new thinge, and the earth open hir mouth, and swalowe them with all that they haue, so 2 they goe downe quycke in to hell, thē shal ye knowe, that these men haue blasphemed the LORDE.

And whā he had spokē out all these wordes,
2 2 groūde cloue asunder vnder thē, 2 the earth opened hir mouth, 2 swalowe thē, with their houses, 2 all the mē 2 were with Corah, 2 all their substance, and they wente downe quycke in to the hell, with all that they had.

And the earth closed vp trying them, 2 so they perished from amonge 2 congregacio. And all Israel 2 were aboute thē, fled at 2 crye of thē, for they sayde: That 2 earth swalowe not vs also. Morouer the fyre came out frō the LORDE, and consumd the two hundred and fiftie men, that offred the incense.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, 2 sayde:
Speake to Eleasar 2 sonne of Aaron 2 prest, 2 he take vp 2 censers out of 2 burninge, 2 scater 2 fyre here 2 there (For the censers of these synners are halowed thorow their soules) 2 they maye be beate in to thynne plates, 2 fastened vpon 2 altare. For they are offred before 2 LORDE, 2 halowed: and they shalbe a token vnto 2 childre of Israel.

And Eleasar the prest toke 2 brasen censers which they 2 were burnt, had offred, 2 bet thē to plates, to fasten thē vpon thē altare for a remembrance vnto 2 children of Israel 2 na stranger (and he that is not of 2 sede of Aaron) come nye to offre incense before the LORDE, 2 it happē not vnto him as vnto Corah and his companie, acordynge as the LORDE sayde vnto hym by Moses.

On the nexte morow murmured 2 whole congregacion of 2 childre of Israel against Moses 2 Aarō, 2 saide: Ye haue slayne 2 people of 2 LORDE. And when the cogregacio was gathered agaynst Moses 2 Aarō, they turned thē towarde 2 Tabernacle of witness. And beholde, thē cloude couered 2 Tabernacle, 2 glory of 2 LORDE appeared.
And Moses 2 Aarō wente in before 2 Tabernacle of witness. And 2 LORDE spake vnto Moses 2 saide: Get you out of this cogregacion, I wil shortly consume thē. And they fell vp on their faces. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Take the cēser 2 put fyre therin frō of the altare, 2 laye incēse theron, 2 go soone to the cogregation, 2 make an attonement for them. For the wrath is gone out from the LORDE, and the plage is begone amonche the people.

And Aaron dyd as Moses sayde, τ ranne in with the myndest amonge ἡ congregacio. And beholde, ἡ plage was begone. And he burnt incense τ made an atonement for the people, *τ stode betwene the deod τ the lyuyng, and the plagce ceased. But there were fourteene thousands, and seuen hundred deed in the plagce, besydes them that dyde aboute the busynesse of Corah. And Aaron came agayne vnto Moses before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnesse. And the plagce ceased.

The viij. Chapter.

AND τ LORDE spake vnto Moses, γ sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, τ take of the twolue staues, of euery captayne of his fathers house one, and wynte euery mans name vpon his staffe. But Aarons name shal thou wynte vpon the staffe of Leui. For euery heade of their fathers house shal haue a staffe. And laye ἡ in the Tabernacle of witnesse, before the witnesse where I testifie vnto you. And loke whome I shall chose, his staffe shal florishe, ἡ I myaye stytle the grudinges of the children of Israel, which they grudge agaynst you.

And Moses spake vnto the childrε of Israel, γ all their captaynes gaue him twolue staues, euery captayne a staffe, after ἡ house of their fathers. And Aarons staffe was amonge their staues also. And Moses layed the staues before the LORDE in the Tabernacle of witnesse.

On the morow wha Moses wete in to ἡ Tabernacle of witnesse, he foudė ἡ ἡ Aaros rodde of the house of Leui florisshed, and brought forth blossoms, γ bare allmondes. And Moses brought forth all γ staues frō γ LORDE before all γ childrε of Israel, that they might se it. And they toke euery mα his staffe.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Bringe Aaros staffe againe before the wytnesse, ἡ it maye be kepte for a tokε to the children of rebellion, that their murmuringes maye ceasse fro me, lest they dye.

Moses dyd as ς LORDE comaunded him. And ς childrε of Israel sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, we co wymowe, we are destroied, γ pershe. Who so cõmeth nys γ dwellynge place of ς LORDE, he dyth. Shal we the utterly coymowe awaie?

The viij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Aaron: a Thou τ thy synnes, τ thy fathers house with the shal beare the myszdele of ς Sanctuary: τ thou τ thy synnes with the, shall beare the myszdele of youre presthode. ‡ But thy brethren of the trybe of Leui thy father, shall come nys the, τ be ioynte vnto the, that they maye mynistrte vnto ἡ. But thou τ thy synnes with the, shal mynistrte before ς Tabernacle of witnesse. And they shal wynte vþo thy seruycε τ vpon ς seruycε of the whole Tabernacle. But nys vnto the vessels of ς Sanctuary τ to the altare, shall they not come, ἡ both they τ ye dye not: howbeit they shall be ioynte vnto the, to wynte vþo the mynistracion in the Tabernacle of witnesse, in all the seruice of the Tabernacle. And there shal no straunger come nys vnto you.

Therefor wynte now vpon the seruycε of the Sanctuary, and vpon the seruycε of the altare, that there come no more wrath vpon the children of Israel. For lo, I haue takε youre brethren the Leuites frō amonge the children of Israel, to be youre giftes, for a presente vnto ἡ LORDE, to do ς seruycε in ς Tabernacle of witnesse. As for γ, and thy synnes with the, ye shal waite vpon youre prestes office, that ye maye ministrte in all maner busynes of the altare, and within the vayle: for youre prestes office geue I vnto you for a giftes to do seruycε. Yf a straunger come nys, he shal dye.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Aarom: beholde, I haue geuen the my Heueofferynges: And all that the children of Israel halowe, haue I geuen vnto the, and to thy synnes for a perpetuall dywte. This shal thou haue of the most holy thinges that they offere. All their giftes with all their meatofferings, and with all their synofferynges, and with all their trespass offerings, that they geue me, the same shal be most holy vnto the and thy synnes. In the most holy place shalt thou eat it. All that are males shall eat thereof: For it shal be holy vnto the.

All dedicate thinges in Israel shal be thine. All that breaketh the Zone amonge all flesh, which they bryngge vnto the LORDE, whether it be man or beest, shalbe thine. But so, that thou cause the firstborne of man to be redeemed, and that thou cause the first borne of vnclene beestes to be redeemed also (They shal redeeme it whan it is a moneth olde, and shall geue it lowse for moneye, euen for fyue Sycles, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary, *which Sycle is worth twentye Geras.)

But the first frutes of an oxe, or lambme, or goatme shalbe thou not cause to be redeemed for they are holy. Their bloude shalt thou sproekle vpon the altare, and their fat shalt thou burne for an oferynge of a sweate sauoure vnto LORDE. Their flesh shalbe thine, like as L Lavebreest and r right shulder is thine also. All the Heuofferenge that childre of Israel halowe vnto LORDE, haue I geuen vnto the, a to thy sonnes, a to thy daughters with the for a perpetuall devtie. This shalbe a salted covenaut for euer before LORDE, vnto the and thy sede with the.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Aarō: Thou shalt inheret nothinge in their londe," ner haue eny porcio amoung them: for I am thy porcion, and thine inheretance amoung the children of Israel. Vnto the children of Leui haue I geuen all the tithes in Israel to inheretance, for seruyce which they do vnto me in the Tabernacle of witnesse, that from hene forth the children of Israel come not ny to the Tabernacle of witnesse, to lade them selues with synne, and to dye: But the Leuites shal do the seruyce in the Tabernacle of witnesse, a shal beare their synne, for a perpetuall lawe amounge youre posteritie. †And they shall inheret none inheretance amoung the children of Israel. For tithes of the childre of Israel, which they Heue vnto LORDE, haue I geuen vnto the Leuites for an heretage. Therfore haue I sayde vnto them, that they shall inheret no inheretance amoung the children of Israel.

And L LORDE spake vnto Moses, sayinge: This custome shall be a lawe, which the LORDE hath commaunded, sayinge: Speake vnto childre of Israel, they shalbe vnto a reed cow withoute spot, wherein is no blymsh, a vpon whom there came neuer yocke: and ye shal geue her vnto Eleasars the prest,; which shall brynge her withoute the hooste, and cause her to be slayned there before him.

And Eleasars prest shall take of hir bloude with his fyngere, and sproekle it seuen tynmes straighte towarde the dore of the Tabernacle of witnesse, and cause the cow to be burnt before him, both hir szynne and hir fleshe, and hir bloude also with hir donge. And the prest shall take Ceder wodde and ysope, and purple woll, and cast it vpō the cow as she burneth, a he shal waish his clothes, and bathe his body with water, and the go in to the hooste, and be vnclene vntylle euë.

also with water, and bathe his body in water, and one \( \tilde{y} \) is cleane, shall gather vp the * aszshes of \( \tilde{y} \) cow, and pour them without the hoost in a cleane place, that they maye be kepte there, for sprenklinge water to the congregacion of the childr\( \text{e} \) of Israel, for it is a synofferinge. And he that gathered vp the aszshes of the cow, shall wash his clothes, and be vnclave vtntyll the euyn.

This shalbe a perpetuall lawe vtntillo \( \tilde{y} \) children of Israel, and to the straungers that dwell amonge you.

*Who so now toucheth a deed mæ, shal be vnclave souene daies: the same shall purifie himself here with, on the thirde daie and on the souene daie, and then shal be cleane. And \( \tilde{y} \) be puryfye not himself on the thirde daie, \( \tilde{y} \) on the souene daie, \( \tilde{y} \) shall he not be cleane. But wha eny mæ toucheth a deed persone, and wil not purifie himself, he defyleth the dwellynge of the LORDE, and the same soule shall be roted out of Israel, because the sprenklinge water is not sprenkled vpon him: and he is vnclave, as longe as he leteth not himself be pourged thereof.

This is the lawe. When a mæ dyeth in \( \tilde{y} \) tente, who so euer goeth in to the tente, and all \( \tilde{y} \) is in the tente, shal be vnclave souë daies. And euery open vessel that hath no lydd nor courency, is vnclave. And who so euer toucheth one \( \tilde{y} \) is slayne with the swerde vpon \( \tilde{y} \) felde, or eny other deed, or a deed mans bone, or a graue, \( \tilde{y} \) same is vnclave souë daies.

So now for the vnclave persone, they shall take of \( \tilde{y} \) aszshes of this burnt synofferinge, \( \tilde{y} \) put springinge water theron in to a vessell, and a cleane man shall take \( \tilde{y} \) sope, \( \tilde{y} \) dypp it in the water, and sprenkle it vpon the tente, and vpon euery vessel, and all the soules that are therin. Likewysye also vpon him, \( \tilde{y} \) hath touched a deed mans bone, or a slayne persone, or a deed body, or a graue.

And he that is cleane, shal sprenkle vpon the vnclave, \( \tilde{y} \) thirde daie, \( \tilde{y} \) the seuenth daie, \( \tilde{y} \) purifie him on \( \tilde{y} \) seuenth daie. And he shal washe his clothes, \( \tilde{y} \) bathe him self with water, and so at euyn he shalbe cleane.

But he \( \tilde{y} \) is vnclave, and wil not purifie him self, \( \tilde{y} \) same soule shall be roted out of \( \tilde{y} \) congregacion. For he hath defyled the Sanc-sanctifie me before thy children of Israel, ye shall not bring this congregation in to the lande that I shall give thee. This is thy water of strife, where the children of Israel strove with the LORDE and he was sanctified upon them.

And Moses sent messangers fro Cades vnto thy kynges of thy Edomites: This worde sendeth the thy brother Israel: Thou knowest all thy traynale that happened vnto vs, how that our fathers wente downe in to Egipte, how we haue dwelt in Egipte a longe tyme, how the Egipcians deale euell with vs and our fathers. And we cryed vnto thy LORDE which herde oure voyce, and sent his angell, which hath brought vs out of Egipte: And beholde, we are at Cades in thy cite without the borders of thy lande. O let vs go thorow thy lande, we wyl not go thorow thy feeldes ne ther ynyardes, ner drynyke the water out of the soytaynes. We wyl go the hye strete, and turne nether to thy right hande ner to thy lefte, tylly we be come past thy borders of thy countre.

But the Edomite answered him: Thou shalt not go by me, or I wyl come agaynst thee with thy swerde. The children of Israel saide vnto him: We wil go thy comoi hye waye, if ye wyl not go thorow vs, we wil thy drynyke of water, we wil paye for it, we wil do nothinge, but passe thorow on fote only. But he sayde: Thou shalt not go thorow, And the Edomites came out against them with a mightie people and a strege hande. Thus thy Edomites denied to graunte Israel passage thorow the borders of the lande. And Israel turned away from them.

And the children of Israel brake vp fro Cades, and came with the whole congregation vnto mount Hor. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron at mount Hor harde vpon the coastes of thy lande of thy Edomites, and sayde: Let Aaro be gathered vnto his people: for he shall not come in to thy lande. I have geuen vpnto children of Israel, because ye were dishobedient vnto my mouth at the water of strife. Take Aaron and Eleasar and his sonne, and bynye them vp vnto mount Hor, and stripe Aaron out of his vestimentes, and put the vp vpon Eleasar his sonne and there shall Aaron be gathered (vnto his people) and dye.

Then dyd Moses as the LORDE commanded him, and they wente vp vnto Mount Hor in thy sight of the whole congregation. And Moses toke Arons clothes, put the vp vpon Eleasar his sonne. And Aaron dyed there, even aboue vpon the mount. And Moses Eleasar came downe from the mount. And whan the whole congregation sawe that Aaron was awaye, they mourned for him thirte days thorow the whole house of Israel.

The 3d Chapter.

And whan Arad the kynges of the Cananites (which dwelt towards the south) herde, that Israel came in by thy waie thy spyes had founde out, he fought agaynst Israel, and take some of them presoners. Then vowed Israel a vowe vnto thy LORDE, and sayde: If thou wylt geue this people vnder my hande, I wyl utterly destroye their cities. And the LORDE herde thy voyce of Israel, and deluyered them the Cananites, and they utterly destroyed them with their cities also. And he called the place Horna.

Then departed they fro mount Hor in thy waie towards the reed see, that they might go aboute the lande of the Edomites. And the soules of the people faynted by the waie 'and they spake agaynst God and agaynst Moses: Wherefore hast thou brought vs out of the lande of Egipte, to slaye vs in the wildernesse? For here is nether bred ner water, and oure soule lootheth this lighte meate.

Than sent the LORDE fyrie serpentes amongst the people, which bote the peple, so that there dyed moch people in Israel. The came they vnto Moses, and sayde: We haue synned, because we haue spoken agaynst the LORDE and agaynst thee. Praye thou vnto the LORDE, that he take awaye the serpentes from vs. And Moses prayed for the people.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: Make the a brasen serpente, and set it vp for a token. Who so euer is bitten, and loketh vp on it, shal lyue. Then made Moses a serpente of brasse, and set it vp for a token: and whan a serpente had bitten eny man, he behelde the brasen serpente, and recovered.

And the children of Israel departed, and pitched in Oboth. And from Oboth they wente on, and pitched in Igiun by Abarim in the wyldernesse ouer against Moab, on the Eastsyde. From thence departed they, and pitched by the ryuer of Sared. From thence departed they, and pitched on this syde Arnon, which is in the wyldernesse, and commeth out of the coastes of the Amorites. For Arnon is the border betwixte Moab and & Amorites. Wherfore it is spoken in the boke of the warres of the LORDE: And go with violence both on the ryuer of Arnon, on the fountayne of the riuere, which boweth downe-wardes to dwell at Ar, leaneth theron, to be the border of Moab.

And from thence they came to the well. This is the well, wherof the LORDE spake vnto Moses: gather the people together, I will geue them water. Then sange Israel this songe, and they sange one after another ouer the well: This is the well, that the prynces dygdged: the nobles amonste the people have dyged it thorow & teacher and their staines.

And from this wildernes they wente vnto Mathana, from Mathana vnto Nahaliel, and from Nahaliel to Bamoth, and from Bamoth to the valley that lieth in & felde of Moab at the toppe of Pisga, and turneth toward the wyldernesse.

And Israel sent messaungers vnto Sihô the kynge of the Amorrites, caused to saye vnto him: Let me go thorow thy lande, we wyl not turne in to & feldes ner in to the vnyardes: neither will we drynke the water of the welles, & hy strete wil we go, till we be past the borders of thy countre.

Howbeit Sihon wolde not geue the children of Israel licence to go thorow the coastes of his lande, but gathered all his people together, and wente out agaynst Israel in the wyldernesse. And when he came to Iaheza, he fought agaynst Israel. Neuerthelesse Israel smote him with the edge of the sward, and conquered his lande from Arnon vnto Iabock, and vnto the children of Ammon. For the borders of the children of Ammon were strüge. So Israel toke all these cities, and dwelt in all the cities of & Amorites, namely at Heszbon, and in the townes belonginge therto. For Heszbon the cite was Sihôns the kynge of the Amorites, and he had foughten before with the kynge of the Moabites, and conquered all his londe from him vntyll Arnon.

Wherfore it is sayde in the prouerbe: Cometh vnto Heszbon, let vs buyde and prepare & cite of Sihon. For there is a fyre gone out of Heszbon, and a flamme from the cite of Sihon, which hath consumed Ar of & Moabites, and the citizens of & toppe of Arnon. Wo vnto the Moab, thou people of Camos art vndone. His sones are put to flighte, & his daughters brought captuyue vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorites. Their glory is come to naught from Heszbon vnto Dibon: waisted are they vnto Nopha, which reacheth vnto Mediba. Thus dwelt Israel in the lande of the Amorites.

And Moses sent out spyes vnto Iahesar, they toke the townes beloninge thereto, and conquered the Amorites & were therin. And they turned, wente vp the waye towarde Basan. Then Og the kynge of Basan wete out agaynst them with all his people, to fight in Edrei. And & LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Feare him not, for I haue geuen him with his lande & people in to thy hande, thou shalt do with him, as thou dydest with Sihon the kynge of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heszbon. And they smote him, his sones, all his people (so & there remayned none) conquered the londe. Afterwarde wete & children of Israel, pitched in & felde of Moab beyonde Iordane by Jericho.

AND when Balac & sonne of Ziphor sawe all that Israel had done vnto the Amorites, and that the Moabites were sore afraied of the people (& was so greate) and that the Moabites stode in feare of the children of Israel, he sayde vnto & Elders of the Madianites: Now shal this heape licke vp all that is aboute vs, euë as an oxe lickeh vp the grasse in the felde. (And Balac & sonne of Ziphor was kynge of the Moabites at that tyme.)

And he sent out messaungers vnto * Balaam the sonne of Beor, which was an interpreter. (The same dwelt by the water of the londe of & children of his people) that they shulde call him, and he caused to saye vnto him: Behold, there is come out of Egipte, a people, which couereth & face of & earth, and lyeth saddled his Asse, & wente with the prynces of \( \dot{y} \) Moabites. But the wrath of God waxed whote, because he wete. And the angell of \( \dot{y} \) LORDE stode in the waye, to withstande him. But he rode vp\( \dot{y} \) his Asse, & two seruauntes with him. And \( \dot{y} \) Asse sawe \( \dot{y} \) angell of \( \dot{y} \) LORDE stodinge in \( \dot{y} \) waye, & his swerde drawen in his hyde. And \( \dot{y} \) Asse turned a syde out of \( \dot{y} \) waye, & wete in to the felde. But Balaam smote her, \( \dot{y} \) she shulde goe in the waye.

Then stode the angell of the LORDE in \( \dot{y} \) pathe by the vynyardes, where there were walles on both the sydes. And whan \( \dot{y} \) Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she wreshed vpnto the wall, & thrust Balaams fote vnto the wall. And he smote her agayne. Thê wete the angell of the LORDE farther, \( \dot{y} \) stode in a narow place, where there was no waye to turne, nether to the righte hyde ner to \( \dot{y} \) lefte. And whan the Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she fell downe vnder Balaam. Then was Balaams wrath furious, \( \dot{y} \) smote the Asse with a staffe.

Then opened the LORDE the mouth of \( \dot{y} \) Asse, and she sayde vnto Balaam: What haue I done vnto the, that thou hast smyttyn me now thre tyms? Balaam sayde vnto \( \dot{y} \) Asse: Because thou hast mocked me. \( \dot{y} \) Asse sawe I had a swerde now in my hande, I wolde kyll the. The Asse sayde vnto Balaam: Am not I thine Asse, which thou hast rydden vpon in thy tyme vnto this daye? Was I euer wonte to do so vnto the? He sayde: No.

Then opened the LORDE the eyes of Balaam, \( \dot{y} \) he sawe \( \dot{y} \) angell of the LORDE stondinge in \( \dot{y} \) waye, \( \dot{y} \) a drawe swerde in his hyde. And he enclyned him selfe, \( \dot{y} \) bowed downe with his face. And the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherfore hast thou smyttyn thine Asse now thre tyms? Beholde, I am come out to resiste \( \dot{y} \), for thy waye is frowarde, \( \dot{y} \) cötryry vnto me. And \( \dot{y} \) Asse sawe me, \( \dot{y} \) auoyded fro me thre tymes: or els \( \dot{y} \) she had not turnde asyde fro me, I had slaynye the, \( \dot{y} \) sauëd the Asse alyne.

Then sayde Balaam vnto \( \dot{y} \) angell of \( \dot{y} \) LORDE: I haue synned, for I wyst not, that thou stodest in the waye agaynst me. And now \( \dot{y} \) it displese \( \dot{y} \), I wil turnde agayne. The angell of \( \dot{y} \) LORDE sayde vnto him: Go with the mô: but thou shalt speake nothing els, then \( \dot{y} \) I shal saye vnto \( \dot{y} \). So Balaam wente forth with the princes of Balaam. Whan Balaam answered, \( \dot{y} \) sayde vnto \( \dot{y} \) seruaüttes of Balac: *Yf Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer \( \dot{y} \) golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde \( \dot{y} \) wordes of the LORDE my God, to do little or greate. Neuertheles tary ye here this night, \( \dot{y} \) I maye wete, what the LORDE wil saye more vnto me. Then came God to Balaam by night, \( \dot{y} \) saide vnto hym: Yf the men are come to call the, get the vp then, and go with the: but what I shal saye vnto the, that shalt thou do.

Then rose Balaam vp in the mornyng, \( \dot{y} \)

Balac herde Ḅalaam, he went out to mete him (in the cite of the Moabites Ḅ lieth on the coaste of Arnon, which is on Ḅ vtemost border) Ḅ sayde vnto him: Dyd not I sende for Ḅ to call the? Wherfore easeth thou not then vnto me? Thinkest thou Ḅ I am not able to promote Ḅ vnto honouré? Ḅalaam answered him: Lo, I am come vnto Ḅ. *But how can I saye any thinge els, thē Ḅ God putteth in my mouth? Ḅ I must speake.

So Ḅalaam wente with Balac, and they came vnto the cite on the vtemost border of his lande. And Balac slewe oxen and shepe, and sente for Balac, and for the prynces that were with him.

The xiii. Chapter.

A ND in the mornyng, Balac toke Bal-aam, and they wete vp to the hye place of Iaa, that from thēe he might se vnto the vtemost parte of Ḅ people. And Ḅalaam sayde vnto Balac: Buyld me here seuen altares, and prouyde me here seuen bullockes, and seuē rammes. Balac dyd as Ḅalaam sayde. And both Balac and Ḅalaam offerèd, on euery altera a bullocke Ḅ a ramm. And Ḅalaam sayde vnto Balac: Stonde thou by thy burntoffrynge, I wil go, yf Ḅ happly the LORDE wil mete me, Ḅ call me, Ḅ I maye tell the, what so euer he shewed me. And he wente his waye, as he sayde.

And Ḅ LORDE mett Ḅalaam. And Ḅalaam saide vnto him: Seuen altares haue I prepared, and offerèd on euery altera a bullocke and a ramm. The LORDE put Ḅ worde in Ḅalaams mouth, and sayde: Go agayne vnto Balac, and saye on this wyse. And when he came agayne vnto him, beholde, he stode by his burntoffrynge, with all Ḅ prynces of the Moabites.

Then toke he vp his parable, Ḅ sayde: Ḅalaac the kyngne the Moabites hath caused to fet me out of Syrlye from the moiitarynnes towarde the East, (Ḡ sayde:) Come, curse me Iacob: come, defye me Iacob. How shall I curse, whom God curseth not? How shal I defye, whom Ḅ LORDE defyeth not? For frō Ḅ toppe of Ḅ stonye rockes I se him, Ḅ from the hilles I beholde him. Beholde, Ḅ people shal dwell by thē selues, Ḅ shal not be rekeened amōге Ḅ the Heithē. Who can tell the dust of Iacob, Ḅ the nombre of the fourth parte of Israel? My soule die Ḅ death of Ḅ righteous, and my ende be as the ende of these.

The saide Balac vnto Balac: What doest Ḅ thou vnto me? I causéd to fet Ḅ for to curse myne enemies, Ḅ beholde, thou blessest thē. Ḅ answered Ḅ saide: *Must I not kepe Ḅ speake Ḅ, which the LORDE puttheyn in to me mouth? Balac saide vnto him: Come with me yet vnto another place, frō whence thou mayest se Ḅ vtemost parte of them, Ḅ not se them all, and curse me they there.

And he toke him vp to a fre place, euē vnto the toppe of Pisga, Ḅ buylded seuen altares, and offered euery altera a bullocke Ḅ a ramm. And he sayde vnto Balac: Stonde so by thy burntoffrynge, whylē I go yonder.

And the LORDE mett Balac, Ḅ put the worde in his mouth, Ḅ sayde: Go agayne vnto Balac, Ḅ saye on this wyse. And when he came to him agayne, beholde, he stode by his burntoffrynge with the prynces of the Moabites. And Ḅalaam saide vnto him: What hath the LORDE sayde?

And he toke vp his parable, Ḅ sayde: Ryse vp Balac Ḅ heare, marke my testimony with thine eares thou sonne of Ziphor. *God is not a man Ḅ he shulde lye, ner a mans childe Ḅ eny thinge shulde repente him. Shulde he saye and not do? Shulde he speake Ḅ not make it good? Beholde, I am brought hithe to blesse, I blesse, Ḅ can not go back there fro.

There is no weeryynes seene in Iacob, nether eny laboure in Israel. The LORDE his God is with him, Ḅ the kynges trumpet is amōге thē. *God hath brought thē out of Egipte, his stregh is as of an Vnicorne. For there is no Sorcerye in Iacob, Ḅ no Soyth sayer in Israel. Whan the tyme cômeth, it shall be saide vnto Iacob, Ḅ to Israel, what God doth. Beholde, the people shall ryse vp a Lyonesse, Ḅ heue vp him self as a Lyon.

He shal not lye downe, tyll he eate of the pray, and drynyke the bloude of the slayne.

Then saide Balac vnto Balac: Thou shalt nether curse him ner blesses him. Balac answered, Ḅ sayde vnto Balac: Haue I not tolde the: All Ḅ the LORDE speaketh, Ḅ must I do? Balac saide vnto him: Oh come, I wil brynyg Ḅ to another place, Ḅ it maye happly please God, Ḅ thou mayest curse thē there. And he brought him vp to the toppe of mount Per, Ḅ boweth towarde the wylderness. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Buyld me here seuen altares, and prouyde me seuen bullockes and seuen rammes. Balac dyd as Balaam sayde, and offered on euery altaure a bullocke and a ramme.

The iiij. Chapter.

Now when Balaam sawe y it pleased the LORDE, that he shulde blesse Israel, he wente not as (he dyd before) to seke witches, but set his face straighte towarde the wylderness, lift vp his eyes, and sawe Israel, how they laye acordine to their trybues, and the sprete of God came vpon him, and he toke vp his parable, and sayde: "Thus sayeth Balaam the sonne of Beor: Thus sayeth the man whose eyes are opened: Thus sayeth he which heareth the wordes of God, which sawe the vision of y Allmightie: which fell downe, and his eyes were opened.

How goodly are thy tettes O Iacob, and thy habitations O Israel? Even as the brode valleys, as the gardens by the waters syde, as y tentes which the LORDE hath plated, as the Ceder trees vpon y water. The water shal flowe out of his boket, and his sede shalbe a greate water. His kynte shal be hyer then Agag, as his kynge dsome shalbe exalted. God hath broughte hi out of Egipte, his strength is as of an unicorne. He shal eate vp thhe Heithen his enemies, and gynde their bones to poulder, and shute thorow them with his arowes. He hath layed him downe as a Lyon and as a Lyonesse. Who wyll rayse him vp? Blessed be he, y blesseth the: and cursed, that curseth thye.

Thé was Balac furious e wrath against Balaam, as smote his hades together, as sayde vpnto him: I haue called the, y thou shullest curse myne enemies, and beholde, thou hast blessed thé now thre tymes: y now get the héce to thy place. I thoughte y I wolde promote the vnto honour, but the LORDE hath keppe the backe from that worship.

Balaam answered him: Tolde not I thy messaugers (whom thou sendest vnto me) as sayde: Yf Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer and golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde the worde of the LORDE, to do either euell or good after myne awne hert: but what y LORDE speaketh, that must I speake also. And now beholde, for so much as I go to my people, come therefoure, I wyll shewe the what this people shal do vnto thy people after this tyume.

And he toke vp his parable, and sayde:
"Thus sayeth Balaam the sonne of Beor: Thus sayeth the man, whose eyes are opened: Thus sayeth he which heareth the wordes of God, as y hath the knowleage of y hyest, euë he y sawe y visio of y Allmightie, as fell downe, as his eyes were opened: I shal se him, but not now: I shal beholde him, but not wie at hyde. There shal a starre come out of Iacob, as a ceputer shall come vp out of Israel, and shal smyte y rulers of the Moab-ites, and overcomne all the children of Seth.

Edom shalbe his possession, and Seir shalbe his enemies possessio, but Israel shal do manfully. Out of Iacob shal come he y hath dominion, and shall destroye the remnaunt of the citie.

And wha he sawe y Amalechites, he toke vp his parable, as sayde: "Amalech the first amõge the Heithé, but at y last thou shalt perishe vitterly. And whan he sawe the Kenites, he toke vp his parable, as sayde: Strõge is thy dwellinge, and on a rocke hast thou put thy nest, neuertheless thou shalt be a burninge vnto Kain, tyll Assur take y presoner.

And he toke vp his parable agayne, as sayde: Alas, who shal lyue, wha God doth this? And shippes out of Citim shall subdue Assur and Eber. He him self also shal perishe vitterly. And Balaam gat him vp, and departed, and came againe vnto his place, and Balac wente his waye also.

The iv. Chapter.

And Israel dwelt in Sittim, and the people began to commytte whorde with the daughters of the Moabites, which called the people vnto the sacrific of their goddes. And the people ate and worshipped their goddes, and Israel submittyed him self vnto Baal Peor. Then the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpon Israel, and he sayde vnto Moses: Take all the rulers of the people, and hange them vp vnto the LORDE agaynst y Sonne, that the terryble wrath of the LORDE maye be turned away from Israel. And Moses sayde vnto the judges of...
Israel: Every man slay his captain, that had submitted them selves unto Baal Peor. And beholde, one of the children of Israel went in against his brethren, and joined him self to a Madianitish woman, in the sight of Moses and of the whole congregation of the children of Israel, which weped before the door of Tabernacle of wyntesse. When Phineas slew the sonne of Eleasar the sonne of Aaron, he rose vp out of the congregation, took a swerde in his hande, wente before the man of Israel into the whorhouse, thrust the thorow both the man of Israel and the woman, and threw the bely of her. Then ceased the plauge from the children of Israel, and there were slayne in the plauge foure and twentye thousande.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: Phineas the sonne of Eleazar the sonne of Aaron said in his wrath awake from the children of Israel, and his gelosy for my sake among them. I will not consume the children of Israel in my gelosy. Wherfore sayeleth: Beholde, I geue him my own daughter of Zur, which was a ruluer of the people of a kynred among the Madianites.

And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: Vexe the Madianites, smyte them, for they haue vexed you with their wyles, wherby they haue bigyled you thorow Peor, and thorow their sister Coszbi the daughter of a captain of the Madianites, which was slayne in the daye of the plauge, for Peors sake, and the plauge came after.

The children of Simeon were, Nemuel: of whom the kyndred of the Nemuelites, Iamin: of whom the kyndred of the Iaminites, Jachin: of whom the kyndred of the Iachinites, Sera: of whom the kyndred of the Serahites, Saul: of whom the kyndred of the Saulites. These are the kyndreds of the Simeonites, two. And the children of Gad in their kyndreds were, Zephon: of whom the kyndred of the Zephonites, Haggi: of whom the kyndred of the Haggites, Suni: of whom the kyndred of the Sunites, Aseni: of whom the kyndred of the Asenites, Eri: of whom the kyndred of the Erinutes. Arad: of whom the kyndred of the Aradites, Ariel: of whom the kyndred of the Arielites. These are the children of Gad, the children of their fohrtye thousande and fyue C.

The children of Iuda, Er, and Onan, which both dyed in the lâde of Canaan. But ÿ children of Iuda in their kynreds, were, Sela:

Kahath begat Amram. ́ And Amrams wife was calle lochebed a daughter of Leui, which was borne him in Egip#e: And vnsto Amram she bare Aaron ́ Moses, ́ Miriam their sister. And vnsto Aaron were borne Nadab, Abihu,́ Eleasar ́ Ithamar. As for Nadab ́ Abihu, they dyed, when they offered straunge fyre before ́ LORDE. ́ And the summe of the was thre ́ twentye thousande, all males fró fyue monethes ́ abone. For they were not nombred amóge the childré of Israel, for there was no enheritaunce geuen the amonge the children of Israel.

This is ́ summe of ́ childré of Israel, whó Moses ́ Eleasar the prest nombred in the felde of the Moabites byseide Iordane, ouer agaynst Jericho: Amonge whom there was not one of the summe of those children of Israel,́ whom Moses ́ Aaron the prest nombred in the wildernesse of Sinai. For ́ LORDE stone vnto thé, ́ they shulde dye in the wildernesse. And there was not one of them lette, saue Caleb the sonne of Iephune and Isous the sonne of Nun.

The iiij. chapter.

A ND the daughteres of ́ Zelaphèad ́ sonne of Hepher ́ sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Machir, the sonne of Manasse, amongst the kynreds of Manasse the sonne Ioseph (whose names were, Mahela, Noa, Hagle, Milca, ́ Thirza) came ́ stode before Moses ́ Eleasar the prest, ́ before the rulers ́ the whole congregacion, euem before the dore of ́ Tabernacle of witness, ́ sayde:

Oure father is deed in the wildernesse, ́ was not in the company of them ́ rose vp agaynst ́ LORDE in the corregacion of Coráh: but dyeed in his awne synne, and had no sonnes. Wherefore shulde oure fathers name perishe then amonge his kynred, though he haue no sonne? ́ Geue vs a possession also amonge oure fathers brethren.

Moses broughte their cause before ́ LORDE. And the LORDE sayde vnto him: ́ The daughteres of Zelaphèad haue spoke righte. Thou shalt geue the a possession to inheret amonge their fathers brethren, ́ shal tune their fathers enheritaunce vnto them. And sayde vnto the childré of Israel: When a mä dyeth ́ hath no sonne, ye shal tune his enheritaunce vnto his daughter. ́ Yf he haue no doughter, ye shal geue it vnto his brethren. ́ Yf he haue no brethren, ye shal geue it vnto his fathers brethren. ́ Yf he haue no fathers brethren, ye shalt geue it vnto his nexte kynsz-folke which belóge vnto him in his kynred, ́ they maye possesse it. This shalbe an ordynaunce and a perpetuall lawe vnto the children of Israel, as the LORDE cōmaundèd Moses.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Get the vp in to this mount Abarim,́ beholde the lode, which I shal geue vnto the childré of Israel. And whan thou hast sene it, thou shalt be gathered vnto thy people ́ saue Aaron thy brother was gathered: for ye were dishobedient vnto my wordé in the wyldernesse of Zin, in ́ strife of the corregacion, when ye shulde haue sanctifie me, thorow the water before them. ́ This is the water of strye of Cades in the wyldernesse of Zin.

And Moses spake vnto the LORDE ́ sayde: O let the LORDE God of the sprete of all flesh set a mä ouer the corregacion, which maye go in ́ ouer before them, ́ to leade the ́ out ́ in, ́ the corregacion of the LORDE be not as the shepe without a shepheard.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Take vnto the Isous the sonne of Nun,́ which is a man in whom is the sprete, and put thine handes vpon him, ́ set him before Eleasar the prest, and before the whole congregacion, and geue him a charge in their sighte, ́ beutfyde him with thy bewty, that the whole congregacion of the children of Israel maye

And ye shall offer a burntofferynge for a sacrifice of a sweate sauore vnto ﬂ LORDE. A bullocke, a ramme, seue lambes of a yere olde without blemish, with their meatofferynges and drynkofferynges to ﬂ bullocke to the ramme, and to the lambes in their nõbre acordinge to the maner. And an he goate for a synofferinge, besyde the daylie burntofferynge with his meatofferynge ﬂ his drinkofferynge.

These things shall ye do vnto ﬂ LORDE in youre feastes, besyde that ye vowe and geue of a freyull for burntofferinges, meatofferynges, drynkofferynges and healthofferinges. And Moses tolde the children of Israel all that the LORDE commanded him.

The 11th. Chapter.

A ND Moses spake vnto the rulers of the trybes of the children of Israel, and saide: This is it that the LORDE hath commanded: *Yf any man make a vowe vnto the LORDE, or swear an oath, that so he bindeth his soule, he shall not breake his worde, but do all that is proceeded out of his mouth.

Yf a damsell make a vowe vnto ﬂ LORDE, and bynde hirself, whyse she is in hir fathers house, and vmmariied, and hir vowe or bonde that she maketh ouer hir soule, commeth to hir fathers cares, ﬂ he holde his peace thereto, the all hir voweres ﬂ bondes ﬂ she hath bonde his self withall ouer hir soule, shal stode in effecte. But yf her father forbryd her ﬂ same daye that he heareth it, the shal no vowe ner bonde that she hath bounde hir self withall ouer hir soule, be of vayle. And the LORDE shalbe mercifull vnto her, for so much as hir father forbad her.

Yf she have an husbannde, ﬂ hath a vowe vpon her, or yf she have letten go out of hir lipses a bode ouer hir soule, ﬂ hir husbannde heare it, ﬂ holdeith his peace therat, the same daye that he heareth it, then hir vowe ﬂ bonde wherwith she hath bounde hir self ouer hir soule, shal stonde in effecte. But yf hir husbannde forbryd her the same daye that he heareth it, the is the vowe lowse y she hath vp6 hir, ﬂ the bonde also that she hath letten go out of hir lipses ouer hir soule, and the LORDE shalbe gracious vnto her.

The vowe of a wyddowe, ﬂ of her y is deuorced, all y she byndeth hir self with-all ouer hir soule, shal stonde in effecte vpon her.

Yf she vowe in hir huszbades house, or bindeth hir self with an oath ouer hir soule, ﬂ hir husbannde heare it, ﬂ holde his peace thereto, and for bydeth it not, the shal all y same vowe, ﬂ all y she hath bounde hir self with all ouer hir soule, stode i effecte. But yf hir huszbade disanulle it, y same daye y he heareth it, the is it of no value y is proceeded out of hir lipses, which she hath vowed or bounde ouer hir soule: for hir huszbade hath made it lowse, ﬂ the LORDE shalbe gracious vnto her. And all vowers y oothes y bynde to humble y soule, mai hir huszbade stabilsh or breake, thus: Yf he holde his peace thereto fro one daie to another, then stabilsheth he all hir voweres y bondes, y she hath vpon her, because he helde his peace, the same daye y he herde the. But yf he disanulle the after y he hath herde the, then shal he take awaie hir miszdeede.

These are the statutes y the LORDE commanded Moses betwene a man ﬂ his wife, ﬂ betwene the father ﬂ his daughter, whyse she is yet a damsell in hir fathers house.

The 11th. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ﬂ saide: *Auenge the childre of Israel of the Madianites, y thou mayest afterwaerde be gathered vnto thy people. Thé spake Moses vnto the people, ﬂ saide: Harness some men amonge you to the warre agaynst the Madianites (y they maye auenge y LORDE vpon the Madianites) out of every trybe a thousande, y out of every trybe of Israel ye maye sende some to the battayll. And from amonge the thousandes of Israel they take one thousande out of every tribe, cenu twolue thousande prepared vnto the battayll. And Moses sent them with Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest in to the battayll, and the holy vessels and y trompettes to blowe in his hande.

And they fought agaynst y Madianites as y LORDE commanded Moses, ﬂ slew all y males, ﬂ the kynge of the Madianites slew they also amonge the other that were slaine namely, Eui, Rekem, Zur, Hur and Reba, the fyue kynges of the Madianites. And they slew *Balaam the sonne of Beor with the sward. And they children of Israel take the wemen of the Madianites presoners, & their childre: all their eattell, all their substance, and all their goodes spoiled they, and all their cities of their dwellynge castels burnt they with fyre. And they take all the spoyles, & all they could catche men and eattell, and brought the vnto Moses & to Eleasar the prest, and to the congregacion of the children of Israel (namely the presoners, and the eattell they were take, & the good that was spoyled) in to the hoost in the felde of the Moadites, which lyeth byside Iordane ouer against Iericho.

And Moses and Eleasar the prest and all the captaines of the congregacion, & wete out of the hoost to mete the. And Moses was angrie at the officers of the hoost, which were captaynes ouer thousands and hundres, & came from the battayll, and sayde vnto the: Haue ye saued all the wemen alyue? Beholde, haue not they (thorow Balaams busynes) turned awaye the childre of Israel to synne agaynst the LORDE vpon Peor, & ther came a plage ouer the whole congregacion of the LORDE? Now therfore slaye all the males amonge the childre, & kyll all the wemen haue knowne men lyen with them. But all the wemen children & haue knowne no me neer lien with them, kepe those alyue for youre selues. And lodge ye without the hoost: & all haue slayne any man, or touched the slayne, that on the thirde and seuenthe daie ye maie purifie youre selues and those whom ye haue taken presoners. And all the clothes, and all stuffe that is made of szykynnes, and all maner furres, and all vessels of wood shall ye purifie.

And Eleasar the prest sayde vnto the captaynes of the hoost, they wente out to the battayll: This is the statute of the lawe, which the LORDE commaunded Moses: Golde, siluer, brasse, yron, tynne and leed, and all that suffreth the fyre, shall ye cause to go thorow the fyre, and clense it, that it maye be purifyed with spreenklyng water. As for all soch as suffreth not the fyre, ye shalcause it to go thorow the water, and shall washe youre clothes vpon the seuenthe daye, and the shall ye be cleane. After that shall ye come in to the hoost.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Take the summe of the spoyle of those that are taken, both of wemen and of eattell, thou and Eleasar the prest, and the chefe fathers of the congregacion, and geue th halfe vnto those that toke the warre vpon them, and wente out to the battayll, and the other halfe to the congregacion. And of the men of warre that wente out to the battayll, thou shalt heue vnto the LORDE one soule of fyue hundreth, both of the wemen, oxen, Asses and shepe: Of their halfe parte shalt thou take, and geue it vnto Eleasar the prest for an Heueofferynge vnto the LORDE. But of the children of Israel haue parte, thou shalt take one hade of fyfftie, both of the wemen, oxen, Asses and shepe, and of all the eattell, and shalt geue them vnto the Leuites, that wayte vpon the habitatio of the LORDE.

And Moses and Eleasar the prest dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And the spoyle and prayce which the men of warre had spoyled, was sixe hundreth thousande and fyue and seuentie thousande shepe, two and seuentie thousande oxen, one thire score thousande Asses: and the wemen had knowne no men ner lyen with them, were two and thirte hundred soules.

And the halfe parte which belonged vnto them that wente to the warre, was in nobre three hundred thousande, and seuen and thirte hundred, and fyue hundreth shepe: of the which the LORDE had sixe hundreth, three hundred, Asses shepe and seuentie shepe. Item sixe and thirte thousande oxen: whereof the LORDE had two seuentie. Item thirte thousande fyue hundreth Asses: whereof the LORDE had one thire score. Item sixtene thousande soules of wemen: whereof the LORDE had two thirte. And Moses gave this heueofferynge of the LORDE vnto Eleasar the prest, as the LORDE commaunded him.

As for the other halfe which Moses deuyded vnto the children of Israel fro the men of warre (namely the halfe that fell to the congregacion) it was also three hundreth thousande, and seuen and thirte thousande, fyue hundreth shepe, sixe and thirte thousande oxen, thirte thousande fyue hundreth Asses, and sixtene thousande wemen soules. And of this halfe of the childre of Israel toke Moses one of eury fyfftie, both of the eattell of the wemen, and gave them vnto Leuites, that waited.
upon the habitaciō of the LORDE, as ye LORDE commandeth Moses.

And the captyanes over thousands of the host, namely they that were over thousands and over hundreds, came forth vnto Moses, and sayde vnto hym: Thy seruauntes haue taken thy summe of thy men of warre, that were vnder oure hande, and there lacked not one: therfore brynge we a present vnto the LORDE, what euery one hath foude of Iewels of golde, cheynes, bracelettes, rynges, earinges, and taches, that oure soules maye be reconcyled before the LORDE.

And Moses and Eleasar they prest toke of them golde of all maner ornamentes. And all the golde of the Heuoefferyng that they Heued vnto the LORDE, was sixtene thousande and seven hundred and fiftiye Sycles, of the captyanes ouer thousandes and hundreds. For loke what euery one had spoyled, that was his awne. And Moses with Eleasar the prest toke the golde of the captyanes ouer thousandes and hundreds, and broughte it in to the Tabernacle of witnesse for a remembrance of the children of Israel before the LORDE.

The iii. Chapter.

THE children of Ruben and the children of Gad had an exceadinge greate multitude of catell, and sawe the londe of Iaeser and Gilead it was a mete place for catell, and camē they spake vnto Moses and to Eleasar the prest, and to the captyanes of the congregacion: The londe of Atroth, Dibon, Iaeser, Nimra, Heszbō, Eleale, Seban, Nebo, Beon, which the LORDE smote before they congregacion of Israel, is a mete londe for catell, and thy seruauntes haue manye catell. And they sayde morouer: Ye we haue founde fauoure before the, the gene thy seruauntes this londe in possession, and we wyl not go ouer Iordane.

Moses sayde vnto them: Your brethern shall go to the warre, and wyll ye tary here? Wherfore turne ye herte of the children of Israel, that they shulde not go ouer in to the londe that the LORDE shall geue them?

*Thus dyd youre fathers also, when I sent them out from Cades Bernea, to spye ouer londe. And when they were come vp to ryuer of Escol, and sawe londe, they turned the hertes of the children of Israel, so they wolden not in to the londe which they LORDE wold haue geuen them.

And the LORDE was wroth at the same tyme, ye swear, ye sayde: These men which are come out of Egypte, from twentie yeare olde and above, shall not se the lande which I have vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, because they haue not wholly followed me: suche Caleb thou sonne of Jephune thou Kenisite, thou Iosu thou sonne of Nun: for they haue wholly followed thee LORDE. So the LORDE was wroth with Israel, ye let the wander in the wildernes fourtie yeares, till all thou generacion had done cuell before the LORDE, was consumed.

And behold, ye are ryser vp in youre fathers stead, to increase the nombre of synfull men, to augmente yet the wrath of indignacion of the LORDE against Israel. For ye turne you backe from folowinge him, he shal yet leue them more in the wildernesse, so shal ye destroye all this people.

Then stepte they to him, ye sayde: we wyll but buylde shepedefoldes here for oure shep catell, cities for oure children: As for oure selues, we will go ready armed before the children of Israel, till we haue broughte them vnto their place: Our childre shal remayne in the fenced cities, because of thy indwellers of the londe. We will not turne home agayne, till the children of Israel haue taken euery one his inheritance in possession: for we wyll not inheret with them beyonde Iordane: for oure inheritance shal fall vnto vs vpon this syde Iordane Eastwarde.

Moses sayde vnto them: Ye wyll wyl harnesse youre selues to the warre before the LORDE, then go ouer Iordane before the LORDE, who so euer is harnessed amonoge you, till he haue dryuen out his enemys before his face, and vntyll the londe be subdued before the LORDE, then shal ye returne, ye shal be vngiltye before the LORDE, and before Israel, ye shal haue this londe in possession before the LORDE. But ye wyll not do so, beholde, ye shal offende against the LORDE, and be sure, that youre syrne shall fynde you out. Buylde cities now therefore for youre children, and shepedefoldes and stalles for youre shepe and catell, and do as ye haue spoken.

The childre of Gad, ye the childre of Ruben sayde vnsto Moses: Thy seruauntes shal do as my lorde hath comauund. Oure children, wyues, substauence, & all our catell, shal be in y cities of Gilead. But we thy seruauntes will go all harnessed for the warre vnsto battail before y LORDE, as my lorde hath saide. The Moses comauundéd Eeleas y prest g Iosua the sonne of Nun, g the chefe fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, and saide vnsto them: If the children of Gad g the children of Ruben go ouer Iordane with you, all prepared to fight before the LORDE, g whan the londe is subdued vnsto you, the geue them the londe of Gilead in possesió. But yf they go not ouer with you in harnes, then shal they inherept with you in y lode of Canaan. The children of Gad and the children of Ruben answered, g sayde: As y LORDE hath spoken vnsto thy seruauntes, so wyll we do: we wil go harnessed before the LORDE in to y lode of Canaan, and possesse oure enherit- auance on this ysdane. So Moses gaue vnsto y children of Gad and to the children of Ruben, b and to the halfe trybe of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph, y kyngdome of Sihon kyng of the Amorites and the kyngdome of Og kyng of the Basan, the londe with the cities therof in all y coastes of y countre rounde aboute. The y children of Gad buylded Dibon, Ataroth, Aroer, Atroth, Sophan, Iaaser, g Iegabea, Bethnimra, g Betharan, stronge fenced cities, g shepe foldes. The children of Ruben buylded Heszbo, Eleale, Kiriathaim, Nebo, Baal Meon, g turned y names, g Sibanas g gaue names vnsto y cities which they buylded. And y children of Machir the sonne of Manasse wente in to Gilead, g conquered it, and drowe out the Amorites y were therin. Then Moses gaue Gilead vnsto Machir y sonne of Manasse, g he dwelt therin. Iair y sonne of Manasse wente and conquered the vyllagies therof, and called them Hauoth Iair. Nobah wente, and coquered Kenath, with the townes belonginge thereto, and called it Nobah, after his awne name.

The iiiij. Chapter.

These are y journeys of the childre of Israel, which wete ouer of y lande of Egipte acordinge to their armie, by Moses g Aaró. And Moses wrote their goige out as they journeyed, after y comauundement of y LORDE. And these (namely) are the journeies of their outgoinge. *They departed fro Raemses vpon y fittene daye of the first moneth (even the morow after the Easter) thorow an hye hande, so that all the Egipcians sawe, and buried then their firstborne, whom the LORDE had slayne amonge them: for the LORDE executed judgment also vpon their goddes. When they were departed from Raemses, they pitched in Sucoth. And fro Sucoth they departed, g pitched their tentes in Etha, which lyeth in y edge of y wildernes. "Fro Etham they departed, and abode in the valley of Hiroth (which lyeth towards Baal Zephon) g pitched ouer agaynest Miggdol. From Hyroth they departed, g wente in thorow y middles of the see in to y wildernes, and wente three dayes journey in the wildernes of Etham, g pitched in Marah. From Marah they departed, and came vnsto Elim, where there were twolfe welles of water, and seventye palme trees, g there they pitched. From Elim they departed, and pitched by the reed see. From y reed see they departed, and pitched in the wildernes of Sin. From the wildernes of Sin they departed, and pitched in Daphka. Fro Daphka they departed, and pitched in Alus. *From Alus they departed, and pitched in Raphidim, where the people had no water to drynke. *From Raphidim they departed and pitched in the wildernes of Sinai. From Sinai they departed, and pitched at the Lustgranes. *Fro the Lustgranes they departed, and pitched in Hazeroth. *From Hazeroth they departed, g pitched in Rithma. From Rithma they departed, and pitched in Rimon Parez. From Rimon Parez they departed, and pitched in Libna. From Libna they departed, and pitched in Rissa. Fro Rissa they departed, g pitched in Keheletha. Fro Keheletha they departed, g pitched in molt Sapher. From molt Sapher they departed, g pitched in Harada. Fro Harada they departed, pitched in Makeheloth. Fro Makeheloth they departed, g pitched in Tahath. From Tahath they departed, and pitched in Luhath. From Luhath they departed, and pitched in Phinna. From Phinna they departed, and pitched in Hisset. From Hisset they departed, and pitched in Moseroth.

many, shall ye deuyde the more: And vnto them that are fewe, shall ye deuyde the lesse. Even as the lott falleth there vnto every one, so shall he haue it, acordinge to the trybes of their fathers.

But yf ye wyll not drye out the inhabiteres of þe lande before youre face, þen they who ye sufhe to remayne, shall become thornes in youre eyes, and darts in youre sydes, þe shall vexe you in the londe where ye dwell. Then wil it come to passe, that I shal do vnto you even as I thought to do vnto them.

The riiij. Chapter.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commande the childe of Israel, and saie vnto them: When ye come in to the londe of Canaan, the londe ðe fallete to youre inheritaunce, shall haue hir borders in the londe of Canaan. The South quarter shall begynne at the wyldernes of Zin by Edom, so that youre South quarter be from the edge of the SALT see, which lyeth towarde the South: and that ðe same quarter fet a compasse from the South vp to Acrabim, ð go thorow Zimma: ð that his out goinge be from the South vnto Cades Barnea, ð reache vnto Hazor Adar, and go thorow Azmona, and stretch out from Azmona vnto the ryuer of Egipte, and that the ende thereof be at the greate see.

But the West quarter shal be this: namely the greate see, let ð be youre border towarde the West.

The North quarter shalbe this: Ye shall compasse from the greate see vnto mount Hor. And fro mount Hor ye shall compasse tyll a man come vnto Hemath, that the out goynge thereof be the coast of Zedada, and that the border of the same go out vnto Siphron, and that the goynge out of it be at Hazor Enan. Let this be youre North quarter.

And youre East quarter shall ye compasse from Hazor Enan vnto Sephan, ð let the coaste go downe from Sephan and Ribla on the East syde of Ayn. Þe let it go downe, ð reache vnto the syde of the see of Chinereth East warde, and come downe by Iordane, so ðe goynge out of it be the SALT see. Let this be youre londe with the borders thereof rounde aboute.

Chap. riiij. The iij. boke of Moses.
And Moses commanded the children of Israel, and said: This is your londe that ye shall deuyde out amonque you by lott, which the LORDE hath commanded to geue vnto the nyne trybes, and to the halfe trybe. *For the trybe of the children of Ruben after their fathers house, and the trybe of the children of Gad acordinge to their fathers house, and the half trybe of Manasse have receeed their portion. Thus the two trybes and the halfe trybe have their heritaunce alreadie, on this syde Iordane, ouer agaynst Iericho, Eastwarde. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and saide: *These are thine names of the men, which shall deuyde the londe amonque you. Eleasar the prest, and Issua the sonne of Nun. And the capitayne of every trybe shal ye take, to deuyde the londe.

And these are the names of the men: Caleb the sonne of Iephune of the trybe of Iuda. Semuel the sonne of Ammihud of the trybe of Simeon. Elidad the sonne of Cislon of the trybe of Ben Iamin. Buki the sonne of Iagli of the trybe of the childre of Dan. Hamuel the sonne of Ephod, of the trybe of the children of Manasse amoncge the children of Joseph. Kemuel the sonne of Siphthan, of the trybe of the children of Ephraim. Elizaphan the sonne of Parnach, of the trybe of the childre of Zabulon. Palthiel the sonne of Asan, of the trybe of the childre of Isachar. Abihud the sonne of Selomi, of the trybe of the children of Asser. Pedahel the sonne of Ammihud, of the trybe of the children of Nephtali. These are they whom the LORDE commanded, that they shulde deuyde the inheritaunce vnto the children of Israel in the londe of Canaan.

The 1176. Chapter.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the felde of the Moabites by Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho, and saide: Commande the childre of Israel, that they geue vnto the Leuites of the inheritaunce of their possession, cities to dwell in. The suburbs also aboute the cities shal ye gene vnto the Leuites, that they maye dwell in the cities, and in the suburbs to hane their catell, and substaunce, and all their beestes. The suburbs which ye gene vnto the Leuites, shal reache fro the wall of the cite outarde.

* Num. 32. l.  Deut. 3. e.  Josu. 14. a.  Josu. 21. a. M. cubites rounde aboute. Thus ye shal measure without the cite on the East syde, two thousande cubites: on the South syde, two thousande cubites: on the West syde, two thousande cubites: on the North syde, two thousande cubites, so the cite be in the myddes. This shal be their suburbs.

* And amoge the cities which ye shal geue vnto the Leuites, ye shall geue the sixe fre cities, that he which comitteth a slaughter, maie flye thither. Besydes the same ye shal geue the yet two fre cities: so all cities which ye gene vnto the Leuites, be eight fre cities with their suburbs. And of the same ye shal geue the more, from the hane mach in possession amoncge the children of Israel: the lesse from them, that hane little in possession. Every one (acordinge to his inheritaunce that is denyed vnto him) shall geue of his cities vnto the Leuites.

And the LORDE talked with Moses and saide: Speake to the childre of Israel, and saye vnto the: *Whan ye come ouer Iordane in to the londe of Canaan, ye shall chose out cities to be fre cities, who so comitteth slaughter vnawarres, maye flye thither. And soch fre cities shalbe amonge you because of the auenger of bloude, that he which hath comittted slaughter, dye not, till he stonde in judgment before the congregacion. And of these cities which ye shall geue, there shalbe sixe fre cities. Thre shal ye gene on this side Iordane, and thre in the londe of Canaan.

These are the sixe fre cities, both for the childre of Israel for the straungers, for soch as dwell amoge you, who so euer hath slaine eny soule vnawarres, maye flye thither.

*He that smyteth eny man with an yron weapo, he dye, the same is a murtherer, shal dye the death. Yf he cast at him with a stone (wherewith eny man maye be slayne) he dye thereof, then is he a murtherer, and shal dye the death. Yf he smyte him with an hand-weapon of wodd (wherewith eny man mai be slayne) that he dye, then is he a murtherer, and shal dye the death. The auenger of bloude shal bringe the murtherer to death. Whan he fyndeth him, he shal slaye him. Yf he thrust at him of hate, or cast ought at him with laienge of wayte, or smyte him of envye with his hande, that he dye, then shal he that hath slayne him, dye the death: for he is a mur-Chap. rrvi.  The iii. boke of Moses.

Now the enheriteuns of the childe of Israel, and saidethe: Syr, the LORDE hath commaunded, that ye shalde geue the londe by lott vnto the childe of Israel to inheret. And thou my lorde hast commaunded thorow the LORDE, that the enheriteuns of our brother Zelaphahd shulde be genue vnto his doothers. Now by eny men out of the trybes of Israel take them to wyues, then shal oure fathers enheriteuns be lesse: and as moch as they haue, shal come to y enheriteuns of the trybe that they come vnto. Thus shal the lott of oure enheriteuns be mynished. So when the yeare of Jubilye commeth vnto the childe of Israel, then shal their enheriteuns come to y enheriteuns of the trybe, where they are. Thus shal oure fathers enheriteuns be mynished, as moch as they haue.

Moses charged the childe of Israel (accordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE) and sayde: The trybe of the children of Joseph hath sayde righte. This is it that y LORDE commaundeth the doothers of Zelaphahd, and sayeth: Let them mary as they like best, oney that they mary in y kynred of the trybe of their father, that the enheriteuns of the children of Israel fall not fro one trybe to another. For every one among the children of Israel shall cleue to the enheriteuns of the trybe of his father: every doother that possesseth enheriteuns amony the trybes of the children of Israel, shal be maryed vnto one of the kynred of the trybe of his father: every one among the children of Israel maye enjoye his fathers enheriteuns, and that the enheriteuns fall not from one trybe to another: but that every one maye cleue to his awne enheriteuns amony the trybes of the children of Israel.

As the LORDE commaunded Moses, euery so dyd y doothers of Zelaphahd, Mahela, Thirza, Hagla, Milca and Noa were maried vnto their fathers brothers sonnes, of y kynred of the children of Manasse the sonne of Joseph. So their enheriteuns remayned in the trybe of the kynred of their father.

These are the commaundementes of lawes, which y LORDE commaundeth by Moses vnto the childe of Israel, in the felde of the Moabites by Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho.

The first Chapter.

A THESE are the words that Moses spake vnto all Israel on the other syde Iordane in the wildernesse, in the playne feldes toward the reed see, betwene Paran, Thophel, Laban, Hazeroth, and Dishah, eleuen daies iourney from Horeb, by the wave of mount Seir vnto Cades Bernea. And it fortune the first daye of the eleuentha moneth in the fortieth yeare, that Moses spake vnto 7 children of Israel acordinge vnto all as 7 LORDE commanded him, *after he had smytten Sihon 7 kyng of the Amorites which dwelt at Heszboun: and Og the kyngye of Basan, that dwelt at Astonoth, and at Edrei.

On the other syde Iordane in 7 lande of the Moabites, beganne Moses to declare this lawe, and sayde: The LORDE oure God spake vnto vs vpon mount Horeb, 7 sayde: Ye haue bene longe ynowe vpon this mountayne, turren you, 7 departe hence, that ye maye come to the mountaynes of the Amorites, and to all their neighbours in 7 feldes, vpon mountaynes, and in the valleys towaerde the South and towaerde the see syde, of the lande of Canaan: and to mount Libanus, euene vnto the great water Ephrathes. Belholde, I haue deliuered you the londe, go in, and take it in possession, which the LORDE sweare vnto youre fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, 7 that he wolde geue it vnto the, and their sede after them.

Then saide I vnto you at the same tyme: 7 I am not able to beare you my selfe alone, for the LORDE oure God hath increased you, so that this daye ye are as 7 starres of heauen in multitude. (The LORDE God of youre fathers make you yet many thousande tymes more, 7 blesse you, as he promysed you.) How can I alone beare soche cobraunce, 7 charge, 7 strye amoge you? Prouyde here men of wysdomne 7 understandinge, soch as are knowe amonge youre trybes, the wil I set to be heads vnto you.

Then answered ye me, and sayde: It is a good thing, that thou sayest thou wilt do. Then toke I 7 heads of youre trybes, wyse and famous me, and set them over you to be heads, ouer thousandes, ouer hundreds, ouer fiftye and ouer ten: and officers amonge youre trybes.

And I charged youre judges at 7 same tyme, 7 sayde: Heare youre brethren, 7 judge righteously betwene eueryman and his brother, and the straunger. Ye shal knowe no personne in judgment, but shal haue the small as well as the great, and be afrayed of no man: for the Judgment is Gods. But ye may causse be to harde for you, 7 let it be broughte vnto me, 7 I maye hearre it. Thus commanded I you at the same tyme, all 7 ye shulde doo.

Then departed we from Horeb, and walked throw the whole wylderness (which is greate and terrible as ye haue sene) by the waye to 7 mountaynes of the Amorites, as the LORDE oure God commaunded vs, and came vnto Cades Bernea. Then sayde I vnto you: Ye are come to 7 mountaynes of 7 Amorites, which the LORDE oure God shal geue vs. Beholde, there the londe before the, which the LORDE thy God hath geue vnto the: Go vp, 7 conquerre it, as 7 LORDE God of thy fathers hath sayde vnto the: 7 feare not, and be not discouraged.

Then came ye all vnto me, and sayde: Let vs sende men before vs, 7 to spye vs out the londe, and to bryng vs worde agayne, by what waye we shal go vp, and to what cities we shal come. That pleased me well, and I toke twelue men from amonge you, of euery trybe one. Which when they were departed, and wente vp to hye countrre, and came to the ryuer Escol, they spayed it out, and toke of the frute of 7 londe with the, 7 and broughte it downe vnto vs, and broughte vs worde agayne, and sayde: It is a good londe, that the LORDE oure God hath geue vs.

But ye wolde not go vp, and were disobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE youre God, and murmured in youre tentes, and sayde: Because the LORDE hateth vs, threfore hath he broughte vs out of the londe of Egipte, to deliuer vs in to the handes of the Amorites, to destroye vs. Whither shal we go vp? Oure brethren haue discouraged oure hertes, 7 saide: 7 The people is greate 7 of hyer stature then we, 7 cities are greate, 7 walled euene vp to heauen. Morouer we haue sene there the children of Enakim.

But I saide vnto you: Fear not, and be not afrayed of them: for the LORDE youre

God goeth before you, and shall fight for you, like as he dealt with you in Egypte before ye were, and in the wildernesse: where thou sawest, that the LORDE thy God bare the (even as a man beareth his sonne) throw out all the waye that ye have walked, till ye came to this place. And yet for all this ye have not believed on the LORDE your God, which wente before you, to searche you out a place, where ye shulde pitch youre tentes: by night in the lyre (to shewe you the waye, wherin ye shulde go)

When the LORDE herde thy voyce of youre wordes, he was wrath, and swore, and sayde:
"There shall none of this euell generation se that good londe, which I sware to geue vnto youre fathers, excepte Caleb the sonne of Iephune, he shal se it.
And vnto him wyl I geue the londe that he hath trodde vpon, and to his children, because he hath perfectly followed the LORDE."

The LORDE was angrye with me also for youre sakes, and sayde:
"Thou also shalt not go in thither. But Iosua thy sonne of Nun, which standeth before the, he shal go in thither: Corage him, for he shal deuyde the enheritaunce out vnto Israel. And youre children, of whô ye sayde they shulde be a praye, and youre sonnes which this daie vnderstone better good ner bad, they shal go in thither, vnto them wil I geue it, and they shal enjoye it. But as for you, turne you, and take youre iourney to the wildernesse, euyn the waye to the reed see."

Then answered ye,
"Sayde vnto me: We haue synned agaynst the LORDE, we will go vp, and fighte, accordinge to all that the LORDE hath commaundede vs. Now when ye had prepared youre selues, every one in his harnesse, were at the poynte to go vp to the mountaynes, vnto the LORDE sayde ye:
"Speake vnto them,
that they go not vp,
that they fighte not (for I am not amôge you) that ye be not smytten before youre enemies.
When I tolde you this, ye wolde not heare, and were dishobedient vnto the wordes of the LORDE, and were presumptuous, and wente vp to ye mountaynes.
Then the Amorites that dwelt vpon the mountaynes, came out against you, and chaced you, as Bees do, and smote you at Seir, even vnto Horma."

Now when ye came againe, and wepte before the LORDE, he wolde not heare youre voyce, and enclyned not his eares vnto you.
So ye abode in Cades a longe season.

The 15. Chapter.

THEN turned we vs, and take oure iourney to the wildernesse, euyn the waye to the reed see (as the LORDE sayde vnto me) and compassed mount Seir a longe season. And the LORDE saide vnto me: Ye haue copasped this mountayne now lôge ynoynge, turne you Northwarde, and commaunde the people, and saye: Ye shal go thorow ye coastes of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell at Seir:
they shall be afrayed of you. But take diligence heede to youre selues, that ye prouoke them not: for I wyl not geue you one fote bredth of their londe.
For mount Seir haue I geuen to the children of Esau to possesse. Ye shal bye meate of them for moneye, that ye maye eate. And water shal ye bye of them for money, that ye maye drynke. For the LORDE thy God hath blessed the in all the workes of thy hondes, He hath consideryd thy iourneyes thorow this greate wyldernesse: and this fortye yares hath the LORDE thy God bene with the, so that thou hast wanted no thinge.

Now when we were departed from oure brethren the children of Esau, that dwelt vpon mount Seir, by the waye of the felde from Elath to Seir gaber, we turned vs, and wente by the waye of the wyldernesse of the Moabites. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me:
"Thou shalt not vexe the Moabites, ner prouoke the vnto battayll, for I wil not geue the of their londe to possesse. For Ar haue I geuen vnto the children of Lot in possession.
The Emims dwelt there before tyne, which were a greate stronge people, hye of stature, as the Enakims: and were taken for giauntes, like as the Enakims. And the Moabites called them Emims.
The Horites also dwelt in Seir afore tyne, the children of Esau droue them out, and destroyed them before them, dwell in their steade: like as Israel dyd in the lode of his possession, that the LORDE gatethem.

Get you vp now, go ouer the ryuer Sared.
And we wente ouer. The tyme that we were goinge frō Cades Barnea, toll we came ouer the ryuer Sared, was eighteen and thirtie yereares: toll all the men of warre were waysted out of the hooste, *as the LORDE a swore vnto them. The hande of the LORDE also was against them, to destroye the out of the hooste, toll they were consumed.

And whan all the men of warre were consumed, so they were deede amonge the people, the LORDE spake vnto me, and sayde: This daie shal thou go thowre the coast of Moabites by Ar, & shalt come naye vnto & children of Ammon, & whom thou shalt not vexe ner prouoke. For I wyll not geue the of the lode of the children of Ammon to possesse, for I haue geue it vnto the children of Lot in possession.

And these LORDE destroyed before the, and let them possesse the same, so that they dwelt in their steade. *Like as he dyd with the children of Esau, which dwell vpō mount Seir, when he destroyed the Horites before them: and let them possesse the same, so that they haue dwelt in their steade vnto this daye. And the Caphthorims came out of Caphther, and destroyed Auims (yp dwell at Hazarim euen vnto Gaaza) & there dwelt they in their steade.

Get you vp now, and departe, and go ouer the ryuer Arnon. Behold, I haue geue Sihon kyng of the Amorites at Heszbon in to thy hande: go to and conqueru, and prouoke him vnto battayll. This daye wyll I beginne, so that all naciōs vnder all the heauen, shal feare & drede you: In so mōch whā they heare of the, they shal tremble and quake for thy commynge.

Then sent I messauengers from wylderness of the East vnto "Sihon the kyng at Heszbon & with peaceable worordes, and caused to saye vnto him: I wil go but thyro thy lode, I wil go a longe by the hye waye, I wil nether turne to the righte hade ner to y lefte. Thou shalt sell me meate for money, that I maye eate: water shalt thou sel me for money, that I maye drinke. Onely let me go thorow by fote, & as the children of Esau (which dwell at Seir) dyd vnto me: and the Moabites that dwell at Ar: vntyll I be come ouer Iordaine, in to the londe which the LORDEoure God shal geue vnto vs.

But Sihon the kyng at Heszbon holde not let vs go by him: for the LORDE thy God hardened his mynde, & made his hert tough that he mighte delyuer him in to thy hādes, as it is come to passe this daie.

And & LORDE sayde vnto me: Beholde, I haue begonne to delyuer Sihon with his londe before the: go to and coquere, and possesse his lode. *And Sihō came out with all his people to fight against vs at Iahza. But the LORDEoure God delyuered him in to oure handes, so that we smote him with his children and all his people.

Then toke we all his cities at the same tyme, and destroyed vttely all the cities, men, wemen, and children, and let none remayne: saue the catell, which we caught to oure selues, & the spoyle of the cities that we wanne from Aroër, which lyeth vpon the ryuer syde of Arnon, and from the cite on the ryuer vnto Gilead. There was no cite that could deffende it selfe from vs: the LORDEoure God delyuered vs all before vs. *But vnto the londe of the children of Ammon thou camest not, ner to all that was on the ryuer Iabok, ner to y cities vpō y mountaines, ner vnto what so euer the LORDEoure God forbade vs.

The iiij. Chapter.

AND we turned vs, & wente vp & waie A vnto Basan. And Og kyng of Basan, came out with all his people to fight against vs at Edrei. But the LORDE sayde vnto me: Be not afrayed of him, for I haue delyuered him & all his people with his londe in to thy hande: thou shalt doe with him, as thou dyddest with Sihon kyng of & Amorites, which dwelt at Heszbon, *Thus LORDEoure God delyuered Og kyng of Basan in to oure handes also with all his people: that we smote him, toll there was nothing left ouer vnto him.

Then wanne we at the same tyme all his cities, & there was not one cite that we toke not from him, euen thre score cities, the whole region of Argob in the kynge domes of Og at Basan. All these cities were stroge, with hye walles, gates, and barres, besyde many other vnwalled townes.

And we utterly destroyed them, as we dyd with Sihon the kynge at Hesbon. All the cities destroyed we vtther, and the men, wemen, and children. But all the catell and spoyle of the cities caughte we for oure selues.

Thus toke we at the same tyme the londe out of the honde of the two kynges of the Amorites beyonde Iordane, from the ryuer of Arnon vnto mount Hermon (which the Sidons call Sirion, but the Amorites call it Semir) all the cities ypon the playne, and all Gilead, and all Basan vnto Salcha and Edrei, the cities of the kynge domes of Og at Basan. For onely Og the kynge of Basan remayned ouer of the giauntes. Beholde, his yron bed is here at Rabath amonge the children of Ammon, nyne cubites longe, and foure cubites brede, after the cubite of a man.

This londe conquered we at the same tyme, from Aror that lyeth on ý ryuer of Arnon.

And vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites I gaue halfe mount Gilead with the cities therof: but ý remnaut of Gilead, ñ all Basan the kyngdome of Og, gaue I vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse. The whole region of Argob with all Basan was called the giauntes londe.

Iair the sonne of Manasse toke all the region of Argob vnto the coastes of Gessuri and Maachat, and Basan called he Hauoth Iair after his awne name, vnto this daye: But vnto Machir I gaue Gilead. And vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites I gaue one parte of Gilead vnto the ryuer of Arnon (at the myddes of the ryuer is ý border) and vnto the ryuer Iabok, which is the border of the children of Ammon: the felde also, and Iordane (which is the coaste) from Cinereth vnto the see in the felde, namely, ý Salt see vnder mount Pisga, Eastwarde.

And I commanded you at the same tyme, and sayde: The LORDE yeour God hath geuen you this londe to take possession of it, Go wyue waye forth therefore harnessed before youre brethren the children of Israel, all ye that be mete for the warre. As for youre wyues, and children and catell (for I knowe that ye haue much catell) let them remayne in youre cities, which I haue geuen you, vntyl the LORDE yeour God haue broughte youre brethren to rest also as well as you, that they also maye take possession of the londe, which ý LORDE yeour God shal geue the beyonde Iordane: and then shal ye turne awaye to youre awne possession, which I haue geuen you.

And I warned Iosua at the same tyme, and sayde: Thine eyes haue sene all that the LORDE yeour God hath done vnto these two kynges: enn so shal the LORDE do also vnto all ý kyngdomes whither thou goest. Feare them not, for the LORDE yeour God shal fighte for you.

And I besoughte the LORDE at the same tyme, ý sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast begonne to shewe thy seruuannte thy greatness and thy mightie huede. For where is there a God in heauen ý earth, that can do after thy workes and after thy power? O let me go ý se ý good londe beyonde Iordane, ý goodly hye countre, and Libanus.

But the LORDE was angrie with me for youre sakes, and wolde not heare me, but sayde vnto me: Be content, speake nomore to me of this matter. Get the vp to the toppe of mount Pisga, and lifte vp thine eyes towarde the west, and towarde the north, and towarde the south, and towarde ý est: and beholde it with thine eies, for thou shalt not go ouer this Iordane. And geue Iosua his charge, and corage him, and bolde him, for he shall go ouer Iordane before the people, and shall denyde vnto them the londe, that thou shalt se. And so we abode in the valley ouer agaynst the house of Peor.

The iii. Chapter.

A

ND now herken Israel vnto the ordinaunces and lawes, which I teach you that ye do them, ý ye maye lyue, and come in, ý take possession of the londe, which the LORDE God of youre fathers geneth vnto you. ý Ye shall put nothinge vnto the worde which I commaunde you, nether do oughte therefrom, that ye maye kepe the commande-mentes of the LORDE yeour God, which I commaunde you. Youre eyes haue sene what the LORDE hath done with Baal Peor: all them that walked after Baal Peor, hath the LORDE thy God destroyed from amonge you. But ye that cleue vnto the LORDE youre God, are all alie this daye. Beholdie I haue taughte you ordinanços and lawes, soch as the LORDE my God commaunded me, that ye shulde do euë so in the londe, in to y which ye shal come, to possesse it.

Kepe them now therfore and do them: for that is youre wyszdome and vnderstandinge in the sight of all nacions, which wha they haue herde all these ordinanços, shall saye: O what a wyse and vnderstandinge folke is this? and how excellent a people? For where is there so excellent a nacion, that hath goddes so nyce hym, as the LORDE onre God is nye vnto vs† as ofte as we call vpon him? And where is there so excellent a nacion, that hath so righteous ordinanços and lawes, as all this lawe which I laye before you this daye.

Take hede to thy selve now, and kepe well thy soule, that thou forget not the things whiche thine eyes haue sene, and that they departe not out of thy hert all the dayes of thy life. And thou shalt teach them thy children and thy childers children, the daye wha thou stodest before the LORDE thy God by mount Horeb, when the LORDE syade vnto me: Gather me the people together, that I maye make them heare my wordes, which they shal lerne, that they maye feare me all the dayes of their life vpon earth,‡ that they also maye teach their children.

And ye came nye, you stode vnder y mount. But the mount burnt euen vnto the myddes of heauen, and there was darknesse, cloudes, and myst. And y LORDE spake vnto you out of the myddes of the fyre. The voyce of his wordes ye herde, neuetherlesse ye sawe no ymage,§ but herde the voyce onelie. And be declared vnto you his couenaunce, which he commaunded you to do, namely, the ten verses, and wrote them vpon two tables of stone. And the LORDE commaunded me at the same time, to teach you ordinanços & lawes that ye might do thereafter in the londe, in to the which ye go to possesse it.

Kepe well youre soules therfore, for ye sawe no maner of ymage, in the daye wha the LORDE spake vnto you out of the fyre vpon mount Horeb,§ that ye destroye not youre selues, and make you eny ymage, that is like a man, or woman, or beest vpon earth, or fethered foule vnder the heauen, or worne vpon the grounde, or fysshze in the water vnder y euer: § ye thon lighte not vp thine eyes towarde heauen, and se the Sonne and the Moone the starres, and the whole hoost of heauë, and be diseaced, and worshippe, and serue them: † which the LORDE thy God hath made to serue all nacions vnder y whole heauë.

But ye hath the LORDE taken, and broughte you out of the yron fornace, namely, out of Egipte, that ye shulde be the people of his enheritaunce, as it is come to passe this daye. And the LORDE was angrie with me for youre sakes, so that he sware, § I shulde not go ouer Iordane, nemere in to that good londe, which the LORDE thy God shall geue the to enheritaunce. As for me, I must dye in this londe, and shall not go ouer Iordane: But ye shal go ouer, and shall haue that good lode in possession.

Take hede therfore vnto youre selues, that ye forget not the couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, and that ye make no ymages of eny maner of fashzion‡‡ as the LORDE thy God hath commaunded. For the LORDE thy God is a consumyng fyr‡ and a gels God. Yf whan ye have begotten children, and childers children, and haue dwelt in the londe, ye marre youre selues, †† you make you ymages of eny maner of fashzion, and do euell in the sighte of y LORDE youre God, to prouoke him: †† I call heauen and earth to recorde ouer you this daie, that ye shall shortly perishe frō the londe, in to y which ye go ouer Iordane to possesse it. Ye shal not dwell longe therin, but shall utterly be destroyed. And y LORDE shall scater you amongethe y naciones‡‡ and ye shall be left a small people amōge y Heythen, whyther the LORDE shall bryngue you. There shal ye serue goddes, which are y workes of mens handes, euyn wodd ã stone, which nethere ser ne heare, ner eate ner smell.

But yf thou seke the LORDE thy God there thou shalt finde him, yee yf thou seke him with thy whole hert and with all thy soule. Whan thou shalt be strately troubled, wha all these things shal come vpo the in y latter dayes, then shalt thou turne agayne to y LORDE thy God, and be obedient vnto his voice. For y LORDE thy God is a mercifull God, he shal not forsake thee, ner destroye the: neither shall he forget the couenaunt with thy fathers, * which he sware vnto them.

For axe after the tymes past, which haue bene before the, sens the daie y God created man vpon earth, from one ende of the heaué vnto the other, whether was ever eny soch greate thinge done, or eny soch like herde, that a people hath herde y voyce of God speake out of the fyre (as thou hast herde) yet liued. Or whether God assaied to go a take vnto him a people out of y myddes of a nacion, thorow tentacions, thorow tokens, thorow wonders, thorow warre, a thorow a mightie hande, a thorow a stretched out arm, and thorow greate visiós, acordinge vnto all as the LORDE youre God hath done with you in Egipte before thine eyes.

"Thou hast sene it, y thou mightest knowe that the LORDE is God, and that there is none other but he onely. * Out of heauen made he the to heare his voyce, that he might nourthe the: and vpon earth he shewed his greate feare, a out of y fyre thou herdest his wordes: ; because he loued thy fathers, a chose their seda after the. And he brought y out with his presence thorow his mightie power out of Egipte, to drye out (before the) nacions greater and mightier then thou, and to bringe y in, y he might gene the their lôde to enheritance, as it is come to passe this daie. Therfore shalt thou knowe this daie, a turne it in to thine herte, 3 that the LORDE is God aboue in heauen, and beneth vpon earth, and that there is no mo. Kepe his ordinances therofore and commandementes, which I commaunde the this daie, the shal it go well with the and thy children after the, so that thy life shal longe endure in y londe, which the LORDE the God meyth the thy life longe."

Then separated Moses thre cities beyonde Iordane, 4 towarde the Sonne rysinge, y he might flye thither, which had slaye his nehboure varwarres, a hated him not a fore tyme, y he might flye in to one of these cities, a lyue. Bezer in y wildernes in the playne countre amongethe Rubenites, a Ramoth in Gilead amôge Gaddites, a Golan in Basan amongethe Manassites.

This is the lawe which Moses layed before the children of Israel: these are the testimoynes, ordinances, a lawes, y Moses speake vnto the children of Israel (after they were departed out of Egipte) beyonde Iordane in the valley ouer against the house of Peor, in y londe of Sion kyngye of y Amorites which dwel at Heszbion, l whom Moses a the childre of Israel smote after they were departed out of Egipte, a conquered his lâde, a the londe of Og kyngye of Basan, two kynges of the Amorites which were beyonde Iordane towarde the Sonne rysinge frô Aroer (which lyeth vpon y ryuer syde of Arnon) vnto mount Sion, which is Hermon: a all y playne felde beyonde Iordane eastwarde vnto the see in y plaine felde vnder mount Pisga.

The 5 Chapter.

And Moses called all Israel, a sayde vnto the: Heare Israel the ordinances a lawes which I speake in youre eares this daie: lerne them, a kepe thë so, that ye do therafter. * The LORDE oure God made a couenaunt with vs at Horeb: he made not this couenaunt with oure fathers, but with vs, that are here this daie, and lyue every one. He talked with vs face to face out of the fyre vpó the mount. I stode at the same tyme betwixte the LORDE and you, that I mighte shewe you the wordes of the LORDE. For ye were afrayed of the fyre, a wente not vp to the mount, and he sayde:

"I am the LORDE thy God, which haue brought the out of the londe of Egipte, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt haue none other goddes in my sighte.  Thou shalt make the no graven ymage of eny maner of liknesse of the thinges y are aboue in heauen, a beneth vpon earth, a in the water vnder the earth. Thou shalt not honour them, ner seure thë. * For I y LORDE thy God am a gelous God, vystinge the synne of the fathers vpó the children, vnto the thirde and fourth generacion, of thë y hate me: a shewe mercye vpon many thou-sandes y loue me, and kepe my commandemences."
Thou shalt not take thy name of LORDE thy God in vaine: * for LORDE shall not holde him vnglittie, * taketh his name in vaine.

* Kepe Sabbath daye, that thou sanctifie it, as the LORDE thy God hath commaunded the. Sixe daies shalt thou labour, and do all thy worke, but vpon the seventh daye it is the Sabbath of the LORDE thy God: No maner worke shalt thou do in it, thou, and thy sonne, and thy daughter, and thy seruaunt, and thy mayde, and thine oxe, and thine Asse, and all thy catell, and the stranger which is within thy gates, that thy seruaunt and thy mayde maye rest as well as thou. For thou shalt remembre, that thou thyself also wast a seruaunte in the londe of Egipte, and how that the LORDE thy God brought the out from thence with a mightye hande, and a stretched out arme. Therfore hath the LORDE thy God commaunded * to kepe the Sabbath daye.

Honoure thy father and thy mother, as the LORDE thy God hath commaunded the that thou mayest lyue longe vpō earth, and that it maye go well with the in the londe, which the LORDE thy God shall geue the.

Thou shalt not kyll!

Thou shalt not breake wedlocke.

Thou shalt not steale.

Thou shalt beare no false witnes against thy neibourage.

Thou shalt not lust after thy neibourhou s wyfe.

Thou shalt not lust after thy neibourhou s house, londe, seruaunt, mayde, oxe, Asse, or what so euer he hath.

These are the wordes that the LORDE speake to all youre congregacion, vpon the mount out of the fyre of the cloude and darknesse with a greate voyce, and added nothinge therto. § And he wrote them vpon two tables of stone, and deluiered the vnto me.

But when ye herde the voyce out of the darknes, and sawe the mount burne with fyre, ye came vnto me all ye rulers amonge youre trybes, and youre Elders and sayde: Beholde, the LORDE oure God hath shewed vs vs his glory § his greatness, and we haue herde his voyce out of § fyre. This daye haue we sene, that God maie talke with a man, and he yet lyue. And now wherfore shulde we dy, that this fire shulde consume vs? Ye shulde heare the voyce of the LORDE oure God any more, we shulde dye. For what is all fleshe, that it shulde be able to heare § voyce of the luyngne God speakynge out of § fyre, as we haue done, and yet lyue? Go thou and heare all § the LORDE oure God sayeth, and tell us. * All § the LORDE sayeth vnto the, that will we heare and do. Whan the LORDE herde the voyce of youre wordes which ye spake vnto me, he sayde vnto me: I haue herde ye voyce of the wordes of this people, which they haue spoken vnto ye. It is all good that they haue spoken. * But who shal geue them soch an herte, ye they maye feare me, * kepe all my commaundements as longe as they lyue, § it maye go well with them, and with their childr and euer? Go take § saye vnto them: Get you in to youre tentes agayne. But thou shalt stonde here before me, that I maye tell the all the commaundements, and ordaines and lawes which thou shalt teach them § they maye do therafter in the lode, which I shal geue the to possesse. Take hede now therfore that ye do, as the LORDE youre God hath commaunded you, * and turne not asyde nether to § right hande ner to the lefte: but walke in all § wayes which the LORDE youre God hath commaunded you, that ye maie lyue, and that it maie go well with you, and § ye maye lyue longe in § londe which ye shall haue in possesion.

THESE are the commaundements, ordaines § lawes which § LORDE youre God hath commaunded, § ye shulde lerne them, § do them, in the londe whetheyr ye go to possess it,  that thou mayest feare the LORDE thy God, § kepe all his ordaines § commaundements, which I commaunde the, thou and thy children, and thy childr children all § dayes of youre life, that ye maye lyue lange. Thou shalt heare (O Israel) § take hede, § thou do therafter, § it maye go well with §, that thou mayest multiply greatly, as § LORDE God of thy fathers hath promysed the a londe § floweth with mylke § hony. Heare O Israel, the LORDE and 13. b. § Exo. 31. d. § Exo. 19. b. || Ier. 24. b. and 31. f. § Deut. 17. c. || Deut. 10. c.
oure God is one LORDE onely. "And thou shalt love the LORDE thy God with all thy hart, with all thy soule, & with all thy mighte. * And these wordes, I commande the this daie, shalt thou take to hert, & shalt whet them vpon thy children, and shalt talke of them, wha thou sytest in thyne house, & whan thou walkest by the waie: whan thou liest downe, & wha thou ryset vp. And thou shalt bynde them for a signe vpon thine hande, and they shall be a token of remembrance before thine eyes, and thou shalt wryte them vpon the postes of thine house, and vpon thy gates.

Now whan * LORDE thy God shall bringe the in to * londe wherof he sware vnto thy fathers Abraham, Isaac, & Iacob, and shall geue the greate & goodly cities, which thou hast not buylded: & houses full of all goodes, which thou hast not filled: & digged welles which thou hast not digged: and ynyardes and olyne trees, which thou hast not platted, so * thou eatest and art full: then beware that thou forget not the LORDE, which brought the out of the londe of Egipte, fro the house of bondage: & but thou shalt feare the LORDE thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue, and sware by his name. & Ye shalt not folowe the other godes of the nacions which are aboute you (for the LORDE thy God is a gelous God in the mylddest of the) that the wrath of the LORDE thy God waxe not whote ouer the, and destroye the frome the earth.

*Ye shalt not tempte * LORDE youre God, as ye tempted him at Massa: but kepe the commandementes of the LORDE youre God, and his witnesses, & his ordinances, which he hath commanded the, that thou mayest do that which is right & good in * sighte of the LORDE, & thou mayest prosper, and * thou mayest go in & conquer that good londe, which the LORDE sware vnto thy fathers, that he maye chace out all thine enemies before the, as the LORDE hath sayde.

Now whan thy sonne axeth the todaye or tomarow, and sayeth: *What meanes these witnesses, ordinances and lawes, that the LORDE oure God hath commaunded you?

Then shalt thou saye vnto thy sonne: We were Pharaos bondmen in Egipte, and the LORDE brought vs out of Egipte with a mightie hande, and the LORDE did greate euell tokens & wonders in Egipte vpon Pharaoh and all his house before oure eyes, and brought vs from thence, to bringe vs in and to geue vs * londe, that he sware vnto oure fathers. And therfore hath the LORDE commaunded vs to do acordinge vnto all these ordinances, that we might feare the LORDE oure God, that we might prosper all the dayes of oure life, as it is come to passe this daye. And it shall be righteousnes vnto vs before the LORDE oure God, yf we kepe and do all these commandementes, as he hath commaunded vs.

The viij. Chapter.

WHAN * LORDE thy God bringeth the in to * londe where in to thou shalt come to possess it, a rotheth out many nacions before the: the Hethites, Girgosites Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Heuites, and lebusites, seue nacions which are greater and mightier then thou: & and when the LORDE thy God deluyrith the before * , that thou mayest smyte them, thou shalt utterly destoye them, so that thou make no covenaunt with them, nor shewe them fauoure, and shalt make no mariages with them: Ye shall not geue youre doughters vnto their sonnes, ne take their doughters vnto youre sonnes. * For they will make youre sonnes departe fro me, to serue straunge godes: then shall the wrath of the LORDE waxe whote vpon you, and destoye you shortly.

But thus shal ye do with them: * Ye shall overthrowe their altaras, breake downe their piliers, cut downe their groues, & burne their imagines with fyre. * For thou art an holy peo-ple vnto the LORDE thy God. * The hath the LORDE thy God chosen, that thou shuldest be his owne peculiar people, from amonge all nacions that are vpon the earth.

It was not because of the multitude of you aboue all nacions, that * LORDE had lust vnto you and chose you. (For ye were the leest amonste all nacions) but because he louse you, and that he mighte kepe the ooth, which he swere vnto youre fathers, he broughte you out with a mightie hāde, and deluyereth you fro the house of bondage, out of the hande of Pharao kyng e of Egipte.

Thou shalt vnderstonde now therefor, that the LORDE thy God is a mightie and true God, which kepeth couenaunt and mercy vnto them that love him, *and kepe his couenauntes, ouen thorow out a thousande generacons: And rewarde them that hate him, before his face, that he maye destroye them: and wyll not be longe in tarienge to rewardeth them (before his face) that hate him. Kepe now theryfore the commandementes, and ordinaunes and lawes, which I commaunde the this daye, that thou do therafter.

And yf ye shall heare these lawes and kepe them, and do therafter, then shal the LORDE thy God *also keepeth the couenaunt and mercy with the, which he swere vnto thy fathers: and shal loue the, blesse the, and multiplye the: he shall blesse the frute of thy wombe, and the frute of thy londe, thy corre, wyne and oyle, the frute of thy kyne, and the frute of thy shepe, in the londe that he sware vnto thy fathers to gene the. Blessed shal thou be aboue all naciones, ther shal no vfrutefull personne be in the, ner amonge thy catell. The LORDE shall put from the all maner of dysese, and shal brynge vpon the none of *euen slykesses of Egipte, *which thou hast sene, but shal put them vpon all those that hate the.

A ALL the commandementes which I commande y this daye, shal ye kepe, so y ye do therafter, that ye maye lyue and multiylye, and come in, and take possession of the lande, which y LORDE swere vnto youre fathers: and thynke vpon all y waie thorow the which the LORDE thy God hath led the this fortye yeares in the wylderness, *that he mighte chasten the, and prone the, to wete what were in thynge herte, whether thou woldest kepe his commandemestes or no. He chastened the, and let the hunger, *and fed the with Manna (which thou and thy fathers knewe not) to make the knowe, that *man lyueth not by bred onely, but by all that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORDE. *Thy clothes are not waxed olde vpon the, and thy fete are not swolē this fortye yeare.

Vnderstonde theryfore in thine hert, that as a man nouriseth his sonne, euen so hath the LORDE thy God nurtured the. Kepe theryfore the commandementes of the LORDE.
The ir. Chapter.

HEARE O Israel, This daie shalt thou go out iorden, that thou maist come in to conquer the nacions, which are greater and mightier then thou, ye great cities, walled vp vnto heauen, a great people and of an hye stature, namely the children of Enakim, whom thou hast knowne, and of whom thou hast herde saye: Who is able to stonde against ye children of Enakim? Therfore shalt thou knowe this daie, that the LORDE thy God goeth before the, a cōsummyng fyre. He shal destroye the, and shall subdue them before the, and shal drive them out, shortly shal he breynge the to naught, as the LORDE hath promysed the.

Now when the LORDE thy God hath expelled them out before thee, saye not thou the in thine hert: The LORDE hath brought me in to take possession of this lande for myne awne righteousnes sake, where as LORDE yet dryueth out the Heithen before the, because of their vngodlynes.

For thou commest not in to take their londe in possession, for thine awne righteousness sake, and because of thy right hert: but the LORDE dryueth out these Heithen, for their awne vngodlynes sake, and that he maye perfoure the worde, which the LORDE hath sworne vnto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob.

Vnderstonde now thercfore, that the LORDE thy God geueth not the this londe to possesse it, for thine awne righteousness sake. For thou art a styffnecked people.

Remembre and forget not, how thou displeasedest the LORDE thy God in the wil-dernesse. Sence dy daye that thou departedst out of the londe of Egipte, tyll ye came vnto this place, haue ye bene dishobedient vnto the LORDE.

For in Horeb ye angred the LORDE, so that of wrath he wolde haue destroyed you, when I was gone vp to the mount, to receaue the tables of stone, namely the tables of the couenaunt whiche the LORDE made with you, and I abode fforty dayes, and forty nightes vpon the mount, and ate no bred, drank no water: and the LORDE gae me two whā he sent you from Cades Barnea, and sayde: Go vp, and conquer the londe which I have geuen you. And ye were disobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE youre God, and beleued not on him, and herkened not vnto his voyce: & for ye haue bene disobedied vnto the LORDE, as longe as I haue knowne you.

The fell I before the LORDE fourte daies and fortye nightes, which I laye there. For the LORDE sayde, he wolde destroye you. But I made intercession vnto the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, destroye not thy people and thine inheritaunce, which thou thorow thy greate power hast deluyed, and broughte out of Egypte with a mightie hāde. Remembre thy seruauntes Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. Loke not vp the stubburnesse, and vngodlynesse and synne of this people (that the londe whereout thou hast broughte vs, saye not: The LORDE was not able to bringe them in to the lande, that he promysed them, and because he hated them, therefore hath he broughte them out, to destroye the in the wyldernesse:) For they are thy people and thine inheritaunce, which thou hast broughte out with thy greate power, and with thy stretched out arme.

The r. Chapter.

A t the same tymе sayde the LORDE vnto me: 'Hewe two tables of stone like vnto the first, and come vp vnto me in to the mount, and make e all an Arke of wod, and in the tables I wyll wyrte the wordes, that were in the first, *which thou brakest, and thou shalt laye them in the Arke. So I made an Arke of flyrre tre, and hewed two tables of stone (like as the first were) vnto the mount, and e two tables were in my hande.

Then wrote he in e tables (acordinge as the first wrytinge was) the ten verses, which the LORDE spake vnto you out of the fyre vpon the mountayne, at the tymе of the gatheringe together. And the LORDE gau the vnto me. And I turnede me, vnto the mount, and layed the tables in the Arke which I had made, that they mighte be there, as the LORDE commanded me.

And the childe of Israel departed from

Ye displeased the LORDE also, at Tabera, and at Massa, at and at the lustgrauers, and and after the fortie daies and fortye nightes, the LORDE gaue me two tables of stone, namely two tables of the covenaut, and sayde vnto me: vp, get downe quckly from hence, for thy people whom thou broughtest out of Egypte, haue marre the selues, they are soone gone out of the waye, which I commanded them, and haue made them a molten ymage.

And the LORDE sayde vnto me: I se this people, that it is a styffene people: let me alone, that I maye destroye them, and put out their name from vnder heauē. I wyll make of the a people mightier and greater the this is.

And as I turnede me, wente downe fro the mount which brent with fyre, had the two tables of the covenaut in both my ħādes, I loked, beholde, ye haue synned against the LORDE youre God, and ye haue made you a molten calfe, were soone turned out of wai which the LORDE had commanded you. Then toke I the two tables, cast them out of both my handes, brake the before youre eyes, I fell before the LORDE * (even as at the first tymе) fortie daies fortie nightes, nether ate bred, ner drake water, because of all youre synnes which ye had synned, whan ye dyd soch euell in the sighte of the LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath.

For I was afrayed of the wrath and indignacion, wherwith the LORDE was angrie with you, euen to haue destroyed you. And the LORDE herde me at that tymе also.

Morower the LORDE was very angrie with Aaron, so that he wolde have destroyed him, but I made intercession for Aaron also at tymе same tymе. As for youre synne (namely, the calfe that ye had made) I toke it, and burnt it with the fyre, and smote it a sunder, grinde it in peces, vnto dust, and cast the dust in to the broke that descended from tables of stone, wrytten with the fynger of God, and in them was acordinge to all the wordes, which the LORDE sayde vnto you vpon the mount the daye of the gatheringe together.

Beroth &c all /Israel/ vnto Mosera (there dyed Aaron, there was he buried: Elasar his sonne became prest in his steade.) From thence they departed from Gadgad. From Gadgad to Iathbath, a londe of ryuers of water. "At the same season the LORD separated out the trybe of Leui, to beare the Arke of the LORDES covenauent, and to stonde before the LORDE, to mynister vnto him, and to prayse his name vnto this daye. Therefore shall the Leuites haue no porcion ner enheritaunce with their brethren: for the LORDE is their enheritaunce, as the LORDE thy God hath promysed them. But I taried vpō the mount (like as afore euens) fourete dayes and fourete nightes, and the LORDE herde me at that tyme also, and wolde not destroye the. But he sayde vnto me: Vp, get the forth, thou mayest go before the people, thou maye come in, and coquere the lode, which I sware vnto their fathers to geue them. Now Israel, what requyreth the LORDE thy God of the, but thou feare the LORDE thy God, and that thou walke in all his wyays, sowe the LORDE thy God with all thy hert, with all thy soule: and thou kepe the cōməundeməntes of thy LORDE, his ordinances, which I cōməunde the this daye, thou mayest prosper? Beholde, the heauen & the heauen of all heauens and the earth, and all is therin, is the LORDE thy God. Yet hath he had a pleasure vnto thy fathers, to loue the: and hath chosen their sede after the, namely you, aboue all nacions, as it is come to passe this daye. Circumcysye therefor thou foreszkyne of your hert, be nomore stffynched. For the LORDE your God is God of all goddes, the LORDE ouer all lordes, a greate God, mightie & terryble, which regardeth no personne, taketh no gifts, and doeth righte vnto the fatherlesse and wedowe, and loueth the stranger, to geue him fode & rayment. Therfore shall ye loue a stranger, for ye youre selues also were strangers in the londe of Egipte. Thou shalt feare the LORDE thy God, him onely shalt thou serve, vnto him shalt thou cleue & swere by his name. He is thy prayse thy God, which hath done for thee these greatie terrryle thinges, thine eyes haue sene. Thy fathers weye downe in to Egipte with seuenite soules, but now hath thy LORDE thy God made the as thy starres of heauen in multitude.

Therefore shal thou loue the LORDE thy God, kepe his cōməundeməntes, his ordinaunces, his lawes, his preceptes all thy life lōge. And vnderstode this daye, that which youre childrē knowe not: Which haue not sene the nortoure of the LORDE youre God, his greatnes, his mightie hande, his stretched out arme, his tokens and actes which he dyd amonge the Egipcians, vnto Pharao the kyng of Egipte, to all his londe, what he dyd to the power of Egipcsians, vnto their horses charlettes, whan he broughte the waters of the reed see vntō them, as they followed after you, how thou LORDE hath broughte them to naught vnto this daye: what he dyd vnto you in the wildernes, vntyl ye came vnto this place: what he dyd vnto Dathan and Abiram the children of Eliab the sonne of Ruben, how the earth opened his mouth and swalowed them with their houshōles cōtet all their good that they had in the myddes amonenge all Israel.

For youre eyes haue sene the greate works of thy LORDE, which he hath done. Therfore shal ye kepe all the cōməundeməntes which I cōməunde you this daye, that ye maye be stronge to come in, and to conuer the londe, whither ye go to possess it, that ye maye lyue longe in the londe, which the LORDE swere vnto youre fathers, to geue vnto them and to their sede, euc a londe that flooweth with mylke and hony: For the londe whither thoun commest in, to possesse it, is not as the londe of Egipte, whence ye came out, where thon sowdest thy sede, and waterdest it at thy fote as a garden of herbese: but it hath hilles and valleys, which drynke water of the rayne of heauen, a londe that the LORDE thy God careth for. And the eyes of the LORDE thy God are allwaye therin from the begynnynge of the yeare vnto the ende.

Yf ye shal herken therefor vnto my commaundementes, which I commaunde you this daye, y ye luyen the LORDE youre God, and serue hym, with all youre hert and with all youre soule *then wyl I gene rayne vnto youre lode in due season, early and late, that thou mayest gather in thy corne, thy wyne and thine oyle: and I wyll geue grasse vpon thy fylde for thy catell, that ye maye eate γ be fylled.

But beware, γ youre hert be not diseaued, that ye go asyde, γ serue other goddes, γ worshippe them, and thene the wrath of the LORDE waxe whote vpō you, *and he shut vp the heauē, that there come no rayne, and the earth geue not hir increase, γ ye perishe shortly from the good lode, which the LORDE hath geuen you.

*Put vp therfore these my wordes in youre hertes and in youre soules, and bynde the for a signe vpon youre handes, γ they maye be a token of remembrance before youre eyes: and teach them youre children, so that thou talke therof, whan thou syttest in thine house, or walkest by the waye: whan thou lyst downe, and whan thou rstest vp: and wyrtethe them vpon the postes of thine house, and vpon thy gates, that thou and thy children maye lyue longe in the londe, which the LORDE sware vnto thy fathers to geue them, as longe as the dayes of heauen endure vpon earth.

For yf ye shal kepe all these commaundementes which I commaunde you, so that ye do therafter, that ye luyen the LORDE youre God, and walke in all his wayes, and cleue vnto him, thene shall the LORDE dryue out all these naciones before you, so that ye shall conquer greater and mightier naciones then youre soules are.

All the places that the soles of youre fete trearde vpon, shalbe yours, from the wyldernes, and fro mount Libanus, and from the water Euprints vnto γ vtttestomest see shal youre coastes be. Noman shalbe able to withstande you. The LORDE youre God shal let the feare and drede of you come vpon all γ londes wherin ye go, like as he hath pro- menyed you.

Beholde, I laye before you this daye the blessyng and the curse. *The blessyng, yf ye be obedient vnto the commaundementes of the LORDE youre God, which I commaunde you this daye. The curse, yf ye wyl not be obedient to the commaundementes of the LORDE youre God, but turne out of the waye, which I commaunde you this daye, so that ye walke after other goddes, whom ye knowe not.

Whan γ LORDE thy God hath broughte the in to the londe, whither thou commest in to possess it, γ then shalt thou geue the blessyng vpon mount Grisim, and the curse vpon mount Ebal, which are beyonde Iordane the waye towards the goinge downe of the Sonne, in the lode of the Cananites, which dwell in γ playne felle ouer against Gilgal, byside the Oke groue of More. For ye shal go ouer Iordane, that ye maye come in to take possession of the londe, which the LORDE youre God hath geuen you, to conquer it, and to dwell therein. Take hede now therfore, that ye do acordinge vnto all the ordinances and lawes, which I laye before you this daye.

The riij. Chapter.

THESE are the ordinances and lawes which ye shal kepe, that ye do therafter in the londe, which the LORDE God of thy fathers hath geuen the to possessse, as longe as ye lyue vpon earth. 4Destoye all the places, wherin γ Heithen (whο ye shal conquer) haue serued their goddes, whether it be vpon hys mountaynes, vpon hilles, or amongst grene trees. And ouerthrowe their altares, and breake downe their pileres, and burne their groues with fyre, and hewe downe the ymage of their goddes, γ bryngye the names of them to naughte out of the same place. Ye shal not do so vnto the LORDE youre God: but the place l which γ LORDE youre God shal chose out of all youre truybes (that he maye let his name dwell there) shal ye seke, and come thither, γ and thither shal ye brynge youre burntsacrifices, γ youre oher offerynes, and youre tithes and the Heueofferynges of youre handes, and youre vows, and youre fre wylly offerynes, and the firstborne of youre oxen and shepe: and there shall ye eat before the LORDE youre God, and γreioyse ouer all that ye and youre houses haue geue with youre handes, because the LORDE thy God hath blessed thee. *Ye shall do none of the thinges, ſe we do here this daye, every man what semeth him good in his awne eyes. For ye are not yet come to rest, ner to † enheritaice which the LORDE thy God shall geue the.

But ye shal go ouer Iordan, and dwell in the londe ſe the LORDE youre God shall deuyde out vnto you, 2 he shal geue you rest from all youre enemies rounde aboute, and ye shal dwell safe. Now when the LORDE thy God hath chosen a place, to make his name dwell there, ye shall brynye thither all 3 I haue commanded you, namely, youre burnt sacrifices, youre other offerynge, youre tythes, the Heueoofferynges of youre handes, 3 all youre fre vowes, which ye shall vowe vnto 2 LORDE: and there shal ye eate, and reioyse before the LORDE youre God, ye and youre sonnes, and youre daughteres, and youre seruauntes, and youre maydes, and the Leuites that are within youre gates, for they haue no porcion ner inheritance with you.

Take hede vnto thy selfe, that thou offer not thy burntofferynges in what so euer place thou seyst: but in the place which 2 LORDE shal haue chosen in one of thy trybes, there shalt thou offer thy burntofferynges, and do all that I commaunde the. Not withstanding thou mayest kyll and eate flesh within all thy gates, after all the desyre of thy soule, acordyng to the blessynge of the LORDE thy God, which he hath geuen thee: 2 both the cleane and vnclene maye eate it, as of the Roo and herte, onlye the bloude shalt thou not eate, but poure it out as water vpon the earth.

But within thy gates mayest thou not eate of the tythes of thy corne, 2 of thy wyne, 3 of thy oyle, ner of ſe first borne of thine oxen and of thy shepe, or of eny of thy vowes which thou hast vowed, or of thy frewylofferynes, or Heueoofferynges of thy handes: but before the LORDE thy God shal thou eate them, in the place which the LORDE thy God choseth, thou 2 thy sonne, and thy daughter, thy seruaunt, thy mayde, and the Leuite that is within thy gates, 2 thou shalt reioyse before 2 LORDE thy God, ouer all 2 thou puttest thine hande vnto. 3 And bewarre, that thou forsake not the Leuite, as longe as thou lyuest vpon the eart.

But when the LORDE thy God shal enlarg thy bordes of thy londe (as he hath promysed the) and thou saye: I wil eate flesh (for so much as thy soule longeth to eate flesh) then eate flesh acordyng to all the desyre of thy soule. But yf the place that the LORDE thy God hath chosen (to let his name be there) be farre from the, then kyll of thy oxen and of thy shepe, which the LORDE hath geuen the, as he hath commaunded the, and eate it within thy gates acordyng to all thy desyre of thy soule. 2 Even as a Roo or Hert is eaten, maiest thou eate it: both the cleane and vnclene maie eate it indifferently. 2 Onelye beware, that thou eate not the bloude: for the bloude is the life. Therfore shalt thou not eate the life with the flesh, but shalt poure it out like water vpon the earth, 2 thou mayest prospere, and thy children after the, when thou hast done that which is righte in the sighte of the LORDE.

But when thou halowest oughte that is thine, or makest a vowe, 3 thou shalt take it, and brynye it vnto the place, that the LORDE hath chosen, and do thy burntofferynges with the flesh and bloude vpon the altaire of the LORDE thy God. The bloude of thine offfryng shal thou poure vpon the altaire of the LORDE thy God, and eate the flesh. Take hede, and heare all these wordes, which I commaunde the, 2 it maye go well with the, and thy children after 2 for euer, when thou hast done 2 which is righte and acceptable in the sighte of the LORDE thy God.

*When the LORDE thy God hath roted out the Heithen before the, whither thou commest in to conquer them, 2 when thou hast coered them, 2 dwelt in their londe, beware then, 2 thou fall not in the snare after the, when they are destroyed before the: 2 that thou axe not after their goddes, 2 saye: Euë as these nacions haue serued their goddes, so wil I do also. 2 Thou shalt not do so vnto the LORDE thy God. For all that is abhominacion vnto the LORDE, 2 that he hateth, 2 same haue they done vnto their goddes. For they haue burnt euern their sonsnes and their daughers with fyre vnto their goddes.

All that I commaunde you, shal ye kepe, that ye do thereafter. * Ye shall put no thinge therto, ner take ought there from.

The riiij. Chapter.

Yf there ryse vp a † prophet or dreamer amongeth you, and gene the a token or a wonder, and that token or wonder which he spake of, come to passe, and then saye: Let vs go after other goddes (whom thou knowest not) and let vs serue the: Thou shalt not herken vnsto the words of such a prophet or dreamer.

*For ‡ LORDE youre God proueth you, to wete whether ye loue him with all youre hert, † with all youre soule. For ye shall walke after the LORDE youre God, and feare him, and kepe his commandementes, ‡ herken vnsto his voyce, and serue him, and cleue vnsto him. † As for that prophet or dreamer, he shal dye: because he hath spoken to turne you awaye from the LORDE youre God (which broughte you out of the londe of Egipte, and delueryed you from the house of bondage) to thrust the out of the waye, which the LORDE thy God commanded the to walke in, and so shalt thou put aweie the euell from the.

Yf thy brother, the sonne of thy mother, or thine awne sonne, † or thy daughter, or the wyfe in thy bosome, or thy frende which is vnsto the as thine owne soule, entys the secretly, and saye: Let vs go and serue other goddes (whom thou knowest not, ner yet thy father) which are amonge the naciones rounde aboute you, whether they be nye vnsto the or farre from the, from the one end of the earth vnsto the other: consente not vnsto him, and herkē not vnsto him. ‡ Thine eye also shal not pytie him, and thou shalt haue no compassion vpon him, ner kepe him secrete, but shalt cause him to be slayne: thine hāde shal be first vpon him, to cause him to be slayne, and then the handes of all the people. He shalbe stoned to death, because he wente aboute to thrust the awaye from the LORDE thy God, which broughte the out of the londe of Egipte from the house of bondage: ‡ ‡ all Israel inaye heare, and feare him, and do nomore soch euell amongeth you.

And ye if it be founde of a truth, that it is so in dede, ‡ soch abominacion is wroughte amongeth you, then shalt thou smyte the indwellers of the same cite and their catell, with the edge of the swerde, and damme the cite with all that is therin: and all the spoyle therof shalt thou gather together in the myddes of the stretes of it, and burne with fyre, both the cite and all the spoyle therof together vnsto the LORDE thy God, that it maye lye vpon a heape for euer, and neuer be burylded any more. ‡ And let nothinge of the damned thinge cleue vnsto thy hande, that the LORDE maye be turned from the indignacion of his wrath, and graunte the mercy, and haue compassion on the, and multiplye the (as he hath sworn vnsto thy fathers) because thou hast herkened vnsto ‡ voyce of the LORDE thy God, to kepe all his commandementes, which I commaundde the this daye, so that thou doest the thinge which is righete in the sighte of the LORDE thy God.

* This is it that ye shall eate of all that is in the waters: All that hath fynnes and scales, shall ye eate. But what so euer hath no fynnes ner scales, that shal ye not eate, for it is vncleane vnto you.

Eate of all cleane foules. But these are they, wherof ye shal not eate: The Aegle, ý Goshauke, the Cormoraunte, the Ixion, the Vultur, the Kyte with his kynde, ʀ all Raiiens in their kynde, the Estriche, the Night crowe, the Bytture, the Swanne, the Pellicane, the Pye, the Storke, the Heron, the Laye with his kynde, the Lapwynge, ý the Swalowe: And all foules ý crepe, shal be vnto you, and ye shal not eate them.

Ye shal eate of nothing ý dyeth alone: thou mayest geue it vnto ý straunger in thy gate, that he eate it, or sell it to a straunger. For thou art an holy people vnto ý LORDE thy God. * Thou shal not seeth a kydd, whyle it yet sucketh his mother.

Thou shalt separate out the tythe of all the increase of thy sheede, ý cōmeth out of thy feld every yeare: ý shalt eate it before ý LORDE thy God († in ý place which He choseth, ý his name maye dwell there) namely of ý tythes of thy corne, of thy wyne, of thy oyle, ý the first borne of thine oxen, and of thy shepe, ý thou mayest lerne to feare the LORDE thy God, all thy life longe.

But if the waye be to moch for ý, and the place, which ý LORDE thy God hath chosen to set his name there, be to farre from the: ý thou canst not carie that ý LORDE thy God hath blessed the withall, Then geue it for money, ý take ý money in thyne hande, and go vnto the place which the LORDE thy God hath chosen, and geue the money for all that thy soule desyreth, whether it be oxē, shepe, wyne, stronge drynke, or for what so euer thy soule desyreth, and eate there before the LORDE thy God, and be mery, thou and thine housholde, and ý Leuite that is within thy gates. Thou shalt not forsake him, § for he hath no porcion nor inheritaunce with the.

*In the thirde yeare shalt thou bryng forth all the tithes of thine increase of the same yeare, and shalt laye it within thy gates. Thē shalt the Leuite (which hath no porcion ner inheritaunce with the) and § straunger, and the fatherlesse, and the wedowe, which are within thy gates, come and eate, and fyll them selues, that the LORDE thy God maye blesse the in all the workes of thy handes which thou doest.

The yb. Chapter.

I n the seucēth yeare shalt thou make a Fre yeare. * This is ý maner of the Fre yeare. ‡ Who so euer lēdeth oughte with his hande vnto his neigboure, shall not rekyre it of his neigboure or his brother: for it is called the Fre yeare vnto the LORDE. Of a straunger mayest thou rekyre it: but vnto him that is thy brother, shalt thou remytte it. * There shall be no begger amore you: for the LORDE shall blesse ý in the lōde which the LORDE thy God shall geue ý to inheritance to take it in possession, onely ý thou herke vnto the voyce of the LORDE thy God, ʝ kepe all these cómaundemētes which I cómaunde the this daye, that thou maiest do thereafter. For the LORDE thy God shall blesse the, as he hath promysed the. Thē shalt thou lende vnto many naciones, ý shalt borowe of noman. Thou shalt raigne ouer many naciones, ʝ noman shal reigne ouer ý.

 When one of thy brethren is waxed poore in eny cite within thy londe, which ý LORDE thy God shal geue ý, thou shalt not harden thine hert, ner withdrawe thine hande from thy poore brother: but shalt open thine hande vnto him, and lende him, acording as he hath nede.

Bewarre, that there be not a poynte of Belial in thine hert, that thou woldest saye: The seventh yeare, the yeare of Fredome is at honde. For ýf thou lokest not frēdely ypo thy poore brother, and geuest him nothing then shall he crye ouer the vnto the LORDE, and it shall be synne vnto the: ‡‡ But thou shalt geue him, and let it not greue thine hert that thou geues him. the LORDE thy God blesse the in all thy workes, and in all that thou puttest thine hande vnto. a The londe shal neuer be without poore, therefore commannde I thee and saie, that thou open thine hande vnto thy brother, which is neade and poore in thy londe.

b If thy brother an Hebrue or Hebruesse be solde vnto the, he shal serue the sixe yeare, in the seuenthe yeare shalt thou let him go Fre. And wha thou deliverest him fre, thou shalt not let him go from the emptye, but shalt geue him of thy shepe, of thy corne, and of thy wyne, so that thou geue him of that, which the LORDE thy God hath blessed the withall. And remembre that thou also wast a seruaunte in the lode of Egipte, and how that the LORDE thy God delueryed the, therafore commande I thee the this thinge to daye.

c But ye he saye vnto the: I will not go out awaye from the, for I love the and thine house (in so much as he is well at ease with the) then take a botkyn, and bore him thorrow his care to the dore, and let him be thy seruaunt for euer. And with thy mayde shalt thou do likewise. And let it not sene greuous vnto the, to let him go fre from the (for he hath serued the sixe yeares as a double hyred seruaunt) then shall the LORDE thy God blesse the in all that thou doest.

d All the first borne that come of thine oxen and shepe, the are males, shalt thou halowe vnto the LORDE thy God. Thou shalt not plowe with the firstborne of thine ox̄, and shalt not clype the firstborne of thy shepe: Before the LORDE thy God shalt thou eate the euyer yeare, * in the place that the LORDE choseth, thou and thine housholde.

* But ye it have a deormyte, so that it is lame or blynde, or hath any other ouell blemysh, thou shalt not offre it vnto the LORDE thy God, but shalt eate it within thine awne gates (whether thou be vnclene or cleane) euens the Roon and Hert. Onely se that thou eate not of the bloude thereof, but poure it out as water vpon the grounde.

IUDGES

Officers shall thou ordayne within all thy gates, which the Lorde thy God geueth the amoge thy tribes, they maye iudge the people with righteous judgment. Thou shalt not wrest the lawe. Thou shalt knowe no personne also, nere take gifts. For gifts blynde the eyes of wyse, pertene righteous causes. Loke what righte is, shalt thou solowe, that thou mayest lyue possesses the londe, which the Lorde thy God shal geue the.

Thou shalt plante no grove (of what so euer trees it be) nye vnto the altare of the Lorde thy God, which thou makest the. Thou shalt set the vp no piler, which the Lorde thy God hateth. Thou shalt offre vnto the Lorde thy God no oxe or shepe, that hath a blemish or any euell favourednesse on it: for that is abomination vnto the Lorde thy God.

If there be founde amonge you (within eny of thy gates which the Lorde thy God shal geue) a man or woman, that worketh wickednesse in the sighte of the Lorde thy God, so that he transgesseth his covenante and goeth, and serueth other goddes, worshippeth them, whether it be Sone or Mone, or eny of the hooste of heauen, which I have not commanded, and it is tolde the, thou hearest of it, Then shalt thou make diligent search therefor. And ye thou fyndest that it is so of a trueth, that such abomination is wroughte in Israel, then shalt thou brynge forth the same man or woman which haue done such euell vnto thy gates and shalt stone them to death. At the mouth of two or three witnesses shal he dye, that is worthy of death. At the mouth of one witnes shal he not dye. The handes of the witnesses shal be the first to kyll him, and the handes of all the people, that thou mayest put awaye the euell from the.

Yf a matter be to harde for the in judgmént betwixte bloude and bloude, betwixte plee and plee, betwixte stroke and stroke, and ye there be matters of stryfe within thy gates then shalt thou rysse, and go vp vnto the Lorde thy God hath chosen: and shalt come to the prestes the Leuites, to the iudge which shalbe at that tyne, and shalt axe. They shall shewe the how to iudge, and thou shalt do therafter, as they saye vnto the, in the place which the Lorde hath chosen: and thou shalt take hede that thou do acordinge vnto all thy they teach the. Acordinge to the lawe they teach the, after the judgment that they tell, shalt thou do so that thou turne not asyde from, neither to the righte hande nor to the lefte.

And ye eny man deale presupmutously, so that he herkeneth not vnto the prest (which stondeth to do seruyce vnto the Lorde thy God) or to the Iudge, the same shal dye: and thou shalt put awaye the euell from Israel, that all the people maye heare, and feare, and be nomore presumptuous.

Whan thou art come in to the londe which the Lorde thy God shal geue the, he taketh it in possession, and dwellest therin, and shalt saie: I wil set a kinge over me, as all the nations haue aboute me, this shal thou set him to be kynge over the, whom the Lorde thy God shal chose.

One of thy brethren shalt thou sett to be kynge over the. Thou mayest not set a stranger over the, which is not thy brother. Oneley let him not haue many horses, ye he bryng touche not the people againe in to Egypte thorow multitude of horses, for as much as the Lorde hath sayde vnto you, that from hence forth ye shulde come nomore this waye agayne.

The rxxii. Chapter.

A

THE prestes, \( \text{Leuites} \), all the trybe of Leuit haue no parte ner enheirance with Israel. The offeringes of \( \text{LORDE} \) his enheirance shal they eate. Therfore shal they haue no inheritance amongst their brethren, because the \( \text{LORDE} \) is their inheritance, as he hath saide vnto thē. This shalbe \( \text{prestes} \) dutye of the people, \( \text{of} \) the that offre, whether it be oxe or shepe, so that they geue vnto the prest the shulder and both the chekes, and the brest. And the first frutes of thy corne, of thy wyn and of thy oyle, and the first of thy shepe sheringe. tFor the \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God hath chosen him out of all thy trybes, to stonde and mynystere in the name of the \( \text{LORDE} \), he and his sons all the dayes of their life.

\( \text{If} \) a Leuite come out of eny of thy gates or out of eny place of all Israel, where he is a gest, and cometh with all the desire of his soule (vnto the place which the \( \text{LORDE} \) hath chosen) to mynystere in the name of the \( \text{LORDE} \) his God, like as all his brethren \( \text{Leuites} \), which stonde there before the \( \text{LORDE} \), thē shal he have like porcion of meate with the other: besydes that which he hath of the solde good of his fathers.

\( \text{Whan} \) thou commest in to \( \text{LORDE} \) londe which the \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God shall geue \( \text{y} \), \( \text{thou} \) shalt not lerne to do \( \text{y} \) abominacions of these nacions, that there be not founde amonste you, \( \text{y} \) maketh his sonne or daughter go thorow the fyre, or a prophecyer, or a choser out of dayes, or that regardeth the foules crynge, or a witch, or a consurer, or soythsayer, or an expounder of tokens, or \( \text{y} \) axteth eny thinges of the deed.

For whosoe er dou doth soch, is abominacion vnto the \( \text{LORDE} \); and because of soch abominacions doth the \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God drye

\( \text{dē} \) out before the. But thou shalt be perfecte with the \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God. For these nacions whom thou shalt conquer, whom the \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God hath geuen the, herken to the chasers out of dayes, and to the soytysayers: but so shalt not thou do vnto the \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God.

\( \text{But} \) \( \text{y} \) a prophecyer presumt to speake ought in my name, which I haue not comaided him to speake: and he that speaketh in \( \text{y} \) name of other goddes, \( \text{y} \) same prophecyer shal dye. But \( \text{y} \) thou saye in thine hert: How can I knowe what wordes the \( \text{LORDE} \) hath not spoken? Euen when the prophecyer speaketh in the name of \( \text{LORDE} \), and the thinges foloweth not, and commeth not to passe, \( \text{y} \) same is the worde, \( \text{y} \) the \( \text{LORDE} \) hath not spokē. The prophecyer hath spokē it presumptuously, therfore be not afrayed of him.

The rix. Chapter.

\( \text{Whan} \) \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God shall haue

\( \text{roted} \) out \( \text{y} \) nacions, whose londe \( \text{LORDE} \) thy God shal geue the, so \( \text{y} \) thou hast conquered them, and dwellysh in their cities and houses, \( \text{t} \) thou shalt appoynte the out thre cities in the myddes of the lode, \( \dot{y} \) the LORDE thy God shal geue \( \dot{y} \) to possessse. Thou shalt prepare the waye, and parte the coastes of thy londe (which \( \dot{y} \) LORDE thy God shal deuyde out vnto the) in to thre partes, that whosoever hath commytted a slaughter, maye ffe thither. And this shalbe the cause, \( \ast \) that whosoever hath committed a slaughter, maye ffe thyther, and lyue.

\( \dot{y} \)f eny man smyte his neigbour vnarres, and hath not hated him in tym passed (as whan a man goeth vnto the wod with his neigbour to hew downe tymber, and he turneth his hande with the axe to hewe downe the wod, and the yron slyppeth from the helne, and hytteth his neigbour, that he dyeth) the same shal flye in to one of these cities, that he maye lyue, lest the auenger of bloude folowe after the deedsleyer, whyle his hert is whote, and ouertake him, whyle the waye is so farre, and slaye him, where as yet no cause of death is in hi, for so moch as he hatted him not in tym passed. Therfore commande I the, that thou appoynte out thre cities.

And whan the LORDE thy God enlargeth thy borders, as he hath sworn vnto thy fathers, \( \ast \) geueth the all the lode which he promysed thy fathers to geue (so that thou kepe all these commaundementes, and do \( \dot{y} \) I commaunde the this daye, \( \dot{y} \) thou loue the LORDE thy God, and walke in his wayes all thy life longe) the shalt thou addde yet thre cities vnto these thre, that innocent bloude be not shed in thy londe (which the LORDE thy God geueth the to enheritance) and so bloude come vpon the.

\( \ast \) But \( \dot{y} \)f eny man beare hate agaynst his neigbour, and layeth waite for him, and ryseth agaynst him, and smyteth him that he dye, and flyeth in to one of these cities, then shall the Elders of the same cite sende thither, and cause him to be fetched from thence, and deluyer him in to the handes of the auenger of bloude, that he maye dye: thine eye shal not pitie him, and the giltye bloude shalt thou put awaye fro Israel, that thou mayest prospere.

Thou shalt not remoue thy neigbournes marck, which they of olde tyme have set in thine enheritance, that thou enhertest in the londe, which the LORDE thy God hath geuen the to possesse it.

\( ^{4} \) One witnesse shal not stonde vp alone agaynst a man, ouer eny trespass or synne, what maner of synne so euere it be, \( \dot{y} \) a man can do, but in the mouth of two or thre witnesse shal every matter be established.

\( ^{4} \) But \( \dot{y} \)f an unrighteous wytnesse stonde \( \dot{y} \) agaynst eny man, to testifie eny trespass vpon him, then shall both the men that stryue together, stonde before the LORDE, before the prestes and Judges, which shall be at the same tym. \( ^{4} \) And the judges shall make diligent inquisition: \( \ast \) \( \dot{y} \)f the witnesse be founde false, and hath geue false witnesse agaynst his brother, then shall ye do vnto him, euens as he thoughte to do vnto his brother: that thou mayest put awaye the euell from the \( \dot{y} \) that other maye heare and feare, and take nomore vpon them to do soch wicked poyntes amongst you. Thine eye shal not pitie him. \( \bullet \) Soule for soule, eye for eye, tothe for tothe, hande for hande, fote for fote.

The rr. Chapter.

WHAN thou goest out to battayll agaynst a thine enemies, and \( \ast \) seyst horses and charettes of the people more then thou, be not afrayed of them: for the LORDE thy God which brought \( \dot{y} \) out of the londe of Egipte, is with the. Now wha ye are come nye vnto the battayll, the prest shal steppe forth, \( \ast \) speake to the people, and saye vnto the: Heare Israel: Ye go this daye in to the battayll agaynst youre enemies, let not youre hert faynte. \( \ast \) Feare not, be not afrayed, ner a drede of them. \( \bullet \) For the LORDE youre God goeth with you, to fyghte for you agaynst youre enemies, \( \dot{y} \) he maye saue you.

And the captaynes shal speake to \( \dot{y} \) people, and saye: Who so hath buylded a new house, and hath not dedicate it, let him go, and byde in his house, that he dye not in \( \dot{y} \) battayll, and another dedicate it. \( \ast \ast \) Who so hath planted a vynyarde, and hath not yet made it comen, let him go, and byde at home, that he dye not in the battayll, and another make it comen. \( \ast \ast \ast \) Who so hath spoused a wyfe, and hath not yet brought her home, let him go, and byde at home, \( \dot{y} \) he die not in the battayll, \( \ast \) another bryngye her home.

And the captaynes shal speake further vnto
the people, and saye: * He that feareth and hath a faynte hert, lett him go, and byde at home, that he make not his brethrens hert fainte also, like as his hert is. And when the captaynes haue made an ende of speaking vnto the people, they shall set the rulers of the hoost before the people in the forefront.
*When thou commest nye vnto a cite to fight against it, thou shalt offre them peace. If they answere the peaceably, and open vnto the, then shal all ¥ people ¥ is founde therin, be tributaries vnto the, and serue ¥. But if they wyl not deale peaceably with the, and wyll warre with the, then beseege it: and when the LORDE thy God deluyereth it in to thy hande, thou shalt smyte all the males that are therin, with the edge of the swerde: saue the wemen and the children. † As for the catell, and all that is in the cite, and all the spoyle, thou shalt take them vnto thy selfe, and eate the spoyle of thine enemies, which the LORDE thy God hath geuen the. Thus shalt thou do vnto all the cities, that are very farre from the, and are not of the cities of these naciones.

But in the cities of these naciones, which the LORDE thy God shall geue the to enheritaunce, thou shalt leaue no thinge alyue that hath breth, but shal utterly destroye the, namely: the Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Henuites, Jebusites, as the LORDE thy God hath commanded the, ¥ they teache you not to do all ¥ abominacions, which they do vnto their goddes, ¥ so ye to synne agaynst the LORDE youre God.

When thou must lye a longe season before a cite, against the which thou makest warre to take it, thou shalt not destroye ¥ trees therof that thou holdest hem downe with the axe, for thou mayest eate thereof: and therefore shalt thou not hem them downe. For it is but wodd vpon the feld, and no man, and can not come ¥ be bullworke agaynst the. But the trees which thou knowest ¥ me eate not of, those shalt thou destroye, and rote out, and make bullworke therof, agaynst the cite that warreth with the, thyll thou haue overcome it.

The 111. Chapter.

WHAN there is one slayne founde in ¥ loute which ¥ LORDE thy God shall geue ¥ to possessse it, ¥ lyeth in ¥ feld, ¥ it is not knowne who hath slaine him, then shal thy Elders ¥ judges go forth, and mete from the slayne vnto the cities that lye rounde aboute. Loke which cite is the nexte, ¥ Elders of the same shall take a yoge cowe, which hath not bene laboured, ner hath drawe in the yocke, ¥ they shall brynge her in to a valley, where as is nether earing nor sowinge, and strike of hir heade there in the valley.

Then shal the prestes ¥ children of Leui come forth. †For the LORDE thy God hath chosen them, to serue him, and to prayse his name: and at their mouth shall all plees and strypes be tryed.) And all the Elders of the same cite shall come forth vnto the slayne, ¥ wash their handes ouer ¥ yonge cowe, whose heade is stricken of in the valley, and shal answere and saie: Oure hâdes haue not shed this bloude, nether haue oure eyes sene it. Be mercifull (O LORDE) vnto thy people of Israel, who thou hast deluyered, ¥ laye no innocent bloude vnto thy people of Israel's charge: then shal they be reconcyled from the bloude. Thus shalt thou put awaye the innocent bloude from the, in that thou doest the thinge which is righte in the sighte of ¥ LORDE.

Wha thou goest forth to warre against thine enemies, ¥ the LORDE thy God deluyereth them in to thine handes, so that thou cariest awaye their presoners, and seist amoge the captynes a bewtyfull woman, ¥ hast a desyre vnto her to take her to thy wife, the brynge her home to thine house, and let her shane hir heade, and pare hir nayles, and put of hir clothes that she was taken presoner in, and let her sit in thine house, and mourne for hir father and mother a moneth longe after that lye with her, and mary her, and let her be thy wife. But ¥ thou haue no faunoure vnto her, ¥ then shal thou let her go whither she wyll, and not to sell her, ner to make cheuesauncse of her, because thou hast dishonoured her.

¥F a man haue two wyues, one that he loueth, and one that he hateth, and they beare him children, both the beloued and the hated, so that the firstborne be hirs that is hated, and the tyme commeth that he dealeth out the inheritaunce vnto his children, then can he not make the sonne of ¥ beloued first.

Now   hateth he her, and †layeth a shamefull thinge   to hir charge, and sayeth: I founde not thy   daughter a mayde. And lo, these are the   tokens of my daughters virginitie. And they   shall sprede out the clothe before the Elders   of the cite. So shal the Elders of the cite take   that man, and chastise him, and put a pen-   nance vpon him of an hundreth Sycles of  ulerAngles, and geue the same vnto the father of   the damsell, because he hath broughte vp an   euell name of a mayde in Israel, and he shall   haue her to wyfe, so ‡ he maye not forsake   her all his life longe. But yf it be of a trueth,   that the damsell is not founde a virgin, the   shal she be brought forth vnto the dore of hir   fathers house, and the me of the cite shal   stone her to death, †because she hath wrought   foly in Israel, and played the whore in hir   fathers house. And so shalt thou put awaye   the euell from the.

There shall none that hath his stones broken or thou shalt not shew him thine enemies, for thou hast bathed his fiele, and the damsell, because she cried not, for she hath done no synne worthy of death. It is like as if a man rose against his neibour, and slew him, even so is this also. For he found her in the field, and the handfasted damsell cried, and there was no man to helpe her.

If a man fynde a mayde that is not hasted, and take her, and lye with her, and be founde, then shal he that laye with her, geue his father fyftie Sycles of sylluer, and shall have to hyre, because he hath shamed her: he maye not forsake her all his life long. Nomah shall take his fathers wife, ner vncouer his fathers couerynge.

The thirty third Chapter.

There shall none that hath his stones broken or thou shalt not shew him thine enemies, for thou hast bathed his fiele, and the damsell, because she cried not, for she hath done no synne worthy of death. It is like as if a man rose against his neibour, and slew him, even so is this also. For he found her in the field, and the handfasted damsell cried, and there was no man to helpe her.

If a man fynde a mayde that is not hasted, and take her, and lye with her, and be founde, then shal he that laye with her, geue his father fyftie Sycles of sylluer, and shall have to hyre, because he hath shamed her: he maye not forsake her all his life long. Nomah shall take his fathers wife, ner vncouer his fathers couerynge.

Thou shalt wysh him nether prosperite ner health all thy life longe for euer. Thou shalt not abhorre an Edomite: for he is thy brother.

An Egyptian shalt thou not abhorre, for thou wast a stranger in his londe. The children whom they beget in the thride generation, shal come in to the congregacion of thy LORDE.

§ Wha thou goest out to fighte agaynst thine enemies, kepe the from all wickedenesse. If there be eny man amonge you which is vnclene, so that eny thinge is chaunced to him by nighte, the same shal go out of thy hoost vntill he haue bathed himselfe with water before even: and when the Sonne is gone downe, he shall come in to the hoost agayne.

And without the hoost thou shalt haue place to resorte vnto for necessyte, so thou shalt haue a shouell vnder the gyrdle: and when thou wilt set thy downe without, thou shalt dyge therwith: and when thou hast done thine easement, thou shalt couer that which is departed from the. For the LORDE thy God walketh in thine hoost, to deluyer the, and to geue thine enemies before the. Therofore shalt thou hooste be holy, that he se no vnclene thinges in the, and so turne himselfe from the.

Thou shalt not deluyer vnto his master the servaunt, which is escaped frō him vnto the. He shall dwell with the in the place that he choseth within eny of thy gates, for his wealth, and thou shalt not vexe him.

There shall be no whore amonge thy daughters of Israel, nether whorekeper amonge the sonnes of Israel. Thou shalt not bringe thy hyre of an whoore nor the price of a dogg in to the house of the LORDE thy God for eny maner of vowe: for they both are abominacion vnto the LORDE thy God.

Thou shalt occupye no vsury vnto thy brother, nether with money, ner with fode, ner with eny maner thinges that vsury maye be vseth withall. (Vnto a straunger thou maist lende vpō vsury, but not vnto thy brother) vnto the LORDE thy God maye besse the in all thy thou takest in hāde, in the lōde whither thou commest in to possesse it.

thy God, thou shalt not be slacke to performe it: for the LORDE thy God shall require it of thee, and it shall be synne vnto the. Yf thou leane vowinge, then is it no synne vnto the. But that which is proceeded out of thy lyppes shalt thou kepe, and do thereafter, acordinge as thou hast vowed vnto the LORDE of a frewyll, which thou hast spoken with thy mouth.

When thou goest in to thy neighbours vyniarde, thou mayest eate of the grapes acordinge to thy desyre, tyll thou haue ynough. But thou shalt put none in to thy vessell.

*When thou goest in thy neighbours corne-felde, thou mayest plucke the eares with thine hande, but with a syycle mayest thou not reape therin.

The xriij. Chapter.

A W H A N a man taketh a wife, and marieth her, and she findeth no fauoure in his eyes because of eny vncleennesse, the shal he wryte a byll of deuoremct, and gene it her in hir hâde, and sende her out of his house. Yf whan she is gone out of his house, she go, and be another mans wyfe, and the same seconde man hate her also, g wryte a byll of deuoremct, and gene it her in hir hande, and sende her out of his house: Or yf the same seconde man dye, which toke her to wife, then hir first husbandle that put hir awaie, maie not take hir againe to be his wife, in so much as she is defyled, for that is abominacon before the LORDE: that thou make not the londe to synne, which the LORDE thy God hath geuen the to enheritaunce.

When a man hath newly taken a wyfe, he shall not go a warrefare, nether shall he be charged withall. He shall be fre in his house one yeare longe, that he maye be mery with his wyfe which he hath taken.

B Thou shalt no take thy nethermost and vp-permost mylystone to pledge, for he hath set thy lyuyngne to pledge.

Yf eny man be founde that stealeth one of his brethren, from amonge the childre of Israel, and setteth him to pledge, or selleth him soch a thefe shal dye, that thou maiest put awaye the euell from the.

Kepe the from the plage of leprosie, that thou obserue diligently and do acordynge vnto all that the prestes the Leuites teach the, as I haue commaundd them, y shal ye obserue and do therafter. Remembre what the LORDE thy God dyd vnto Miriam: by the waye, whan ye were come out of Egipte.

Whan thou lendest thy brother eny dett, thou shal not go in to his house, and take a pledge, but shalt stonde without: and he, to whom thou lendest, shal brynge out his pledge vnto the. But yf it be a poore body, thou shalt not lye downe to slepe, with his pledge, but shalt deluyer him his pledge agayne, whan the Sonne goeth downe, that he maye slepe in his awne rayment, and blesse the, so shall the same be rekened vnto the for righteoussnes before the LORDE thy God.

Thou shal not withdraue the hyre of thy delyver and poore amounge thy brethren, or straunger that is in thy londe, or within thy gates, but shalt geue him his hyre the same daye, that the Sonne go not downe theron, for so much as he is nedye, and his life susteyned therwith: that he call not vpon the LORDE agayn the, and it be synne vnto the.

The fathers shall not dye for the children, ner the childre for the fathers, but euer one shall dye for his awne syne.

Thou shalt not wrest the righte of the straunger and of the fatherlesse. And thy wedowes rayment shall thou not take to pledge: For thou shalt remembre, that thou wast a seruaunte in Egipte, and how that thy LORDE thy God deluyed the from thence, therfore commaunde I the to do this.

Whan thou hast reaped downe thine haruest in the felde, and hast forgotten a shefe in the felde, thou shalt not turne agayne to fetch it, but it shal be for the straunger, thy fatherlesse and the wedowe, that the LORDE thy God maye blesse the in all the workes of thy handes.

Whan thou hast plucked thine Olyue trees, thou shalt not plucke them vp clean afterwarde: it shal be for the straunger, the fatherlesse and the wedowe. Whan thou hast gathered thy vynyarde, thou shalt not gather it vp clean afterwarde: it shalbe for the straunger, the fatherlesse and the wedowe.

And thou shalt remembre, that thou wast a seruant in the londe of Egipte: theryfore comande I the to do this.

The xvb. Chapter.

WHAN there is a stryfe betwene men, they shall brouthe before the lawe and iudged: and the iudges shall justifie the righteous, and condemne the vngodly. And if the vngodly haue desered strypes, the iudge shall commaunde to take him downe, and they shall beate him before hym, acوردynge to the measure and nombre of his trespace.

* When they haue geue him foute strypes, they shall beate him nomore, lest (if there be mo strypes geuen him) he be beaten to moch, and thy brother be horrible before thine eyes.

"Thou shalt not mosell the mouth of the oxe, that tredeth out the corne.

When brethren dwell together, and one of them dye without children, then shall not his wife of the deed take a straunge man without, but his kyngsman shall go in vnto her, and take her to wyfe: and the first somme that she beareth, shal he set vp after the name of his brother which is deed, that his name be not put out of Israel.

But if the man wyl not take his kyngsman, then shal his kinswoman go vp vnder the gate to the Elders, and saye: My kyngsman refuseth to steere vp a name vnto his brother in Israel, and wyl not marue me. Then shal the Elders of the cite call him, and comen with him. Yf he stonde then and saye: I wyl not take her, then shal his kinswoman steppe forth vnto him before the Elders, and lowe a shue fro his fote, and spyt in his face, and shal answere, and saye: Thus shal it be done vnto euery man, that wyl not build his brothers house. And his name shalbe called in Israel, the vnshod house.

Yf two men striue together, and the wyfe of one remne to, to deluyer hir husbande from the hande of him that smyteth him, he put forth hir hande, and take him by the secretes, then shal thou cut of hir hande, and thine eye shal not pitie her.

Thou shalt not hae in thy bagg two maner of weightes, a greate and a small. 2 Nether shalt thou hae in thyne house dyuersynear measures, a greate and a small. Thou shalt haue a perfecte and just weighte, and a perfecte and just measure, that thy life maye be longe in the londe, which the LORDE thy God shal geue the. For who so euer doth soch (yea all they that do euell) are abhominacion vnto the LORDE thy God. * Remembre what the Amalechites did vnto the by the waye, wha ye were departed out of Egipte, how they buckled with the by the waye, and smote thy hymnost, euyn all that were feble, which came after the whan thou wast weere and faint, and they feared not God. Now wha the LORDE thy God bryngeth the, to rest fro all thine enemies rounde aboute in the londe which the LORDE thy God geue the for inheritaunce to possess, then shalt thou put out the remembrance of the Amalechites from vnder heauen. Forget not this.

The xvi. Chapter.

WHAN thou commest in to the londe that the LORDE thy God shal geue the to inheritaunce, and enjoyest it, and dwelseth therein, thou shalt take of all maner first frutes of the londe, that come out of thy grounde, which the LORDE thy God geue the, a shalt put them in a maunide, and go vnto the place which the LORDE thy God shal chose (vhis name maye dwell there) and thou shalt come vnto the prest which shalte at that tyne, and saye vnto hym: I knowlege this daye vnto the LORDE thy God, that I am come in to the londe, which v LORDE sware vnto oure fathers to geue vs. And the prest shal take the maunide out of thine hande, and set it downe before the altar of the LORDE thy God.

Then shalt thou answere and saye before the LORDE thy God: The Syrians wolde haue destroyed my father, so which wete downe in to Egipte, and was a straunger there with a small folke, and became there a nacio great, mightie full of people. But the Egiptiâs intreated vs euell, and troubled vs, and layed an harde bondage vpô vs. Then cried we vnto the LORDE, the God of oure fathers. And the LORDE herde oure cryenge, and loke on oure aduersite, laboure, and oppressio, brought vs out of Egipte with a mightie hande, and a stretched out arme, and with greate terrynblemsse thowor tokens and woders, and hath broughte vs vnto this place.

and hath geuen vs this londe, that floweth with mylke and hony. Theryfore brynge I now the first frutes of the londe, which the LORDE hath geuen vs. And thou shalt leaue them before the LORDE thy God, and geue thanks before the LORDE thy God, and rejoyse ouer all the good, that the LORDE thy God hath geuen the, and thynge house: thou and the Leuite, and the straunger that is with the.

When thou hast brought together all thy tythes of thine increase in the thirde yeare,* which is a yare of tithes, thou shalt geue it vnto the Leuite, to the straunger, to the fatherlesse, and to the wedowe, that they maie eate within thy gates, and be filled. And thou shalt saye before the LORDE thy God:

I haue brought that halowed is, out of my house, and haue geuen it vnto the Leuite, the straunger, the fatherlesse, and the wedowe, acordinge to all thy commandement which thou hast oemaundme. I haue not transgressed thy commandementes, ner forgotten them. I haue not eaten therof in my heynesse, ner taken awaye therof in vnclennesse. I haue not geue therof vnto the deed. I haue bene obedient vnto the voice of the LORDE my God, and have done all as he hath commanded me.

*Loke downe from thy holy habitacion, from heauen, and blesse thy people of Israel, and thy londe that thou hast geuen vs, as thou swarest vnto oure fathers, a londe that floweth with mylke and hony.

In the dawe when the LORDE thy God commaundede the, to do acordyng vnto all these ordinacie and lawes, that thou shuldest kepe them and do therafter with all thy hert and with all thy soule. *The same dawe maydest thou a promyse vnto the LORDE, that he shulde be thy God, and * thou woldest walke in all his wayes and kepe his ordinaunaces, his commandeuntes, and his lawes, and to herken vnto his voysce. *And the LORDE promysed the vp the same dawe, that thou shuldest be his awne peculer people, like as he hath sayde vnto the (so * thou kepe all his commandeuntes) and that he wolde make the hye in praye name and honoure aboue all naciones which he hath made * * thou mayest be an holy people vnto * LORDE thy God, as he hath sayde vnto the.

And Moses with \(\dagger\) Elders of Israel, commaundede the people, \(\dagger\) sayde: Kepe all the commandeuntes which I commaunde you this dawe. *And what time as ye go ouer Iordane, in to the londe \(\dagger\\) \(\dagger\) LORDE thy God shal geue the, thou shalt set vp greate stones, and playster them with playster, and wyte vpon them all the wordes of this lawe: (wan thou art come ouer) \(\dagger\) thou mayest come in to the londe, which the LORDE thy God shall geue the, a londe \(\dagger\) floweth with milke and hony, as \(\dagger\) LORDE God of thy fathers hath promysed the.

Now when ye go ouer Iordane, ye shall set vp these stones (wherof I commaunde you this dawe) vpon mount Ebball, and playster them with playster: and there shalt thou buylde vnto the LORDE thy God an altare of stone, whervpon thou shalt liftte no yron. *Of whole stones shalt thou builde this altare vnto the LORDE thy God, and offre burntofferinges theron vnto the LORDE thy God: and thou shalt offre healthtofferinges, and eate there, and rejoyse before the LORDE thy God: and vpon the stones thou shalt wyte all the wordes of this lawe manyestly and well.

And Moses with the prestes and Leuites spake vnto all Israel, and sayde: Take hede and heare O Israel: This dawe art thou become the people of the LORDE thy God, that thou mayest be obedient vnto the voice of the LORDE thy God, and do acordinge vnto all his commandeuntes and ordinacies, which I commaunde the this dawe.

And Moses charged the people the same dawe, and sayde: These shal stonde vpon mount Grisin to blesse the people, whan ye are gone ouer Iordane: Simeon, Leui, Iuda, Isachar, Ioseph, and Ben Iamin. And these shal stonde vpon mount Ebball to curse: Ruben, Gad, Asser, Zabulon, Dan \(\dagger\) Nephtali. And the Leuites shal begynne, and saye vnto euery man of Israel, with a loude voyce:

*Cursed be he, that maketh eny carued Idoll or molten ymage (an abomination of the LORDE, a worke of the handes of \(\dagger\) craftsmen) and putte in it a secrete place. And all the people shal awnser and saye, Amen.

The LORDE shal commaunde the blessinge to be with ye in thy cellers, and in all that thou takest in hande, and shal blesse the in y londe that the LORDE thy God hath geue the. The LORDE shal set the vp to be an holy people vnto himselfe (as he hath sworne vnto the) ye thou kepe the commandementes of the LORDE thy God: so that all nacios vpon earth shal se, that thou art called after the name of the LORDE: ye they shal be aymed of you. And ye LORDE shal make ye plenteous in goodes, in the frute of thy wonbe, in the frute of thy catell, ye in the frute of thy gounde, in the londe that the LORDE sware vnto thy fathers, to geue the.

And the LORDE shal open vnto ye his good treasure, euyn the heauen, to geue rayne vnto thy londe in due season, and to prospere all the workes of thine handes. And thou shalt lede vnto many nacios, but thou shalt borowe of no man. And ye LORDE shal set the before, and not behynde: ye thou shalt be abone onely, and not benethe, ye thou be obedient vnto the commandementes of ye LORDE thy God, which I commaunde thes daye to kepe and to do them: ye ye thou  bowe not asside from anye of these wordes, which I commaunte ye this daye, either to the righte hande or to the lefte, ye thou wildest walke after other goddes to serue them.

But ye thou wylt not herken vnto the voice of the LORDE thy God, to kepe and to do all his commandementes and ordinaunces, which I commaunde ye this daye,  then shall all these curses come vpon the, and ouertake the. Cursed shal thou be in the town, and cursed in ye felde: cursed shal thy baszket be, and thy stoure. Cursed shal be the frute of thy body, the frute of thy londe, the frute of thine oxen, and the frute of thy shepe. Cursed shal thou be whan thou goest in, and cursed wha thou goest out. The LORDE shal sende in to the, consuminge, and complayninge, and cursyne, in all that thou takest in hande to do, yff he haue destroyed ye shortly broughte the to naughte, because of thy wicked inuencions, in that thou hast forsaken me.

The LORDE shal make the pestylence to byde longe with the, yff he haue consumed the out of the londe, in to the which thou commest to possess it. The LORDE shall smyte the with swellynge, fevers, heatte, burnyng, venome, dronth, and palenesse, & shall persecute the, tyll he hane destroyed the.

* Thy heauen, that is ouer thy heade, shalbe of brasse, and the earth vnder the, of yron. The LORDE shall geue thy londe dust for rayne, and aszshes from heauen vpon the, vntyll thou be broughte to naught. The LORDE shall cause the be smyttten before thine enemies. Thou shalt come out one waye agaynst them, and seuen wayes shalt thou flye before them, and shalt be scattered amoge all the kyngdomes vpon earth. Thy carcasse shalbe meate vnto all maner foules of the ayre, and to all the beestes vpon earth, and there shalbe no man to fraye them awaye.

The LORDE shal smyte the with y botches of Egipte, with the Enorodes, with scalle, and maungynesse, that thou shalt not be healed therof. The LORDE shall smyte the with madnesse, blyndnesse and dasyngye of hert. And thou shalt grope at the noone daye, as y blynde gropteth in darknesse, and shalt not prosper in thine waye. And thou shalt suffre vyolence and wronge all thy life longe, & no man shall helpe y. Thou shalt spouse a wife, but another shalt lye with her. Thou shalt bylyde an house, but another shall dwell therin. Thou shalt plante a vynyarde, but shalt not make it comen.

Thine oxe shall be slayn before thine eyes, but thou shalt not eate therof. Thine ass shall be violently taken awaye (euen before thy face) and shall not be restored y againe. Thy shepe shall be geuen vnto thine enemies, and no man shall helpe the. Thy sonnes and thy daughters shall be geuen vnto another nacion, and thine eyes shall se it, and dase vpon them all the daye longe, and thy hande shall not be able to deluyer them. The frute of thy londe and all thy laboure, shall a nacion eate, which thou knowest not: and thou shalt but onely be he that shall oppressed and sufre wronge, all the dayes of thy life. And thou shalt be cleane besyde thy selfe for the sighte, which thine eyes shall se.

The LORDE shall smyte the with a myscheuous botche in y knees & legges, so that thou canst not be healed, euen from the sole of thy fote vnto the crowne of thy heade.

* The LORDE shall bryng thee and thy kynge (which thou hast set ouer the) vnto a nacion, whom thou knowest not, nether thy fathers: and there shalt thou serue other goddes, euen wodd and stone: and thou shalt go to waist, and become a byworde, a laughtinge stocke amoge all nacions, whither LORDE hath caried the.

* Thou shalt carie out noch sede in to y felde, and shalt gather but litle in: for the greshoppers shall destroye it. Thou shalt plante vynyardes and dresse the, but thou shalt nether dryneke of the wyne, ner gather of y grapes: for y wormes shall consume it. Thou shalt haue Olyue trees in all thy coastes, but shalt not be anoynted with the oyle: for thyne Oliue trees shalbe rote out. Thou shalt get sonnes and doughters, and yet not haue them: for they shall be caried awaye captive. All thy trees and frutes of thy londe shall be marred with blastinge.

The stranger that is with y, shall clyme vp ouer the, and be allwaye aboute the: but thou shalt come downe alowe, and lye euer beneth. He shall lende vnto the, but thou shalt not lende him. He shalbe before, but thou shalt be behynde.

And all these curses shall come vpon the, and folowe the, and onertake y, tyll thou be destroyed, because thou herkenest not vnto y voyce of the LORDE thy God, to kepe his commaundemotes and ordinances, which he hath commaunded the. Therfore shal there be tokens and wonders vpon the, vpon thy sede for euer, because thou hast not serued LORDE thy God with a joyfull and good hert, when thou haddest abundance of all things. And therfore shalt thou serne thine enemye, which the LORDE shall sende vpon the, in hunger and thyrst, in nakednesse, and neede of all thinges: he shall put a yoke of yron vpon thy necke, vntyll he haue broughte the to naughte.

* The LORDE shall bryng y a nacion vpon the from farre, euen from the ende of y worlde, as a flyenge Aegle: a people, whose speache thou canst not vnderstande, an harde fauoured people, which regard not the persone of the olde, ner hane compassion on the yonge. And they shall eate vp y frute of thy catell: y the frute of thy londe, till they have destroyed the, and shall leave the nothinge in corne, wyne, oyle, in the frute of thy oxen and shepe, vntyll they have broughte the to naughte: and shal laye sege vnto the with in all thy gates, tyll they cast downe thy hye and stronge walles, wherin thou trustest thorow out all thy londe. And thou shalt be besieged within all your portes, thorow out all thy londe which the LORDE thy God hath geuen the.

*Thou shalt eate the frute of thine awne body, the flesh of thy sones and of thy doughters, which the LORDE thy God hath geuen thee, in that straitnesse and sege, wherwith thine enemye shall besiege thee: so that it shall greue the man y afore hath lyued tenderly and in voluptuousnes amonost you, to loke vpon his brother and vpon his wife y luyeth in his bosome, and on the sonne that is left ouer of his sones, lest he shulde geue eyne of them of the flesh of his children that he eateth, in as much as there is nothinge left him in that straitnesse and sege, wherwith thine enemye shal besiege y within all thy gates. And the woman that afore hath lyued so tenderly and voluptuously amonost you, that she durste not set the sole of her fote vpon the grounde for tendernes and voluptuousnes, shal be greued to loke vpon her husbande that lieth in his bosome, and on his sonne, and on hir daughter: euene because of hir daughters which she hath norished betwixte hir legges in hir lappe, and because of hir sonnes that she hath borne: For she shall eate them secretly for very scarcenesse of all thinges, in the straitnesse and sege, wherwith thine enemye shal besiege y within thy gates.

Yf thou wilt not be diligent to do all the wordes of this lawe which are wrytten in this boke, that thou mayest feare this glorious and fearfull name, euene the LORDE thy God, than shall the LORDE entreate y wonderously, with plages vpon y and thy sede, yee with greate and continual plages, with euell and contynual sicknesses, and shal bruyne vpo y all y sicknesses of Egipte (wherof thou wast afrayed) and they shal cleue vnto the. Therto all maner sicknesses and all maner plages, which are not wrytten in the boke of this lawe, shal the LORDE thy God cause to come vpon the, vntyll he haue destroyed the. And there shall be left but a fewe people of you, which afore were as the starres of heaven in multitude: because thou hast not herkened vynto the voyce of the LORDE thy God.

"And as y LORDE rejoyse ouer you afore, to do you good, and to multiplye you, eye so shall he rejoyse ouer you, to destroye you, and to bruyne you to naughte, and ye shalbe waysted from of the londe, whither thou goest now to possess it. For the LORDE shal scater the amonost all nacion, from the one ende of the worlde vnto another, and there shalt thou servre other goddes, whom thou knowest not, ner yet thy fathers, euens woode and stone.

And amonge those same nacion shalt thou haue no quyetnesse, nether shalt the sole of your fote haue eny rest: for the LORDE shal geue the them a fearfull hert, and dasynge of eyes, and a troubled soule, so that thy life shal hage before the: Night and daye shalt thou feare, and shal haue no trust in thy life.

In the mornynge thou shalt saye: Who shall geue me the euynge? And at euern shal thou saye: Who shal geue me the mornynge?

For the very great feare of thine hert, which shal make the afrayed: and for the sighte of thine eyes which thou shalt se.

And the LORDE shal brynge the agayne in to Egipte by shippe fulles, euens thorow the waye wherof y sayde vnto the: Yf thou shalte it nomore: and there shall ye be solde vnto youre enemies for bonde seruauntes and bonde maidens, and there shalbe no man to bye you.

The 13th Chapter.

THERE are y wordes of the couenaunt, which the LORDE commaunded Moses to make with the children of Israel in the londe of the Moabites, besyde y couenaunt which he made with them in Horeb. And Moses called all Israel, and sayde vnto them:
Ye haue sene all that the LORDE dyd before youre eyes in the londe of Egipte, vnto Pharaoh with all his seruautes, and all his londe, the great tentacios which thine eyes haue sene, that they were greate tokes and wonders.
"And yet vnto this daye hath not the LORDE geuen you an hert that understonedeth, eyes that se, y eares that heare.
He hath caused you to walke fortye yeares in the wyldernesse. a Youre clothes are not waxed olde vpon you, nether is thy shue waxed olde on thy fote. Ye haue eaten no bred, and drunken no wyne, ner stronge drynke, that ye mighte knowe, that he is  § LORDE youre God.

6 And whan ye came vnto this place, Sihon the kyng of Heszbons, and Og  § kyng of Basan, 7 came out agaynst vs vnto battayll, and we smote them, and toke their londe, and gaue it to eueriher vnto  § Rubenites and Gaddites, and to the halfe trybe of the Mannesites. *Kepe now therfore the wordes of this covenaut, and do therafter, that ye maye haue vnderstondinge in all that ye do.

Ye stonde this daye all before the LORDE youre God, the chefe rulers of youre trybes, youre Elders, youre officers, every man in Israel, youre children, youre wyues,  § straugers that are in thine hooste, 9 from the hewer of thy wod vnto  § drawer of thy water: that thou shuldst enter in to the covenaut of the LORDE thy God, and in to the ooth which the LORDE thy God maketh with the this daye, that he mighte sete the vp this daye to be a people vnto himself, and that he mighte be thy God, as he hath sayde vnto the, 7 and as he sware vnto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Iacob.

For I make not this covenaut and this ooth with you onely, but both with you  § are here this daye, and stonde with vs before the LORDE oure God, and also with them that are not here with vs this daye. For ye knowe how we haue dwelt in the londe of Egipte, and how we came thorow the myddles of the Heythen, whom ye passed by, and sawe their abominacions and their Idols, wodd and stone, sylter and golde, which were with them: Lest there be amoge you man or woman, or an housholde, or a trybe, which turneth awaye his hert this daye from the LORDE oure God, to go and to serue  § goddes of these naciones: and lest there be amonge you some rote, that beareth gall  § wormwod: so that though he heare the wordes of this curse, he blesse him selfe yet in his hert, and saye: § Tush, it shal not be so euell. I wil walke after the I meanyng of myne awne hert, that the dronken maye perishe with the thyristie.

* Deu. 8. a.  § Nu. 21. d. e.  c Deu. 2. f. and 3. a.
* Deu. 4. a.  f Isau. 9. d.  § Gen. 17. a.  § Iere. 5. b.

Then shall not the LORDE be mercifull vnto him, but his wrath and gelousy shall smoke ouer such a man, and all the curses that are wrytten in this boke, shall lighte vpon him: and the LORDE shall put out his name from vnder heauen, and shall separate him vnto euell out of all the trybes of Israel, acordinge vnto all the curses of the covenaut, that is wrytten in the boke of this lawe.

So the posterities of youre childrce which shall ryse vp after you, and the straugers that come out of farre countrees, shall saye (when they se the plages of this londe, and the dis-eases wherwith the LORDE hath smytten it) that he hath brent vp all their londe with brymstone and salt, so  § it can not be sowne, ner is frutefull, nether growth there any grasse therin;  § Like as Sodom, Gomor, Adama and Zeboim are overthrowne, which the LORDE ouerthrew in his wrath and anger.

Then shall all naciones saye:  Wherfore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this londe? What greate wrothfull displeasure is this? Then shal it be sayde: Even because they haue forsaken the covenaut of  § LORDE God of their fathers (which he made with them when he broughte them out of the londe of Egipte) and they we, and serue other goddes, and worshipped the, euen soch goddes as they knewe not, and whom he had not deuyded vnto them. Therfore the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote ouer this londe, to brynge vpyn to all the curses that are wrytten in this boke. And the LORDE thrust them out of their londe with greate wrath, indignac  § displeasure hath cast them in to another londe, as it is come to passe this daye.

These are the  § secretes of the LORDE oure God, which are opened vnto vs andoure children for euer,  § we shulde do all the worde of this lawe.

The iii. Chapter.

NOW when all this commeth vpyn the,  A whether it be the blessinge or  § curse which I haue layed before the, c and thou goest in to thyme hert, beynge amoge the Heithen, whither the LORDE thy God hath thrust the, and thou turnest vnto the LORDE thy God, so that thou herkenest vnto his voyce, thou and thy children with all thy hert and with all thy soule, in all that I commande the this daye, * then shall the LORDE thy God turne thy captiuyte, and haue compassion vpon the, and shal gather thy congregacion agayne from amonge all the nacionis, whither the LORDE thy God hath scatered the.

And though thou werest thrust out vnto the yttemost partes of the heaven, yet shall the LORDE thy God gather the from thence, and from thence shall he fetch the, and shall brynge the in to the londe, which thy fathers haue possessed, and thou shalt enjoye it, and he shal do the good, and multiplye the abowe thy fathers.

And the LORDE thy God shall circuite thine hert, and the hert of thy sede, that thou mayest loue the LORDE thy God with all thy hert and with all thy soule, that thou mayest lyue. But all these curses shall the LORDE thy God laye vpon thine enimyes, and vpon them that hate the and persecute the. But thou shalt turne, and herken vnto the voyce of the LORDE, to do all his com- maundementes, which I commande the this daye. And the LORDE thy God shal make the plenteous in all the workes of thine hides, in the frute of thy body, in the frute of thy catell, in the frute of thy londe to good.

For the LORDE shall turne, to reioyse ouer the to good, as he reioysed ouer thy fathers, so that thou herken vnto the voyce of the LORDE thy God (to kepe his com- maundementes and ordinaunces, which are wrytten in the boke of this lawe) and turne vnto the LORDE thy God with all thy hert and with all thy soule.

For the commaundement which I com- maunde ý this daye, is not to wonderfull for the, ner to farre, ner yet in heaven, that thou neade to saye: Who wil go vp for vs in to heaven, and brynge it vnto vs, that we maie heare it and do it? Nether is it beyonde the see, that thou neade to saye: Who will go ouer the see for vs, and fetch it vs, that we maye heare it, and do it? For the worde is very nye vnto the, euë in thy mouth and in thine hert, that thou do it.

Behold, I haue layed before you this daye, life and good, death and cuell. For I commaunde the this daye, to loue the LORDE thy God, and to walke in his wayes, and to kepe his commaundementes, ordinaunces, and lawes, that thou mayest lyue and multiplye, and that the LORDE thy God maye blesse the in the londe, whither thou goest to pos- sesse it.

But yf thou turnest awaye thine hert, so that thou wilt not heare, but fall a waye, to worshipe other goddes and to serue the, I certifie you this daye, that ye shal perishe, ० not lyue longe in the londe, whither thou goest ouer Iordane to posesse it.

I take heaven and earth this daye to recorde ouer you: I haue layed before you life and death, blessinge and cursinge, that thou mayest chose life, and that thou and thy sede maye lyue, ё ye maye loye the LORDE youre God, and herken vnto his voyce, and cleue vnto hym: (For he is thy life and thy lôge age) that thou mayest dwell in the londe, which the LORDE sweare vnto thy fathers Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, to geue them.

parte it among them by lott. But the LORDE himselfe that goeth before you, euene HE shall be with the, and shal not faile the, ner forsake the: Feare not, and be not afraied.

And Moses wrote this lawe, and deliuered it vnto the prestes the children of Levi (§ which bare the Arke of the couenant of the LORDE) and vnto all the Elders of Israel.

And he commanded them, and sayde:
† At the ende of seuen yeares, in the ymyne of the Fre yeaner, in the feast of Tabernacles when all Israel appeare to come before the LORDE thy God, in the place that he shal chose, thou shalt cause this lawe to be proclamed before all Israel in their eares, namely, before the congregacion of the people, both of men, women, children, and thy straungers which are within thy gates: that they maye heare and lerne to feare the LORDE their God, and be diligent to do all the wordes of this lawe: and that their children also which knowe nothing, maye heare and lerne to feare the LORDE youre God, all youre lyue dayes which ye lyue in the londe, whither ye go ouer Iordane to possesse it.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, thy ymne is come that thou must die, call Iosua, and stonde in the Tabernacle of witnesse, that I maye geue him a charge. Moses wente with Iosua, and stode in the Tabernacle of witnesse. And the LORDE appeared in the Tabernacle in a cloudy pyler † and the same cloudy pyler stode in the dore of the Tabernacle.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, thou shalt slepe with thy fathers, and this people wylly ryse vp, and go a whoring after straunge goddes of the londe in to the which they come, § and wylly forsake me, and breake the couenant which I haue made with them. And then shall my wrath waxe whote agaynst them, at the same ymne, § I shall forssake the, and hyde my face fro them, that they maye be consumed. ¶ And so whan mouch aduersite § trouble commmeth vporet the, they shal saye: Is not all this euell come vpor me, because God is not with me? But I shall hyde my face at the same ymne because of all the euell that they haue done, in that they haue turne vnto other goddes.

Wryte now therefore this songe, γ teach it the children of Israel, and put it in their mouth, that this § songe maye be a witnesse vnto me amonge the children of Israel. For I will brynge them in to the londe which I sware vnto their fathers, that floweth with mylke and honey.  And when they eate, and are full and bath, they shal turne vnto other goddes, and serue them, and blaspheme me, and breake my couenant.

And so whan moche myscrofe and tribulation is come vpon them, this songe shall answere before them for a witnesse. It shall not be forgotten out of the mouth of their sede: for I knowe their ymagnacion, that they go aboute euene now, before I brynge them in to the londe, which I sware vnto them.

So Moses wrote this songe at the same tyeme, and taughte it the children of Israel. And the LORDE gave Iosua the sonne of Nun a charge, and sayde: †† Be stronge and bolde, for thou shalt brynge the children of Israel in to the londe, which I sware vnto them, and I wil be with the.

Now whan Moses had wrytten out all the wordes of this lawe in a boke, he commanded the Leuites (which bare the Arke of the LORDES coevenant) and sayde: Take the boke of this lawe, and laye it by the syde of the Arke of the coevenant of the LORDE youre God, that it maye be there a witnesse agaynst the: for I knowe thy stubburnes and thy harde neck.  * Beholde, whye I am yet aluye with you this daye, ye haue bene disobedient vnto the LORDE: how much more after my death?

Gather now vnto me all the Elders of youre § and trybes, and youre officers, y I maye speake these wordes in their eares, †† and take heaven and earth to recorde agaynst them. For I am sure that after my death ye shall marre youre selues, and turre asyde out of the waye, which I haue commanded you: and so shal mysfortune happen vnto you herafter, because ye haue done euell in the sighte of the LORDE, in prouokynge him thorow the workes of youre handes.

So Moses speake out the wordes of this songe euene to the ende, in the eares of all the congregacion of Israel.

† Perfecte are the workes of the Stone, for all his wayes are righteousness.

God is true, and no wickednes is there in him, righteous and just is he.

Thankes thou the LORDE thy God so, thou foolish and vnuweise people?

Is not he thy father? and thy LORDE? Hath he not made the, and prepared the?

Then set he the borders of the naciones acordinge to the nombre of the children of Israel.

‖ For the LORDES parte is his folke, Iacob is the meeulyne of his enheritance.

He founde him in the wyldernesse, euyn in the drye deserte where he roared.

He led him aboute, and gaue him understanding: He kepte him as the aple of his eye.

As an Aegle steryth vp hir nest, and flotereth ouer hir yonge: Euen so stretched he out his fethers, and tokke him and bare him on his wynges.

The LORDE onely was his gyde, and there was no straunge God with him.

He caried him ouer y height of the earth, and fed him with the increase of the feldes.

* He caused him sucke hony out of the rocke, and oyle out of the harde stone.

 And when he was fat and had ynyonghe, he waxed wanton.

He is fat, and thicke, and smothe, and hath letten God go, that made him, and despysed the rocke of his saluacion.

And whan the LORDE sawe it, he was moued vnto wrath ouer his sonnes and his daughters.

And he sayde: I wyll hyde my face from them, I wyll se what their ende shall be: for it is a frowarde generacion, they are childr in whom is no faythe.

They haue despysed me in it that is not God: with their vanites haue they angred me.

Chap. rrviij.

The LORDE hath not done all this. Oure hande is hye, and: The LORDE hath not done all this. For it is a people, therin is no councell, and there is no vnderstandinge in them.

For oure rocke is not as their rocke,* if this are oure enemies judgements selues.

Their vyne is of the vyne of Sodom, and of the fieldes of Gomorra: their grapes are the grapes of gall, they haue bittere clusters.

Their vyne is the poysen of Dragons, at the furious gall of Adders.

Is not this hid with me, and sealed vp in my treasures?

"Vengeance is myne, and I will rewarde in due season. Their fote shall slyde, for the tyme of their destruction is at honde, and the thinge that is to come vp on them, maketh haiste.

For the LORDE shall judge his people, and shall haue compassion on his seruauntes. For he shall consider that their power is awaie, and that it is gone with them, which were shut vp and remayned ouer.

And he shall saye: Where are their goddes, their rocke wherin they trusted?

Of whose sacrifices they ate thy fatt, and dranke the wyne of their drynkesceringes? Let them ryse vp and helpe you, and be youre proteccion.

Se now that I am, and that there is none other God but I.

I can kyll and make alyue: what I haue smyttten, that can I heale: and there is noman able to deluyer out of my hande.

For I wil lifte vp my hande to heauen, and wyl saye: I lyue euer.

Ye I whet thy edge of my swerde, and my hande take holde of judgmente, then wyl I auenge me on mye enemies, and warade them that hate me.

I wil make myne arowes dronken with bloude, and my swerde shal eate flesh ouer thy bloude of the slayne, and ouer the captuyte, and in that the enemies heade shall be discovered.

Reioyse ye Heythen with his people: for he wil auenge the bloude of his seruauntes, and wyl auenge him on his enemies, x wil be mercifull vnto the londe of his people.

And Moses came and spake all the wordes of this songe in the eares of the people, he and Isoua the sonne of Num. Now wha Moses had made an ende of speakinge all these wordes vnto all Israel, he sayde vnto the: "Take to hert all thy worde, which I testifie vnto you this daye, that ye commaunde youre children, to observe and do all the wordes of this lawe.

For it is no vaine worde vnto you, but it is youre life: x this worde shall prolonge youre life in thy londe, whither ye go ouer Iordane to conquere it.

And x LORDE spake vnto Moses x same daie, x sayde: Get the vp to this mount Abairin, vpon mount Nebo, which lyeth in x londe of the Moabites ouer agaynst Iericho. x beholde the londe of Canaan, which I shall geue vnto the children of Israel in possessio. And dye thou vpon the mount, whan thou art come vp, and be gathered vnto thy people, x like as Aaron thy brother dyed vpon mount Hor, and was gathered vnto his people: Because ye trespassed agaynst me amonst the children of Israel by the water of stryfe at Cades in the wildernesse of Zin, and sanctified me not amonst the children of Israel. For thou shalt se the londe ouer against the, which I geue vnto x children of Israel but thou shalt not come in to it.

The rrrvij. Chapter.

This is the blesyng, wherwith Moses the man of God blessed x childre of Israel before his death, and saide: 'The LORDE came from Sinai, x rose vp vnto the from Seir. He appeared fro mount Paran, and came with many thousand euyentes. At his righte hande is there a lawe of fyre for them: O how loued he the people? All his sayentes are in his hande, x they shall set them selues downe at thy fete, and receaue of thy wordes. Moses commaunded vs the lawe, which is the inheritanc of the congregation of Iacob. And he was in the fulnesse of the kynge, α helde ψ rulers of ψ people together, with the tries of Israel.

Let Ruben lyue, and not dye, and his people be fewe in nombre.

This is the blessynge of Iuda. And he sayde: LORDE heare the voyce of Iuda, and bruyne him vnto his people: Let his hicides multiplye him, and let him be helped from his enemies.

And vnto Leui he sayde: Thy perfectnes and thy lighte be acordiue vnto the man of thy mercy, *whο thou hast tempted at Massa, whan ye stroue by the water of stryfe. +He that sayeth vnto his father and to his mother: I se him not: and to his brother, I knoue him not: and to his sonne, I wote not of him, those haue obserued thy wordes, and kepte thy couenant: they shall teach Iacob thy judgments, and Israel thy lawe: they shall laie incense before thy nose, α burnt offeringes vpon thine altare. LORDE, blesse thou his power α accepte the workes of his handes: smyte the bloodyes of them ψ ryse vp agaynst him, ς of them that hate him, that they lìfte not vnp to them selues.

And to Ben Iamin he said: The beloued of the LORDE shal dwell in hope on him: All the daye longe shal he wayte vpon him, and shal dwell betwene his shulders.

And to Joseph he sayde: +His londe lieth in the blessynge of the LORDE, there are noble frutes of heauen, of the dew, and of the depe that lyeth beneth: There are noble frutes of the increase of the Sonne, and noble rype frutes of ψ monethes: And of ψ topes of the mountaynes of olde, and of the hilles allwaye, and of the noble frutes of ψ earth, and of the fulnesse therof. The good will of him ψ that dwelleth in the buszhe, come vpon the heade of Joseph, and vpon ψ tope of his heade that was separated from amonge his brethren.

His bewyte is as a firstborne oxe, and his horns are as ψ horns of an Unicorne: with the same shal he buszhe the nacion together, euen vnto the enedes of the worlde. These are the thousandes of Ephraim, and the thousandes of Manasse.

And vnto Zabulon he sayde: Rejoyse Zabulon of thy outgoynge: but rejoyse thou Isachar of thy tentes. They shal call the people vnto ψ hyll, and there shal they offer ψ offerings of righteounes. For they shall sucke the abundance of the see, and the treasures hyd in the sonde.

And to Gad he sayde: Blessyng heue Gad, which maketh rowme. He dwelth as a lyon, and spoyyleth the arme and the topppe of the heade. And he sawe his begynnyng, that ψ heape of the teachers laye hydd there, and came with the rulers of the people, and executed the righteounenesse of the LORDE, and his judgment on Israel.

And to Dan he sayde: Dan a yonge lyon, he shal flowe from Basan.

And to Nephtali he sayde: Nephtali shal haue abundance of pleasure, α shalbe full of the blessynge of the LORDE: his possession shalbe towards the west and south. And to Asser he sayde: Asser be blessed with sonnes, accepted be he with his brethren, and dyppe his fote in oyle. Yron and brasse be on thy shues. Thyne age be as thy youth.

There is no God as the God of the iust.

He that sytteth vpon heauen, be thy helpe. And his glory is in the cloudes, that is the dwellynge of God from the beginnyng, and vnder the armies of the worlde. And he shall dyrue out thynge enemye before the, and saye: Be destroyed. *And Israel shall dwell safe alone. The eue of Iacob shalbe vpon ψ londe where corne and wine is, heauen also shal dorppe with dewe. Happye art thou Israel, who is lyke vnto the? ,O thou people ψ art saide by the LORDE, which is thy helpe, shylde, and the swerde of thy glorye. Thyne enemies shal pryne awaye, and thou shalt tredaye vpon the height of them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

And Moses wente from the felde of ψ Moabites vp vnto mount Nebo, *vpω ψ topppe of mouiit Pisga ouer against Israel.

And the LORDE shewed him all the londe of Gilead vnto Dan, and all Nephtali, and the londe of Ephraim and Manasse, and all the londe of Iuda, vnto ψ ymcest see, and towards the south, and the region of the playne of Iericho the cite of the palme trees euens vnto Zoar. And the LORDE sayde vnto him: This is the londe that I sware vnto

Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and sayde: I wyll geue it vnto thy sede. Thou hast sene it with thine eyes, *but thou shalt not go ouer thither.

So Moses ‘s seruaunt of the LORDE died there in the londe of the Moabites, acordinge vnto the worde of ‘s LORDE. And he buried him in a valley, in the londe of the Moabites ouer agaynst the house of Peor. And noman knewe of his graue vnto this daye. And Moses was an hundreth and twentye yeare olde whan he dyed: his eyes were not dymme, and his chekes were not fallen. And the children of Israel weped for Moses in ‘s felde of the Moabites thirtie daies, and the dayes of the wepynge and mournynge for Moses were fulfilled.

And Iosua the sonne of Nun was filled with ‘s sprete of wyszdome (†for Moses had layed his hande vpon him) and the children of Israel herkened vnto him, and dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And there arose no prophet more in Israel, like vnto Moses, whom the LORDE knewe face to face in all tokens and wonders (which the LORDE sent him to do in ‘s londe of Egipte, vnto Pharao, and to all his seruautes, and his londe) and in all this mightie hande and greate visions which Moses dyd in the sighte of all Israel.

Chap. XXIII.
Josua calleth the people together before his death, and charge they people, and sayde: Prepare you vytyacles, for ouer thre dayes shal ye go ouer this Iordane, that ye maye come in and take possession of the londe, which the LORDE youre God shal geue you.

And to the Rubenites, Gaddites, and to the halfe trybe of Manasse, sayde Josua: Thynke vpnon the worde, *that Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE spake vnto you, and sayde: The LORDE youre God hath brought you to rest, and geuen you this londe. Let youre wyues and children and catell remayne in this londe, that Moses geue you on this syde Iordane: But ye youre selues (as many as be fightinge men) shal go forth before youre brethren in harness, and helpe them, tilll the LORDE haue broughte youre brethren to rest also as well as you: that they also maye take possession of the londe, which the LORDE youre God shal geue them: Then shal ye turne agayne in to the londe of youre possession, that ye maye enjoye it, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE hath geuen you on this syde Iordane towards the Easte. And they answered Josua and sayde: *All that thou hast commaundede vs, wyl we do: and whither so euer thou sendest vs, we wyl go thither. Like as we haue obeyed Moses, so wyl we be obedient also vnto the: Onely that the LORDE thy God be with þ, like as he was with Moses. Who so euer disobeyeth thy mouth, and herkeneth not vnto thy wordes in all that thou hast commaundede vs, shal dye: Onely be thou stronge and bolde.

The first Chapter.
After the death of Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE, spake the LORDE vnto Josua þ sonne of Nun Moses mynistre: My seruaunt Moses is deed, vp now, and go ouer this Iordane, thou and all this people in to the londe that I haue geuen the children of Israel. *All the places that the soles of youre fete shal treade vpon, haue I geuen vnto you, as I sayde vnto Moses: From the wyldernesse and this Libanus vnto the greate water Euphrates: all the londe of the Hethites vnto the greate see toward the west, shal be youre border. There shall noman be able to with-stonde þ all thy life longe. *And like as I was with Moses, so wil I be with the also. †I will not sayle the nether forsake the. Be stronge and bolde: for vnto this people shalt thou deuyde þ londe, which I swere vnto their fathers, to geue it them.

‡Be strege therfore and very bolde, that thou mayest kepe and do euer thynges accordinge to the lawe, that Moses my seruaunt commaundeed the. Turne not asyde from it, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte. §þ thou mayest deale wysely whiter so euer thou goest. §And let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercye thy selle therin daie and nighte, that thou mayest kepe and do euer thynges accordinge to it that is wrytten therin: Then shalt thou prosper in thy waies, and deale wysely. Lo, Thane commaundede the to be stronge and bolde. Feare not, and be not afrayed: for the LORDE thy God is with þ, whither so euer thou goest.

Then commaundeed Josua the officers of the people, and sayde: Go thorow the hoost, them: Go youre waye, loke vpon the londe and Iericho. They wente forth, and came in to the house of an harlot, called Rahab, and laye there. Then it tolde the kyng of Iericho: Lo, there are men come in this nighte from the childre of Israel, to spye the londe. Then sent the kyng of Iericho vnto Rahab, saynge: Delyuer the men forth that are come vnto the in to thy house, for they are come to spye out the whole londe. Now as for the two men, the woman had hyd them, and sayde: There came men in vnto me in dede, but I knewe not whence they were. And at the shuttinge of the gate when it was darkene, they wente out, so y I can not tell whither they be gone: folowe soone after them, for ye shal ouertake them. But she had caused them to elymme vp vnto the house toppe, and hyd them vnder the stalkes of flaxe, that she had prepared her vpô the toppe of the house. Howbeit the men folowed after them in waye towards Iordane, euyn vnto the ferye: and when they that folowed vpon them were gone forth, the gate was shut.

And or euer the men layed them downe to slepe, she wente vp to them vnto the house toppe, and sayde vnto the: I knowe that the LORDE shal delyuer you the londe, for the feare of you is fallen vpon vs, and all the inhabiteres of the londe are discarded at youre commynge. For we haue herde, how the LORDE dyred vp the water in the reede see before you, whā ye departed out of Egipte: and what ye dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites, Sihon and Og beyonde Iordane, how ye rodet them out, and destroyed them. And sence we herde therof, oure hert hath failed vs, nether is there a good stomache more in eny man, by the reason of youre commynge. For the LORDE youre God is both the God aboue in heaue and beneth vpon earth.

Swere now then vnto me even by the LORDE (for so much as I haue dealt mercifully with you) that ye wyl also shewe mercy vpon my fathers house: and geue me a true token, that ye wyl let my father lyue, and my mother, my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they haue, and delyuer oure soules from death. The men sayde vnto her: Yf we shewe not mercy and faithfulness vpon the, when the LORDE gyneth vs the londe, then let oure soule dye for you, so farre as thou betrayest not oure deuyce. Then let them downe thorow the wyndowe by a coarde: for hir house was in the wall of the cite, and in the wall was hir dwellynge. And she sayde vnto them: Go youre waye vp to the mountayne, lest they mete you that folowe vpon you: and hyde youre selues there thre dayes, till they be come againe v folowe after you: and then get you youre waye.

But the men sayde vnto her: As for this oath that thou hast taken of vs, we will be discharged of it when we come in to the londe, excepte thou knytttest in the wyndowe lyne of this rosecoloured rope (ly thow hast lette vs downe with all) gatherest vnto in to the house, thy father, thy mother, thy brethren all thy fathers house. And loke who so euer goeth out at the doore of thy house, his bloude be vpon his owne heade, and we gittlesse. But of all those ly are in thy house, yf a hende be layed vpon the, their bloude shalbe vpon oure heade. And yf thou bewrayest eny of this deuyce of ours, the wil we be discharged of the ooth ly thow hast take of vs. She sayde: Let it be so as ye saye, and she let the go. And they wente their waye. And she knytt the rose coloured lyne in the wyndowe.

They wente on their waye, and came to the mountayne, and remayneed there three dayes, till they that folowed vpon them were come agayne: for they soughte them thorow every strete, yet they founde them not. So the two men turned agayne, and departed from the mountayne, and passed ouer (Iordane) and came to Isoua the sonne of Nun, and tolde him euery thinge, as they had founde it, they sayde vnto Isoua: The LORDE hath genê vs all the londe in to oure handes, and all they that dwell in the londe, are sorne afrayed of vs.

The iiij. Chapter.

And Issoua rose vp early, and they departed from Setim, came vnto Iordane, he and all the children of Israel, and remayned there all night, afore they werte ouer. But after thre dayes wente the officers thorow ly boost, and commaundede the people, and sayde: Whan ye se the Arke of ly couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, and the prestes from amõge the Leuites bearinge it, departe ye then out of youre place, and folowe after Israel wete thorow drye shod, vntyll ý whole people were all come ouer Iordane.

The iiiij. Chapter.

A ND ý LORDE sayde vnto Josua: Take you twelwe men, out of euery trybe one, τ comaunde them, τ saye: +Take vp twelue stones out of Iordane, from the place where the fete of the prestes stode in their araye: τ carry them with you, ý ye male leave them in ý lodginge, where ye shal lodge this night. The Josua called twelue me which were prepared of the children of Israel, out of euery trybe one, τ saye vnto the: Go youre waye ouer before the Arke of the LORDE youre God in the myddes of Iordane, τ take euery man a stone vpon his shulder, after the nome of the trybes of ý children of Israel, ý they maye be a token amonoge you. And when youre children axe their fathers here after, and saye: What do these stones there? That ye maye then saye vnto them, how that the water of Iordane claue in sunder before the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, when it wente thorow Iordane, τ that these stones are set for a perpetuall remembranc vnsto the children of Israel.

Then dyd the children of Israel as Josua commaunded them, and bare twelue stones out of the myddes of Iordane (as the LORDE had sayde vnto Josua) § accordinge to the nombre of the trybes of the children of Israel, and broughte the same with them in to the lodginge, and lefte them there. And Josua set vp twelue stones in ý myddes of Iordane, where ý fete of the prestes stode, that bare ý Arke of the couenaunt: and there they be yet vnto this daye. As for ý prestes that bare ý Arke, they stode in the myddes of Iordane, vntyll all was perfornmed that the LORDE charged Josua to saye vnto ý people accordinge as Moses gane Josua in commandeméth. The people also made haist, and wente ouer. Now whan all the people was gone ouer, the Arke of the LORDE wente ouer also, and the prestes wente before the people.

And the Rubenites, τ Gaddites, and ý halfe trybe of Manasse wente harnessed before the childré of Israel, like as Moses had sayde vnto the: Aboute a fortye thousande men ready harnessed to the warre, wente before the LORDE to the battayll, vpon  felde of Iericho. * In that daye the LORDE made Iosua greate in the sichte of all Israel: and like as they feared Moses, so stode they in awe of him, all his life longe.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Commande the prestes which beare the Ark of witnesse, that they come vp out of Iordane. So Iosua commaunded the prestes,  sayde: Come vp out of Iordane. And when the prestes bare the Ark of the councnaft of  LORDE were out of Iordane, and trode with the soles of their fete vpon the drye londe,  water of Iordane came agayne in to his place, and flowed (like as afore tyme) vpon all his banckes.

It was  tenth daye of the first moneth, when the people came vp out of Iordane:  sayde: When yeare ye were in Gilgall vpon  East syde of  cite of Iericho. And  twelue stones which they had taken out of Iordane, dyd Iosua set vp at Gilgall,  sayde vnto the children of Israel: When ye are come vp out of Iordane, ye shall set vp these stones.  sayde: These stones shalbe drye thorow Iordane, what tyme as  LORDE youre God dryed vp  water of Iordane before you, they shalbe ouer: like as the LORDE youre God dyd in the seconde tyme,  which he dryed vp before vs,  we shalbe drye thorow: that all the people vpon earth mighte knowe the hade of the LORDE, how meane it is, to the intent that ye shalbe allwaye feare the LORDE youre God.

The 6. Chapter.

NOW when all the kynges of  Amorites that dwelt beyonde Iordane westwarde, and all the kynges of  Cananites by the see syde herde, how  LORDE had dryed vp the water of Iordane before the children of Israel, tylly they were come ouer  their hert fayled them, nether was there eny more corage in them at the presence of the children of Israel.

At the same tyme sayde  LORDE vnto Iosua: Make the knyues of stone, and circumcysye the children of Israel agayne the seconde tyme. Then Iosua made him knyues of stone, and circumcysed the children of Israel vpon the topp of the foreskynnes. And the cause why Iosua circumcysed all the males of the people  were come out of Egipte, is this: for all the men of warre dyed in  wildernesse by the waye, after they were departed out of Egipte: for all the people that came forth, were circumcysed.

But all the people that were borne in  wildernesse by the waye (after they departed out of Egipte) were not circumcysed: for the children of Israel walked fortye yeares in the wildernesse, vntyll all the people of the men of warre that came out of Egipte, were consumed, because they herkened not vnto the voyce of the LORDE, like as the LORDE swarde vnto them,  that they shulde not se the londe, where the LORDE swarde vnto their fathers to geue vnto vs, ewaye a londe that foweth with mylke and honeye: their children which were come vp in their steade, dyd Iosua circumcysye: for they had the foreskynne, and were not circumcysed by the waye.

And when all the people were circumcysed, they abode in their place, euene in these places, vsall they were wholle. And  LORDE swarde vnto Iosua: To daie haue I turned  shame of Egipte awaye from you, euene the same place was called Gilgall vnto this daie. And whye the children of Israel laye thus at Gilgall, they kepe Easter  the fourteenth daie of the moneth at euene in the felde of Iericho. And they ate of the corne of the lode the seconde daie of the Easter: namely, vnleuended bred, euene the same daye. And vpon the morow, the  Manna fayled, when they ate of the corne of  londe, so that the children of Israel had nomore Manna, but ate of the corne of the londe of Canaan the same yeare.

And it fortuned that wha Iosua was by Iericho, he lyfte vp his eyes, and saw warre, that there stode a mai agaynst him, and had a naked swerde in his hande. And Iosua wete to him,  sayde vnto him: Art thou one of vs, or ofoure enemies? He sayde: No, but I am  the pryncse of the LORDES hoost, and now am I come. Then fell Iosua downe to the earth vpon his face, and worshipped him, and sayde vnto him: What sayseth my LORDE vnto his servaunt? And the pryncse ouer the LORDES hoost sayde vnto him: §§ Put thy shues of thy fete, for the place where vpso thou stondest, is holy. And Iosua dyd so.

A S for Iericho, it was shut and kepte because of the childr̄ of Israel, so that no man mighte go out ther in. But the LORDE sayde vnto Josua: Beholde, I haue geuen Iericho with ỳ kyng and men of warre therof, in to thy hande. Let all the men of warre go once rounde aboute ỳ cite, and do so sene dayes. But vpoun the seuenthe daye let the prestes take the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before the Arke, and goe the same seuenthe daye seuen tymes aboute the cite, and let the prestes blew the trompettes. And whan the horne of the yere of Iubilye bloweth and maketh a sounde, so that ye heare the trompettes, all the people shal make a greate shoute, then shal the walles of the cite fall downe, and ỳ people shal fall in, every one straight before him.

Then Josua the sonne of Nun called ỳ prestes, and sayde vnto them: Beare ye the Arke of the couenaunt, and let seuen prestes take the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE. But vnto the people he sayde: Get you hence, and go rounde aboute the cite: and let him that is harnessed, go before the Arke of the LORDE. Whan Josua had spoken this vnto the people, the seuen prestes bare the seuen trompettes of the yere Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE, and wente ỳ blew the trompettes, and the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt followed after them: and who so was harnessed, wente before the prestes that blew the trompettes, and the multitude followed the Arke. And all was full of ỳ noyse of the trompettes. But Josua commaunded the people, and sayde: Ye shall make no shoute, ner let youre voyce be herde, nether shall ye geue one worde out of youre mouth, vntyll the daye ỳ I saye vnto you: Make a shoute, then make a shoute.

So the Arke of the LORDE wente once rounde aboute the cite, and came agayne in to ỳ hooste, ỳ remayned therin: for Josua vsed to ryse vp early in the mornynge. And the prestes bare the Arke of the LORDE: so dyd the seuen prestes beare the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before ỳ Arke of the LORDE, and wente and blew the trompettes: and who so was harnessed, wente before thē, but ỳ multitude folowed ỳ Arke of the LORDE. And all was full of the noyse of the trompettes.

The seconde daye wente they once aboute the cite also, and came agayne in to the hooste. Thus dyd they sene dayes. But upon the seuenthe daye whan the mornynge sprynge arose, they gat them vp early, and wente after the same maner seuen tymes aboute ỳ cite, so that vpon the same one seuenthe daye they wente seuen tymes aboute the cite.

And at the seuenthe tyme whan the prestes blew the trompettes, Josua sayde vnto the people: Make a shoute, for ỳ LORDE hath deluyered you the cite: Howbeit this cite, ỳ all that is therin, shalbe damned vnto the LORDE. * onely the harlot Rahab shal lyue, ỳ all that are with her in ỳ house, for she hyd the messaungers, whom we sent forth. Onely beware of ithat is damned, lest ye damne youre selues (ỳ ye take ought of i that is damned) and make the hooste of Israel to be damned, and byrge it in to mys-fortune. But all the syluer and golde, with the ornametts of brasse ỳ yron, shalbe sanctified vnto the LORDE, that it maye come to the LORDES treasure.

Then made the people a greate shoute, and the prestes blew the trompettes (for whan the people herde the noyse of the trompettes, they made a greate shoute) † and the walles fell, and the people clymned vp in to the cite, euery one straight before him. Thus they wanne ỳ cite, and ‡ destroyed all that was in the cite with the edge of the swerde, both man and woman, yonge and olde, oxe, shepe, and Asse.

But Josua sayde vnto ỳ two men which had spied out the londe: Go in to the house of the harlot, and bringe out the woman frō thence with all that she hath, acordynge as ye hane sworne vnto her. Then ỳ yonge men (the spyes) wente in, and brought forth Rahab with her father and mother, ỳ brethren, and all that she had, and all hir kynred, and caused her to dwell without the hooste of Israel. As for the cite, they brent it with fyre, ỳ all that was therin: onely the syluer and golde, and the ornametts of brasse and yrō put they vnto the treasure in the house of ỳ LORDE: but Josua let ỳ the harlot Rahab lyue, with hir fathers house, and all that she had: ỳ she dwelt in Israel vnto this daie, because she had hyd the messaungers whom Issua sent vnto Iericho to spye.

At the same tyme sware Issua, and sayde:

* Cursed be that man before the LORDE, which setteth vp this cite of Iericho to buyldeth it: Whan he laith the fountacions thereof, let it cost him his first sonne: And whan he setteth vp the gates of it, let it cost him his yesthes sonne. Thus the LORDE was with Issua, so that he was spoken of in all londes.

The Chapter.

B

UT the children of Israel had commytted a sinne in the thing was damned:
for Achan the sonne of Charni the sonne of Sabdi the sonne of Serah, of the Iuda, toke some of it was damned. Then was the wrath of the LORDE feare ouer the children of Israel.

Now whan Issua sent out men from Iericho vnto Hai, which lyeth byside Bethaué on the east syde of Bethel, he sayde vnto thes: Go vp, and spye the londe. And when they had gone vp, and spyd out Hai, they came agayne to Issua, and sayde vnto him: Let not all the people go vp, but vpon a two or thre thousande, that they maye go vp and smyte Hai, lest all the people weere them selues there, for they are but fewe.

So there wente vp, of the people vpon a thre thousande men, and they fled before the men of Hai, and they of Hai smote vpon a syxe and thyrty men of them, and chased them from theorne vnto Sebarim, and smote them downe the waye. Then was the hert of the people discarage, and became like water. As for Issua he rente his clothes, and fell vpone his face vnto the earth before the Arke of the LORDE, vntill the eueninge, with the Elders of Israel, and cast dust vpon their heads.

And Issua sayde: Oh LORDE LORDE, wherfore hast thou broughte this people ouer Iordaine, to deluyer vs in to the handes of the Amorites to destroye vs? O that we had taried beyonde Iordaine, as we begane. Oh my LORDE, what shal I sayle, whyle Israel turneth his backe vpon his enemies? Whi the Cananites heare of this, they shall compass vs rounde aboute, yee and rote out oure names from of the earth. What wylt thou do then vnto thy greate name?

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Issua: Stode vp, why lyest thou so vpon thy face? Israel hast offended, and trissgressed ouer my covenante, which I commaundd the. They haue taken also of the thing that was damned, and haue stolen, and dyssembled, and layed it amonoge their ornamente. The children of Israel are not able to stonde before their aduersaries, but must turne their backes vpon their enemies: for they are acerued. I wyll no more be with you from hence forth if ye put not out the damned from amonoge you.

Stonde vp, and sanctifie the people, and saye: Sanctifie youre selues agaynst tomorrow for thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: There is a damned thinge in the O Israel, therfore canst thou not stonde before thine enemies, tylle ye put awaye the damned from amonoge you. And ye shall ryse vp early, one trybe after another: and loke which trybe so euere the LORDE taketh, the same shall come forth, one kynred after another: and loke which kynred the LORDE taketh, the same shall come forth, one house after another. And loke what house the LORDE taketh, the same shall come forth, one housholder after another. And who so euer is founde in the curse, the same shall be burnt in the fyre with all that he hath: because he hath gone beyonde the covenante of the LORDE, and committted folye in Israel.

Then Issua gat him vp by tymes in the mornynge, and brought forth Israel, one trybe after another, and the Iuda was taken. And whan he had brought forth the kynreds in Iuda, the kynred of the Serahites was taken. And whan he had brought forth the kynred of the Serahites, one housholder after another, Sabdi was taken. And wha he had brought forth his house, one housholder after another, Achan the sonne of Charni the sonne of Sabdi the sonne of Serah of the Iuda, was taken.

And Issua sayde vnto Achan: My sonne, geue the glory vnto the LORDE the God of Israel, and geue him the praise, and tell me, what thou hast done, and hide nothynge fro me.

Then answered Achan vnto Issua, and sayde: Verely I haue synned agaynst the LORDE God of Israel, thus haue I done: I saw amoge spoiles a costly Babilonish garment, and two hūdreth Sycles of syluer and a tunge of golde, worth fiftie Sycles in weight, vnto the which I had a lust, and toke it; and beholde, it is hyd in the grounde in my tente, and the syluer vnder it.

Then Iosua sent messaungers thither, which ranne to the tente, and beholde, it was hyd in his tente, and the syluer vnder it. And they toke it out of the tente, and broughte it vnto Iosua, and to all the children of Israel poured it before the LORDE. Then Iosua and all Israel with him, toke Achan the sonne of Sarah with the syluer, the garment and golde tunge, his sonnes and daughters, his oxen and asses, and shepe, and all that he had broughte they in to the valley of Achor.

And Iosua sayde: For so moch as thou hast troubled vs, the LORDE trouble the this daye. And all Israel stoned him, and burned him with fire with all that he had.
And when they had stoned him, they made oruer him a greate heape of stones, which remayneth vnto this daye. (So the LORDE turned from the rigorouss of his wrath.)
Therefore is the same place called the valley of Achor vnto this daye.

ND the LORDE saide vnto Iosua: Feare not, and be not afraied. "Take all the men of warre with the, and ryse, and get the vp vnto Hai. Beholde, I haue geuen in to thy hande, the kyng of Hai with his people in his cite of countrie. And thou shalt do with Hai and the kyng of it, as thou dydest with Iericho and the kyngge theroff, sauyenge that ye shall deale amoge you their spoyle and catell: but set thou a g preuy watch behynde the cite.

Then Iosua arose, and all the men of warre, to go vp vnto Hai: and Iosua chose thirte andoung men fightinge men, and sent them out by night, and commanded them, and sayde:
Take heed, ye shall be a preuy watch behynde the cite, but go not to farre from the cite, and se that ye be redye alltogether. As for me and all the people that is with me, we will make vs to the cite. And when they come forth agaynst vs (as afore) we will flye before them, that they maye folowe out after vs, till we haue prouoked them forth of the cite: for they shall thinke that we flye before them, like as ye flyest. And whyle we flye before them, ye shall get you vp out of the preuy watch, and wynne the cite. For the LORDE shal delyuer it in to youre handes. But when ye haue wonne the cite, set fyre vpon it, doyng accordinge vnto the worde of the LORDE.
Beholde, I haue commaundedyou.

So Iosua sent them awaye, vp they wente
vnto the place of the preuy watch, and laye betwixte Bethel and Hai, on the west syde of Hai. But Iosua abode that night amoge the people. And in the mornynge he arose early, and set the people in order, and wente vp with the Elders of Israel before the people towarde Hai: and all the men of warre that were with him, wente vp vp, and came ouer agaynst the cite, and pitched their tentes on the north syde of Hai, and the there was but a valley betwene him and Hai.

He had taken aboute a fyne thousande men, and set them in the hynder watch betwene Bethel and Hai, on the west syde of the cite, and they ordred the people of the whole hoost that was on the north syde of the cite, so that the vettemost of the people reached vp to the west ende of the cite. So Iosua wente
the same nighte in to the myddes of the valley.

But when the kyngge of Hai sawe that, he made haist, and gat him vp early, and the men out of the cite, to mete Israel to the backe syde, with all his people, even righte before the felde: for he wyster not that there was a preuy watch behynde him on the backe syde of the cite. But Iosua and all Israel were feble before them, and fled by the waye to wyldernesse. Then cried all the people in the cite, that they shulde folowe vp vp them, and they folowed after Iosua and ruzshed out of the cite, so that there remayned not one man in Hai and Bethel, which wente not out to folowe vp Israel, and they lefte the cite standinge open, that they migt persecute Israel.

The LORDE saide vnto Iosua: Reach out the speare that thou hast in thine hande, towarde Hai: for I will deluyer it in to thy hande. And when Iosua reached out the speare that was in his hande, towarde the cite,
the hindery watch brake vp out of their place, and ranne (when he had stretched out his hande) and came in to the cite, and wanne it, and made haist, set fyre vpon it. And the men of Hai turned them, and loked
And when Josua and all Israel sawe, whence the hynder watch had wonne the cite (for the smoke of the cite ascended) they turned againe, and smote the men of Hai. And they in the cite came forth also agaynst them, so they came in the myddes amonge Israel on both the sydes, and they slewe them, so that there was not one man of them left ouer or escaped: and they toke the kyng of Hai aluye, and broughte him vnto Josua. And wha Israel had slayne all the inhabiters of Hai, which had folowed vpon them in the feilde and in the wildernes: and when they were all fallen thorow the edge of the swerde, thyll they were destroyed, the turned all Israel vnto Hai, and smote with it the edge of the swerde. And of all them which fell that daye fro man vnto woma, there were twelue thousande, all men of Hai.

But Josua withdrew not his hande (wherwith he reached out the speare) thyll all the inhabiters of Hai were vtherly destroyed, * sauyng the catell and the spoyle of the cite, dyd Israel parte amonge them selues, accordinge vnto the worde of the LORDE, which he commaunded Josua. And Josua burned vp Hai and made an heape therof for euer, which is there yet vnto this daye. And the kyng of Hai caused he to be hanged on a tre vntyll the euen.

But wha the Sonne was gone downe, he commanded to take his body from the tre, and to cast it vnder the gate of the cite, and made vpon him a greate heape of stones, which is there yet vnto this daye.

Then buylded Josua an altare vnto the LORDE God of Israel vpon mount Ebal accordinge as Moses the seruant of the LORDE commaunded the children of Israel, as it is wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses euuen an altare of whole stone, wherypon there was no yron lifted: and he offerd burntofferinges and healthofferinges, and there vpon the stones he wrote the seconde lawe of Moses, which he wrote before the childre of Israel.

And all Israel with their Elders and officers and judges, stode on both the sydes of the Arke, right ouer agaynst the prestes bare the Arke of the covenaut of the LORDE, the straunger as well as one of them selues, the one halfe besyde mount Grysim, and the other halfe beside mount Ebal, as Moses the seruant of the LORDE commaunded afoare, to blesse the people of Israel. Afterwarde caused he to proclame all the wordes of the lawe of the blessyng and cursyng, as it is wrytten in the boke of the lawe. There was not one word that Moses commaunded, but Josua caused it to be proclamed before all the congregacion of Israel, and before the wemè, and children, and straigers which walked amonge them.

The ir. Chapter.

Now whan all the kynges that were beyonde Iordane vpon the mountaynes, and in the lowe countrees, in all the hauens of the greate see, and besyde mount Libanus, herde this (namely, Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Hebrews, and Jebusytes) they gathered the selues together with one acoarde, to fighte agaynst Josua, and agaynst Israel.

But whan the inhabiters of Gibeon herde, what Josua had done with Jericho and Hai, they dealete craftely, wite on their waie, and made a message, and toke olde sackes vpon their asses, and olde rente wyne botels, and olde mended shues vpon their fete, and put on olde and peced garments, and all y bred of their vytayles was harde and moulde, and they wente vnto Josua in to y hoost at Gilgal, and sayde vnto him, and to euery man in Israel: We are come out of a farre countre, therfore make now a covenaut with vs. Then sayde euery man in Israel vnto y Heuyte: Peraduenture thou dwellest amonge vs, how can I then make a covenaut with the?

They saide vnto Josua: We are thy seruantes. Josua sayde vnto them: What are ye, y whence come ye? They sayde: Thy seruantes are come out of a very farre countre, because of the name of the LORDE thy God: for we haue herde the reporte of him, and all that he dyd in Egipte, and all that he dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites beyode Iordane, Sihon the kyng at Heszbo, and Og the kyng of Basan, which dwelt at Astaroth. Therfore sayde oure

Elders and all the inhabitants of our country: Take fode with you, and saye vnto them: We are your seruauntes, therefore make now a bonde with vs: This oure bred that we toke out of oure houses for oure fode, was new when we toke oure journey towards you: but now lo, it is harde & mouldie. And these bottels full of water, and lo, they are rete. And these oure clothes and shutes are waxed olde, by reason of the sore longe journey.

Then the captaynes toke their vytyales, and axe not the mouth of the LORDE. *And Isaua made peace with them, and set vp a counenaunt with them, that they shulde be saued aluye, and the rulers of the congregacion sware vnto them. But thre dayes after that they had made a counenaunt with them, they herde, that they were their neigbouris, and dwelte amonge them: For as the children of Israel wente forth on their journey, they came on the thirde daye vnto their cities, which are called Gibeon, Capheira, Beeroth, and Cirath Iearim, and smote the not, because that the rulers of the congregacion had sware vnto them by the name of the LORDE the God of Israel.

But when all the congregacion murmured against the rulers, all the rulers sayde vnto the whole congregacion: We haue sware vnto them by the LORDE the God of Israel, therafore maye we not touch them. But this wil we do vnto them: Let them lye, that there come no wrath vpon vs, because of the oath that we haue made vnto them.

And the rulers sayde vnto them: Let them lye, that they maye be the wodd and bearers of watter for the whole congregacion, as the rulers haue sayde vnto them. Then Isiu a called them, and commene with them, and sayde: Wherfore haue ye dissecaued vs, and sayde, that ye were farre from vs, where as ye dwell amonge vs? Therfore shall ye be cursed, so that of you there shall not ceasse seruauntes to hew wodd and to beare watter for the house of my God.

They answered Isiu, & sayde: It was tolde thy seruauntes, that the LORDE thy God commanded Moses his seruanent, that he shulde geue you the whole lode, and that he wolde destroye all the inhabitres of the londe before you: therfore were we sore afrayed of oure lyues before you, and thus haue we done.

But now lo, we are in thy hande: loke what thou thinkest good and righte to do vnto vs, that do.

And he dyed euyn so vnto them, and delyuered them from the children of Israelis hede, that they shulde not slaye them. So vp the same daye Isaua made them hewers of wodd and water bearers for the congregacion, and for the altare of the LORDE vnto this daye, in the place that he shall chose.

The r. Chapter.

W HAN Adonisedech the kyng of Ierusalem herde, that Isiu had wonne Hai, and danned it, and done vnto Hai and Kyng of it, like as he dyd vnto Iericho and to the kyng of it, and that they of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were come vnder them, they were sore afrayed. For Gibeon was a greate cite, like as one of the kynges cities, and greater then Hai, and all the citesys thereof were men of armes. Therefore sent he vnto Hoham the kyng of Hebron, and to Pirea the kyng of Iarmuth, and to Iaphia the kyng of Lachis, and to Debir the kyng of Eglon, and caused to saie vnto them: Come vp vnto me, and helpe me, that we maie smyte Gibeon, for they haue made peace with Isiu and the children of Israel. Then came the fyue kynges of the Amorites together, and went vp, the kyng of Ierusalem, the kyng of Hebron, the kyng of Eglon, the kyng of Iarmuth, the kyng of Lachis, the kyng of Eglon, with all their armes, & layed sege vnto Gibeon, and foughte agaynst it.

Howbeit they of Gibeon sent vnto Isiu to Gilgall, and causde to saye vnto him: Withdrawe not thine hande from thy seruauntes, come vp soone vnto vs: delyuer and helpe vs, for all the kynges of the Amorites that dwell vpon the mountaynes, are gathered together agaynst vs. Isiu went vp from Gilgall, and all the warryers and all the men armes with him. And the LORDE sayde vnto Isiu: *Feare them not, for I haue geue them in to thy hande. There shall not one of them be able to stonde before the. So Isiu came sodenly vpon them, for all that night wente he vp from Gilgall. || And the LORDE discomfyted the before Israel, and smote them with a greate slaughter at Gibeon:
they chaced them the waie downe to Beth Horon, and smote them vnto Asek and Makeda.

And when they fled before Israel, the waie downe to Bethoron, the LORDE caused a greate hayle from heauen to fall vpon them, vnto Aseka, so that they dyed: a many mo of them dyed of the hayle, then the children of Israel swee the swerde.

Then spake Josua vnto the LORDE (the same daye that the LORDE gaued over the Amorites before the children of Israel) and sayde in the presence of Israel: *Sonne, holde still at Gibeon, and thou Moone in the valley of Aialon.

Then the Sonne helde still, and  Moone stode, vntyll the people had aunged the selues on their enemies. Is not this wrytten in the boke of the righteous? Thus the Sonne stode still in the myddes of heauen, and dyffered to go downe for the space of a whole daye after. And there was no daye like vnto this (nether before nor after) whan the LORDE herkened vnto the voyce of one man: for the LORDE fought for Israel. And Josua wente agayne to Gilgall in to the tetes, and all Israel with him: As for the fyue kynges, they were fledd, and had hyd the selues in the caue at Makeda.

Then was it tolde Josua: We haue foude the fyue kynges hyd in the caue at Makeda. Josua sayde: Rolle greate stones then before the hole of the caue, and set men there to kepe them.

As for you, stonde not ye still, but solowe after youre enemies, and smyte them behynde, and let them not come in their cities, for the LORDE youre God hath deluyered the in to youre hande. And when Josua and the children of Israel had ended the sore greate slaughter vpō them, so  they were brought to naught, the remynaunt of them came in to the stronge cities.

So all the people came agayne to the hoost vnto Josua to Makeda in peace, and no man durst moue his tunge agaynst the children of Israel. Josua sayde: Open the mouth of the caue, and brynge the fyue kynges forth vnto me. They dyd so, and broughkte the kynges vnto him out of the caue: the kyng of Jerusalem, the kyng of Hebrō, the kyng of Larn math, the kyng of Lachis, the kyng of Eglon.

When these fyue kynges were brought forth vnto him, Josua called euerie man of Israel, and sayde vnto the rulers of the men of warre that wente with him: Come forth and tread vpon the neckes of these kynges with youre fete. And they came forth, and trode vpon their neckes with their fete. And Josua saide vnto them: Be not afrayed, and feare not: be stronge and bolde, for thus shal the LORDE do vnto all youre enemies, agaynst whom ye fighte.

And Josua smote them afterwarde, and put them to death, and hanged them vnto fyue trees. And they hanged still vpon the trees vntyll the enemys. But when the Sonne was gone downe, he commanded to take them of from the trees: and they cast them in the caue, wherein they had hyd them selues, before the hole of the caue they layed greate stones, which are there yet vnto this daye. The same daye wanne Josua Makeda also, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and the kyng therof, and dammed it, and all the soules that were therin, and let none remayne escaped: and dyd vnto the kyng of Makeda as he dyd vnto the kyng of Iericho.

Then Josua and all Israel with him departed fro Makeda vnto Lybna, and fought agaynst it. (And the LORDE gaued it with fyne kynges therof in to the hande of Israel) and smote it and all the soules that were therin, with the edge of the swerde, and let not one remayne in it: and dyd vnto the kyng therof as he had done vnto the kyng of Iericho.

Afterwarde wente Josua and all Israel with him from Lybna vnto Lachis, and layed sege vnto it, and fought agaynst it. And the LORDE deluyered Lachis also in to the hande of Israel, so that they wanne it vpon the second daye, and smote it with gyenge of the swerde, and all the soules that were therin, accorde to all as he had done vnto Lybna. At the same tyme Horam kyng of Gazer wente vp, to helpe Lachis. But Josua smote him with all his people, tyll there remayned not one.

And Josua wente with all Israel from Lachis, vnto Eglon, and layed sege vnto it, and fought agaynst it, and wanne it the same daye, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and dammed all the soules that were therin the same daye, acordynge vnto all as he had done vnto Lachis.

After that wente Ioasua with all Israel from Eglon vnto Hebron, and foughte agaynst it, and wanne it, and smote it with y edge of the swerde, and the kynge of it, and all the cities therof, and all the soules that were therin, and let no one remayne, acordynge vnto all as he had done vnto Eglon: and dammed it, and all the soules that were therin.

Then turned Ioasua agayne with all Israel towarde Debir, and fought agaynst it, and wanne it, with the kinge of it, and all y cities therof, and smote them with the edge of the swerde, and dammed all y soules that were therin, and let no one remayne ouer. Euen as he had done vnto Hebro and Lybna with their kynge, so dyd he also vnto Debir, and the kynge therof.

Thus Ioasua smote all the londe vpon the mountaynes, and towarde the south, and in the lowe countrees, and by the ryuers, with all their kynges, and let no one remayne ouer and dammed all that had breth, *as the LORDE God of Israel had commaunded. And Ioasua smote them from Cades Bernea vnto Gaza, and all the londe of Gosen vnto Gibeon, and toke all these kynges with their lode at one tyne: for the LORDE God of Israel foughte for Israel. And Ioasua wente agayme with all Israel to the tentes vnto Gilgal.

The ri. Chapter

WHAN Iabbin the kynge of Asor herde this, he sent vnto Iabob the kynge of Madon and to the kynge of Samron, and to the kynge of Achspah, and to the kynge that dwelt toward the north vpon the mountaynes, and in the playne on the southside of Cineroth, and in the lowe countrees, and in the lordshippes of Dor by the see syde: and to the Cananites toward y east and west, to y Amorites, Hethites, Pheresites, and Ibustites, vpon the mountaynes and to the Heuites, ynder mount Hermon in the londe of Mispa. These wete out with all their armyes, a greate people, as many as y sonde of the see, and excedinge many horses and charettes. All these kyngees gathered the selues, and came, and pitched together by y water of Meram, to fighte with Israel.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Ioasua: Feare them not, for tomorrow aboute this tyne wil I deluyer them all slayne, before the children of Israel: thon shalt lame their horses, and burne their charettes with fire. † And Ioasua came sodenly vpon them, and all the men of warre with him by the water of Merom, and fell vpon them. And the LORDE deluyered them in to y handes of Israel, and they smote them, and chaced them vnto greate Sidô and to the warme water, and to the playne of Mispa toward y east: and smote them, vntyll there remayned not one.

Then dealete Ioasua with them as y LORDE had saide vnto him, y lamed their horses, y brent their charettes. And he turned backe at the same tyne, and was afore tyne y head cite of all these kyngdomes and smote all the soules that were therin with the edge of the swerde, and dammed it. † let nothinge remayne that had breth, † damned Hasor with fyre. All the cities of these kyngdomes waine Ioasua also, and smote the with the edge of the swerde, and dammed them, † acordinge as Moses the seruant of the LORDE commaunded.

Howbeit the cities that stode vpon the hilles, dyd not the children of Israel burne with fyre: but Hasor onely dyd Ioasua burne. ‡ And all the spoyles of these cities and the catell, dyd the children of Israel deale amonge them, but smote all the men with the edge of the swerde, tyll they had destroyed them, and let nothinge remayne that had breth. As the LORDE commaunded his seruant Moses, and as Moses commaunded Ioasua, even so dyd Ioasua, so that there was nothinge vndone of all that the LORDE commaunded Moses.

So Ioasua toke all this lode vpon y mountaynes, ‡ all y lyeth towarde the south, ‡ all the londe of Gosen, and the lowe countre, ‡ the playne felde, and the mountayne of Israel with the valley therof, from the mountayne that parteth the londe vp towarde Seir, vnto Baalgad, in the playne of moint Libanus beneth mount Hermon. All their kynges toke he, and smote them, and put the to death. ¶ Howbeit he warre a longe season with these kynges.

Yet was there not one cite, that yelded it selfe peaceably vnto the children of Israel ‡(excepte the Heuites, which dwelt at Gibeon) but they wanne them all with battayll. And this was done so of the LORDE, that their heart was so hardended, to come against the children of Israel with battayll, & they mighte be dauned, & no fauoure to be shewed vnto them, but to be destroyed, as the LORDE commanded Moses.

At the same tyme came Josua, and rote out the Enakims from the mountayne, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, from every mountayne of Juda, and from every mountayne of Israel, and dauned the with their cities, and let none of the Enakims remayne in the londe of the children of Israel, saue at Gasa, tat Gath, at Asdod, there remayned of them.

Thus Josua conquered all the londe accordinge vnto all as the LORDE sayde vnto Moses, & gaue it vnto Israel to enheritaunce, vnto every trybe his porcion, & the londe rested from warre.

The xiij. Chapter.

These are the kynges of the londe, wher the childre of Israel smote, & conquered their lode, beyonde Iordan, eastwarde, fro the water of Arnon, vnto mount Hermon, and vnto all the playne feldes toward the east: Sihon the kyng of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon, and had dominion from Aroer that lieth by the water syde of Arnon, and vnto the myddes of the water: and ouer halfe Gilead, vnto the water of Iabok, which is the border of the childre of Ammon: and ouer the playne feldes, vnto the see of Cyinneroth eastwarde, and vnto the see of the playne feldes, namely the Salt see toward the east, the waye vnto Beth Isimoth: and from the south beneth by the ryuers of mount Pisga.

And the border of Og the kyng of Basan, which remayned yet of Raphaim, & vnto the childre of Ammon, & Astaroth and Edrei, and had the dominion ouer mount Hermon, over Saleba, and ouer all Basan vnto the border of Gessuria called Machachi, halfe Gilead, which was the border of Sihon the kyng at Heshbon. Moses the seruant of the LORDE and the childre of Israel smote them. And Moses the seruant of the LORDE gaue it vnto the Rubenites, Gaddites and to the halfe trybe of Manasse in possession.

These are the kynges of the lode, whom Josua & the children of Israel smote on this syde Iordan westwarde, fro Balagad vnder the playne of mount Libanus, vnto the mounte Syrie, that parteth the londe vp towards Seir, & that Josua gaue vnto the trybes of Israel in possession, vnto euery one his parte, what so euery was in montaynes, valleys, playne feldes, by the ryuers, in wyldernesses &e toward the south, the Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Heuites, and Iebusites.

The kyng of Jericho, the kynges of Hai, the kyng of Jerusalem, the kyng of Hebron, the kyng of Iarmoth, the kyng of Lachis, the kyng of Eglon, the kyng of Geser, the kyng of Debir, the kyng of Geder, the kyng of Horne, the kyng of Arad, the kyng of Libna, the kyng of Adulla, the kyng of Makeda, the kyng of Bethel, the kyng of Taphnah, the kyng of Hepher, the kyng of Aphek, the kyng of Lasaron, the kyng of Madan, the kyng of Hasor, the kyng of Simron Meron, the kyng of Achesaph, the kyng of Tahenah, the kyng of Megido, the kyng of Cades, the kyng of Iakneam by Carmel, the kyng in the lordships of Dor, the kyng of the Heithen at Gilgall, the kyng of Thirza. These are one and thirte kynges.

The xiiij. Chapter.

Now when Josua was olde and wel stricken in age, the LORDE sayde vnto him: Thou art olde & well aged, and there remayneth yet much of the londe to conquere, namely all Galile of the Philistynes, and all Gessuri, from Shior which floweth before Egypte, vnto the border of Ekron, northwarde, which is reckened vnto the Cananites: fyue lordes of the Philistynes, namely, the Gastes, the Azsdodites, the Ascalonites, the Gethites, the Ekronites & the Hauites. But from the north it is all the londe of the Cananites, and Maara of the Sidonians vnto Aphek, euen vnto the border of the Amorites. Morouer the londe of the Gibiles eastwarde, from Balagad vnder mount Hermon, tyll a mā come vnto Hamath. All they that dwell vpon the mount, from Libanus vnto the warme waters, and all the Sidonians. I wyl dryue them out before the children of Israel: Onely let them be deale out amonge Israel, as I haue commaunded the.
Deuyle thou this lode now to enheritaunce amongst the nyne trybes and f halfe trybe of Manasse. *For the Rubenites g Gaddites with f halfe trybe of Manasse, haue receaued their enheritaunce, which Moses gaue the beyonde Iordane Eastwarde, t acordinge as Moses the seruanunt of the LORDE gaue them the same, from Aroer which lyeth vp by the water syde of Arnon, and the cite in the myddes of the water, q all the coastes of Medba vnto Dibon, and all the cities of Sihon the kyng of the Amarites, which, dwelt at Heszbon, vnto the border of the children of Ammon: and Gilead and f border of Gessur and Maachat, and all mount hermon, and all Basan vnto Salcha: all f kyngdome of Og at Basan, which dwelt at Astaroth and Edrei, that remained yet ouer of Raphaim. But Moses smote them and drome them out. The children of Israel drome not out the Gessurites q Maachathites, but both Gessur and Maachat dwelt amongst the childre of Israel vnto this daye. § But vnto f trybe of the Leuites he gaue no enheritaunce: for the offeringe of the LORDE God of Israel is their enheritaunce, acordinge as he hath promised them. So Moses gaue vnto the trybe of f children of a Ruben after their kynreds, so that their border was Aroer, which lyeth vpon the water syde of Arnon, and the cite in the myddes of the same water, with all the playne feld vnto Medba: Heszbon, and all the cities therof which lye in the playne feld: Dibon, Bamoth Baal, q Beth Baal Meon, Iahza, Kedemoth, Mephaath, Kiriathaim, Sibama, Zeretha Sahar, vpon mount Emek, Beth Peor: the ryuers by Pisga, and Beth Iesimoth, and all the cities vpon the playne, and all the realme of Sihon kyng of the Amarites, which dwelt at Heszbon, whom Moses smote with the prynces of Madian, Eui, Rekem, Zur, Hur, q Reba, the mightie men of kyngge Sihon, which were inhabiteres of the londe. And Balaam the sonne of Beor the prophecier, dyd the children of Israel kyll with the swerde amongst the other that were slayne: and this is the enheritaunce of the children of Ruben amongst their kynreds, cities and vyllages.

Vnto the trybe of the children of Gad amongst their kynreds gaue Moses, so that their border was, Tahezar and all the cities in Gilead, and the halfe londe of the children of Ammon, vnto Aroer, which lyeth before Rabbath: and from Heszbon vnto Ramath Mispe q Betomim: and from Mahanaim vnto the border of Debir. But in the valley, Beth Haram, Beth Nimra, Suchoth and Zaphon (which remayned yet of the realme of Sihon kyngge of Heszbon) and was by Iordane, vnto the edge of the see of Cymeroth, on this syde Iordane eastwarde. This is the inheritance of the children of Gad in their kynreds, cities q vyllages. § Vnto the halfe trybe of the children of Manasse after their kynreds, gaue Moses, so that their border was fró Mahanaim, all Basan, all the kyngdome of Og kyngge of Basan, and all the townes of Iair which lye in Basan, namely thre score cities. And halfe Gilead, Astaroth, Edrei, the cities of the kyngdome of Og at Basan, vnto the children of Machir the sonne of Manasse. This is the halfe porcion of the children of Machir after their kynreds. This is it that Moses deale out vpon the feld of Moab beyonde Iordane ouer against Iericho eastwarde. * But vnto f trybe of Leui gaue Moses no enheritaunce: for the LORDE God of Israel is their enheritaunce, as he hath promised them.

This is it that the children of Israel haue a enhereted in the londe of Canaan,  which Eleasar the prest, and Iosua the sonne of Nun, and the chefe of the fathers amongst the trybes of the children of Israel parted out amongst them. †† But by lot dyd they deuyle it out amõge them, acordinge as the LORDE comanded Moses to geue vnto the nyne trybes and f halfe: for vnto the two trybes and the halfe dyd Moses geue enheritaunce beyonde Iordane. †† But vnto the Leuites he gaue no enheritaunce amongst them. §§ For of the childre of Ioseph there were two trybes, Manasses and Ephraim. Therfore gaue they the Leuites no porcion in the londe, but cities, to dwell therin, and suburbs for their eatell and goodes. ‖‖ Even as the LORDE counaund Moses, so dyd the children of Israel, and deuyd the londe.

Then came forth the children of Juda to Josua at Gilgall: and Caleb said some of Jepunhe the Kanisite sayde vnto him: Thou knowest what LORDE sayde vnto Moses the man of God, concerninge me and the in Cades Bernea. I was forte yeare olde, whan Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE sent me out from Cades Bernea, to spye out the londe, and I broughte him worde agayne, euyn as I had it in my hert. Howbeit my brethren that wente vp with me, discarged the hert of the people: but I folowed "LORDE my God vnto the vtemost.

Then swarte Moses vnto me the same daye, and sayde: The londe wherupon thou hast troden with thy fote, shalbe thine enheritance and thy childrens for euer, because thou hast folowed the LORDE my God vnto the vtemost. And now hath the LORDE letten me lyue, accordinge as he sayde. It is now fyue and forte yeare sence "LORDE spake this vnto Moses, whan Israel walked in the wilderne. And now lo, this daie am I fyue and foure score yeare olde: and am yet as strong to daye, as I was in that daie when Moses sent me out: euyn as my strength was then, so is it now also to fighte, and to go out and in.

Geue me now therfore this mountayne, wherof the LORDE spake in that daye, and thou herdest it the same daye: for now the Enakims dwell theron, and it hath greate and stronge cities: yet happily the LORDE wyll be with me, that I maye dryue the out, as he hath sayde. Then Josua blessed him, said so gauè Hebron vnto Caleb the sonne of Iephune. Therfore was Hebron the enherit-ance of Caleb the sonne of Iephune the kanisite, vnto this daye, because he folowed the LORDE God of Israel vnto the vtemost. But afore tyme was Hebron called Kiriathe-arpa, a greate people were there amongst the Enakims. And the lode ceased out of warre.

The 16. Chapter.

THE lot of the trybe of the children of Juda amonge their kynreds, was the coaste of Edom by the wyldernesse of Zin, which bordereth southwarde on the edge of the south coûtrees. Their south borders were from the vtemost syde of the salt see, that is, from the coast that goeth southwarde, and commeth out from thence toward the easte syde of Acrabim, and goeth forth thorow Zinna, and yet goeth vp from the south toward Cades Bernea, and goeth thorow Hesron, and goeth vp to Adara, fetcheth a compasse aboute Carca, goeth thorow Asmona, and commeth forth to the ryuer of Egipte, so that the see is the ende of the border. Let this be your border southwarde.

But the east border is from the salt see to the vtemost parte of Iordan.

The border northwarde, is from the see coast which is on the edge of Iordan, and goeth vp vnto Beth Hagla, and stretcheth out from the north vnto Betharaba, and commeth vp vnto the stone of Bohen the sonne of Ruben, and goeth vp vnto Debir from the valley of Achor, and from the north coast that is toward Gilgall, which lyeth ouer against Adumim vpwarde, which is on the north syde of the water. Then goeth it vnto the water of Ensenes, and commeth out vnto the *well of Rogell. Then goeth it vp to the valley of the sonne of Hinnam, a longe byside the Iebusite that dwelleth from the southarde, that is Ierusalem: and commeth vp vnto the topp of the mount which lyeth before the valley of Hinnam from the westarde, that bordereth on the edge of the valley of Raphaim toward the north.

Then commeth it from the topp of the same mount vnto the water well of Nephtoah, and commeth out vnto the cities of mount Ephron, and boweth toward Baala, that is Kiriath Iarim, and fetcheth a copasse aboute from Baala westarde vnto mount Seir, and goeth by the north syde of the mount Iarim, that is Chesalon: and cometh downe to Beth-ensem, and goeth thorow Thimna, and breaketh out on the north syde of Acrone, and stretcheth forth toward Sicron, and goeth ouer mount Baala, and commeth out vnto Iabueel: so that their vtemost border is the sea.

The weste border is the greate see. This is the border of the children of Juda round aboute in their kynreds. Caleb the sonne of Iephune had his porcion geue him amoge the children of Juda (as the LORDE comaunderd Josua) namely * Kiriathbara of the father of Enak, that is Hebron.

 3 Reg. 1. b.

And Caleb drave from thence the three sons of Enak, Sesai, Ahiman, and Thalmas begotten of Enak. And from thence he went vp to the inhabiters of Debir. (As for Debir, it was called Kiriath Sepher afore time.) And Caleb sayde: "Who so smyseth Kiriath Sepher and wynneth it, I wyll geue him my daughter Achsa to wyfe. Then Athniel the sonne of Kenas the brother of Caleb wanne it: and he gaue him his daughter Achsa to wife.

And it fortune when they wente in, that she was counceled of her houzbande, to axe a peace of londe of hir father. And she fell downe from the asse. Then sayde Caleb vnto her: What ayleth the? She sayde: Geue me a blessynge, for thou hast geue me a south (and drye) londe: geue me welles of water also. Then gaue he her welles abone and beneth.

This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of Iuda amonge their kynreds. And the cities of the trybe of the children of Iuda, from one to another by the coastes of the Edomites toward the south, were these: Cabzeel, Eder, Jagur, Kina, Dimona, Adada, Kedes, Hazor, lethnam, Siph, Telem, Bealot, Hazor Hadatha, Kiriath Hezron that is Hasor: Amã, Sema, Molada, Hazor Gadda, Hesmon, Beth palet, Hazer Sual, Beer Seba, Bisziothia, Baala, Im, Azem, Eltholad, Chesil, Harma, Ziklag, Madmauna, San Sàna, Lebaoth, Silhim, Ain, Rimô. * These are nyne and twentye cities " their vyllages.

But in the lowe countrees was Esthaol, Zaren, Asna, Saroah, Engannim, Thapua, Enam, Iarmoth, Adullam, Socho, Aseka, Saaraim, Adithaim, Gedera, Giderothim. These are foureteene cities " their vyllages.

* Zena Hadasa, Migdal Gad, Dilean, Mispa, Iakhthiel, Lachis, Bazekath, Eglô, Chabon, Lachmã, Chithlis, Gedoroth, Beth Dagon, Naama, Makeda. These are sixtene cities and their vyllages. Ekron with hir daughters and vyllages. From Ekron vnto the see, all that reacheth vnto Asdod and the vyllages therof: Asdod with the daughters and vyllages therof. Gasa with hir daughters and vyllages vnto the water of Egipte. And the great see is his border.

But vpon the mount was Samir, Iatir, Socho, Damna, Kiriath Sanna, that is Debir: Anab, Esthemo, Annim, Gosen, Holon, Gilo. These are twelve cities and their vyllages. G Maon, Carmel, Siph, Iuta, Israel, Iakdea, Sanoah, Kain, Gibea, Thimma. These are ten cities and their vyllages. Halhul, Bethzur, Gedor, Maarath, Beth Anoth, Elthekon. These are sixe cities and their vyllages. Kiriath Baal (that is Kiriath Iearim) Harabba, two cities " their vyllages. And in the wyldernesse was Betharaba, Middin, Sechachia, Nisan, and the Salt cite, and Engaddi. These are sixe cities and their vyllages. But the Iebusites dwelt at Jerusalem, and the children of Iuda coude not dryue them awaye. So the Iebusites remayne with the children of Iuda at Jerusalem vnto this daye.

The vi. Chapter.

And the lot fell vnto the children of Ephraim fro Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho, vnto the water on the east syde of Iericho, and the wyldernesse, 1 goeth vp from Iericho thorow the mountayne of Bethel, and commeth out from Bethel vnto Lus, and goeth thorow the coast of Arciataroth, and stretcheth downe westwarde vnto the coast of Iaphleti to the border of the lower Bethoron, and vnto Gaser: and the ende therof is by the great see. This the children of Ioseph (Manasses " Ephraim) receaue to enheritaunce.

The Border of the children of Ephraim amonse their kynreds of their enheritaunce from the east, was Ataroth Adar vnto the upper Bethoron, 1 goeth out westwarde by Michmethath that lyeth toward the north, there fetcheth it a compass toward the east syde of the cite Thaanath Silo, and goeth ther thorow from the east vnto Ianoha, and commeth downe from Ianoha vnto Ataroth and Naaratha, and bordreth on Iericho, and goeth out at Iordane. From Thapuah goeth it westwarde vnto Naalkama, and the outgoinge of it is at the see.

This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Ephraim amonse their kynreds. And all the borders, cities with their vyllages of the childre of Ephraim laye scatred amonge the enheritaunce of the children of Manasse. And they droue not out ſ Cananites, which dwelt at Gazer. So ſ Cananites remayned amōge Ephraim vnto this daye, and became tributaries.

The viij. Chapter.

A ND the lot fell vpó the trybe of Manasse (for * he is Iosephs first sonne) and it fell vpou Machir the first sonne of Manasse ſ father of Gilead: for he was a mā of armes, therfore had he Gilead and Basan. It fell also vnto the other children of Manasse, namely vnto ſ childrē of Abieser, the children of Hēlek, the children of Asriel, the children of Sechem, the children of Hēpher, and the children of Semida: These are the childrē of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph, males, amonge their kynreds.

But Zelaphhead the sonne of Hēpher the sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Machir, the sonne of Manasse, had no sones, but doughters, and their names are these: Mahala, Noa, Hagla, Milca, Tirza, and they came before Eliasar the prest, and before Iosua the sonne of Nun, and before the rulers, and sayde: The LORDE commaunded Moses, to geue vs enheritaunce amonſe oure brethren. And so they had enheritaunce geuen them amonſe their fathers brethren, accordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE.

There fell vpon Manasse ten meetlynes without the londe of Gilead and Basan, which lyeth beyde Iordan. For ſ doughters of Manasse receaued enheritaunce amonſe his sones: but the other children of Manasse had the londe of Gilead. And the border of Manasse was frō Aser forth vnto Michmethath, that lyeth before Sichem, and reacheth vnto the righte syde of them of En Tapuah: for the londe of Tapuah fell vnto Manasse, and the border of Manasse is vnto the childrē of Ephraim. Then commeth it downe to Nahelkana towards the south syde of the ryuer cities, which are Ephraims amonſe the cities of Manasse. But from the north is the border of Manasse by the ryuer, and goeth forth by the see syde, south warde vnto Ephraim, and to Manasse northwarde, and the see is his coaste. And it shall border on Aser from the north, and on Iaschar from the easte.

* Gen. 48. c.

So (amōge Ischar and Asser) Manasses had Beth Sean and the towne thereof, and Ieblaam and the towne thereof, and them of Dor and their towne, and them of En Dor and their townes, ἡ them of Taanach and their townes, and them of Mageddo and their towne, and the thirde parte of (the cite) Nophet. And the children of Manasse conde not dryue awaye the inhabiteres of these cities, but the Cananites beganne to dwell in the same londe. Howbeit when the children of Israel were able, they made the Cananites tributaries, and dronente them not out.

Then spake the children of Ioseph vnto Iosua, and sayde: Wherfore hast thou geue me but one porcion and one meete lyne of enheritaunce, and I am yet a greate people, as the LORDE hath blessed me so largely? Then sayde Iosua vnto them: For so much as thou art a greate people, go vp therfore in to ἡ wodd, and make thy selfe rowme there in the londe of the Pheresites and Raphaim, seynge moū Ephraim is to narowe for the.

Then sayde the children of Ioseph: We shall not be able to attayne vnto the mountaynes, for there are yron charettes amonſe all the Cananites, that dwell in the londe of Emek, by whom lyeth Beth Sean and the vyllages thereof, and Iesrael in Emek. Iosua sayde vnto the house of Ioseph, euem to Ephraim and Manasses: Thou art a greate people, ὑ for so much as thou art so greate, thou must not haue one lot, but the mountayne where ἡ wod is, shall be thine: rote ἡ out for ἡ, so shall it be the outgoinge of thy porcion, whan thou drynest out the Cananites, which haue yrō charettes, ὑ are mightie.

The viij. Chapter.

A ND all the multitude of the children of Israel gathered them selues together vnto Silo, and they set vp ῥ Tabernacle of witnesse, and the londe was subdued vnto them. But there were yet seuen trybes of the childrē of Israel, vnto whom they had not denyded their enheritaunce. And Iosua sayde vnto the childrē of Israel: How longe are ye so sloewe, to go and coquire the londe, which the LORDE God of thyre fathers hath geuen you? Chose you thre men out of euery trybe, ῥ I maye sende them, and that they maye get them vp and go thorow the lond, and describ it accordinge to the eneritaunces therof, and come vnto me.
Deuyde the londe in seuen partes. Iudas shall remayne vpon his borders of the south syde, and the house of Joseph shall remayne vpon his borders of the north parte: but des-crib ye the londe in seuen partes, and brynge them vnto me, then shal I cast y lot for you before the LORDE oure God. * For the Leuites have no porcion amonge you, but the presthode of the LORDE is their enheritaunce. "As for Gad y Ruben and y halfe trybe of Manasse, they have receaued their enheritaunce beyonde Iordane eastwarde, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE gane them.

Then the men gat vp, to go their waye.
And when they were aboute to go for to describe the londe, Josua commaunded them, and sayde: Go youre waye, and walke thorow
the londe, and describ it, and come agayne vnto me, that I maye cast y lot for you before the LORDE at Silo. So the men departed, and wente thorow the londe, and describled it in seuen partes vpon a letter acordinge to the cities, and came to Josua in ouer to the hoost at Silo. Then Josua cast the lot ouer them at Silo before the LORDE, and there distributed the londe amounge the children of Israel, vnto every one his parte.

And the lot of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin fell acordinge to their kynreds, and the border of their lot wente out betwene
the children of Iuda y the children of Joseph.
And their border was on y north quarter of Iordane, and goeth vp from the north syde of Iericho, and commeth vp to the mountayne westwarde, and goeth out by the wyldernes of Bethauen, and goeth from thence toward Lus, euen by the south syde of Lus (that is Bethel) and commeth downe vnto Ataroth Adar by the mountayne which lyeth on y south syde of the lower Bethoron. Then boweth it downe, and fetcheth a compass tu unto the south west quarter from the mount that lyeth ouer agaynst Bethoron toward the south, and goeth out vnto Kiriath Baal, y is Kiriath Iearim, a cite of the children of Iuda.
This is the west border.

But the south border is from Kiriath-Iearim forth, and goeth out towarde the west, and commeth forth vnto y water well of Nepthoah:

and goeth downe by the edge of the mount, that lyeth before the valley of the sonne of Hinnam: and goeth downe thorow the valley of Hinnam on y south syde of the Iebusites, and commeth downe to the well of Rogell, and stretcheth from the northwarde, and commeth out vnto En Semes, and commeth forth to the heapes that lye vp towarde Adumim, and commeth downe vnto the stone of Bohen the sonne of Ruben, and goeth a longe besyde y playne feld which lyeth north warde, and commeth downe vnto y playne feld, and goeth besyde Beth Hagla that lyeth towarde the north, and his ende is at the north border of the Salt see, vnto y edge of Iordane south warde. This is the south border.

But Iordane shall be the ende of the east quarter. This is the enheritaunce of y children of Ben Iamin in their borders rounde aboute, amonge their kynreds.

The cities of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin amóge their kynreds are these:
Iericho, Beth Hagla, Emeck Kezitz, Betharaba, Zemaraîm, Bethel, Auin, Haphar, Apha, Caphar Amonai, Aphni, Gaba: these are twolue
ities and their vyllages.

Gibeon, Rama, Beeroth, Mispa, Caphira, Moza, Rogell, Thareala, Zela, Eleph, and the Iebusites, that is Jerusalem, Gibeath, Kiriath:
these are foureteene cities and their vyllages.
This is the enheritaunce of the children of Ben Iamin in their kynreds.

The 9rst or Chapter.

THEN fell the seconde lot of the trybe of the children of Simeon acordinge to their kynreds, and their enheritaunce was amonge the enheritaunce of y children of Iuda. * And to their enheritaunce they had Beer Seba, Molada, Hazar Sual, Êaala, Azem, El Tholad, Bethul, Harmâ, Ziklag, Betha Markaboth, Hazar Sussa, Beth Lebaoth, and Saruhen: these are thirtene cities y their vyllages. Ain, Rimon, Ether, Asan: these are foure cities and their vyllages. And all y vyllages that lye aboute the cities vnto Balath Beer Ramath towarde the south. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Simeon in their kynreds: for the enheritaunce of the children of Simeon is vnder the porcion of the children of Iuda. For so much as the enheritaunce of the children of Iuda was to

* Josu. 12 b. * 1 Par. 5. a. greatest for them, therefore inherited the children of Simeon amongst their inheritance.

The third lot fell upon the children of Zabulon after their kynreds. And the border of their inheritance was from Sarid, northward to the border of Meroth, and tooketh out the river that floweth over against Jokneam: and turned from the border of Jokneam, and camedeth out to the borders of Issachar, and to the border of Zabulon, and reacheth out upon the borders of Ephraim, and divided the same for the inheritance of Zabulon, and gave them their inheritance.

The fourth lot fell upon the children of Issachar after their kynreds, from their borders, which were Issrael, Chessuloth, Sunem, Hapharahaim, Sion, Anarahar, Raabith, Kison, Abiez, Kemeth, En Ganim, Enhada, Beth Pazes, and bordered upon Thabor, Sahazima, Beth Senes, and all the going out of the same was to Jordane. These were sixtene cities and their vyllages. This is the inheritance of the children of Issachar in their kynreds in their vyllages.

The fifth lot fell upon the children of Aser after their kynreds. And their border was Helkath, Hali, Beten, Achsaph, Alamelech, Amed, Miseal; and bordered upon Carmel and the sea, and upon Sichor, and Libnah, and turned towards the east unto Beth Daggon, and bordered upon Zabulon, and upon the valley of Iephtael, and toward the northide of Beth Emek and Negiel: and commeth out upon Cabul upon the left side of Ebron, Rehob, Hamon and Canon, vnto great Sidon. And turned towards Rama, vnto the strong cite of Zor, and turned towards Hossa, and goeth out vnto the see, after ye meetlyne toward Achiab, Vma, Aphke, Rehob.

These are two and twentye cities and their vyllages. This is the inheritance of the children of Aser in their kynreds cities and vyllages.

The sixth lot fell upon the children of Nephtali in their kynreds. And their border was from Heleph to Lehon Zaanaim, Adar Nekeb, Jabne El vnto Lakum, and goeth out vnto Iordan, and turned westward to Asnoth Thabor, and camedeth out from thence vnto Hukok, and bordered upon Zabulon toward the south, and upon Asser toward the west, and upon Iuda by Iordan toward the east: and hath stronge cities, Zidlimzer, Hamath Rakath, Chinnaret, Adamah, Rama, Hazor, Kedes, Edrei, En Hazor, Iereon, Migdal Elhar, Beth Anath, Beth Sames. These are nyentene cities and their vyllages. This is the inheritance of the children of Nephtali in their kynreds, cities and vyllages.

The seventh lot fell vpon the trybe of the children of Dan after their kynreds. And the border of their inheritance was Zarea, Esthaol, Isrames, Salabin, Aialon, Iethla, El, Thimmata, Ekon, Eltheke, Gibeoth, Baalath, Iehud, Baerbarak, Gat, Rimon, Me Iarkon, Rakon with the border by Iapho, and upon the same goeth the border of the children of Dan out. And the children of Dose went vp, and foughte against Lesem, and wanne it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and took it in possession, dwelt therein, and called it Dan, after ye name of their father. This is the inheritance of the trybe of the children of Dan in their kynreds, cities and vyllages.

And wha ye lode was all parted out with the borders thereof, the children of Israel gave Josua the sonne of Nun, an inheritance amongst them, and (according to the commandement of the Lorde) they gave him ye cite that he required, namely, Thimmah Searah, vpon most Ephraim: there by they dwelt therein.

These are the inheritances which Eleasar the prest and Josua ye sonne of Nun, and the chepest of the fathers amongst ye tribes, devided out by lot vnto the children of Israel at Silo before the Lorde, even before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnes, and so they ended the deyndinge out of the londe.

The 17. Chapter.

And the Lorde spake vnto Josua, and saide: Speake to the children of Israel: Geue amongst you theire cities, whereof I spake vnto you by Moses, that a deedsleyer which

Then appointed they Kedes in Galile upon mount Naphtali, and Sechem upon mount Ephraim, and Kiriatharba, that is Hebron upon mount Iuda. And beydé Iordane on the east syde of Iericho, they gaue Beser in the wildernes vpon the playne out of the trybe of Ruben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the trybe of Gad, and Golanh in Basan out of the trybe of Manasse.

These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the strangers which dwelt amongst them, that whosoeuer had slayne a soule vnavarres, might flye thither, that he shulde not be put to death by the auenger of bloude, thyll he had stonde before the congregacion.

The 31. Chapter.

THEN the chefe fathers amonge the Leuites came forth vnto Eleasar the prest and to Josua the sonne of Nun, and to the avncient fathers amonge the trybes of the children of Israel, and speke vnto them at Silo in the londe of Canaan, and sayde: *The LORDE commaundedy by Moses, that we shulde haue cities geuen vs to dwell in, and the suburbs of the same for oure catell. Then the children of Israel gaue of their enheritance these cities and the suburbs therof, vnto the Leuites, accordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE.

And the lot fell vpon the kynred of the Kahathites, and the children of Aaron the prest amongst the Leuites, had by the lot thyrtene cities of the trybe of Iuda, of the trybe of Simeon, and of the trybe of Ben Iamin. The other kynred of Kahath, had by the lot ten cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, of the trybe of Dan, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse.

But the children of Gerson of the same kynred had by the lot thyrtene cities, of the trybe of Isachar, of the trybe of Asser, of the trybe of Naphtali, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse at Basan.

The children of Merari of their kyred had twelve cities, of the trybe of Ruben, of the trybe of Gad, and of the trybe of Zabulon. So the children of Israel gaue these cities and ther suburbs vnto the Leuites by lot, as the LORDE commaundedy by Moses.

Of the trybe of the children of Iuda, and of the trybe of the children of Simeon, they gaue these cities (which they named by name) vnto the children of Aaron of the kynreed of the Kahathites amonge the children of Leui: for the first lot was theyrs.

So they gaue them Kiriatharba, which was the fathers of Enak, that is Hebron vpon the mount Iuda, and the suburbs therof rounde aboute. But the feld of the cite and the vyllages therof, gaue they vnto Caleb the nome of Iephune for his possession.

Thus gaue they vnto the children of Aaron the prest, the cite of the deed slyers, Hebron and the suburbs therof, Libn and the suburbs therof, Iathir and the suburbs therof, Esthuma and the suburbs therof, Holon and the suburbs therof, Debir and the suburbs therof, Ain and the suburbs therof, Iuta and the suburbs therof, Beth Semes and the suburbs therof, euyn nyne cities of these two trybes.

But of the trybe of Ben Iamin they gaue foure cities, Gibeon and the suburbs therof, Gaba, and the suburbs therof, Anathot and the suburbs therof, Almon and the suburbs therof: so that all the cities of the children of Aaron the prest were thirtene with their suburbs.

The kynreds of the other children of Kahath the Leuites, had by their lot foure cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, and they gaue the cite of the deed slyers, Sech and the suburbs therof vpon mount Ephraim Gaser.
and the suburbs therof, Kibzaim and the suburbs therof, Bethron and the suburbs therof, Deut. 12.11

Of the trybe of Dan four cities, Elteke and the suburbs therof, Gibthon and the suburbs therof, Aialon and the suburbs therof, Bethrim and the suburbs therof. Of the halfe trybe of Manasses two cities, Thaanach and the suburbs therof, Bethasra, and the suburbs therof: so that all the cities of the other children of the kynred of Kahath, were ten with their suburbs.

But vnto the children of Gerson amonse the kynreds of the Leuites were geuen, Of the halfe trybe of Manasse two cities, the fre cite for the deedslyer, Gola in Basan and the suburbs therof, Beastrha, and the suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Isachar four cities, Kision and the suburbs therof, Dabrach and the suburbs therof, Iarmuth and the suburbs therof, Engannim and the suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Asser four cities, Miseal, Abdon, Helkath and Rehob with the suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Nephtali thre cities, the fre cite Kedes (for the deedslyer) in Galile, Hamoth, Dor, and Karthan with the suburbs therof: so that all the cities of the kynred of the Gersonites were thirtene with their suburbs.

Vnto the kynreds of Merari the other Leuites were geuen, Of the trybe of Zabulon four cities, Iakneam, Kartha, Dimma and Nahalal with the suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Ruben four cities, Bezer, Iahza, Kedemoth and Mephaat with their suburbs. Of the trybe of Gad four cities, the fre cite for the deedslyer, Ramoth in Gilead, Mahanaim, Hesbon and Iaeser with their suburbs: so that all the cities of the children of Merari amonge the kynreds of the other Leuites, were twelue. Thus all the cities of the Leuites amonge possession of the children of Israel, were eight and fortye with their suburbs. And these cities were so deale out, that every one had their suburbs rounde aboute, the one as the other.

Thus the LORDE gaue the children of Israel all the londe, which he had sworne vnto their fathers to geue: they take possession of it, and dwelt therein. And the LORDE gaue the rest before all those were aboute them like as he sware vnto their fathers, none of their enemies stode agaynst the, but all their enemies deluyed he in to their hande. And their myssed nothinge of all the good that the LORDE had promysed vnto the house of Israel, it came every wyth.

The 11. Chapter.

THEN Josua called the Rubenites and the Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto them: Ye haue kepte all that Moses the seruant of the LORDE commaunded you, and haue harkened vnto my voyce in all that I haue commaundid you. Ye haue not forsaken youre brethren a longe season, vnto this daye, and haue wayted vpon the commaundement of the LORDE youre God. For so muche now as the LORDE youre God hath broughte youre brethren to rest, as he promysed them, turne you now, and go youre waye to youre tentes in to the londe of youre possession, which Moses the seruant of the LORDE gaue you beynde Iordane.

But take diligent hede now, that ye do acordynge to the commaundement and lawe which Moses the seruant of the LORDE hath commaunded: That ye loue the LORDE youre God, and walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, and clue vnto him, and serve him with all youre hert and with all youre soule. So Josua blessed them, and let them go. And they wente vnto their tentes.

Vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse had Moses geuen possession at Basan: vnto the other halfe gaue Josua amonge their brethren on this syde Iordane westwarde. And whan he let them go to their tentes and blessed them, he sayde vnto them: Ye come home agayne with greate good vnto youre têtes, with exceedinge moch catell, syluer, golde, brasse, yron and rayment, distribute therefor the spoyle of youre enemies amonge youre brethren.

So the Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasse returned, and wente from the children of Israel out of Silo (which lyeth in the londe of Canaan) to go in to the countre of Gilead to the londe of their possession, that they mighte possesse it, acordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE by Moses. And whan they came vnto the heapes by Iordane, which ly in the londe of Canaan, the same Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasses byyled there besyde Ior-

Thus sayeth the whole congregacion of the LORDE vnto you: *What trespace is this, ye haue trespaced agaynst the God of Israel, that ye shulde turne backe from ¥ LORDE this daye, to builde you an altar, for to fall away from the LORDE?
† Haue we not ynoogh of the wickednesse of Peor? from the which we are not yet clensed this daye, and there came a plague amonge the congregation of the LORDE: and ye turne you backe this daye from the LORDE, and this daye are ye fallen away from the LORDE, that he maye be wroth to daye or tomorrow at the whole congregation of the LORDE.

¥If the londe of youre possession be vncleane, then come ouer in to the londe that the LORDE possesseth, where the dwellyng of the LORDE is, and take possessions amonge vs, and fall not away from the LORDE and from vs, to builde you an altar without the lorde of the LORDE our God. †Did not Achan the sonne of Serah trespass in the thinge that was damned, and the wrath came ouer ¥ whole congregacion of Israel and he wente not downe alone for his myszdede?

Then answered the children of Ruben, and the children of Gad, and the haile trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto the heads and prynces of Israel: The mightie God ¥ LORDE, the mightie God the LORDE knoweth, and Israel knoweth also, ye this be a trangressyng or trespassyng agaynst the LORDE, then let it not helpe vs this daye: ¥If we haue buylked the altar, because we wolde turne awaye backe from the LORDE, to offre burnt-offerynges or meatofferynges theron, or to make any deedofferynges vpon it, then let the LORDE require it: And ye we haue not done it rather for very feare of this thinge, and sayde: To daye or tomorrow mighte youre children saye vnto oure children:

What haue ye to do with the LORDE the God of Israel? The LORDE hath set Iordane for a border betwene vs and you ye children of Ruben and Gad, ye haue no porcion in the LORDE: By this shulde youre children makeoure children to turne awaye from the feare of the LORDE.

Therfore sayde we: Let vs make oure children an altar, not for sacrifice, ner for burntofferinges, ¥but that it maye be a toké betweene vs and you, and oure posterities, that we maye serue the LORDE in his sighte with oure burntofferinges, deedofferinges, and other offeringes: and ¥ youre children to daye or tomorrow neade not to saye vnto oure children: Ye haue no parte in the LORDE.

And we sayde: But ye they shulde speake so vnto vs, or to oure posterities to daye or tomorrow, then maye we saye: Beholde the symilitude of ¥ altar of the LORDE, which oure fathers made, not for sacrifce, ner for burntofferynges, but for a wyntnesse betweene vs and you.

God forbydde, that we shulde fall awaye from the LORDE, to turne backe from him this daye, and to buylde an altar for sacrifice, for burntofferinges and for eny presente, without ¥ altar of the LORDE our God, that stondeth before his Habitation.

But when Phineas the prest, and the chefe of the congregacion, the prynces of Israel which were with him, herde these worde, that the children of Ruben, Gad, and Manasse ha done spaken, they pleased them well. And Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest sayde vnto the children of Rubè, Gad and Manasse: This daye we knowe, that ¥ LORDE is amonge vs, in that ye haue not trespaced against the LORDE in this dede. Now haue ye deluyed the children of Israel out of the hande of the LORDE.

Then Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest, and the rulers returned out of the londe of Gilead, from the children of Ruben and Gad vnto ¥ londe of Canaã to the children of Israel, and brought them worde agayn the matter.

Then were the children of Israel well côtente with the thinges. And they prayed the God of Israel, and sayde nomore that they wolde go vp agaynst them with an armee, to destroye the londe that the childrē of Ruben and Gad dwelt in. And y childrē of Ruben and Gad called the name of the altare: This altare be witnesse betwene vs, that the LORDE is God.

The r11. Chapter.

And after a longe season, when the LORDE had broughte Israel to rest from all their enemies rounde aboute: and Josua was now olde and well stricken in age, he called all Israel and their Elders, heads, judges, and officers, and sayde vnto them: I am olde and well aged, and ye hane sene all that the LORDE youre God hath done vnto all these nacions in youre sighte. For the LORDE youre God himself hath foughte for you. Beholde, I haue parted amonge you y renaunt of the nacions by lot, vnto every trybe his heritaunce from Iordane forth, and all the nacions whom I haue rote out vnto the greate see westarde.

And the LORDE youre God shall thrust them out before you, and dryue them awaye from you, that ye maye haue there londe in possession, as the LORDE youre God hath promised you. Be stōge now therefore, that ye maye observe and do all that is wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses: so that ye turne not aside from it, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte: that ye come not amonge y renaunt of these nacions, which are with you: And se that ye make no mention ner sweare by the names of their goddes, nether serue them, ner bowe youre selues vnto them: But cleue vnto the LORDE youre God, as ye haue done vnto this daye: the shall the LORDE dryue awaye greate and mightie nacions before you, like as there hath no man bene able to stonde before you vnto this daye. *One of you shall chace a thousande: for the LORDE youre God fighteth for you, acordinge as he promised you. Take diligent hede therefore vnto youre soules, that ye louse the LORDE youre God.

But ye shall turne backe, and cleue vnto these other nacions, and make marriages with them, so that ye come amōge them, and they amōge you, be ye sure then, that the LORDE youre God shall nomore dryue out all these nacions before you, but they shall be vnto you a snare and net, and prickes in youre sydes, and thornes in youre eyes, vntyll he haue destroyed you from the good lode, which the LORDE youre God hath gien you.

Beholde, this daye do I goe the waye of all the worlde, and ye shall knowe even from all youre hert and from all youre soule, that there hath not sayled one word of all the good that the LORDE youre God promised you. Now like as all the good is come that the LORDE youre God promised you: ye then shall the LORDE cause all euell to come vpoun you, tylly he haue destroyed you from this good londe, which the LORDE youre God hath gien you: ye shall transgresse ye couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, which he hath commaundde you. And ye shall the wrath of the LORDE waxe whote oner you, ye shall shortly destroye you out of the good londe, ye shall transgresse ye couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, which he hath commaundde you.

The r11. Chapter.

IOSUA gathered all the trybes of Israel together vnto Sichem, and called the Elders of Israel, the heads, judges and officers. And whā they were come before God, he sayde vnto all the people: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: Youre fathers dwelt afoore time beyde water, Abrahā Nahor with Tarah their father serue other goddes. ††Then toke I youre father Abraham beyonde the water, and causd him to walke in the londe of Canaan, multiplied his sede, and gaue him Isaac, and vnto Isaac I gaue Iacob and Esau, and gaue Esau moit Seir to possessse. ‡‡As for Iacob, his childrē, they wente downe in to Egipte.

Then sent I Moses and Aaron, and plaged Egipte as I have done amongh the. After † † brought I youre fathers out of Egipte. And while ye came to ‡ see, and the Egipcians folowed vpon your fathers with charrettes and horse men vnto the reed see, then cryed they vnto the LORDE, which put a darknesse betwene you and the Egipcians, and broughte the see vpon them, and overwhelmed them. And youre eyes haue sene what I dyd to Ḥ Egypcians, ġ ye dwelt in Ḥ wilderness a longe season. * And I broughte you in to Ḥ londe of the Amorites, which dwelt beionde Iordane: Ḥ whā they fought agaynst ye, I deluyed them in to youre hande, that ye mighte have their countre in possession, and I destroyed them before ye. † Then Balac the sonne of Ziphor the kyng of the Moabites gat him vp, and fought agaynst Israel: and he sente and bade call Balaam the sonne of Beor, to curse ye, neuertheless I wolde not heare him, but I blessed ye, and deluyed ye out of his hande.

And when ye wente ouer Iordane, and came vnto Jericho, the citesyns of Jericho foughte agaynst ye, the Amorites, Pheresites, Cananites, Hethites, Girgosisites, Heuites, ġ Ieuites: howbeit I deluyed the ġ in to youre hande. ‡ And I sent hornettes before ye, which drue them out before ye, namely the two kynges of ġ Amorites: not thorow swerde, ner thorow thy bowe. ¶ And I haue geuen ye a londe wherup ye bestowed no laboure, and cities which ye haue not buylded, that ye mighte dwell therein, and that ye might eat of the vynyards and olyue trees which ye haue not planted. Feare the LORDE now therefore, and serue him perfectly and in the truth, and let go the goddes, whom yeur fathers serued beyonde the water and in Egipte, and serue ye ġ LORDE.

But yf ye like not to serue the LORDE, the chese ye this daye whom ye wyll serue: the God whom yeur fathers serued beyonde ġ water, or ġ goddes of the Amorites, in whose lode ye dwell. As for me and my house, we wyll serue the LORDE. Then answered the people, and saide: God forbidde, that we shulde forseeke the LORDE, ġ serue other goddes. For the LORDE oure God brought vs and oure fathers out of the londe of Egipte fro the house of bondage, and did socch grete tokens before oure eyes, and preserued vs all ġ wyse that we wente, and amonge all the nacions, whom we trauayled by. And the LORDE thrust out before vs all the people of the Amorites that dwelt in the londe. Therfore wyll we also serue the LORDE, for he is oure God.

Josua sayde vnto the people: Ye can not serue the LORDE: for he is an holy God, mightie, and gellous, which spareth not youre trangressions and synnes. But yf ye forseeke the LORDE, and serue a straunge god, then shall the LORDE turne him, and do ye euell, and consume ye, after that he hath done ye good. The people sayde vnto Josua: Not so, but we will serue the LORDE. Then sayde Josua vnto the people: Ye are witnesse oure oure selues, that ye haue chosen you the LORDE, to serue him. And they sayde: Yee. Then put awaye from you (sayde he) the straunge goddes ġ are amonge you, and enclyne youre hert vnto the LORDE the God of Israel. And the people sayde vnto Josua: We wyll serue the LORDE oure God, and be obedient vnto his voyce. § So Josua made a covenaut with the people ġ same daye, and laied statutes ġ lawes before them at Sichem.

And Josua wrote this acte in the boke of the lawe of God,⁴ and toke a grete stone, ġ set it vp there under an oke, which was in ġ Sanctuary of ġ LORDE, and sayde vnto all the people: Beholde, this stone shall be witnesse ouer ye: For it hath herde all the worde of the LORDE, which he hath spoken vnto vs, and shall be a witnesse ouer ye, that ye denye not youre God. So Josua let the people go every one to his enheritance.

And it fortunated after these actes,⁵ Ḥ Josua the sonne of Nun Ḥ seruad of the LORDE dyed, when he was an hundreth and ten yeare olde, and was buried in the border of his enheritance at Thimmath Serah, which lyeth on the mount Ephraim, on the north side of mount Gaas. And the children of Israel serued the LORDE as longe as Josua lyued, and the Elders (that lyued longe after Josua) which knewe all the worke of the LORDE, that he had done vnto Israel. ¶ The bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel had broughte out of Egipte, buried they at Sichem, in the pese of the londe, Ḥ Iacob boughte of the children of Hemor Ḥ father of Sichem for an hundreth pens, and was the enheritancye of the children of Ioseph. Eleasar the sonne of Aaron died also, and they buried him at Gibeath, which was Phineas his sonnes, that was geuen him vpon mount Ephraim.

The Ben Iamites optayne wyues in Israel, whō the Israelites had sworne not to gene them.
The boke of the Judges.

AFTER the death of Iosua the children of Israel axed the LORDE, and sayde: Who shall go vp be our captayne of warre against Cananites? The LORDE sayde: Iuda shall go vp. Beholde, I haue deluyered the loude in to his hande. Then sayde Iuda vnto his brother Simeon: Go vp with me in to my lot, and let vs fighte against the Cananites, then wyl I go agayne with the in to thy lot: So Simeon wente with him.

Now when Iuda wente vp the LORDE deluyered the Cananites and Pheresites in to their handes, they slewe t̓e thousande men at Besek: they foude Adoni Besek at Besek, they foughte agaynst him, and slew the Cananites and Pheresites. But Adoni Besek fled, and they followed after him: and when they had ouertaken him, they cut of the th̓obes of his handes and fete.

Then sayde Adoni Besek: Thre score and ten kynges with the th̓obes of their handes fete cut of, gathered vp the meate was lefte under my table. Now as I haue done, so hath God reward̓d me agayne. And he was broughte vnto Jerusalem, where he dyed.

But children of Iuda foughte agaynst Jerusalem, and wānte it, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and set fyre vp on the cite. Then wente the children of Israel downe, to fighte agaynst Cananites, dwelling vp on the mount, and toward the southe, and in the valleys. And Iuda wente agaynst the Cananites, which dwelt at Hebron. (As for Hebron, it was called Kiriatharba afore tyme) and they smote Sesai, Achiman, and Thalmai.

And from thence he wente agaynst inhabitors of Debir (but Debir was called Kiriath Sepher aforetyme.) And Caleb sayde: He sayeth Kiriath Sepher, it wānte it, I wyl geue him my daughter Achsa to wife. Then Athmîel the sonne of Kenas, Caleb̓s yongest brother wānte it. And he gaued him his daughter Achsa to wife. And it fortune as they wete in, she was counselor of housbande, to axe a pece of loude of his father. And she fell from the ass. Thē sayde Caleb vnto her: What ayleth thē? She sayde: Geue me a blessynge, for thou hast geuen me a south lyng loude, geue me also a watery loude. Then gaued he her a loude that was watery a boue and beneth.

And the children of Kenyte Moses brother in lawe, went vp out of the palme cite, with the children of Juda in to the wyldernes of Juda, that lyeth on south syde of the cite Arad: and wente their waye, dwelt amonge the people. And Iuda wente with his brother Simeon, they smote the Cananites at Zepath, damned them, called the name of the cite Horma. Also Iuda also wanne Gasa with the borders thereof, Ascalon with his borders, Accaron with the coastes thereof. And the LORDE was with Iuda, so that he conquered the mountaynes: but that they dwelt in the valleye coulde he not conquere, because they had yron charettes. And accordinge as Moses had saynde, they gaue Hebron vnto Caleb, which droute out the thre sonsnes of Enak. Howbeit children of Ben Iamin droute not out Iebusites which dwelt at Jerusalem, but Iebusites dwelt amonge the children of Ben Iamin at Jerusalem vnto this daye.

Likewise the children of Joseph wete vp also vnto Bethel, the LORDE was with the. And the house of Joseph spayed out Bethel (which afore tyme was called Lus) and the watch men sawe a man goinge out of the cite, and saide vnto him: Shewe vs where we maye come in to the cite, we wyl shewe mercy vpon the. And when he had shewed them where they mighte come in to the cite, they smote thē cite with the edge of the swerde: but they let the man go in all his frendes.

Then wete the same man vp in to the countre of the Hethites, buyld a cite, and called it Lus, so is the name of it yet vnto this daye. And Manasses droute not out Beth Sean with the vyllages thereof, nor Thaenah with the vyllages thereof, nor the inhabitors of Dor with the vyllages thereof: nor the inhabitors of Iebelan with the vyllages thereof, nor the inhabitors of Mageddo with the vyllages thereof, and Cananites beganne to dwell in the same loude. But when Israel was mightie, he made the Cananites tributaries, and droute them not out.
In like manner Ephraim droue not out, & Cananites that dwelt at Gaser, but the Cananites dwelt amonge them at Gaser.

Zabulon also droue not out the inhabiter of Kitron and Nahalol, but they Cananites dwelt amonge them, & were tributaries.

Asser droue not out they inhabiter of Aco, & they inhabiter of Sidon, of Ahelab, of Achib, of Helba, of Aphik & of Rehob, but they Assirites dwelt amouge the Cananites that dwelt in the lode, for they droued them not out.

Nephtali droue not out they inhabiter of Beth Semes, & Beth Anath, but dwelt amouge the Cananites which dwelt in the lode: howbeit they of Beth Semes and of Beth Anath were tributaries.

And the Amorites subdued the childre of Dan upon the mountaine, and suffer them not to come dowe in to the valley. And the Amorites beganne to dwell vpon mount Heres at Aiolon and at Saalbim. Howbeit they hande of their house was to sore for them, and they became tributaries. And the border of the Amorites was, as a man goeth vnto Acrabim, and from the rocke, & from the toppe.

The iij. Chapter.

BUT there came vp a messaunguer of the LORDE from Gilgall vnto Bochim, and sayde: I haue caried you vp hither out of Egypte, and broughte you in to the londe that I sware vnto youre fathers, & saide: *I wyl never breake my couenaunt with you, that ye shulde make no couenaunt with the indwellers of this londe, but breake downe their altares: Neuerthelesse ye haue not harkened vnto my voyce. Wherfore haue ye done this? Then saide I moroner: I wil not druye them oute before you, that they maye be a fall vnto you, and their goddes a snare. And when they messaunguer of the LORDE had spoken these wordes vnto all the children of Israel, the people lifte vp their voyce, & wepte, and called vpon the name of the place Bochim, and offered there vnto the LORDE.

For whan Iosua had sente awaye his people, and the childre of Israel were gone, every one to his inheritance, for to take possession of the londe, the people serued the LORDE as longe as Iosua lyued and his Elders, which lyued longe after Iosua, and saue all the greate workes of the LORDE, which he dyd for Israel.

Now whan Iosua the sonne of Nun, the seruaunt of the LORDE, was deede (whan he was an hundred and ten yeare olde) they buried him in the border of his inheritance at Timnath Heres vpon mount Ephraim on the north syde of mount Gaas. And whan all the same generation was gathered vnto their fathers, there came vp after them another generation, which knew not the LORDE, nor the worke that he had done for Israel.

"Then wroughte the children of Israel euery before the LORDE, and serued Baalim, and forsoke the LORDE the God of their fathers (which broughte them out of the londe of Egypte) and followed other goddes & the goddes of the nations that dwelt rounde aboute them, & worshipped them, & displeased the LORDE: for they forsoke the LORDE euer more and more, and serued Baal and Astaroth.

Then their wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vp Israel, & he deluyereth the in to the handes of those spoyle the, that they mighte spoyle them, & solde the in to the handes of their enemies roinde aboute, & they were not able to withstande their enemies eny more, but what waye so euer they wolden out, they haide of the LORDE was agaynst the to their hurt (even as the LORDE saide and sware vnto them) and they were sore oppressed.

Now whan the LORDE rassed them Judges, which helped them out of the hande of soch as spoyle the, they followed not the Judges nether, but wente a whoringe after other goddes, & worshipped them, and were soone gone out of the waye their fathers walked in, to heare the commaundementes of the LORDE, & dyd not as they dyd.

But whan the LORDE rassed Judges vnto them, the LORDE was with Judges, and helped them out of the hande of their enemies, as longe as the Judges lyued. For the LORDE had pitie of their complaintes, which they made ouer those they subed the & oppressed them.

Neuerthelesse when the Judges dyd, they turnede backe, & marred all more the their fathers, so that they followed other goddes to serue them and to bowe them selues vnto
THESE are the nations whom the LORDE suffred to remayne, y by them he mighte proue Israel, which had no vnderstandinge in the warres of Canaan: onely because y the trybes of the childre of Israel might knowe x lerne to warre, which afore had no knowledge thereof, namely: The fyue lordses of y Philistynes, x all the Cananites, x Sidonians, x the Hethites y dwelt vpon mount Libanus, fro mount Baal Hermon, vntyll a man come vnto Hemath. The same remayned, that Israel mighte be proued by them, that it mighte be knowne whether they wolde herken to the commandementes of the LORDE, which he commaunded their fathers by Moses. Now when the children of Israel dwelt thus amouge the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuities x Iebusites, they toke their daughters towyues, and gau their daughters vnto their sonsnes, x serued their goddes, and wroughte wickednes before the LORDE, x forgat the LORDE their God, x serued Baalim x Astrath. Then y wrath of y LORDE waxed whote ouer Israel, x he solde thè vnder the hade of Cusan Risathaim kyng of Mesopotamia, x so y childre of Israel serued Cusan Risathaim viij. yeare. Thè cried the childre of Israel vnto the LORDE, x the LORDE rayes the vp a sauioure which deluyered thè, namely, x Athnien x sonne of Kenas, Caleb's yongest brother. And the sprete of the LORDE cam vpon him, x he was judge in Israel, x wente out a warre fare. And y LORDE deluyered Cusan Risathaim the kyng of Syria in to his hade, so y his hande was to struge for him. y Then was the londe in rest fortye yeares. And Athnien the sonne of Kenas dyed.

But the children of Israel dyed yet more euell before the LORDE. Then the LORDE strengthened Eglon the kyng of y Moabites agaynst y childre of Israel, because they wrought wickednesse before y LORDE. And he gathered vnto him y childre of Ammon, x the Amalechites, x wepte and smote Israel, and conquered the lircite of the palme trees. And the children of Israel serued Eglon y kyng of y Moabites eightene yeare. Thè cried they vnto the LORDE. And the LORDE rayes the vp a sauioure, namely Ehud the sonne of Gera y sonne of Iennini, which was a man that mighte do nothinge with his righte hande.

And whè the childre of Israel sent a present by him vnto Eglon the kyng of the Moabites, Ehud made him a two edged dagger of a spanne longe, x gyrded it vnder his garmèt vpò his righte thye, x broughte y present vnto Eglon the kyng of y Moabites. As for Eglon, he was a very fat man.

And whan he had deluyered the presente, x he let the people go that had caried the present, and he hymselfe turnede backe from the Idols at Gilgall, x caused to saye thus (vnto the kyng:) I haue a secrete thinge to tell the O kyng. And he commaunded to kepe sylence, x all they that stode aboute him, wente out from him.

And Ehud came in vnto him. He sat in a syled Sommer perler, which was for him selfe alone. And Ehud sayde: I haue somwhat to saye vnto the of God. Thè rose he vp fro his seate. But Ehud put forth his lefte hande, x toke the dagger from his righte thye, x thrust it in to his bely, so y the hefte wente in also after the blade, x the fatt closed the hefte: for he drue not y dagger out of his bely, x y fylthines departed fro him. But Ehud gat him out at the backe dore, x put to y dore after him, and lockte it.

Now whan he was gone, his seruaunts came in, and sawe that the dore of the Sommer perler was lockte, and they sayde: peraduenture he is gone to the preyse in the syled Sommer perler.
But when they had wayted so lòge tyl they were ashamed (for no man opened the perle dore) they toke the keye, and opened it. Beholde, then lave their lorde deed vpon the earth. As for Éhud, he was gotten awaye, whyle they made so longe tariçe, τ he wente ouer by the Idols, and ramm his wyve vnto Seirath.

And whan he came in * he blew y trompet vpó mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel wente with him from the mount, and he before them, and he saide vnto them: Followe me, for the LORDE hath delyuered the Moabites your enemies in to your hande. And they followed him, τ whanne τ ferde of Iordane, τ goeth towards Moab, τ suffred no man to go ouer, and at τ same tyme they smote of the Moabites vpó a ten thousande men, all nobles and men of armes, so that there escaped not one. Thus were the Moabites brought vnder the hande of the children of Israel at that tyme, and the londe was in rest foure score yeares.

Afterwarde was Η Samgar τ sonne of Anath, which slywe sixe hundred Philistynes with an oxes gadd, and delyuered Israel also.

The iiiij. Chapter.

BUT the children of Israel dyd yet more euell before τ LORDE, when Éhud was deed. And the LORDE solde τ η in to the hande of Iabin the kynge of the Cananites, which dwelt at Hazor, τ the chefe captayne of his hooste was Sissera, and he dwelt at Haro-seth of the Heythen. And the childre of Israel cried vnto the LORDE: for he had nyne húdredre yron charrettes, and subdued the children of Israel by violence twentie yeare.

At τ same tyme was Judgesse in Israel the prophetisse Debbora, the wyfe of Lapidoth, and she dwelt vnder τ palme of Debbora betweene Rama τ Bethel, vpon mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel came vp vnto her to the lawe. She sent forth, τ τ called for Barak the sonne of Abi Noa of Kedes Nephtali, and sayde vnto him: Hath not τ LORDE the God of Israel commaunded the: Go thy waye, and get the vp vnto mount Thabor, τ take with the ten thousande men of the children of Nephtali τ Zabulon? For I wil make Sissera the chefe captayne of labins hoost to come to the vnto τ τ water of Cysen, with his charrettes and with his multitude, and I wyll delyuer him in to thy hande. Barak sayde vnto her: Yf thou wilt come with me, I wil go: but yf thou wilt not come with me, I wil not go.

She sayde: I wyll go with the: neuetherlesse the praye shal not be thine in this journey that thou goest, but τ LORDE shal delyuer Sissera in to a womas hande. So Debbora gat hir vp, and wente with Barak vnto Kedes. Then Barak called Zabulon and Nephtali vnto Kedes, and wete on fote with ten thousande men. And Debbora wente with him also. As for Heber the Kenyte he was departed from the Kenytes from the children of Π Hobab Moses brother in lawe, and had pitcht his tent by τ Oke of Zaanaim bessyd Kedes.

Then was it tolde Sissera, τ Barak the sonne of Abi Noa, was gone vp vnto mount Thabor: τ he gathered all his charrettes together, nyne C. yron charrettes, τ all the people τ was with him from Haro-seth of the Heythen, vnto the water Cysen. Debbora sayde vnto Barak: Vp, this is the daie wherein the LORDE hath delyuered Sissera in to thy hande: for τ LORDE shal go forth before τ. So Barak wente fro mount Thabor, and τ ten thousande men after him.

But the LORDE discomfited Sissera with τ all his charrettes τ hooost, τ made þe atraied of the edge of the sworde before Barak, so τ Sissera leapt of his charret, τ fled on fote. Neuetherlesse Barak followed vpoun the charrettes τ the hooost vnto Haro-seth of the Heythen, τ all Siserras hooost fell thorow τ edge of the sworde, so τ not one escaped. As for Sissera, he fled on fote vnto the tente of Iael, τ wife of Heber τ Kenite. For there was peace betwene kynde Iabin at Hasor, τ the house of Heber the Kenite.

Iael wete forth to mete Sissera, τ sayde vnto him: Turne in my lorde, turne in to me, τ be not atraied. And he turned in vnto her in to the tente, τ she couered him with a garmet. He sayde vnto her: I praye τ geue me a little water to drynke, for I am a thyrst. τ Tho opened she a mylke pot, τ gaue him to drynke, and couered him. And he sayde vnto her: Stode in the tente dore, τ τ one come τ axe, is there eny man here? saye Noman.
Then Iael the wife of Heber toke a nale of the tente, and an hammer in hir hande, \(\varpi\) wente in preuely vnto him, \(\varpi\) smote the nale in thorow the temples of his heade, so \(\varpi\) he sancke to \(\varpi\) earth. As for him, he was fallen on a slomber, and weery, and so he dyed.

But wha Barak followed after Sissera, Iael wente for to mete him, and sayde vnto him: Come hithe, I wil shewe the the man, whom thou sekest. And when he came in vnto her, he sawe Sissera deed, \(\varpi\) the nale stickinge in his temples. Thus God broughte downe Iabin the kyngge of the Cananites before the children of Israel at that tyme, \(\varpi\) the hande of the children of Israel wente \(\varpi\) subdued Iabin \(\varpi\) kyngge of the Cananites, tyll they had roted him out. Then Debbora and Barac the sonne of Abi Noam, sange at the same tyme, and sayde:

The b. Chapter.

NOW that ye are come to rest, ye quyete men in Israel, praysye \(\varpi\) LORDE, amongst soch of the people as be fre wyllinge.

Heare ye kynges, \(\varpi\) herken to ye prynces: I wyl, I wyl syngye to the LORDE, euyn vnto the LORDE \(\varpi\) God of Israel wil I playe.

*LORDE, whan thou wastent out from Seir, \(\varpi\) cameste in from the felde of Edom, \(\varpi\) earth quaked, the heauen dropped, and the cloudes dropped with water.

* The hilles melted before the LORDE, Sinai before the LORDE the God of Israel.

In the tyme of \(\varpi\) Sanger the sonne of Anath: In the tyme of \(\varpi\) Iael the wayes fayled: and they that shulde haue gone in pathes, walked thorow croke wayes.

There was scarcenesse, there was scarcenesse of houzbande men in Israel, vntyll I Debbora came vpt, vntyll I came vpt a mother in Israel.

God hath chosen a new thinge. He hath overconuere \(\varpi\) portes in battayll: and yet was there sene nether shylde ner speare amonge fortye thosande in Israel.

My hert loueth \(\varpi\) teachers of Israel: ye \(\varpi\) are frewyllinge amonge the people, praysye the LORDE.

Ye that ryde vpt freyre Asses, ye that syt in judgment and gene sentence, ye that go by the waye, praysye the LORDE.

Wha \(\varpi\) archers cried betwene \(\varpi\) drawers of water, then was it spooke of \(\varpi\) righteousnes of the LORDE, of the righteousnes of his houzbande men in Israel: then ruled the people of the LORDE vnder the gates.

Vpt Debbora vpt, get the vpt, get the vpt, a rehearse a songe. \| Arise Barak, \(\varpi\) catch him \(\varpi\) catched the, thou sonne of Abinoam.

Then had the desolate the rule with the mightye of the people. The LORDE had \(\varpi\) dominion thorow the giauantes.

† Out of Ephraim was their rote against Amalek, and after him Ben Iamin in thy people.

Out of Machir haue teachers ruled, and out of Zabuló are there become gouernours thorow the wytinge penne.

And out of Isachar there were prynces with Debbora, and Isachar was as Barak in \(\varpi\) valley, sent with his people on fote: As for Ruben, he stode hye in his awne consaye, and separated him selfe from vs.

Why abodes thy betwixte the borders, \(\varpi\) whan thou herdest the noyse of the flockes? because Ruben stode hye in his awne cosaye, and separated him selfe from vs.

Gilead abode beyonde Jordane, and why dwelt Dan amonge the shippes? Asser sat in the haun of the see, and taried in his porcious.

But Zabulons people ioperde their life vnto death: Nephtali also in the topp of \(\varpi\) felde of Merom.

The kynges came \(\varpi\) foughte, then foughte \(\varpi\) kynges of the Cananites at Thaanah by the water of Megiddo, but spoyle of money broughte they not there from.

From heaue were they foughte agaynst, the starres in their courses foughte with Sissera.

The broke Cyson ouerwhelmed them, the broke Kedumim, yee the broke Cyson. My soule treade thou vpon the mightie.

Then made the horse fete a ruszhinge togetheter, for the greate violence of their mightie horse men.

Curse the cite of Meros (sayde \(\varpi\) angell of the LORDE) curse the citesyns therof, because they come not to helpe \(\varpi\) LORDE, to helpe the LORDE to the giauantes.

Blessyngye amonge wemen haue Iael the wife of Heber the Kenite: blessinge haue she in the tente amonge the wemen.

Whan he axed water, she gaue him mylke, \(\varpi\) broughte forth butter in a lordly diszcze.

* Exo. 19. c. Deut. 4. b. † Paul. 96. a. ‡ Jud. 3. d.
She took hold of the nail with her hand, and smote Sisera, cut off his head, and bored through his temples. He bowed himself down at his fete, he fell downe, and laye there. He sanke downe, and fell at his fete: when he had sonke downe, he laye there destroyed.

His mother looked out at the window, and cried piteously through the trallace: Why tarieth his chariet out so longe, that he cometh not? Wherefore do the wheeles of his chariet make so longe tarienge?

The wyest amonge his ladies answered, sent ye not finde a deuise the spoyle, vnto every man a fayre mayde or two for a pray, a partye coloured garmentes of needle worke to Sisera for a spoyle, partye coloured garmentes of needle worke about the necke for a pray?

Thus all thine enemies must perishe O LORDE: but they that loue the, shal be euen as the Sonne rynginge vp in his mighte.

And the londe had peace fortye yeares.

And when the children of Israel dyed euell in the sighte of the LORDE, the LORDE deluyed them vnder the hande of the Madianites vyj. yeares. And wha the hande of the Madianites was to mightie over the childdren of Israel, the children of Israel made them clyffes in ly mountaynes, and caues and holdes, to defende them selues from the Madianites. And when Israel sowed any thinge, the Madianites and Amalechites, and the children towards the south came vp vpon them, and pitched their tetes agaynst them, and destroyed the increase of the londe downe vnto Gasa, let nothinge remayne ouer of the beestes in Israel, neither shepe, nor oxen, nor asses. For they came vp with their catell and tentes, as it had bene a greate multitude of greshoppers (so that nether they Ker their camels might be nombered) and fell in to the londe, that they might destroye it. Thus was Israel exceedinge small before the Madianites. Then cried the children of Israel vnto the LORDE.

But whan they cried vnto the LORDE because of the Madianites, the LORDE sent the a prophet, which sayde vnto the: Thus saieth the LORDE the God of Israel: I carried you out of Egipte, brought you out of your house of bondage, deluyed you from the hande of the Egipciens, from the haide of all them that oppreseed you, and I have thrust them out before you, euyn euene you their londe and sayde vnto you: I am the LORDE youre God. * Fear ye not ye the goddes of the Amorites, in whose londe ye dwell: neuertheless ye haue not herkened vnto my voyce.

And there came an angell of the LORDE, sent him downe vnder an Oke at Aphra, which belonged vnto Ioas the father of z Erites, and his sunne Gedeon was thorshinge wheate in the barne, that he mighte flye awaye before the Madianites.

Then appeared vnto him the angell of the LORDE, and sayde vnto him: The LORDE with his thou mightie giante. But Gedeon sayde vnto him: Syr, if the LORDE be with vs, wherfore is all this then happened vnto vs?

And where be all the wonderes, which oure fathers tolde vs, sayde: The LORDE brought vs out of Egipte? But now hath the LORDE forsaken vs, and deluyed vs in to the hande of the Madianites.

The LORDE turned him vnto him, sayde: Go thy waye in this thy strength, thou shalt deluyer Israel out of the hande of the Madianites. I haue sent the. But he sayde: My LORDE, wherewithall shal I deluyer Israel? Beholde, my kyndred is the smallest in Manasse, I am the least in my fathers house? The LORDE sayde vnto him: I will be with the, so I thou shalt smyte the Madianites, euen as though they were but one man.

He sayde vnto him: If I haue foude grace in thy sighte, then make me a token, that it is thou, which speakest with me: go not awaye, till I come to, and brynge a meat-offerynge, to set before the. He sayde: I wyll tary, till thou comest agayne. And Gedeon wynt, and made ready a kynd, and an Ephra vntenended flour, and layed the flesh in a mannde, and put the broth in a pot, and broughte it forth vnto him vnder the Oke, and came nye. But the angell of God sayde vnto him: Take the flesh and the vntenended bread, set it vpon the stone rocke that is here, and poure the broth theron. And he dyd so. Then the angell of the LORDE... stretched out the staffe that he had in his hande, and with the end of it he touched the flesh and the voleyended flourre: *and the fyre came out of the rocke, and consumed the flesh and the voleyended flourre. And the angell of the LORDE vanished out of his sighte.

Now wha Gideon sawe that it was an angell of ¥ LORDE, he sayde: "O LORDE LORDE, haue I thus sene an angell of ¥ LORDE face to face? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Peace be with the, feare not, thou shalt not dye. Thë Gideon buylde an altare there vnto ¥ LORDE, ¥ called it: The LORDE of peace. The same stondeneth yet vnto this daye at Apra, ¥ belogeth vnto the father of ¥ Esrites.

And in ¥ same nighte sayde ¥ LORDE vnto him: Take a fedd bullocke from amóge thy fathers oxen, ¥ another bullocke of seuen yeare olde, and breake downe the altare of Baal which is thy fathers, and cut downe the grome that stondeneth by it, and byulde thy an altare vnto the LORDE thy God aboue vpon the toppe of this rocke, and make it ready, and take the other bullocke, and ofre a burnt-offeryenge with the wodd of the grome that thou hast hewen downe. Then toke Gideon ten men of his seruauntes, and dyd as ¥ LORDE sayde vnto him: but he was afrayed to do this by daye tyme, for his fathers house and the people in ¥ cite, and so he dyd it by nighte.

Now whan the people in the cite rose vp early in the mornyng, beholde, Baals altare was broken, and the grome hewen downe by it, and the other bullocke a burntofferynge vpon the altare that was buylde, ¥ one sayde vnto another: Who hath done this? And whan they soughte ¥ made searche, it was sayde: Gideon the sonne of Ioas hath done it. ¥ sayde the people of ¥ cite vnto Ioas: Buyrye forth thy sonne, He must dye, because he hath broken Baals altare, and hewen downe the grome therby. But Ioas sayde vnto all them that stode by him: Wyl ye stryue for Baal? Wil ye delyuer him? ¥ he ¥ stryuefor him, shall dye this mornyng. ¥ he ¥ be God, let him auëge him selfe, because his altare is broken downe. From ¥ daye forth was he called Ierubaal, because it was sayde:

Let Baal auëge him selfe, that his altare is broken downe.

Whan ¥ Madianites now ¥ ¥ Amalechites, ¥ the childre towards the south had gathered the selues together, ¥ were passed thorow (Iordane) ¥ had pitched their tentes in the valley of Israel, the sprente of the LORDE endued Gideon, ¥ he caused the trompet to be bloune, ¥ called (the house of) ¥ Abieser, that they shulde folowe him: ¥ he sent messaungers vnto all Manasse, ¥ called them, ¥ they shulde folowe him also: and he sent messaungers likewyse vnto Asser ¥ Zabulon ¥ Nephtali, which came vp to mete him.

And Gideon sayde vnto God: ¥ thou wilt delyuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast saide, ¥ wil I laye a flese of woll in the courte: ¥ ¥ dew be onely vpon ¥ flese, ¥ drye vpon all the grounde, then ¥ perceane, that thou shalt delyuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast sayde. And it came so to passe. And whan he rose vp early on the morrowe, ¥ wrage ¥ dew out of the flese, ¥ fyllèd a dyszshe full of water. And Gideon sayde vnto God: ¥ Be not wroth at me, that I speake yet this one tyme, ¥ wyl proue yet but once with the flese, ¥ let it be drye onely vpon the flese, and drye vpon all the grounde.

And God dyd so the same nighte: so that it was drye onely vpon the flese, and drye vpon all the grounde.

Then Ierubaal (that is Gideon) gat him vp early, ¥ and all the people that was with him, and pitched their tentes besyde the well of Harod, so that he had the hoost of the Madianites on the north side behynde the hill of More in the valley. But the LORDE sayde vnto Gideon: ¥ the people that be with ¥ are to many for me to delyuer Madian in to their hande, lest Israel boost them selues agaynst me, and saye: ¥ My hande hath delyuered me. Cause a proclamacion now to be made in the eares of the people, and saye: ¥ He ¥ that feareth, and is afrayed, let him turne backe, and get him soone fro mount Gilead. Then returned there of the people aboute a two and twenty thousande so that there was left but ten thousande.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Gideon. ¥

The people are yet to many: brynge them downe to the water, there wyl I proue them for ÿ: and of whom I saye that he shal go with the, the same shal go with the: but of whō I saie that he shal not go with the, the same shal not go. And he brouhte the people vxto ÿ water. And the LORDE sayde vxto Gedeon: Whosoeuer licketh of the water with his tūge, as a dogg licketh, make him stonde asyde and lykewise who sooner falleth downe vpō his knees to drinke. Then was the nombre of them that had licked out of the hande to the mouth, thre hundreth men. And the LORDE sayde vxto Gedeon: Thorow the thre hūdrēth which have licked, wyl I deluyer you, and geue ouer the Madianites in to thy hăde: As for the other people, let them go every one vxto his place.

And they toke vytyyles with them for ÿ people, and their trompettes: but the other Israelites let he goe, every one vxto his tente. And he strengthened himselfe with the thre hundreth men, and the Madianites hoost laye before him beneth in the valley. And the same night sayde the LORDE vxto him: Vp, and go downe in to the hoost, for I hane geuen them ouer in to thy hande. But ye thou be aerafyed to goe downe, then let thy seruaunt Pura go downe with the vxto the hoost, ye thou maiest hear what they saie: after that shalt thou be bolde, and thy honde stronge, that thou mayest goe downe in to the hoost.

Then wente Gedeon downe with his seruaunt vxto ÿ vttmeost parte of ÿ watche of armes ÿ were in ÿ hoost. And ÿ Madianites and Amalechites, and all the children of the south, had layed them selues beneth in the valley, as a multituide of greshoppers, and their Camels were not to be nombred for mul-tituide, euē as the sonde on ÿ see shore. Now whan Gedeon came, beholde, one tolde another his dreame, ÿ sayde: Beholde, I haue dreamed a dreame: Me thoughte a bakē barly lofe came rollinge downe to ÿ hoost of ÿ Madianites: and whan it came to the tente, it smote it, and ouerthrew it, and turned it vpysde downe, so that the tente fell. Then answered the other: That is nothinge els then ÿ swerde of Gedeon the sonne of Joas ÿ Israeliite: God hath geuc ouer the Madianites with all the hoost in to his hande.

When Gedeon herde this dreame tolde, ÿ the interpretation of it, he worshipped, and came agayne in to the hoost of Israel, and sayde: Vp, for the LORDE hath deluyered ÿ hoost of the Madianites in to your hăde. And he deuyed the thre hundreth men in to thre partes, and gane euery one a trompet in his hande, and emptye pytches, and lampes therin, and sayde vxto them: *Loke vxto me, and do ye euē so, and beholde, whā I come to the vttmeost parte of the hoost, euē as I do, so do ye also. When I blowe ÿ trompet, and all that are with me, then shal ye blowe ÿ trompettes also rounde aboute all the hoost, and saye: Here the LORDE ÿ Gedeon. Thus came Gedeon and the thre hundreth men with him vxto the vttmeost parte of ÿ hoost (aboute the tyme whan the mydwatch begunneth) and waked vp the watche, and blew with the trompettes, and smote asunder the pytches in their handes.

So all the thre companies blewε with ÿ trompettes, and brake the pytches. But the lampes helde they in their lefte hande, and the trompettes in their righte hăde, so that they blewε, and cried: Here the swerde of the LORDE and Gedeon. And euery one stode in his place aboute the hoost. Then ranne all the hoost, and cried and fled. And whyle the thre hundreth men blewε the trompettes, ÿ LORDE broughte it so to passe, that euery mans swerde in all ÿ hoost was agaynst another, and the hoost fled vxto Beth-sitha Zeretha, and vxto the border of the playne of Meohab byside Tabath. And ÿ men of Israel of Nephtali, of Asser, ÿ of Ma-nasse cried, and followed upon the Madianites.

And Gedeon sent messauengers vp vxto all mount Ephraim, sayenge: Come downe against the Madianites, and stoppe the water from them vxto Beth Bara and Iordane. And then cryed all they that were of Ephraim, and stopped the water from them vxto Bethbara and Iordane, and toke two prynces of the Madianites Oreb and Zeb, and slewe Oreb vpone the rocke of Oreb, and Zeb in the wyne presse of Zeb, and folowed vpone the Madianites, and broughte the heads of Oreb and Zeb, vxto Gideon ouer Iordane.

AND the men of Ephraim sayde vxto him: Wherfore hast thou done this vxto
As for Gedeon Is Are Beholde, Stonde Well, do I I thinge. they twentye lefte agayne fyftene men they which Nobah with in men bred folowed vnto were wente from hande, of vnto and Wha Abieser wil And As Salmana, was boost them, of the rulers of Zebea and the kinges of the Madianites. But the rulers ofSucoth sayde: Are the handes of Zebea and Salmana in thy handes allready, that we must geue bred vnto thy men of warre? Gedeon sayde: Well, when the LORDE delyuereth Zebea and Salmana in to my hinde, I wyll thresshe youre flesh with thornes of the wyldernes and wyth breares. And from thence he wente vp vnto Pennel, and spake euens so vnto them. And the me of Pennel gaue him like as answeres as they of Sucoth. And he sayde also vnto the men of Pennel: Yf I come peaceably agayne, I wil breake downe this tower. As for Zebea and Salmana, they were at Karkar, and their hoost with them vpon a fyftene thousande, which were all that were lefte of the whole hoost of the children of the Easte: for there were fallen an hundreth and twentye thousande, that couldrwe the swerde. And Gedeon wente vp by the waye, where they dwell in the tentes on the east side of Nobah and Iakbeha, s mothe the hoost, for the hoost was carelessse, and mytrustedy nothinge. And Zebea and Salmana feld, but he folowed after them, and toke thy two kynges of the Madianites Zebea and Salmana, and put all the hoost in feare. Now when Gedeon thy sonne of Ios came agayne fro the battayll out of thy east, he toke a lad of the men of Socoth, and examyned him, which wrote him vp the names of the rulers of Sucoth, and their Elders, euæ the score and seuentene men.

And he came to the men of Socoth, and sayde: Beholde, here is Zebea and Salmana, cocernyng who ye laughe to me to scorne, he sayde: Are the handes of Zebea and Salmana in thy hâdes all ready, that we must geue bred vnto thy men which are weery? And he tuk the Elders of the cite, and thornes out of the wildernes, and breres, and caused thy men of Socoth to be torne therewith. And the tower of Pennel brake he downe, and slewe the men of the cite. And he saide vnto Zebea and Salmana: What maner of me wre they who ye sleue at Thabor? They sayde: They were euens like the, as f they had bene a kynges childre. He sayde: They were my brethren, euens my mother sonnes: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, yf ye had lette them lyue, I wolde not slaye you.

And he saide vnto his first borne sonne Iether: Stonde vp, and slaye them. Howbeight the lad drue not out his swerde, for he was atraised, for so much as he was yet but a lad. Zebea and Salmana sayde: Stonde thou vp, and slaye vs, for as the man is, soch is also his strengthe. So Gedeon arose, and slewe Zebea and Salmana, and take the ornamentes that were aboute their Camels neckes.

Then sayde certayne in Israel vnto Gedeon: Be thou lorde ouer vs, thou and thy sonne, and thy sonnes sonne, for so much as thou hast delyuered vs from thy hande of thy Madianites. Nenertheles Gedeon saide vnto them: I wil not be lorde ouer you, nether shal my sonne be lorde ouer you, but the LORDE shalbe lorde ouer you.

Gedeon saide vnto them: One thinge I desyre of you. Every man geue me the earinge that he hath spoyled. (For in so much as thy men were Israelites, they had earinges.) They sayde: Them wyll we geue the. And they spred out a cloth, and every man cast the earinge theron that he had spoiled. And the golden earynes which he required, had in weight, a thousande and seuen hundreth Sycles of Golde, besides the spanges and cheynes, and scarlet rayment which the kynges of the Madianites dyd weere, and besides the neckbandes of their Camels. And Gideon made a cote armoure therof, and set it in his

Α BIMELECH the sonne of Ierubaal, wente vnto Sichē to his mothers brethren, α spake vnto them, α to all the kynred of his mothers fathers house, and sayde: I praye you spake in the eares of all the men at Sichem: What is better for you, that thre score and ten men all children of Ierubaal shulde be lorde ouer you, or that one man shulde be lorde ouer you? But Iotham the youngest sonne of Ierubaal remayned ouer, for he was hydd. And all the men of Sichem, and all the house the waye, and wente vnsto Ber, and dwelt there because of his brother Abimelech.

Now whan Abimelech had reigned thre yeare ouer Israel, *God sent an euell mynde betwene Abimelech and the men of Sichem (for the men of Sichem despysed Abimelech), and rehearsed the wronge done to the sonsnes of Ierubaal, and their bloude, and layed it vpon Abimelech their brother which slewe them, and vpon the men of Sichem that strengthed his hande thereto, that he mighte slaye his brethren.

And the men of Sichem set an hynder watch vpon the toppes of the mountayneis, and spoyled all them that walked nysie them by the waye, and it was tolde Abimelech. But there came Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethren, and entred in to Sichem, and the men of Sichem put their trust in him, and wete out in to the felde, and gathered their vynyarde, and pressed them, and made a damne, and wente in to their gods house, and ate and dranke, and cursed Abimelech.

And Gaal the sonne of Ebed sayde: Who is Abimelech? and what is Sichem, that we shulde serue him? Is he not the sonne of Ierubaal, and hath Sebul his seruaût ouer the men of Hemor the father of Sichem? Wherefore shulde we serue him? Wolde God the people were vnder my hade, I mighte put downe Abimelech.

And it was tolde Abimelech: Increas thine hooste, and departe. For Sebul the chefe ruler of the cite, whan he herde the wordes of Gaal the sonne of Ebed, he was wroth fully displeased, and sente message secretly to Abimelech, and caused to saye vnto him: Behold, Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethren are come to Sichem, and make the cite to be agaynst the.

Ariseth therefore by nyght, thou and thy people that is with the, and laye wayte for the in the felde: and toamorow whan the Sonne arysteth, get the vp sone, and fall vpon the cite: and ye he and the people that is with him come out vnto the, the deale with him, as thyn hande fyndeth.

Abimelech stode vp by night, and all the people that was with him, and layed wayte for Sichem with foure companies of men of warre. And Gaal the sonne of Ebed wete out and stode at the dore of the gate of the cite.

But Abimelech gat him vp out of the hinder watch, and the people that was with him. Now whan Gaal sawe the people, he sayde vnto Sebul: Behold, there commeth a people downe from the toppes of the mount. Sebul saide vnto him: Thou seist shadowe of the mountaines as though they were me. Gaal spake yet more and sayde: Behold, there commeth a people downe from ye myddes of the londe, g one bonde of men cometh by the waye to ye witch Oke. The sayde Sebul: Where is now thy mouth? sayde: Who is Abimelech, that we shulde serue him? Is not this ye people, whom thou hast refused? Go forth now, and fighte with him.

Gaal wente forth before the citysyns of Sichem, and foughte with Abimelech. But Abimelech chaced him, so that he fled, and there fell many slayne even vnto the gate of the cite. And Abimelech abode at Aruma. But Sebul drowe awaye Gaal and his brethren, so that they must not remayne at Sichem. Vpon the morowe wente the people forth in to ye felde. Whi this was tolde Abimelech, he toke the people, and parted them in to thre bodés of men, and wayted for the in the felde.

Now whan he sawe ye the people wete out of the cite, he rose agaynst the, and smote them.

Abimelech and ye company of men that was with him, fell vpon them, and stepte vnto the dore of the porte: but the other two companies fell vpon all them that were in the felde, and slewe them. The foughte Abimelech agaynst the cite all ye same daye, and wanne it, and slewe the people that was there in, and brake downe ye cite, and sowed salt theron.

Whan all the men of the tower of Sichem herde this, they wente in to a stronge holde of ye house of their God Berith. But whan Abimelech herde, that all the men of the tower of Sichem had gathered the the selues together, he wente vp vnto mount Zelmon, and all the people that was with him, and toke an axe in his hāde, and hewed downe a braunch of a tre, and toke it vp, and layed it vpon his shulder, and sayde vnto all the people that was with him: As ye haue sene me do, make ye haist, and do euyn so as I. Then all the people hewed downe euery one a branch, and folowed Abimelech: and they layed them to the holde, and set fyre vpon them agaynst them and the holde: and all the men of the tower of Sichem

Chap. r.

AFTER Abimelech there rose vp another sauiorue in Israel, Thola a man of Isachar, and the sonne of Pua, the sonne of Dodo. And he dwelt at Samir vpó the mount Ephraim, and judged Israel thre and twentye yeare, and died, and was buried at Samir.

After him stode vp one Iair a Gileadite, and judged Israel two and twentye yeare, and had thirtie sonnes, rydinge vpó thirtie asses foales: and had thirtie cities, whose names are Hauoth Iair (that is, the cities of Iair) vpó this daye, and ly in Gilead. And Iair dyed, and was buried at Camon.

But the children of Israel wrought wickednes in the sighte of the LORDE, and servéd Baalim and Astaroth, and the goddes of Siria, and the goddes of Sidon, and the goddes of Moab, and the goddes of y children of Ammon, and the goddes of the Philistines, and forsoke y LORDE, and servéd him not. Then was y wrath of y LORDE fearce vpó Israel, and he gaue thé ouer vnder the háde of the Philistynes, and of the children of Ammò. And they vxed and oppresse children of Israel eightene yeare longe, all the children of Israel that were beyonde Iordan in the londe of the Moabites, which lyeth in Gilead. The children of Ammon also wente ouer Iordan, and fought agaynst Iuda, Ben Iamin, and agaynst the house of Ephraim, so that Israel was very sore troubled.

Then cryed the children of Israel vpó the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned agaynst the, for we haue forsaken oure God, g servéd Baalim. But the LORDE sayde vpó the childrè of Israel: Did not the Egyptiàs, the Amorites, the children of Ammon, y Philistines, the Sidionians, the Amalechites and Maonites oppresse you, and I helped you out of their hande, whan ye cryed vpó me? Yet haue ye forsaken me, and servéd other goddes? Therfore wyll I helpe you nonore. Go youre waye, and crye vpó the goddes whome ye haue chosen, let them helpe you in the tyme of youre trouble.

But the childrè of Israel sayde vpó the LORDE: We haue synned, do thou vpó vs what pleaseth the, onely deluery vs at this tyme. And they put the strange goddes fro them, and servéd the LORDE, And his soule had pytie on the mystery of Israel.

And the children of Ammon called them selues together, and pitched in Gilead: But the children of Israel gathered them selues together also, and pitched at Mispa. And y people of the cheifest of Gilead sayde amóge them selues: Who so ever begynneth to fight agaynst the children of Ammon, shalbe heade ouer all them that dwell in Gilead.

The ri. Chapter.

EPHTHAE a Gileadite was a valeaít man of armes, but an harlottes childe. Gilead begat Iephthae. But whan the wyfe had borne children vpó Gilead, and the same wyues childrè were waxe greate, they thrust out Iephtae, and sayde vpó him: Thou shalt not be heire in oure fathers house, for thou art another womans sonne. Thè fled he from his brethren, and dwelt in the londe of Tob. And there resorted vpó him vagabodes, and wète out with him. And after a certayne tyme foughte the children of Ammon with Israel.

Now whā the childe of Ammon foughte thus with Israel, the Elders wente from Gilead to fetch I epithiae out of the londe of Tob, and sayde vnto hym: Come, and be oure captayne, and fighte agaynst the children of Ammon. But I epithiae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: Are not ye they that hate me and have thrust me out of my fathers house, and now come ye to me when ye are in trouble?

The Elders of Gilead sayde: Therfore come we now againe vnto the, that thou mayest go with vs, and fighte agaynst the children of Ammon, and be oure captayne ouer all that dwell in Gilead. I epithiae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: Yf ye fetch me agayne to fighte agaynst the childe of Ammon, and the LORDE deluyer them before me shal I then be youre head? The Elders of Gilead saide vnto I epithiae: The LORDE be hearer bwene vs, yf we do not as thou hast sayde. So I epithiae wete with the Elders of Gilead. And the people made him heade and duke ouer them. And I epithiae spake all this before the LORDE at Mispa.

Then sente I epithiae messaungers to the kyng of the children of Ammon, and caused to saye vnto hym: What hast thou to do with me, that thou comest vnto me to fighte agaynst my londe? The kyng of the childe of Ammom answered I epithiae messaungers Because that Israel toke awaye my londe (when they departed out of Egipte) from Arnon vnto Iabock, and vnto Iordane: geue it me agayne now therfore peaceably.

But I epithiae sent yet mo messaungers to y kyng of the children of Ammon, which sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth I epithiae: Israel hath taken no londe, nether from the Moabites ner from the children of Ammon: for when they departed out of Egipte, Israel walked thorow the wyldernes vnto the reed see, and came to Cades, and sent messaungers to the kyng of the Edomite, and sayde: Let me go thorow thy londe. But the kyng of the Edomites wolde not heare the. They sent lykewyse vnto the kyng of the Moabites, which wolde not also. Thus Israel abode in Cades, and compassed the lode of the Edomites and Moabites, and came on the eastsyde of the londe of the Moabites and pitched beyonde Arnon, and came not within the coaste of the Moabites. +For Arnon is the border of the Moabites.

And Israel sent messaungers vnto Sihon the kyng of the Amorites at Hesbon, and caused to saye vnto hym: Let me go thorow thy londe vnto my place. Neuertheles Sihon wolde not trust Israel to go thorow the border of his londe, but gathered all his people, and pitched at Iahza, and foughte with Israel. Howbeit the LORDE God of Israel gaue Sihon with all his people in to Israels hāde, so that they slewe them. Thus Israel conquered all the londe of the Amorites that dwelt in y same countre. And they toke possession of all the borders of the Amorites, from Arnon vnto Iabock, from y wyldernesse vnto Iordane. So y LORDE God of Israel drone awaye the Amorites before his people of Israel, and wilt thou eouere them? Is it not so, yf thy God Camos gaue the oughte to possesse, wondest thou not possesse it? What so euere the LORDE ouere God hath geue vs before vs to possesse, that shal we conquer and take in possession.

Hast thou better right (thinkest thou) the +§ Balac the sonne of Ziphor, the kyng of y Moabites? Dyd he euere go to lawe or fighte agaynst Israel? Though Israel haue dwelt now vpō a thre hūdreth yeare in Hesbon, and in the yllages therof, in Aroer and in the yllages therof, and in all the cities that ye by Arnon. Why dyd not ye rescue it at the same tyme? I haue not offended the, thou dost me euell to fighte agaynst me. The LORDE gene sentence this daie betweene Israel and the children of Ammon.

Neuertheles the kyng of the children of Ammon wolde not heare y worde of I epithiae, which he sent vnto hym. Then came y sprete of the LORDE vpon I epithiae, and he wente thorow Gilead and Manasse, and thorow Mispa which lieth in Gilead, and fro Mispa that lieth in Gilead, vnto y children of Ammon.

And I epithiae vowed a vowe vnto the LORDE, and sayde: Yf thou wilt deluyer the childre of Ammon in to my hande, what so euere commeth (first) out at the dore of my house in my waie, when I returne agayne peaceably from the childre of Ammon, that same shalbe the LORDES, and I wyl ofte it for a burntofferynge.

* Deu. 2. a. † Num. 20. b. ‡ Num. 21. c.
So Iephthae wente vpon the children of Ammon, to fighte against them. And the LORDE deliuered them in to my hande. Wherfore come ye vp to me, to fighte agaynst me?

And Iephthae gathered all the men in Gilead, & foughte agaynst Ephraim. And the men in Gilead smote Ephraim, because they sayde: Ye Gileadites are as they {^} fle awaye before Ephraim, (and dwell) amoge Ephraim & Manasse. And the Gileadites toke {^} ferye of Iordane from Ephraim. Now wha one of {^} fugitye Ephraites dyd saye: Let me go ouer, {^} men of Gilead sayde: Art thou an Ephraite? ye he answered: No, they bad him saye: Schiboleth, ye he sayde: Siboleth, ye could not speake it righte: then they toke him, ye slew him at {^} ferye of Iordane, so {^} the same tyme there fell of Ephraim two {^} foryte M. Iephthae iudged Israel sixe yeaeres. And Iephthae {^} Gileadite dyed, ye was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

After him iudged Israel one Ebzan of Bethleem, which had thritte sonnes and as many daughters: and his thritte daughters gaue he forth to mariage, and thritte daughters toke he from without for his sonnes, and iudged Israel seuen yeaere, and died, and was buried at Bethleem.

After him iudged Israel one Elon a Zabulonite, ye he iudged Israel ten yeaere, ye was buried at Aialon in the londe of Zabulon.

After him iudged Israel one Abd{^} a sonne of Hillel, a Pargathonite, which had fartye sonnes, ye thritte neuyes (which rode vp5 seuentye Asses foales) and he iudged Israel eights yeaere, and dyed, ye was buried at Pirgathon in the londe of Ephraim vpon the mount of the Amaelechites.

The rii{^} Chapter.

And they of Ephraim made insurrection, ye wente northwarde, ye sayde vnto Iephthae: * Wherfore wetest thou to the battayl agaynst the children of Ammon, ye hasted not called vs, that we mighte go with the? We wil burne thy house and the with fyre. Iephthae sayde vnto the: I and my people had a great matter with ye children of Ammon, and I cried vpon you, but ye helped me not out of their handes. Now when I sawe ye there was no helper, I put * my soule in my honde, and wente agaynst the children of Ammon, and the LORDE deliuered them in to my hande. Wherfore come ye vp to me, to fighte agaynst me?

shall conceaue, and beare a sonne, *vpō whose heade there shall come no rasse: for y child shall be a Nazaaree of God, even from his mother wombe, and shall beginne to deyuer Israel out of the hande of the Philistynes.

Then came y woman and tolde hir husbande, τ sayde: There came a mā of God vnto me, τ his proporcion was to loke vpon as an angell of God, very terrible, so y I axed him not whenceso he came, τ whither he wolde: nether tolde he me his name. But he sayde vnto me: beholde, thou shalt conceaue τ bear a sonne; drynke no wyne therfore nere stronge drynke, τ eate no vnucleene thinge: † for the childe shall be called a Nazaaree of God, even fro his mother wombe vnto his death.

Then Manoah prayed the LORDE, τ sayde: Oh LORDE, let y man of God whom thou hast sent, come to vs agayne, y he maye enfourme vs what we shall do vnto the childe which shall be borne. And God herde the voyce of Manoah, τ the angell of God came to his wife agayne. But she sat in y feld, and hir huszbāde Manoah was not with her. Thē rame she in all the haist, τ tolde hir husbande, τ saide vnto him: beholde, y man hath appeared vnto me, y came to me to daye.

Manoah gat him vp, τ wente after his wife, and came to the man, and sayde vnto him: Art thou y man that spake to the woman? He sayde: Yee. And Manoah sayde: whā it commeth to passe that thou hast sayde, what shall be the maner and worke of y child? The angell of the LORDE sayde vnto Manoah: He shall kepe him from all that I tolde the woman: he shall not eate that which commeth of the vine, and shal drynke no wyne nere stronge drynke, and eate no vnucleane thinge: † all that I haue comaunderd her, shal he kepe.

Manoah sayde vnto y angell of the LORDE: let vs holde the here (I praye the) we will prepare a kyld for the. Neuertheles y angell of the LORDE answered Manoah: † Though thou kepest me here, yet wyll I not eate of thy bred. But yf thou wilt make a burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, thou mayest offre it. (For Manoah wist not that it was an angell of the LORDE.) And Manoah sayde vnto the angell of the LORDE: What is thy name, that we maye prayse y,

* 1 Reg. 1. b. † Matt. 2. d. § Gen. 32. e. Exo. 3. c. † Tob. 12. d.

when it commeth now to passe, that thou hast sayde? But the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto him: § Why axest thou after my name, which is wonderfull?

Then toke Manoah a kyld and a meatofferynge, τ layed it vpō a rocke vnto the LORDE, ¶ which doth y wondereth him selfe. But Manoah and his wife behelde it. And whā the flanne wente vp from y altare toward heauen, the angell of the LORDE ascended vp in the flame of the altare. When Manoah τ his wife sawe y, they fell downe to y earth vpō their faces. And the angell of y LORDE appeared nomore vnto Manoah τ his wife. Thē knewe Manoah, that it was an angell of the LORDE, and he sayde vnto his wife: ¶ We must dye the death, because we haue sene God. But his wife answered him: Yf the LORDE wolde haue slaine vs, he had not receaue the burntofferynge and meatofferynge of oure handes: nether had he shewed us all these thinges, ner letten vs heare soch as is now come to passe.

And the woman broughte forth a sonne, and called his name Samson. And the childe grewe, and the LORDE blessed him. And the sprete of the LORDE begane to be with him in the tentes of Dan, betwene Zarga and Esthaol.

S AMSON wente downe vnto Thimnath, τ there he sawe a woman amōge the doughters of y Philistynes. And when he came vp, he tolde his father τ his mother, τ sayde: I haue sene a woman amōge the doughters of the Philistynes, I praye you geue me the same to wife. His father τ his mother sayde vnto him: Is there not a woman amonge the doughters of thy brethren, τ in all thy people, but thou must go τ take a wife amōge the Philistynes, which are vnecircumcised?

Samson sayde vnto his father: Geue me this womā, for she pleaseth myne eyes. But his father τ his mother knewe not y it came of the LORDE, τ that he soughte an occasion agaynst the Philistynes. For the Philistynes reigned ouer Israel at y same tyme. So Samson wente downe with his father and with his mother vnto Thimnath.

|| Psalm. 71. c and 135. a. † Exo. 33. d. Jud. 6. e.
And when they came to the vineyards of Thimmath, beholde, there came a yonge roaringe lyon against him. And the sprette of the LORDE came vpon him, and he rente him in peces, even as a kydd is parted a sunder, and yet had he nothinge at all in his hâde, and he tolde it not vnto his father or his mother.

Now whan he came downe, he spake with the woman, and she pleased Samsons eyes. And after certayne dayes he came agayne to receaue her, and wente out of wyn, that he mighte see yee dead carcasses of the lyon: and beholde, in yee lyon carcasses there was a swarme of beyes, and hony: and he toke of it in his hande, and ate thereof by the wyn: and wete vnto his father and to his mother, and gaue them to eate also. But he tolde them not, that he had taken the hony out of the lyon carcasses.

And whan his father came downe to the woman, Samson made a feast there, as the yonge men vsed to do. And whan they sawe him, they gaue him thirtie companions to be with him. Samson sayde vnto them: I wil expresse a darke sentence vnto you, whiche ye shall not expounde me the same with in these seuen dayes of the feast, I wyll geue you thirtie shertes, and thirtie chauenge of raymentes. But yf ye can not expounde it, then shall ye geue me thirtie shertes, thirtie chauenge of raymentes. And they sayde vnto him: Shewe forth thy ryddle, let vs heare it. He sayde vnto them: Meate wente out from the devourer, and swetenesse from the mightie. And in three dayes they could not expounde the ryddle.

Vpon the seventh daye they sayde vnto Samsons wife: Persuade thy huzbode, that he tell vs what the ryddle meaneth, or els we shall burne the and thy fathers house with fyre. Haue ye called vs hither, to brynge vs to pouerte? Then wepte Samsons wife before him, and sayde: Thou art displeased at me, and louest me not: thou hast expressed a darke sentence vnto the children of my people, and hast not tolde it me.

But he sayde vnto her: Beholde, I haue not tolde it vnto my father and mother, and shulde I tell it the? And she wepte before him those seuen dayes, whyle they had yee feast. But on the seuenth daye he tolde it her, for she was so importune vpon him. And she expounded the darke sentence vnto the children of her people. Then sayde the men of the cite vnto him vpon the seventh daye or euer the Sonne wente downe: What is sweter then hony? What is stronger then the lyon? But he sayde vnto the: Yf ye had not plowed with my calfe, ye shulde not haue founde out my ryddle. And the sprette of yee LORDE came vpon him, and he wente downe vnto Ascalon, and slewe thirtie men of them, and toke their spoyles, and gaue chauenge of rayment vnto the, thre had expounded the ryddle. And he was wrothfully displeased, and wente vp vnto his fathers house. As for Samsons wife, she was geuen vnto one of his companions, which belonged vnto him.

The ro Chapter.

I t fortunated after certayne daies aboute the wheate harueste tyne, yee Samson visited his wife with a kydd. And whan he thoughte, the wyll go to my wife in to chambre, his father wolde not let him in, and sayde: I thoughte thou wast displeased at her, and I gaue her thy frende. But she hath a yonger sister which is more beuyfull then she, let yee same be thine for her. The sayde Samson vnto the: I haue once gottie a righte occasion agaynst the Philistynes, I wyll do you displeasure.

And Samson wete and caughte thre hundreth foxes, and toke fyre brandes, and fastened one tale to another, and put euer a fyre brened betwene two tales, and kynde the same with fyre, and let them go amonge the Philistynes corne, and thus he brened thre stoukes and the standinge corne, and yee vineyards, and the oyle trees.

Then sayde the Philistynes: Who hath done this? And they sayde: Samson the husbande of the Thimnites daughter, because he toke awaye his wife from him, and gaue hir vnto his frende. Then wente the Philistynes vp, and brente her and hir father also with fyre.

But Samson sayde vnto them: I can suffre you to do this, neitherlyes I wyll be auëged vpon you my selfe, and then wyll I leve of. And he smote them sore both vpon the sholders and vpon the sholders and dwelt in the stone clyffe at Etam. Then wente the Philistynes vp, and layed sege vnto Iuda, vp pitched at Lechi. But they of Iuda sayde: Wherfore are ye come vp against vs? They answered: we are come vp to lynde Samson, y we maye do vp to him, as he hath done vp vs.

Then wete ther thre M. men of Iuda downe to the stone cliffe of Etam, a sayde vp Samson: Knowest thou not that the Philistynes raigne ouer vs? Wherfore hast thou done this then vp vs? He sayde: As they dyd vp me, so haue I done vp the agayne. They sayde vp to him: We are come downe to bynde the, a to deluuer y in to the hāde of the Philistynes. Samson sayde vp thē: Then swere a promyse me, y ye well not slaye me. They answered him: We well not kyll the, we wil but bynde the, a deluuer the in to their hande, a wil not slaye y.

And he founde the cheke bone of a deed asse: then put he forth his hande, and toke it, a slewe a thousande men therewith: And Samson sayde: With an olde ass cheke bone, yee euē with the cheke bone of an ass hane I slayne a thousande men. And when he had sayde y, he cast y cheke bone out of his hande, a called the place Ramath Lechi. But wha he was sore a thyst, he called vp the LORDE, a sayde: Soch greate health hast thou geue by the hāde of thy seruant, but now must I dye a thyst, a fall in to y hande of y vnircucised. Thē God opened a gome tothe in y chekebone, so y water wēte out: a when he dranke, his sprete came agayne, a he was refreszhed. Therefor vp this daye it is yet called y well of y cheke bone of him y made intercession. And he indged Israel in the tyme of the Philistynes twētye yeare.

The rbi. Chapter.

SAMSON wente vp Gasa, a there he saw an harlot, a laye with her. Thē it saide vp to the Gatis: Samson is come hither. And they compased him aboute, a caused to laye wayte for him preuely, a watched all the nighte in the gate of y cite, a all that nighte they helde them styll, a sayde: Abyde, tomorrow when it is lighte, we will slaye him. But Samson laye vpnto mydnyghte, then rose he at mydnyghte, a toke holde on both y sye portes of y gate of the cite, with both the postes, a lifte them out with the barres, a layed them vp on his shoulde, a bare them vp to y topp of y mount ouer against Hebron.

After this he fell in to the lowne of a woman by y broke of Sorek, whose name was Dalila, vp to whom the prynces of the Philistynes came vp, and sayde vp to her: Persuade him, and loke wherin he hath soch greate streghth, a how we maye ouercome him, y we mighte bynde him a subdue him, so well we geue the euery man a M. and an C. syluerlinges. And Dalila sayde vp Samson: I praye the tell me, wherin thy greate streghth is, a how thou mightest be bounde to be subdue. Samson sayde vp to her: Yf I were bounde with senē roapes of fresh senowes, which are not yet dryed vp, I shulde be weake, and as another man. Thē the prynces of the Philistynes broughte vp vpnto her seven new roapes, which were not yet dryed vp. And she bounde him therewith. (But there was wayte layed for him beside her in the chamber) and she sayde vp to him: The Philistynes vp to the Samson. Neuertheles he brake the roapes in sunder, euē as a twyned threde breaketh, when it hath catched the heathe of the fyre. And it was not knowne wherin his strength was.

Then sayde Dalila vp to Samson: beholde, thou hast begyled me a dessembled with me: tell me yet, wherwithall mayest thou be bounde? He answered her: Yf they bounde me with new coardes, wherwith no labour hath bene done, I shulde be feble, a as another man. Then toke Dalila new coardes, a bounde him withall, and sayde: The Philistynes vp to the Samson (but there was wayte layed for him in the chamber.) And he brake them from his armes, euē as it had bene a threde.

Dalila sayde vp to him: Yet hast thou begyled me a dessembled with me: O tell me yet, wherwithall mightest thou be bounde? He answered her: Yf thou playtest suiē hayrie lockes of my heade together in a fyllet, and fastenest them in with a nayle (I shulde be weake.) And she sayde vp to him: The Philistynes vp to the Samson. But he awaked out of his slepe, a drue out y played hayrie lockes with the nale and the fyllet.

The boke of the Judges. Chap. 12ij.

The sayde she vnto him: How east thou saye y thou louest me, where as thine hert is not yet with me? Thre tymes hast thou disceaued me, and not tolde me wherin thy greate strength is. So when she was every daye importune vpon him with her wordes, a wolde not let him hane rest, his soule was faynte euen vnto the death, a he shewed her his whole hert, a sayde vnto her: * There came neuer rasure vpon my heade, for I am a Nazaree of God fro my mothers wombe. Yf I were shauen, my strength shulde departe fro me, so that I shulde be weake, and as all other men. Now whan Dalila sawe that he had opened all his hert vnto her, she sent a called for the prynces of the Philistynes, a sayde: Come yet once vp, for he hath opened his whole hert vnto me.

The came the prynces of the Philistynes vp vnto her, a broughte the money with them in their handes. And she made him to slepe vpon hir lappe, a called one which shoue of the souë hayrie locks of his hede. And she begann to vexe him. Thë was his strength departed fro him. And she sayde vnto him: The Philistynes vpon the Samson. Now wha he aweke out of his slepe, he thoughte: I will go forth as I have done afore tyme, a ease my selfe, a knewe not y the LORDE was departed from him. But the Philistynes toke him, a put out his eyes, and broughte him downe to Gasa, a bounde him with fetters, and made him to gynde in the preson. But the heer of his hede begann to growe agayne, where it was shauen of.

Whan y prynces of the Philistynes were gathered together, to make a greate sacrifice vnto Dagon their god, and to be joyfull, they sayde: Oure god hath delyuered Oure enemie in to ooure hande. Like wyse whan y people sawe him, they prysed their god, a sayde: Oure god hath delyuered in to ooure handes our enemie, y destroyed ooure londe, a slewe many of vs. Now whan their hert was joyfull, they sayde: Let vs fetch Samson, that he maye make some pastyme before vs. Then fetched they Samson out of the preson, a he made pastyme before them. And they set him betwene two pilers. But Samson sayde vnto the lad y led him by the hande: Let me touche the pilers wher vpon the house stondeth, y I maye leane ther vnto. As for Thëre was a man vpô mount Ephraim, a named Micha, which sayde vnto his mother: The thousande and hundreth syuerlings which thou hast taken vnto the, a sworne, and spoken of before myne eares: beholde, y same money is by me, I haue taken it vnto me. Then sayde his mother: The blessings of the LORDE haue thou my sonne. So he gau his mother the thousande a hundreth syuerlinges agayne. And his mother saide: That money haue I sanctified vnto the LORDE with my hande for my sonne, to make a molten ymage: therfore I gue it the agayne. Neuertheles he delyuered y money agayne vnto his mother.

Then toke his mother two hundreth syuerlinges, a put them forth to y goldsmith, which made a molten ymage, y was afterwarde in Michas house. And thus the man Micha had a gods house, a made an ouerbody cote, a Idols, and yfylled y handes of one of his sonnes, y he mighte be his prest. \[a\] At y tyme was there no kynge in Israel, a euery man dyd the thinge y was righte in his awne eyes. There was a yoge man of Bethleem Juda, amoghe the kynreds of Juda, and he was a Leuite, and was a strangre there. The same went out of the cite of Bethlehem Iuda, to walke whither he coulde.

And whi came vp to mount Ephraim vnto the house of Micha, to go on his iourney, Micha axed him: Whence comest thou? He answered him: I am a Leuite of Bethlehem Iuda, and am walkeinge where I can. Micha sayde vnto him: Tary with me, thou shalt be my father and my prest, I will gene the every yeare ten syluerlinges and thy appointed raymët, and meate and drynke: and the Leuite wëte on. And the Leuite agreed to abyde with the man: and he helde the yonge mä, as one of his owne nonnes. And Micha fyllèd the Leuities hande, that he mighte be his prest, and so he was in Michas house. And Micha sayde: I am sure the LORDE will do me good now, that I have a Leuite to my prest.

The rbij. Chapter.

* That tyme was there no kyngge in Israel. And y trybe of y Danites soughte them an enheritaunce to dwell in, * for vnto that daie there was no enheritaunce fallen vnto them amonge the trybes of Israel. And the childe of Dan sent out of their kynreds fyue captynes (which were men of armes) from Zarga and Esthaol, to spye and search out the londe. And they sayde vnto them: Go youe waiæ, and search out the londe. And they came vp to mount Ephraim in to y house of Micha, and taried there all nighte. And whyle they were there with Michas huszsholde, they knewe y voyce of the yonge man the Leuite, and sayde vnto him: Who broughte y hither? What makest thou here? and why woldest thou come hither?

He answered thë: Thus thë thus hath Micha done vnto me, thë hath hyred me to be his prest. They sayde vnto him: O axe at God, y we maye perceane, whether oure iourney which we go, shal prosperall or not. The prest answered them: Go youe waiæ in peace, youre iourney y ye go, is before the LORDE. Then the fyue men wente their waye, thë came vnto Lais, and sawe that the people which was therin, dwelt sure, even as y Sidonians, at rest, and carelesse, and that there was no lorde in the londe to vexe them, and were farre from the Sidonins, and had nothinge to do with eny man.

And they came to their brethre to Zarga and Esthaol. And their brethren saide vnto them: How is it with you? They sayde: Arise, let vs go vp vnto them, for we haue sene the londe, y it is a very good londe: make haist therfore, thë be not slakke to go, that ye maye come to take possession of the londe. Whan ye come, ye shall come to a carelesse people, and the londe is wyde: for God hath delynered this place in to youre hande, where noughte wanteth of all y is vpon earth.

Then wente there thence out of the kynreds of Dan from Zarga and Esthaol, sixe hundreth men ready wapened to y battayll, and wente vp, and pitched at Kiriath Iearim in Iuda: theref ore called they the same place, y hoost of Dan, vnto this daie, which is behind Kiriath Iearim.

And fró thence they wëte vp vnto moût Ephraim, and came to the house of Micha. Then answered the fyue men that wëte out to spye the londe of Lais, thë sayde vnto their brethren: Knowe ye not that in these houses there is an ouerbody cote, Idols, thë molten ymage? Now maye ye loke what ye haue to do. They departed thence, and came to the house of the yonge man the Leuite in Michas house, and saluted him fredly. But the sixe hundreth men, which were of y children of Dan, stode ready harnessed before y gate. And the fyue men that were gone out to spye y londe, wëte vp, and came thither, and toke the ymage, the ouerbody cote, thë molten Idols. In the meane whyle stode y prest at the gate, with the sixe hundreth readye harnessed.

Now whi these were come in to Michas house, and toke the ymage, the ouerbody cote, and the molten Idols, the prest sayde vnto them: What do ye? They answered him: Holde thy peace, and laye thine haude vpon thy mouth, and go with vs, y thou mayest be oure father thë prest. Is it better for the to be prest in one mans house, then amonge a whole trybe thë knyred in Israel? This pleased the prest well, thë he toke both the ouerbody cote, and the Idols, and the ymage, and came in amonge the people. And when they turned them and wente thence, they sent their children, and catell, and soch precious thynge as they had, before them.

Whan they were come farre now from the house of Micha, the men y were in Michas houses gathered thē together by Michas house, \( \tau \) folowed thē childrē of Dan, and cried vpon the childrē of Dan. They turned their faces aboute, and sayde vnto Micha: What ayleth thē, \( \gamma \) thou makest soch a crieng? He answerèd: Ye haue taken awaie my goddes, and the prest, \( \gamma \) are goinge youre waie, and what haue I behynde? What is here? And ye tæke to me: What ayleth thē? But the childrē of Dan saide vnto him: Let not thy voicye be herde amōge vs, that some wroth-ful mē thrust not at the, and so thy soule and the soule of thy house be destroyed. So the childrē of Dan wete on their waie. And Micha, when he sawę \( \gamma \) they were to stroenge for him, turned backe, and came agayne to his house.

But they tæke that Micha had made, \( \gamma \) the prest whome he had, \( \tau \) came vnto Lais, to a quyete carelesse people, and slewe them with the edge of the swerde, and burnt the cite with fyre, and there was no man to deluyer them: for they laye farre frō Sidon, and had to do with no man. And they laye in the valley, which is byseide Beth Rehob. Then buylde they the cite, \( \tau \) dwelt therin, \( \gamma \) called it Dan, after the name of their father Dan, whome Israel begat. And \( \gamma \) cite was called Lais afore tymē.

And the children of Dan set vp the ymage for them, and Iohnathan \( \gamma \) sonne of Gerson the sonne of Manasse, \( \tau \) his sonnes were prestes amōge the trybe of \( \gamma \) Danites, \( \tau \) vnto the ymage \( \gamma \) they were led awaie captuye out of the londe. And thus they set amonge thē the ymage of Micha, which he had made, as loge as \( \gamma \) house of God was at Silo.

The rir. Chapter.

At the same tymē was there no kynge in Israel, and there was a man of Leui, which was a strainge byseide moūt Ephraim, and had taken him a cōcube of Bethleem Iuda to wife. And whā she had played the harlot byseide him, she ranne frō him to hir fathers house vnto Bethleem Iuda, \( \tau \) was there foure monethes longe. And hir husbāde gat him vp, \( \tau \) wente after her, to speake freedly with her, \( \gamma \) to fetch her againe, \( \tau \) had a servauant \( \tau \) a couple of asses with him. And she led him in to hir fathers house. But when the damsels father sawe him, he was glad, \( \gamma \) receaued him: \( \gamma \) his father in lawe, \( \gamma \) damsels father kepeu him, so \( \gamma \) he taried thre dayes with him: thus they ate and drōke, and remayned there all nighte.

But on \( \gamma \) fourth daye he gat him vp early, \( \gamma \) wolde go his waye. Then sayde \( \gamma \) damsels father vnto his sonne in lawe: Refresh thine hert first with a morsell of bred, and then shal ye go. And they sat them downe, \( \gamma \) ate and drōke bothe together: Then sayde the damsels father vnto the man: Oh tarye all nighte, \( \gamma \) we maie refresh thine hert. But \( \gamma \) mā arose, \( \gamma \) wolde nedes go. And his father in lawe constrainuèd him to tarye all nighte. On the fift daye in the mornynge he gat him vp, and wolde be gone. Then sayde the damsels father: I praye the conforthe thine hert, \( \gamma \) let vs tary till \( \gamma \) daye be farther past, and so they ate bothe together.

And the man gat him vp, and wolde go with his concube and with his servoant. But his father in lawe the damsels father, saide vnto him agayne: Lo, the daye is spente, \( \gamma \) it begynneth to be euen, tary all night: beholde, here is lodginge yet this daye, abyde here this night, it shal refresh thine hert: to-morrow by times get you vp, and go youre waye vnto thy tent. Neuertheles the man wolde not tary, but gat him vp, \( \gamma \) went his waye, and came ouer agaynst Ieubes (that is Jerusalem) and his couple of asses ladē, and his concubynge with hime.

Now when they were come nēe vnto Ieubes, the daye fell fast awaie. And \( \gamma \) servauitt saide vnto his master: I praise you go on, and let vs turene in to this cite of the Ieubesites, and tarye therin all night. Notwithstandinge his master sayde vnto him: I wil not turene in to \( \gamma \) cite of the aleauntes, that are not of the children of Israel, but I wyll go ouer vnto Gibea. And he sayde vnto his seruanu: Go thou before, that we maye come to some place, and tarye at Gibea or at Ramah all night. And they wente on and walked, and the Sonne wente downe vpon thē harde by Gibea, which lyeth in the trybe of Ben Iamin: and they turened in there, \( \gamma \) they mighte come in, and tarye at Gibea all nighte. But when he came in, he sat him downe in \( \gamma \) strete of the cite: for there was noman that wolde lodge them in his house that nighte.

And beholde, then came there an olde man from his worke out of the feeld in the cuneinge: and he was also of mount Ephraim, and a straunger at Gibea: but y mc of that place were y children of Lemini. And when he lifte vp his eies, saw the straunger in the strete he sayde vnto him: Whither wilt thou go? whence comest thou? He answered him: We are goynge on oure journey from Bethleem Juda, vntyll we come besyde mount Ephraim, where I am, and wente vnto Bethleem Juda, and now I go vnto y house of y LORDE y no mä wil harbabor me. We haue strawe and provender for oure asses, and bred and wyne for me and thy handmayden, and for the yonge man which is with thy seruaunt, so y we wante nothinge.

The olde man sayde: Peace be with thee: what soever thou wantest, thou findest it with me, onely tary not in the strete all nighte. And he broughte him in to his house, and gaue the asses provender: and they washed their fete, and ate a dronke. And wha their hert was now joyfull, the men of the cyte, the children of Belial, came, and compased the house rounde aboute, and ruzshed at y dore, and sayde vnto y olde man, which was the good man of y house: Bringe out the mä which is come in to thy house, that we maye knowe him.

*But the good man of the house wente forth to them, and sayde vnto them: Oh no my brethren, do not so wickedly, consideringe this man is come in to my house: Oh do not soch folke. Beholde, I haue a doughter yet a virgin, and this man hath a concubine, those wil I brynge forth vnto you, that ye maye humble them, and do with them as ye lyke: but do not soch folke vnto this man. Neuertheles the men wolde not herken vnto him. Then toke y man his concubine and brughte her forth vnto them: and they knewe her, and deatle shamefully with her all y night vntill the mornynge. And when the mornynge brake on, they let her go.

Then came the woman early in the mornynge, and fell downe at the dore of the mans house that her lorde was in, and laye there tyll it was light. Now whan hir lorde rose vp in the mornynge, and opened the dore of the house, and wente forth to go on his journey, beholde, his concubine laye at the dore of the house, and hir handes vp vnpon the thresholde. He saide vnto her: stonde vp, let us go. Neuertheles she gaue him no answere. The toke he her vp vpon his asse, gat him vp, and wente vnto his place.

Now whan he came home, he toke a swerde, and helde his concubyne, and cut her with the bones and all in to twelve peices, and sent them in to all the coasts of Israel. Who so ever sawe it, sayde: Soch a thinge hath not bene done ner sene, sence the tymes that y children of Israel departed out of the londe of Egipte, vnto this daye. Now as concern-ynge this, take youre advysement, and gene youre counsell, and shew it forth.

The rr. Chapter.

Then vnethe children of Israel out and gathered a congregacion together as one man, fro Dan vntill Bersaba, and from the londe of Gilead vnto the LORDE to Mispa: and there came together of all the quarters of the people, and of all the trybes of Israel in to the congregacion of the people of God, foure hundreth thousande fote men that drue out y swerde. But the children of Ben Iamin herde, how that y children of Israel were gone vp vnto Mispa. And the children of Israel sayde: Tell vs, how happened this euell?

Then answered the Leuit the husbande of the woman that was slayne, and sayde: I came to Gibea in Ben Iamin with my concu- byne, to tary there all night, then the cytesins of Gibea gat them vp agaynst me, and compased me aboute in the house by night, and thoughte to slaye me, and defyled my concu- byne, so that she dyed: then toke I my concu- byne, and cut her in peices, and sent the peices in to euery countrie of the inheritance of Israel: for they haue done an abomination and folye in Israel. Beholde, here are ye children of Israel: aduyse you well, and take this matter in hande.

So all the people gat them vp as one mä, and sayde: Nomia shall go in to his tente, ner departe to his house, but this wil we do now agaynst Gibea: Let vs cast lot, and take ten men of an hundreth, and an hundreth of a thounsnde, and a thounsnde of ten thousande, out of all y trybes of Israel, y they maie take fode for y people, to come y do with Gibea Ben Iamin, acorlynge to their folye which they haue done in Israel. Thus all the men of Israel beyinge confederate, gathered them selues together as one man vnto the cite: and the trybes of Israel sent men vnto all the kinreds of Ben Iamin, and caused to saye vnto them: What maner of wickedyues is this, that is done amonge you? Delyuer here therefore the men the children of Belial at Gibea, that we maye put them to death, and do awaye the euell out of Israel. Neuertheles the children of Ben Iamin wolde not folowe the voyce of their brethren the children of Israel, but gathered them selues out of 7 cities vnto Gibea, to go forth in battayll agaynst the children of Israel.

And the same daye were there nombred of the children of Ben Iamin out of the cities, sixe and twentye thousande men, that drue the swerde, beside the citsynes of Gibea of whom there were tolde seue hundredeth chosen men. And amoge all this people there were chosen out seuen hundredeth men, which vsed not the right hande but the lette, and yet with the slynge coulde they touch an heer, and not mysses. But the men of Israel, beside them of Be Iamin, were nobred foure hundreth thousande, which drue the swerde, 7 were all men of armes. And the children of Israel arose, and wente vp to the house of God (in Silo) and axed at God, and sayde: Who shall go vp for vs to beginne the battayll with 7 children of Ben Iamin? The LORDE saide: Iuda shall begynne.

So the children of Israel gat the vp in 7 morninge, 7 pitched ouer agaist Gibea, 7 euery man of Israel wete out to fighte with Ben Iamin, and set them selues in araye to fighte agaynst Gibea. Then fell the children of Ben Iamin out of Gibea, and slewe the same daye amponge Israel two 7 twentye thousande to the grounde.

But the people of the men of Israel comforted them selues, and made them ready to fighte yet more in the same place, after they had prepared them selues the daye afore. And the children of Israel wente vp, and wepte before the LORDE vntyl the euenyng, and axed at the LORDE, 7 sayde: Shall we go eny more to fighte with oure brethren the children of Ben Iamin? The LORDE sayde: Go vp vnto them. And when the children of Israel gat them vp to the children of Ben Iamin on 7 next daye, the Ben Iamites fell out of Gibea agaynst them the same daye, and slewe yet eightene thousande of 7 children of Israel to the grounde, which all drue the swerde.

Then wente all the children of Israel vp, and all the people, and came to the house of God, and wepte, and taried there before the LORDE, 7 fasted that daye vntyl the euene, and offered burntofferynges and deedofferinges before the LORDE. And the children of Israel axed at the LORDE (the Arke of the covenant of God was there at that tymne, and Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the sonne of Aaron stode before him at the same tymne) 7 they sayde: Shal we go forth eny more to fighte with oure brethren the childrë of Ben Iamin, or shal we leaue of? The LORDE sayde: Go vp, to morrow wyll I deluyer them in to youre handes.

And the children of Israel set a preuy watch agaynst Gibea rounde aboute, and so the children of Israel wente vp to the children of Ben Iamin on the thirde daye, and set them selues in araye agaynst Gibea like as the other two tymes afore. The came the children of Ben Iamin out agaynst the people, 7 brake out of the cite, 7 beganne to slaye certayne wounded of the people (like as the other two times afore) in the felde vpon two stretes: wherof one goeth towarde Bethel, the other vnto Gilgal vpon a thirtie men in Israel. Then thought the childrë of Ben Iamin: They are smytten before vs like as afore. But the childrë of Israel sayde: Let vs flye, that we maie prouoke them out of the cite in to the hye stretes.

Then all the men of Israel gat them vp from their place, and prepared them selues vnto Baal Thamar. And the hinder watch of Israel brake out of their place, from 7 caue of Gaba, and came vnto Gibea, twentye thousande chosen men out of all Israel, so that it was a sore battayll: but they knewe not that the euell shulde happen vnto them. Thus the LORDE smote Ben Iamion before the children of Israel, so that the same daye the children of Israel destroyed fyue 7 twentye thousande and an hundredeth men in Ben Iamin, which all drue the swerde.

For when the childrë of Ben Iamin sawe that they were smitten, the men of Israel gave them rowne (to flye). For they trusted to the watch, which they had sett by Gibea. And the watch made haist also, 7 brake forth Onelye sixe hundreth men turned backe, and fled towards the wylderness vnto the stonye rocke of Rimon. But in the same strete they slewe fyue thosande men, and folowed vpon them vnto Gideon, and slewe two thousand of the: and so there fell the same daye of Ben lamin fyue and twenty thousande men which drue y swerde, and were all më of armes. Onelye sixe hundreth men turned backe, and fled towards the wylderness vnto the stonye rocke of Rimon, and abode in the rocke of Rimon foure monethes. And the men of Israel came agayne to the children of Ben lamin, and smote them that were in the cite with y edge of the swerde, both më and catell and all that was founde: and what soeuer was foude in the cite, they cast it in to the fyre.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The men of Israel had sworë at Mispa, and sayde: Noman shall geue his daughter to the Ben Iamites to wife. And the people came to the house of God (in Silo) * a abode there before God vntill the euenyngye, and lifte vp their voyce, and wepte sore, and sayde:

* Num. 31. c.

O LORDE God of Israel, wherfore is this come to passe in Israel this daye? But on the morow the people gat the vp early, and builded there an altare, and ofred burnt-offeringes and deedofferynges. And the children of Israel sayde: Where is there eny më of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp with the congregacion vnto the LORDE? For there was a greate ooth made, that who so came not vp to Mispa vnto the LORDE, shulde dye the death. And the children of Israel were sory for Ben Iamin their brother, and sayde: This daye is there one trybe lesse in Israel. How wyll we do that the remnaunt maye haue wyues? For we haue sworne by the LORDE, that we wyll not geue the wyues of oure daughters. And they saide: Where is there eny më of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp to the LORDE vnto Mispa? And beholde, there was not one man of the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead.

Then sent the congregacion twelve thousande men of armes thither, and commanded them, and sayde: Go youre wave, and smite the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead with the swerde, the wemen also and the children, but so that ye do after this maner: * Se that ye damme all them that are males, and all the wemen that haue lyen with men. And amonge the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead they foude foure hundreth damses, which were virgins, and had lyen with noman: those they broughte in to the hoost vnto Silo, which lyeth in the londe of Canaan.

Then sent the whole congregacion, * and caused to talke with the children of Ben Iamin, which were in the stonic rocke of Rimô and called vnto them frendly. So the children of Ben Iamin came agayne at the same tyme, and they gaue them wemen which they had of the wemens of Iabes in Gilead, and founde no more after that maner. Then were the people sory for Ben Iamin, that y LORDE had made a gappe in the trybes of Israel. And the Elders of the congregacio sayde: What wil we do, that the remnaunt maye haue wyues also? for the wemen in Ben Iamin are destroyed, and they sayde: The inheritaunce of them of Ben Iamin that are escaped, must nedes remayne, that there be not a trybe destroyed out of Israel: * we can not geue them oure doughters to wiuers. For the children of Israel haue sworne and sayde: Cursed be he that eueth a wyfe to the Ben Iaminites.

And they sayde: Beholde there is a yearly feast of the LORDE at Silo, which lieth on the northside of the Gods house, and on the eastside of the strete as a ma doeth from Bethel in to Sichem, and lieth on the south side of Libona. And they commanded the children of Ben Iamin, as sayde: Go youre waye, and wayte in the wynyardes. And whan ye se that the doughters of Silo go forth, get you out of the wynyardes, and euery man take him a wyfe of the doughters of Silo, and go youre waye in to the lode of Ben Iamin. As for their fathers and brethren, whan they come to lawe with vs, we wyll saye: Be fauvourable to them, for they haue not taken the in battaille: but ye gaue the not vnto them by time, and it is youre faute.

The children of Ben Iamin did so, and acordinge to their nombre toke them wyues from the daunse, whom they caught by violence, and wente their waye, dwelt in their awne inheritance, and byuyled cities and dwelt therein. The children of Israel also gat them vp from thence at the same time, euery one to his trybe and to his kinred, and departed thence, euery man to his awne inheritance.

*At that time was there no kyng in Israel, and euery man dyed thinge was right in his awne eies.

The first Chapter.

IN that tyme when the Judges ruled, there was a derth in the londe. And there wente a ma from Bethleheh Juda to take his journey in to the londe of the Moabites with his wife and two sonses, which man was called Eli Melech, and his wife Naemis, his two sonses, the one Mahelon, and the other Chilion: these were Ephrathes of Bethleem Juda. And whan they came in to the londe of Moabites, they dwelt there. And Eli Melech Naemis huszbande dyed, she was left behinde with hir two sonses, which toke Moabitish wyues: the one was called Arpa, the other Ruth. And whan they had dwelt there ten yeare, they dyed both, Mahelon and Chilion, so that the woman remayned desolate of both hir sonses and hir huszbande.

Then gat she her vp with both hir sonses wyues, wente agayne out of the londe of Moabites (for she had herde in the londe of
And Ruth the Moabitisse saide vnto Naemi: Let me go in to thy feld, and gather eares of corne, after him, in whose sight I shal finde fauoure. She sayde vnto her: Go thy waie my daughter. She wepte, and came gathered after her gathered in the feld. And it fortuned that the same feld was the heritaunce of Boos, which was of the kynred of Eli Melech Naemis husbande, whose name was Boos, which was an honest man.

Then said Boos vnto Ruth: Hearest thou my daughter? Thou shalt not come vpon another mans feld, and asayne, and go not awaye from hence, but tary with my dases, and looke where they reape in thy feld, go thou after them: for I haue commandyd my seruauntes that no man touche the. And yf thou be a thyrst, go thy waie to the vessell or drynke, where my seruauntes drawe. Then fell she downe vpon his face, and bowed her self downe to the earth, and said vnto him: How haue I founde this fauoure in thy sighte, that thou woldest knowe me, which am yet a straunter?

Boos answered and sayde vnto her: It is tolde me al together, what thou hast done vnto thy mother in lawe after thy huszbades death, me home agayne emptye. Why call ye me then Naemi? wha the LORDE hath broughte me lowe, and the Allmightie hath made me sory?

It was aboute the bynynge of the barlye harwest, whan Naemi and her sonnes wife Ruth vnto Moabitysse, came agayne from the londe of the Moabites vnto Bethleem. There was a kinsman also of yf kynred of Eli Melech Naemis husbande, whose name was Boos, which was an honest man.

Then lift they vp their voyce, and wepte, and sayde vnto her: We wil go with the vnto thy people. But Naemi sayde: Turne agayne my daughters, why wolde ye go with me? How can I haue children eny more in my body, to be youre huszbandes? Turne agayne my daughters, and go youre waie, for I am now to olde to take an husbande.

And though I shalde sayde: I hope this night to take an husbande to brynge forth children, yet couldne ye not tary till they were growne vp: for ye shalde be to olde, so that ye couldne haue no huszbandes. No my daughters, therfore I am sorry for you, for ye hade of the LORDE is gone forth ouer me.

Then lifte they vp their voyce, and wepte yet more, and Arpa kyssed her mother in lawe (and turned backe agayne) but Ruth abode stilly by her. Neuertheles she sayde: Beholde, thy synner in lawe is turned backe vnto her people and to her god, turne thou againe also after thy sister in lawe. Ruth answered: Speake not to me therof, that I shalde forsake the, and turne backe from the: whither so ever thou goest, thither wil I go also: and looke where thou abysted, ther wil I abide also: Thy people is my people, thy God is my God. Looke where thou diest, ther wil I dye, and even ther wil I also be buried. The LORDE do this and that vnto me, death onely shall departe vs.

Now when she sawe, that she was stedfastly mynded to go with her, she spake nomore to her therof. So they wente on both together, till they came vnto Bethleem. And when they were come in to Bethleem, the whole cite was moued ouer them, and sayde: Is not this Naemi? Neuerthelesse she sayde vnto them: call me not Naemi, but Mara: for the Allmightie hath made me very sory. I departed full, but the LORDE hath broughte how that thou hast left thy father and thy mother, and thy natieue countre, and art come to a people, whom thou hast not knowne afore. The LORDE recompence the thy doinge, and thy rewarde be perfecte with the LORDE God of Israel, vnto whom thou art come to put thy trust vnder his wynges. She sayde: let me fynde fauoure (syr) before thyne eyes, for thou hast comforted me, and spoken frendly vnto thy handmayde, where as I am not yet like one of thy handmaydes.

Boos sayde vnto her: Whan it is etinge tyme, come hither, and eate of the bred, and dyppe thy morsele in the wyneger. And she sat hir downe besyde the reapers. And he set parched corne before her, and she ate, & was satisfied, and lefte ouer. And wha she rose to gather, Boos commanded his seruauntes, and sayde: Let her gather betwene the sheues also, and do her no dishonestye: and cast of the sheues vnto her, and let it lye that she may gather it vp, and se that noman reprowe her for it.

So she gathered in the feld vntyll euen and she shaked out what she had gathered, and it was almost an Epha of barlye: and she toke it vp, and came in to the cite, and shewed hir mother in lawe what she had gathered. She toke forth also, and gaued her of that which was left, whereof she was saftysfied. Thé sayde hir mother in lawe vnto her: Blessinge haue the man that hath knowne the, where thou hast gathered and laboured this daye.

She tolde hir mother in lawe by whom she had laboured, and sayde: The mans name, by whom I haue wroughte to daye, is Boos. Naemi sayde vnto hir daughter in lawe: The blessynge of the LORDE haue he, for he hath not lefte of to be mercifull vnto the lyuyng e* and to the deed. And Naemi sayde vnto her: The same man belongeth vnto vs, and is our nye kynsman. Ruth the Moabitiisse saide: He saide moromer vnto me: Thou shalt resorte vnto my seruauntes, till they haue made an ende of all my haruest. Naemi sayde vnto Ruth hir daughter in lawe: It is better my daughter, that thou go forth with his damsels, lest eny man withstode the in another feld. Thus she kepte herselfe with Boos damsels, so that she gathered vntill the barlye haruest and the wheate haruest was out, and came againe to hir mother in lawe.

The iii. Chapter.

A ND Naemi hir mother in lawe sayde vnto her: My daughter, I wyll prouyde rest for the, that thou maiest prosper. Boos oure kynsman, by whose damsels thou hast bene, casteth vp barlye now this night in his barne. Bathe thyselfe therfore, and moffe the, and put on thy clothes, and go downe vnto the barne, so as I now knowe the, till they haue all eaten and dronken.

Whan he layeth him downe then to sleape, mark place where he lyeth downe, and come thou, and take vp the coueringe at his fete, and laye the downe, so shall he tell the what thou shalt do. She sayde vnto her: what so euere thou saiest vnto me, I wil do it.

She wente downe to the barne, & dyd all as hir mother in lawe had commaunded her. And wha Boos had eate vp dronke, his hert was merry, & he came and layed him downe behynde a heape of sheues. And she came secretly, and toke vp the coueringe at his fete, and layed hir downe. Now wha it was midnights, the man was afrayed, and groped aboute him, and beholde, a woman laye at his fete. And he sayde: Who art thou? She answered: I am Ruth thy handmayden, sprede thy wynges ouer thy handmayden: for thou art the nexte kynsman.

He sayde: The LORDES blessinge haue thou my daughter. Thou hast done a better mercy here after then before, & thou art not gone after yonge men, nether riche nor poore. Feare not my daughter: All that thou hast sayde, will I do for the: for all the cite of my people knoweth, thou art a vertuous woma. Trueth it is now, that I am a nye kynsmä, but there is one nyer then I. Tarye thou all-nighte. Tomorow ye he take the, well ye like not to take ye, till I take ye my selfe, as truly as ye LORDE lyueth. Slepe thou till ye morninge. And she slepte at his fete untill ye morow. And she rose vp or euer one could knowe another. And he thoughte thus: That no man now knowe that I come a woman in to the barne, and he sayde: Reache me the cloke ye hast on the, & holde it forth. And she helde it forth. And he meet her sixe measures of barlye, and layed it vpon her, & she wente in to the cite, & came to hir mother in lawe, which sayde:
How is it with the my daughter? And she tolde her all ḳ the mā had done vnto her, 9 sayde: These sixe measures of barlye gaue he me, for he sayde: Thou shalt not come empyte vnto thy mother in lawe. She sayde: Abye my daughter, thyll thou se what ḳ matte−

The boke of Ruth.

A BOOS wente vp to ḳ gate, and sat him downe there: ṣ beholde, when ḳ nye kynsman wente by, Boos spake vnto him, ṣ sayde: Come ṣ syt the downe here (and called him by his name.) And he came ṣ sat him downe, ṣ he toke ten men of the Elders of ḳ cite, ṣ sayde: Syt you downe here. And they sat the downe. Thē sayde he to the nye kynsman: Naemi which ḳ com com againe frō the lōde of the Moabites *offreth to sell ḳ pece of londe, ḳ was our brothers Eli Melech, therfore thoughte I to shewe it before thine eares, ṣ to telle the: ṭf thou wilt redeeme it, then bye it before the citesyns ṣ before the Elders of my people: but ḳ thou wylt not redeeme it, then telle me, ṭ I maie knowe: for there is no nye kynsmā excepte thou, and I neste after the.

He sayde: I wil redeeme it. Boos saide: In the daye ḳ thou byest the lōde out of ḳ hande of Naemi, thou must take Ruth also the Moabitisse the wife of the deed, that thou mayest rayse vp a name to ḳ deed in his inheritaunce. Thē sayde he: ṭ can not redeeme it, lest ḳ happlye destroye myyne awne inheritaunce. Redeme thou ḳ I shulde redeeme, for I can not redeeme it. But this was an olde custome in Israel concernynge the redeemyng ḳ chaughtinge, ḳ all matters mighte be stable, the one put of his shue, ṣ gane it vnto ḳ other: ḳ was the testimony in Israel.

And the nye kynsman sayde vnto Boos: Bye thou it, ṣ he put of his shue. And Boos sayde vnto the Elders and to all the people: Ye are witnesses this daie, ḳ I haue boughte out of the hande of Naemi, all that belonged to Eli Melech, and all that was Chillons and Mahelons: And Ruth the Moabitisse Mahelons wife, take ṭ to wife, ṭ that I maye rayse vp a name vnto ḳ deed in his inheritaunce, and that his name be not roted out from amonge his brethren, and out of the gate of his place: Of this are ye witnesses. And all the people that was in the gate with the Elders, saide: We are witnesses. The LORDE make the woman that commeth in to thy house, as Rachel and Lea († which both haue buylded vp the house of Israel) that she maye be an ensample of vertue in Ephrata, and haue an honorable name in Bethlehem. And thy house be as ḳ house of Phares (§ who Thamar bare vnto Iuda) thorow the sede, that the LORDE shall gene the of this damsell.

So Boos toke Ruth, and she became his wife. And when he laye with her, the LORDE granted her ḳ she conceaued, and bare a sonne. Thē sayde the wemen vnto Naemi: Prayes be the LORDE, which hath not suffered a kynsman to ceasse from the at this tymye, that his name maye continue in Israel: he shal restore thy lyfe agayne, and pronyde for thine age. For thy sonnes wife which hath louned the, hath borne him that is better vnto the, the seven sonnes.

And Naemi toke the childe, and layde it vpon hir lappe, and became the norse of it, and hir neighbours gaue him a name: 9 sayde: There is a childe borne vnto Naemi, and they called his name Obed. The same is the father of Isai, which is ḳ father of Dauid.

The first Chapter.

THERE was a man of Ramatham Sophim of mount Ephraim, *whose name was Elcana & sonne of Ieroham, & sonne of Elihu, & sonne of Tohu, & sonne of Zuph, & was an Ephrat. And he had two wyues, & one was called Anna, & other Peninna. As for Peninna, she had children, but Anna had no childe. And she same man wete vp frô his cote tat his tyme, to worshippe and to offer vnto the LORDE Zebaoth at Silo. There were the prestes of the LORDE Ophni and Phineas, the two sonnes of Eli. Now when it came vpon a daye that Elcana offred, he gaue partes vnto his wife Peninna, and to all his sonnes and daughter. But vnto Anna he gaue one deale heuely, for he loued Anna. Neuertheles the LORDE had closed his wombe, & hir aduersary cast her in the tethe with hir vnfrutefulnes, because the LORDE had closed hir wombe: thus dyd she euery yeare, when they wente vp to the house of the LORDE, and thus she prouoked her. So she wepte, and ate nothynge. But Elcana hir huszbande sayde vnto hir: Wherfor wepest thou? and why catest thou not? And wherfore is thine hert so greued? Am not I better vnto the then ten sonnes?

Then stode Anna vp, when she had eaten and dronken at Silo. But Eli the prest sat vpon a stole by the poste of the temple of the LORDE. And she was full of henynes in hir herte, and prayed vnto the LORDE, and wepte, and vowed a vowe, and sayde: O LORDE Zebaoth, if thou wilt loke vpon the aduersite of thy handmayden, and thynke vpon me, and not forget thy handmayden, and wilt

geue thy handmayden a sonne, I wil geue him vnto the LORDE all his life longe, *and there shal no rasoure come vpon his head.

And whi she had prayed longe before y LORDE, Eli toke hed to hir mouth, for Anna spake in hir hert, hir lippes onely moned, but hir voyce was not herde. Then thoughte Eli she had bene dronken, and sayde vnto her: How longe wilt thou be dronken? Let come from the the wyne that thou hast by the. Neuerthelesse Anna answered and sayde: No my lorde, I am a sorowfull woman, wyne and strange drynke haue I not dronken tbut haue poured out my hert before y LORDE. Counte not thy handmayden a daughter of Belial: for out of my heuy thoughte and sorow haue I spoken hitherto.

Eli answered her, and sayde: Go thy waye in peace, the God of Israel shal graunte thy thy peticon that thou hast desyreth of hym. She sayde: Let thy handmayden fynde fa- soure in thy sighte. So the woman vnte her waye and ate, and loked nonore so sorowfully: and on y morow they gat them vp by tymes. And then they had worshipped be- fore y LORDE, they returned, and came home vnto Ramatha.

And Elcana laye with Anna his wife, and the LORDE remembred her. And after certayn e dayes, she cocoauen and bare a sonne, and called his name Samuel, for I haue de- syred him (sayde she) of the LORDE. And when the man Elcana wente vp with all his householde to ofrre sacrifice and his vowe vnto the LORDE at soch tymes as y custome was, Anna wente not vp, but sayde vnto hir huszbande: (I wil not go vp) tyll y childe be weened: then will I brynge hym, that he maye appeare before the LORDE, and cowntyne there for euere.

Elecana hir husbande sayde vnto her: Tho do as thou thykest best, tary tyll thou haue weened hym: but the LORDE perfourne that he hath spoken. So the woman abode, and gaue hir sonne sucke, tyll she weened him. And when she had weened hym, she broughte hym vp with her, with thre bullockes, with an Ephi of fyne floure, and a bottell of wyne, and broughte hym in to y house of the LORDE at Silo.

Neuertheles the childe was yet but yonge.

And they swee a bullocke, and broughte the childe vnto Eli. And she sayde: O my lorde, as truly as thy soule lyueth my lorde, I am the woman that stode here by y, and made intercession vnto the LORDE, when I prayed for this childe. Now hath y LORDE graunted me my peticon, which I desyreth of hym, there- fore haue I geuen him ouer vnto the LORDE, as longe as he is lent vnto the LORDE. And they worshipped y LORDE there.

The ij. Chapter.

AND Anna prayed, and sayde: My hert reioyseth in the LORDE, y my horne is exalted in the LORDE. My mouth is opened wyde vp of myne ene- mies, for I am glad of thy saluacion. There is no man holy as the LORDE, for without the is nothinge, and there is no corte like vnto oure God. Let goe youre grete booteinge of thye thynges, set goe out of your mouth that olde byworde: for the LORDE is a God y knoweth all things, a he hath set all workes in order.

The bowe of the mightie is broken, and the weake are gyrded aboute with strength. They that were fylled afore, are solde for bred: and they that were hongrie, are satisfieth: vpvyll the baren bare seuen, and tyll she that had many children, was become weake.

The LORDE slayeth, and geueth life: he ledeth vnto hell, and bryngeth out agayn.

The LORDE maketh poore and maketh riche: He bryngeth lowe and exalteth.

He taketh vp the neadie out of the dust, and lifteth vp y poore out of the myre, that he maye set them amoung the pryncest, and to let them inheret the seate of honoure: for the foundacions and corners of the world are the LORDES, and he hath set the compase of the earth theron.

He shall preserue the fete of his sayntes, but y vngoodly shal be put to sylence in dar- nesse. For there is no man that can doe oughte of his owne power.

The LORDES enemies shall be put in feare before him, he shall thonder vp the in heauie.

The LORDE shall judge the endes of the worlde, a shal geue streth vnto his kyng, a shall exalte the honer of his anonyted.

Elcana wente his wyae to Ramath vnto his
And Eli blessed Elican his wife, and looked into him that brought forth the offering.

For Eli was very old, and they spake as wait under the eyes of the tabernacle of the presence of the Lord. And he spake to them: wherefore so do ye this? For I heare of your-conversation of all this people. Not so my child; this is no good report that I hear, ye cause the people of the Lord to offend. *Yf any man synne agaynst a man, the judge calleth redresse it. But yf any man synne agaynst the Lord, who can redresse it? Neuertheles they herkened not vnto the voice of their father, for the Lord would slay them. But the child Samuel wente and grewe vp, & was accepted of the Lord of me.

There came a man of God to Eli, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the Lord: I shewed my selfe vnto thy fathers house, when they were yet in Egypte vnder Pharaoh, and chose him there vnto my selfe before all the trybes of Israel, for the presbytery, that he shoulde offer vpon myne altar, and burne incense, and weere the ouerbody cote before me, & vnto thy fathers house I gaue all the offeringes of the children of Israel. Why layest thou thy selfe then agaynst my sacrifices and meatofferinges, which I commanded (to offer) in the habitation: and thou honourest thy sonsnes more then me, that ye mighte fede your selues with the firstlings of all the meatofferinges of my people of Israel?

Therefor sayeth the Lord God of Israel: I haue spoken, that thou house and thy fathers house shulde walke before me for ever. But now sayeth the Lord: That be farre from me. But who so euer honoureth me, him will I honour also: as for those that despise me, they shall not be regarded. Beholde, the tyme shal come, that I will breake thyne armes in two, and the armes of thy fathers house, so that there shall no oldeman be in thy house. And thou shalt see thine adversaries in the habitation, in all the good of Israel, and there shall neuer be old men in thy fathers house. Yet wille I not rote out every man of the fro myne altar, but the thye eyes maye be consumed, that thy soule maye be sorry: & a great multitude of thy house shal dye, when they are come to be men.

And this shalbe a token vnto the, that shal come vpon thy two sonsnes Ophni and Phineas: They shalbe both dye in one daye. But vnto my selfe I will rayse vp a faithfull prist, which shall do according as it is in my hert, and in my soule: vnto him wille I buyde a sure house, that he maye alwaye walke before myne anointed. And who so euer remayneth of thy house, shall come and worship him for a syluer peny, and for a pece of bred, and shall saie: I praye the leewe me to one prestes parte, that I maye eate a morsell of bred.

1 Re. 4. c. || Jere. 33. c.
A ND when the child Samuel mystred vnto the LORDE vnder Eli, the worde of the LORDE was deare at the same tyme, nether was there any sure manifest vision. And it fortuned at the same tyme, that Eli laye in his place, * and his eyes beganne to be dyme, so that he could not se. And Samuel had layed him downe in the temple of the LORDE (where the Arke of God was) before ylame of God was put out. And the LORDE called Samuel. He answered: Beholde, here am I. And he ranne vnto Eli, * and sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. But he saide: I have not called the, go thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. And he wente his waye, and layed him downe to slepe.

The LORDE called againe: Samuel. And Samuel arose, * and wente vnto Eli, * and sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. Neuertheles he sayde: My sonne, I have not called the. Go thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. As for Samuel, he knewe not the LORDE as yet, * and the worde of the LORDE was not yet shewed vnto him. And the LORDE called Samuel thrice tyme. And he arose, * and wente vnto Eli, * and sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. Then perceaued Eli the LORDE called his childe, * he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye agayne, * and laye the downe to slepe: and the LORDE call the eny more, then sayde: Speake LORDE, for thy seruauent heareth. Samuel wete his waye, and layed him downe in his place. The came the LORDE, * and stode, and called like as afore: Samuel, Samuel. And Samuel sayde: Speake (LORDE) for thy seruauent heareth. And the LORDE saide vnto Samuel: Beholde, I do a thinge in Israel, * who so euer shall heare it, both his eares shal glowe. In thy daie will I raie vp vpon Eli * all, * he spake cœcernynge his house. I will take it in hande, * and perfourme it: for I haue tolde him, * I wilde Judge ouer his house for euer, because of the wickednes, * he knewe how shamefully his childe behaued the selues, and hath not once loked sowerly therto. Therefore haue I sworne vnto house of Eli. * this wickednes of thy house of Eli shal neuer be recocyled nether with sacrifice ner with meatoffringe for euer. And Samuel laye vnto morow. * opened the dores of the house of the LORDE.

But Samuel was afrayed to tell the vysion vnto Eli. Then Eli called him * and sayde: Samuel my sonne. He answered: Beholde, here am I. * He sayde: What is thy worde? * the LORDE hath spoké vnto the? * hyde it not fro me. God do this * in the LORDE, * yf thou hyde oughte fro me, of all that he hath talked with the. Then Samuel tolde him altogether, * he sayde: It is the LORDE, let him do what pleaseth him.

Samuel grewe vp, * and the LORDE was with him, * and there fell none of all the worde vp the earth. And all Israel fro Dan vnto Bersabe, knewe the LORDE was faithfull to be a prophet of the LORDE. And the LORDE appeared agayne at Silo: for the LORDE shewd him selfe vnto Samuel at Silo, thorow the worde of the LORDE.

A ND all Israel spake of Samuel. And Israel wente forth to the battayll against the Philistynes, * and pitched besyde the Helpe stone. As for the Philistynes, they pitched at Aphek, and prepared them selues against Israel. And when the battayll beganne, the hoost was deuynd, so that Israel was smytté before the enemies, * in the edge in the felde they slewe aboute a foure thousande men. And when the people came in to the hoost, the Elders of Israel sayde: Wherfore hath the LORDE cause vs to be smytten this daie before the Philistynes? * Let vs take vnto vs the Arke of the LORDES couenuant from Silo, * let it come amôge vs, that it may helpe vs from the hande of oure enemies. And the people sent vnto Silo, * caused to fet the Arke of the LORDES couenuant of the LORDE Zebaoth, that syyteth vpon the Cherubins. And with the Arke of the couenuant of God there were the two sounes of Eli, Ophni and Phineas.

And when the Arke of the couenuant of the LORDE came in to the hoost, all Israel shouted with a greate shoute, so that the earth sounded withall. But when the Philistynes herde this noysie of their shoute, they sayde: what noysie is this of soch greate shoutinge in the tentes of the Hebrues? * And when they perceaued: ye the Arke of the LORDE was come in to the hoost, they were afrrayed: ye sayde: God is come in to the hoost. And they sayde morourer: Wo vnto vs, for it hath not bene thus afore tyne. Wo vnto vs. Who wil deluver vs fro the hande of these hye goddes? These are the goddes that smote Egiphte with all maner of plages in the wyldernesse. Be stronge now and manly ye Philistynes, that ye serue not the Hebrues: as they haue serued you. Be manly and fynge.

Then foughthe the Philistynes, ye Israel was smyttyn, ye very one fled vnto his fete, ye there was a very greate slaughte, so that there fell of Israel thirtie thousandd fotemë, ye the Arke of God was takë, ye the two sonnes of Eli, Ophi and Phineas dyed.

Then rane there one of Ben Iamin out of the fore fronte of the battayl, ye came vnto Silo the same daye, ye had his clothes rente, and had earth vpo his head. And when he came in, Heli sat vpon the seate, that he mighte loke towards the waye: for his herte was fearfull aboute ye Arke of God. And when the man came in to the cite, he tolde it forth: and all the cite cried. And when Eli herde ye noyse of the cryege, he axed: What noyse of busynes is this? The man came hastily, and tolde Eli. (As for Eli, he was fourescore and eightene yeare olde, ye and his eyes were dymme, so that he could not se.) The man tolde vnto Eli: I come and am fled this daye out of the hoost. He sayde: How is it my sonne?

Then answered the tydinge bringer, ye sayde: Israel is fled before the Philistynes, and a greate slaughte hath there bene amonste the people, ye thy two sonnes Ophi and Phineas are dead, yee ye the Arke of God is takë awaye. When he had made mention of the Arke of God, he fell downe baerwarde from the seate by the gate, and brake his neck, and dyed: for he was olde, ye a heuy man. He judged Israel forty yeares. The wife of his sonne Phineas was with childe, ye shulde shortly be deluvered, when she herde the tydinges ye the Arke of God was taken, and ye her brother in lawe and her huszbade were dead, she bowed her selue and tranayled: for heir payne came vpon her. And when she was now at the pouyte of death, the wemen that stode by her, sayde: Feare not, thou hast a yõge sonne.

But she gaue no answere, nether regarded it, and she called the childe Icabod, and sayde: The glory is gone from Israel, because the Arke of God was taken awaye, and her brother in lawe and her husbande. And she sayde morourer: The glory is gone from Israel, for the Arke of God is takë awaye.

The 5. Chapter.

As for the Arke of God, the Philistynes took it and broughte it from the stone of helpe vnto Aszdod in to the house of Dagon, and set it besyde Dagon. And whan they of Aszdod rose vp early on the morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face vpon the earth, before the Arke of the LORDE. But they tooke vp Dagon, and set him agayne in his place. Neuertheles when they rose vp early on the nexte morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face agayne vpon the earth before the Arke of the LORDE: but his head and both his hædes heuen of vpon the threszholde, so that the block laie there onely. Theryfore the prestes of Dagon, and all they that go in to his house, treade not vpo the threszholde of Dagon at Aszdod vnto this daye.

But the hande of the LORDE was heuy vpon them of Aszdod, and destroyed them, and smote Aszdod and all the borders therof in secrete places. When the men of Aszdod sawe that they were so plaged, they sayde: Let not the Arke of the God of Israel tary with vs, for his hande is to harde vpó vs vpon oure god Dagon. And they set forth and gathered all the prynces of the Philistynes vnto them, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the God of Israel? Then answered they of Geth: Let the Arke of the God of Israel be borne aboute. And they caried the Arke of the God of Israel rounde aboute.

But wha they bare it aboute, there was a very greate rumoure in the cite thorow the hande of the LORDE, and smote the people of the cite, from the smallest vnto the greatest, and destroyed them in the secrete places. Then sente they the Arke of the LORDE vnto Ekron. But wha the Arke of the LORDE came vnto Ekron, they of Ekron cried: They haue caried the Arke of God aboute vnto me, to slaye me and my people.

Then sente they forth, and gathered all the prynces of the Philistynes together, and sayde:
Sende awaye the Arke of the God of Israel agayne vnto hir place, that it slaye not me & my people: for there is a very great rumore with the deed in all the cite, and the hande of God is there. And the people that dyed not, were smyttyn in secret places, so that the noyse of the cite vte vp vnto heauen.

The vi. Chapter.

T

US was the Arke of the LORDE in the londe of the Philistynes seuen monethes. And the Philistynes called their prestes and soythsayres, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the LORDE? Shewe vs, wher with shal we sende it vnto hir place? They sayde: Yf ye wyll sende awaye the Arke of the God of Israel, sende it not awaye emptye, but geue a trespase offerynge: so shal ye be made whole, and ye shal knowe, why his hande departeth not from you.

They sayde: What is the trespase offerynge that we shall geue him? They answered: Fyne hynder partes of golde, and fyue golden myce, acording to the nombre of the fyue prynces of þ Philistynes. For there hath bene one manuer of plage vpon you all, and vpon youre prynces. Therfore must ye make youre hynder partes of one faszhion and youre myce, which haue destroyed youre londe, that ye maye geue the God of Israel the honoure: peraduenture his hâde shal be the lighter vpon you and vpon youre God, and vpon youre londe. Why harden ye youre hert, as the Egipcians and Pharoah hardened their hert? When he shewed hym selfe vpon them * dyd not they let them departe to go their waye?

Go to now therfore, and make a new cart, and take two mylky kyne, vpon þ which they never came yock, and yocke them to þ cart, and let their calues tary behynde them at home: and take ye the Arke of the LORDE and laye it vpon the cart: and the Iewels of golde that ye geue him for a trespase offeringe put in a coffer beside it, & sende it awaye and let it go. And loke well: yf it go the waie of hir awne coaste Beth Semes, the hath he done vs all this greate euell: Yf no, then shal ye knowe that his hande hath not touched vs, but þ is it happened vnto vs by chaunce.

The men dyd so, and toke two yonge mylky kyne, and yocked them to a cart, and helde their calues at home, and layed the Arke of the LORDE vpon the cart, and the coffer with the golden myce, and with the ymages of their disease. And the kyne wente straight waye vnto Beth Semes vpon one hye strete, and wente on blearynge, and turned nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte. And the prynces of the Philistynes wente after them vnto þ coast of Beth Semes.

The Beth Samites were euen reapynge downe their wheate harvest in the valley, and lyfte vp their eyes, and sawe the Arke, and reioyseth to se it. The cart came in to the feld of Iosua the Beth Semite, and there it stode stylly. And there was a greate stone, and they claue the tymbre of the cart, and ofrred the kyne vnto the LORDE for a burntofferynyge.

But the Leuites toke downe the Arke of the LORDE, and the coffer that was by it, wherin the Iewels of golde were, and set the vpon the greate stone. The men of Beth Semes offred burntofferynyges, and other offerynge also vnto the LORDE the same daye. And when the fyue prynces of the Philistynes had sene it, they departed agayne the same daye towards Ekron.

These are the golden diseases, that the Philistynes offred for a trespase offerynge vnto the LORDE: Aszdod one, Gasa one: Ascalon one, Gath one, and Ekron one: and golden myce, acordinge to the nombre of all the cities of the Philistynes amonge the fyue prynces, from the walled cite vnto the vyllage, and vnto the greate playne feldes, wher vpon they set the Arke of the LORDE (which was) vnto this daye vpon the feld of Iosua the Beth Semite.

And certayne of Beth Sames were slaine because they had sene þ Arke of the LORDE, and he slewe fyfiye thousande and sescent men of the people. Then mourned the people, because the LORDE had done so greate a slaughter in the people. And the men at Beth Semes sayde: Who maye stode before the LORDE so holy a God? And to whoso shal he go frô vs? And they sent messaungers to þ inhabitants of Kiriath Iearim, saige: The Philistynes have brought the Arke of God agayne, come downe, & fetch it vp vnto you.

O the men of Kiriath Iearim came downe, & fetched vp þ Arke of þ LORDE, & brought it in to † house of *Abinadab at Gibeon, they consecrated Eleazar his sonne, y he might kepe † Ark. And fro † daye that the Arke of ‡ LORDE abode at Kiriat Iearim, † tyme extended forth so longe till it came to twentie yeares: and all the house of Israel wepte after the LORDE.

But Samuel sayde vnto all the house of Israel: † If ye tune you withall youre hert vnto the LORDE, then put awaye from you the straunge goddes and Astaroth, and directe youre hert vnto the LORDE and serve him only, so shall he deluyer you out of the hande of the Philistynes. Then the children of Israel put awaye Baalim and Astaroth from them, and sereued the LORDE onely.

Samuel sayde: Gather all Israel together vnto Mispa, that I maye praye for you vnto the LORDE. And they came together vnto Mispa, and drue water, † poured it out before the LORDE, and fasted the same daye, and there they sayde: We have synned vnto the LORDE. So Samuel iudged the children of Israel at Mispa.

But when the Philistines herde that † children of Israel were come together vnto Mispa, the prynces of the Philistynes wete vp against Israel. When † children of Israel herde that, they were afraied of † Philistynes, † sayde vnto Samuel: Ceasse not to crye vnto the LORDE oure God for vs, † he maye helpe vs out of the hande of † Philistynes.† Samuel toke a fat lambe, † offered an whole burnt-offerynge vnto the LORDE, † cried vnto the LORDE for Israel, and the LORDE herde him. And whyle Samuel was offerynge † burnt sacrifice, † Philistines came to fight agaynst Israel. But the LORDE thondred a thonder vpon the Philistynes the same daye † discoveted the, † so † they were smytt before Israel. The wente † men of Israel forth, † chaced † Philistynes, † smote them till vnder Beth Car. Then toke Samuel a stone, † set it vp betwene Mispa † Sen, † called it † Help stone, † sayde: † Hither to hath the LORDE helped vs. Thus were the Philistynes brought downe, † came nomore within the border of Israel. And † hade of † LORDE was against the Philistynes, as longe as Samuel lyued.

So Israel gat the cities agayne, that the Philistynes had conquered, † fro Ekron vnto Gath, with the borders therof, those did Israel rescue out of the hande of the Philistynes: † Israel had peace with the Amorites. Samuel iudged Israel as longe as he lyued, † wete aboute every yeare vnto Bethel † Gilgal † Mispa: † whi he had iudged Israel in all these places, he came agayne vnto Ramath for there was his house, † there he iudged Israel, † builded an altare there vnto † LORDE.

The iiij. Chapter.

But whan Samuel waxed olde, he set his sonnes to be iudges ouer Israel. His firstborne sonne was called Joel † the seconde Abia, † they were iudges at Bersaba. Neuertheles his sonnes walked not in his wayes, but enelyed vnto couterousenes, † take gifts, † wraysted the lawe. Then all † Elders in Israel gathered the seleues together, † came to Ramath vnto Samuel, † sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou art waxen olde, † thy sonnes walke not in thy wayes, † set a kynge now ouer vs therfore, to iudge vs, as all † Heithene haue. The was Samuel displeased whi they sayde: Gene vs a kynge, to iudge vs. And Samuel prayed before the LORDE.

The LORDE sayde vnto Samuel: Herkeuen vnto the voice of the people in all † they haue sayde vnto the. † For they haue not refuseth the, but me, † I shulde not be kinge ouer them. They do vnto the as they haue done euere, sence the daie † I brought them out of the londe of Egypte vnto this daie, and haue forsaken me, and sereued other goddes. Herke now therfore vnto their voyce. Yet testifie vnto them, and shewe them † the lawe of the kynge that shall raigne ouer them.

And Samuel tolde all the wordes of the LORDE vnto † people, that requyred a kinge of him. This shal be the lawe of the kynge † shal raigne ouer you: †† Yourse sonnes shal he take for his charettes, and for horsmen to runne before his charettes, and to be rulers † captaynes, to be plowemen to tyl his londe and to be reapers in his haruest, and to make his harness, and soche thinges as belongeth to his charettes. As for your daughters, he † shall take the, to be Apotecaries, cokes and bakers. † Yourse best londe and vynnyardes, and oyle-gardens shal he take, and geue vnto his seruauntes: Of youre sedes also and viniardes shal he take the Tithes, & gene vnto his chæberlaynes and servauntes. And youre seruautes and youre maydes, and youre best younge men, and youre asses shall he take, and do his busynes withall. Of youre flocks shall he take the Tithes, and ye shall be his seruautes. When ye shall chrye then at the same tyme ouer youre kyngye, whom ye haue chosen you, the LORDE shall not heare you at the same tyme. Neuerthelesse the people refused to heare the voyce of Samuel, and sayde: Not so, but there shall be a kyngye ouer vs, & we may be as all other Heithi, & our kyngge maie judge vs, & go forth before vs, and gouerne oure warres. The herkened Samuel vnto all, & people sayde, tolde it before your eares of the LORDE. The LORDE sayde vnto the: Herken thou vnto their voyce, and make them a kyngye. And Samuel sayde vnto the men of Israel: Go youre waye euery one vnto his cite.

THERE was a man of Ben Iamin named *Cis, the sonne of Abiel, the sonne of Zeor, the sonne of Bethorah, the sonne of Apiah, the sonne of a man of Iemini, a valesant man, which had a sonne named Saul, which was so goodly a younge man, that there was not a goodlier amongethe children of Israel, higher by the heade then all the people. Cis the father of Saul had lost his asses, and he sayde vnto Saul his sonne: Take one of the children with the, get the vp, go thy waye, and seke the asses. And he wente his waye thorow mount Ephraim, and thorow the lode of Solisa, and founde them not. They wente thorow the lode of Saulim, there they were not. They passed thorow the lode of Iemini, & founde the not. But wha they came in to the londe of Zuph, Saul sayde vnto the childe that was with him: Come, let vs go home agayne, lest my father let go the asses, and take care for vs. He sayde: Beholde, here is an honorable man of God in this cite, all that he sayeth, commeth to passe. Let vs go thither now, peraduenture he maye shewe vs oure waye which we go. But Saul said vnto his childe: Though we shuld go, what brynge we the man? For the bred is gone out of oure walet, and els haue we no gifte to brynge the man of God, what haue we? The childe answered agayne, and sayde: Beholde, I haue the fourth parte of a syluer Sycle by me, & same wyll we gene the man of God, that he maye shewe vs oure waye.

(Here tymes in Israel, whan a man wente to axe councell at the LORDE, he sayde: Come, let vs go to the Seer: for they that now are called prophets, were called Seers afore tymes.) Saul sayde vnto his childe: Thou hast well spoken, come let vs go. And whan they wente vnto the cite where the man of God was, and came vp to the cite, they founde damnels which were gone forth to drawe water, vnto them they sayde: Is the Seer here? They answered them and sayde: Yee. Beholde, he is there, make hast, for he came in to the cite this daye, because the people haue a sacrifice to do to daye in the hye place. Whan ye come in the cite, ye shal fynde him, afore he go vp to the hye place for to eate: for the people wyll not eate tylly he come. For he shall blesse theofferlynge, then shal they eate that are called. Therfore go youre waye vp, for euere now shal ye finde him.

And whan they came vp to the cite, and were euere in the myddes of the cite, beholde, Samuel came forth in their waye, and wolde go vp to the hye place. (But the LORDE had opened Samuels eare the daye afore, or euere Saul came, and sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyme wyll I sende a man vnto the out of the lode of Ben Iamin, him shalt thou anoynte to be prynce ouer my people of Israel, that he maye delyuer my people from the hande of the Philistynes: for I haue loked vpon my people, and their crye is come before me.) Now whan Samuel behelde Saul, the LORDE answered hym: lo, & is the man of whom I tolde the, that he shulde raigne ouer my people.

Then came Saul vnto Samuel vnder the gate, and sayde: Tell me (I praye the) where is the Seers house? Samuel answered Saul, and sayde: I am the Seer. Go vp before me vnto the hye place: for ye shall eate with me to daye, tomorrow wyll I lett the go, and all that is in thynge herte, wyll I tell the: and as for the Asses which were lost thre dayes agoo, care not thou for them, for they are founde. And to whom shall belongeth all that is pleasant in Israel? Shall it not belongeth vnto the and to all

* 1 Par. 9. a.
+ 1 Reg. 13. a.
Beholde, Whan I sayde to vnto you, Samuel tolke Saul g his childe g brought them in to the perler where they shulde eate, and satt them aboue those that were calle, of whom there were aboute a thirtie men. And Samuel sayde vnto the coke: Geue me the porcion that I gae the, and bad the kepe it by the. Then the coke tolke vp a shulder, and bare it forth, and set it before Saul. And (Samuel) sayde: Beholde, this is left, laye it before the, and eate: for it was keppe for the agaynst this tymne, when I called the people. Thus Saul ate with Samuel the same daye.

And when they were gone downe from the hye place vnto the cite, he talked with Saul in the chamber. And they rose vp early on the morow. And when the mornynge sprynge arose, Samuel called Saul in the chamber, and sayde: Vp, I maye sende the thy waye. And Saul gat him vp: they both wete forth together, he and Samuel. And when they came downe to the ende of the cite, Samuel sayde vnto Saul: Speake vnto thy childe, that he go on forth before vs, but stode thou styll now, that I maie shewe the what God hath sayde:

The 1. Chapter.

THEN tolke Samuel a glasse of oyle, and poured it vpō his heade, and kissed him, and sayde: Seist thou that the LORDE hath anoynted the, to be the prince ouer his enehteitate? Whan thou goest now fro me, thou shalt fynde two men besyde † Rachels graue in the coast of Ben Iamin at Zelzah, which shal saie vnto the: The asses are founde, whom thou wente to seke: and beholde, thy father hath put the asses out of his mynde, and taketh thoughte for the, and sayeth: What shall I do for my sonne?

And when thou goest on forth from thence, thou shalt come to the Oke of Thabor, there shall thre men fynde the, which go vp vnto God towarde Bethel: one beareth thre kiddes, another thre loaes of bred the thyrde a bottel with wyne: and they shall salute the, and gene the two loaes, which thou shalt take of their hande. After that shalt thou come to the hyll of God, ‡ where the Philistynes watch is: and whā thou comest there in to the cite, there shall mete the a company of prophets commynge downe from the hye place, and before them a Psalterie, and tabret, a pype and a harpe, and they them selues prophecieenge. And the sprete of the LORDE shall come vpon the, and thou shalt propheeye with them, and shalt be chaunged in to another man.

When these tokens now come vnto the, ‡ then do what so euer commeth vnder thynne hande: for God is with the. Thou shalt go downe before me vnto Gilgall: Beholde, thither wyf I come downe vnto the, that thou mayest offre burntofferynge and deedofferynge. * Seuen dayes shalt thou tarye till I come to the, and shewe the what thou shuldest do. And when he turned his shulder to go from Samuel, God chaunged him another hert, and all these tokēs came the same daye.

And when they came vnto the hill, beholde, there met him a company of prophets † and the sprete of God came vpon him, so that he propheceed amonge them. But whā they which knewe him before, sawe him that he propheced with the prophetes, they sayde all amonge them selues: What is happenned vnto the sonne of Cis? Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And one ‡ was there, answered and sayde: Who is their father?  Hereof came the prouerbe: Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And whā he had left of prophecieenge, he came vp to the hyll.

Sauls vnclle sayde vnto him and to his childe: Whither wenta ye? They answered: To seke the asses. And when we sawe that they were awaye, we came vnto Samuel. Then sayde Sauls vnclle: Tell me, what sayde Samuel vnto you? Saul answered his vnclle: He tolde vs, the asses were foute. But of ‡ kyngdome he tolde him nothinge what Samuel had sayde.

Samuel called the people together vnto the LORDE to Mispa, and spake vnto the children of Israel: Thus saieth † LORDE the God of Israel: I broughhte Israel out of Egipte, and deluyered you from the hande of ‡ Egipcians, and from the hande of all the kyngdomes that oppressed you. ‡‡ But now haue ye refused youre God, which hath helped you out of all youre sorowes and troubles, ye haue saide vnto hym: Set a kinge ouer vs. Well, stonde ye now before LORDE according to youre trybes and kynreds.

Now when Samuel had brought forth all the trybes of Israel, the trybe of Ben Iamin was taken. And when he had broughte forth the trybe of Ben Iamin with his kynreds, the kynred of Matri was taked, Saul the sonne of Cis was taked. And they sought him, but they founde him not.

Then axed they further at the LORDE, whether he was for to come thither. The LORDE answered: Beholde, he hath hyd him selfe amongeth ye vessels. Then ranne they thither, and fetched him. And when he stode amongeth the people, he was hygher by the head then all the people. And Samuel sayde vnto all the people: There se ye him whom the LORDE hath chosen, for in all the people there is none like him. Then gaue all the people a shoute, and sayde: *God saue the new kynge.

Samuel tolde the people all the lawe of the kyngdome, and wrote it in a boke, and layed it before the LORDE. And Samuel let all the people go, every one to his awne house. And Saul wente home also vnto Gibea, and there wente with him one parte of the hoost, whose hertes God had touched. But the childre of Bellal sayde: What shal this felowe helpe vs, and despyseth him, he broughte him no presente. But he made hym as though he herde it not.

The xi. Chapter.

NAHAS ye Ammonite wete vp a layed sege vnto Iabes in Gilead. And all the men of Iabes sayde vnto Nahas: Be at one with vs, we wyll serue the. But Nahas ye Ammonite answered them: I wil make a covenaut with you, of this condition, that I maye thrust out all youre right eyes, and put you to shame amongeth all Israel. Then sayde all the Elders of Iabes vnto him: Geue vs seuen dayes respyte, that we maye sende messaungers in to all ye coastes of Israel: Yf there be then no saucoure, we wyll go forth vnto the.

So the messaungers came vnto Gibea of Saul, and spake this before the cares of the people. Then all ye people lifte vp their voyce, and wepte. And beholde, Saul came after the oxen out of the felde, and sayde: What ayleth the people that they wepe? So they tolde him the carande of the men of Iabes. Then came the sprete of God vpon him, when he had herde these wordes, and his wrath was sore moned, and he toke a couple of oxen, and hewed them in sunder, and sent them in to all the coasts of Israel by the messaungers, sayenge: Who so ever goeth not forth after Saul and Samuel, his oxen shalbe thus deale withall.

Then fell the feare of the LORDE vpon the people, so that they wente forth like as one man, and they were tolde at Basek, and of the childre of Israel there were three hundred thousande men, and thirtie thousande of the children of Luda. And they spake vnto the messaungers that were come: Saye thus to the men of Iabes in Gilead: Tomorow shal ye haue helpe, whan Sonne is at the whotest. When ye messaungers came and tolde this to the men of Iabes, they were glad. And the men of Iabes sayde: Tomorow wyll we come forth vnto you, that ye maye do vnto vs, what so euer it pleaseth you. And on ye nexte morow Saul set the people in thre partes, and came in to the hoost aboute the mornynge watch, and smote the Ammonites tyl the daye was at the whotest. As for those ye remayned, they were so scard, that two of them abode not together.

Then sayde the people vnto Samuel: Where are they that sayde: Shulde Saul raigne ouer vs? Delyuer vs here the men, that we maye put them to death. But Saul sayde: There shal noman dye this daye, for to daye hath the LORDE geen health in Israel. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Come, let vs go vnto Gilgall, and renue the kyngdome there. Then wente all the people vnto Gilgall, and there they made Saul kinge before the LORDE at Gilgal, and offered deed-offeringes before the LORDE. And Saul with all the men of Israel reioyseth there greatly.

The xii. Chapter.

SAMUEL sayde vnto all Israel: Beholde, I haue herkened vnto youre voyce in all that ye sayde vnto me, and haue made a kyng ouer you. And now lo, there goeth youre kyng before you. As for me, I am waxen olde and graye heered, and my sonnes are with you: and I haue gone before you fro my youth vp vnto this daye. Beholde, here am I: answer ye agaynst me before the LORDE and his anointed. ye haue taken any mans oxe or ass, yf I haue done any man violence or wronge, If I haue oppressed any man, yf I haue receaue a giue of any mans hande, and kepte it secretly, I wil restore it you agayne.

They saide: Thou hast done vs nether violence ner wronge, nether oppressed, ner taken ought of any mans hande. He saide: The LORDE be witnessse agaynst you, and so be his anointed this daye, that ye haue founde nothinge in my hāde. They saide: Yee they shalbe witnesses. And Samuel sayde vnto the people: The LORDE which made Moses and Aaron, and broughte youre fathers out of the londe of Egipte (is here present,) Stode forth nowthere, that I maye iudge you before the LORDE ouer the righteousnes of the LORDE, which he hath done for you and youre fathers.

†When Iacob was come in to Egipte, youre fathers cryed vnto the LORDE. †And he sent Moses and Aaron to brynge youre fathers out of Egipte, and to cause them for to dwell in this place.

§But when they forgott the LORDE their God, he solde them vnder the power of Sissera, the captayne at Hazor and vnder the power of the Phylistynes and vnder the power of the kinge of the Moabites, which foughte agaynst them. But they cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned, in that we haue forsaken the LORDE, and serued Baalim and Astaroth. But now deliuer vs from the hande of oure enemies, and we wyl serue the. Then the LORDE sent Jerubaal, ††Bedan, ‡‡Iepthhae, §§and Samuel, ††† deluyered you from youre enemies rounde aboute, and caused you to dwell safe.

But when ye sawe that Nahas the kynge of the children of Ammon came agaynst you yf ye sayde vnto me: Not thou, but a kynge shal raigne ouer vs, where as notwithstandinge youre God was youre kynge. Now, there haue ye youre kynge, who ye haue chosen and desyred: for lo, the LORDE hath set a kynge ouer you. Ye shall heare the LORDE now, and serue him, and herken vnto his voice, and not be dishobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE, then shall both ye and youre kynge that raigneth ouer you, folowe ye LORDE youre God. But ye haue not vnto the LORDE, but be dishobedient vnto his mouth, then shal the hande of the LORDE be agaynst you, and agaynst youre fathers.

Stonde forth now also, and beholde this greate thinges, that the LORDE shal do before youre eyes. Is not now the wheate harvest? Yet wyll I call vpō the LORDE, so that he shal cause it thonder and rayne, that ye shall knowe and se the greate euell, which ye haue done in the sight of the LORDE, in that ye haue desyred to haue a kynge.

And when Samuel called vpon the LORDE, the LORDE caused it to thonder and raine the same daye.

Then all the people feared the LORDE greatly and Samuel, and they sayde all vnto Samuel: Praie thou vnto the LORDE thy God for thy seruauntes, that we dye not: for beside oure sinnes we haue done this euell also, that we haue desyred vnto vs a kynge. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Feare not, ye haue done all this euell in dede. Neverthelesse departe not backe from the LORDE, but serue the LORDE with all youre hert, and go not asyde after vanite, for it profyeth you nothinge, and can not deluyer you, in so much as it is but aayne thinge. ††† For the LORDE shall not forsake his people because of his greate names sake: for the LORDE hath begonne to make you a people vnto him selve. But God forbyd that I shulde synne so vnto the LORDE, to ceasse from prayenge for you, and from teachinge you the good rightouse waye. Feare ye the LORDE therefore, and serue him faithfully with all youre hert: for ye haue sene, how greate thinges he doth vnto you. But ye ye do wickedly, both ye feare the LORDE shal perisse.

The riij. Chapter.

Saul had bene kynge one yeare, and wha he had raigned ouer Israel two yeares, he chose him thrice thosundede me out of Israel: two thousande were with Saul at Michmas vpon the mount of Bethel, and one thousande with Ionathas at Gibeann of Ben Iamin. As for the other people, he let them go every one vnto his tente. But Ionathas smote \( \tilde{y} \) Philistynes in their awne *watch, which was at Gibea. That came to \( \tilde{y} \) Philistynes cares. And Saul caused to blowe the trompnes in all the londe, \( \tilde{y} \) to saye: Let the Hebrues heare. And all Israel herde saye: Saul hath smyyten the Philistynes watch, for Israel stanke before the Philistynes. And all the people cried after Saul vnto Gilgal.

Then the Philistynes gathered them selues together to fighte with Israel, thirtie thousand charrettes, sixe thousande horsmen, and other people besyde, in nombre as the soude by the See shore, and wente vp, and pitched at Michmas on the east syde of Bethauen. Whan the men of Israel sawe that mysfortune laye vpon the neckes of the (for the people were come therto) they crope in to caues and dennes, in to rockes, and holes and welles. But the Hebrues wente ouer Iordan in to \( \tilde{y} \) londe of Gad and Gilead. As for Saul he was yet at Gilgal, and all the people were fayntharted after him. *Then taryed he seuen dayes acordinge to the tyme apoynted of Samuel. And when Samuel came not vnto Gilgal, the people were seatered abrode from him. Then sayde Saul: Brynge me hither a burntofferinge and deedeofferinges. And he offered a burntofferinge. But when he had made an ende of the burntofferinge beholde, Samuel came. Then wente Saul forth to mete him, that he might salute him. But Samuel sayde: What hast thou done? Saul answered: I sawe that the people was seatered abrode fro me, and thou camest not in due season: and the Philistynes were gathered together at Michmas. Then sayde I: Now shall the Philistynes come downe to me vnto Gilgal, and I haue not besoughte the face of the LORDE: \( \tilde{y} \) so I boldened my selfe, \( \tilde{y} \) offered a burntofferinge.

Samuel sayde vnto Saul: Thou hast done foolishly, and not kepte the commandement of the LORDE thy God, which he commanded the. \( \tilde{y} \) For thou haddest not done this: he had prospered thy kyngdome vp to Israel for euer: but now shall not thy kyngdome continue. \( \tilde{y} \) The LORDE hath soughte him out a man after his owne hert: him hath the LORDE commanded to be prynce ouer his people, for thou hast not kepte \( \tilde{y} \) the LORDE commaundd \( \tilde{y} \). And Samuel arose, and wente vp from Gilgal vnto Gibea Ben Iamin.

And Saul nomberd the people that was founde with him, vpon a sixe hundreth men. Saul \( \tilde{y} \) his sonne Ionathas, and \( \tilde{y} \) people that was with them, taried at Gibea Ben Iamin: but \( \tilde{y} \) Philistynes had pitched their tentes at Michmas. And out of the hoost of the Philistynes there wente thre bondes of men to destroye: one turned the waye towards Ephra in to the londe of Saul: another turned towarde the waye of Bethoron: the thirde turned towards the waye, that reacheth to the valley of Zeboim vnto the wyldernes.

But there was not a Smyth founde in all the lode of Israel: \( \tilde{y} \) Philistynes thoughte: The Hebrues mighte happily make swordes and speares. And all Israel were fayne to go downe to the Philistynes, whan eny man had a plowshare, a mattock, an axe, or a sythe to sharpe: and the edges of the plowshares, and mattockes, \( \tilde{y} \) forkes, and axes, were laboured, and the poyntes blont. Now whan the daye of the battayll cane, there was nether sword nor speare founde in the hande of all the people, that was with Saul and Ionathas: but for Saul and Ionathas his sonne there was somewhat founde. And \( \tilde{y} \) Philistynes watche out ouer by Michmas.

The viii. Chapter.

It fortuned at \( \tilde{y} \) same tyme, \( \tilde{y} \) Ionathas \( \tilde{y} \) sagte vnto his lad which was his wapen bearer: Come, let vs go ouer to the Philistynes watch \( \tilde{y} \) lyeth aboue, \( \tilde{y} \) he tolde not his father. Saul dwelt at \( \tilde{y} \) ende of Gibea vnder a Pom-granate tre, which was in the suburbe. \( \tilde{y} \) And the people \( \tilde{y} \) were by him, were vpon a sixe hundreth men. And Ahia the sonne of Achitob the brother of Iacob, the sonne of Phineas \( \tilde{y} \) sonne of Eli \( \tilde{y} \) prest of the LORDE at Silo, wayre the ouerbody cote. But the people knewe not that Ionathas was gone. Betwene the passages where Ionathas soughte to go ouer vnto the Phylistynes watch, there were two hye rockes, the one on the one syde, the other on the other: the one was called Boez, the other Senn. And \( \tilde{y} \) one laye on the north syde towards Michmas, and the other on the south syde towards Gaba. And Ionathas sayde vnto his wapen bearer:
Come, let vs go ouer to þ watch of these vn-circumcised, peraduenture the LORDE shall worke with vs. * For it is no harde matter for the LORDE to helpe by many or by fewe. Then answered him his wapen bearer: Do all that is in thine hert, go on thy waie, beholde, I am with the, euene as thine hert wyll.

Ionnathas sayde: Well than, Whan we are gone ouer to the people, and come within the sighte of them, ye saye: stonde styll, tyll we come to you, then wyll we stonde styll in oure place, and not go vp to them. But ye they saye: Come vp to vs, we wyll go vp to them, the hath the LORDE deluyered them in to oure hande, and this shalbe a token for vs. Now whan they came both in the sighte of the Philistynes watch, the Philistynes sayde: Se, þ Hebrues are gone out of their holes, that they were crepte in to. And the men in the watch answered Ionnathas and his wapen bearer, and sayde: Come vp to vs, and we wyll teach you what the matter is. Then sayde Ionnathas to his wapen bearer. †Come vp after me, the LORDE hath deluyered them into Israelis hande. And Ionnathas clamme vp with handes and fete, and his wapen bearer after him. And Ionnathas smote them downe before him, and his wapen bearer slewe behynde him, so that the first slaughtera that Ionnathas and his wapen bearer dyd, was vpó a twentye men, with in the length of halue an aker of londe, which a pare of oxen maye tyll in one daie.

†And there came a fearfulnes and flight in the hoost vpon the felde, and amonage all the people of the watch: and vpon the #destroyers there came a fearfulnes also and flight, so that the londe was in a rumoure, and †there came a flight thorow God. And Sauls watchme at Gibea Be Iamin sawe, that þ multitude gat them awaye, and ranne to and fro.

Saul sayde vnto the people that was with him: Tell and se which of vs is gone awaye. And whan they nombred, beholde, Ionnathas & his wapen bearer was not there. Then saide Saul vnto Ahia: Brynge hither the Arke of God (for at that tyme was the Arke of God with the children of Israel.) And whyle Saul was yet speakyng to the prest, the multitude in the Philistynes hoost gat vp, ranne, and was greate. And Saul sayde vnto the prest:

Withdrawe thine hande. And Saul cried, and all the people that was with him, and came to the battayll. And beholde. evry mans swerde was agaynst another, and there was a very greate rumoure.

The Hebrues also that were with þ Philistynes afore, and had gone vp with them in the hoost on evry syde, ioyned them selues vnto Israel which were with Saul and Ionnathas. And all the men of Israel which had hyd the selues vpon mount Ephraim, whan they herde that the Philistynes fled, folowed after them in the battayll. Thus þ LORDE helped Israel at that tyme, and þ battayll lasted vnto Bethauen.

And whan the men of Israel came forth, Saul charged all the people the same daie, and sayde: Cursed be evry man, which eateth bred vntyll euene, that I maye auengue me on myne enemies. Then all the people taisted no bred. And all the people of the londe came in to the wodd. But there laye hony vpon the felde: and when the people came in to the wodd, beholde, the hony flowed, but no man put of it to his mouth with his hādé: for the people were afraied because of the ooth. As for Ionnathas he had not herde, that his father had charged the people, and he put forth his staff that he had in his hande, and dyped the ende of it in þ hony combe, and turned his hande to his mouth, and his eyes were lighted.

Then answered one of the people, and sayde: Thy father hath charged the people, and sayde: Cursed be evry man that eateth oughte this daie. Neuertheles the people were faynte. Then sayde Ionnathas: My father hath troubled the londe: Se how lighte myne eyes are become, because I haue taisted a little of this hony. Yf the people this daie had eatē of the spoyle of their enemies that they founde, the slaughter shulde have bene greater agaynst the Philistynes. Yet smote they the Philistynes the same daie fro Michmas vnto Aialon, and the people were very weery.

And þ people turned to the spoyles, and toke shape and oxen, and calves, and slewe them vpon the earth, xxand ate them with the bloude. Then was it tolde Saul: Beholde, the people synne agaynst the LORDE, in that they eate bloude. He sayde: Ye haue done

Saul sayde moroner: Go abrode amoge the people, and saye vnto them, that every one brynge me his oxe and his shepe, and slaye them here, that ye maye eate, and not to synne agaynst the LORDE with catyng of blouse. Then broughte all the people euery one his oxe with his hāde the same nyghte, and slewe them there. And Saul buylded an altāre vnto ¥ LORDE. This is the first altāre that he buylded vnto the LORDE.

And Saul sayde: Let vs go downe after the Philistynes, by nyghte, and spoyle them all yte cleare monnyng, that we let none escape. They answered: Do what so euer pleaseth the. But the prest sayde: Let vs go nyc here vnto God. And Saul axed at God. Shal I go downe here after ¥ Philistynes? ¥ wilt thou delaye the in to Israel hande? Neuertheles he answered him not at that tyme.

Then sayde Saul: Let all the armyes of the people come hither, and make search and se, in whom is this synne at this tyme. For as truly as God the Šauioare of Israel lyneth, ¥ though it be in my sonne Ionathas, he shal dye. And no man answered him of all the people. And he sayde vnto all Israel: Be ye on the one syde, I ¥ my sonne Ionathas yll be on this syde. The people sayde vnto Saul:

Do as it pleaseth the. And Saul sayde vnto the LORDE the God of Israel: Do thou that right is. Thē was Ionathas and Saul taken: but the people wente forth fre. Saul sayde: Cast the lot ouer me and my sonne Ionathas. So Ionathas was takē. And Saul sayde vnto Ionathas: Tell me, what hast thou done? Ionathas tolde him ¥ sayde: I taistad a little hony with the staff that I had in my hande, and beholle, must I dye therfore? Thē sayde Saul: God do this and that vnto me, Ionathas thou must dye the death.

But the people sayde vnto Saul: Shulde Ionathas dye, that hath done so greate health in Israel this nyght? God forbyed. ¥ As truly as the LORDE lyneth, there shal not one heer of his headē fall vpon ¥ earth: for with God hath he wroughte at this tyme. So the people deluyere Ionathas, that he dyed not. Then wente Saul vp from the Philistynes: and the Philistynes wente vnto their place.

But when Saul had cōquered the kyngdom edge of the swerde. Neuertheles Saul and the people spared Agag, and the shepe and oxen \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) were good and fat, and the lambes, and all that was good, and wolde not damne the\( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) \begin{align*} &\begin{array}{c} \text{\vspace{1cm}} \end{array} \end{align*}

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto Samuel, and sayde: It repenteth me that I made Saul kyng, for he hath turned him selfe backe fro me, and not confirmed my worde. Therfore was Samuel angrye, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) cried vnto the LORDE all that nighte. And Samuel gat him vp early, that he might mete Saul in \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) mornynge. And it was tolde him, that Saul was come vnto Carmel, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) had set him vp a pilere, and was gone aboute, and come downe to Gilgall.

Now wha Samuel came to Saul, Saul sayde vnto him: Blessed be thou vnto \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE, I haue perfourmed the worde of \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE. Samuel answered: What crye is this then of shepe in myne eares, and the crye of oxen which I heare? \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \)

Saul sayde: They haue broughte them from the Amalechites: for the people spared the best shepe \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) oxen for the offerynge of \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE thy God, the other haue we damne. Neuertheles Samuel answered Saul: Let me tel the what \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE hath sayde vnto me this whiche. He sayde: Saye on. Samuel sayde: \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) Whan thou wast but small in thine awne eyes, wast thou not \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) heade amoge the trybes of Israel? \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) the LORDE anoynted the to be kyng ouer Israel? \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) and \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE sent \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) in to the waye, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) sayde: Go thy waie \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) damne the synners the Amalechites, and fighte against them, tyll thou haue vitterly destroyed the\( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \). Wherfore hast thou not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, but hast turned thy selfe to the spoyle, and done euell in the voyce of the LORDE? \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \)

Saul answered Samuel: Yee I haue herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) have done the waye that \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE sent me, and broughte Agag the kyng of the Amalechites, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) damne the Amalechites: but \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) people haue tak\( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) of the spoyle, shepe \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) oxen, and \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) best amoge the damned, to offer vnto \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE thy God in Gilgall. Samuel saide: Hath the LORDE pleasure in sacrifices and burnt offerynges, as in obeynge the voyce of the LORDE? Beholde, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) obedience is better then offerynge, and to herken is better then the fat of rammes. For disobedience is as \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) synne of \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) witchcrafte, and rebellion is as the blasphemy of Idolatrye. In so much now as thou hast refused the worde of the LORDE, he hath refused the also, that thou shuldest not be kyng.

Then sayde Saul vnto Samuel: I haue synned, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) I haue transgressed the commaundement of the LORDE and thy worde: for I was afrayed of the people, and herkened vnto their voyce. And now forgee me my synne, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) returne with me, that I maye worshippe \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE. Samuel sayde vnto Saul: I wil not turne backe with \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \), for thou hast refused the worde of the LORDE, and the LORDE hath refused the also, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) thou shuldest not be kyng in Israel. And when Samuel turned him backe to go his waye, he gat him by \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) edge of his garment, \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) so hauing it vnto his neigbour, which is better then thou. The ouerwynner in Israel also shal not lye, nether shall he repente: for he is no man, that he shulde repente.

He sayde: I haue synned, yet honour me now before the Elders of my people and before Israel, and turne backe with me, that I maye worshippe the LORDE thy God. So Samuel turned agayne after Saul, that Saul mighte worshippe the LORDE. But Samuel sayde: Bringe me hither Agag the kyng of the Amalechites. And Agag wente vnto him, and Agag sayde: Thus departeth the byternesse of death. Samuel sayde: Like as thy swerde hath made wemen childlesse, so shal thy mother also be with out children amonge wemen. So Samuel hewed Agag in peaces before \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE in Gilgall. \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) And Samuel departed vnto Ramath. But Saul wente vp to his house at Gibea Saul. And Samuel sawe Saul nomore vnto the daye of his death. Neuertheles Samuel mourned for Saul, because it repented the LORDE, that he had made Saul kyng ouer Israel.

The rvi. Chapter.

A ND \( \text{\vspace{1cm}} \) LORDE sayde vnto Samuel: A How longe mournest thou for Saul, whom I haue refused, that he shulde not be kyng over Israel? Fyll thine horne with oyle, go thy waye, I wyll sende to the Isai the Bethleemite: for among his sones haue I prouyded me a kyng. But Samuel sayde: How shal I go? Saul shal perceaueth it, and shal slaye me. The LORDE sayde: Take the a calfe from the drone, y sayde: I am come to do sacrifice vnto y LORDE. And thou shalt call Isai to y sacrifice, so shal I tell the what thou shalt do, that thou mayest anoynte me him, whom I shall shewe the. Samuel dyd as the LORDE sayde, and came to Bethleem. Then were the Elders of the cite astonnyed, and wente forth to mete him, and sayde: *Is thy commynge peaceable? He sayde: Yee. I am come to do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. Sanctyfy youre selues, y come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Isai and his sones, and called them to the sacrifice.

Now whā they came in, he behelde Eliab, y thoughte, whether he shulde be his anoynted before the LORDE. But y LORDE sayde vnto Samuel: loke not vpon his countenaunce, ner vpon the tallnesse of his person, For I judge not after the sighte of man. A man hath respecte vnto the thinge that is before his eyes, but the LORDE loketh vpon the hert. Then Isai called Abinadab, y broughte him before Samuel. And he sayde: This hath not the LORDE chosen. Then Isai broughte Samma. But he sayde: This also hath not the LORDE chosen. Then broughte Isai his seuen sones before Samuel. Neuertheles Samuel saide vnto Isai: The LORDE hath chosen none of these.

And Samuel sayde vnto Isai: Are here all the childrē? He sayde: There is yet one y leest of all, and beholde, he kepeth the shepe. Thē sayde Samuel vnto Isai: Sende y cause him to be fetched, for we will not syt downe at the table, vntyll he come. Then sent he, y caused him be broughte. And he was well coloured with fayre eyes y of a beutyfull countenaunce. And the LORDE saide: Aryste, and anoynte him, that is he.

Thē toke Samuel his oyle horne, y anoynted him amonge his brethrē. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpō Daviē frō y daye forth. As for Samuel, he gat him vp, y wente vnto Ramath.

* 3 Re. 2. b.

But the sprete of the LORDE departed from Saul, and an euell sprete from y LORDE vexed him. Then sayde Sauls seruauntes vnto him: Beholde, an euell sprete from God vexeth the. Let oure lorde saie vnto his seruauntes which stonde before him, y they seke a man which can playe vpon the harpe, and instrumente, that whan the euell sprete of God cometh vpon the, he maye playe with his hande, to ease the withall. Thē sayde Saul vnto his seruauntes: Prouyde me a mā, that can playe well vpon the instrumente, y brynge him vnto me.

Then answered one of the children, y sayde: Beholde, I sawe a some of Isai y Bethleemite, which can playe vpon the instrumente, an honest y valcaūt man, and one y hath vnnder-stōginge in matters, y is wellfaoured. Thē Saul sent messaungers vnto Isai, sayēge: Sende me Daviē thy sonne, which is with the shepe. Then toke Isai an asse with bred, y a bottell with wyne, and a kyd, and sent it vnto Saul by Daviē his sonne. So Daviē came to Saul, y stode before him, y he loued him well, and he became his wapen bearer. And Saul sente vnto Isai, sayēge: Let Daviē remayne before me, for he hath founde faoure in my sighte. Now whan the sprete of God came vpō Saul, Daviē toke y harpe, y played with his hande: so was Saul refresshed, y eased, y the euell sprete departed from him.

The 16ij. Chapter.

THE Philistynes gathered their hoost to y battayl, and came together to Socho in Iuda, y pitched their tentes betwene Socho y Asekā, at the ende of Damin. But Saul y the me of Israel came together, y pitched in the Oke valley, y prepared them selues to the battayl against the Philistynes. And the Philistynes stode vpon a hyll on the one syde, and the Israelites vpon a hyll on the other syde, so that there was a valley betwene them.

Then stepte there forth from amōge the Philistynes a stoute bolde man, named Goliath of Gath, sixe cubites and an hande breth hye, and had an helmet of stele on his heade, and a fast habergion vpon him, and the weight of his habergion was fyue thousande Sicles of stele, and harnesses of stele had he vpon his legges, and a sylde of stele vpon his shulders: and the shaft of his speare was like a weuers
And he stode and called vnto the hoost of Israel, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore are ye come forth to prepare youre selues to the battayll? Am not I a Philistyne, and ye the seruauntes of Saul? Chose one amonge you to come downe vnto me: ye he can fighte agaynst me and slaye me, then wil we be youre seruauntes: but ye I can overcomne him and slaye him, then shal ye be oure seruauntes, to do vs seruyce. And the Philistyne sayde: I haue spoké disdanedely vnto the hoost of Israel this daye. Geue me one, and let vs fighte together. Whan Saul and all Israel herde these wordes of y Philistyne, they were astonnyed, and sore afrayed.

But Dauid was the some of a man of Ephrata of Bethleem Iuda, whose name was Isai, which had eight sonnes, and was an olde man in Sauls tyme, and was well strycken in age amonge men. And the thr e eldest sonnes of Isai were gone with Saul to the battayll. And there names were these: Eliab the first borne, Abinadab the seconde, and Samma the thirde. But Dauid was the yongest of all. So when the thre eldest were gone with Saul to the battayll, Dauid wente agayne from Saul, to kepe his fathers shepe at Bethleem. But the Philistyne stepte forth early in the mornynge and at euen, and stode there fortye dayes.

Isai sayde vnto Dauid his sonne: Take this Epha of firmentye for thy brethen, and these ten loaues of bred (and runne to the hoost vnto thy brethren) g these ten newe chese, and bryngye them to y captayne, and loke how thy brethen do, whether it go well with them or no, and take what they byd the. But Saul and they, and all the men of Israel were in the Oke valley, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes. Then Dauid gat him vp early in the mornynge, and commytted the shepe to y keper, and toke his burthen, wente his waye, as Isai commaunded him, and came to the tét. And the hoost was gone forth, and had prepared them selues, and cried in the battayll: For Israel had set them selues in araye, and the Philistynes were agaynst their hoost in their araye also.

Then lefte Dauid the vessell that he bare, with the keper of the stuffe, and ranne to the hoost, and wente in, and saluted his brethren. And whyle he was yet talkynge with them, beholde, then came vp the stoute bolde man, whose name was Goliath, the Philistyne of Gath, out of the Philistynes hoost, and spake like as afore, and Dauid herde it. But every man of Israel, when he sawe the man, fled from him, and was sore afrayed of him.

And every man in Israel sayde: Haue ye sene the man commynge vp hither? For he is come vp hither, to speake disdanedely vnto Israel. And who so euer smyteth him, him wyll the kyngge make rych, and geue him his daughter, and make his fathers house fre in Israel.

Then sayde Dauid vnto the men that stode by him: What shalbe done to the man, that smyteth this Philistyne, and turneth this shame awaye from Israel? For what is he this Philistyne this vnicerefysed, that defyeth the hoost of y lyuynge God? Then the people tolde him as afore: Thus shall it be done vnto y man that smyteth him. And Eliab his greater brother herde him talke with the men, and was very wroth agaynst Dauid, and sayde: Wherfore art thou come downe? and why hast thou left a fewe shepe in the wyl dernesse? I knowe thy presumptuousnesse well enough, and the wickednesse of thine heart: for thou art come downe to se the battayll. Dauid answered: What haue I downe now? Is there not an occasion? And he turned him selfe from him vnto another, and spake accordinge as he had sayde before. Then the people answered him like as afore.

And when they herde the wordes which Dauid sayde, they tolde them in the presence of Saul, and he caused him be fetched. And Dauid sayde vnto Saul: Let no mans hert be discouragcd because of him. Thy seruaunt shall go, and fighte with the Philistyne. Nevertheles Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Thou art not able to go agaynst this Philistyne to fighte with him, for thou art but a childe: but this is a man of warre from his youth vp.

Dauid sayde vnto Saul: Thy seruaunt kepte his fathers shepe, and there came a lyon and a Bere, and carried awaye a shepe from the flocke, then wente I forth after him, and smote him, and deluyued it out of his mouth. *And when he wolde haue bene vpoun me, I toke him by his berthe, and smote him, and smote him. So thy servaunt smote both the Lyon and ye Bere. Therefore shall this Philistyne this vncircumcysed be euen as one of them: for he hath defyed the hoost of the Iuyunge God. And Daud sayde: The LORDE that deluyer me from ye Lyon and Beer, shall deluyer me also from this Philistyne.

And Saul sayde vnto Daud: Go thy waye, the LORDE be with the. And Saul clothed Daud with his clothes, and set an helmet of stele vpon his head, and put an habergion vpon him. And Daud girded his swerde aboue his clothes, and beganne to go, for he had never bene vsetd to it afofe. Then sayde Daud vnto Saul: I can not go thus, for I haue not bene vsetd to it, and so he laied it from him, and toke his staffe in his hande, and chose fyue slighe stones out of the ruyer, and put them in the sheparded bagge which he had by him, and toke a slynge in his hande, and made him to the Philistyne. And the Philistynes wente forth, and made him to Daud, and his wapen bearer before him.

Now when the Philistyne looked a sawe Daud, he thoughte some of him: for he was but a child, well coloured, and beautuyfull to loke vpon. And the Philistyne sayde vnto Daud: Am I a dogg then, that thou commest vnto me with a staffe? And he cursed Daud by his God, and sayde vnto Daud: Come hither to me, I wil geue thy flesh to the foules vnder the heauen, and to the beastes in the felde. But I come vnto the in the name of the LORDE Zebaoth the God of the hoost of Israel, whom thou hast despysed. This daye shall the LORDE deluyer the in to my hade, that I maye smyte the, and take thy head from the, and geue the bodies of the hoost of the Philistynes this daye vnto the foules vnder the heauen, and to the wylde beastes vpon the earth, that all the Iuonde maye knowe. And all this congregacion shal knowe, that the LORDE saueth nether thorow swerde ner speare: for the battayll is the LORDES, he shal deluyer you in to oure handes.

Now whan the Philistyne gat him vp, and wente forth and drue nye vnto Daud, Daud made haiste, and ranne from ye hoost vnto the Philistyne. And Daud put his hade in his bagg, and toke out a stone, a throue in the slynge, *and hytt the Philistyne euin in the fore heade, so that the stone stacke in his heade, and he fell downe to the grounde vpon his face.

So Daud ouercame ye Philistyne with the slynge and with ye stone, and smote him, and slew him. And for so much as Daud had no swerde in his hande, he ranne and stode ouer ye Philistynes, *and toke his swerde, and drue it out of the sheeeth, and slew him, and smote of his heade withall. When the Philistynes sawe that the strongeste of them was dead, they fled. And the men of Israel and Iuda gat the vp, and cryed and folowed vpon the Philistynes, till they came vnto the valley, and to the Portes of Ekron. And the Philistynes fell downe slayne vnto Gath and to Ekron. And the children of Israel turned agayne from chasynge of the Philistynes, and spoyled their tentes. But Daud toke the heade of the Philistyne, and broughte it vnto Ierusalem, as for his armoure, he layed it in his tente.

Whan Saul sawe Daud go forth agaynst the Philistyne, he saide vnto £ Abner his chefe captyne: Abner, whose sonne is this childe? Abner sayde: As truly as thy soule lyueth O kyngge, I wote not. The kyngge sayde: Axe the whose sonne the yonge mā is. Now whan Daud came agayne from the slaughter of the Philistyne, Abner toke him, and broughte him before Saul, and he had the Philistynes heade in his hande. And Saul sayde vnto him: Whose sonne art thou, thou yonge man? Daud sayde: I am a sonne of thy seruant Isai the Bethlehemite.

And he sayde vnto Dauid: This daye shalt thou be my daughters huszbade ë secde time. And saul spake vnto his seruautes: Talke with Dauid secretly  ¿ saye: Beholde, the kinge hath pleasure in the, and all his seruauntes loue the, mary thou therefore the kynges daughter.

And Sauls seruauntes spake these wordes in the eares of Dauid. But Dauid saide: Thynke ye it but a small matter, to mary the kynges daughter? As for me, I am but a poore symple man. And Sauls seruauntes tolde him agayne, and sayde: Soch wordes hath Dauid spoken. Saul sayde: Then saye ye vnto Dauid: The kynges desyreth no dowry, but onely an hundreth foreszkynnes of the Philistynes, that vengeaunce maye be taken of the kynges enemies. Howbeit Saul thought to cause Dauid be slayne by the hudes of the Philistynes. Then his seruauntes tolde Dauid these wordes, and Dauid was contente with the matter, to mary the kynges daughter.

And after a fewe dayes Dauid gatt him vp, and wente with his men, and smote two hundreth men amonst the Philistynes. And Dauid broughte their foreszkynnes, and made their nombre sufficient vnto the kyngye,  ¿ he mighte marie the kynges daughter. The Saul gane him his daughter Michol to wyfe. And Saul sawe and perceaued, that the LORDE was with Dauid. And Michol Sauls daughter loued him. Then was Saul the more afrayed, and became his enyme as lõge as he lyued. And when the princes of the Philistynes wete forth, Dauid behaued him selfe more wysely then all the seruauntes of Saul in their outgoynge: so that his name was in greate reputacion.

The fir. Chapter.

SAUL spake to Ionathas his sonne, and to all his seruauntes, that they shulde kyll Dauid. To Neuerthelesse Ionathas the sonne of Saul loued Dauid exceedingly, and tolde him, and sayde: Saul my father goeth aboute to slaye the. Kepe the therefor (I praye the) in the mornynge and abyde in secrete, and hyde the. But I wyll go forth, and stonde besyde my father in the felde where thou art, and wyll speake of the vnto my father: and what sooner I se I shal bryngye the worde.

* 1 Re. 21. d. and 29. b.  † 1 Re. 17. c.
And Ionathas reported best of David vnto Saul his father, and sayde vnto him: Oh let not the kyng synne agaynyst his seruaunt, for he hath not synned agaynyst the, and his doyne is very necessary for the, *he put his lyfe in his hande also, and smote the Philistynes, the LORDE dyd a greate health vnto all Israel: this hast thou sene, and rejoysed therof. Wherfore wylt thou then offende agaynyst innocent bloude, that thou wildest kyll David without a cause? Then herkened Saul vnto the voice of Ionathas and sware: As truly as the LORDE luyeth, he shal not dye. Then Ionathas called David, and tolde him all these wordes, and brought him to Saul, so that he was in presence like as afore tyme. But there arose a battayll agayne, and David wente forthe, and fought agaynst the Philistynes, and smote a greate slaughter, so that they fled before him. Neuerthelesse euell sprete of the LORDE came vpon Saul, and he sat in his house, and had an iaueynge in his hande. But David plaied vpon the instrument with his hâde. And Saul thought with the iaueynge to stike David fast to the wall. Howbeit, he wente asyde fro Saul and the iaueynge smote in the wall. And David fled, and escaped that night.

Notwithstanding Saul sent his messaungers to Davids house, that they shulde laye wayte for him, and kyll him in the mornynge. Michol Davids wyfe tolde him this, and sayde: Yf thou saue not thy soule this night, thou shalt dye tommorow. Then Michol let him downe thorow the wyndow, so that he wente his waye, fled, and escaped. And Michol toke an ymage, and layed it in the bed, and laied a goates szkinne at the heade of it, and covered it with clothes. Then Saul sent messaungers, to fetch David. But she sayde: He is sicke. Neuerthelesse Saul sent messaungers to se David, and sayde: Bringe him vp to me with the bed, that he maye be slayne.

Now when the messaungers came, beholde, the ymage laye in the bed, and a goates szkynne at the heade of it. Then sayde Saul vnto Michol: Why hast thou begyled me, and let myne enemye goe, that he might escape? Michol sayde vnto Saul: He sayde vnto me: Let me go, or I wyl kyll the. As for David, he fled, and escaped, and came to Sammel vnto Ramath, and tolde him all y Saul had done vnto him. And he wente with Samuel, and they abode at Naioth.

And it was tolde Saul: Beholde, David is at Naioth in Ramath. Then Saul sente messaungers to fetch David. And they sawe a company of prophetes prophecieinge, and Samuel had the oversight of them. Then came the sprete of God vpon the messaungers of Saul, so that they prophecied also.

When this was tolde Saul, he sent other messaungers, which prophecied likewise. Then sente he messaungers the thyrde tyme, and they in like maner prophecied. Then wente he hiselfe also vnto Ramath, and when he came to the greate well which is at Secho, he axed and sayde: Where is Samuel and David? Then was it tolde him: beholde, at Naioth in Ramath. And he wente thither, euyn vnto Naioth in Ramath. And y sprete of God came vpon him also, and he wase prophecied till he came vnto Naioth in Ramath. And he put of his clothes, prophecied likewise before Samuel, fell downe naked all that daye and all that nighte. *Here of came the prouerbe: Is Saul also amongethe prophetes?

DAVID fled fro Naioth in Ramath, and came, spake before Ionathas: What haue I done? What trescape haue I made? Whau haue I synned in y sighte of thy father, y he seketh to kyll me? He sayde vnto him: God forbyd, thou shalt not dye. Beholde, my father doth nothinge, nether great nor small, but he sheweth it before myne eares.

Wherfore shulde my father the hyde this fro me? It shal not be so. The sware David agayne, and sayde: Thy father knoweth well, y I haue founde fauoure in thy sighte, therfore shal he theynke: Ionathas shal not knowe of this, lest it greue him. Verely, as truly as the LORDE luyeth, and as truly as thy soule luyeth, there is but one steppe betwene me death. Ionathas sayde vnto David: I wil do for the what so euer thy hert desyreth. David sayde vnto him: Beholde, tommorow is the new Mone, that I shulde syt at the table with the kyngge. Let me hyde my selfe therfore in the felde vnto the thirde daye at euyn. Yf thy father then axe after me, saye: David prayed me, y he mighte runne to Bethleem vnto his LORDE lyueth. But yf I saye vnto the lad: behold, the arowes lye yonderwarde before the, then go thou thy waye, for the LORDE hath let the go. As for that which thou and I haue spoke together, the LORDE is betwene me and the for euer.

Daud hid himselfe in the feld. And whan the new Mone came, the kynge sat him downe at the table to eate. Whan the kynge had set hym downe in his place as he was wonte by the wall, Ionathas stode vp, but Abner sat him downe besyde Saul. And Daud was myssed in his place. And Saul spake no thinge that daye, for he thoughte: There is somewhat happened vnto him, that he is not cleane. On the seconde daye of the new Mone, whan Daud was myssed in his place, Saul saide vnto Ionthas his sonne: Wherefore is not the sonne of Isai come to the table netherdaye ner to daye?

Ionathas answered Saul: He prayed me that he mighte go vnto Bethleem, and sayde: Let me go, for oure kynred hath a sacrifice to do in the cyte, and my brother hath sent for me himselfe: yf I haue founde fauoure now in thy syghte, I wyll go, and se my bryther: therefor is he not come to the kynge table. Then was the kynge wroth at Ionathas, and sayde vnto hym: Thou wicked and vnthrifte, I knowe how that thou hast chosen the sonne of Isai, to the shame of thy serueant, and of thy shamefull mother. For as longe as ye sonne of Isai lyueth vpö earth nether thou ner thy kynsdome shal prosper. Send now therfore, and cause him to be fetched vnto me, for he is a childe of death.

Ionathas answered his father Saul and sayde vnto hym: Wherefore shal he dye? what hath he done? Then shot Saul the ianelynge at him, that he might smite him. The perceaued Ionathas, that his father was vitterly determed to kyll Daud, and he rose vp from the table in a wrothfull displeasure, and age no bred the same seconde daye of the new Mone: for he was vexed because of Daud, that his father had done him soch dishonoure.

On the morow wente Ionathas forth in to the feld, at the tyme appoynted of Daud, and a little boy with him, and sayde vnto the boy: Runne and seke me the arowes which I shute: Whan the boy ranne, he shot an arowe ouer him. And whan the boy came to the... place whither Ionathas had shot arowe, Ionathas cryed after him, and sayde: The arowe lyeth yonderwarde before the. And he cryed after him agayne: haist the, and stonde not styll. Then the boy gathered vp Ionathas arowes, and brought them to his lorde. And the boy knewe notheinge, onely Ionathas and David kneve of yt matter.

Then Ionathas gane his boye his wapes and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, and eary them in to the cite. And when the boy was gone, Dauid arose from the place towarde the south, and fell vpn his face to the groûde, and worshipped three tymes, and they kissed one another, and wepte together. But Dauid most specially. And Ionathas saide vnto Dauid: Go thy waye in peace: *What soever we both have sweorne spoke together in the name of the Lorde, the Lorde be witnesse betwene me and the, betwene my sade and thy sade for euer. And Ionathas gat him vp, and came in to the cite.

The 37th. Chapter.

DAUID came to Nobe to prest Ahimelech. And Ahimelech was astonnyed, when he sawe Dauid comminge, and sayde vnto hym: Why commest thou alone, and noman is with the? Dauid sayde vnto Ahimelech the prest: The kinge hath commytted a matter vnto me, and sayde: Let nomi knowe wherfore I haue sent the, and what I haue commandede the: for I haue appoynted my seruantes to mete me here a there. *Yf thou haue now ought vnder thy hande, a loaf of bred or fyue, gene me the same in my hande, or what so euer thou findest.

The prest answered Dauid, and sayde: I haue no comen bred vnder my hande, but the holy bred, ye the yonge men haue onely reftained them selues from women. Dauid answered the prest, and sayde vnto hym: The women were kepeth thre dayes from vs when we departed forth, and the yonge mens vessels were holy. But this waye is vnholy, nevertheless it shalbe sanctified to daye in the instrumentes. *Then the prest gane hym of his holy, in so monch as there was none other bred but the shewbredes, which were taken vp before the Lorde, that there might be other shewbredes set therin the daye whâ he toke them awaye.

But the same daye was there a man sparrowed in before the Lorde, one of Sauls seruaunte, named Doeg an Edomite, ye mightiest amonge Sauls hyrden. And Dauid sayde vnto Ahimelech: Is there not a speare or a sware here vnder thine hande? I haue not taken my sware and weapons with me: for the kynges matter required haist. The prest sayde: The sware of Goliah the Philistyn whom thou smoteest in the Oke valley, is here wrapped in a cloth behynde the ouer-body cote. Yf thou wylt haue it, take it, for here is els none but it. Dauid sayde: There is not soch another, gene me it.

And Dauid gat him vp, and fled from Saul, and came to Achis y kyng of Gath. But Achis seruaunte sayde vnto hym: This is Dauid the kyng of the londe, of whom they sungne in the daunse, and sayde: *Saul hath smytten his thousande, but Dauid his ten thousande. And Dauid toke these wordes to hert, and was sore afrayed of Achis the kyng of Gath, and altered his countenaunce before them, and shewed himselfe as he had bene madd in their handes, and stackered towards the dores of the gate, and his slanerynes ranne downe his beerd. Then sayde Achis vnto his seruaunte: Behokde, ye se that the man is out of his wyt, why haue ye brought hym vnto me? Haue I to fewe madd men, that ye haue brought this hither to be madd before me? Shulde he come in to my house?

The 37th. Chapter.

DAUID wente fro thence, a fled vnto the cause of Adullam. Whan his brethren and all his fathers house herde that, they came downe theither vnto hym. And there gathered vnto hym all men that were in trouble and det, and sory of hert, and he became their heade, so that there were with hym vpun a foure hundreth men.

And Dauid wente from thence towaerde Misphe in the londe of the Moabites, and sayde vnto the kyng of the Moabites: Let my father and my mother go out and in amongeth you, till I se what God wil do with me. And he lefte them before the kyng of his Moabites, so that they remayned by him, as long as David was in the castell. Neuertheles the prophet Gad sayde vnto David: Abide not in the castell, but go thy waye, and come in to the londe of Juda. Then departed David, and came in to the wod of Hareth. And Saul herde that David and the men which were with him, were come forth.

Now whyle Saul dwelt at Gibea vnder a grove in Rama, he had a Iauelinge in his hande, and all his seruauntes stode by him. Then sayde Saul vnto his seruauntes that stode by him: Heare ye children of Iemini: Shal the sonne of Isai geue lodes and vyndardes vnto you all, y make you all eaptaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hindredes, that ye haue all conspyred agaynst me, and there is no man amonge you that letteh it for my sake, or y openeth it vnto myne eares: for my sonne hath stered vp my seruauntes against me, that he maye laye wayte for me, as it is manifest.

Then answered Doeg y Emidite which stode besyde Sauls seruauntes, and sayde: I sawe the sonne of Isai, that he came vnto Nobe, to Ahimelech y sonne of Achitob, which axed counsell at the LORDE for him, and gaue him fode, the swerde of Goliath the Philistyne.

Then sent the kyng, and caused to call Ahimelech the prest the sonne of Achitob, and all his fathers house, the prestes that were at Nobe, and they came all to the kyng. And Saul sayde: Heare thou sonne of Achitob. He sayde: Here am I my lorde. And Saul sayde vnto him: Wherfore haue ye conspyred agaynst me, thou a sonne of Isai, that thou hast geuen him bred and a swerde, and axed counsell at God for him, to storie him vp, that he mighte laye wayte for me, as it is manifest?

Ahimelech answered the kyng and saide: And who is amonge all thy seruauntes like David, which is faithfull, and hath maried the kynges daughter, and goeth in thine obedience, is honerably taken in thine obedience? Haue I begonne then first this daye to axe counsell at God for him? That be farre fro me. Let not the kynges laie soch to his seruauntes charge in all my fathers house: for thy seruaunt knewe not of all these thinges nether small ner greate. Neuertheles the kynges saide: Ahimelech thou must dye thy death, thou and all thy fathers house. And the kyng sayde to his fote men that stode by him: Turne you, and slaye the prestes of the LORDE, for their hande is with David also.

Not withstandinge the kynges seruauntes wolves not laye their handes vpon the prestes of the LORDE, to slaye them. Then saide y kyng vnto Doeg: Turne the, and slaye the prestes. Doeg the Edomite turned him, and slewe the prestes, so that the same daye there dyed fyue and foure score men, which wayre ouerbody cotes of lymyn. And Nob the cite of the prestes smote he with the edge of the swerde, both men and wemen, children and sucklynges, oxen and asses, and shepe.

Neuerthelesse there escaped a sonne of Ahimelech (the sonne of Achitob) whose name was Abiathar, and fled after David, and tolde him, that Saul had slayne y prestes of the LORDE. David sayde vnto Abiathar: I knewe well the same daye that Doeg the Edomite was there, that he wolde tell Saul. I am giltye of the soules of thy fathers house. Abide thou with me, and feare not. He that layeth wayte for my lyfe, shall laye wayte for thynye also, and thou shalt be preserued with me.
Behold, to Cegila, and he sayde: God hath deliuered him in to my hāde, for he is shut fast in, now that he is come in to a cite which is kepe with gates and barres. And Saul caused for to call all the people downe to ε battailly vnto Cegila, & they might beseege David and his men. But when Daud perceaued ε Saul intēded euell against him, he saide vnto Abiathar ε prest: Brynge me hither the ouer-body cote. And Daud sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, thy seruaunt hath herde, that Saul goeth aboute to come for to destroye the cite of Cegila for my sake. Shal the citiesen of Cegila deluyer me ouer in to his handes? And shal Saul come downe, as thy seruaunt hath herde? Tell thy seruaunt this, O LORDE God of Israel. And the LORDE saide: He shal come downe.

Daud sayde: Shall the citiesen of Cegila deluyer me and my men in to Sauls handes? The LORDE saide: Yee. Thē Daud gat him vp with his me, of whom there were vpon a sīxe hundred, γ walked whither they could. Now when it was tolde Saul that Daud was escaped from Cegila, he let his journey stonde. As for Daud, he remayned in the wildernes in the castell, and abode vpon the mount in the wildernes of Siph. But Saul sought him as longe as he lyued. Neuertheles God gaue him not in to his handes. And Daud saved, that Saul was gone forth to seke after his life. But Daud was in the wildernes of Siph, in the wodd.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Saul gat him vp, and wete vnto Daud in to the wod, and strengthened his hande in God, and sayde vnto him: Feare not, my father Sauls hande shal not finde γ: and thou shalt be kyngye ouer Israel, so will I be the nexte vnto the. And γ my father knoweth right well. *And they made a convauent both together before the LORDE. And Daud remayned in the wodd. As for Ionathas, he wente home agayne.

But the γ Siphites wente vp to Saul vnto Gibeath, and sayde: Is not Daud hyd with vs in the castell in γ wodd, vpon moūt Hachilha, which lyeth on the righte hande of the wildernesse? Let the kyngye come downe now therfore according to all the desire of his hert, and we wyll deluyer him in to the kyngyes hande. Then sayde Saul: Blessèd be ye of the LORDE, that ye haue had pytie vpon me: Go youre waye now therfore, and be sure, that ye maye knowe and se in what place his fete haue bene, and who hath sene him there: for it is tolde me, that he is full of sotyltye. Loke well and spye out all the places, where he hydeth him, and come agayne to me, whan ye are sure, and I will go with you. Yf he be in the londe, I wyll enquire after him amonge all the thousandes in Iuda.

Then gat they them vp, and wente their waye vnto Siph before Saul. But Daud and his men were in the wyldernes of Maē, even in the felde on the righte hande of the wil- dernes. Now when Saul wente thither with his men to seke him, it was tolde Daud and he gat him downe to the rocke, and abode in the wildernes of Mahon. Whan Saul herde that, he folowed after Daud in the wildernes of Mahon. And Saul with his men wente on the one syde of the hyll: Daud with his men on γ other syde of γ hill. But when Daud made haist to escape from Saul, Saul with his men compassed aboute Daud and his men, that he might take thē. * Neuertheles there came a messaunger vnto Saul, and sayde: Make haist and come, for the Philistynes are fallē in to the londe. Thē Saul turned him from chauncye of Daud, and wente agaynst the Philistynes. Therfore is γ place calld γ Sela Mahelkoth. And Daud wente vp from thence, and abode in the castell at En Gaddi.

Now when Saul came agayne from the Philistynes, it was tolde him: Beholde, Daud is in the wyldernes of Engaddi. And Saul toke three thousande chosen men out of all Israel, and wente to seke Daud with his men vpon the stony rockes of the wyld goose. And whan he came to the shepe foldes by γ waye, there was a caue, and Saul wente in to couer his fete. But Daud and his men sat behinde within the caue.

Then sayde Daudis men vnto him: Lo, this is the daye, wherof the LORDE thy God hath sayde vnto the: Beholde, I wyll deluyer thyne enemu in to thy hande, that thou mayest do with him what it pleaseth the. And Daud stode vp, γ cut of the typpe of Sauls garment quetyly. Neuertheles it smote him afterwaed in his herte, because he had put the tyme of Sauls garment, and sayde unto his men: The LORDE let that be farre frome me, that I shulde do it, a laye my hande vpó my lord the LORDES anoynted: for he is of the LORDES anoynted. And David wolde withelde his seruautes with wordes, a suffred the not to pryse vp agaynst Saul.

But whan Saul gat him vp out of the caye, and was goinge his waye, David rose vp also after him, and wente out of the caye, and cried behynde Saul, a sayde: My lorde the kynge. And Saul loked behynde him. And David bowed doynge his face to the earth, and worshipped, and sayde vnto Saul: Why herkenest thou vnto the wordes of men, that saye: David seke thy myfortune? Beholde, thine eyes se this daye that the LORDE gaued the in to my hande in the caye, and I was counselled to slaye the: Neuertheles thou wast fauoured, for I sayde: I wil not laye my hande vpó my lorde, for he is the LORDES anoynted. Beholde, my father the tyme of thy garmente in my hande, that I wolde not slaye the, when I cut of the tyme of thy garment. Nowe and se, y there is no euell ter trespace in my hande: nether haue I offended the, and thou folowest after my soule, to take it awaye. The LORDE shall be judge betwene me and the, and auenge me on the,
but my h vide shal not be vpon the, acordinge as it is sayde after the olde proverbe: Vnggodlynes commeth of the vnsgodly: but my hande shall not be vpon the, acordinge as it is sayde after the olde proverbe: Vnggodlynes commeth of the vnsgodly: but my hande shall not be vpon the, acordinge as it is sayde after the olde proverbe.

Now whan David had spoken out these wordes vnto Saul, Saul saide: *Is not this thy voyce my sonne David? And Saul lifte vp his voyce, and wepte, and saide vnto David:
Thou art more righteous then I: for thou hast recompesed me good, but I haue rewarded the euell. And this daye hast thou shewed me how thou hast done me good, for so much as y LORDE hath deluyed me in to thy hande, and thou neuertheles hast not slaine me.
What is he, which yf he fynde his enemye, ywl let him go in a good waye? The LORDE me this daye. Beholde now, I knowe that thou shalbe kyng, a the kyngdome of Israel stondeth in thy hande: sparse now therfore vnto me by the LORDE, y thou shalt not rote out my sede after me, nether destroie my name out of my fathers house. And David sware vnto Saul. Then wente Saul home, but David gat him vp with his men vnto the castell.

The 16. Chapter.

A ND Samuel dyed, and all Israel gathered a them selues together, mourned for him, and buried him in his house at Ramath. As for David, he rose, and wente downe in to the wyldernesse of Paran. And there was a man at Maon, and his possession at Carmel, and the man was of great power, and had three thouandshe, and a thousande goates.

And it fortuned that he clipped his shepe at Carmel, and his name was Nabal, but his wyues name was Abigail, and she was a woman of good vnderstandinge, a bewtyfull of face. But the man was harde, and wicked in his doynges, and was one of Caleb.

Now whan David herde in the wyldernesse y Nabal clipped his shepe, he sent out ten yonge men, a saide vnto them: Go vp vnto Carmel, y whan ye come to Nabal, salute him friendly on my behalfe, a saye: Good lucke, peace be with the, a thine house, a with all y thou hast.
I haue herde saye that thou hast shepe clippers.

Now thy shepherdes whom thou hast, hane bene with vs, we haue done them no dis-honoure, and they wasted nothinge of their nombre, as longe as they were at Carmel:
axe thy yonge men, they shal tell the, and let thy yonge men fynde fauoure in thy sighte:
for we are come in a good daye, geue thy seruauntes a thy sonne David what thy hande fyndeth.

And wha Davids yonge men came, and spake all these wordes on Davids behalfe vnto Nabal, they lefte of. But Nabal answered
Davids seruauntes, a sayde: What is he y Dauid? a who is the sonne of Isai? There are many seruauntes now y runne awaye from their masters. Shulde I take my bred, water and flesh, that I haue slayne for my clippers, y geue it vnto me whom I knowe not whence they are?

The Davids yonge me turned their waye agayne. And whan they came agayne vnto him, they tolde him all these wordes. The sayde Dauid vnto his men: Euery man gyarde his swerde aboute him. And euery one gyarde his swerde aboute him. And Dauid gyarde his swerde aboute him also, and there wete vp after him vpone a foure hundreth men, but two hundreth remayned with the stiffe.

Neuertheles one of the yonge men tolde Abigail Nabals wife, and sayde: Beholde, Dauid sent messaungers out of the wyldernes to blesse oure lorde, Notwithstandinge he was feare vpó them, and yet haue they bene very proffitable men vnto vs, and haue done vs no dishonoure, and we wanted none of the nombre as loge as we walked with them, when we were in the feld: but they haue bene oure wall daye and nighte, as longe as we kepte the shepe by them. "Take hede now therefore, and loke well what thou doest, for there is surely a mysfortune at hande agaynst oure lorde, and agaynst all his house. And he is a man of Belial, to whom no man darre saye eny thinge. Then Abigail made haist, and toke two hundreth loaes of bred, and two botels of wyne, and fyue shepe ready dighte, and fyue measures of firmentye, and an hundreth frayles of rasens, and two hundreth frayles of fygges, layed them vpó asses, and sayde to hir yonge men: Go ye youre waye before me, beholde, I wyl come after. And she tolde Nabals hir housbade nothinge therof. And as she rode vpó the asse, and wente downe in the shadowe of y^hylle, beholde, Dauid t his mē met hir downe, so that she came vpoun them.

But Dauid sayde: Wel, all that this man had in y^wyldernes, haue I kepte for naughte, so that there wanted nothinge of all that he had, and he rewardeth me euell for good. God do this and yet more vnto the enemies of Dauid, yf vntyl tomorow in the mornynge I leue this man (of all that he hath) so much as one that maketh water agaynst y^wall. Now whan Abigail sawe Dauid, she lighte downe from the asse in all the haist, and fell vpó hir face before Dauid, and worshiped him to the grounde, and fell at hir fete, and sayde: Oh my lorde, let this trespace be myne, and let thy handmayde speake before thine eares, and heare the wordes of thy handmayden: Let not my lorde set his hert agaynst this Nabal the man of Belial, for he is a foole, acordinge as his name is called: his name is foole, and foolishnes is with him. As for me thy handmayde, I sawe not my lorde newe men, whom thou dydest sende.

But now my lorde, as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, the LORDEhath kepeth the backe, y thou shuldest not come agaynst bloude, and he hath deuiered thine hande.

Thine enemiees be now as Nabal, and so be they that wolde my lorde euell. Here is y blessyng, y thy handmayde hath brought my lorde, take it, and geue it vnto the yonge men, that walke vnder my lorde. For a sure house shal y LORDE make my lorde, which fighteth the fighte of the LORDE, and no euell shall be founde in the all thy life longe. And yf euery man ryse vp to persecute y, and to laye wayete for thy soule, then shal the soule of my lorde be bounde in the bundell of y lyuynge, euen with the LORDE thy God. But y soule of thine enemies shalbe turned backe with the slynge. When the LORDE therefore doth all this good for my lorde (which he hath promised the) and commandeth y to be his Duke ouer Israel, then shal it be no stumblygne blocke ner occasion of falllynge vnto my lordes hert, that thou hast not shed bloude without a cause, and auenged thy selve, then shal y LORDE do good vnto my lorde, and thou shalt thynke vpon thy handmayden.

Then saide Dauid vnto Abigail: Blessed be the LORDE God of Israel, which hath sent the to mete me this daye: and blessed be thy speach, and blessed be thou, which hast kepte me backe this daye, that I am not come agaynst bloude, to auenge me with myne awne hande. Verely (as truly as the LORDE the God of Israel lyueth, which hath hyndered me that I shulde do the no euell.) Yf thou haddest not met me in all the haist, Nabal shulde not haue had lefte him vntyl y lighte mornyngye, so moch as one that maketh water agaynst the wall. So Dauid toke of hir hede what she had broughte him, and sayde vnto her: Go vp in peace vnto thy house: beholde, I haue herkened vnto thy voyce, and accepted thy persone.

But whan Abigail came to Nabals, beholde, he had prepared a feast in his house like a kynges feast, and his hert was mery, for he was very dronken. And she tolde him nothinge, nether small ner greate vntyl y cleare mornyngye. But whan it was daye, the wyne was come from Nabals, his wife tolde him these things.
Then was his hert deed in his body, so that he became euen as a stone: and ouer ten dayes the LORDE smote him, so ÿ he dyed. When Dauid herde that Nabal was deeded, he sayde: Blessed be ÿ LORDE which hath auenged my rebuke on Nabal, and preserved his seruaunte from euell. And the LORDE hath rewarded Nabal that euell vpon his head.

And Dauid sent, and caused to talke with Abigail, ÿ he mighte take her to wife. And whan Dauids seruauntes came to Abigail vnto Carmel, they spake vnto her, and saide: Dauid hath sent vs vnto the, that he maye take ÿ to wife. She rose vp, and worshipped vpon hir face vnto the earth, and sayde: beholde, here is thy handmayde, that she maie do seruice vnto the seruauntes of my lorde, and to waszshe their fete. And Abigail made haist, and gat her vp, and rode vpó an asse, and fyue maidens that were vnder her, and wente after Dauids messangers, and became his wife. Dauid toke Ahinoam of Israel also, and they both became his wyues. But Saul gaue Michol his daughter the wife of Dauid vnto Phalti ÿ somne of Lais of Gallim.

The 126. Chapter.

THEY of Siph came to Saul vnto Gibath, ÿ sayde: *Is not Dauid hyd vpó the hill of Hachila, which lyeth ouer agaynst the wyldernesse? Then Saul gat him vp, and wente downe to the wildernes of Siph, and thuande thousande chosen men of Israel with him, to seke Dauid in the wildernes of Siph, and pitchet vpon the hill of Hachila, which lyeth by the wyre before the wildernes. But Dauid remayned in the wyldernesse, and whan he sawe that Saul came after him in to the wildernes, he sent out spyes, and knewe of a suertie, that he was come in deede.

And Dauid gat him vp, and came to the place where Saul had pitched his têt, and sawe the place where Saul laye with his chefe captayne Abner ÿ some of Ner, to Saul laye in the tent, and the hoost aboute him. Then answered Dauid, and sayde vnto Ahimeleck the Hethite, and to Abisai the somne of Ieru la ÿ brother of Ioab: Who wil go downe with me to Saul in to the hoost? Abisai sayde: I wil go downe with the.

So Dauid and Abisai came to the people in the night season, ÿ beholde, Saul laye and slepte in the tent, and his speare stacke in ÿ grounde at his heade. But Abner and the people laye rounde aboute him. The sayde Abisai vnto Dauid: God hath closed thine enemye in thynne hande this daye. Therfore wil I now thrust him throrow once with the speare euen in to the grounde, ÿ he shall haue enouhg of it. Neuertheless Dauid sayde vnto Abisai: Destroye him not, for who wil laye hande vpon the anoynted of ÿ LORDE, ÿ remayne vn glyte? Dauid sayde morouer: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, ÿ ÿ LORDE him selfe smyte he not, or excepte his tyme come that he dye, or that he go in to the battayll and perishe, the LORDE let it be farre fro me, that I shulde laye my hande on the LORDES anoynted. Take ÿ speare now therfore at his heade, ÿ the cuppe of water, ÿ let vs go. So Dauid toke ÿ speare ÿ the cuppe of water at Sauls heade, ÿ they wente their waye. And there was no man ÿ sawe it, ner perceane it, nether awoke, but they sleepe euery one, for there was a depe slepe fallen vpon them from the LORDE.

Now whan Dauid was come ouer on ÿ other syde, he stode vpon the toppe of the mount a farre of (so that there was a wyde space betwene them) and cried vpon ÿ people, and vpó Abner the some of Ner, ÿ sayde: Hearrest thou not Abner? And Abner answered and sayde: Who art thou that eyst so, and diseasethe the kyng? And Dauid sayde vnto Abner: Art thou not a man? And where is there soch one as thou in Israel? Why hast thou not then kepte thy lorde ÿ kyng? for there is one of ÿ people come in to destroye thy lorde ÿ kyng. It is not well that thou hast done. As truly as the LORDE lyueth ÿ ye are the children of death, because ye haue not kepte youre lorde the LORDES anoynted. Beholde now, where is ÿ kynges speare, and the cuppe of water that was at his heade.

Then knewe Saul the voyce of Dauid, and saide: § Is not that thy voyce my somne Dauid? Dauid sayde: It is my voyce my lorde the kyngye. And he sayde morouer: Why doth my lorde so persecute his seruant? What haue I done? and what euell is there in my hande? Yet let my lorde the kyngye heare but the wordes of his seruant? ÿ ÿ LORDE prouoke the against me, let there be smelled a meatofferyinge: but ÿ the childré of men do it, cursed be they before the LORDE, because they have thrust me out this daye (that I shulde not dwell in the LORDES inheritaunce) and saye: Go thy waye, and serue other goddes. So fall not now my bloude vpon the earth from the face of the LORDE. For the kyngye of Israel is gone forth to seke a flee, as a partriche is followed on vpö the mountayne.

And Saul sayde: I haue synned: Come agayne Dauid my sonne, I wil do the nomore hurte, because my soule hath bene deare in thy sighte this daye. Beholde, I haue done foolishly and very vnwysely. Dauid answered and sayde: Beholde, here is the kyngyes speare, let one of the yongemen come ouer here and fetch it. But the LORDE shal rewarde euery one acordinge to his righteousnes and faith, for LORDE deluyed this daye in to my hande: neuertheles I wolde not laie my hande vpö the LORDES anoynted. And as thy soule hath bene greatly reputed in my sighte this daye, so let LORDE repute my soule in his sighte, and deluyer me from all trouble. Saul saide vnto Dauid: Blessed be thou Dauid my sonne, thou shalt do it, as be able. But Dauid wente his waye, and Saul turned agayne vnto his place.

The ryvi. Chapter.

DAVID thought in his hert: One of these dayes shal I fall in to the handes of Saul: It is better that I get me my waye in to y londe of Philistynes, that Saul maye leaue of from sekyng me in all the coastes of Israel, so shal I escape his handes. And he gat hym vp, and wente ouer (with the sise hundreth men that were with hym) vnto Achis the sonne of Maaoh kyngye of Gath. So Dauid remayned by Achis at Gath, with his men, every one with his housholde, and Dauid with his two wyues, Ahinoam the Israellitisse, and Abigail Nabals wife of Carmel. And whan worde came to Saul that Dauid was fled vnto Gath, he soughte hym nonore.

And Dauid sayde vnto Achis: Ye I haue founde grace in thy sighte, then let there be geuen me a place in one of the cities of the londe, that I maye dwell therin. Wherfore shulde thy seruaunt dwell in the kynges cite with the? Then Achis gaue hym Sicalg the same daye. Therfore belongeth Sicalg to the kynges of Juda vnto this daye. The tyme that Dauid dwelt in the londe of the Philistynes, is foure monethes.

Dauid wente vp with his men, and fell in to the londe of the Gessurites and Girsites, and Amalechites: for these were the inhabiteres of this londe of olde, as thou commest to Sur vnto the lode of Egipte. But whan Dauid smote y londe, the let nether man ner woman lyue, and toke the shepe, oxen, asses, Camels and raymement, and returned and came to Achis. So whan Achis spake: Whither fell ye in to daye? Dauid sayde: Towarde the south parte of Juda, toward y south parte of the Ierahmielites, and towards the south parte of the Kenites. But Dauid let nether man ner woman come lyuynge vnto Gath, and thoughte: They mighte peraduerdely speake a reporte agaynst vs: thus dyd Dauid, and this was his maner as longe as he dwelt in y londe of the Philistynes. Therfore Achis gaue credence vnto Dauid, and thoughte: he hath made hym selfe stynke before his people of Israel therfore shal he be my seruaunt for euer.

The ryvi. Chapter.

IT fortuned at y same tyme, that the Philistynes gathered their hoost together to the battayll, to go agaynst Israel. And Achis sayde vnto Dauid: Thou shalt knowe, that thou and thy men shal go forth with me in the hoost. Dauid sayde vnto Achis: Well, thou shalt se what thy seruaunt shal do. Achis saide vnto Dauid: Therfore wyll I ordene the to be the keper of my heade as longe as I lyue. As for Samuel, he was deede, and all y people had mourned for hym, he buried hym in his cite Ramath. So Saul had dryuen the sothysayers and expounders of tokens out of y londe. Now whan the Philistynes gathered them selues together, and came and pitched their tentes at Sunem. Saul gathered all the people together, and they pitched at Gilboa. But whan Saul sawe the hoost of the Philistynes, he was afrayed, and his hert was discoraged, and he axed councell at the LORDE. But LORDE gaue him no answere, nether by dreames, ner by the lighte, ner by prophetes.

The sayde Saul vnto his seruauntes: Seke me a woma which hath a sprete of sooth-sayenge, that I maye go vnto her, and axe at... her. His seruauntes sayde vnto him: Beholde, at Endor is there a woman, which hath a sprote of soythsayenge. And Saul chau traged his clothes, and put on other, and wente his waye and two men with him, and came by nighte vnto the woman, and sayde: Prophecye vnto me (I pray the) thorow the sprote of soythsayenge, and srynge me him vp whom I shal name vnto the. The woma saide vnto him: Beholde, thou knowest what Saul hath done, how he hath rodet out the soythsayers or witches from the londe, wherfore wilt thou srynge my soule then in to thy nett, that I maye be slayne? But Saul sware vnto her by thy LORDE, and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shall no harme happen vnto the for this. Then sayde thy woman: Whom shal I srynge vp vnto the? He sayde: Srynge me vp Samuel.

C Now whan thy woman sawe Samuel, she eryed loude, and sayde vnto Saul: Wherfore hast thou begyled me? Thou art Saul. And the kynge sayde vnto her: Feare not, what seist thou? The woman sayde vnto Saul: I se goddes comyenge vp out of thy earth? He sayde: How is he spaken? She sayde: There commeth vp an olde man, and is clothed with a longe garment. Then perceaued Saul that it was Samuel, a bowed him selfe downe with his face to the grounde, and worshiped him.

Samuel saide vnto Saul: Why hast thou disquyeted me, to cause me be brughte vp? Saul sayde: I am sore troubled, the Philistynes fighte against me, a God is departed fro me, a geueth me no answere, nether by prophets ner by dreames: therfore haue I called the, thy thou myest shewe me, what I shal do. Samuel sayde: What wilt thou axe at me, seyeinge the LORDE is departed from the, and is become thine enemye? The LORDE shal do vnto the euen as he spake by me, and shall plucke the kyngdome out of thy haunde, and geue it vnto Dauid thy neibbour, because thou hast not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, ner perfourmed the displeasure of his wrath agaynst Amalek. Therfore hath the LORDE done this now vnto the. Morouer the LORDE shal deluyer Israel with the also in to the handes of the Philistynes: foremorrow shalt thou and thy soumes be with me. And the hoost of Israel shal the LORDE deluyer in to the handes of the Philistynes. Then fell Saul immediatly vnto the earth, for he coulde not stonde, and was sore afrayed at these wordes of Samuel, so that there was nonmore strength in him: for he had eaten no bred all that daye and all that night.

And the woman wente in to Saul, a sawe that he was sore vexed, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy handmyade hath herkened vnto thy voyce, and I haue put my soule in my hande, so that I haue herkened vnto thy wordes which thou spakest vnto me. Therfore folowe thou also the voyce of thy handmyade. I wil set a morrell of bred before the to eate, that thou mayest come to thy strength, a go thy waye. But he refused, and sayde, I wil not eate. Then his seruauntes a the woman copelled him, so that he herkened vnto their voyce.

And he rose vp from the grounde, and sat vpon the bed. The woman had a fat calfe at home, so she made haist, and kyelled it, and toke meell and dyd kneet it, and baked swete cakes, a bryngte them forth before Saul, a before his seruauntes. And whan they had eaten, they stode vp, and wete their waye the nighte.

The rur. Chapter.

T HE Philistynes gathered all their armies together at Aphek. But Israel pitched at Ain in Israel. And the prynces of the Philistynes wete forth with hundreds and with thousands, but Dauid and his men wete behynde with Achis. Tho sayde the prynces of the Philistynes: What shall these Hebrues doute? Achis saide vnto the: Is not this Dauid thy seruanaut of Saul kyng of Israel, which hath bene with me now yeares and dayes, a I haue founde no euell in him sence the tyme that he fell to me vnto this daye? Nevertheles the prynces of the Philistynes were wroth at him, a sayde vnto him: Let the man turne backe agayne, a abyde in his place, s which thou hast appoynted him, that he goe not downe with vs to thy battayll, and become oure aduersary in thy felde. For wherin coulde he better do his lorde a pleasure, tho in the heades of these men? Is not this Dauid, of whom they sung in the daunce: * Saul hath smytte his thousande, but Dauid his ten

Now when David came to Siclag on the third day and with his men, the Amalechites had fallen in on the south part and at Siclag, and had smitten Siclag, and burned it with fire, and had carried away the wether out of it, both small and great. Neuertheles they had slaine no man, but dryuen the thence, and were goneyng on their waye. Now when David with his men came to the cite, and sawe that it was burnt with fire, and that their wyues, sonnes and daughteres were led awaye captuye, David and the people that was with him left vp their voyce, and wepte so longe tylly they coulde wepe nomore. For Davids two wyues also were caried awaye captuye, Ahinoam the Israelitiss, and Abigail Nabals wife of Carmel. And David was very sorowfull, for the people wolde haue stoned him: for soule of all the people was in greate heuyness, euerie one ouer his sonnes and daughteres.

Neuertheles David strengthened him selfe in the Lorde his God, and sayde vp to Abiathar the sonne of Ahimelech: *Bring me hither the ouerbody cote. And when Abiathar had broughte the ouerbody cote vp to David, David axed at the Lorde, and sayde: Shall I folowe vp the men of warre, and shall I ouertake them? He sayde: Yee, folowe vp, thou shalt ouertake them, and shalt rescue the pray. Then wente David his waye, and the sixe hundreth men that were with him. And when they came to the ryer of Besor, some stode stille. But David and the foure hundreth men followed after: As for the two hundreth men that stode stille, they had bene slowe to go ouer the ryer of Besor.

And they founde a man of Egipte vp on the felde, him they broughte vp to David, and gave him bred to eate, and water to drinke, and gave him a quantite of fyges, and two quantities of rasynes. And when he had eaten, his sprete came to him againe: for in thre dayes and thre nightes he had eaten no bred, and dronke no water.

David sayde vp to him: Whose art thou? Whence art thou? He sayde: I am a childe of Egipte, an Amalechites seruante, my master hath forsaken me, because I was sicke thre dayes ago. We fell here in towarde the south syde of Chrethus, and vp on Iuda, and toward the south parte of Caleb, haue burned Siclag with fyre.

David sayde vp to him: Wilt thou bringe me downe to these men of warre? He sayde: Sweare vp to me by God, thou shalt not slaye me, ner deluyer me in to my masters hide, and I will bryng the downe to these men of warre. And he broughte the downe, and beholde, they were scatred vp on all the grounde, eatinge and drynyng, and kepynge holy dayes, and were makeinge mery chere, because of all the great spoyles that they had taken out of the londe of the Philistynes and of Iuda.

And David smote them from the morow tylly the euen, agaynst the nexte daye, so that there escaped none, excepte foure hundreth yonge men, which rode vp on camels. So David rescued all that the Amalechites had taken, and his two wyues, thare myssed nothinge, nether small ner greate, nether sonnes ner daughters, ner spoyles: and what so euer they had taken, David broughte all agayne. And David tooke the shepe and oxen.

AFTER þy death of Saul whan Dauid was come agaynse from the *slachtr of þy Amalechites, and had remayne two dayes at Siclag, beholde, on the thrísde daye there came a man out of Sauls hoost, with his clothes rente, and earth vpon his heade. And when he came vnto Dauid, he fell downe to the grounde, and worshipped. Dauid sayde vnto him: Whence commest thou? He sayde vnto him: Out of the hoost of Israel am I flied. Dauid sayde vnto him: Tell me, what is the matter? He sayde: the people is flied from the battayll, and many of the people are fallen: Yee and Saul also is deed and his sonne Ionathas. Dauid sayde vnto the yonge man þat brought him this worde: How knowest thou that Saul and Ionathas his sonne are deed? The yonge man þ tolde him this, sayde: I came by chaunce vnto mount Gelboa, and beholde, Saul leane vpon his speare, þ the charettes and horsmê folowed harde after him: and he turned him aboute, and save me, and called me. And I sayde: Here, am I. And he sayde vnto me: What art thou? I sayde vnto him: I am an Amalechite. And he saide vnto me: Come to me, and kyll me, for anguysh hath gotten holde of me: for my life is yet whole within me. Then stepte I to him and slewe him, for I knewe well that he could not lyue after his fall. And I toke the crowne from his heade, and the armelte froy his arme, and haue broughte it here vnto þ my lorde. Then toke Dauid holde of his clothes, * and rente them, and so dyd all the mě that were with him, þ mourned, and wepte, and fasted vntyll the euen, ouer Saul ÿ Ionathas his sonne, and ouer the people of the LORDES, and ouer the house of Israel, because they were fallen thorow the swerde.

And Dauid sayde to the yonge man that broughte him worde: What art thou? He sayde: I am þ sonne of a.straungre an Amalechite. Dauid sayde: How happeneth it that thou wast not afrayed to laye thine hāde vpon the LORDES anointed to destroye him? And Dauid sayde vnto one of his yonge men: Come hither, and slaye him. And he smote him that he dyed. Then sayde Dauid vnto him: Thy bloude be vpon thyne owne heade. † For thy mouthe hath spoken against thyselfe and sayde: I haue slaye the anoynted of the LORDE. And Dauid mourned this lamentacion ouer Saul and Ionathas his sonne, and commandeth to teach the childré of Iuda the bowe. Beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the righteous.

The Eldest in Israel are slayne vpon the heigh of the. How are the Worthies fallé?

rayne come vpô you, nether lode be wherof commeth Heueofferynge: for there is ÿ shylde of the Worthyes smytyn downe, the shylde of Saul, as though he had not bene anoynted with oyle.

* The bowe of Ionathas Sayed not, and the swerde of Saul came not agayne voyde from the bloude of the slayne, and frô the fat of the giauntes.

Saul and Ionathas lonely and pleasait in their lyfe, and in their death were not parted asunder: lighter then Aegles, and stronger then lyons.

Ye daughters of Israel wepe over Saul which cloathed you with purple in pleasures, and decked you with Jewels of golde on your garments.

How are the Worthies fallen so in the battayll? Ionathas is slayne vpon ÿ heighth of the.

I am sorie for the my brother Ionathas: thou hast bene very lonely vnto me: Thy loue hath bene more speciaill vnto me, then the loue of wemen.

How are the Worthies fallen, and ÿ wea-pens destroyed?

The ii. Chapter.

AFTER these acts Daudix axed at the Lorde, and sayde: Shall I go vp in to one of the cittyes of Iuda? And the Lorde sayde vnto hym: Go vp. Daudix sayde: Whither? He sayde: Vnto Hebron. So Daudix wente thither with his two wyues, Ahinoam the Israellitisse, and Abigail Nabals wyfe of Carmel. And Daudix broughte vp the men that were with him also, every one with his houshole, and they dwelt in the cittyes of Hebron. And ÿ men of Iuda came, and there they anointed him kyngye over the house of Iuda.

And wha it was tolde Daudix, ÿ that they of Iabes in Gilead had buried Saul, he sent messaungers vnto them, sayenge: Blessed be ye of the Lorde, that ye haue done soch mercy vpon youre lorde Saul, and haue buried him. The Lorde therefor shewe mercy now and faithfullnes vpon you. And because ye haue done this, I also wyll do you good. Let youre hâde now therefor be comforted, and be ye stronge: for though Saul youre lorde be deed, yet hath the house of Iuda chosen me to be kyngye over them.

But Abner the sonne of Ner, which was Sauls chefe captayne, toke Iszboseth the sonne of Saul, and broughte him throrow the hoost, and made hym kyngye over Gilead, Assuri, Israell, Ephraim, Ben Iamin and ouer all Israell. And Iszboseth the sonne of Saul was fourtye yeare olde, when he was made kyngye of Israel, ÿ he reigned two yeares. But the house of Iuda helde with Daudix: ÿ The tyne Daudix was kyngye at Hebron ouer the house of Iuda, was seuen yeare and sixe monethes longe.

And Abner the sonne of Ner wete forth with the seruauntes of Iszboseth the sonne of Saul, out of ÿ hoost vnto Gibeon. And Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia wete forth with Daudix seruauntes, and they met together by the pole at Gibeon, and these laye on the one syde of the pole, the other on the other syde. And Abner sayde vnto Ioab: Let the yonge me get them vp, and playe before vs. Ioab sayde: Let them aryse. Then gat they them vp, ÿ wente in nombre twolute of Ben Iamin on Iszboseth Sauls sonnes syde, and twolute of Dauids seruauntes. And euery one gat another by the heade, and thrust his swerde in his syde, and fell together: therfore is the place called Helkath hazurim (that is, the felde of the Worthies) which is at Gibeon.

And there arso a sore harde battayll the same daye. But Abner and the men of Israel were put to flighte of Dauids seruauntes. Thre sonnes of Zeru Ia were there, Ioab, Abisai ÿ Asahel. As for Asahel, he was lighte of fete as a Roo in ÿ felda, ÿ folowed after Abner, and turned not asyde nether to the righte hande ner to ÿ lefte from Abner. Then Abner turned him aboute, and sayde: Art thou Asahel? He sayde: Yee. Abner sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye ether to the righte hande or to the lefte, and get the one of ÿ yonge men, and take his harnessse from him. Nenertheles he wolde not leaue of fro him. Then sayde Abner agayne to Asahel: Get the awaye fro me, why wilt thou that I smyte the to the grounde? and how darre I liffe vp my face before thy brother Ioab? Howbeit he wolde not go his waye.

Then Abner thrust hym in with a speare in to his bely, so that the speare wete out behynde him. And there he fell and dyed before hym: and who so came to the place.

where Asahel laye deed, stode styll there. But Ioab and Abisai folowed vpon Abner, till the sonne wente downe. And when they came to y hyll of Amna, which fieth before Giah, by y waye to the wildernes of Gibeon, the children of Ben Iamin gathered them selues together behynde Abner, and grewe to a multitude, and stode vpon the toppe of an hyll.

And Abner called vnto Ioab, and sayde: Shal the swerde the deoure without ende? Knowest thou not, that it wyll be better at the last? How longe wil it be or thou saie vnto the people, that they leaue of from their brethré? Ioab sayde: As truly as God lyueth yf thou haddest sayde thus daye in the morninge, the people had ceased evry one from his brother. And Ioab blew the trompet, τ all the people stode still, and followed nomore vpon Israel, nether foughde they eny more.

Abner and his men wente al that same night over the playne felede, and passed over Iordane, τ walked thorow all Bithron, and came to the tontes. Ioab turned hym from Abner, and gathered all y people together. And of Dauidis seruauntes there myssed nynetene men, and Asahel. But Dauids seruauntes had smytten so amoung Ben Iamin and the men of Abner, that thre hundreth and thre score men were deed. And they toke vp Asahel, and buried hym in his fathers graue at Bethleem. And Ioab with his men wete all that nighte: and at the breake of the daie they came vnto Hebron.

The ij. Chapter.

And there was a longe battayll betwene the house of Saul and the house of Dauid. But Dauid wente and increased, and the house of Saul wente and mynyshed. And vnto Dauid were children borne at Hebron. His firstborne sonne Ammon of Ahinoam the Israelitisses: the seconde Chileab of Abigail the wyfe of Nabal of Carmel: the thirde Absalon the sonne of Maacha the daughter of Thalmai kyng of Gessur: the fourth Adonia the sonne of Hagith: the fytth Saphatia the sonne of Abital: y sixth Iethream of Eglao Dauids wyfe. These were borne vnto Dauid at Hebron.

Now when it was warre betwene the house of Saul τ the house of Dauid, Abner strengthened Sauls house. And Saul had had a concubyne, whose name was Rispa the daughter of Aia. And Iszboseth sayde vnto Abner: Wherefore liest thou with my fathers concubyne?

Then was Abner very wroth at these wordes of Iszboseth, and sayde: Am I a dogges heade then, that I ayayust Iuda do mercy vnto the house of Saul thy father, and vnto his brethren and kynsfolkes? and haue not deluyered the in to y hande of Dauid, and thou layest a trespace to my charge this daye for a womas sake? God do Abner this and that, yf I do not as the LORDE hath sworne vnto Dauid, that the kyngdome maye be taken fró the house of Saul, and y seate of Dauid set vp ouer Israel and Iuda, from Dan vnto Berseba. Then coude he not answere him one worde agayne, he feared him so.

And Abner sent messaungers vnto Dauid, sayenge: Whose is the londe? And sayde: Make thy couenaunt with me. Beholde, my hande shall be with the, to turne all Israel vnto the.

He sayde: Wel, I wyll make a couenaunt with the, but one thynge I desyre of the, that thou so not my face, exepte thou brynge me first Michol Sauls daughter, whan thou commest to se my face. Dauid sent messaungers also vnto Iszboseth the sonne of Saul, sayenge: y Gene me my wyfe Michol, whom I maried with an hundreth òreszkinner of the Philistynes. Iszboseth sent, and caused for to take her from the man +Palthiel the sonne of Lais. And hir husbane wente with her, and wepte behynde her vnto Bahurim. Then sayde Abner vnto hym: Turne backe agayne, and go thy waye. And he turned backe agayne.

And Abner talked with the Elders in Israel, and sayde: Youre myndes haue bene set afore tyne and longe a goo vpon Dauid, that he mighte be kyng ouer you, do it now therfore, for y LORDE hath sayde of Dauid: I wil deluyuer my people of Israel by the háde of Dauid my seruaunt, from the hande of the Philistynes, and from the hande of all their enemies.

Abner spake also before the eares of Ben Iamin, and wente to speake before the eares of Dauid at Hebron all that Israel and the whole house of Ben Iamin was contente withall. Now when Abner came to Hebron vnto Dauid, and twetie men with him, Dauid made them a feast. And Abner sayde vnto David: I wyll get me vp, and go gather all Israel together to my lorde the kyng, and that they maye make a couenaunt with the, that thou mayest be kyng, at thy soules desyre.

So David let Abner go from him in peace. And beholde, David seruauntes and Ioba came from the men of warre, and broughte a greate spoyle with them. And Abner was not now with David at Hebron, for he had sent him from him, so that he was gone his waye in peace.

But when Ioab and all the hoost with him was come, it was tolde him that Abner the sonne of Ner came to the kyng, and how he had sent him fro him, so that he was gone his waye in peace. Then wente Ioab in to the kyng, and sayde: What hast thou done? Beholde, Abner came to the, why hast thou sent him from the, that he is gone his waye? Knowest thou not Abner the sonne of Ner? For he came to the to disceaue the, that he mighte knowe thy outgoynge, and ingoynge, and to spie out all that thou doest. And when Ioab wente out from David, he sent messaigers after Abner, to fetch him agayne from Boharsira, and David knewe not therof. Now when Abner came agayne vnto Hebron, Ioab brought him in to y milies vnder y gate, to talke with him secretly, and thrust him there in to y bely that he dyed, because of his brother Asahels bloude.

Whan David knewe of it thereafter, he sayde: I am vngiltye, and so is my kyngdome for euer before the LORDE concernynge the bloune of Abner y sonne of Ner: but vpon the heade of Ioab fall it, and vpon all his fathers house, and in the house of Ioab there cease not one to haue a reminge yssue and a leprosy, and to go vpon a staffe, and fall thorow the swerde, and to haue searnesse of bred. Thus Ioab and his brother Abisai slewe Abner, because he had slayne their brother Asahel in the battaile at Gibon.

David sayde vnto Ioab and to all y people y was with him: Rente your clothes, and gyrd sack cloth aboute you, and make lamentacion for Abner. And the kyng wente after the Bere. And when they buryed Abner at Hebron, the kyng lifte vp his voyce, and wepte besyde Abners graue, and all the people wepte also.

And the kyng mournd for Abner, and sayde: Abner is not deed as a foole dyeth. Thy handes were not bounde, thy fete were not vexed with fettles, thou art fallen as a man falleth before wicked vnthriftes. Then all the people bewayled him yet more.

Now whan all the people came in to eate with David, whyte it was yet hye daye, David swaere, and sayde: God do this and that vnto me, ye I taist ether bred or oughte els afore the Sonne go downe. And all y people knewe it, and it pleased them well all that y kyng dyd in the sighte of all the people. And all the people and all Israel perceauen the same daye, that it came not of the kyng, that Abner the sonne of Ner was slayne. And the kynga sayde vnto his seruauntes: Knowe ye not that this daye a prynce and a greate man is fallen in Israel? As for me, I am yet but tender and aonynted kyng. But the men the children of Zeru Ia are to harde for me. The LORDE recompence him that doth euell, acordinge to his wickednes.

The iii. Chapter.

Whan Sauls sonne herde y Abner was a deed at Hebron, his hadies were feble, y all Israel was sory. But there were two men captaynes ouer the soudyers vnder the sonne of Saul, the one was calleth Baena, the other Rehob, sonnes of Rimon y Berothite, of the childre of Ben Iamin: for Reth was counted also in Ben Iamin. And the Berothites were fled vnto Gethaim, a strangers there vnto this daye. Ionathas also the sonne of Saul had a sonne which was lame on his fete, a was fyue yeare olde when the rumoure of Saul and Ionathas came from Israel. And his nose toke him, and fled. And whyle she made haist and fled, he fell, and was fame: And his name was Mephiboseth.

Then wente the sonnes of Rimon y Berothite, Rehob a Baena, a came to the house of Isboseth, in the heate of the daye, a he laye vpô his bed at the noone daie. And they came in to the house to fetch wheate, a thrust him in the bely, a gat them awaye. For wha they came in to y house, he laye vpô his bed in his chamber, a they stickte him to death, a smote of his heade, and toke his heade, and departed by the waye of the playne felde all that nighte, and broughte the heade of Isboseth to David vnto Hebron, and sayde vnto the kyng: Beholde, there is the heade of Iszboseth the sonne of Saul thine enemie, which layed wayte for thy soule. This daye hath the LORDE avenged my lorde the kynge of Saul and his sede.

Then answered Dauid vnto Rehob and Baena his brother, his sonnes of Rimon & Bereothie, as sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, which hath delivered my soule out of all trouble, I take him & brought me worde and sayde: Saul is deed, and he thoughte he had bene a good messaunger, and at Siclag I put him to death, vnto whom I shulde haue genen a rewarde for his message. And these vungodly personnes haue slayne a righteous man in his owne house vpon his bed. Yee shulde not I require thy bloude of youre handes, and take you awaye from y earth? And Dauid commannded his yonge men, which slewe them, and smote of their handes and fete, and hanged them vp by pole at Hebron. But the heade of Iszboseth toke they, and buried it in Abners graue at Hebron.

The 6. Chapter.

And all the trybes of Israel came to Dauid vnto Hebron, and sayde: Beholde, we are thy bone and thy flesh. And afore tyne wha Saul was kynge ouer vs, thou leddest Israel out and in. So the LORDE hath sayde: Thou shalt kepe my people of Israel, and shalt be the duke ouer Israel. And all the Elders in Israel came to y kynge vnto Hebron. And kynge Dauid made a conenaunt with them at Hebron before LORDE. And they anointed Dauid to be kynge ouer Israel. Thyrty yeare olde was Dauid when he was made kynge, and reigned forty yeares. At Hebron raigne he seue yeares and sixe monethes ouer Iuda: but at Jerusalem he reigned thre and thirtie yeares ouer all Israel and Iuda.

And the kynge wente with his men to Jerusalem, agaynst the Iebusites, which dwelt in the londe. Neuerthelesse they sayde vnto Dauid: Thou shalt not come hither but the blynde and lame shall druyne y awaie. (They thoughte planely, that Dauid shulde not come in.) Howbeit Dauid wanne the castell of Sion, which is the cite of Dauid. Then sayde Dauid the same daye: Who so euere smyteth the Iebusites, and optayneth the perquellies, the lame & the blynde, which (Iebusites) Dauids soule hateth. Herof cometh the proverbe: Let no blynde nor lame come in to the house. So Dauid dwelt in y castell, and called it the cite of Dauid. And Dauid builded ronde aboute fro Millo and within. And Dauid grewe, & the LORDE the God Zebaoth was with him.

And Hiram the kynge of Tyre sent messaungers vnto Dauid, & Ceder trees for walles, and Carpenters, and Masons, to builde Dauid an house. And Dauid knewe, that the LORDE had confirmed him kynge ouer Israel, and exalted his kingdome for his people of Israels sake. And Dauid toke yet mo wyues and concubynes at Ierusalem, after he was come from Hebron, and there were yet mo sonnes of daughters borne vnto him. And these are the names of them that were borne vnto him at Ierusalem: Samma, Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Iebhehar, Elisua, Nepheg, Iaphia, Elisama, Eliada, Eliphalet.

And when the Philistines herde that Dauid was anoynted kynge ouer Israel, they wete vp all to seke Dauid. Whan Dauid perceaued that, he wete downe in to a castell. But the Philistynes came and scattered them selues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I go vp agaynst the Philistynes? and wylt thou deluyer them in to my hande? The LORDE sayde vnto Dauid: Go vp, I will deluyer the Philistynes in to thy hande.

And Dauid came vnto Baal Prazim, and smote thare there, and sayde: The LORDE hath deuyed myne enemies, even as the waters parte asunder: therefore is the same place called Baal Prazim. And they lefte their ymage there, but Dauid and his men caried the awaye.

Neuerthelesse the Philistynes wente vp agayne, and scattered them selues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed at the LORDE. The LORDE sayde: Thou shalt go vp, but compase them behinde, that thou mayest be vpon them ouer agaynst the Peere trees: and whan thou hearest vpon the toppe of the Peertrees, the sounde of the goinge be bolde, for then is the LORDE gone forth before the, to smyte the hoost of the Philistynes. Dauid dyd as the LORDE.
AND David gathered agayne all the young chosen men in Israel, *euen thre thousand, and gat him vp, and wente with all the people that was with him of the citemins of Juda, to fetch vp the Arke of God from thence: whose name is: The name of the LORDE Zeboath dwelleth theron betwene the Cherubins. *And they caused the arke of God to be caried vp o a new cart, *and fetched it out of y house of Abinadab, which dwelt at Gibea. Vsa and Ahio the sonsnes of Abinadab drue y new cart. And when they brought it with the Arke from the house of Abinadab which dwelt at Gibea, Ahio wente before the Arke: and David and all the house of Israel played before the LORDE, with all maner of instrumentes of Pine tre, with harpes, and Psalteries, and tabrettes, and belles, and Cymbals.

And when they came to the barnefloore of Nahon, Vsa stretched out his hande, ¶and helde the Arke of God, for the oxen wete out aside. Then waxed the wrath of the LORDE fearce agaynst Vsa, and God smote him there because of his presumpcio, so that he dyed there besyde the Arke of God. Then was David sory, because the LORDE had made soch a rente vpon Vsa, and he called the same place Perez Vsa vnto this daye. And David feared the LORDE the same daie, and sayde: How shall the Arke of the LORDE come vnto me? And he wolde not let it be broughte to him in to the citle of David, but caused it be brought in to y house of Obed Edom the Gathite. And whan the Arke of the LORDE had contynued thre monethes in the house of Obed Edom the Gathite, the LORDE blessed him and all his house.

And it was tolde kyng David, that the LORDE had blessed the house of Obed Edo and all that he had because of the Arke of God. ¶Then wente he, and fetched vp the Arke of God out of y house of Obed Edom in to the cite of David with ioye. And whâ they were gone sixe steppes in with the Arke of the LORDE, they offered an oxe and a fat shepe. And David daunse with all his myghte before the LORDE, and was girded with an ouerbody cote of lynne. And David with all Israel brought vp y Arke of the LORDE with tabrettes and trompettes.

And when the Arke of the LORDE came in to the cite of David, Michol the daughter of Saul loked out at a window, and sawe kyng David leapynge, sprynginge and daisynge before the LORDE, and despysed him in hir hert. But whan they brought in y Arke of the LORDE, they set it in hir place in the myddes of the Tabernacle, which David had pitched for it. And David offred burnt offerynge and deed offerynge before y LORDE. And when David had made an ende of offerynge the burntofferynge and deedofferynge, he blessed the people in the name of the LORDE Zeboath, and dealt out vnto all the people, and to the multitude of Israel, both to man y woma, vnto euer one a cake of bred, and a pece of flesh, and a meece of potage. Then wente all the people their wave, euer one vnto his house.

Whan David came agayne to blesse his house, Michol the daughter of Saul wente forth to mete him, and sayde: How glorious hath the kyngye of Israel bene to daye, which hath vncowered himselfe before the maydes of his servauentes, like as the rascal people discoure them selves. But David saide vnto Michol: I wil playe before y LORDE, which hath chosen me afoare thy father, and afoare all his house, because he hath commanded me to be the prynce ouer the people of the LORDE, euen ouer Israel, and yet wy! I be vyler then so, and wyll be lowe in myne owne sighte: and with the maydens wherof thou hast spoken, wyll I be honoured. As for Michol the daughter of Saul, she had no childe vnto the daye of hir death.

NOW whan the kyngye sat in his house, ¶and the LORDE had gaven him rest from all his enemies on euer syde, he sayde vnto the prophet Nathan: Beholde, I dwell in a house of Cedre, and the Arke of God dwelleth amonste the curtayne. Nathan sayde vnto the kyngye: Go thy wy, what so euer thou hast in thine hert, ¶do: for the LORDE is with the. But the same nighte came y worde of the LORDE vnto Nathan, ¶sayde: Go y speake to my seruaut David:
Thus sayeth the LORDE: Shalt thou buylde me an house to dwell in? I haue dwelt in no house sense the daye that I broughte the children of Israel vnto this daye, but haue walked in the Tabernacle and Habitation, whither so euer I wente with the children of Israel. Dyd I euer speake to enie of the trybes of Israel (whom I commaunded to kepe my people of Israel) sayde: Wherefore do ye not buylde me an house of Ceder wold?

So shalt thou speake now vnto my seruaunt Dauid: Thus sayeth the LORDE Zebaoth: *I toke the from the pasture whan thou wentest behynde the shepe, y thou shouldest be y prynces over my people of Israel, g haue bene with the whither so euer thou wentest, g haue roted out all thine enemies before the, g haue made the a greate name, acordinge to the name of the greate men vpon earth. And for my people of Israel I wyll appoynte a place, and wyll plante them, that they maye remayne there, nonmore to be removed, and y the children of wickednes oppresse them nonmore, like as afore, and sence the tyme that I ordeyned Judges over my people of Israel. And I wyll gueue the rest from all thine enemies. And the LORDE sheweth the, that the LORDE wyll make the a house.

Now whan thy tyme is fulfyllde y thou shalt slepe with thy fathers, I will after y rayse vp thy sede, which shal come of thy body: his kyngdome wyll I stablishe, he shal buylde an house for my name, and I wyll stabylshe y seate of his kyngdome for euer. § y wyll be his father, and he shall be my sonne. ¶ Whan he doth a trespace, I will reprooue him with the roddl of men and with the plages of y children of men: But my mercy shal not be withdrawn fro him, as I haue withdrawe it fro Saul, whó I haue také awaye before the. As for thy house g thy kyngdome, it shal be stablised for euer before the, y thy seate shal endure fast for euermore.

Whan Nathan had tolde all these wordes g all this vision vnto Dauid, kyng Dauid came and sat hym done before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God, who am I? and what is my house, y thou hast broughte me thus farre? This O LORDE God hast thou thoughte to litle also, but haue spoken of the house of thy seruaunt yet lóge for to come. O LORDE God, is that the lawe of men?

And what shall Dauid speake vnto the? thou knowest thy seruaunt O LORDE God, for thy wordes sake and acordinge to thy hert hast thou done all these greate thinges, y thou mightest shewe the vnto thy seruaunt. Therefore art thou greatly magnified O LORDE God: ¶ for there is none like the, g there is no God but thou, acordinge vnto all that we haue herde with oure eares.  For where is there a people vpon earth as thy people of Israel? For whose sake God wente to deluyer him a people, and to make him selfe a name, and to do them soch greate and terrible thinges in thy lode before thy people, whom thou hast deluyered vnto thy selfe fro Egipte, from the people, and from their goddes. And thy people of Israel hast thou prepared the to be a people vnto thyme owne selfe for euer, and thou O LORDE art become their God.

Stablish now y wordes therfore for euer (O LORDE God) which thou hast spoké over thy seruaunt g over his house, g do acordinge as thou hast sayde. So shall thy name be greate for euer, so that it shall be sayde: The LORDE Zebaoth is the God ouer Israel, the house of thy seruaunt Dauid shal be made sure before the. For thou LORDE Zebaoth, thou God of Israel hast opened the care of thy seruaunt, and sayde: I wil buylde the an house. Therfore hath thy seruaunt founde his hert, to praye this prayer vnto the. ¶ Now LORDE God thou thy selfe art God, g thy wordes shal be the truth. Thou hast spoken soch good over thy seruaunt. Beginne now therfore, and blisse thy seruauntes house, that it maye be before the for euer, for thou LORDE God thine awne selfe hast spoken it: and with thy blessyng shal thy seruauntes house be blessed for euer.

The biiij. Chapter.

A ND it fortuned after this, y Dauid smote g Philistynes, and discomfited them, and toke the brydell of bondage out of the Philistynes hande. ¶He smote the Moabites also to the grounde, so that he broughte two partes of them to death, and let one parte lyue. Thus the Moabites were subdued vnto Dauid, so y they broughte him gifts.
Do mercy upon him for Ionathas sake? There was a seruaunt of Sauls house, named Siba, whom they called vnto Dauid, to sayde vnto him: Art thou Siba? He sayde: Yee thy seruaunt. The kyng sayde: Is there yet eny man of Sauls house, I maye do the mercy of God vpon him? Siba sayde vnto the kyng: There is yet a sonne of Ionathas, lame on his fete. The kyng sayde vnto him: Where is he? Siba sayde vnto the kyng: Beholde, he is at Lodaber in Machir house of Ammeul. The sent kyng sayde Dauid thither, caused for to fetch him fro Lodaber out of Machir house of Ammeul, the sonne of Ammeul.

Now when Mephiboseth the sonne of Ionathas the sonne of Saul came vnto Dauid, he fell vpon his face, worshiped him. Dauid sayde: Mephiboseth. He sayde: Here am I thy seruaunt. Dauid sayde vnto him: Feare not, for I will do mercy vpon the for thy father Ionathas sake, and will restore vnto the all the londe of thy father Saul: but thou shalt eate bred daylie at my table. He worshiped and sayde: Who am I thy seruaunt, that thou turnest the to a deed dogg as I am?

Then the kyng called Siba thy seruaunt of Saul, and sayde vnto him: All thy hath belonged vnto Saul to all his house, haue I seene to thy lordes sonne. Tyll his londe for him therfore, thou children thee seruauntes, bryng it in, it maye be bred for thy lordes sonne, and he maye enjoye it: but Mephiboseth thy lordes sonne shall eate bred daylie at my table. Siba had fytten sonnes twentye seruauntes. And Siba sayde vnto the kyng: Acordinge vnto all as my lorde the kyng hath commandned his seruaunt, so shall his seruaunt do. And let Mephiboseth (sayde Dauid) eate at my table, as one of the kynges owne children. And Mephiboseth had a yonge sonne, whose name was Micha. But all dwell in the house of Siba, serued Mephiboseth. As for Mephiboseth him selfe, he dwelt at Jerusalem: for he ate daylie at the kynges table and was lame on both his fete.

AND it fortuned after this, that the kyng of the children of Ammon dyed, and his sonne Hanun was kyng in his steade. Then sayde Dauid: I will do mercy vpon Hanun the sonne of Nahas, as his father dyd mercy vpon me. And so he sent, and comforted him by his seruauntes ouer his fathers death. Now when Dauids seruauntes came in to the londe of the children of Ammon, the mightie men of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun their lorde: Thinkest thou it is for the honour of thy father in thy sighte, y Dauid hath sent comforters vnto the? Hath he not sent his seruauntes vnto y (thynkest thou) to spye and search out the cite and to overthowe it?

Then toke Hanun the seruauntes of Dauid, and shoue of the one halue of their beerdes, and cut of the halfe of their garnettes even by the girdell, and so let them go. Whan this was tolde Dauid, he sent to mete them: for the men were put to greate shame. And the kyngese caused to saye vnto them: Abide at Iericho, tyll youre beerdes be growne, τ then come agayne.

When the chilcre of Ammon sawe that they stynked in the sighte of Dauid, they sent and hyred the Siriens of the house of Rehob, and the Siriens at Zoba euene twentye thousande fote men, and from the kynges of Maecha a thousande men, and from Istob twelue thousande men. When Dauid herde that, he sent Ioab with all the hoost of y men of warre. And the children of Ammon wente forth, and prepared them selues to y battayll before the intraunce of the gate. But the Sirians of Soba, of Rehob, of Istob and of Maecha were alone in the felde.

Now when Ioab sawe that the battayll was set vpō before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, τ prepared him selfe agaynst the Syrians. And the residue of the people put he vnder the hande of his brother Abisai, that he mighte prepare him agaynst the chilcre of Ammon. And sayde: Yf y Syrians be to mightie for me, helpe thou me: but yf the children of Ammon be to mightie for the, I shall helpe the. Take a good corage vnto the, and let vs be stronge for oure people, and for y cite of oure God: neuertheles the LORDE do what pleaseth him.

And Ioab made him forth with the people that was with him, to fighte agaynst the Syrians: and they fled before him. And when the children of Ammon sawe that the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai, α wente in to the cite. So Ioab turned agayne from the children of Ammon, τ came to Jerusalem. And when the Syrians sawe y they were smytten before Israel, they came together.

And Hadad Eser sent τ broughte out y Syrians beyonde the water, and conueyed their power in, τ Sobath the chefe captayne of Hadad Eser wente before thē. Whan this was tolde Dauid, he gathered all Israel together, τ wente ouer Iordan, and came to Helam, τ the Syrians prepared them selues against Dauid to fighte with him, howbeit the Syrians fled before Israel. And Dauid swele of the Syrians souė hundreth charettes, τ fortye thousande horsmē, τ Sobath the chefe captayne smote he also, so that he dyed there. Whan the kynges which were vnder Adad Eser, sawe, that they were smytten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and were subdus vnto them. And the Syrians were afraied to helpe the children of Ammon eny more.

The ri. Chapter.

AND when y yeare came aboute what a tyme as y kynges vse to go forth, Dauid sent Ioab τ and his seruauntes with him, and all Israel, to destroye the children of Ammon, and to lave sege vnto Rabba: but Dauid abode at Jerusalem.

And aboute the euethode it fortuned that Dauid arose from his restinge place, τ wente vp to y toppe of the kynges palace, and from y toppe he sawe a woman *waszshinge hir selfe, and the woman was of a very frye bewyte. And Dauid sent, and caused to axe what woman it was, and sayde: Is not that Bethseba the daughter of Eliam the wife of Vrias the Hethite? And Dauid sent messangers, and caused for to fetch her. And whā she was come in vnto him, he laye with her. Neuertheles she halowed hir selfe from hir vnclennes, and turned agayne vnto hir house. And the womā was with childe, and sent, and caused to tell Dauid and to saye: I am with childe. Dauid sent vnto Ioab (sayege:) Sende me Vrias y Hethite. And Ioab sent Vrias vnto Dauid. And whan Vrias came to him, Dauid axed him yf it stode well with Ioab, and with the people and with the battayll.

And Dauid sayde to Vrias: Go downe in to thy house, and wash thy fete. And when Vrias went out of the kynges palace, the kynges gifte folowed him. And Vrias layed him downe to sleepe before the kynges palace gate, where all his lوردes seruauntes laye, and wente not downe in to his house. When word came to Dauid: Vrias is not gone downe in to his house, Dauid sayde vnto him: Camest thou not ouer the felde? Why wenest thou not downe in to thy house? Vrias sayde vnto Dauid: The Arke and Israel vnto Juda abide in the tentes: And Ioab my lorde and my lوردes seruauntes lye in thy felde, and shal I go in to my house to eate and drynke, and to lye with my wife? As truly as thou lyuest, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not do this thinge. Dauid sayde vnto Vrias: Abye here then to daye, tomorrow wil I let the go. So Vrias abode at Jerusalem the same daye, and the nexte also. And Dauid called him to eate drynke before him, and made him drunken. And at euene he wente to lye him downe for to sleepe vpon his couche with his lوردes seruauntes, and wente not downe in to his house.

On the morow wrote Dauid a letter vnto Ioab, and sent it by Vrias. After this maner wrote he in the letter: Set Vrias in thyn sorest parte of thy battayll, turne you beynde hym, he maye be slayne. Now wha Ioab layed slege to the cite, he set Vrias in thyn place, where he knewe thy the mightiest men of Armes were. And when the men of the cite fell out and foughte agaynst Ioab, there fell certayne of thy people of Dauids seruauntes. And Vrias the Hethite dyed also.

Then sent Ioab, and caused to tell thy kyng all the matter concernynge the battayll, and comandaunt the messaunger, and sayde: Whan thou hast tolde thy kyng all the matter concernynge the battayll, and seist that he is wroth, and yf the kyng saye vnto the: Wherfore came ye so naye the cite with the battayll? Knowe ye not how they vse to shute from the wall? * Who smote Abinealech the sonne of Ierubaal? Dyd not a woman cast a piece of a mylstone vpò him from the wall, so that he dyed at Thebez? Why came ye so naye the wall? Then shal thou saye: Thy seruaunt Vrias the Hethite is deed also.

The messaunger wente his waye, and came and tolde Dauid all together, wherfore Ioab had sent him. And the messaunger sayde vnto Dauid: The men preuayled against vs, and fell out vnto vs in to thy felde: and we were vpon them harde at the dore of thy porte. And the archers shot from the wall vpon thy seruauntes, and slewe certayne of the kynges seruauntes: and thy seruaunt Vrias the Hethite is deed also.

Dauid sayde vnto the messaunger: Thus shalt thou saye vnto Ioab: Let not y vexe the, for the swerde consumeth now one now another. Go forth with the battayll against the cite, that thou mayest destroye it, and cõorte the men. And whan Vrias wyfe herde that Vrias was deed, she mourned for his husbande. But wha she had made an ende of mournynge, Dauid sent, and caused her be fetched vnto his palace, and she became his wyfe, and bare him a sonne. Neuerthelesse this dede y Dauid dyd, displeased the LORDE.

The r11. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sent Nathan vnto Dauid. Whan he came to hym, he tolde hym: There were two men in one cite, the one riche, the other poore. The riche man had very many shepe and oxen: but the poore man had nothinge saue one little shepe, which he had boughte, and norished it, so that it grewe vp with him and his children together. It at of his bred, and dranke of his cuppe, and slepte in his lappe, and he helde it as a doughter. But whan there came a straunger vnto the riche man, he spared to take of his awne shepe and oxen (to prepare oughte for the straunger that was come vnto hym) and toke the poore mans shepe, and prepared it for the man that was come vnto him.

Thè was Dauid wroth with greate displeasure agaynst that man, and sayde vnto Nathan: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, the man that hath done this, is the childe of death. * The shepe also shal he make good foure foldes, because he hath done soche a thinge, and not spared it.

Then sayde Nathan vnto Dauid: Thou art euene the man. Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: + I haue anoynted the to be kyng ouer Israel, and deluyered the out of the hande of Saul, and haue geuen the thy lوردes house, and his wyues in to thy lappe, and the house of Israel and Juda haue I geuen the: and yf that be to litle, I wyl yet do this and that for the also. Wherfore hast thou then despised the worde of the LORDE, to do soch euell in his sighte? Vrias the Hethite hast thou slayne with the swerde: His wife hast thou taken to be thy wyfe, but him hast thou slayne with thy swerde of the children of Ammon.

Now therfore shalt not thy swerde departe from thy house for euer, because thou hast despised me, and taken the wife of Vrias the Hithite, to be thy wife. Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I will rayse vp euell of thyne awne house, and wyll take thy wyues before thyne eyes, and wyll gene them vnto thy neighboure, so that he shall lye with thy wyues by Sonne lighte. For thou hast done it secretly, but I wyll do this in the sighte of all Israel, and by Sonne lighte.

Then sayde Daud vnto Nathan: I haue synned vnto the LORDE. Nathan sayde vnto Daud: So hath the LORDE also taken awaye thy synne, thou shalt not dye. But for so much as thou thorow this dede hast caused the enemies of the LORDE to blaspheme, why sonne that is borne vnto the, shall dye the death. And Nathan wente home. As for the childe which Vrias wife bare vnto Daud, the LORDE smote it, so that it was deadesicke.

And Daud besought God for the childe, and fasted, and wente in, and laie all nighte vpon the earth. Then rose the Elders of his house, and wolde haue taken him vp frō the grondewe: neuerthelesse he wolde not, nether ate he with them. Vpon the seuenthe daye why childe dyed. And Daudis seruauntes durst not tell him that the childe was deede. For they thoughte: Beholde, when the childe was yet alyue, we spake vnto him, and he herkened not vnto oure voyce, How moch more shall it greue him, yf we saye: The childe is deede? And Daud sawe that his seruauntes made a whisperinge together, and perceaued that the childe was deede, and sayde vnto his seruauntes: Is the childe deede? They sayde: Yee. Then rose Daud vp from the earth, and wazshedd him selfe, and anoynted him, and put on other garmentes, and wente in to the house of the LORDE, and worshipped.

And when he came agayne, he commanded to set bred before him, and ate. Then sayde his seruauntes vnto him: What maner of thinge is this that thou doest? When the childe was alyue, thou fastedest and weptest: but now that it is deede, thou stodest vp and eatest? He sayde: I fasted and wepte for the childe whan it was yet a lyue, for I thoughte: Who knoweth, peradventure the LORDE maye be gracious vnto me, that the childe maye lyue. But now that it is deede, wherfore shulde I fast? Can I fetch it agayne? I shal go vnto it, but it shall not come agayne vnto me. And when Daud had comforted Bethseba his wife, he wente in vnto her, and laye with her. And she bare a sonne, whom he called Salomon. And the LORDE loued him. And he put him vnder the hāde of Nathan why prophet, which called him Iedidla because of the LORDE.

So Ioab foughte agaynst Rabba of why children of Ammon, and wanne the kynges cite, ° sent messauntes vnto Daud, w caused to saye vnto him: I haue foughte agaynst Rabba, and haue wanne the water cite also. Gather thou therfore the residue of the people togethers, and laye sege to why cite, and wyllne it, that I wyllne it not, and haue the name therof. So Daud gathered all why people together, and wente, sent agaynst Rabba, and wanne it, and toke their kynges crownne frō his heade (which in weight had a talente of golde, and precious stones) and was set vpon Daudis heade, and very moch spoyle caried he out of the cite. As for the people that was therin, he broughte the forth, and layed them vnder yron saves and hokes and wedges of yron, and burned the in tyle ouens. Thus dyd he vnto all the cities of the children of Ammon. Then returned Daud and all the people vnto Jerusalem agayne.

AND it fortuned after this, that Absalom why sonne of Daud had a fayre sister, whose name was Thamar, w Ammon the sonne of Daud loued her. And Ammon was in great combrance, in so moch that he was euen sicke, because of Thamar his sister. For she was a virgin, and Ammon thoughte it shulde be harde for him to do eny thinge vnto her. But Ammon had a fīche, whose name was Ionadab the sonne of Simea Daudis brother. And the same Ionadab was a very wyse man, which sayde vnto him: Why art thou so leane (thou kynges sonne) from daye to daye? Mayest thou not tell me? Then sayde Ammon vnto him: I loue Thamar my brother Absaloms sister exceedingly.

* Deut. 28. c. 1 Re. 16. d. † Eccl. 47. c. Psal. 50. a.

I onadab sayde vnto him: laye the downe vpon thy bed, and make the sicke. And whan thy father commeth to loke how thou doest, saye vnto him: Oh let my sister Thamar come, that she maye fede me, and make a meece of meate before me, that I maye se it, ye eate it of hir hande. So Ammon layed him downe, and made him sicke. Now wha the kyng came in to loke how he dyd, Ammon sayde vnto the kyng: Oh let my sister Thamar come, and make me a sypypnye or two, and that I maye eate it of hir hande. Then sent David for Thamar in to the house, and sayde vnto her: Go thy waye to thy brother Ammons house, ye make me a meece of meate. Thamar wente vnto hir brother Amons house, but he laye in his bed. And she toke flour, and mixte it, and dighte it before his eyes, and made him a sypypnye. And she toke the meece of meate, and pourde it out before him: but he wolde not eate.

And Ammon saide: Put forth every man fro me. And euerie man wete forth from him. Then sayde Ammon vnto Thamar: Brynge me that meece of meate in to the chamber, that I maye eate it of thy hande. Then toke Thamar ye sypypnye that she had made, and broughte it vnto Ammon hir brother in to the chamber.

And whan she broughte it vnto hym ye he mighte eate, he toke holde of her, ye sayde vnto her: Come my sister, lye with me. Neuertheles she saide: Oh no my brother, force me not: for so do they not in Israel, do not thou soch folly. Whither shal I go with my shame? And thou shalt be as one of the vnwyse in Israel. But speake vnto the kyng, he shal not withholde me from the.

Howbeit he wolde not herken vnto her, and ouercame her, ye and forced her, and laye with her. And Ammon hated her exceedingely, so that the hate was greater then the loue was before. And Ammon sayde vnto her: Vp, and get the hence.

She saide vnto him: This euell that thou thrustest me out, is greater then the other, that thou hast done vnto me. Neuertheles he herkened not vnto her, but called his boye that serued him, and sayde: Put awaye this woman fro me, and locke the dore after her. And she had a partye garment on: for soch garmentes wayre ye kynges daughters whyle they were virgins.

And wha his seruaunt had put hir forth, ye lockte the dore after her, Thamar strowed assayes vpon hir heade, and rente the partye garment which she had vpon her, and layed hir hande vpon hir heade, and wente on, and cryed. And hir brother Absalom sayde vnto her: Hath thy brother Ammon bene with the? Now holde thy peace my sister, it is thy brother, and take not the matter so to hert.

So Thamar remayned a wyddowe in her brother Absaloms house. And whan kyng David herde of all this, he was very sory. As for Absalom, he spake nether euell ner good to Ammon: but Absalom hate Ammon, because he had force his sister Thamar.

After two yeares had Absalom shepe clyppers at Baal Hazor, which lyeth by Ephraim. And Absalom called all the kynges children, and came to the kyng, and sayde: Beholde, thy seruaunt hath shepe clyppers, let it please ye kyng with his seruauntes to go with his seruaunte. But the kyng sayde vnto Absalom: No my sonne, let vs not all go, lest we be to chargeable vnto the.

And he wolde nedes haue had him to go, howbeit he wolde not, but blessed him. Absalom sayde: Shall my brother Ammon go with vs then? The kyng sayde vnto him: Wherfore shall he go with the? Then was Absalom so importune vpon him, that he let Ammon and all the kynges children go with him.

But Absalom commanded his yonge men, and sayde: Take hede whan Ammon is mery with wyne (and I saye vnto you: Smyte Ammon, and slaye him) that ye be not afrayed: for I haue commanded you, be stronge, and playe the men. So Absaloms yonge men dyd vnto Ammon, as Absalom had commanded them. Then stode all the kynges children vp, and euery one gat him vp vpó his Mule, and fled. And whyle they were yet on their wyne, the rumoure came to kyng David, that Absalom had slayne all the kynges children, so that not one of them was lefte.

Then stode the kyng vp, and rente his clothes, ye layed him downe vpon the earth, and all his seruautes that stode aboute him,
And beholde, all the whole kynred ryseth vp agaynst thy handmayden, and sayde: De-lyuer him which hath smytten his brother, that we maye kyll him, for the soule of his brother whom he hath slayne, and that we maye destroye the heyre also. And thus are they mynded to put out my sparke, which yet is lefte, that there shulde no name ner eny thinge els remayne ouer vnto my huszbade vpon earth.

The kynge sayde vnto the woman: Go thoy waye home, I vil geue a cõmaundemët for. And the woman of Thecoa saide vnto ý kynge: The trespace be vpon me (my lorde ý kynge) and vpon my fathers house: but the kynge and his seate be ungiltye. The kynge sayde: He that speaketh agaynst the, brynghe him vnto me, so shall he touch the nomore. She sayde: Let the kynge thynke vpon the LORDE his God, that there be not to many auengers of bloude to destroye, and that they brynghe not my sonne to naught. He sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shall not one heer of thy sonne fall vpon the earth. And the woman sayde: Let thy handmayde speake somewhat to my lorde the kynge. He sayde: speake on. The woman sayde: Wherfore hast thou deuised soch a thing against the people of God? And how happeneth it that the kynge speaketh soch, to make his-selfe gilte, and causeth not his out lawe to be broughte agayne? For we all dye the death, and as the water that sinketh in to the earth, which is not taken vp. And God will not take awaye the lyfe, but vnbethynketh his-selfe, ý euen the very outlawe be not cleane thrust out from him.

Thus am I come also to speake this to my lorde the kynge in the presence of the people, for thy handmayden thoughte: I wyl speake to the kynge, peraduenture he shall do that his handmayden sayeth, for he shall heare his handmayden, to deluyer me from the hande of all them, that wolde destroye me with my sonne from the enheritaunce of God. And thy handmayden thoughte, ý worde of my lorde the kynge shall be as a meatofferynge, § for my lorde the kinge is as an angell of God, so that he can heare good and euell, therfore shall the LORDE thy God be with the.

The kynge answered and sayde vnto the Then Ioab gat him vp, and came to Absalom in to the house, and sayde vnto him: Wherfore haue thy seruauntes sett fyre vpon my pece of londe? Absalô sayde vnto Ioab: Beholde, I sent for the, and caused to saye vnto the: Come bither, that I maye sende the to the kyng, and to saye: Wherfore came I from Gesur? It was better for me that I were there yet. Let me therfore se the kynges face. But ye there be ny trespase in me, then put me to death. And Ioab wente in to the kyng, and tolde him. And he called Absalom, to come in to the kyng, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde before the kyng. And the kyng kyssed Absalom.

Then sayde the kyng vnto Ioab: Beholde, I haue done this: go thy waye therfore and brynge the childe Absalom agayne.

Then fell Ioab vpon his face vnto the kyng, and worshipped, and thanked the kyng, and sayde: This daye doth thy seruanunt perceau, that I haue founde grace in thy sighte: me the lorde the kyng, in that the kyng doth as his seruaunt hath sayde. So Ioab gat him vp, and wente vnto Gesur, and broughte Absalom to Ierusalem. But the kyng sayde: Let him go againe in to his house, and not se my face. Thus Absalom came agayne to his house, and sawe not v synes face.

But in all Israel there was not so ny, and so maruelous goody a man, as Absalom. From the sole of his fote vnto the toppe of his head there was not one blemisy in him. And when his heade was rounded (that was comonly euery yeare, for it was to heuy for him, so that it must nydes haue bene bouned) the heer of his heade weyed two hидrecht Sicles after ы kynges weight. And vnto Absalom there were borne thre sonnes and one daughter, whose name was Thamar, and she was a woman of a fayre bewtye: So Absalom abode two yeare at Ierusalem, and sawe not the kynges face.

And Absalom sent for Ioab, that he mighte sende him to the kyng. And he wolde not come to him. But he sent the seconde tyne, yet wolde he not come. Then sayde he vnto his seruannte: Ye knowe Ioabs pece of londe that lyeth by myne, and he hath barlye theron: go youre waye therfore and set fyre vpon it. So Absaloms seruannte sett fyre vpon Ioabs pece of londe.

AND after this it fortuned that Absalom caused to prepare himselfe cheartees and horses, and fyfteye men, which were his fote me. And Absalô gat him vp allwaye early in the mornynge, and stode in the waye by the porce: and when eny man had a matther which shulde come to the kyng for judgament, Absalom called vnto him and sayde: Of what cite art thou? Yf he sayde then: thy seruanunt is of one of the trybes of Israel, then sayde Absalom vnto him: Beholde, thy matther is righte and plaine: but there is no man appoynted ы of the kyng to heare the.

And Absalom sayde: O who setteth me to be iudge in ы londe, that euery man which hath a plee or matther to do in ы lawe, might come to me, that I mighte helpe him to right. And when eny man came to him to do worshippe ы to do him obeisaunce, he put forth his hade, and helde him ы kyssed him. After this maner dyd Absalom vnto all Israel whan they came to the lawe vnto the kyng, and so dyd he steale awaye the hert of ы men of Israel.

After fyfteye yeares sayde Absalom vnto the kyng: I wil go and perfourme my vowe at Hebron, which I made vnto the Lorde. For thy seruannte made a vowe, *whan I dwelt at Gesur in Siria, and saide: Whan ы LORDE bryngeth me agayne to Ierusalem, I shal do a Gods seruyc vnto the LORDE. The kyng sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. And he gat him vp, and wente vnto Hebron.

* 2 Re. 13, g.
But Absalom had sent out spyes in all the tribes of Israel, sayenge: Whan ye heare the noyse of the trompe, saye: Absalom is made kyng at Hebron. There wente with Absalom two hundred men called from Jerusalem, but they wente on symply, and knewe not of the matter. Absalom sent also for Achitophel (the Ginlyyte) Dauidus counseler, out of his cite Gilo. Now when he did the sacrifice, the conspiracion was righte and the people ranne together, and multiplied with Absalom.

Then came one which tolde Dauid, and sayde, that the hert of every man in Israel followed Absalom. Dauid sayde vnto all his seruauntes that were with him at Jerusalem: Vp, let vs fle, for here shall be no escapyng for vs before Absalom.

Make haist that we maye be goynge, lest he ouertake vs and catch vs, and drywe some mysfortune vpon vs, and snyte the cyte with the edge of the swerde. Then sayde the kynges seruauntes vnto hym: Loke what my lorde kynges chooseth, beholde, here are thy seruauntes. And the kyng wente forth on fote with all his housholde. *But ten concubynes lefte he to kepe the house.

And when the kyng and all the people came forth on fote, they were farre from home, and all his seruauntes wente by hym, and all the Chrethians and Plethians, and all the Gethites (euen sixe hundredth men) which were come on fote from Gath, wente before the kyng.

And the kyng sayde vnto Ithai: If Gethite: Why goest thou also with vs? Turne backe, and byde with the kyng, for thou art a stranguer: get the hence agayne vnto thy place. Thou cemeest yesterdaie, and to daye thou superdest to go with vs: As for me, I wyl go whither I can: turne thou backe agayne, and mercy and faithfulnes happen vnto thy brethren with the. Ithai answered, and sayde, As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as my lorde the kynges lyueth, loke in what place my lorde the kynges shalbe, (whether it chaunce to life or death) there shall thy seruaunt be also.

Dauid sayde vnto Ithai: Then come, and go with vs. So wente Ithai the Gethite and all his men, and the whole multitude of the children that were with him. And all the lande wepte with loude voyce, and all the people with them. And the kyng wete over the broke Cedron, and all the people wente over by the waye that goeth to the wyldernes.

And beholde, Sadoc was there also, and all the Leuites that were with them, 6 they bare Arke of the couenaunt of God, and set it there. And Abiathar wente vp, vyll all the people came out of the cite. But the kyng sayde vnto Sadoc: Brynge the Arke of God in to the cite agayne. Yf I shal fynde grace before the LORDE, he shall fetch me agayne, and shall let me se it, and the house of it. But yf he saye thus: I have no pleasure to yf beholde, here am I, let him do with me as it pleaseth him.

And the kyng sayde vnto Sadoc y prest: O thou Seer, turne agayne to yf cite with peace, and Ahimaas thy sonne with the and Jonathas the sonne of Abiathar: beholde, I wyl tary in the playne of the wyldernes, tyll the message come from you, and tell me. So Sadoc and Abiathar broughte the Arke of God agayne to Jerusalem, and remayned there.

But Dauid wente vp to mount Olynete and wepte, q his heade was couered. And all the people that was with him, had every man his heade couered and wente on and wepte. And whan it was tolde Dauid, that Achitophel was in the cofederacy with Absalom, he sayde: LORDE turne thou Achitophels counell to foolishnes.

And when Dauid came vp to the toppe of the mount, where the vse was to worshippe God, Chusai the Arachite met him with his cote rent, and earth vpon his heade. And Dauid sayde vnto hym: Yf thou go with me, thou shalt be chargeable vnto me: but yf thou goest agayne in to the cite, and sayest vnto Absalom: I am thy seruaunt O kynges even as I was thy fathers seruaunt, so wyl I now be thy seruaunt. Then shalt thou brynge Achitophels counell to naughte. So is Sadoc and Abiathar y prestes with the, and all that thou hearest out of the kynges house, tell it vnto Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes. Beholde, their two somnes are with the: Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc, and Jonathas the sonne of Abiathar, by them mayest thou sende me worde what thou hearest. So Chusai Dauids frende came in to the cite. And Absalom came to Jerusalem.
The rbi. Chapter.

AND when David was gone a lytle by from the topppe of the mount, beholde, Siba the seruauit of Mephiboseth met him with a couple of asses sadled, wherons were two hundrith loaes of bred, and an hundrith quantities of rasyns and an hidrith quantities of fygges, and a bottell of wyne. Then sayde the kyng vnto Siba: What wylt thou do herewith? Siba sayde: The asses shalbe for the kynges housholde to ryye vpon, and the loaes and fygges for the yonge men to eate, and the wyne shallbe for them to drynke when they are weery in the wyldernes. The kyng sayde: Where is thy lورdes sonne? Siba sayde vnto the kyng: Beholde, he abydeth at Jerusalem, for he saide: To daye shal ⚬ house of Israel restore my fathers kigdome vnto me. The kyng saide vnto Siba: Beholde, *all that Mephiboseth hath, shalbe thine. Siba sayde with reuercence, Let me finde grace in thy sight my lorde O kyng.

But when kyng Dauid came to Bahurim, beholde, there wente out a man of the kynred of the house of Saul, *whose name was Semei the sonne of Gera, which wente forth and cursed, and cast stones at Dauid, and at all kyng Dauids seruauntes and all the people, and all the mightie men were at his righte hande and at his lefte. Thus sayde Semei whan he cursed: Get the forth, get the forth thou bloody hounde, thou man of Belial. The LORDE hath rewarded the for all the bloude of the house of Saul, ⚬ thou becamest kyng in his stede. Now hath the LORDE geuen the kyngdom in to ⚬ hande of Absalom thy sonne, and beholde, now stickest thou in thine owne mysc这方面，for thou art a bloody hounde.

But Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia sayde vnto the kyng: Shall this deed dogg curse my lorde the kyng? I wyl go and take the heade awaye from him. The kyng saide: Ye children of Zeru Ia, what haue I to do with you? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commanded him: Curse Dauid. Who can saye now: Why doest thou so?

And Dauid sayde vnto Abisai and to all his seruauntes: Beholde, my sonne which came of my body, seketh after my lyfe, how much more now the sonne of Iemini? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commaunded him: ⚬ peraduenture the LORDE shall consydyre my aduersyte, and recompenence me good for his cursynge this daye. So Dauid wente on his waye with his men. But Semei wente on by the mount besyde him, and cursed, and cast stones at him, ⚬ threwe clottes of earth.

And the kyng came in and all the people that was with him, weery, and refreshed himselfe there. But Absalom and all the people of the men of Israel came to Ierusalem and Achitophel with him. When Chusai the Arachite Dauids frende came in to Absalom, he sayde vnto Absalom: God saue the kyng God saue the kyng.

Absalom sayde vnto Chusai: Is this thy mercy vnto thy frende? Why art thou not gone with thy frende? Chusai sayde vnto Absalom: Not so, but loke whom the LORDE chooseth, and this people, and all the men in Israel, his wyl I be, and byde with him. Secondly, whom shulde I serue? Shulde I not do seruyce before his sonne? Like as I haue serued in the presence of thy father, so wyl I do seruyce before the also.

And Absalom sayde vnto Achitophel: Geue vs youre counsell what we shall do? Achitophel sayde vnto Absalom: ¶ Go lye with thy fathers concubynes, whom he hath lefte to kepe the house, so shall all Israel heare that thou hast made thy father to stykke, and the hande of all them that are with ⚬ shalt be the bolder. Then made they a tente vnto Absalom vpon the house toppe. And Absalom laye with his fathers concubynes in the sighte of all Israel.

At that tyme when Achitophel gaue a counsell, that was euens as yt a man axed counsell at God: So were all the counsell of Achitophel both with Dauid and with Absalom.

The rbiij. Chapter.

AND Achitophel sayde vnto Absalom: I A wil chose out twolue thousande me, and wyl ge me vp, and persue Dauid by nighte, and fall vpō him when he is feble and weery: When I vexe him the, so that all the people which is by him, flieth, I wil smite the kyng onely, and brynge all the people vnto the

* 2 Re. 9. b.  † 2 Re. 19. b.  ‡ Exo. 22. d.  § 3 Re. 2. g.  || 2 Re. 12. c. and 15. c.  ¶ The houses were flat in those partes at that tyme.
agayne. So when every man is brought vnto the as thou desyrest, then shal all the people be in peace. Absalom thought that good, and so dyd all the Elders in Israel. But Absalom sayde: I praye you call Chusai the Archite also, and let vs heare what he sayeth therto. And wha Chusai came in to Absalom, Absalom saide vnto him: Thus hath Achitophel spoken, Saye thou now, shal we do it or not?

Then sayde Chusai vnto Absalom: It is no good counsell. Achitophel hath geuen at this tyme. And Chusai sayde morourer: Thou knowest thy father well and his men, that they are stronge and of a wrothfull stomack, euyn *as a Beer that is robbed of hir yonge ones in the felde. Thy father also is a man of warre, and wyll not be necligët with the people. Beholde, he hath now peraduenc-ture hyd hymselfe in some cause or in some place. Yf it came to passe then that it chaunnced euell at the first, thare shulde come a rumoure and saye: There is a slaughter done in the people that folowed Absalō: the shulde every man be discouraged, which els is valeant, thath a hert like a lyô: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is stronge, and that all they which be with him, are mightie men.

But this is my counsell, that thou gather together all Israel from Dan vnto Berseba in nombre as the sonde of the See, and go thou thine owne person amonge them, then wil we fall vpon him in what place we finde him, and wyll ouerwhelme hym euyn as the dew falleth vpon the earth, so that we shal not leaue one of him and of all his men. But yf he resorte in to a cite, then shal all Israel cast roapes aboute the same cite, and drawe it in to the rieur, so that there shal not one stone of it be founde.

Then sayde Absalom and euery man in Israel: The counsell of Chusai the Archite is better then Achitophels counsell.

But the LORDE broghte it so to passe, that y good counsell of Achitophel was hyndred, that the LORDE mighte brynge euell vpon Absalom.

And Chusai sayde vnto Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes: Thus and thus hath Achitophel counseel Absalom and the Elders in Israel: but so and so haue I counseele. Sende now therafore in all the haist, and tell Dauid, and saye: Abyde not all nighte in the playne felde of the wyldernes, but get the ouer, that the kyng be not swalowed vp, and all the people that is with hym. As for Ionathas and Ahimaz, they stode by the well of Rorgel, and a damself wente thither and tolde them. They wente on their waye, and tolde kyng Dauid, for they durst not be sene to come in to the cite.

But a lad sawe them, and tolde Absalom. Neuertheles they wente on their waye, and came to a mans house at Bahurim, which had a well in his courte, and they wete downe in to it. And the woman toke and spred a couerynge ouer the welles mouth, and stode firmenty corne theron, that it was not perceaued. Now when Absaloms seruauntes came to the woman in to the house, they sayde: where is Ahimaz and Ionathas? The woma sayde vnto them: They are gone ouer the little water.

And wha they soughte and founde them not, they wente agayne to Jerusalem. And when they were gone, they clymed vp out of the well, and wente their waye, and tolde Dauid kyng, and sayde vnto Dauid: Get you vp, and go soone ouer wyll water, for thus and thus hath Achitophel geuen counsell agaynst you.

Then Dauid gat him vp, and all the people that was with hym, and passed ouer Iordane till it was cleare morouere. And there was not one, but he wente ouer Iordane.

When Achitophel sawe that his counsell wente not forth, he sadled his asse, gat him vp, and wete home in to his cite and put his house to poynte, and hanged him selffe, and dyed, and was buried in his fathers graue.

And Dauid came to Mahanaim, and Absalom wente ouer Iordane, and all the men of Israel with him. And Absalom had set Amasa ouer the hoost in Ioabs steade. Amasa was the soune of a man, whose name was Iethra a Iesraelite, which laye with Abigail the daughter of Nahas the sister of Zera the ancestor of Amas. But Israel and Absalom pitched in Gilead.

When Dauid was come to Mahanaim, Nahas of Rabbath of the childe of Ammon, and Machir the soune of Ammiel of Lodebar, and Barsilai a Gileadite of Roglim broughte bedstufte, tapestrie worke, basens, earthen vessell, whete, barley, meel, parched corne, beenes, otemeell, ryse, hony, butter, shepe and fat oxen vnto Daudid, and to y people that was with him, for to eate: for they thought,
The people shall be hongrie, weerye and thirstye in the wyldernes.

The xvn. Chapter.

AND Daudid mustred the people y was with him, and set captaynes ouer the, ouer thousandes and ouer thousandes. And sent out of the people one thirde parte vnder Abisai the sonne of Zerv Ia Ioabs brother, and one thirde parte vnder Ithai the Gethite.
The kyng sayde vnto the people: I will go forth with you also. Neuertheles the people sayde: Thou shalt not go forth, for though we fle, or die halfe of vs they shal not regarde vs. For thou art as ten thousande of vs. Therfore is this better that thou mayest helpe vs out of the cite. The kyng sayde:
Loke what ye are content withall, that wyl
I do. And the kyng stode in the gate, and to all the people wente by hundreds and by thousandes. And y kinge comamaged Ioab and Abisai, and Ithai, and sayde: Intreate me the yonge man Absalom gently. And all the people herde it, wha the kyng comamaged all the captaynes concernynge Absalom.
And

And when the people were come forth in to the felde agaynst Israel, the battayll beganne in the wod of Ephraim. And the people of Israel were smitten there before Danids se-uauntes, so that there was a greate slaughter the same daye, of twenty thousandes men.
And the battaill was scaterd abrode there in the londe. And the wod consumed moch more people the same daye, then the swerde consumed.

And Absalom met Daudis seruauntes, and rode vpon a Mule. And when the Mule came vnder a greate thicke Oke tre, his head stroke holde on the Oke, and so hanged he betwene heauen and earth, but the Mule ranne awaye from vnder him. When a certayne man sawe that, he tolde Ioab, and sayde:
Beholde, I sawe Absalom hange vpô an Oke tre. And Ioab saide vnto the ma y tolde it him: Beholde, sawest thou that, why smotest thou him not there to the goude? so wolde I haue geuen the of myne awne behalfe ten syluerlynges and a gyrdell.

The man sayde vnto Ioab: Yf thou haddest weyed me a thousande syluerlynges in my handes, yet wolde I not haue layed my handes on the kynges sonne. For the kyng commanded the and Abisai and Ithai before oure eares, and sayde: Kepe me the yonge man Absalom. Or yf I had dissembled vpon the ioperdy of myne owne soule (for so moch as nothinge shulde be hyd from y kinge) thou thy selfe shuldest haue stode against me.

Ioab sayde: Not so, I wil vpon him before thy face.

Then toke Ioab thee speares in his hande, and thrust Absalom thorow y hert, while he was yet alyue vpon the Oke. And ten yoge men Ioabs wepeartekners, came aboute him, and smote him to death. Then blew Ioab the trompe, and broughte the people agayne, that they shulde folowe nomore vpon Israel.
For Ioab wolde fauoure the people. And they toke Absalom, and cast him in the wod in to a greate pytt, and layed a greate heape of stones vpon him. And all Israel fled, every one vnto his tente.

Absalom had set him vp a piler whyle he was yet alyue, which stode in the kynges valley, for he sayde: I haue no sonne, therfore shall this be a remembrance of my name: and he called the piler after his owne name, And vnto this daie it is yet called Absaloms place.

Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc sayde: Let me runne now, and bryngye the kyng wordes, that the LORDE hath gotten him righte fro
the hande of his enemies. But Ioab sayde:
Thou shalt bringe no good tidinges to daie another daye shalt thou bryngye him worde, and not to daie, for the kynges sonne is deed.
But vnto Chusi sayde Ioab: Go thou thy wayne, and tell the kyng what thou hast sene.
And Chusi did his oeyesaunce vnto Ioab, and ramne. Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc sayde agayne vnto Ioab: What and I ranne also?
Ioab sayde: What wilt thou runne my sonne?
Come hithe, thou shalt bryngye no good tydinges. (He answered:) What and I ranne
yet. He sayde vnto him: Renne on thy waye then. So Ahimaas ranne the straighte waye, and came before Chusi.

As for Daudid, he sat betwene the two gates,
And the watchman wente vp to y toppe of the porte vpon the wall, and lifte vp his eyes, and sawe a man remninge alone, and cryed, and tolde the kinge. The kyng sayde: Yf he be alone, then is there good tydings in his mouth. And as the same wente and came forth, the watchman saw another man rennyge, and cryed in the port and sayde: Beholde, there renneth a man alone. The kinge sayde: The same is a good messaunger also. The watchman sayde: I se the rennyge of the first as it were the rennynge of Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc. And the kyng sayde: He is a good man, and bryngeth good tidinges. Ahimaas cryed, and sayde vnto kyng: Peace, and worshipped before the kyng vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Praised be the LORDE thy God, which hath geuen ouer men to helpe vp their handes agaynst my lorde the kyng.

The kyng sayde: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Ahimaas sayde: I sawe a grete ypoure, when Ioab the kynges seruaunt sent me thy seruaunt, and I wote not what it was. The kyng sayde: Go aboute, and stonde here. And he wente aboute and stode there. Beholde, then came Chusi and sayde: I bryngeth good tydinges my lorde the kyng: The LORDE hath executed righte for the this daye, from the hande of all them that rose vp agaynst the. But the kyng sayde vnto Chusi: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Chusi sayde: Euen so go it with all the enemies of my lorde the tyng, and with all them that rys vp agaynst the to doe euell, as it goeth with the yonge man. Then was the kyng soroufull, and wente vp in to the perler vpon the gate, and wepte, and as he wente, he sayde thus: O my sonne Absalο, my sonne, my sonne Absalom, wolde God I shulde dye for the. O Absalοm my sonne, my sonne.

The rir. Chapter. A

ND it was tolde Ioab: beholde, I kinge wepeth θ mourneth for Absalom. And so out of θ victory of θ daye there came a mourninge amonge all the people. For the people had herde the same daye, θ the kyng toke on heuely because of his sonne. And θ people stalle awaye the same daye, so that they came not in to the cite: as a people that is put to shame, pyccketh them selues awaye, when they are fled in a battayll. As for the kyng, he had conuered his face, and cryed loude, and sayde: Oh my sonne Absalom, Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

But Ioab came to the kyng in to the house, and sayde: This daye hast thou shamed all thy seruauntes (which haue deluyedr thy soyle this daye, and the soules of thy sonnes, of thy doughters, of thy wyues, and of thy cocubynes) in that thou louest them that hate the, and hatest those that loue θ. For to daye thou shewest thyselfe, that thou carset not for the captaynes and seruauntes: For I perceae this daye, that ye Absalom onely were aluye, and we all deed this daye, thon woldest thanke
it were well.

Get the vp now thefore, and go forth, and speak louingly vnto thy seruauntes. For I swere vnto the by θ LORDE, ye thou go not forth, there shald not be the one man this nighte: this shalbe worse vnto θ, then all the euell that happened the sence thy youth vp hither to. The kyng sent him vp, and sat in the gate. And it was sayde vnto the people: beholde, the kyng sayth in the gate.
Then came all the people before θ kyng.
But Israel was fled euery one vnto his tent.

And all the people stroue in all the trybes of Israel, and sayde: The kyng ryd vs from the hande of oure enemies, and deluyedr vs from the hande of the Philistynes, and was fayne to fle out of the lode for Absalom. So Absalom whom we had anoynted ouer vs, is deed in the battayll. Why are ye so styll now, that ye fetch not the kyng agayne?

The kyng sent vnto Sadoc θ Abiathar the prestes, θ caused to saye vnto the: Speake to the Elders of Iuda, θ saye: Why wyl ye be the last to fetch the kyng agayne his house? (for θ sayenge of all Israel was come before the kyng in to his house) ye are my brethren, my bone, and my flesh. Wherfore wyl ye then be the last to bryngeth the kyng agayne? And saye vnto Amasa: Art not thou my bone and my flesh? God do this θ that vnto me, ye thou shal not be the chafe captayne before me in Iobs steade, as longe as thou lyuest.

And he bowed the hert of all the men of Iuda as of one man. And they sent vnto θ kyng: Come agayne, thou and all thy seruauntes: So the kyng came agayne. And whan he came vnto Iordane, θ men of Iuda were come to Gilgal, for to goe downe to mete the kyng, that they mighte bryngeth θ kyng ouer Iordane. And Semei the sonne of Gera the sonne of Iemini, which dwelt at Bahurim, made haist, and wente downe with y men of Luda to mete kyngue Dauid, and there were with him a thousande me of Ben Iamin.
* Siba also the seruaunt of the house of Saul with his fyftene sones and twenty seruauntes, gat them thorow Iordan and passed ouer y fery, that they mighte bryngue ouer the kynges housholde, and to do him pleasure.

But Semei the sonne of Gera fell downe before the kyngue, when he passed ouer Iordan, and sayde vnto the kyngue: O my lorde, laye not the trespas vnto my charge, g thinke not vpon it that thy seruaunt vexe the, i in the daye when thy lorde the kyngue wente out of Jerusalem: and let not y kyngue take it to hert, for thy seruaunt knoweth that he hath synned. And beholde, this daye am I come the first amonche all the house of Joseph, for to go downe to mete my lorde the kyngue.

Neuertheles Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia answered and sayde: And shulde not Semei dye thersore, seyng he hath cursed y anointed of y LORDE? But Dauid sayde: *What haue I to do with ye children of Zeru Ia, that ye will become Sathan vnto me this daye? Shulde any man dye this daye in Israel? Thynkest thou that I knowe not, y I am become kyngue ouer Israel this daye? And y kyngue sayde vnto Sime: Thou shalt not dye. And the kyngue sware vnto him.

Mephiboseth the sonne of Saul came downe also to mete the kyngue. And he had not made cleane his fete ner combde his beerde, nether had he wasshed his clothes from the daye that the kyngue was gone awaye, vntyll the daye that he came agayne in peace. Now wha he came to Israil for to mete the kyngue, the kyngue sayde vnto hym: Mephiboseth, wherfore wentest thou not with me? And he sayde: My lorde O kyngue, my seruaunt hath dealeth vnrighteously with me: for thy seruaunt thoughte: I wil saddell an asse and ryde theron, and go vnto the kyngue: for thy seruaunt is lame, and he hath accused thy seruaunt before my lorde y kyngue. § But my lorde y kyngue is an angell of God, and thou mayest do what pleaseth the. For all my fathers house was nothinge, but people of death before my lorde y kyngue. ¶ And yet hast thou set thy seruaunce amonge them that eate at thy table. What other righteounes haue I, that I shulde crye eny more vnto the kyngue? The kyngue sayde vnto hym: What speakest thou yet more of thy matter? I haue sayde: Thou and Siba parte the londe betwene you. Mephiboseth sayde vnto the kyngue: Let him take it all, in as much as my lorde y kyngue is come hom in peace.

And Barsillai the Gileadite came downe from Roglim, and broughte the kyngue ouer Iordan, that he mighte coueyne him in Iordan. And Barsillai was very olde, so good as foure score yeare olde, § the same had proyued y kyngue of fode whyle he was at Mahanaim, for he was a very noble man. And the kyngue sayde vnto Barsillai: Thou shalt go ouer with me, I will take care for the with myne awne selfe at Jerusalem. But Barsillai sayde vnto the kyngue: What haue I yet to lyue, that I shulde go vp to Jerusalem with the kyngue? This daye am I foure score yeare olde. How shulde I knowe what is good or euell, or taist what I eate or drynke, or hear what the Musicians do syngyn? Why shulde thy seruaunt be chargeable first vnto my lorde the kyngue? thy seruaunt shall go a little with the kyngue ouer Iordan. Why wil the kyngue recompence me after this maner? Let thy seruaunt turne backe agayne, that I maye dye in my cite besyde my father and my mothers graue. Beholde, there is thy seruaunt Chi­meam, let him go ouer with my lorde the kyngue, and do vnto him what pleaseth the.

The kyngue sayde: Chimeam shal go ouer with me, and I will do for him what liketh the: and what so euere thou deseyst of me, that wyll I do for the also. And whan all y people was gone ouer Iordan and the kyngue likewyse, the kyngue kyssed Barsillai and blessed hym, and he turned vnto his place. And y kyngue passed ouer vnto Gilgal, and Chimeam wente with hym. And all the people of Iuda broughte the kyngue ouer, howbeit there was but halfe of the people of Israel there.

And beholde, the came all the men of Israel vnto the kyngue, g sayde vnto hym: Why haue oure brethren the men of Iuda stollen the awaye, and haue couneyed y kyngue and his housholde ouer Iordan, and all Dauids men with hym? Then answered they of Iuda vnto them of Israel: The kyngue is of oure n ye kynred, why are ye augrie therfore? Thynke

The 11th Chapter.

There was a famous man of Belial there, whose name was Seba the son of Bichri, a man of Iemini, which blew the trompe, and sayde: "We have no porcion in Dauid, ner inheritance in thy sonne of Isai, let every one get him to his tent, O Israel. Then fell euery man in Israel from Dauid, and folowed Seba the sonne of Bichri. But the men of Iuda cleued vnto their kyngge from Iordane vnto Ierusale. Whan Dauid came home to Ierusale, he took the ten concubynes (whom he had lefte to kepe the house) and put them in a holde to be kepte, and made prouysion for them: but he laye not with them, and so were they shut vp vnto their death, and lyued wedowes.

And thy kyngge sayde vnto Amasa: Call me all the men of Iuda together agaynst the thirde daye, get thee there present also. And Amasa wete to call Iuda together. And he was slacke to come at thy tyme which he had appoynted him. And Dauid sayde vnto Abisai: Now shall Seba the sonne of Bichri do vs more harme then Absalom. Take thou thy lordes seruauntes, and folowe vpon him, he fynde not some struge cities for him, and so escape out of oure sighte. Then wente Ioabs me forth after him, and the Chrethians and P lethians, and all the mightie men: and they wete out of Ierusale to folowe vpon Seba the sonne of Bichri.

But whan they were by the greate stone at Gibeon, Amasa came before them. As for Ioab, he was gyrded aboue his garment which he had on, and vpon it he had a swerde gyrded, which hanged by his thye in the sheeth, and wente easely out and in, and fell fro him. And Ioab sayde vnto Amasa: Peace be with the my brother. And Ioab toke Amasa by the bearde with his righte hade, to kysse him. And Amasa toke no hede vpon y swerde in Ioabs hande, and he thrust him therwith in to the bely, his bowles ranne out vpon the earth, and he thrust at him no more. And so he dyed.

Ioab his brother Abisai folowed vpon Seba the sonne of Bichri. And one of Ioabs seruauntes stode by him, and sayde: What is he this y wolde be agaynst Ioab to please Dauid, and to be with Dauid in Ioabs stead? As for Amasa, he laye rolled in the bloude in y mydles of the strete. But wha one sawe that all the people stode there still, he remoued Amasa from the strete vnto the felde, and cast a clothe vpon him, for so muche as he sawe, that who so euer came by him, stode styll. Now whan he was put out of the waye, euery man wete after Ioab, to folowe vpon Seba the sonne of Bichri.

And he wente thorow all y trybys of Israel vnto Abel Beth Maacha, and all the best chosen men gathered them selues together, folowed after him, and came and beseged him at Abel Beth Maacha, and made a banke aboute the cite harde on y wall. And all the people that was with Ioab, layed to their ordynance, and wolde haue cast downe the wall.

Then cried there a wyse woma out of y cite: Hear, hear, saye vnto Ioab that he come hither, I wyl speake with him. And wha he came to her, the woman sayde: Art thou Ioab? He sayde: Yee. She sayde vnto him: Hear the wordes of thy handmayden. He sayde: I heare. She sayde: The comon sayenge was somtyme: Who so wyl axe, let him axe at Abel, and so came it to a good ende. This is y noble and faithfull cite in Israel, and wyl thou destroye the cite and the mother in Israel? Why wyl thou swalowe vp the enheritaunce of the LORDE? Ioab answered and sayde: That be farre, that be farre fro me, that I shulde swalowe vp and destroye. The matter is not so, but a certayne man of mount Ephraim named Seba the sonne of Bichri, hath lifte vp him selfe agaynst kyngge Dauid, deluyer him onely, and I wyl departe from the cite. The woman sayde vnto Ioab: Beholde, his heade shall be cast vnto the ouer the wall. And the woman came in to all the people with hit wyszdome. And they smote of the heade of Seba the sonne of Bichri, and cast it vnto Ioab. Then blewe he the trompe, and they departed from the cite, euerie one vnto his tent. But Ioab came agayne to Jerusalem vnto the kyng.

* Ioab was capayne ouer all the hoost of Israel: Benia \( y \) sone of Ioiada was ouer the Chrethians and Plethians: Adoram was rent gatherer: Iosaphat the sone of Ahilud was Chaunceler: Seia was the serye: Sadoe and Abiathar were the prestes: Ira also \( y \) Iairite was Daudis prest.

The xri. Chapter.

A THERE was a derth also in Daudis tyme thre yeares together. And Daud sought the face of \( y \) LORDE. And the LORDE sayde: Because of Saul and because of that bloudy howseholde \( y \) he slewe the Gibeonites. Then the kyng caused for to call the Gibeonites, and spake vnto them. (As for the Gibeonites, they were not of \( y \) children of Israel, but a remaunnt of the Amorites: howbeit \( y \) the children of Israel had sworne vnto the, and Saul soughte for to smyte them in his gelousy, for the childef of Israel and Iuda.) Then sayde Daud to the Gibeonites: What shal I do vnto you? And where withall shal I make the attenion, that ye maye blesse \( y \) enheritaunce of \( y \) LORDE? The Gibeonites sayde vnto him: It is not for golde and syluer that we have to do with Saul and his house, nether haue we oughte to do for to slaye eny man in Israel.

He sayde: What saye ye then, that I shal do vnto you? They sayde vnto \( y \) kyng: The man that hath destroyed vs and broughte vs to naughte, shulde we destroye, that nothinge be lefte him in all the coastes of Israel. Let there be genen vs seuen men of his sones, that we maye hange them vp vnto the LORDE at Gibe of Saul the chosen of the LORDE. The kyng sayde: I wyll geue them. Howbeit the kyng spared Mephiboseth \( y \) sone of Ionathas \( y \) sone of Saul, because of the ooth of the LORDE \( y \) was betwene them: \( y \) namely, betwene Daud & Ionathas the sone of Saul. But the two sones of Ripsa \( y \) daughter of Aia, whom she had borne vnto Saul, Armoni & Mephiboseth, And the fyue sones of Michol the daughter of Saul, whom she bare vnto Adriel the sone of Barsillai the Mahalothite, dyd the kyng take, and gaine them in to the handles of \( y \) Gibeonites, which hanged the vp vpon the mount before the LORDE.

So these seuen fell at one tym, and dyed \( c \) in the tyme of the first haruest, whan \( y \) barly haruest begynneth. Then toke Rispa the daughter of Aia a sack cloth, \( g \) spred it vpon the rock in the begynnynge of the haruest, tyll the water from the heauen dropped vp\( p \) them, and suffred not the foules of the heauen to rest on them on the daye tyme, nether the wyld beasts of the feldes on the nighte seaseon. And it was tolde Daud what Rispa the daughter of Aia Sauls concubyne had done.

And Daud wente and toke the bones of Saul and the bones of Ionathas his sone from \( y \) citizens at Iabes in Gilead (which they \( l \) had stollen from \( y \) strete at Bethsan, where \( y \) Philistines had hanged the, what tyme as the Philistines had smytt Saul vpon mount Gilboa) and broughte them vp from thence, and gathered them together with the bones of them that were hanged. And the bones of Saul and of his sone Ionathas buried they in \( y \) londe of Ben Iamin, besyde \( y \) graue of his father Cis. So after this was God at one with the londe.

But there arose warre agayne of \( y \) Philistines agaynst Israel. And Daud wente downe \( g \) his seruauntes with him, \( g \) foughte agaynst the Philistynes. And Daud was weery, \( g \) Iesbhi of Nob (which was one of the children of Rapha, and the weight of his speare was thre C. weight of brasse, and had a new harnest vpon him) thought to smyte Daud. Neuertheles Abisai the sone of Zeru Ia helped him, \( g \) smote the Philistyne to death. Then swere Daudis men vnto him, \( g \) sayde: \( g \) Thou shalt nomore go forth with vs vnto the warre, that the lanterne in Israel be not put out.

 Afterwarde there arose yet warre at Nob with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai the Husathite smote Saph, which also was one of the childef of Rapha.

And there arose yet warre at Gob with the Philistynes. Then Elhanan the sonne of Iaere Orgim a Bethleemite smote Goliah the Gethite, which had a speare, whose shaft was like a weeuer lome.

And there arose yet warre at Gath, where there was a cōtensive man, which had sixe fyngers on his handes, and sixe toes on his fete, that is foure and twentie in the nombre, and he was borne also of Rapha. And when he spake despitelly vnto Israel, Ionathas y sonne of Simea Daudis brother smote him.
These foure were borne vnto Rapha at Gath, and fell thorow the hande of Daudid and of his seruauntes

The r111. Chapter.

A ND Daud spake the worde of this songe before the LORDE, what tyme as the LORDE had deluyered him fro the hande of all his enemies, and from the hande of Saul, and he sayde.

The LORDE is my stony rock, a my cast-tell, and my deluyerer.

God is my strength, in him wyl I put my trust: my shylde a the horne of my salua cion, my defence a my refuge, my Saulioure, thou shal helpe me frome violene wronge.

*I wil call vpon the LORDE with praise, so shal I be deluyered fro myne enemies.

For the sorowes of death cōpased me, and the brokes of Belial made me afraied.
The paynes of hell came aboute me, and the snares of death had ouertaken me.

Wha I was in trouble, I called vpō the LORDE, ye even my God calle I vpon, a so he herde my voyce fro his holy temple, a my cōplaynte (came) in to his eares.
The earth trembled and quaked, the foundacions of the heauen shoke and moued, because he was wroth.

Smoke went vp from his nose, and consumynge fyre out of his mouth, coles were kyndled therof.
He bowed the heauens and came downe, and it was darke vnder his fete.
He sat vpon Cherub and dyd flye, and appared vpon the fetheres of the wynde.
He made darknes his paulyon rounde aboute him, thicke water in the cloudes of y ayre.
At the brightnesse of him were the fyre coles kyndled.

The LORDE thondered from heauē, and the Hyest put forth his voyce.
He shot his arowes, and scattered them:
he lightened, and discomfitted them.

The pourynges out of the See were sene,

*Psal. 17. a.

and the foundacions of the earth were discovered at the chydinge of the LORDE, a at the breth of the sprete of his wrath.

He sent downe from aboue, and receaued me, and drue me out of many waters.

He deluyered me fro my strenge enemye, from them that hated me, for they were to mightie for me.

They ouertoke me in the tyme of my trouble, but the LORDE was my succoure.

He broughte me forth in to liberty: he delyuered me, because he had a favoure vnto me.

The LORDE shal rewarde me after my righteousnes, and acordinge to the clennes of my handes shal he recompence me.

For I have kepe y waye of the LORDE, that have not bene vn godly againyst my God.

For I have an eye vnto all his lawes, and haue not put his ordinance fro me.

Therfore wil I be perfecte vnto him, and wyl eshue myne awne wickednes.

So shal y LORDE rewarde me after my righteousnes, acordinge to the clennes of my handes in his eye sighte.

With the holy shal thou be holy, and with the perfecte thou shalt be perfecte.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed people, and shalt set thine eyes againyst the proude to brynge them downe.

For thou O LORDE art my lanterne. The LORDE shal lighte my darknesse.

For in y I shal discōnte an hoost of men, a in my God I shal leape over the wall.

The waye of God is perfecte: y worde of the LORDE are tryed in the fyre: he is a shylde for all thē that put their trust in him.
For where is there a God, excepte y LORDE? Or who hath eny strength without oure God?

God hath strenghed me with power, and made playne a perfecte waye for me.

He hath made my fete like hartes fete, a hath set me vp an hye.

He teacheth my handes to fighte, and bendeth the stel bowe with myne armes.

And thou hast geuen me the shylde of thy health, and with thy louung correccion shalt thou multiplye me.

Thou hast enlarged my goinge vnder me, and myne ankles haue not slyded.

I wyl folowe vpon myne enemies, and destroge the: and wyl not turne backe agayyne, yyll I haue broughte them to naught.

I wil doseume them and thrust them thorow, that they come not vp: they shall fall vnder my fete.

Thou hast girded me with strength to y battayll, and hast subdued them vnder me y rose vp agaynst me.

Thou hast made mye enemies to turne their backes vp0 me, that I might destroye them that hate me.

They shal crye, but there shallbe no Sanioouere: yee euen vnto the LORDE, but he answereth them not.

I wil beate them as small as the dust of the earth: euen as y claye of the stretes wil I make them thynne, and sprede them out abrode.

But me shal thou deliuer from the struy-ynges of the people, and shal kepe me to be y heade of the Heythen: A people whom I hane not knoune, shal serue me.

The straunge children have denied me:
at the heurnge of the earle shal they heryke vnto me.

The straunge children are waxen olde, a are shut vp in their presons.

The LORDE lyueth, and blessed be my God, and magnified be the strength of my health.

God seyth that I be auenged, and subdueth
the people vnto euermore.

He bryngeth me out fro myne enemies: a from them y ryse vp agaynst me, shal thou exalte me, and from y cruell man shal thou delyuer me.

For this cause wyl I gene thankes vnto the amoung the Heythen, and synge prayses vnto thy name.

Which doth greate health for his kyenge, a sheweth mercy vnto Dauid his anoynted, and to his sede for euermore.

The xxij. Chapter.

THERE are the last wordes of Dauid: Dauid the sonne of Isai sayde. The man, that was set vp to be y anoynted of the God of Iacob, a a pleasanta dyer of songes of Israel, sayde: The sprete of the LORDE hath spoken by me, and the vtertuauncetheorof is done thorow my tunge. He sayde: The God of Israel hath spoken vnto me, the strength of Israel, the gouernoure amoung men, the righteous gouernoure in the feare of God. As the lighte is in y mornyng when the Sonne aryseth, so that for the brightnesse therof no clowde remayneth: and as the grasse loketh vpon the earth thorow the rayne, euyn shal my house be with God.

For he had made an euerlastinge couenaunt with me, well apponyted on euery syde and sure. For this is all my health a pleasure, that it shal growe.
But the Belial shal be verterly a cleane ruted out as the thornes, which m0 take not in their hades. And they y touch them, shal destroye them with yrons a speares: a in the fyre shal they be brennt, that they maye be broughte to naught.

These are the names of Dauids Worthies:

Iasabeam y sonne of Hachmoni, a the cheuest amonge thre, which lifte vp his speare, a slewe eight hundreth at one ymse.

After him was Elesar the sonne of Dodi the sonne of Ahohi amonge the thre Worthy s with Dauid, when they spake despyefully to the Philistynes, and were gathered together to the battayll, and the men of Israel wente
vp. Then stode he vp and smote the Philis-tynes, tyll his hande was so weery that it crompled with the swerde. And the LORDE gane a greate victory at the same ymse, so that the people turned after him to spoyle.
After him was Samma the sonne of Age y Hararite. Wha the Philistynes had gathered them selues in a company, and in the same place there was a peece of lode full of small corne, and the people fled before the Philis-tynes, the stode he in the myddes of y peece of londe, a delynered it, a smote y Philistynes.
And God gane a greate victory.

And these thre pryncipall amonge thrite, came downe in the harest vnto Dauid, a in to the caue of Aduillum, a the hoost of y Philis-tynes laye in y valley of Repham. But Dauid was at the same ymse in the castell, and y Philistynes people laye at Bethleem.
And Dauid was desyrous, and sayde: Wolde God y some man wolde fetch me a drynke of water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate. Tho he brake the thre Worthy in to the hoost of the Philistynes, and drue of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder y gate, a caried it a broughte it vnto Dauid: neuertheless he wolde not drynke it, but offered it vnto the

† 1 Par. 12. c.
Go aboute in all the trybes of Israel, from Dan vnto Beresea, and nombre the people, that I maye knowe how many they be. Ioab sayde vnto the kyngge: The LORDE thy God adde vnto this people an hundreth tymes as much as it is now, that my lorde the kyngge maye se his eyes lust theron. But why hath my lorde the kyngge a desire to this thinge? Neuertheles the kyngges worde preuyled agaynst Ioab and the captynyes of the hoost.

So Ioab and y captynyes of the hoost wente forth from the kyngge, to nombre the people of Israel, and passed ouer Iordane, and pitched at Arorer, at the righte hande of the cite which lyeth in y ryuer of Gad, and at Iaseer, y came to Gilead, and in the lowe countre of Hadsi, and came vnto Dan Iaann, and aboute Sidon, and came to the stronge cite of Tirus, and all the cities of the Heuites and Caneantes, and came forth to the south parte of Iuda vnto Beresea, and wete rounde aboute that countre, and after nyne monethes and twenty daies they came to Ierusalem. And Ioab deluyed vnto y kyngge the summe of the people that was nombred. And in Israel there were eight C. thousande stronge men, that drue out the swerde: and in Iuda fyue hundreth thousande men. And after that the people was nombred, Dauids hert smote hym selfe. And Dauid sayde vnto y LORDE: I have synned sore, that I haue done this. And now LORDE take awaie the trespace of thy seruant. For I haue done very vn wysely.

And when Dauid rose vp in the monaynyge, the worde of the LORDE came vnto the prophet God, Dauids Seer, y sayde: Go y speake vnto Dauid. Thus sayeth the LORDE: I bryngge the thre thinges, chose the one of them, that I maye do it vnto the. Gad came vnto Dauid, and tolde him, and sayde vnto hym: Wilt thou that seuen yeare derth shall come in to thy londe? Or that thou be fayne to flye before thine aduersaries thre monethes, and they to persecute the? Or that there be pestilence thre daies in the londe? Take aduysement therfore and se, what answere I shall bringe agaynse vnto hym y sent me.

Dauid sayde vnto Gad: I am in extreme trouble. Neuertheles (yf it maye be) let me rather fall in to y handes of the LORDE (for his mercy is grete) I will not fall in to the handes of men.
So the LORDE sent pestilence in to Israel from the morow vnto the tyme appoynted, so that there dyed of the people from Dan vnto Berseba, thre score and ten thousande men. And whan the angel stretched his hande ouer Jerusalem to destroye it, the LORDE repented ouer the euell, and sayde vnto the angell: It is ynough, holde now thy hande.

The angell of the LORDE was beseide the barne of Arafna the lebusite. But whan Dauid sawe the angell that smote the people, he sayde vnto the LORDE: beholde, It is I that haue synned, I haue done the trespace: As for these shepe, what haue they done? Oh let thy hade be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house.

And Gad came to Dauid at the same tyme, and saide vnto him: Go vp, and set vp an altare vnto the LORDE in thy barne of Arafna the lebusite. So Dauid wete vp as Gad sayde, and as the LORDE had commaunded. And whan Arafna loked aboute him, he sawe the kynge with his seruauntes goinge vnto him, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Wherfore commeth my lorde thy kynge vnto his servaunt? Dauid sayde: To bye the barne of the, and to buyldde an altare vnto the LORDE, that the plage maye cease from the people.

But Arafna sayde vnto Dauid: Let my lorde the kynge take it, and offre what pleaseth him. Beholde, there is an oxe for a burnt offerynge, and sleddes, and vessels of oxen to the wodd. All this gaue Arafna vnto the kynge. And Arafna sayde vnto thy kynge: The LORDE thy God make the accepted vnto him. Neuertheles thy kynge sayde vnto Arafna: Not so, but I wyll bye it of the for as moch as it is worth. For I wyl not offre burntofferynge vnto thy LORDE, of which I haue for naughte. So Dauid boughte the barne and the ox for fiftie Sicles of syluer, and buyldde an altare there vnto the LORDE, and offred burntofferynge and deedofferynge. And the LORDE was mercifull vnto thy londe, and thy plage ceassed from the people of Israel.

The first Chapter.

AND wha kynge Daviید was olde α well strycē in age, he could not be warme, though he was covered with clothes. Then sayde his seruauntes vnto hym: Let vs seke a youge damsell a virgin for oure lorde the kynge, to stonde before the kynge, and to norish him, ζ to slepe in his armes, and to warne oure lorde the kynge. And they sought a fayre disell in all the coastes of Israel, and founde Abisag of Sunem, and brought her vnto ϛ kynge. And she was a very fayre damsell, and noryshed ϛ kynge, and serued him. Howbeit the kynge knewe her not.

Adonias γ sonne of Hagith lifte vp himselfe, and sayde: I wyl be kynge. And he prepared hym charettes and horsmen, and fyfte men to be remens on fote before him. And his father reproved hi not therof, so much as to saye: Wherfore doest thou so? And he was a man of a very fayre bewyte * and he had begotten him nexte after Absalō. And his man stode by Iobā γ sonne of Zeru Ia and by Abiathar the prest, which helped Adonias. But Sadoc the prest, and Benia the sonne of Ioida, and Nathan the prest and Semei and Reï, and Daviیدs Worthies were not with Adonias.

And wha Adonias offered shope and oxë, and fat catell besyde the stone of Soheleth, which lyeth by the τ well of Rogel, he called all his brethre the kynge sonnes, and all the men of Iuda the kynges seruautes. But the prophet Nathan and Benia, and the Worthies, and his brother Salome called he not. Then sayde Nathan vnto Bethseba Salomons mother: Hast thou not herde γ Adonias is kynge, and oure lorde Daviید knoveth not therof? Come now therefore, I wyll geue the counell, that thou mayest deluyer thy soule and the soule of thy sonne Salome. Come now and go in to kynge Daviید and saye vnto hym: Hast not thou my lorde the kynge sworne and sayde vnto thy handmayde: Salome thy sonne shall be kynge after me, and he shall sytt vpon my seate? Why is then Adonias made kynge? Beholde, while thou art yet there, and talkest with the kynge, I wyll come in after the, and tell forth thy tayle. And Bethseba wente in to the kynge to ϛ chamber.

The kynge was very olde. And Abisag of Sunem serued the kynge. And Bethseba bowed hirselfe, and worshipped the kynge.

The kynge sayde: What wilt thou? She sayde vnto hym: My lorde, Thou hast sworne vnto thy handmayde by the LORDE thy God: Thy sonne Salomon shall be kynge after me and syt vpon my seate. But now lo, Adonias is kynge, and my lorde the kynge knoveth it not. He hath offered oxen and fat catell, and many shepe, and hath called all the kynge sonnes, and Abiathar the prest, and Iobab the chefe captayne. But thy seruaunt Salomon hath he not bydden. Neuertheles thou my lorde art kynge, the eyes of all Israel loke vnto the, that thou shuldest shewe them who shall syt vpon the seate of my lorde the kynge after the. And wha my lorde the kynge sleepe with his fathers then shal I and my sonne Salomon be fayne to be synners.

But whyle she yet spake to the kynge, the prophet Nathan came, and she tolde γ kynge: beholde, there is the prophet Nathan. And when he came in before the kynge, he worshiped the kynge vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde My lorde O kynge, hast thou saide: Adonias shal be kynge after me, & syt vpon my seate? For he is gone downe this daye, and hath offered oxen, and fat catell, & hath called all the kynge sonnes, and the captaynes, and the prest Abiathar. And beholde, they eate and drylke before him, and saye: God saue the kynge Adonias. But me thy seruaunt, and Sadoc the prest, and Benia the sonne of Ioida, and thy seruaunt Salomon hath he not called. Hath my lorde the kynge comanded this, and not certifeyd his seruauntes who shall sytt vpon the seate of my lorde the kynge after him?

The kynge answered and sayde: Call Bethseba vnto me. And she came in before the kynge. And when she stode before the kynge, the kynge sware and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyeth (which haue deluyed my soule out of trouble,) I wyll do vnto the this daye, even as I sware vnto the by the LORDE the God of Israel, so that Salomon thy sonne shalbe kynge after me, and he shal sit vpon my seate in my steade.

Then Bethseba bowed hir selfe with hir face to the grounde, and thanked the kynge and sayde: God saue my lorde kynge Daviید for euermore. And the kyng sayde: Call me the prest Sadoc & the prophet Nathan, and Benai the sonne of Ioiada.

And whan they came in before the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto them: Take youre lorde seruauntes with you, and set my sonne Salomon vpon my Mule, and carry him downe to Gihon: and let Sadoc thy prest and the prophet Nathan, anoynte him there to be kyng over Israel, and blowe the trompe, and saye: God saue kyng Salomon, and go ye vp after him: and whan he commeth, he shall syt vp my seate, and be kyng in my steade: for I haue ordeyned him to be pryncce ouer Israel and Iuda. Then answered Benaia the sonne of Ioiada vnto the kyng, & sayde: Amen. The LORDE God of my lorde the kyngk saye thus also. As the LORDE hath bene with my lorde the kyng, so be he with Salomon also, that his seate maye be greater then the seate of my lorde kyngk Davud.

Then wente they downe, the prest Sadoc and the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and the Chrethians, & Plethians, & set Salomon vpon kyngk Davuids Mule, & broughte him to Gihon. And Sadoc the prest toke the oyle horne out of the Tabernacle, and anoynte Salomon. And they blew the trompe: And all ye people sayde: God saue kyngg Salomon. And all the people wente vp after him, and the people pyped with pypes, and was very joyfull, so that the earth range at the noyse of them. And Adonias herde it, and all the whom he had called, which were with him, and they had new eaten. And whan Ioab herde the noyse of the trompe, he sayde: What meaneth this noyse of the cite and this busynes? But whyle he yet spake, beholde, Ionathan the sonne of Abiathar thy prest came.

And Adonias sayde: Come in, for thou art a valeaunt man, and bryngest good tydings. Ionathan answered and sayde vnto Adonias: Alas, oure lorde kyngk Davud hath made Salomon kyng, and hath sent with him Sadoc the prest, and the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and the Chrethians and Plethians, and they haue set him vpon the kynges Mule: and Sadoc thy prest with the prophet Nathan hath anoynte him kyng at Gihon, and from thence are they gone vp with joye, that the cite range with all: that is the noyse that ye haue herde.

salomon also syyteth vp the kynges seate, & the kynges seruauntes are gone in to wysch good lucke vnto oure lorde kyngk Davud, and haue sayde: Thy God make Salomon a better name then thy name is, and make his seate greater then thy seate. And they haue wyszshed the kyngk good lucke vpon the bed. Moreror thy kyngk hath sayde thus: Prayesed be thy LORDE God of Israel, which this daye hath made one to syt vpon my seate, that myne eyes haue sene it.

Then were they afrayed, and gatt them vp all that were called by Adonias, and so they departed euery man his waye. But Adonias was afrayed of Salomon, and gat hym vp, and wete his waye, & toke holde of his horns of his altare. And it was tolde Salomon: beholde, Adonias seareth kyngk Salomô, & beholde, he taketh holde of the horns of his altare, & sayeth: Let kige Salomô swearke me this daye, that he shall not slaye his seruaunt with the swerde. Salomon sayde: Yf he wil be an honest man, there shall not one heer fall from hym vpon the earth: but ye there be euell founde in hym, he shall dye. And kinge Salomô sent, and caused him to be fetched * from the altare. And whan he came, he fell downe before kyngk Salomon. But Salomon sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye in to thy house.

The ii. Chapter.

Now whan the tyme came that Davud a shulde dye, he commaunded Salomon his sonne, and sayde: * I go the waye of all the worlde, Be thou strège therfore, and shewe thyselfe a man, and kepe the watch of the LORDE thy God, that thou walke in his wayes, and holde his ordinances, his commaundementes, his lawes, and his testimonies, as it is written in the lawe of Moses, that thou mayest be wyse in all that thou doest, and whither so euere thou turnest the: that the LORDE maye rayse vp his worde, which he hath spoken ouer me, and saide: Yf thy children kepe their waye and walke before me faithfully and truly and with all their hert and with all their soule, the shal there never fayle the a man vpon the seate of Israel.

Thou knowest well also what Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia hath done vnto me, what he dyd

And the children of Barsyallai the Gileadite, thou shalt shew mercy, that they may eate at thy table. For so joined they the selues vnto me, when I fled before thy brother Absalom. And beholde, thou hast with the Semei the sonne of Gera the sonne of Iemini of Bahurim, which cursed me with very byter and shamefull cursynges, what tyme as I wente to Mahanaim. Yet came he downe to mete me at Iordan, where I swere vnto him by the LORDE, and sayde: I wyll not slaye the with the swerde. But suffre not thou him to be vngltye, for thou art a wyse man, and shalt wel knowe what thou oughtest to do vnto him, that thou mayest brynge his grae heer downe to the graue with bloude.

So Dauid slepte with his fathers, and was buried in the cote of Dauid. The tyme that Dauid was kyng ouer Israel, is forteyeare. Seuyn yeares was he kyng at Hebrō and thre and thirtie yeare at Jerusalem. And Salomon sat vpon the seate of Dauid his father, and his kyngdome was made very sure.

But Adonias the sonne of Hagith came in to Bethseba Salomon's mother. And she sayde: Is thy commynge peaceable? He spake: Yee, and sayde: I haue somwhat to saye to the. She sayde: Saye on. He sayde:

Thou knowest that the kyngdome was myne, and that all Israel had sett them selues vnto me, that I shulde be kyng, but now is the kyngdome turned, and become my brothers: for he hath it of the LORDE.

Now desire I one peticion of the, Make not my face ashamed. She sayde vnto him: Saye on. He sayde: Speake vnto kyng Salomon (for he shal not shame thy face) that he maye geue me Abisag to wyte. Bethseba sayde: Wel, I wil speake to the kyng for the.

And Bethseba came in to kyng Salomon to speake with him. And the kyng stode vp, and wente to mete her, and worshipped her, and sat him downe vpon his seate. And there was a chayre set for the kynges mother, so that she sat at his righte hand. And she sayde: One peticion desyre I of the make not my face ashamed. The kyng sayde: Axe O my mother, I wyll not shame thy face. She sayde: Let Abisag of Sunem be geue thy brother Adonias to wyte.

Then answered kyng Salomon, and saide vnto his mother: Why desyrest thou Abisag of Sunem for Adonias? Axe the kyngdome for him also, for he is my greater brother, and hath Abiathar the prest, and Ioab the sonne of Zeruia. And the kyngse spare by the LORDE, and sayde: God do this and that vnto me, Adonias shall haue spoken this against his lyfe. And now as truly as the LORDE lyueth which hath ordeyned me, and made me to vyt vpon the seate of my father Dauid, and hath made me a house (accordyng as he sayde) this daye shal Adonias dye.

And kyng Salomon sent thither by Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, that smeote him that he dyed. And to the prest Abiathar sayde kyng: Go thy waye vnto Anathoth to thy londe, for thou art a man of deeth. Neuerthelesse I wyll not slaye the this daye for thou hast borne the Arke of the LORDE God before my father Dauid, and hast suffred also where my father suffred.

Thus Salomon put forth Abiathar, that he must nomore be the prest of the LORDE, that the worde of the LORDE mighte be fulfilled, which he spake ouer the house of Eli at Silo.

And this rumoure came before Ioab: for Ioab cleued vnto Adonias, and not vnto Salomon. Then fled Ioab in to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and tooke holde of the horns of the altare. And it was tolde kyng Salomon, that Ioab was fled in to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and beholde, he stondeth at the altare.

Then sent Salomon Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and sayde: Go slaye him. And when Benaia came to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, he sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the kyng: Come forth. He sayde: No, I wyll dye here. And Benaia tolde this vnto the kyng agayne, and sayde: Thus hath Ioab spoken, and thus hath he answered me.
The kinge said vnto him: Do as he hath spoken, and slaye him, and bury him, that thou mayest put fro me and my fathers house the bloude which Ioab hath shed with out a cause, and that the LORDE maye recompense him his bloude vpon his head, because he smote two men, which were more righteous and better then he, and slew them with thy swerde that my father Davi knewe not of: namely, *Abner thy sonne of Ner the chefe captaine ouer Israel, & Amasa the sonne of Iethere thy chefe captaine ouer Iuda * thy bloude maye be recompened vpoo thy head of Ioab and of his sede for ever: but Davi and his sede, his house and his seate haue peace for euermore of the LORDE.

And Benaia the sonne of Ioiada went vp, and smote him, and slew him: he was buried in his house in the wyldernes. And *thy kyng set Benaia thy sonne of Ioiada in his steade ouer the hoost. And *Sadoe thy prest dyd the kyng set in the steade of Abiathar.

And the kyng sent, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Buyyle the an house at Jerusalem, and dwell there, and departe not from thence, nether hither nor thither. In what daye so ever thou departest forth, and goest ouer thy broke Cedron, be thou sure, that thou shalt dye the deeth: thy bloude be vpon thy head. Semei sayde vnto the kyng: This is a good meanyng, as my lorde the kyng hath sayde, so shal thy seruaunt do. So Semei dwelt at Jerusalem a longe season. But after three yeare it fortune that two seruauntes ranne awaye from Semei vnto Achis the sonne of Maecha kyng of Gath.

And it was tolde Semei: beholde, thy seruauntes are at Gath. Then Semei gat him vp, and saddled his asse, and vnte vnto Gath to Achis, for to seke his seruautes. And whi he came thither, he brought his seruauntes from Gath.

And it was tolde Salomon, that Semei wente from Ierusaleme vnto Gath, and was come agayne. Then sent the kyng, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Sware not to the by the LORDE, and assured the, and sayde: Loke what daye so ever thou departest out and goest hither or thither, be sure that thou shalt dye the death? And thou saydest vnto me: I haue herde a good meanyng. Why hast thou not keppe the then acordinge to the ooth of the LORDE, and commandement that I commaunded the?

And the kyng sayde vnto Semei: Thou remembrrest all thy wickednes, which thy hert knoweth that thou dydest vnto my father Davi. The LORDE hath recompened thy wickednes vpon thy head. And kyng Salomon is blessed, and the seate of Davi shalbe stablished before thy LORDE for euer.

And the kyng commanded Benaia thy sonne of Ioiada, which wente forth, and smote him that he dyed. And the kyngdome was stablished by Salomons hande.

The iii. Chapter.

And Salomon made mariage with Pharaoh the kyng of Egipte, & take Pharaohs daughter, and brought her in to the cite of Davi, till he had buylded his house, and the LORDES house, and the walles rounde aboute Ierusaleme. But the people offred yet vpoun the hye places: for as yet there was no house buylded vnto the name of the LORDE vnto that tyme. But Salomon louse the LORDE, and walked after the ordinances of Davi his father: excepte onely that he offred and brent incense vpon the hye places.

And the kyng wente vnto Gibeon, to do sacrifice there: for that was a goodly hye place. And Salomon offred a thousande burntofferynges vpon the same altare. And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon at Gibeon in a dreame of the nighte, and God sayde: Axe what I shal gene thy. Salomō saide: Thou hast done great mercy vnto my father Davi thy seruaunt. Like as he walked before the in faithfulnes and righteousnes, and in a true hert with the, this greate mercy hast thou layed vp for him, and geuen him a sonne to syt vpon his seate, as it is now come to passe.

*Now LORDE my God, thou hast made thy seruaunt kynege in my father Davids stede: As for me, I am but a small yonge man, knowynge nether my outgoynge nor ingoynge. And thy seruaunt is amonge the people whom thou hast chosen: which is so greate, that no man can nombre them ner descrype them for multitude. Geue thy seruaunt therfore an obedient hert, that he maye judge thy people, & vnderstonde what is good and bad: for who is able to judge this thy mightie people?

This pleased the LORDE well, that Solomon axed such a petition. And God sayde vnto him: For so much as thou axest this, and desyrest not longe lyfe, nether riches, nether soules of thine enemies, but understanding to heare judgmet, beholde, therefore haue I done acordynge to thy wordes. * Beholde, I haue geuen the an hert of wyssdom and understanding, so that soch one as thou hath not bene before the, nether shall ryse vp after the.

Yee and that thou hast not prayed for, haue I geuen the also, namely, ryches, and honour, so that amonge the kynges in thy tyne there is not soch one as thou. And yf thou wilt walke in my wayes, so that thou kepe myne ordinances and lawes, as Dauid thy father hath walked, then wyll I geue the a longe lyfe.

And when Solomon awaked, beholde, it was a dreame, and he came to Ierusale, and stode before the Arke of the LORDES couenant, and offred burnofferynges, and healthofferynges, and made a greate feast vnto his seruauntes.

At the same tyne came there two harlottes vnto þ kyng, and stode before him. And the one woman sayde: Oh my lorde, I and this woman dwelt in one house, and I was delyuered of a childe in the house with her: on the thirde daye after that I was delyuered, she was delyuered of a childe also. And we were together, so þ there was no stranger in þ house, but we two: þ this womans sonne died in the nighte (for she smooered him in the slepe) and she rose vp in the nighte, and toke my sonne fro my syde (where thy handmayde slepe, and layed it in his arme, and his deyd sonne layed she in myne arme. And when I rose vp in the mornynge to geue my sonne sucke, beholde, he was deyd. But in the mornynge I lokked well, and beholde, it was not my sonne, whom I had borne.

The other woman sayde: Not so, my sonne lyueth, and thy sonne is deyd. But she sayde: Not so, thy sonne is deyd, and my sonne liueth. And thus spake they before the kyng. And the kyng sayde: This woma saith: my sonne lyueth and thy sonne is deyd: Yonder woman sayeth: Not so, thy sonne is deyd, and my sonne lyueth. And the kyng saide: Fetch me a swerde. And when the swerde was brought before the kyng, the kyng sayde: Parte the lyuynge childe in two partes, and geue this woman the one halfe, and yonder woman the other halfe.

Then sayde the woman whose sonne lyued, vnto þ kyng: (for hir motherly hert was kyndled with pite ower hir sonne) Oh my lorde, geue hir the childe aluye, and kyll it not. But the other sayde: Let it nether be myne ther thine, but let it be parted. Then answered the kyng, and sayde: Geue this woman the lyuynge childe, and slaye it not, for she is his mother. And all Israel herde of this judgmet that the kyng had geuen: and they feared the kyng, for they sawe that wyssdom of God was in him to kepe judgmet.

THUS was Salomon kyngue ower all Israel. And these were his prynces: Asaria the sonne of Sadoc the prest: Elhcorph, and Ahia the sonnes of Sisa, were prestes: Iosaphat the sonne of Ahilud was chaunceler: Benia the sonne of Ioiada was the chefe captain: Sadoc and Abiathar were prestes: Asaria the sonne of Nathan was ower the officers: Sabad the sonne of Nathan the prest was the kynges frequende: Ahisar was stawarde: Adoniram the sonne of Abda was rent gatherer.

And Salomon had twolue offyncers ower all Israel, which made prouyson of fode for the kyng and his house: One had a moneth longe in þ yeare to make prouyson: The sonne of Hur vpon mount Ephraim. The sonne of Deber at Macaz and at Saulbaim, at Beth-sames, and at Elon, and Beth Hanã. The sonne of Hased at Arboth, and had therto Socho and all the londe of Hepher. The sonne of Abinadab all þ lordship at Dor: had Taphat Salomõs daughter to wife. Baena the sonne of Ahilud at Thaenach at Magiddo, ower all Beth Sean, which lyeth besyde Zarthana vnder Iesrael from Beth Sean vnto the playne of Meholo, tyll the other syde of Iakmee. The sonne of Geber at Ramoth in Gilead: he had the townes of Iair the sonne of Manasse in Gilead, and had þ coastes of Argob which lyeth in Basan, euen thre score greate walled cities, and with brasen barres. Alinadab the sonne of Iddo at Mahanaim. Alimma in Nephtali: and he also toke Basmath Salomons daughter to wife. Baena the sonne of Husai in Asser and at Aloth. Isophat the sonne of Paruha in Isachar. Semei the sonne of Ela in Ben Iamin. Geber the sonne of Vri in the londe of Gilead, in the londe of Sihon kynge of the Amorites, and of Og the kynge in Basan. One officer was in the same londe. As for Iuda and Israel, they were in nombre as the sonde of the see, and ate and dronke, and were mery. *Thus was Salomō lorde ouer all the kyngdomes (from the water of the londe of the Philistynes, vnto the border of Egipte) which broughte him gifts, and serued him as longe as he lyued.

And Salomon had daylie to his vytayles thirtye quarters of fyne meel, thre score quarters of other meel, ten fat oxen, and twety small catell, and an hundreth shepe, beside hartes and Roes, and wilde goates, and fat capons, and foules. For he had the lordshippe of all the londe on this syde the water, frō Tiphsa vnto Gasa, and ouer all þy kynges on this syde þy water: þ had peace of all his subiectes rounde aboute, so that Iuda and Irael dwelt safe, euery one vnder his vyne, and vnder his figge tre, from Dan vnto Berseba, as longe as Salomon lyued.

And Salomō had fouyte thousande cart horses, and twolue thousande horsmen. And the officers prouyded the kyngue Salomon with vytayles: and what soeuere belonged to the kynges table, that brought man euery in his moneth, and myssed not: Barlye also þ strawe for the horses and coursers, þ broughte them vnto the place where þy kyngue was, euery one after his charge.

*And God gaue Salomon maruelous greate wyszdome and vnderstandinge, and a large hert, as the sonde that lyeth vpvn þy See shore: so that the wyszdome of Salomon was greater then the wyszdome of all the children towards the south and of all þy Egiptians. And he was wyser then all men, yee wyser then Ethane the Esrahite, Heman, Chalcal, and Darda, the sonnes of Mahol: and had a greate name amonge all the Heythē on euery syde. And he speake thre thousande þ proverbs, þ his þ songs were a thousande þ fyue. And he speake of trees, from þy Ceder of Libanus vnto the Isope þy growth out of þy wall: he talked also of catell, of foules, of wormes, of fissshes. And there came of all nacions to heare þy wyszdome of Salomon, and there came of all þ the kynges of þy earth, which had herde of his wyszdome.

 The b. Chapter. **

AND Hiram þy kyngue of Tyre sent his a seruauntes vnto Salomon, for he had herde, þ they had anoynted him kyngue in his fathers steade: for Hiram loued Daud as lōge as he lyued. *And Salomon sent vnto Hiram, sayenge:  Thou knowest that my father might not buynde an house vnto the name of the LORDE his God, because of the warre that was aboute him, vntyll the LORDE deluered them vnder the soles of his fete: But now hath the LORDE my God geuen me rest on euery syde, so that there is no aduersary ner euell bynderance: Beholde, I am therfore aduyse to buynde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, acordinge as the LORDE spake vnto Daud my father, and sayde: *Thy sonne, whom I shal set vpon thy seate in thy steade, shal buynde an house vnto my name. Commande therfore that they hewe me downe Ceders out of Libanus, and that thy seruauntes be with my seruauntes, þ the rewarde of thy seruauntes wyll I geue the, what so euere thou shalt axe: for thou knowest, þ with vs there is no mā which can hewe tymber as the Sidonians.

Whan Hiram herde the wordes of Salomon, he was very glad, and sayde: Prayed be the LORDE this daye, which hath geuen Daud a wyse sonne ouer this greate people. And Hiram sent vnto Salomon, sayenge: I hane herde what thou hast sent vnto me: I wyl do acordinge vnto all thy desyre with Ceders and Pyne trees. My seruautes shall bryngem them downe from Libanus vnto þy See, and I wyl make them to flote vpǒ the See, vnto the place which thou shalt shewe me, and there wyl I cause them to aryue, þ thou shalt make þe to be fetched. But thou shalt fulfyll my desyre also, and geue fode vnto my housholde folkes. So Hirā gaue Salomon Ceders and Pyne trees acordinge to all his desyre. But Salomon gaue Hiram twentye thousande quarters of wheate to eate for his housholde, and twentye quarters of beaten oyle. This gaue Salomon yearly vnto Hiram.

+ Prouer. § Cant.  || 2 Reg. 3. c.  9 2 Par. 2. a.   1 Par. 23. b. and 29. a.  + + 2 Reg. 7. c.
And the LORDE gaue Salomon wyszdome, acorynge as he had sayde vnto hym, therv was peace betwene Hiram and Salomon, and they made a couenaunt both together. And Salomon made an outchoysynge (of workmen) thorow out all Israel. And they outchoysynge was thirtie thousande men, and he sent THEN mount Libanus euer two moneths ten thousande, so that they were one moneth vpon Libanus, and two monethes at home. And Adoniram was ouer the outchoysynge.

And Salomon had thre score thousande a ten that bare burthenes, a foure score thousande that hewed tymber vpon the mount, bosyde Salomons chefe officers, which were ordeyned ouer the worke: namely thre thousande and thre hundreth, which ruled men that laboured there in the worke. And they commandes, that they shulde breake out grete and costly stones, namely fro stone, for the foundation of the house. And Salomons masons, and Hiram, and they that were in those coastes, hewed out a prepared tymbre and stones to the buyldinge of the house.

The vi. Chapter.

In the foure hundredth and foure score yeare after the departing of the children of Israel out of the lande of Egip-te, in the fourth yeare of the raigne of Salomon ouer Israel, in the moneth Siw (is is the seconde moneth) was the house buylde of the LORDE. This house that kyng Salomon buylde vnto th LORDE, was thre score cubytes longe, twentye cubytes brode, a thirtie cubites hye. And he buylde a Porche before the temple of twentye cubytes longe after the breith of the house, a ten cubites brode before the house. And in the house he made wyndowes, which might be opened and shut with lyddes.

And rounde aboute by the wall of the house he buylde a compase, so it wente both aboute the temple and the quere, and made his outwarde wall roode aboute. The nether most stacion was fyue cubytes wyde, and the myndest sixe cubytes wyde, and the thirde seuen cubytes wyde. For he layd balkes rounde aboute the house, that they touched not the wall of the house.

And when the house was buylde of whole and outbrokyn stones, so there was herde nether hammer ner axe, ner any other instrument of yron, whan the house was a buyldinge.

But on the righte syde of the myddes of the house was a dere, so they might go vp to the myndest stacion by a turne grese, from the myndest stacion vnto thirde. Thus buylde he the house, a fynished it, a syle the house both aboue a by the walls with Ceder wodd. He buylde a gallery also aboue vpon the whole house fyue cubytes hye, and couered the house with Ceder tymber.

And the wordes of the LORDE came vnto Salomon, he sayde: Let this be the house thou buyldest. Yf thou shalt walke in myne ordinance, a do according to my lawes, a kepe all my commaundements, to walke therin, then wil I stablysze mye worde with, (as I sayde vnto Davi thy father) a will dwell amonge the childre of Israel, and wil not for sake my people of Israel.

Thus Salomon buylde the house, a fynished it, a buylde the walls of the insude with Ceder tymber, from the grounde of the house vnto the rofe, and syle it with tymber on the ynsude, and ouerlaid the floure of the house with bordes of Pyne tre.

And he bynde in the house he buylde a wall of Ceder tymber twentye cubytes longe, from the floure vnto the rofe. And there on the ynsude buylde he the quere for the most holy. But the house of the temple before the quere was fouyte cubytes longe: on the ynsude was the whole house of Ceder with throwne knoppes and floures, so that there was no stone sene. As for the quere, he prepared it on the ynsude of the house, that the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE might be set therin. And before the quere (which was twentye cubytes longe, twentye cubytes brode, and twentye cubytes hye, and ouerlaid with pure golde) he syle the altare with Ceder.

And Salomon ouerlaid the house on the ynsude with pure golde, a shot barres of golde before the quere, which he had ouerlaid with golde, so that the whole house was layd ouer with golde. And all the altare also before the quere ouerlaid he with golde.

ten cubites hye of Olyue tre. One wyngye of either of the Cherubs had fyue cubytes, so that from the edge of his one wyngye to the dege of his other wyngye there were ten cubytes.
Euen so had the other Cherub ten cubytes also,
and both the Cherubs were of one measure and of one quantitie so yt ether Cherub was ten cubytes hye. And he put the Cherubins within in the house. And the Cherubins spred forth their wyngyes, so that the wyngye of the one touched the one wall, and the other Cherubs wyngye touched the other wall. But in the mylde of y house the one wyngye touched another. And he ouerlayed the Cherubins with golde.

And on all the walles of the house rounde aboute, he caused to make carued worke, with carued Cherubins, palme trees, and floures.
And the poynte of the house ouerlayed he also with golde plates. And at the intraunce of the queare he made two dores of olyue tre with fyue squared postes, and caused carued worke to be made therof with Cherubins, palme trees and floures, yt ouerlayed them with plates of golde. So made he also at the intraunce of the temple, fourre squared postes of Olyue tre, and two dores of Pyne tre (so that ether dores had two syde dores one hainge to another) and made carued worke therof, palme trees and floures, right as it was apoynted.

And he buylded a courte also within with dre rowes of fre stone, and with one rowe of playne Ceder tumber.

In the fourthe yeare in the moneth Sif, was the foundacion of the LORDES house layed:
and in the eleuyenth yeare in the moneth Bul (that is the eight moneth) was the house finished as it shulde be, so that they were seuen yeare a buyldinge of it.

But Salomon was a buyldinge his awne house thirtene yeare, yt finished it, namely, he buylded an house of the wodd of Libanus, an hundreth cubytes longe, fiftye cubytes wyde, thirtie cubytes hye, fourre-squared with rowes of pilers, and with carued Ceders. And the rofe aboue syled he also with Ceder wodd uppon the fyue fortie pilers, for one rowe had fyftene pilers, so yt there stode euer thre pilers one right ouer agaynst another: so that every space betwixte the pilers was one ouer agaynst another foure squared with the pilers.

And he made a porche with pilers which was fiftie cubytes longe, and thirtie cubytes brode, yt y a porche before it with pilers with a greate poste. He made a porche also vnto yt kynges seate (wherein yt judgemen was ment, and syled it with Ceder from the poynte vnto the poynte agaynest, and his owne house wherin he dwelt, in yt back courte made betwene yt house and the porche like the other.

And lyke vnto the porche made he a house for Pharaos daughter, * whom Salomon had taken to wife.

All these were costly stone hewn after yt measure, cut with sawes on evry syde, from the grounde vnto the rofe: and without the greate courte also. As for the foundacions, they were costly and greate stones, ten and eighte cubytes greate: and costly fre stones theron accordeinge to yt measure, and Ceders.
But the greate courte rounde aboute had thre rowes of fre stone, yt one rowe of playne Ceders: Euen so also the courte by yt house of the LORDE within, and the porch by the house.

And kyng Salomon sent to fetch one † Hiram of Tyre a wedowes sonne, of the trybe of Nephtali, and his father had bene a man of Tyre, ‡ which was a connynge ma in metall, full of wysdome, vnderstondinge and knowlege to worke all maner of metall worke.
Whan he came to kyng Salomon, he made all his worke, §and made two brassen pokers, ether of them eightene cubytes hye: and a threde of xij. cubytes was the measure aboue both yt pilers: and he made two knoppes of brasse molten, to set aboue vpon the pilers:
and euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and on euery knoppe aboue vpon yt pilers seue wrythen roses like cheynes. And vpon euery knoppe he made two rowes of pomgranates rounde aboue on one rope, wherwith yt knoppe was coverde. And the knoppes were like roses before yt porche foure cubytes greate.
And the pomgranates in the rowes rounde aboue were two hirdreth aboue and beneth vpon the rope, which wete rounde aboue the thicknes of the knoppe, on euery knoppe vpon both the pilers. And set vp the pilers before the porche of the temple. And that which he set on the right hande, called he Iachin: and that which he set on the lefte hande, called he Boos. And so stode it aboue vpon the pilers euens like roses. Thus was the worke of vpon the pilers finisshed.

And he made a molten lauer ten cubyte wyde from the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubites hye, and a thred of thirtie cubites longe was \( \frac{1}{3} \) measure rounde aboute: and aboute the same lauer that was ten cubites wyde, there wente knoppes on the edge therof rounde aboute the lauer. Two rowes were there of the knoppes molten with the lauer.

And it stode vpon twelue bullockes, wherof thre were turned towards the north, thre towards the west, thre towards the south, and thre towards the east, and the lauer aboue theron, so that all their hynder partes were within under the lauer: wherof the thicknesse was an handbreth: and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose, and it conteyned two thousande \( * \)Battes.

And he made ten brasen seates, euery one foure cubites longe and brode, and thre cubites hye. The seate was made so, that it had sydes betwene the ledges. And on the sydes betwene the ledges there were Lyons, bullockes and Cherubins. And on \( \frac{1}{3} \) ledges which were aboue and beneth the Lyons and bullockes, were the sydes made so, that they were set downwarde. And euery stole had foure brasen wheeles with brasen axeltrees. And vpon the foure corners there were proppes molten, euery one ouer agaynst another, vnderset vnto the kettell.

And the soket vpon the stole was a cubyte hye and rounde, a cubyte and an halfe wyde: and on the soket there were knoppes in foldes, which were foure squared \( \frac{1}{3} \) not rounde. The foure wheeles stode beneth by the sydes, \( \frac{1}{3} \) the axeltrees of the wheeles were harde on \( \frac{1}{3} \) seate. Every whele was a cubite and a halfe hye, and they were wheeles like cart wheeles. And their axeltrees, spokes, nales, \( \frac{1}{3} \) shaftes were all molten. And the foure proppes vpon the foure corners of euery seate were harde on the seate.

And on the soket aboue vpon the seate a cubyte and an halfe rounde aboute, there were ledges and sydes harde on the seate. And on the plat of the same sydes and ledges, he caused to carve Chernbins, lynes and palme trees, one by another rounde aboute theron. After this maner made he ten molte seates, one maner of measure \( \frac{1}{3} \) widenes was in all.

And he made ten copper kettells, so that one kettell conteyned fourte Battes, and was foure cubites greate, and vpon euery seate was a kettell. And fyue seates set he on the righte syde of the house, and the other fyue on the left syde. But the lauer set he before on the righte hande towards the south.

And Hiram made pottes also and shouels and basens, \( \frac{1}{3} \) so finisshed he all the worke, that kyng Salomon caused to be made in the house of the LORDE: namely \( \frac{1}{3} \) two pilers, and the rounde knoppes aboue vpon the two pilers, and the two wrythen ropes to cower the two rounde knoppes vpon the pilers. And the foure hübreth pomeranates on the two wrythen ropes, euery two rowes of pomeranates vnto euery rope, to cower the two rounde knoppes vpon the pilers. And the ten seates, and ten kettels theron, and the lauer, and foure bullockes vnder \( \frac{1}{3} \) lauer. And the pottes, shouels and basens. And all the ornamentes which Hiram made vnto kyng Salomon for the house of the LORDE, were of pure metall. In the coutre by Iordane, caused the kyng them to be molten in thicke earth, betwene Sooch and Zarthan. And Salomon let all the apparell be vnweyed, because the metall was so moch.

Morouer Salomon made all the apperell that belonged vnto the house of the LORDE: namely a golden altare, a golden table that the shewbred laye on, fyne candelstickes on the righte hande, and fyue candelstickes on the lefte (before the quere) of pure golde, with floures, lampes and snoffers of golde therto, flat peces, charges, basens, spones and censors of pure golde. And the hokes of \( \frac{1}{3} \) dores on the inside of the house in the most holy, and in the dores of the house of the teple of the LORDE were of golde.

Thus all the worke that kyng Salomon made in \( \frac{1}{3} \) house of the LORDE, was finisshed. \( \dagger \) And Salomon brought in that his father David had sanctified, of syluer and golde and ornamentes, and layed it amoung the treasures of the house of the LORDE.

* A Bat, was a certayne measure of liquore.

\( \dagger \) 2 Par. 5, a.
Prayed be the LORDE God of Israel, which promised by his mouth vnto my father Daud, and by his hāde hath fulfylled it, and sayde: Sence the daye I broughte my people of Israel out of Egipte, haue I chosen no cite amōge all the trybes of Israel, to buylde me an house, that my name might be there. But Daud haue I chosen, to be ouer my people of Israel.

And in dede my father Daud was mynded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: neuertheles the LORDE sayde vnto my father Daud: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well, that thou art so aduyed. Howbeit thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne which shall come out of thy loynes, he shal buylde an house vnto my name. And the LORDE hath perfourmd his worde that he spake: For I am come vp in my father Dauds steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, as the LORDE sayde: and haue buylded an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: and there haue I ordeyned a place for the Arke, wherin is the LORDES couenaunt, which he made with oure fathers, when he broughte them out of Egipte.

And Salomon stode before the altar of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congregation of Israel, and helde out his handes toward heauen, and sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, nether aboue in heauen, ner beneth vpō earth, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for all thy seruauntes that walke before v with all their hert, thou that hast kepeth promes with my father Daud thy seruaunt: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfylled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel make good vnto my father Daud thy seruaunt, that which thou hast promysed hym, and sayde: Thou shalt not wante a man before me to syt vpon the seate of Israel, yf thy childrē kepe their waye, so yf they walke before me like as thou hast walked before me. Now thou God of Israel, let thy worde be verifie, which thou hast promysed vnto my father Daud thy seruaunt.

For thynerke thou yf God dwelleth vpon earth? Beholde the heauens and the heauens... of all heaven maye not contayne the: how shulde then this house do it, that I haue buylded? But turne the vnto the prayer of thy seruaunt, and to his supplicacion (O LORDE my God) that thou mayest heare the thanckesgenyng and prayer, which thy seruaunt maketh before the this daye, so that thine eyes be open ouer this house night and daye, euyn ouer this place (whereof thou saydest: *My name shall dwell there.) That thou mayest heare the prayer which thy seruaunt maketh in this place, and heare the intercession of thy seruaunt of thy people of Israel, which they shall make here in this place of thy habitation in heauen: and when thou hearest it, be gracious.

When any man syneth agaynst his neighbours, and taketh upon him an ooth wherwith he byndeth himselfe, and ooth commeth before thine alter in this house, then heare thou in heauen, and se that thy seruauntes haue right, to condemne the vngodly, and to brynge his waye vpon his owne head, and to iustifie the righteous, to geue him accordinge to his rightouenes.

†When thy people of Israel is smyttten before their enemies (whyle they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they turne vnto the and knowlege thy name, and make their prayer and intercession vnto the in this house, then heare thou in heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy people of Israel, and brynge them agayne to the londe, y thou hast geuen vnto their fathers.

‡When the heauen is shut vp, so y it rayneth not (for so moch, as they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they make their prayer in this place, and knowlege thy name, and turne from their synnes wha thou troubllest them, heare thou them then in heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synnes of thy seruauntes, and of thy people of Israel, that thou mayest shewe them the good waye, wherin they shulde walke, and let it rayne vpon the londe that thou hast geuen thy people to inherauntance.

Whan a derth, or pestilence, or drouth, or burnynge, or greshoppere or catirpiller, is in their londe, or whan his enmye layeth sege to his portes in the londe, or whan eny other plage or disease happeneth, who so ever then maketh his prayer and peticion, whether it be eny other men or thy people of Israel (which the are aware of their plage) every one in his hert, and spredeth out his handes vnto this house: Heare thou then in heauen in the seate thou dwellest, and be mercifull, se that thou geue every one accordinge as he hath walked, like as thou knowest his hert (for thou onely knowest the hert of all the children of men) that they maye alwaye feare the, as longe as they lyne in the lande, which thou hast geuen vnto oure fathers.

And when eny straunge, that is not of thy people of Israel, commeth out of a farre countrie for thy names sake (for they shall heare of thy greate name, and of thy mightie hæde, and of thy outstretched arme) and commeth to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then in heauen, as euyn in the seate of thy dwellynge, and do all for the which that straunge calleth vpon the, that all the nacions vpon eare maye knowe thy name, and that they maye feare the, as thy people of Israel do: and that they maye knowe, how that this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

Whan thy people go forth to the battayll agaynst their enemyes, the waye that thou shalt sende them and shall praye vnto the LORDE towards the waye of the cite which thou hast chosen, and towarde the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name, heare thou then their prayer and peticion in heauen, and execute judgment for them.

Whan they synne agaynst the (for there is no man that synnth not) thou be wroth, and deluyer the vnto their enemyes, so that they carry them awaie captiyne in to the enemyes londe farre or nye, and yf they remembre them selues in the londe where they are captiyne, and turne, and make their intercession vnto the in the londe of their captiyne, and saye: We haue synned, of done amysse, and haue bene vngodly, and so turne vnto with all their hert, and with all their soule in the lode of their enemyes (which led them awaye captiyne) and make their prayer vnto the warde the waye of their londe, that thou hast geuen vnto their fathers, even towarde the cite which thou hast chosen, and towarde the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name: then heare thou their prayer and supplicacion in heauen, *from the seate of thy dwellynge, and execute judgment for them, and be mercifull vnto thy people that haue synned againstst the, and vnto all their trespaces, wherwith they haue transgressed againstst the, and graunte the mercy in the sighte of them which led them awaye presonners, that their enemies maye be mercyfull vnto them: for they are thy people, and thine inheritaunce, whom thou broughtest out of Egipte, from the yron furnaice: that thine eyes maye be open vnto the petition of thy seruaunt, and of thy people of Israel, that thou maist heare them in all thinges for the which they shall call vpon the (for thou O LORDE LORDE) hast sundered them out to be an inheritaunce vnto thy selfe, from amoge all the nacions vpon earth, acordinge as thou saydest by Moses thy seruaunt, when thou broughtestoure fathers out of Egipte.

§And wha Salomon had ended all this prayer and petition before the LORDE, he rose vp from the altar of the LORDE, and lefte of from knelyng and holdynge out of handes toward heauen, and stode and blessed all the congregacion of Israel with loude voyce, and sayde: Prayed be the LORDE which hath geuen rest vnto his people, acordinge as he sayde. There hath not one fayled of all his good words, which he spake by his seruaunt Moses. The LORDE oure God be with vs, as he hath bene with oure fathers, and forsake vs not, nether withdrawe his hande from vs, but bowe oure hertes vnto him, that we maye walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, ordinancees and lawes, which he commaunded oure fathers. And these wordes wherwith I haue made my petition before the LORDE, come nye vnto the LORDE oure God daye and nighte, that he maye execute judgment for his seruaunt and for his people of Israel, euery one at his tyme: that all nacions vpon earth maye knowe, that the LORDE is God, that there is none other. And let youre hert be perfecte with the LORDE oure God, to walke in his statute, and to kepe his commaundementes, as it is this daye.

And the kyngge with all Israel his people offered sacrifice before the LORDE. And Salomon offered deed offerynges (which he offered vnto the LORDE) two and twenty thousande oxen, and an hundred thousande shepe. So the kyngge and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORDE. The same daye dyd the kyngge dedicate the myddelmost courte, which was before the house of the LORDE: that he mighte there perfoure the burntofferynges, meatofferynges, and the fat of the deedefofferynges: for the brasen altare that stode before ý LORDE, was to litle for the burntofferynges, meatofferynges, and for the fat of the deedefofferynges.

And at the saem tym made Salomon a solempne feast, and all Israel a greate congregacion with him, from the border of Hemath vnto the ryuer of Egipte, before the LORDE oure God, seuen dayes, and yet seuen dayes, that were fourtene daies. And on the eight daye he let the people go. And they blessed the kyngge, and wente vnto their tentes reioysinge and with a mery hert, because of all the good that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid his seruaunt, ã to his people of Israel.

The ir. Chapter.

And when Salomon had finisht a buyldinge of the house of the LORDE, and the kyngges house, and all that his desire and pleasure was to make, ý LORDE appeared vnto him the seconde tym, even as he appeared vnto him at Gibeon. And the LORDE sayde vnto him: I haue herde thy prayer and petition, that thou hast made before me, and haue sanctified this house which thou hast buylded, that I maye set my name there for ever: and myne eyes and my hert shalbe there allwaye. And ye walke before me (as thy father Dauid walked) with a perfecte and a true hert, so that thou do all that I haue comandede the, and kepe myne ordinancees and lawes, then whyl I stablish the seate of thy kyngdome ouer Israel for euer, acordinge as I promysed thy father Dauid, and sayde: û Thou shalt not wante a man from the seate of Israel.

But ye ye turne back fro me, ye and youre childre, and kepe not my commaundementes and ordinancees which I haue layed before you, but go and serue other goddes, and worshippe them, then whyl I rote Israel out of the londe that I haue geuen them. And the house that I haue halowed vnto my name, wyll I put awaye fro my face. And Israel shall be come a byworde and fabell amoge all naciones, and so shal this hye house: so that every one y goeth by, shall be astonyed, and make an hyssyngue, and saye: Wherfore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this londe and to this house? Then shal it be answered: Because they forsoke y LORDE their God, (which brought their fathers out of the londe of Egipte) and haue receaued other goddes, and worshipped them, and serued them. Therefore hath y LORDE brought all this euell vpoun them.

Now whan the twenty yeares were ended, wherein Salomon byuylde the two houses, the LORDES house and the kynges house, where vnto Hiram the kyng of Tyre brought Salomo Ceder trees y Pyne trees, and golde after all his desyre, then gaue kyng Salomon vnto Hiram twentye cities in the countrey of Galile. And Hiram departed from Tyre to vsyet the cities which Salomon had geuen him, y they pleased him not, and he sayde: What maner of cities are these (my brother) that thou hast geuen me? And he called them the londe of Cabul vnto this daye. And Hiram sent vnto the kyng, sise score hundreth weight of Golde. And the same is the summe of the taxe, that kyng Salomon rayesd to the byuyldeinge of the house of the LORDE, and his awne house, y Millo, and the walles of Jerusalem, and Hasor, and Megiddo, and Gaser.

For Pharao y kyng of Egipte came vp, and wanne Gaser, y brente it with fyre, y slewe the Cananites y dwelt in the cite, y gaue it for a gifte vnto his daughter Salomos wife. So Salomon byuylde Gaser, y the lower Bethoron, and Baelath and Thamar, in y wyldernes, in the londe, y all the cities of the corne houses that Salomon had, and all the cities of the charettes, y all the cities of the horsmen, and what he pleased him to byuylde at Jerusalem, in Libanus, y in euery countre of his domynion.

And all the remnaunt of the people of the Amorytes, Hethites, Pheresites, Heuites and Iebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, their children which they left behynde them in the londe (whom the children of Israel could not ytterly destroye) those dyd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye.

But of the children of Israel he made no bondmen, but let them be men of warre, and his seruauntes, and prynces, and knightes, and ouer his charettes and horsme. And the officers which were ouer Salomons busynesse, were fyue hundreth and fiftye, which ruled the people, and perfourmed the worke. And Pharao's daughter wente vp from the cite of Dauid, in to hir house y which he had byuylde for her. Then byuylde he Millo likewise. And thre tymes in the yere dyd Salomon ofrre burntofferynges and deed offer-ynges vpon the altar y that he had byuylde vnto the LORDE, and burnt incense vpon it before the LORDE, and so was the house ended and finyshed.

And Salomon made shippes also at Ezeon Geber, which lyeth by Eloth besyde the Reed See shore in y londe of the Edomites. And Hiram sent his seruauntes by shippes, which were shipmen, and had experience of the See, with Salomons seruauntes; and they came vnto Ophir, and fetched from thence one y twenty score hundreth weight of golde, and brought it vnto Salomon.

The 7. Chapter.

A ND whan kyng Salomons fame of the name of the LORDE came to the eares of the Queene of riche Arabia, she came to proune him with darke sentences. And she came to Jerusalem with a maruelous great trayne, with camels which bare spyces, and moch golde, and precious stones. And whan she came in to kyng Salomon, she spake vnto him all that was in hir hert. And Salomon tolde her everythinge, and the kyng had nothinge in secrete, but he tolde it her. But whan the Queene of riche Arabia sawe all the wyszdome of Salomon, and the house that he had byuylde, and the meates of his table, and the dwellinges of his seruauntes, y the offices of his ministers, and their garments, and his butlers and the burntofferynges which he ofrred in the house of the LORDE, she wondred exceddingly, and could no longer refrayne, but sayde vnto the kyng: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behauoure and of thy wyszdome.

B And I wolde not beleue it, tyll I came and sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe hath not bene tolde me.

Thou hast more wyszdome and good, the the name is that I haue herde. Happye are they peple and they seruauntes, that allwaie stonde before the, and heare they wyszdome. Prayed be the LORDE thy God, which had soch a pleasure vnto the, that he set the vpone the seate of Israel: because he hath allwaye loued Israel, and hath set the to be kynge, that thou shuldest mantayne instyce and equyte.

And she gaue the kynge syxe score hundreth weighte of golde, and very moch sypce, and precious stones. There came neuer so moch sypce thyther, as the Queene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kynge Salomon. And Hirams shippes, * which caried golde out of Ophir, broughte maruelous moc costly tymber and precious stones from Ophir. And of that costly tymber the kynge caused to make pilers in the house of the LORDE, and in the kynge house, and harpes and Psalteries for the Musicians. There came nomore sox costly tymber, nether was it sene vnto this daye. And kynge Salomon gaue the queene of riche Arabia, all that she desyred and axed, besydes that which he gaue her of a frey hande. And she returned, and departed in to hir lande with hir seruauntes.

The golde that came to Salomon in one yeare, was nyne and thyrtie score hundreth weighte, besydes that which came of chapmen, marchauntes and Apotecaries, and of the nexte kynes, and of the mightie men in the londe. And kynge Salomon causeth to make two hundreth speares of beaten golde, sise hundreth peces of golde he put he to euery speare: and thre hundreth shylde of y best golde, euyn thre pounde of golde vpon euery shylde. And the kynge put them in the house of the wod of Libanus.

And the kynge made a greete seate of Yuery, and overlayed it with y most precious golde. And the seate had sixe steppes, and y heade of the seate was roide behyne. And there were two postes to leane vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode vpon the leanyng postes, and twolue lyons stode vpon the sixe steppes on both the sydes. Soch one hath not bene made in ey kyng-dome. All kynge Salomos drynkyng vessels were of golde, and all the vessels in the house of y wod of Libanus were of pure golde also: for syluer was not regarded in Salomons tyme. For the kynes Seeshippe y sayled vpon the See with y shipp of Hirams, came once in thire yeare, and broughte golde, syluer, Yuery, Apes, and Pecockes.

Thus was kyng Salomon greater in riches and wyszdome, then all the kynges vpou earth. And all the worlde desyred to se Salomon, that they mighte heare the wyszdome which God gave hym in his hert. And they broughte hym yearly euery man his present, vessels of syluer and golde, rayment and harness, sypces, horses and Mules. And Salomon broughte charrettes and horsmen together, so that he had a thousande and foure hundreth charrettes, and twolue thousande horsmen: and those he put in y charret cities, and with the kynge at Jerusalem.

And the kynge broughte it to passe, that there was as moc syluer at Ierusalem as stones: and as many Ceders as there were wynde figg trees in the valleys. And Salomons horses were broughte out of Egipte, and fro Keua: for the kynes marchauntes fetched them from Keua for money. And a charret came vp out of Egipte for sise hirdreth Syldes of Syluer, and an horse for an hirdreth and fyffe. Thus were they broughte also vnto all the kynges of the Hethites and to the kynges of Siria by their handes.

The ri. Chapter.

BUT kyng Salomon loued many outlandish women, Phraoes daughter, and women of Moab, of Ammò, of Edom, of Sidon, and of Heth, euyn of those nacions, that the LORDE spake of vnto the children of Israel: "Go not ye vnto them, and let not them come vnto you: they shall surely bowe youre hertes after their goddes: Vnto these dyd Salomon enclyne with affeccion. And he seued hundrith women to wyues, and hundreth concubines, and his wyues turned his hert asyde. And when he was now olde, his wyues bowed his hert after strange goddes, so that his hert was not whole with the LORDE his God, as was the hert of Dauid his father.

So Salomon walked after Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, and after Malcom the abomination of the Ammonites. And Salomon dyd y which displeased the LORDE, and folowed not y LORDE to y vtenomost as dyd his father Dauid. Thé buylded Salomó an bie place vnto Chamos the abominaçion of y Moabites (vpon the mount that lyeth before Ierusulè) and vnto Moloch the abominaçion of the Ammonites.

Thus dyd Salomon for all his outladish wyues, which brenç incense, and offrd vnto their goddes. But the LORDE was wroth at Salomon, because his hert was turned asyde from y LORDE God of Israel, * which had two tymes appeared vnto him, and commanded him, that he shulde not walke after other goddes: and yet kepte he not that the LORDE commanded him. Therfore sayde the LORDE vnto Salomon: For so moch as this is done with the, and hast not kepyd my couenaunt and myne ordinances, which I commanded the, therfore wyll I also plucke thy kyngdome from the, and geue it vnto thy seruaunt: Neuertheles in thy tyme will I not do it, for thy father Dauids sake, but from the hande of thy sonne wyll I plucke it. Howbeit I wyll not plucke y kyngdome cleane awaye. One trybe wyll I geue vnto thy sonne, for Dauid my seruauntes sake, and for Ierusalems sake which I haue chosen.

And the LORDE raysed vp an aduersary vnto Salomon, euen Hadad the Edomite of the kynges sede, which was in Edom. For when Dauid was in Edom, and Ioaob the chefe captayne wente vp to bury the slayne, he smote all the males in Edom. (For Ioaob remayned there sixe monethes and all Israel, tyme he had roted out all y males that were in Edom.) Then fled Hadad, and certayne men of y Moabites with him, of his fathers seruauntes. As for Hadad, he was a yonge man.

And they gat them vp fro Madian, and came vnto Paran, and toke men with them out of Paran, and came in to Egipte vnto Pharaos the kyngye of Egipte: which gaue him an house and certayne vtyales appoynted, gau him a countrie. And Adad founde greate fauoure in the sighte of Pharaos, so that he gaue him to wife euen the sister of his owne wyfe Thaphenes the Quene. And Thaphenes sister bare him Genumath his sonne, and Thaphenes sorished him vp in Pharaos house, in so much that Genumath was in Pharaos house amoungse Pharaos children.

Now wha Hadad herde in Egipte, that Dauid was fallé on slepe with his fathers, and Ioaob the chefe captayne was deed, he sayde vnto Pharaos: Let me go in to my countrie. Pharaos sayde vnto hym: What lackest thou with me, that thou wilt go in to thy countrie? He sayde: Nothyng, but yet let me go.

God rayzed him vp another aduersary also, one Reson the sonne of El Iada, which fled from his lorde Hadad Eser kyngye of Zeba, and gathered men agaynst hym, and was a captayne of the men of warre whan Dauid slewe them: and they wente vnto Damascus and dwelt there, and reigned at Damascus, and he was Israelis aduersary as lóge as Salomon lyued. This is the harme y Hadad suffred: therfore had he euell will at Israel, and was kyngye ouer Siria.

Morouer Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat an Ephraite Salomonos seruaunt (and his mothers name was Zeruga, a wedowe) lifte vp his hande also agaynst the kyngye. And this is the cause wherfore he lifte vp his hande agaynst the kyngye: Whan Salomon buylded Millo, he shut vp a gappe in the cite of Dauid his father. And Ieroboam was a mà of armes. And whan Salomon sawe that it was a mete yonge man, he set him ouer all the burthens of the house of Joseph.

But at the same tyme it fortuned, that Ieroboam wente out from Jerusalem, and the prophet Ahias of Silo founde him by the waye, and he had a new cloke vpon him, and they two were alone in the felde. And Ahia toke holde of the new cloke he had on, and rente the same in to twelue peces, and sayde vnto Ieroboam: Take thou ten peces vnto the.

For thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Beholde, euen thus wyll I rente the kyngdome from the hande of Salomé, and wyll geue the ten trybes. One trybe shall he haue for my seruaunt Dauids sake, and because of the cyte of Ierusalem, t which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel: for they haue forsaken me, and worshipped Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, Chamos the god of the Moabites, and Malcò the god of the children of Ammon, and haue not walked in my wayes, to fulfill my pleasure, myne ordinances, and lawes, as dyd Dauid his father.

* 3 Re. 3. a. and 9. a. + 2 Pur.7. c.
Notwithstanding, I will not take the whole kingdom from out of his hand, but will make him a prince as long as he liveth for the sake of my servant David, whom I have chosen. He has kept my commandments and the ordinances of Israel. Therefore I will give thee one third of his kingdom.

And he said to them: What is your counsel? If it is good, say it. They said to him: If thou dost this thing, thou dost not please the people, and wilt lose thy life. If thou dost please the people, say it. And they said: If thou dost please the people, thou shalt be our king.

Then I will not make all Israel my servant, as I made Nebat, the son of Jeroboam, king in Egithe, in Sais, the kingdom of Egypt, and in the third year of Ahias, the son of Silo, king in Israel.

The reign of Roboam.

And Roboam went to Sichem, for all Israel came to Sichem to make him king. And when Jeroboam, his son, went to Nebat, the son of Becher, and was in Egypt, (where he was fled for Salomon,) he came again to the land of Israel. And they sent for him, and called him. And Jeroboam came with all the congregation of Israel, and to Roboam, and said to him: Thy father made us not hard to bear, but now shalt thou make us even worse. And we will not subdue our sons to serve under thee. He said to them: Go your way into the third day, and then come to me again. And the people went their way.

And Roboam held a council with the elders that sat before Salomon, his father, by the will of the Lord. What shall we say to the people that are come to us, to make a king, as Salomon did? And they answered: If thou dost please the people, say it to us, that we may answer the people, and be obedient to the people, even to the word of the people.

And he said to them: What is your counsel? If it be good, say it. They said to him: If thou dost please the people, thou shalt be our king. And they said to him: If the Lord pleaseth, thou shalt be our king.

So he went to the third day, and held a council with the elders that sat before the people, and said to them: What shall we answer the people that are come to us, to make a king, as Salomon did? And they answered: If thou dost please the people, say it to us, that we may answer the people, and be obedient to the people, even to the word of the people.

And he said to them: What shall we answer the people that are come to us, to make a king, as Salomon did? And they answered: If thou dost please the people, say it to us, that we may answer the people, and be obedient to the people, even to the word of the people.

rentgatherer, all Israel stoned him to death. But kyng Roboam strengthened himselfe, and gat him vp in to a charret, to fle vp to Jerusalem. Thus departed Israel from the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

Now when all Israel herde, that Ierooboam was come againe, they sent for to call him to the whole congregacion, and made him kyng ouer all Israel. And no man folowed the house of Dauid, saue onely the tribe of Iuda. *And when Roboam came to Jerusalem, all the house of Iuda and the trybe of Ben Iamin (even an hundredth and foure score thousande chosen men of armes) gathered themselues together to fight against y house of Israel, to brynge the kyngdome agayne vnto Roboam y sonne of Salomô.

But the worde of God came to Semeia the man of God, and sayde: Speake thou to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kyng of Iuda, and to all y house of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and to the other people, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shall not go vp and fight against youre brethren the children of Israel. Let every man go home agayne, for this is my dede. And they herkened vnto the worde of the LORDE, and turned back, to go their waye, as the LORDE sayde. But Roboam buyldeid Sicheym vpon mount Ephraim, and dwelt therin, and departed thence, and buyldeid *Pennaol.

Ierooboá thoughte in his hert: The kyngdome shall fall agayne now vnto the house of Dauid, if this people go vp to offre in the LORDES house at Jerusalem, and so shall the hert of this people turne to their lorde Roboam kyng of Iuda, and the shal they slaye me, and fall agayne to Roboam kyng of Iuda. And the kyng helde a counsell: and made two golden calues, and sayde vnto them: It is to inoch for you to go to Ierusalam: beholde, * there is thy God (O Israel) which broughte y out of Egipte. And the one set he at Bethel, and the other in Dan. And this dede turned to syne, for the people wente before the one vnto Dan.

He made an house also in the hye places, and made presstes of the smallest in the people, which were not of the childré of Leui. And vpon the fiftene daye of the eighte moneth he made an holy daye, like as the solempne feast in Iuda, and offered vpon the altare. Thus dyd he at Bethel, in doyng sacrifice vnto the calves which he had made, and at Bethel he ordwayed the presstes of the hye places that he had made: and offerd vpon the altar (which he had made) at Bethel, the fiftene daye of the eight moneth, which he inuented of his owne hert. And he made the children of Israel an holy daye, whan wente vp to the altar to burne incense.

The viiiij. Chapter.

A ND beholde, there came a mā of God from Iuda (thorrow the worde of the LORDE) vnto Bethel, and Ierooboam stode by the altar to burne incense. And he cried against the altar thorow the worde of the LORDE, and sayde: O altar, altar, thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, there shall be borne vnto y house of Dauid a sonne, Iosia by name * which on the shall offer the presstes of the hye places, that burne incense vpon the, and mens bones shall he burne on the. And he gaine a wonder token the same daye, and sayde: This is the token, that the LORDE hath spoken it, beholde, the altar shall ryue, and the aszshes, that are theron, shall be poured out.

But when the kyng herde the worde of the man of God, that cried against the altar at Bethel, he stretched out his hande by y altar, and sayde: Laye hondes on him. And his hande that he stretched out, wythered, and he coulde not drawe it vnto him agayne. And y altar roue, and the aszshes were pured out from the altar, acording to the wonder token that the man of God had geuen by the worde of the LORDE.

And the kyng answered, and sayde vnto the man of God:  O praye the face of the LORDE thy God, and make intercession for me, that my hande maie be restored vnto me agayne. Then prayed the man of God vnto the face of the LORDE. And the kynges hande was restored him agayne, and became as it was afore. And the kyng sayde vnto the man of God: Come home with me, and dyne, and I wil geue the a reward.

But the man of God sayde vnto the kyng: Yf thou gueuest me halfe thy house, I wil not come with the: for in this place will I nether

And he turned not coarse eaten water, nor eat he eate bred, and drynke water. But at Bethel there dwelt an old prophet vnto who his sons came, tolde him all the workes the mā of God had done that daye at Bethel, the words that he had spoken vnto the kyng. And their father sayde vnto them: Which waye is he gone? And his sons shewed him the waye that the man of God was gone: which came from Iuda. He sayde vnto his sons: Saddell me the asse. And whā they had saddled him the asse, he rode theron, and wente after the man of God, and founde him sittinge vnder an Oke tre, and sayde vnto him: Art thou the man of God that came from Iuda? He sayde: Yee, He sayde vnto him: Come home with me, and eate bred. He sayde: I maye not turne backe with the, and come with the. Nether wyll I eate bred, ner drynke water with the in this place: for it is spoken vnto me by the worde of the LORDE: Thou shalt nether eate bred there, ner yet drynke water, nether shalt thou go agayne by the waye that thou wentest. He sayde vnto him: I myselfe am a prophet as well as thou, and an angell hath spoken with me by the worde of the LORDE, and sayde: Bringe him againe with the, that he maye eate bred, and drynke water. But he lyed vnto him, and broughte him agayne, so that he ate bred, and dranke water in his house.

And when they sat at the table, the worde of the LORDE came to the prophet that had broughte him agayne, and cryed vnto the man which was come Fro Iuda, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast bene dishobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE, and hast not kepte the commandement that the LORDE thy God commaundede thee, but hast turnede backe, and hast eaten bred, and dronne water in this place, whereof he saide vnto thee: Thou shalt nether eate bred nor drynke water, therfore shall not thy body come in to thy fathers grave.

And when he had eaten bred and dronne the asse was sadled vnto the prophet whom he had broughte agayne. And whā he was gone, a lyon founde him by the waye, slewe him, and his body was cast in this waye. And the asse stode by him, and the lyon stode by the body. And whā men wente by, they sawe the body cast in the waye, and the lyon stondynge beside the body, and came and tolde it in the cite, where the olde prophet dwelt.

When the prophet which had broughte him agayne, herde that, he sayde: It is the man of God, that hath bene dishobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE, therfore hath the LORDE deliverede him vnto the Lyon, which hath rente him, and slayne him, acordynge to the worde that the LORDE spake vnto him. And he sayde vnto his sons: Saddell me the asse. And when they had saddled it, he wente, and founde his body cast in the waie and the asse and the lyon stondynge beside the body. The lyon had eate nothinge of the body, nether had he tonne the asse. Then toke the prophet the deed coarse of the man of God, and layed it vpō the asse, and broughte it agayne in to the cite of the olde prophet, to mourne, and to burye him.

And he layed the coarse in his awne grave, and they mourned for him: Alas my brother. And when they had buriede him, he saide vnto his sons: Whan I dye, burye me in the grave where the mā of God is buried, and laye my bones beside his bones. For it shall come to passe, that he cried (thower the worde of the LORDE) against Bethel, and agaynste all these houses of the hye places, which are in the cities of Samaria.

Howbeit after this acte dyd not Ieroboam turne from his euell waye, but was perverted, and made prestes of the hye places, euē of the smallest of the people: Loke whom it pleased him, his handes he fylled, and he was prest of the hye places. And this turned to synne vnto the house of Ieroboam, to destroye him and to bryngye him to naughte.

The riij. Chapter.

A T the same tyme was Abia the sonne of Ieroboam sicke, and Ieroboam saide vnto his wyfe: Get the vp, and disguise the, so that no man perceaueth that thou art Ieroboam's wyfe, and go vnto Silo: behold, there is the prophet Ahias, which promysed me that I shulde be kyng over this people: and take Neuerthelesse the LORDE sayde vnto Ahias: Beholde, leroaboams wyfe commeth, to axe a matter at the for hir sonne, for he is sycke. Speake thou therefore vnto her thus zo thus. Now whan she came in, she shewed hirselfe straunge. But when Ahias herde the noyse of hir fete goyng in at the dore, he saide: Come in thou wyfe of Ieroboa. Why shewest thou thy selfe so straunge? I am sent vnto

What more there is to saye of Roboam, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. But betwene Roboam and Ieroboam there was warre as longe as they lyued. And Roboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of David. And his mothers name was Naema an Ammonitisse. And his sonne Abia was kyngge in his steade.

The rb. Chapter.

IN the eighteenth yeare of kyngge Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, was Abia kyngge in Iuda, and reigned thre yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Maecha, the daughter of Abisalom, and he walked in all the synnes of his father, which he had done before him, and his hert was not perfecte with the LORDE his God, as was the hert of David his father. For because of Davids sake dyd the LORDE his God gene him a lanterne at Jerusalem, so he rayed his sonne after him, and manteyned him at Jerusalem, because David dyd the thinge was righte in his sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all that he commanded him as longe as he lyued (sauyngge in the matter with Vries and Hethite). But there was warre betwene Roboam and Ieroboam, as longe as he lyued.

What more there is to saye of Abia, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. There was warre also betwene Abia and Ieroboam. And Abia slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the cite of David. And Asa his sonne was kyngge in his steade. In the twentieth yeare of kyngge Ieroboam ouer Israel, was Asa kyngge in Iuda, and reigned one and forty yeare at Jerusalem. His grandmothers name was Maecha the daughter of Abisalom. And Asa dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as dyd his father David. And he removed whoremongers out of the londe, and put downe all the Idols that his fathers had made. He put his mother from the mynistracion, that she had made vnto Miplezeth in groue. And Asa roeted out hir Miplezeth, and brent it in the broke Cedron:

but the hye places put he not downe. Yet was the hert of Asa perfecte with the LORDE as longe as he lyued. And the syluer and golde, and vessels that his father had halowed, as such as was sanctified vnto the house of the LORDE, that broughte he in. And there was warre betwene Asa and Baesa the kyngge of Iuda, as longe as they lyued.

Baesa the kyngge of Israel wente vp agaynst Iuda, and byyled Rama, that no man shuld go out and in of Asas syde the kyngge of Iuda. Then toke Asa all the syluer and golde that was lefte in the treasure of the house of the LORDE, and in the treasure of the kynges house, and didyuered it in to his seruauntes handes, sent it vnto Benadab the sonne of Tabrimon the sonne of Hesion kyngge of Siria, which dwelt at Damascon, and let saye vnto him: There is a seruaunt betwene me and the, and betwene my father and thy father: therefore sende I the a present of syluer and golde, that thou shuldest breake the seruaunt which thou hast with Baesa the kyngge of Israel, that he maye departe fro me.

Benadab agreed vnto kyngge Asa, and sent his captaynes agaynst the cities of Israel, and smote Ion and Dau, Abel Beth Maecha, and all Cineroth with the whole londe of Nephtali. Wha Baesa herde that, he left of from byylde Rama, and wente agayne vnto Thirza.

Kyngge Asa caused it be proclaimed in all Iuda: Here be no man excepte. And they toke awaye the stones and tymber from Rama, wherwith Baesa had byyled. And kyngge Asa byyled Geba Ben Iamin Mispa therewith.

What more there is to saye of Asa, and of all his power, and all that he dyd, and of the cities which he byyled, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda: sauyngge that in his olde age he was diseased in his fete. And Asa slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of David his father. And Iosaphat his sonne was kyngge in his steade.

But Nadab the sonne of Ieroboam was kyngge ouer Israel in the secode yeare of Asa kyngge of Iuda, and reigned ouer Israel two yeare, and dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of his father, and in his synnes, wherwith he made Israel to synne. Howbeit Baesa the sonne of Alia of the house of Isachar conspired against him,  właśc, him at Gibbethon, which was the Philistines: for Nadab and all Israel layed sege to Gibbethon. So Baesa slewe him in the thirde yeare of Asa kyng of Iuda,  was kyng in his steade. *Now when he was kyng, he smote all the house of Ieroboam, and let nothinge of Ieroboam remayne that had breth, tyll he had destroyed it, acordynge to * words of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruaunt Alia of Silo, because of Ieroboams synnes which he dyd,  made Israel synne withall: even with * prouokynge wherwith he displeased the LORDE God of Israel.

What more there is to saye of Nadab,  all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel, and there was warre betwene Asa  Baesa the kyngge of Israel, as longe as they lyued.

In the thirde yeare of Asa kyng of Iuda were Baesa * sonne of Alia kyngge over all Israel at Thirza foure and twentye yeare, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of Ieroboam, and in his synnes, wherwith he made Israel to synne.

Neuertheles the worde of the LORDE came vnto Iehu the sonne of Hanani agaynst Baesa, and sayde: For so moch as I lifted the out of the dust, and made the pryncesse over my people of Israel, and thou walkest in the waye of Ieroboam, and makest my people over Israel for to synne, to prouoke me vnto wrath thorow their synnes, beholde, therefore wyll I take awaye the posterite of Baesa, and the posterite of his house, and wyll set thine house euene as the house of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat. * He that of Baesa dyeth in the cite, the dogges shall deuoure him: and who so bevyng of hym dyeth in the felde, the foules of the ayre shall eate hym vp.

What more there is to saye of Baesa, * what he dyd, * of his power, beholde, it is wrytten in * Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Baesa slepte with his fathers,  was buried at Thirza:  his sonne Ella was kyngge in his steade. And the worde of * LORDE came by the prophet Iehu the sonne of Hanani, ouer Baesa, and ouer his house, and agaynst all the euell that he dyd in the sighte of LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath thorow the workes of his handes: so that he became as the house of Ieroboam, and because he slewe * this man.

The rbiij. Chapter.

And Elias, the Theszbite one of the inhabitants of Gilead, saide vnto Achab:

As truly as the LORDE God of Israel lyueth, whose seruaunt I am, there shall nether rayne nor dew come this yere, excepte I speake it.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto him, and sayde: Get the hence, and turne the towarde the east, and hyde the by the ryuer Crith, which is ouer agaynst Iordane, and thou shalt drynke of the ryuer: and I haue commanded the rauens, that they shall feede the there. He departed, and dyd acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, and wente his waye, and sat him downe by the ryuer Crith, which is ouer agaynst Iordane. And the rauens broughte him bred and flesh in the mornynge and in the eueneynge, and he dranke of the ryuer.

And it fortunned after certayne dayes, that the ruer was dryed vp: for there was no rayne in the lode. Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto him, and sayde: Get vp vp, and go vnto Sarepta, which lieth by Sid6: for there haue I commanded a wedowe to make provyson for the.

And he gat him vp, and wente vnto Sarepta. And when he came to the gate of the cite, beholde, the wedowe was there, and gathered stickes. And he called her, and sayde: Fetch me a little water in a vessell, vp. I maye drinke. And as she was goinge to fetch it, he cried vnto her, vp: Brynge me a morsell of bred also in thine hande. She sayde: As truly as the LORDE thy God lyueth, I haue no bred, but an handfull of flour in a pitchere, a curtesy oyle in a cruse: and beholde, I haue gathered vp one or two stickes, vp will go and prepare it for me and my sonne, that we maye eate and dye.

Elias sayde vnto her: Feare not, go thy waye, vp do as thou hast sayde: yet make me first a morsell of bred therof, vp brynge it me forth: vp afterwarde shalt thou make it for vp thy sonne. For thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: The meell in the pitchere shall not be spent, vp the oyle in the cruse shall not fayll, vnto the daye the LORDE shall cause it for to rayne vp6 earth. She went vp dyd as Elias sayde. And he ate, vp she also, and hir house a certayne season. The meel in the pitchere was not mynished, and the oyle in the cruse fayled not, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE which he spake by Elias.

And after these actes the sonne of the wife of vp house was sicke: and his sicknes was so

AND after a longe season came yd worde of the LORDE vnto Elias in the thirde yeare, a sayde: 5 Go thy waye, a shewe thy selfe vnto Achab, y I maye cause it for to rayne vpon earth. And Elias wente to shewe him selfe vnto Achab. But there was a greete deth i Samaria. And Achab called Abdia his chefe officer: (As for Abdia, he feared y LORDE greatly: for wha Iesabel rote out y prophetes of y LORDE, Abdia take an C. prophetes, and hyd them in caues, here fiftie, a there fiftie, a prouyded for them with bred and water.) Achab now sayde vnto Abdia: Go thowor the londe vnto all the welles of water a ryuers, yf happlye we maye finde hay, a to saue f horses a mules, a all the catell perishe not. And they parted the selues in to the londe, to go thowor it. Achab departed the one waye alone, and Abdia y other waye alone.

Now when Abdia was on f waye, Elias met him. And when he knewe him, he fell downe vpon his face, a sayde: Art not thou my lorde Elias? He sayde: yee, go thy waye, and tell thy lorde: beholde. Elias is here. But he sayde: What haue I offended, that thou wilt deluyer thy seruant in to the handes of Achab, that he maye slaye me? As truly as the LORDE thy God lyueth, there is no people ner kingdome, but my lorde hath sent thither to seke the. And when they sayde: He is not here, he toke an ooth of the same kyngdome and nacion, that they had not founde the. And now thou sayest: Go tell th thy lorde: beholde, Elias is here. Now when I were gone from the, the sprete of the LORDE shulde take f awaye, I cannot tell whither: and yf I then came and tolde Achab, and founde the not, he shulde slaye me: But thy seruant feareth the LORDE from his youth vp. Hath it not bene tolde my lorde what I dyd, when Iesabel slewe the prophetes of the LORDE, how that I hyd an hundreth of the LORDES prophetes, here fiftie, and there fiftie in the caues, and prouyded for them with bred and water? And thou sayest now: Go thy waye, tell th thy lorde: Elias is here, that he maye slaye me. Elias sayde: As truly as y LORDE Zebaoth lyueth, before whom I stode, I wil shewe my selfe vnto him this daye. Then wete Abdia to mete Achab, a tolde him. And Achab wete for to mete Elias.

And when Achab sawe Elias, Achab sayde vnto him: Art thou he that troubliste Israel? He sayde: I troubl not Israel, but there is thy fathers house, because ye haue forsaken the commandementes of the LORDE, and walke after Baal. Go to, sende forth now, and gather me all Israel together vnto mount Carmell, and the foure hundreth and fiftie prophetes of Baal, and the foure hundreth prophetes of y groupe, which eate of Iesabels table. So Achab sent vnto all the children of Israel, a gathered the prophetes together vnto mount Carmell.

Then stepte Elias vnto all the people, a sayde: How longe halte ye on both y sydes? Yf the LORDE be God, th walke after him: but yf Baal be he, th folowe him. And the people gaue him no answere. Thé sayde Elias vnto the people: I onely am lefte a prophet of y LORDE: but Baals prophetes are foure C. and fiftie me. Geue vs now two bullockes, a let them chose one bullocke, a hewe him in peces, a laye him vpo the wod, a put no fyre theron: so wil I take f other bullock, g laye vpó the wod, g put no fyre theron also: call ye then vpó the name of youre god, g I wil call vpó the name of the LORDE: loke which God now answereth with fyre, let the same be God. And all the people answered g sayde: That is righte. And Elias sayde vnto Baals prophets: Chose ye one bullock, and do ye it first (for ye are many) and call ye vpon the name of youre god, g laye no fyre theron.

And they take the bullock which he gaued them, g prepared it, g called vpon the name of Baal from the mornynge vntylly the noone daye, and sayde: O Baal heare vs. But there was nother voyce ner answere. And they hopped aboute the altare, as their vse was to do. Now when it was noone daye, Elias mocked them, and sayde: Crye loude. For he is a god, peraduëture he is musyng, or hath somwhat to do, or is gone some iourneye, or haply he slepeth, so that he wold be waked vp. And they cried loude, and propuoked the selues with knynges g botkens, (as their maner was) tyll f bloude followed. But whan f noone daye was past, they prophesied vntylly the tyme that the meatofferyngue shulde be offered, g there was nother voyce ner answere, ner one to regarde them.

Then sayde Elias vnto all the people: Come hither all ye people vnto me. And whan all f people came to him, he repayred f *altere of the LORDE f was broken, g taoke twolufe stones acordinge to the nombre of f trybes of the childre of Iacob (vnto whom the worde of the LORDE spake, and sayde: Thy name shal be Israel) and of f stones he buylded an altare in the name of the LORDE, g made a pytt rounde aboute the altare, like two forowes in the corne londe, g prepared the wod, g hewed f bullock in peces, and layed him vpon the wod, g sayde: Fette foure pitchers full of water, and poured it vpó the burntofferyngue, and vpó the wod. And he sayde: Do it yet once. And they dyd it once agayne. And he sayde: Do it f thirde tyme. And they dyd it the thirde tyme. And f water ranne aboute the altare, and f pytt was full of water also.

And when the tyme was to offer f meatofferynge, Elias stepte forth, and sayde: O LORDE God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Israel, let it be knowe this daye, that thou art God in Israel, and I thy seruaunt, and that I have done all this acordinge vnto thy worde. Heare me O LORDE, O heare me, f this people maye knowe, how that thou art the LORDE God, that thou mayest afterwarde turne their hertes. §Then fell downe the fyre of the LORDE, and consumed the burntofferinge, the wodd, the stones and the earth, andlicked vp the water that was in the pytt. Whan all the people sawe that, they fell vpou their faces, and sayde: The LORDE is God, f LORDE is God. Elias sayde vnto them: f Laye handes vpon Baals prophets, f none of them escape. And they toke them. And Elias broughte them downe vnto f broke Cyson, g slewe the there.

And Elias sayde vnto Achab: Go vp, eate f drylke, for it soundeth as though it wolde raynynge sore. And when Achab wete vp to eate f drinke, Elias ascended vp to the toppe of Carmel, g bowed him selfe downe to the earth, g put his heade betwene his knees, g sayde vnto his lad: Go vp, and loke towarde the See. He wente vp g loked, g sayde: There is nothinge. He sayde: Go agayne seuen tymes. And at the seueth tyme he sayde: Beholde, there goeth vp a little cloud out of the see, like a mans hande. He sayde: Go vp, and saie vnto Achab: Bynde thy charret, g go downe, f the rayne onertake the not. And or a mā couldt turne him, the heauen was blacke with cloudes g wynde, g there came a greete rayne. But Achab rode his waie, g departe vnto Israell. And the hāde of f LORDE came vpó Elias, and he gyrdre his lownes, g ranne before Achab, tyll he came vnto Israell.

The r. Chapter.

A ND Achab tolde Iesabel all f Elias had done, a how he had slaye all Baals prophets with the swerde. Thē sent Iesabel a messaunger vnto Elias, sayenge: The goddes do this g that vnto me, yf I tomorow aboute this tyme, make not thy soule as one of these. Then was he afraied, g gat him vp, g wente where he wolde, g came vnto Berseba in Luda, and lefte his lad there. But he him selfe wente a daies iournye in to f wyldernes, g came in, g sat him downe vnder a lunipere tre, g wysshed vnto his soule f he mighte dye, g sayde: It is now ynoch LORDE, take my soule, for I am no better then my fathers. And he layed him downe & slepte under the Juniper tre.

And beholde, a angell touched him, & sayde vnto hym: Stonde vp, and eate. And he looked aboute him, & beholde, at his heade there was a bred baken on the coales, & a cruse with water. And when he had eaten and dronke, he layed him downe agayne to sleepe.

And a angell of the LORDE, came agayne the seconde tyme, & touched hym, & sayde: Stonde vp, and eate, for thou hast a greate waye to go. And he arose, and ate and dranke, and wente on thorow the strength of that meate *fortye dayes and foryte nightes, euë vnto Horeb ny mount of God: and there he came to a cave, and abode there all nighte.

And beholde the worde of the LORDE came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: What doest thou here Elias? He sayde: I haue bene zelous for the LORDE God Zebaath: for the children of Israel haue forsaken thy couenaunt, and broken downe thine altaires, and slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, and I am lefte alone, & they seke to take awaye my life. He sayde: Go forth, and stonde vpon the mount before the LORDE. And beholde, the LORDE wete ouer: and a greate mightie wynde, which rous the mountaynes, and brake the harde stones, came before the LORDE, but the LORDE was not in the wynde. After the wynde came there an earthquake, but the LORDE was not in the earthquake.

And after the earth quake there came a fyre, but the LORDE was not in the fyre. And after the fyre came there a styll softe hyssinge. Whan Elias herde that, he couered his face with his cloke, and wente forth, and stode in the dore of the cave. And beholde, there came a voyce vnto hym, and sayde: What hast thou here to do Elias?

He sayde: I haue bene zelous for the LORDE God Zebaath: for the children of Israel haue forsaken thy couenaunt, broken downe thine altaires, slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, & I onely am lefte, and they seke to take awaye my life. But the LORDE sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye agayne thorow the wyldernes vnto Damascon, & go in, & anoynte Hasael kyng of ouer Siria, & Iehu the sonne of Nimsi kyng of ouer Israel, & Eliesus kyng of Saphat of Abel Mehola to be prophet in thy steade. And it shal come to passe, ly who so escapeth the swerde of Haseal, Iehu shal slaye him, ly who so escapeth the swerde of Iehu, Eliesus shal slaye hym. lAnd I wil reserve vnto me viij. M. men in Israel: namely, all ly knees which haue not bowa the selues vnto Baal, and euery mouth ly hath not kyssed hym.

And he departed thence, & founde Eliesus sonne of Saphat, plowinge with twolue yocke of oxen before him, & he him selfe was amoge the twolue. And Elias wete vnto hym, c cast his cloke vpon him. And he lefte the oxen, & ranne after Elias, & sayde: d Let me kyss my father, & my mother, and so wil I folowe the. And he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, & come agayne, for I haue some what to do with the. And he ranne agaynse from hym, and tok a yock of oxen, and offerd it, and sod y flesh with the wod of the oxen plowes, and gaue it vnto the people to eate, and gat hym vp, & folowed Elias, and mynistrd vnto hym.

The xv. Chapter.

A ND Benadab kyng of Siria gathered all his power, & there were two thirtie kynges with hym, & horses & charrettes, and he wente vp, and layed sege vnto Samaria, & foughte agaynst it. And he sent messaungers vnto Achab kyng of Israel in to cite, & caused to saye vnto hym: Thus sayeth Benadab: Thy syluer & thy golde is myne, and thy wyues & thy best children are myne also. The kyng of Israel answered, & sayde: My lorde O kyng, euyn as thou hast sayde, I am thine, and all that I haue.

And the messaungers came agayne, & sayde: Thus sayeth Benadab: For so much as I haue sent vnto the, sayenge: Thy syluer & thy golde, thy wyues & thy children shall thou geue me, tomorow aboute this tyme wil I sende my seruautes vnto the, & they maye serch thyne house and the houses of thy subiectes: & loke what pleasauent thinge thou hast, & shal they take in their handes, and carry it awaye. So the kyng of Israel called all ky Elders of the lode, & sayde: Mark well se, what myschefe this may seke: He sent vnto me for my wyues & children, for syluer & golde, & I haue not sayde him naye. Then sayde all the Elders and all the people vnto hym: Thou shalt not and of thirteen: do, and y Benadabs were, and tolde this againe. The sent Benadab vnto him sayëge: The goddes do this and y vnto me, yf the dust of Samaria shalbe ynough, for euery one of my people to brynge me an handfull therof. But y kyngge of Israel answered, a sayde: Tell him, Let not him y putteeth on y harnes, make his boaste like him y hath put it of. Whã Benadab hertde y (eue as he was drynkinge with the kynges in y pauylion) he sayde vnto his seruautes: Set youre selues in araye. And they set the selues in araye against y cite.

And beholde, there came a prophet vnto Achab y kyngge of Israel, a saide: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Hast thou sene all this greate multitude? Beholde, this daie wil I delyuer the in to thy hande, so y thou shalt knowe, how y I am y LORDE. Achab sayde: By whom? He sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Euen by the yonge men of the rulers of the londe. He sayde: Who shal order the batayl? He sayde: Thou. Then musterde he the yonge men of the rulers of the londe, a there were two huidreth and two and thirtie of them: a after the mustered he of the whole people of all the children of Israel, sae thouande men, and they wente out in the noone daye. As for Benadab, he dranke and was dronken in the pauylion with the two thirtie kynges which were come to helpe him. And the yonge men of the rulers of the londe wente forth first.

Benadab sent forth, a they brought him worde, a sayde: There come men out of Samaria. He sayde: Take them aluye, whether they be come forth for peace, or for warre. But when the londe rulers yonge men were gone forth, and the hoost behynde them, euery one smote him y came in his waye. And the Sirians fled, and Israel fol owed after them. And Benadab the kyngge of Syria escaped with horses and horsem. And the kyngge of Israel wente forth, and smote horses and charettes, and dyd a greate slaughter on the Sirians.

Then came there a prophet vnto the kyngge of Israel, and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye and strength the, and take hede, and loke well what thou dost: for when the yeare is aboute, the kyngge of Syria shall come agaynst the of the new. For the kyngge of Siryon seruauntes sayde vnto him: Their goddes are goddes of the mountaynes, therfore haue they gotten the victory.

But let vs fyghte with them on the playyne, and thou shalt se that we shal overcome them. Do thus, put awaye the kyngges euery one from his place, and set dukes in their steades, and appoynte the an boost as was that which thou hast lost, a horses a charrettes as the other were, and let vs fyght agaynst the in the plaine, and thou shalt se that we shal haue the victory. He cœsented vnto their voyce, and dyd so.

Now whan the yeare was gone aboute, Benadab appoynted the Sirians, and wente vp towards Aphek, to fyghte agaynst Israel, and the children of Israel mustured, and proyded them selues with vytailles, and wete to mete them, and pitched their têtes ouer against them, like two litle flockes of goates but the londe was full of the Sirians.

And there came a man of God, and sayde vnto the kyngge of Israel: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because the Sirians haue sayde, that the LORDE is a God of the mountaynes and not a God of the valleys, therfore haue I geuen all this greate heape in to thy handes, that ye maye knowe how that I am y LORDE. And they pitched their tentes right ouer agaynst them seuen dayes. But vpon y seuenthe daye they wente together in to the battayl: and the children of Israel smote of the Sirians an hundreth thousande fote men in one daye, and the remnaunt fled to Aphek in to the cite, and the wall fell vpon the other seuen and twenty thousande men. And Benadab fled also vnto the cite in to a little chamber.

Then sayde his seruauntes vnto him: Beholde, we haue herde that the kyngges of the house of Israel are mercifull kynges. Let vs therfore put sack cloth aboute oure loynes, and halters aboute oure neckes, a go forth to the kyngge of Israel, peraduenture he shal let thy soule lyue.

And they put sack cloth aboute their loynes, and halters aboute their neckes, and carne to the kyngge of Israel, and sayde: Benadab thy seruaunt sayeth vnto the: O let my soule lyue. He sayde: yf he be yet aluye, he is my brother. And the men took him shortly at his word, and expounded it for them selues and sayde: Yee Benadab is thy brother. He sayde: Come and bryng me. Then wente Benadab forth vnto him, and he caused him to syt vpon the charet, and sayde vnto him: The cities that my father toke from thy father, wyl I geue the agayne. And make thou stretches for thyselfe at Damascé, as my father did at Samaria, so wyl I let the go with a bonde of peace. And he made a covenunt with him, and let him go.

Then spake there a man amonge the children of the prophets vnto his nebbhoure by the worde of the LORDE: I praye the smyte me. But he refused to smite him. Then saide he vnto him, because thou hast not herkened vnto the voice of the LORDE, beholde, therefore shall there a lyon smyte the, when thou goest fro me. *And when he wente fro him, a lyon founde him, and swwe him.

And he founde another man, and sayde: I praye the smyte me. And the man smote him, and wounded him. Then wente the prophet, and stepte vnto the kyngye by the wyne syde, and altered his face with ashes. And when the kyngye wente by, he cried vpon þy kyngye, and sayde: Thy seruant wente forth in to the battayll, and beholde, there wente one asyde, and broughte a man vnto me, and sayde: Kepe this ma: yf he be myssed, thy soule shall be in steade of his soule, or els thou shalt weye downe an hundred weight of syluer. And whyle thy seruانت had here þere to do, he wasawy. The kyngye of Israel sayde vnto hym: It is thine owne iudgment, thou hast geuen it thyselfe.

Then put he the ashes from his face in all the haist. And the kyngye of Israel knewe him, that he was one of the prophets. And he sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast let the damned man go, therefore shall thy soule be for thy soule, and thy people for his people. And the kyngye of Israel departed vnto his house, beinge troubled in his mynde and full indignacion, and came to Samaria.

AFTER these actes it fortuned, that Naboth the Israelite had a wynyarde at Iesreel besyde the palace of Achab kyngye of Samaria. And Achab spake to Naboth, and sayde: Geue me thy wynyarde, I wyl make me an herbgarden therof, because it is so nye my house: I wyl geuen the a better wynyarde for it: or yf it please the, I wyl geue the syluer for it, as mouch as it is worth. But Naboth sayde vnto Achab: *The LORDE let that be farre fro me, that I shulde geue þ my fathers heretage. Then came Achab home, beinge moued and full of indignacion, because of the worde that Naboth the Israelite had spoken vnto him, þ sayde: I wyl not geue the my fathers inheritance. And he laied him downe vpon his bed, and turned his face asyde, and ate no brede. Then Iselab his wyfe came in to him and sayde vnto hym: What is þ matter, that thy sprete is so coberd, and that thou eatest no brede? He sayde vnto her: I haue spok þ vnto Naboth the Israelite, and sayde: Geue me thy wynyarde for money: or yf it please þ, I wyl geue the another for it. But he sayde: I wyl not geue the my wynyarde.

Then sayde Iselab his wyfe vnto hym: B What kingdome were in Israel, yf thou diddest it? Stone vp, and eate brede, I wyl gethe the the wynyarde of Naboth the Israelite. And she wrote a letter vnder Achabs name, and sealed it with his signet, and sent it vnto þ Elders and rulers in his cite, which dwelt aboute Naboth, and wrote thus in þ letter: Proclaime a fast, and set Naboth aboue in the people, and set two men of Belial before him, to testyfyde and sayde: Thou hast blasphemed God and the kyngye. And brynghe him forth, and stone him to death.

And the Elders and rulers of his cyte, which dwelt in his cite, dyd as Iselab had commaunded them, acordynge as she had wryten in the letter that she sent vnto them and they proclaimed a fast, and caused Naboth to synt aboute amonng the people. Then came the two men of Belial, and stode before him, and testyfyed agaynst Naboth in þ presence of the people, and sayde: Naboth hath blasphemed God and the kyngye.

Then broughte they him out of the cite, and stoned him to death. And they sent Iselab worde, sayenge: Naboth is stoned a put to death. Whi Iselab herde that Naboth was stoned and deede, she sayde vnto Achab:

Vp, and take possession of the vynnyarde of Naboth the Israelite, which he denied to geue the for money: for Naboth lyeth no more but is dead. And when Achab herde \(^\text{a}\) Naboth was dead, he rose to go downe vnto the vynnyarde of Naboth the Israelite, and to take possession of it.

But the worde of the LORDE came to Elias the Theszbite, and sayde: Get the vp, and go downe to mete Achab the kyng of Israel, which is at Samaria: beholde, he is in Naboths vynnyarde, in to the which he is gone downe to take possession of it, and talke thou with him, and speake: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou hast slayne, and taken in possession. And thou shalt talke morrouer vnto him, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: *Euen in the place where the dogges licked vp Nabothis bloude, shall the dogges lick thy bloude also. And Achab sayde vnto Elias: Hast thou euere founde me thine enemy? He saide: Yee, I haue founde the, because thou art euene solde to do euell in the sighte of the LORDE. Beholde, \(^\text{b}\) I wyll brynge myfortune vpon the, and take awaye thy posterite, and wil rote out from Achab, euem him that maketh water against the wall, and him that is shut vp and lefte behynde in Israel: and thy house wyll I make as the house of Ieroboam \(^\text{c}\) sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Ahia, because of \(^\text{d}\) prouocacion wherewith thou hast prouoked me vnto wrath, and made Israel to synne.

And ouer Losaphat spake the LORDE also and sayde: \(^\text{e}\) The dogges shall deuoure Isabel in \(^\text{f}\) felde of Israel. \(^\text{g}\) Who so of Achab dyeth in \(^\text{g}\) cite, him shall the dogges eate vp: and who so dyeth in the felde, the foules vnder the heauen shall eate him vp. So cleane solde to do myschye in \(^\text{f}\) sighte of the LORDE hath no man bene, as Achab: for his Isabel hath so disseaued him, and he maketh him selse a greate abhominacion, that he goeth after Idols, acordige vnto all as dyd the Amorites, \(^\text{h}\) whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel.

But when Achab herde these worde, he riete his clothes, \(^\text{i}\) put a sack cloth on his body, \(^\text{i}\) fasted, and slepte in sack cloth, and wente aboute hanginge downe his heade. And the worde of the LORDE came to Elias the Theszbite, \(^\text{j}\) sayde: Hast thou not sene how Achab humbleth him selfe before me? For so moch now as he hubleth him selfe in my sighte, I wil not brynge that plague whyle he lyeth: but by his sonnes life wil I brynge mysforsunte vpon his house.

The 11. Chapter.

\(^\text{a}\) And there passed ouer three yeares, that there was no warre betwene the Sirens \(^\text{k}\) Israel. \(^\text{b}\) But in the third yeare wente Losaphat the kyng of Iuda downe to the kyng of Israel. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto his seruauntes: Knowe ye not \(^\text{m}\) Ramoth in Gilead is oures? and we syt styll, and take it not out of the hande of the kyng of Syria. And he sayde vnto Losaphat: Wilt thou goe with me to the battaill vnto Ramoth in Gilead? Losaphat sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: I wyll be as thow, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses. And Losaphat sayde vnto \(^\text{n}\) kyng of Israel: Axe this daye at the worde of the LORDE. Then the kyng of Israel gathered the prophete aboute a \(^\text{o}\) foure hundreth men, and sayde vnto them: Shal I go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fighte, or shal I let it alone? They sayde: Go vp, \(^\text{p}\) LORDE shall deluyer it in to \(^\text{p}\) kynges hande. But Losaphat sayde: Is there not one prophet here more of \(^\text{p}\) LORDE, that we maye axe at him?

The kyng of Israel sayde vnto Losaphat: Here is yet a man, one Micheas the sonne of Iemla, at whom we maye axe of the LORDE: but I hate him, for he prophecieth me no good, but euell. Losaphat sayde: Let not the kyngye saye so. Then called the kyngye of Israel a chamberlayne, and sayde: Brynge hither soone Micheas the sonne of Iemla. As for the kyngye of Israel and Losaphat \(^\text{q}\) kyng of Iuda, they sat ether of them vpon his seate, arrayed in their garmentes in the place at \(^\text{r}\) dore of the porte of Samaria, and all \(^\text{s}\) prophete prophecied before thre. And Sedecheias the sonne of Cnaena had made him homes of yron, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: With these shalt thou puszse at \(^\text{t}\) Syrens, thyll thou brynge them to naughte. And all the prophete prophecied likewise, and sayde: Go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead, thou shalt prosper right well, \(^\text{g}\) the LORDE shal delyuer it in to the kynges hande. And the messaunger that wente to call Micheas sayde vnto hym: Beholde, The wordes of ye prophete are with one acorde good before the kyng, let thy wordes therfore be as their wordes, and speake thou good also.

Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORDE liueth, loke what the LORDE sayeth vnto me, y wyl I speake. And whan he came to the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto hym: Micheas, shall we go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fight or shall we let it alone? He sayde vnto hym: Yee, go vp, thou shalt prosper righte well, the LORDE shall gene it in to the kynges hande. But the kyng sayde vnto hym agayne: I charge ye that thou saye no other thinge vnto me but the truthe, in the name of ye LORDE. He sayde: I sawe all Israel scarred abrode vpon the mountaynes, as the shepe that haue no shepherede. And the LORDE saide: Haue these no lorde? Let evry one turne home agayne in peace. Then sayde ye kyng of Israel vnto Iosaphat: Tolde not I y that he wokle prophete ye me no good, but euell?

He sayde: Heare now therfore the worde of the LORDE: I sawe the LORDE syt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stodyinge by hym at his righte hande & at his lefte. And the LORDE saide: Who wil diseaue Achab to go vp, & fall at Ramoth in Gilead. And one sayde this, another that. Then were there forth a spepre, & stode before the LORDE, and sayde: I wyl diseaue him. The LORDE sayde vnto hym: Wherwith? He sayde vnto hym: I wyl go forth, and be a false spepre in the mouth of all his prophetes. He saide: Thou shalt diseaue hym, and shalt be able: go forth and do so. Beholde now, the LORDE hath genue a false spepre in y mouth of all these thy prophetes, and the LORDE hath spoken euell over the. Then stepte forth Sedecheias the sonne of Cnaena, and smote Micheas vpon the cheke, and sayde: What, is the spepre of the LORDE departed fro me, to speake with the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt se it in y daye, when thou shalt go fro one chamber to another to hyde the. The kyngue of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let hym remayne with Amon the ruder of the cite, and with Ioas the kynges sonne, and saye: Thus sayeth the kyngue: Put this man in preson, and fede him with brede and water of trouble, tyll I come agayne in peace. Micheas sayde: Yf thou commest agayne in peace, then hath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: herken to all ye people.

So the kyngue of Israel and Iosaphat & kyngue of Juda wente vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And the kyngue of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: Chaunge thy clothes, and come in to battayll in thine araye. The kyngue of Israel chaunged his clothes also, and wete in to the battayll. But the kyngue of Siria commaundede the rulers of his charrettes (of whom there were two and thirtie) and saide: Ye shal fight nether agaynset small ner greate, but onely agaynst the kyngue of Israel. And whan the rulers of the charrettes sawe Iosaphat, they thought it had bene the kyngue of Israel, and fell vpon him with fightinge. But Iosaphat cried. So whan the rulers of the charrettes sawe that it was not ye kyngue of Israel, they turned back fro hym.

A certayne man bended his bowe harde, & shott the kyngue of Israel betwene the mawe & ye longes. And he sayde vnto his charretman: Turne thine hāde, and carie me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And ye battayll was sore the same daie. And the kyng stode vp of his charret, agaynset the Syrias and dyed in the eueninge, and the bloude ranne from the wounde in to the myddles of the charret. And whan the Sonne wente downe there was a proclaimed made in the hoost, and sayde: Every one gett him in to his cite, and to his countre. Thus the kyng dyed, and was broughte vnto Samaria, and they buryed him in Samaria. And whan they wasshed the charret in the pole of Samaria, ye dogges licked his bloude (but the harlottes wasshed hym) acordinge to the worde of ye LORDE which he spake.

What more there is to saye of Achab, & all ye dyd, and of the Yuery house which he buylde, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. So Achab slepte with his fathers, and his sonne Ahasia was kyng in his steade.

And Iosaphat the sonne of Asa was kyng ouer luda in the foure yeare of Achab kyngge of Israel, and was fyue and thirtie yeare olde when he was made kyngge, and raigned fyue and twentye yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Asuba, the daughter of Silhi, and he walked in all the ways of his father Asa, and departed not there from. And he dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, yet put he not awaye his places, and people offered and burnt incense yet vpon the hye places, and he had peace with the kynges of Israel.

What more there is to saye of Iosaphat and the mighte that he exercised, and how he fought, beholde, it is wryttten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda. * He put out of the HASIA the sonne off Achab was kyng over Israel at Samaria in y seuenteenth yeare of Iosaphat kige of Juda, a reigned over Israel two yeares, a dyd y which was euell in y sight of the LORDE, and walked in the wyse of his father and of his mother, a in the wyse of Ieroboam y sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne. And serued Baal, and worshipped him, and displeased the LORDE God of Israel, euë as his father dyd. The Moabites also fell awaye from Israel, whan Achab was deede.

And Ochosias fell thorow y grate in his chaber at Samaria, and was deed sicke, and sent messaungers, and sayde vnto them: Go youre wyse, and axe councell at Beelzebub the god of Ekron, whether I shall recover from this sicknesse. But the angell of y LORDE sayde vnto Elias the Theszbite: Vp, a go mete the messaungers of the kyng of Samaria, and saie vnto them: Is there no God in Israel, that ye go to axe counsell at y god of Ekron? Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou shalt not come from the bed wheron thou lyest, but shalt dye the death.

And Elias wente his wyse. And wha y messaungers came to Ochosias agayne, he sayde vnto the: Why come ye agayne? They sayde vnto him: There came vp a man in oure wyse, and sayde vnto vs: Go againe to the kyng that hath sent you, and saie vnto hym: Thus saieth the LORDE: Is there no God in Israel, y thou sendest to axe coitcel at Beelzebub y god of Ekrō? Therfore shalt
They thou not come from thy bed wher on thou lyest, but shalt dye the death. He sayde vnto them: What maner of man was it that mett you, and sayde this vnto you? They sayde vnto him: He had a rough heer vpon him, and a letheren gyrdell aboue his loynes. He sayde: It is Elia the Theszbite.

And he sent vnto him a captaine ouer fiftie, with the same fiftie. And when he came vnto him, behold, he sat aboue vpon the moût. He sayde vnto him: Thou ma of God, the kyng sayeth: Thou shalt come downe. Elia answered the captayne ouer fiftie, and sayde vnto him: Yf I be a man of God, the fyre fall downe then from heauen, and close the and thy fytte. Then fell there fire from heauen, and consumed him and his fytte. And agayne he sent another captayne ouer fytte vnto him, with his fytte, which answered, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, thus sayeth the kyng: Come downe in all the haist. Elia answered, and saide: Yf I be a ma of God, a fire fall downe from heauen, and consume the and thy fytte. Then fell the fyre of God from heauen, and consumed him, and his fytte. Agayne, he sent vnto him the thirde captayne ouer fytte, with his fytte.

Now when he came to him, he kneele to Elia, and besoughte him, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, let my soule and thy soules of thy seruauntes these fytte, be somwhat worth in thy syghte. Beholde, the fyre fell downe from heauen, and hath consumed the fyrst two captaynes ouer fytte with their fyttes. But now let my soule be somewhat worth in thy syghte. Then saide the angel of the LORDE vnto Elia: Go downe with him, and feare him not. And he gatt him vp, and wente downe with him vnto thy kyng.

And he sayde vnto him: Thus saieth the LORDE: Because thou hast sent forth mes-sauers, and caused to axe counsell at Beeleze-bub the god of Ekron, as though there were no God in Israel to axe coucill at his worde, therfore shalt thou not come from the bed wheron thou hast layed the, but shalt dye thy death. So he dyed, acordynes to the worde of the LORDE which Elia sayde. And Ioram (his brother) was kyng in his steade in the seconde yeare of Ioram the sonne of Isa-phant kyng of Juda: for he had no sonne.

What more there is to saye of Ochosias, what he dyd, beholde, it is wryttè in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

WHAN the LORDE was mynded to a take vp Elia in the tempest, Elia and Elisesus wente from Gilgall. And Elia sayde to Elisesus: Tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Bethel. But Elisesus sayde: As truly as the LORDE liveth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I will not forsake the. And when they came downe vnto Bethel, the prophets children that were at Bethel, wete forth to Elisesus, and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not, that the LORDE wyl take thy lorde awaye from thy head this daye? He sayde: I knowe it well, holde ye youre peace.

And Elia sayde vnto him: Elisesus, tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Iericho. Neuerthelesse he sayde: as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the. And when they came vnto Iericho, the prophets children which were at Iericho, stepte forth to Elisesus and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not that the LORDE wyl take thy lorde awaye from thy head this daie? He sayde: I knowe it well, holde ye your peace. And Elia sayde vnto him: I praze the tary here, for LORDE hath sent me to Iordane. But he sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I will not forsake the. And they wente both together. But fytte men of thy prophets children wete forth, and stode ouer agaynst the a farre of: but they both stode by Iordan. Then toke Elia his eokie, and wrapped it together, and smote the water, which deuyed it selfe on both the sydes, so that they wete dry shod thorow it. And when they were comes ouer, Elia sayde vnto Elisesus: Axe what I shall do for the, afore I be taken awaye from the. Elisesus saide: That thy sprete maye be vpô me to speake twise as moch.

He sayde: Thou hast desyred an harde thinge: neuertheles ye thou shalt se me wha I am taken awaye from the, it shal be so: Yf no, the shal it not be. And as they were goinge together, and he talked, there came a fyrie charret with horses of fyre, and parted the both asunder. And so wente Elia vp to heaven in the storme. But Eliseus saw it, & cryed: My father, my father, the charetman of Israel and his horsme. And he sawe him none more.

And he toke holde of his clothes, and rente them in twoe peces, and toke vp Elias cloke that was fallen from him, and turned backe, and stode by the shore of Iordane, and toke the same cloke of Elias which was fallen from him, and smote it in the water, and saide:
Where is now the LORDE God of Elias?
And he smote it in to the water, and then parted it asunder on both the sydes, and Eliseus wente thorow.

And when the prophete children which were at Iericho ouer agaynst him, sawe him, ythey sayde: The sprete of Elias resteth vpó Eliseus, and so they wete forth to mete him, and worshipped him to the grōnde, and sayde vynto hym: Beholde, there are fiftye valeaunt mē amonge thy seruauntes, let them go and seke thy lorde, peraduenture the sprete of the LORDE hath taken him, and cast hym vpó some mountaine or in some valley. But he saide: Sende them not. Neuertheles they constrayned him, tyll he was ashamed, and sayde: Let them go. And they sent fiftie men, which soughte hym thre dayes: but they founde hym not, and came agayne vnto hym.
And he abode at Iericho, and sayde vnto them: Tolde not I you, that ye shulde not go? And the men of the cite sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, there is good dwellyng in this cite, as my lorde seyth, but the water is euell, and the londe vnfrutefull.

He sayde: Bringe me bither a new vessell, & put salt in it. And they broughte it hym.
Then wete he forth vnto the well of water, and cast the salt therin, & sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue healed this water: from hence forth shal there no deed ner vnfrotesfulnes come of it. So the water was healed vynto this daye, acordinge to the worde of Eliseus which he spake.

And he wete vp towarde Bethel. And as he was goynge vp by the waye, there came litle boyes out of the cite, and mocked hym, & sayde: Come vp here thou balde heade, come vp here thou balde heade. And he turned him aboute. And whā he sawe them, he cursed them in the name of the LORDE.
Then came there two Beere out of the wod, and rente two and fourtye of the children.
From thence wete he vp vnto mount Carmel, and from it turned he backe to Samaria.

I ORAM the sonne of Achab was kyngge ouer Israel at Samaria in 12 euytenth yeares of Iosaphat kyngge of Iuda, a raigned
xix. yeares, a dyd a which was euell in a sighte of a LORDE, but not as his father d his mother: for he put awaye f pilers of Baal, which his father causeth to make. Neuertheles he euled vnto a synnes of Ieroboam a sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne, a departed not there frō.

Mesa a kyngge of the Moabites had many shepe, a payed tribute vnto the kyngge of Israel with the woll of an hundreth thousande labes, a of an hundreth thousande rāmes. a But when Achab was deede, the kyngge of a Moabites fell awaye frō the kyngge of Israel. At a same tyme wete kyngge Ioram frō Samaria, a muss-tered all Israel, a sent vnto Iosaphat kyngge of Iuda, sayenge: The kyngge of the Moabites is fallen awaye frō me, come thou with me to fighte agaynst a Moabites. He sayde: I wil come vp, a I am euen as thou, and my people are thy people, and my horses as thy horses.
And sayde morouer: Which waye wil we go vp? He sayde: by the waye in the wyldernesse of Edom.

So the kyngge of Israel, the kyngge of Iuda, a the kyngge of Edom wente forth. And when they had gone aboute seue dayes journe, a hoost a the catell a were amonge the a had no water. Then sayde the kyngge of Israel:
Alas, the LORDE hath called these three kynges, to deluyer the to the hande of the Moabites. But Iosaphat sayde: a Is he here no prophet of a LORDE, a we maye axe coucell at a LORDE by hym? a Then answered one of a kyngge of Israel's seruauntes, a saide: Here is Eliseus a sonne of Saphat, which poured water vpon Elias handes. Iosaphat sayde:
The worde of a LORDE is with hym. So the kyngge of Israel a Iosaphat, and a kyngge of Edom wente downe vnto hym.

But Eliseus sayde vnto the kyngge of Israel:
What hast thou to do with me? a go to the prophetes of thy father a thy mothers prophetes. The kyngge of Israel sayde vnto hym:
No, for a LORDE hath called these three kynge, to delyuer them in to the handes of the Moabites. Eliseus sayde: As truly as the LORDE Zeboath lyueth, before whom I stode, yf I regarded not Iosaphat the kynge of Iuda, I wolde not regarde the, ner set oughte by y. So bringe me now a mynstrell. And when the mynstrell played vpó the instrument, the hande of the LORDE came vpó him. And he sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Make pittes by this broke. For thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shal se nether wynde ner rayne, yet shall the broke be full of water, that ye and youre households, ye youre catell male or dreynke. Yee and that is but a small thinge in the sighte of the LORDE. And the Moabites shal he delyuer in to youre handes, so y ye shall smyte full, all your chosen cities, ye shal fell downe all the good trees, and stoppe all the welles of water and all the good feldes shall ye make waist with stones.

On the morow, whan the meatofferynge is offered, beholde, there came water vpó waye from Edom, and fylled y londe with water. But whan the Moabites herde, y the kynge came vp to fighte agaynst the, they called all y harnes men, theire rulers, stode on y border. And whan they rose early in y morninge, the Sonne wete vpó water, the Moabites thoughte the water ouer agaynst the, to be euë as reed as bloude, ye they sayde: It is bloude, y kynge haue destroyed them selues with the swerde, one hath smytten another. Now Moab get the vp to the spoyles. But whan they came to the tentes of Israel, the Israelites gat vp, smote the Moabites, they fled before them.

Neuertheles they came in, smote Moab, brake downe the citie, every one cast his stone vpó all the good feldes, and made them full, and stopped all y welles of water, and felled downe all the good trees, tyl there remainede but the stones in the brickwall, and they compassed them aboute with slynge, and smote them.

But wah the kynge of y Moabites sawe y the battayll was to stryke for him, he toke to him seuen C. men, which drue y swerde, to fall vpó the kynge of Edom: neuertheles they were not able. Then toke he his first sonne, which shulde haue bene kynge in his steade, and offred him for a burntofferynge vpon the wall. Then came there a greate wrath ouer Israel, that they departed from him, and turned agayne in to their londe.

The iiiij. Chapter.

And there cried a woman amõge the wyues of the prophetes children vnto Eliseus, and sayde: Thy seruant my husbâde is deed, and thou knowest that thy seruant feared the LORDE. Now commeth the man that he was better vnto, and wyll take awaye both my children to be bonde seuuenes. Eliseus sayde vnto her: What shal I do for the? Tell me, what hast thou in the house? She sayde: Thy handmayden hath nothinge in the house but a pitcher with oyle. He sayde: Go thy waye, borowe of all thy neibouris emptye vessels, that not a fewe, and go in, and shut y dore behynde the with thy sonnes, and poure of it in to all y vessels: when thou hast fylled them, delyuer them forth.

She wente, and shut the dore vnto her with her sonnes, which broughte her the vessels, and so she poured in. And whan the vessels were full, she sayde vnto hir sonne: Bringe me yet one vessell. He sayde vnto her: There is not one vessell more here. Then stode y oyle styll. And she sent, and tolde the man of God. He sayde: Go thy waye, sell the oyle, and paye the creditour: but lyne thou and thy sonnes of the resydue.

And it fortuned at y same tyme, that Eliseus wente vnto Sunem. And there was a riche woman, which helde him to eate with her: as he passed oft thorow y waye, he wete in vnto her: as he came in, he layed him downe in the chamber, he slepte therin.

And it fortuned vpon a tyme, that he came in, layed him downe in the chamber, as he slept therin. And he saide vnto Gehasi his childe: Call this woman of Sunem. And wah he had called her, she stode before him. He sayde vnto him: Speake thou vnto her, beholde, thou hast myristred vnto vso in all these things, what shal I do for the? Hast thou any matter to be spoken for to the kynge, or to the chefe captayne of the hoost? She sayde: I dwell amonge my people. He sayde: What hast thou then to do? Gehasi sayde: Alas, she hath no sonne, and hir huszbade is olde. He sayde: Call her. And wha he had called her, she stode at the dore. And he sayde: *Aboute this tyme yt frute can lyue, thou shalt embrace a sonne. She sayde: Alas, no my lorde, thou man of God, Iye not vnto thy handmayden. And the woman conceaued, and bare a sonne aboute the same tyme, wha the frute could e lyue, acordynge as Elisesen had sayde vnto her.

But wha yt childe was growne, it fortuned, yt he wente forth to his father vnto the reapers, she sayde vnto his father: Oh my head, my head. He saide vnto his serua^t: Bringe him to his mother. And he toke him, and broughte him to his mother: and she set him vnpon hir lappes vntyll yt noone dayes, th^, he dyed. And she wente vp, and layed him vp the bed of the man of God, shut the dore, and wete forth, called hir huszbende, she sayde vnto him: Sende me one of the seruautes, and an Ass, I wyl go quyclyk vnto the man of God, and come agayne. He sayde: Why wilt thou go vnto him? To daye is it nether new moone nor Sabbath. She sayde: Well. And she salled the ass, she sayde to the yong-man: dryue forth, and kepe me not bak with rydinge, and do as I byd the.

So she wente, and came to the man of God vnto mount Carmell. Wha the man of God sawe her ouer agaynst him, he sayde vnto his childe Gehasi: Beholde, the Sunamitisse is there, runne now, mete her, and axe her yt it go well with her, and hir huszbande hir sonne. She sayde: Well. But wha she came to the man of God vp y mount, she helde him by his feote. And Gehasi stepte to her, to put her awaye. But yt man of God sayde: Let her alone, for hir soule is in heuynes, and the LORDE hath hyd it fro me, and not shewed it me. She sayde: Wha desyred I a sonne of my lorde? Sayde I not, yt thou shuldest not moke me?

He sayde vnto Gehasi: Girde vp thy loynes, and take my staffe in thy hande, and go thy waye. *Yf eny man mete the, salute him not: and yt eny man salute the, thanke him not, and laye thou my staffe vpon yt chilidges face. But the childe's mother sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wym not leaue the. Then gat he vp, and wente after her. As for Gehasi, he wente before them, and layed the staffe vpon the childe's face, but there was nether voyce ner felynge. And he wente agayne to mete him, and shewed him, and sayde: The childe is not ryson vp.

And when Elisesen came in to the house, beholde, yt childe laye deed vp^o his bed. And he wete in, shut the dore on the both, made his prayer vnto the LORDE, he wente vp, layed him selfe vpon the childe, layed his mouth vpon the childe's mouth, and his eyes vpon his eyes, and his handes vpon his handes, so streched himself selfe forth vpon him, so yt the childe's body was warme. And he rose vp, wente in to the house once hither and thither, wente vp, layed him selfe a longe vpon him. Then nesed the childe seuen tymes, and afterwarde the childe opened his eyes. And he cried vpon Gehasi, and sayde: Call the Sunamitisse. And when he had called her, she came in vnto him. He sayde: Take there thy soume. Then came she, and fell at his feote, and worshipped vnto the grounde, and toke hir soume, and wente forth. But wha Elisesen came againe vnto Gilgal, there was a derthe in the londe, the prophete children dwelt before him, he sayde vnto his seruaunte: Set on a greate pot, and make potage for the children of the prophetes. Then wente there one in to the felde, to gather herbs, and founde a Cucumbers stalle, gathered wylde Cucumbers therof his cotefull. And when he came, he chopped it small for potage to the pott, for they knewe it not. And wha they purred it forth for the me to eate, they ate of yt potage, they cried and sayde: O thou man of God, death is in the pot: for they mighte not eate it. Neuertheles he sayde: Brynge meel hither. And he put it in the pot, she sayde: Pour it out for the people, that they maye eate. And then was it not bytter in the pot.

There came a man from Baal Salisa, broughte the man of God brede of the first frutes, namely twentye barlye loaes, new come in his garment. But he sayde: Geue it vnto yt people, that they maye eate. His mynister sayde: *How shall I geue an htidreth men of this? He sayde: Geue it vnto the people, that they maye eate. For thus sayeth the LORDE: They shall eat, and there shall be lefte ouer. And he set it before them, so that they ate, and there lefte ouer, accordinge to י words of the LORDE.

The b. Chapter.

NAAMAN the chefe captayne of the kyng of Syria, was an excellët man in the sighte of his lorde, and moch set by (for thorow him the LORDE gaue health vnto Syria) and he was a mightie man, but a leper. And there had men of warre fallen out of Syria, and caried awaye a little damsel out of the londe of Israel: the same was in seruyce with Naamä's wife, and sayde vnto hir mastresse: O that my master were with the prophete at Samaria, he wolde heale him from his leprosy.

Then wente he in to his lorde, and tolde him, and sayde: Thus and thus hath the damsel of the londe of Israel spokene. The kyng of Syria sayde: Go thy waye then, י I wyly wrytte a letter vnto the kyng of Israel.

And he wente, and toke with hym ten hundreth weighte of syluer, and sixe thousande guldens, י ten chauenge of raymeynt, י broughte the letter vnto the kyng of Israel, with these wordes:

Whan this letter commeth vnto the, beholde, thou shalt vnderstonde י I haue sent my seruanunt Naamä vnto the, that thou mayest heale him of his leprosy.

And whan the kyng of Israel red the letter, he rente his clothes, י sayde: Am I God then, that I can kyll and quycke agayne, י he sendeth vnto me, to heale the man fro his leprosy? Considre and se, how he seket an occasion vnto me.

Whan Eliseus the man of God herde, י the kyng of Israel had rente his clothes, he sent vnto hym, sayenge: Why hast thou rente thy clothes? Let hym come to me, that he maye knowe, י there is a prophet in Israel.

C

So Naamä came with horses and charettes, and helde still at the dore of Eliseus house. Then sent Eliseus a messaunger vnto hym, sayenge: Go thy waye, and waszshe the seven tymes in Iordane, so shal thy flesh be restored the agayne, י be clensed. Then was Naamä wroth, י wente his waye, י sayde: I thoughte he shulde haue come forth vnto me, י to haue stode here י to haue called vpō the name of the LORDE his God, י to haue touched the place with his hande, י so to haue put awaye the leprosy. Are not י waters of Aman and Pharpar at Damascon better then all the waters in Israel, י I might waszshe me therin י be clensed? and he turned hym, and vete his waye in displeasure. Then his seruanunts gat the to him, and sayde: Fader, י the prophete had commaunded the eny greate thinge, shuldest thou not haue done it? muche more the י he saye vnto the: Wash the, י thou shalt be cleane. Then vete he downe, י waszshed hym selfe in Iordane seven tymes (as the man of God sayde) י his flesh was restored him agayne, euyn as the flesh of a yonge childe י and he was clensed.

And he turned agayne to י man of God with all his armeye. And whan he came in, he stode before him, and sayde: Beholde, י knowe that in all londes there is no God, but in Israel. Take now therfore this blessynge I praye the of thy seruanunt. Neuertheles he sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, before whom I stonde, I wil not take it. And he wolde nedes haue him to take it, but he wolde not. Then sayde Naamä: Mighthe there not a burthē of this earth be genē vnto thy seruanunt, as much as two Mules maye beare? For thy seruanunt will nomore do sacrifice and offer burnofferynges vnto other goddes, but vpto the LORDE, That the LORDE maye be gracious vnto thy seruanunt, י I worshippe in the house of Rimmon, wha my lorde goeth there in to י house to worshippe, י leaneth vpon my hande. He sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye in peace.

And as he was gone from him a felde breadth in the londe, Gehasi the seruanunt of Eliseus י man of God thoughte: beholde, my lorde hath spared Naamä this Syrian, so that he hath not taken from him י which he broughte: As truly as י LORDE lyueth, I wil rūne after him, י take somthinge of him.

So Gehasi folowed Naamä. And wha Naamä sawe י he ranne after him, he lighte downe from the charet to mete hym, י sayde: Are all thinges well? He sayde: Yee. But my lorde hath sent me, י causde to saye vnto the: Beholde, there are now come to me fro mount Ephraim two yonge men of the prophetes childe, genue them a talette of syluer (I praye the) י two chauenge of raymeynt. Naamä saide: Go to, take two talètes. And he còpelled him, & bande two talentes in two bagges, and two change of rayment, and deluyedr it vnto two of his seruauntes, which bare it before him. And when he came in & darke, he toke it from their handes, & layed it a syde in the house, let the men go.

And when they were gone their waye, he stode before his lorde. And Eliseus sayde vnto him: Whence commest thou Gehasi? He sayde: Thy seruaunt wente nether hither ner thither. But he sayde vnto him: Wente not my hert with the, whan the man turned backe from his charet to mete the? Now thou hast takè the syluer & the rayment, olyue trees, vynyarde, shepe, oxen, seruauntes & maydens. But the leprosy of Naaman shal cleue vnto the & to thy syde for euer. *Then wëte he forth from him leporous as snowe.

The vi. Chapter.

A THE children of ſ prophete sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, the place where we dwell before ſ, is to narow for vs, let vs go vnto Iordan, & every one fetch tymbre there, ſ we maye there buylde vs a place to dwell in. He sayde: Go youre waye. And one sayde: Go to then, ſ come with thy seruauntes. He sayde: I wil go with you. And he wëte with them. And when they came to Iordan, they hewed downe tymber. And as one was fellynge downe a tre, the yron fell in to the water, and he cried and sayde: Alas my lorde, ſ it is burowed. But the man of God sayde: Where fell it in? And whan he had shewed him the place, he cut downe a sticke, and thrust it in there. Then swame the yron. And he sayde: Take it vp. So he put forth his hande, and tok it.

And the kynge of Syria warred agaynst Israel, and toke councell at his seruauntes, and sayde: There ſ there will we lye. But the man of God sent to ſ kynge of Israel, sayenge: Beware ſ thou go not vnto that place, for the Syrains rest there. So the kynge of Israel sent vnto ſ place wherof ſ man of God tolde him, ſ kepte it, ſ helde watch there, ſ dyd that not once or twyse onely.

C Thë was ſ kynge of Syrias herte vexed threfore, and called his seruauntes, and sayde vnto them: Wylle ye not tell me, which of oure men is fled vnto the kynge of Israel?

Then sayde one of his seruauntes: Not so my lorde O kynge, but Eliseus the prophet in Israel telleth the kynge of Israel all that thou speakest in thy chamber where thou lyest. He sayde: Go youre waye the & loke where he is, that I maye sende, and cause him be fetched. And they shewed him and sayde: Beholde, he is at Dothan. Thë sent he thither horses & charetes, ſ a greate power. And whà they came thither by nighte, they compassed the cite aboute. And the mynster of the mā of God arose early to get him vp. And as he wëte forth, beholde, there laye an hoost of men aboute ſ cite with horses and charetes.

Then sayde his childe vnto him: Alas syr, how wyll we now do? He sayde: *Feare not, for there are mo of them ſ are with vs, then of those that are with them. And Eliseus prayed ſ sayde: LORDE open his eyes, ſ he maye se. Then the LORDE opened ſ childes eyes, ſ he sawe, ſ beholde, ſ mount was full of fyrre horses ſ charetes roude aboute Eliseus. And whà they came downe vnto him, Eliseus made his prayer, ſ sayde: LORDE smyte this people with blyndnes. *And he smote thë with blyndnes acordinge to the worde of Eliseus. And Eliseus saide vnto them: This is not ſ waye nor the cite, folowe me, I wil bryngye to the man whom ye seke. And he broughte them vnto Samaria.

And whan they came to Samaria, Eliseus sayde: LORDE open these mens eyes, ſ they maye se. And the LORDE opened their eyes, ſ they sawe, ſ beholde, they were in the myddes of Samaria. And whan the kynge of Israel sawe them, he saide vnto Eliseus: My father,shal I smyte thë? He sayde: Thou shalt not smyte thë loke whom thou takest with thy swerde and bowe, smyte those. Set bred and water before them, that they maye eate and drynke, and let them departe vnto their lorde. Thë was there a greate dyner prepared. And whan they had eaten and dronken, he let them go to departe vnto their lorde. From that tyme forth came the men of warre of the Syrians nomore in to the londe of Israel.

After this it fortuned, that Benadab the kynge of Syria gathered all his hoost, and wëte vp, ſ layed sege vnto Samaria: ſ there was a greate derth at Samaria. But they layed sege to the cite so longe, tyll an Asses heade was worth foure score syluer pens, and the foure parte of a * Cab of doues donge worth fyue syluer pens. And when the kyng of Israel wente vnto the wall, a woman cried vnto him and sayde: Helpe me my lorde Or kyng. He sayde: Yf the LORDE helpe the not, wherwith shall I helpe the? with thy barne or with the wyne presse? And the kyng sayde vnto her: What ayleth thy? She sayde: This woman sayde vnto me: Geue vs thy sonne, that we maye eate him, tomorrow wyll we eate my sonne. So we sod my sonne, & had a sack cloth vnder vpon him. And he sayde: God do this and that vnto me, yf the heade of Eliseus the sonne of Saphat shal this daye stonde vpon him. As for Eliseus, he sat in his house, & the Elders sat by him. And he sent a man before him, but euery the messaunger came to him, he sayde vnto y Elders: Haue ye not sawe how this childe of murther hath sent hither, to take awaye my heade? Take hede, when the messaunger cometh, ye holde him at the dore. Beholde, y noys of his lorde fete foloweth him. Whyle he was thus talkynge with them, beholde, the messaunger came to him, & sayde: Beholde, this euell cometh of the LORDE, and what more shal I looke for of the LORDE?

The bii. Chapter.

E LI SEUS sayde: Heare the worde of the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE: To morrow aboute this tyme shal a buschel of fyue meel be solde for one Sycle, and two buschels of barley for one Sycle vnder the porte of Samaria. Then a knyghte (vpon whose hande the kyng leaned) answered the ma of God, and sayde: And though the LORDE made wyndowes in heaué, how coulde soch a thinge come to passe? He saide: Beholde, thou shalt se it with thine eyes, & shalt not eate therof. And there were foure leporous men at the dore before the porte, and one sayde vnto another: Why tary we here whyle we dye? Though we thoughte to come in to the cite, yet is ther derth in the cite, and ther shoulde we be fayne to dye. And yf we tary here, we must dye also. Let vs go now, and dye vnto the hoost of the Syrians. Yf they let vs lyue, we shall lyue: yf they slaye vs, then are we deed. And so they gat them vp early, to come vnto the hoost of the Syrians. And when they came to the vtemost ende of the tentes, beholde, there was no body.

§ for the LORDE had made the Syrians to heare a noyse of horses, charrettes, and of a mightie greate hoost, so that they sayde one to another amongeth the selues: Beholde, the kyng of Israel hath hyred the kyng of the Hethites, and the kyng of the Egipcians agaynst vs, to come vp vs. And they gat them vp, and fled early in the twylight, and lefte their bothes, and horses and Asses in the tentes as they stode, & fled euery man where he mighte sawe his life.

Now when the lepers came to the place of the tentes, they wente in to the tentes, ate and dronke, and toke syluer, golde and rayment, and wente and hyd it: came agayne entred in to another tent, and toke therout, and wente and hyd it. But one of them sayde vnto another: Let vs not do thus, this daye is a daye of good tidynge. Yf we kepe this secrete and byde tyll the lighte mornynge, our trespace wyl be founde out. Let vs go now therefore, that we maye come, & tell the kynges house.

And when they came, they cried at the porte of the cite, and tolde them, and sayde: We came to the tentes of the Sirians, and beholde, there is no ma there, neither yet euery mans voyce, but horses and assesse bounde, and the bothes as they stonde. Then cried they porters and tolde it within in the kynges house. And the kyng arose in the nighte, & sayde vnto his seruantes: I will tell you how the Sirians debe with vs: they knowe we suffer honger, and are gone out of the cites, to hyde thern selues in the fielde, and thynke thus: when they goe out of the cite, we will take them alynge, & come in to the cite. Then answered one of his seruantes, and sayde: Let vs take the fyue horses that remayne, which yet are lefte in the cite (beholde, these are lefte therin for all the multitude in Israel, which is destroyed) let vs sende these and se. The toke they two charrettes with you, horses. And the kyng sent them vnto the tentes of the Syrians, and sayde: Go your waye and se.

And when they wente after thee vnto Iordaine, beholde, the waye laye full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast from thee, whyle they made haste. And when the messauengers came agayne, and tolde the kyng, the people wente forth, and spoyled the tentes of the Syrians. And a buszshel of fyne meell was solde for a Sycle, and two buszshels of barleye for a Sycle also, *according to the worde of the LORDE. But the kyng appoynted the knyghte (vpon whose hande he leened) to be at the gate, & the people trode vpon him, so that he dyed, even as the man of God sayde, when the kyng came downe vnto him. And it came to passe euon as the man of God tolde the kyng, wha he sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyne shall two buszshels of barleye be solde for one Sycle, and a buszshel of fyne meell for one Sycle vnder the gate at Samaria. And the knyghte answered the man of God, and sayde: Belholde, though the LORDE made wyndowes in heauen, howe coulde soch a thinge come to passe? Neuertheles he sayde: Beholde, with thine eyes shalt thou se it, and shalt not eate therof. And euon so fortune it vnto him, for the people trode vpon him in the gate, & he dyed.

The viij. Chapter.

ELISEUS spake vnto the woma, *whose sonne he had restored vnto life againe, and sayde: Get the vp, & go with thine housholde, and be a stranger wher thou canst: for the LORDE shall call for a derth, which shall come in to the londe seuen yeare lõge. The woman gat her vp, and dyd as the man of God sayde, & wente with hir housholde, and was a stranger in the londe of the Philistynes seuen yeare. But when the seuen yeares were ended, the woman came agayne out of the Philistynes lõde, and wente forth to crye vpon the kyng for hir house and londe. The kyng spake vnto Gehasi the seuraunt of the man of God, & sayde: Tell me all the greate actes that Eliseus hath done. And whyle he was tellynge the kyng how he had made one that was dead, to lyue agayne, beholde, the woman whose sonne he had caused to reuyue, came euyn in the meane season, and cried vnto the kyng for hir house and londe. Then sayde Gehasi: My lorde O kyng, this same is the woma, and this is hir sonne, whom Eliseus restored vnto life agayne. And the kyng axed the woman, and she tolde him. Then the kyng deluyner her a chamberlayne, & sayde: Restore her agayne all that is hirs, and all the increase of the londe, sence the tymte that she lefte the londe vntyll now.

† And Eliseus came to Damascos, & Be- nadab the kyng of Syria laye sickle. And it was tolde him, and sayde: The man of God is come hither. Then sayde the kyng vnto Hasael: Take giftes with the, & go mete the man of God, and axe councell at the LORDE by him, and sayde: Maye I recouer from this sickenes? Hasael wente for to mete him, and toke rewardes with him, and of all the goodes at Damasco, as much as fortye Camels mighte beare. And when he came, he stode before him, and sayde: Thy sonne Benadab the kyng of Syria hath sent me vnto the, sayenge: Maye I recouer from this sickenes?

Eliseus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye and tell him: Thou shalt recouer. But the LORDE hath shewed me, thy sonne shall dy in this death. And the man of God loked earnestly, made a troublous countenaunce, & wepte. Thë sayde Hasael: Wherfore wepeth thy lorde? He sayde: I knowe what euell thou shalt do vnto the children of Israel. Thou shalt burne their stronge cities with fyre, and slaye their yonge men with the swerde, and kyll their yonge children, and rypppe vp their women with childe.

Hasael sayde: How so, ls thy seruant a dogg, that he shulde do soch a greate thynge? Eliseus sayde: § The LORDE hath shewed me, thy shall be kyng of Syria. And he wente his waye from Eliseus, & came to his lorde, which said vnto him: What saith Eliseus vnto the? He sayde: He tolde me, Thou shalt recouer. But on the nexte daye he toke bed couerynge, and dypte it in water, and spred it ouer hym, and he dyed, & Hasael was kyng in his stede.

In the fifth yeare of Ioram the sonne of Ahab kyng of Israel, was Ioram ¥ sonne of losaphat kyng of Iuda. #Two thirtie yeare olde was he wha he was made kyng, \( \tau \) reigned eighte yeare at Ierusalem, \( \tau \) walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, as the house of Achab kyng (for Achabes daughter was his wife) \( \tau \) he dyd \( \chi \) which was euell in \( \chi \) sighte of the LORDE. Neuertheles the LORDE wolde not destroye Iuda for his seruauant Davids sake; \( \ast \) as he promysed him, to gene him euer a lanterne amøge his childrè.

At \( \chi \) same tyme fell \( \xi \) Edomites awaye from Iuda, \( \x \) made a kyng ouer them selues: \( \chi \) cause was this, Ioram had gone thorow Seira, and all the charettes with him, \( \xi \) had gotten him vp by nighte, and smytten the Edomites that were aboute him, and \( \xi \) rulers ouer the charettes, so that the people fled vp to their tente: threfore fell the Edomites awaye from Iuda vnto this daye. At the same tyme fell Libna awaye also.

What more there is to saye of Ioram, \( \xi \) all \( \chi \) he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Ioram fell on slepe with his fathers, \( \x \) was buried with his fathers in \( \chi \) cite of David, \( \xi \) Ochosias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the twoloth yeare of Ioram the sonne of Achab kyng of Israel, was Ochosias \( \xi \) sonne of Ioram kyng in Iuda. Two and twentye yeare olde was Ochosias when he was made kyng, and reigned one yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Atalia the daughter of Amri kyng of Israel, \( \x \) he walked in the waye of the house of Achab, \( \x \) dyd that which was euell in the syght of \( \chi \) LORDE, euen as dyd the house of Achab: for he was sonne in Lawe in the house of Achab. And he wente with Ioram the sonne of Achab in to the battayll agaynst Hasael \( \xi \) kinge of Syria vnto Ramoth in Gilead, but \( \xi \) Syrains smote Ioram. \( \ast \) Then Ioram the kinge turnede backe, to be healed at Iesreel of \( \chi \) wounds, wherwith the Syrains had wounded him at Ramoth, wha he foughthe with Hasael kinge of Syria. And Ochosyas \( \xi \) sonne of Iorã kinge of Iuda, came downe to viset Ioram the sonne of Achab at Iesreel, for he laye sicke.

The ix. Chapter.

ELISEUS the prophet called one of the prophetes childrè, \( \gamma \) sayde vnto him: \( \gamma \) Gird vp thy lownes, and take this cruze of oyle with the, and go vnto Ramoth in Gilead; and wha thou comest thither, thou shalt se there one Iehu, \( \zeta \) sonne of Isaphat the sonne of Nimis, and go in, and byd him stonde vp amonste his brethren, and brynge him in to the ymmost chamber, \( \gamma \) takethe thou \( \chi \) cruze of oyle, and poure it vpon his head, \( \gamma \) saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I have anoynted the to be kyng euell Israel: \( \gamma \) thou shalt open the doore, and flye, and not tary. And the prophetes yonge man, the childe wente his waye vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And when he came in, beholde, the captaynes of the hoost sat there, and he sayde: I have somwhat to saye vnto the O captayne. Iehu sayde: Vnty whom amonge vs all? He sayde: Euen vnto the o captayne.

Then stode he vp, and wente in. So he poured the oyle vpon his heade, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: I have anoynted \( \chi \) to be kyng euell the LORDES people of Israel, \( \gamma \) and thou shalt smyte thy lorde Achabs house, that I maye auenge the bloude of my seruantes the prophetes, and the bloude of all the LORDES seruantes, from the hande of Isabell, that all the house of Achab maye periszhe. And I wyl rote out from Achab, \( \gamma \) euene him that maketh water agaynst the wall, and the closed vp and the desolate in Israel: and the house of Achab wyll I make euene as the house of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Ahia, and \( \chi \) dogges /shall eate vp Isabel vpon the felde at Iesrael, and no man shall burye her. And he opened the doore, and fled.

And wha Iehu came forth to his lordes seruauntes, they saide vnto him: Are thee things well? Wherfore came this madd felowe vnto the? He saide vnto them: Ye knowe the man well, \( \gamma \) what he hath spoken. They sayde: That is not true, but tell thou vs. He sayde: Thus and thus hath he spoken vnto me, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I have anoynted the to be kyng euell Israel. Then made they haist, and euery one toke his garment and laied them vnder him in maner of a judges seate, and blewe the trompet, and sayde: Iehu is made kyng. So Iehu the sonne of Isaphat the sonne of Nimis, made a confederacion agaynst Ioram. As for Iorã he laye before Ramoth in Gilead with all Israel agaynst Hasael the kyng of Syria.
*But Ioram the kyng was turned backe, y唤 he might be healed of the wounds wherwith the Syrians had wounded him, whi he foute with Hasael the kyng of the Syrens.

And Iehu sayde: Yf it be youre mynde, there shall noman escape out of the cite, to go and tell it at Iesreel. And he rode, and departed vnto Iesrael: for Ioram laye there, and Ochosias the kyng of Iuda was come downe to vsset Ioram. But the watchman that stode vpon the tower at Iesrael, sawe the company of Iehu commynge, and sayde: I se a company. Then sayde Ioram: Take a charet, and sende to mete the, and saye: Is it peace? And the charetman rode to mete them, and sayde: Thus sayeth the kyng: Is it peace? Iehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne the beynde me. The watchman tolde it, and sayde: The messaungers is come vnto them, and cometh not agayne. Then sent he another charetman, which when he came to them, saide: Thus sayeth the kyng: Is it peace? Iehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne the thy behynye me.

And the watchman tolde it, and sayde: He is come to them: and commeth not agayne, and the goyng is as it were the goyng of Iehu the sonne of Nimsi: for he dryueth on as he were mad. Then sayde Ioram: Binde the charet fast. And they bounde the charet, and so they wente forth, Ioram the kyng of Israel, and Ochosias the kyng of Iuda, euery one vpon his charet, to mete Iehu. And they founde him vpon the felde of Naboth the Iesraelite. And when Ioram sawe Iehu, he sayde: Iehu, is it peace? But he sayde: What peace? The whordome and withcraft of thy mother Iesabel is not yet come to an ende.

Then turned Ioram his hande and fled, and sayde vnto Ochosias: There is treason Ochosias. But Iehu toke his bowe, g shot Ioram betwene the armes, that the arowe wente throw his hert, and he fell downe in his charet. And Iehu sayde vnto Bidekar the knyghte: Take and cast him in the pece of londe of Naboth the Iesraelite: for I remember seene thou rodest with me in a charet after Achab his father, that the LORDE wold laye this heuy burthen vpon him. I holde (sayde the LORDE) I wyl recompence the y blocke of Naboth and of his childre, euen in this pece of londe. Take him now and cast him in to that pece of londe, tacer-dynde to the worde of the LORDE.

When Ochosias the kyng of Iuda sawe this, he fled by the waie vnto y garden house. But Iehu folowed after him, and commaundde to smyte him also vpon his charet in the goyng vp towards Gur, which Beth by Ieblaam: and he fled vnto Megiddo, and dyed there. And his seruantes caused him to be caried vnto Ierusalem, and there they buryd hym in his awne grane with his fathers in the cite of Dauid. Ochosias reigned ouer Iuda in y eleventh yeare of Iorah y sonne of Achab. And when Iehu came to Iesrael, and Iesabel herde thereof, she coloured his face, and decked his hede, and loked out at the wyndowe. And when Iehu came vnder the gate, she sayde: *Prospered Symri well that slewe his lorde? And he lifte vp his face to the wyndow, and sayde: Who is with me? Then resorted there two or thre chamberlaynes vnto him. He sayde: Cast her downe heylings. And they cast her downe heylings, and that y wall and the horses were sprenckeld with hir bloude, and she was trodd under fete. And when he came in, and had eaten and dronken, he sayde: Loke vpon yonder cursed woman, g burye her, for she is a kynges daughter. Neuertheles when they wente in to burye her, they founde nothinge of her, but the szkull and the fete, and the palmes of her handes. And they came agayne and broughte him worde. He saide: This is euen it that the LORDE spake by his seruaunt Elias the Theszbite, and sayde: *In the felde of Iesrael shall the dogges eate Iesabels flesh. So the deed carcase of Iesabel became euen as donge in the felde of Iesrael, so y man could not saye: This is Iesabel.

The 1. Chapter.

ACHAB had thre score and ten sones & at Samaria. ¶ And Iehu wrote a letter, and sent it to Samaria, vnto the rulers of the cite Iesrael, euyn vnto the Elders, g to Achabs tuters, sayenge these worde: When this letter commeth vnto you with whom are youre lorde sones, charetges, horses, stronge cities, & ordynance, loke which is the best and most righteous amonge youre lorde soune, & set hym vpon his fathers seate, and fighte for youre lorde house.

Neuertheles they were sore afrayed, and sayde: Beholde, two kynges were not able to stonde before him, how wyl we then endure? And they that were ouer the house and ouer the cite, and the Elders and tutors sent vnto Iehu, sayenge: We are thy seruauntes, we wyll do all that thou sayest vnto vs: We wil make no man kyng, do thou what pleaseth the. Then wrote he the seconde letter vnto them with these worde: If ye be myne, and herken vnto my voyce, then take the heads of the men youre lorde soune, and brynge me them to morowe by this tymne vnto Iesrael.

The kynges soune were thre score men and ten, and ʒ chefe men of the cite broughte the vp. Now when this letter came they toke the kynges sounes, and slewe them euene thre score men and ten, and layed their heads in baszetkes, and sent them to hym vnto Iesrael. And when the messaunger came, ʒ tolde hym, and sayde: They haunte the heads of the kynges children, he sayde: Laye them vpou two heapes at the dore of the porte tyl to morowe.

And on the morowe whan he wente forth, he stode, and sayde vnto all the people: Are ye righteous? Beholde, I haue made an appoyntmēt against my lorde, and slayne him, who hath slayne all these then? Vnderstone ye now therfore, that there is not fallen vpon the earth one worde of the LORDE, which he spake agaynst the house of Achab: and the LORDE hath done, euene ʒ as he sayde by his seruaunt Elias. So Iehu smote all the remaunte of the house of Achab at Iesrael, all his greate men, his kynsfolkes, and his prestes, tyl there was not one lefte ouer. And he gat him vp, wente his waye, and came to Samaria.

By the waye there was a shepheardes house, where Iehu founde the brethren of Ochosias kyng of Iuda, and sayde: Whence are ye? They sayde: We are Ochosias brethren, and are goynge downe to salute the kynges children, and the quenes children. He sayde: Take them aluyue. And they toke them aluyue, and slewe them by the welles syde at the shepheardes house, euene two and fortye men, and let not one of them remayne.

And when he wente from thence, he foide Ionadab ʒ sonne of ʒ Rechab, which met him, ʒ saluted him. And he sayde vnto hym: Is thynge hert righte, as myne hert is with thynge hert? Ionadab sayde: Yee. If it be so (sayde he) then gene me thy hande. And he gaue him his hande. And so he caused hym to syt besyde hym in the charret, and sayde: Come with me, and se my zele for the LORDE. And they caried hym with him vpon his charret. And when he came to Samaria, he smote all that remayned of Achab at Samaria, tylly he had destroyed him, acordynge to the worde of the LORDE, ʒ which he spake vnto Elias.

And Iehu gathered all the people together, & saide vnto them: ʒ Ahab did Baal but little seruycie. Iehu wyll serue hym better. Call vnto me now therefore all Baals prophete, all his seruauntes and all his prestes, that there be none wantinge, for I haue a greate sacrifice to do vnto Baal. Who so euer is myssed, shal not lyue. But Iehu dyd it crately, that he mighte destroye all the mynisters of Baal. And Iehu sayde: Sanctifie ʒ feast vnto Baal, and proclame it. And Iehu sent in to all Israel, and causd all Baals ministers to come, so that there was no man lefte behynede, which came not. And they came in to Baals house, so that the house of Baal was full from one corner to another.

Then sayde he vnto hym that had the rule of the vestrye: Brynge forth rayment for all Baals mynisters. And he broughte forth the rayment. And Iehu wente in to Baals house with Ionadab the sonne of Rechab, and sayde vnto Baals mynisters: Search and se that there be not here amoue you eny mynyster of the LORDE, but onely Baals mynisters.

And when they came in to offer sacrificyes and burntofferynges, Iehu appoynted him foure score men without, ʒ sayde: If eny of these men escape whom I deluyer under youre handes, then shal the same mens soule be for his soule. Now wha he had made an ende of the burntofferynge, Iehu sayde vnto the fote-men and knyghtes: Go in, ʒ smyte euery man, let noman go forth. And they smote the with the edge of the sward. And the fote men and knyghtes threw the awaie and wete vnto the cite of Baals house, and brought forth the pliler in ʒ house of Baal, and brent it, and brake downe Baals pylers with the house of Baal, and made a prey thereof unto this day. Thus Ichu destroyed Baal out of Israel. But Ichu lefte not of from the sinnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) namely, from the golden calues at Bethel and at Dan. And the LORDE saide vnto Ichu: Because thou hast bene wyllinge to do that which was righte in my sighte, & hast done vnto Achabs house all that was in my hert, therefore shall thy children syt vp vnpon thy seate of Israel vnto the fourth generacion.

F Neuerthelesse Ichu was not diligent to walke in the lawe of the LORDE God of Israel with all his hert: for he lefte not of from the synmes of Ieroboam which made Israel to synne. At the same tyme beganne the LORDE to be greued at Israel. For Hasel smote them in all the borders of Israel from Iordane Eastwarde, and all the londe Gilead of the Gaddites, Rubenites and Manasses, from Arorer that lyeth on the ryuer by Arnon, and Gilead and Basan.

What more there is to saye of Ichu, and all that he dyd, and all his power, beholde, it is wryten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ichu fell on slepe with his fathers, & they buryed him in Samaria. And Ioahas his sonne was kyng in his steade. The tyme that Ichu reigned ouer Israel, is eight and twenty yeares at Samaria.

A THALIA the mother of Ochosias, wha she sawe that hir sonne was deed, gat her vp, and destroyed all the kynges seede. But Ioseba kyng Ioram sonner of Ochosias, toke Ios the sonne of Ochosias and stale him awaye with his nose in the chamber from amonge the kynges children which were slayne, and she hyd him from Athalia, so that he was not slayne. And he was hyd with her in the house of the LORDE sixe yeares. But Athalia was queene in the londe.

G Neuerthelesse in the seuenthe yeare sent Ioia, and toke the rulers ouer hundres with the captaynes and fote men, and caused the to come to him in to the house of the LORDE and made a couenaunt with them, and toke an ooth of them in the house of the LORDE, and shewed them the kynges sonne, and commanded them, and sayde: This is it that ye shall do: One thirde parte of you which enter on the Sabbath, shall kepe the watch in the kynges house, and one thirde parte shall be at the porte of Sur, and one thirde parte shall be at y porte which is behynde the fote men, and ye shall kepe the watch at the house of Massa. But two partes of you all that go of on the Sabbath, shall kepe the watch in the house of the LORDE aboute the kyng and ye shall get you rounde aboute y kyngge and euery one with his weapon in his hande: and who so ener cometh within y wall, let him die, so that ye be with the kyng, wha he goeth out and in.

And the rulers ouer the hundres dyd all as Ioia the prest had commaundad them, and toke vnto them their men which entred vpon the Sabbath, with those that wente of on the Sabbath, and came to Ioia the prest. And the prest gau the captaynes speares and shylde which had bene kyngge Davids, and were in the house of the LORDE. And the fote men stode aboute the kyngge, euery one with his weapon in his hande, fro the corner on the righte syde of the house vnto the corner of the lefte syde, euuen vnto the altare and to the house. And he broughte forth the kynges sonne, and set a crowne vpon his head, and toke the wittes, and made him kyngge, and they were glad, and clapped their handes together, and sayde: God saue the kyngge.

And when Athalia herde the noyse of the people that ranne together, she came to the people in to the house of the LORDE, and lokad, and beholde, the kyngge stode by the pilere, as the vse was, and the syngers and trompettes by the kyngge: and all the people of y lode were glad, and blew with trompettes. But Athalia rente hir clothes, & sayde: Vproure, vproure. Neuertheles Ioia the prest commaundad y rulers ouer hundres, which were appointed ouer the hoost, and saide vnto them: Brynge hir without the wall, and whosoever foloweth hir, let him dye of the swerde (for the prest had sayde, that she shuld not dye in the house of the LORDE.) And they layde handes vpoo hir, and she wente in by the waye where the horses go in to y kyngges house, and there was she slayne.

Then made Ioia a couenaunt betweene the LORDE and the kyngge, and the people, y

Then loiada the prest toke a chest, and bored an hole aboue therin, and set it on the righte hande byside the altrace, at the entrynge in to the house of the LORDE. And the prestes that kepte the threshold, put all the money therin that was broughte vnto the house of the LORDE. Whan they sawe then that there was much money in the chest, *ße kynges serybe came vp with the hye prest, and bounde the money together, and tolde it as much as was founde in the house of the LORDE. And so the ready money was geuen vnto them that wrought and were appoynted to the house of the LORDE, and they gane it forth to the carpenters and to the that buylded and wroughte in the house of the LORDE, namely, to the dayweres and masons, and to them that boughte tymbre and fre stone, to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE, and all that they founde to hawe neede of repayringe in the house.

Howbeit there were no syluer chargers, flat peaces, basens, trompettes, ner any other vessell of golde and syluer made on the house of the LORDE, of the money that was brought vnto the LORDES house: but it was geuen vnto the workmen to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE therewith. The men also that the money was deluyned vnto, for to geue the workmen, needed not to make any acompte, but did theri busynes vpoun credence. But the money of trespace offerings and symneofferings was not broughte vnto the house of the LORDE: for it was the prestes.

At the same tyme wente Hasael the kyng of Syria vp, and foughhte agaynst Gath, and wanne it. And when Hasael set his face to go vp to Ierusalem, kyng Ioaes toke all that was sanctified, which his fathers losaphat, Ioram and Ochosias the kynges of Iuda had halowed, and what he himselfe had sanctified, and all the golde that was founde in the treasures of the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and sente it vnto Hasael the kyng of Syria. And so he departed from Ierusalem.

What more there is to saye of Ioaes, and all that he dyed, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And his seruanntes made insurreccion and conspyred, and smote him in the house of Millo, at the goyne

Then wente all the people of the londe in to the house of Baal, and brake downe his altares, and destroyed his ymage righte well. And Mathan the prest of Baal slyewe they before the altrace: And the prest appoynted the officers in the house of the LORDE, and toke the rulers ouer hundreds, and the captaynes, and the fote men, and all the people of the londe, 3 broughte the kyng downe from the house of the LORDE, and came the waye from the porte of the fote men vnto the kynges house, and he sat vpon the kynges seate. And all the people of the lode were glad, and the cito was at rest. As for Athalia, they slyewe her with the swerde in 3 kynges house. And Ioaes was seuen yeare olde, whan he was made kyng.

The rii. Chapter.

In the seuenthe yeare of Ieuan, was Ioaes made kyng, *and reigned foure yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Zibea of Bersabia. And Ioaes dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada 3 prest taughte him. But they put not downe 3 hye places: for the people offered ye brent incense yet vpon the hye places.

And Ioaes sayde vnto the prestes: All the money that is sanctified to be bestowed vp 5 house of the LORDE, namely the money 3 euery man geneth vnto the treasury, and 3 money that euery man geneth for his soule, and all the money that euery man geneth of a fre hert, to be bestowed on the house of the LORDE, let the prestes take it vnto them, euery one his porcion: with that shall they repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE, where they fynde that there is eny decaye.

But whan 3 prestes repayred not the decaye in the house vnto the thre and twentieth yeare of kyng Ioas, Ioas the kyng called Ioiada the prest with the other prestes, and sayde vnto them: Wherfore do ye not repayre the decaye in the house? Therefor shall ye not take the money vnto you now euery one his porcion, but shall gene it to the decaye of the house. And the prestes agreed to take no money of the people, and to repayre the decaye of the house.

N yy. XXIII. yeare of Ioaes the sonne of Ochosias kyng of Iuda, was Ioaas the sonne of Iehu kyng ouer Israel at Samaria, seuentene yeare: And dyd yy. which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked after the sinnes of Ieroboam yy. sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) and lefte not of from them. And yy. wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpon Israel, and he deluuered them ouer vnder the haude of Hasael kyng of Syria, and vnder the haude of Benadad the sonne of Hasael, as longe as they lyued.

And Ioaas besoughte the face of the LORDE. And the LORDE herde him, for he considered the myserie of Israel, how the kynges of Syria oppressed them. And yy. LORDE gaue to Israel a sauioure, which broughte them out of the power of the Syrians, so yy. the children of Israel dwelt in their tentes, like as afore tyme.

Yet lefte they not from the synnes of the house of Ieroboam, which caused Israel to synne, but walked in them. The groue at Samaria stonde styll also. For of the people of Ioaas there were no mo lefte, but fyfty equestre men, and ten thousande fote men: * for the kynges of Syria had destroyed them, and made them as the dust in the barne.

What more there is to saye of Ioaas, and all that he dyd, and his power, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioaas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria, yy. Ioaas his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the seuenthe and thirtieth yeare of Ioaes kyng of Iuda, was Ioaas the sonne of Iohaas kyng ouer Israel at Samaria sixtene yeare. And he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne, but walked in them. What more there is to saye of Ioaas, and what he dyd, yy. his power, how he foughte with Amasias kyng of Iuda, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioaas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the kynges of Israel.

As for Eliseus, he fell in to a sicknes, wherof he dyd. And Ioaas the kyng of Israel came downe vnto him, and wepte for him, and sayde: * My father, my father, the chariet man of Israel, and his horsmen. Eliseus sayde vnto him: Take the bowe and the arowes. And when he had taken the bowe and the arowes, he sayde vnto the kynges of Israel: Bende the bowe with thine hande, and he bent it with his hande. And Eliseus layed his hande vpon the kynges hande, and sayde: Open that wyndowe towards the East. And he opened it. And Eliseus sayde: Shute. And he shot. He sayde: one arowe of the saluacion of the LORDE, one arowe of saluacion agaynst the Syrians: and thou shalt smyte the Syrians at Aphek, tyll they be brought to naughte.

And he sayde: Take yy. arowes. And whâ he had taken them, he sayde vnto the kynges of Israel: Smyte the earth. And he smote three tymes and stode still. Then was the majesty of God wroth at him, and sayde: If thou haddest smytten fyue or sixe times, thou shuldest haue smytten yy. Syrians, tyll thou haddest utterly brought them to naughte. But now shalt thou smyte them three tymes.

When Eliseus was dead and buried, the men of warre of the Moabites fell in to the londe the same yeare. And it fortuned yy. they buryed a certaine man. But whâ they sawe the men of warre, they cast the man in to Eliseus graue. + And when he was therin, and touched Eliseus bones, he reuyued, and stode vpon his fete.

So Hasael the kynges of Syria oppressed Israel, as longe as Ioaas luyed. But the LORDE was gracious vnto them, and had mercy vpon them, and turned him to them for his souenauntes sake, with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and wolde not destroye the: * Neither dyd he cast them out from his presence vnto this houre.

And Hasael the kynges of Syria dyed, and Benadad his sonne was kyng in his steade. But Ioaas turned backe, and toke out of the hande of Benadad the sonne of Hasael the ckytes which he had take in bataill out of the

The xiii. Chapter.

In the second yeare of Ioa sonne of Ioahas kyng of Israel, was Amasias the sonne of Ioas kyng of Iuda made kyng: *fye and twenty yeare olde was he, whan he was made kyng, *r reigned nyne and twentie yeare at Ierusalam. His mothers name was Ioadan of Ierusalam. And he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE: yet not as his father Dauid, but euene as his father Ioa did so dyd he also: for *r hye places were not put downe, but the people offered and burnt incense yet vpon the hye places. Now when he had gotten the power of the kyngdome, he smote his seruauntes *w which had smyttè the kyng his father: but the children of *f deed slayers swele he not, accordinge to *f which is wrytte in the boke of the lawes of Israel, where the LORDE hath commaunded *w saye: The fathers shall not dye for the children, *w the children shall not dye for the fathers: but euery one shall dye for his awne synne.

Ten thousande of the Edomites smote he also in the Salt valley, and wanne Sela in battayll, and called it Latheel vnto this daye. § Then sent Amasias messaunyers vnto Ioa the sonne of Ioahas the sonne of Ieheu kyng of Israel, sayenge: Come hither, let vs se one another. But Ioa *f kyng of Israel sent vnto Amasias the kyng of Iuda, sayenge: The hawthorne that is in Libanus, sent to the Ceder tre in Libanus, sayenge: Gene thy daughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wylde beest of the felde ranne ouer *f hawthorne, and trode it downe. Thou hast smyttè the Edomites, therfore is thine hert waxen proude: Take the praye, and byde at home: why striuest thou for mynsfortune, *f thou mayest fall, and Iuda with the ? Howbeit Amasias consented not.

Then wete Ioa the kyng of Israel vp, and they sawe one another, he and Amasias the kyng of Iuda at Beth Semes which lyeth in Iuda. But Iuda was smyttèn before Israel, so that euery one fled in to his tente. And Ioa the kyng of Israel toke Amasias the kyng of Iuda, the sonne of Ioas the sonne of Ochosias at Beth Semes, and came to Ierusalam, and brake downe *f wall of Ierusalam from *f porte of Ephraim vnto the corner porte, euene foure hundred cubites loute: and toke all the goldel and syluer, and ornamentes that were founde in the house of the LORDE, and in *r treasures of the kynges house, *r the children also to pledge, *r departed agayne to Samaria.

What more there is to saie of Ioa, what he dyd, and of his power, *r how he foughthe with Amasias the kyng of Iuda, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioa fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried at Samaria amonge *f kynges of Israel. And Ieroboam his sonne was kyng in his steade.

But Amasias the sonne of Ioa kyng of Iuda, lyued after the death of Ioa the sonne of Ioahas kyng of Israel, fiftene yeare. What more there is to saie of Amasias, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And they conspyred agaynst him at Ierusalam, but he fled vnto Lachis. And they sent after him vnto Lachis, and swele him there. And they broughte him vpon horses, *r he was buried at Ierusalam with his fathers in *f cite of Dauid. ¶ And all the people of Iuda toke Asarias in his sixteenth yeare, and made him kyng in steade of Amasias his father. He byyled *f Eloth, and broughte it agayne vnto Iuda, after that the kyng was fallen on slepe with his fathers.

In the fyftene yeare of Amasias the sonne of Ioa kyng of Iuda, was Ieroboam the sonne of Ioa kyng ouer Israel at Samaria, one and fortye yeare. And he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne.

But the borders of Israel broughte he agayne from Hemath vnto *f see that lyeth in the playne felde, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE God of Israel, which he spake by his seruaunt  Ionas *f sonne of Amithai the prophete, which was of  Gath Ephere. For the LORDE considered the miserabel afflication of Israel, how that euene they which were shut vp and desolate, were awaye, and that there was no helper in Israel. ¶¶ And the LORDE sayde not that he wolde destroye the name of Israel from under heaue. And he helped the by Ieroboaem the sonne of Ioas. What more there is to saye of Ieroboaem, and all that he dyd, and of his power, how he foughte, and how broughte Damascon and Hemath agayne vnto Iuda in Israel, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ieroboaem fell on slepe with his fathers, with the kynges of Israel. And Zacharias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The 2b. Chapter.

In the seuen 20th yeare of Ieroboaem kyng of Israel, reigned Azarias the sonne of Amasias kyng of Juda: and was sixente yeare olde when he was made kyng, and reigned twoe and fyfte yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Iechal in Ierusalame. And he dyd righte in the sighte of the Lorde, acordinge to all as dyd Amasias his father, sayynge that they put not downe the hye places. For the people dyd sacrificie and brent incense yet vpon the hye places. Howbeit the Lorde smote the kyng, so that he was leper vnto his death, and dwelt in a frye house. But Iotham the kynges sonne ruled the house, and judged the people in the londe.

What more there is to saye of Azarias, all he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Azarias fell on slepe with his fathers, was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid, Iotham his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the eighte and thirtieth yeare of Azarias kyng of Iuda, was Zacharias the sonne of Ieroboaem kyng over Israel at Samaria six monethes. And he dyd which was euell in the sighte of the Lorde, euenn as his fathers dyd. He departed not from the synnes of Ieroboaem the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. And Sellum the sonne of Iabes conspyred against him, and smote him in the presence of people, and slew him, was kyng in his steade. What more there is to saie of Zacharias, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. And this is it, the Lorde sayde vnto lehu: Thy children shall syt vp& the seate of Israel vntyll the fourth generacion. And euon so came it to passe.

Sellum the sonne of Iabes reigned in 50 30th yeare of 5 Azarias kyng of Iuda, 5 reigned one moneth at Samaria. For Manahem the sonne of Gadi wete vp from Thirza, came to Samaria, and smote Sellum the sonne of Iabes at Samaria, slew him, and was kyng in his steade.

What more there is to saye of Sellum, of his sedicion which he stered vp, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. At the same tymne dyd Manahem smyte Tiphsa, all were therin, the coastes therof from Thirza, because they wolde not let him in, and smote all their wemen with childe, and rypte them vp.

In the nyne 30th yeare of Azarias kyng of Iuda, beganne Manahem the sonne of Gad to reigne ouer Israel ten yeares at Samaria, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the Lorde. As longe as he lyued, departed he not from the synnes of Ieroboaem the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. And Phul the kyng of Assyria came in to the fode. And Manahem gauue vnto Phul a thousande talents of syluer to holde with him, and to cofirme him in the kyngdom. And Manahem rayesd vp a taxe in Israel vpon the richest, fiftie Sycles of syluer vpon everyone man, to geue vnto the kyng of Assyria. So the kyng of Assyria wete home agayne, and taried not in the londe.

What more there is to saye of Manahem, all he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Manahem fell on slepe with his fathers. And Pechahia his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the fiftieth yeare of Azarias kyng of Iuda, beganne Pechahia the sonne of Manahem to reigne ouer Israel at Samaria two yeares, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the Lorde: for he departed not fro the synnes of Ieroboaem sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. And Pechahia the sonne of Romelia his kynghite conspyred against him, smote him at Samaria in the palace of the kynges house with Argob and Aria, and fiftie men with him of all childr of Gilead, slew him, was kyng in his steade. What more there is to saye of Pechahia, all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel.

In the two and fiftieth yeare of Azarias kyng of Iuda, beganne Pechah the sonne of Romelia to reigne ouer Israel at Samaria,
The rbi. Chapter.

In the seventeenth yeare of Pecah the sonne of Romelia was Achas the sonne of Iotham kynge of Iuda. Twentye yeare old was Achas when he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Jerusalem. His fathers name was Ierusu the doughter of Sadok. And he dyed which was right in the sighte of the LORDE, dyinge vnto all as dyd Osias his father, saungye that he put not downe the hye places: for the people offered a brent incensce yet vpon the hye places. He buylde the hye porte of the house of the LORDE. What more there is to saye of Iotham, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda.

At the same tyme beganne the LORDE to sende Rezin the kynge of Syria, and Pecah the sonne of Romelia in to Iuda. And Iotham fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid his father. And Achas his sonne was kynge in his steade.

And kyng Achas brake downe the seates, and put awaye the *ketell from aboue, and toke the laner from the brassen bullockes that were there vnder, and set it vpon y pauenent of stone. And the pulpit for the Sabbath which they had buyled in the house, and y entraye of the kynges house turned he vnto the house of the LORDE, for the kyng of Assirias sake.

What more there is to saye of Achas, what he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in y Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Achas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of David. And Ezechias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xviiij. Chapter.

IN the twelth yeare of Achas the kyng of Iuda, begaine Oseas y sonne of Ela to reigne over Iserael at Samaria nyne yeare, and dyd y which was euell in y sighte of the LORDE, but not as y kynges of Israel y were before him. Agaynst him dyd Salmanasr y kyng of Assiria come vp. And Oseas was subjicte vnto him, and was sent messaungers to Sua y kyng of Egipte, and was sent messaungers to Sua. And the kyng of Assiria perceaued y Oseas had conspyred, and was sent messaungers to Sua y kyng of Egipte, and was sent messaungers to Sua. And in the nyenth yeare of Oseas dyd y kyng of Assiria wynne Samaria, and caried Israel awaye in to Assiria, and set them at Halah and at Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Medees.

For when the childre of Israel synned agaynst y LORDE their God (y broughte the out of y londe of Egipte, from the hade of Pharao kyng of Egipte) and servyd other goddes: and walked after the customes of the Heythen, whom the LORDE had dryuen out before the children of Israel, and dyd as the kynges of Israel, and prouoked y LORDE their God, and dyd secretive the things that were not righte in the sighte of y LORDE their God: namely in that they buylded them hye places in all cities, both in castels and stronge cities, and set vp pilers and groues, vpon all hye hilles, and amongst all grene trees, and brent incense there in all y hye places, even as dyd the Heythen, whom the LORDE had cast out before them, and wroughte wicked things, wherwith they prouked the LORDE vnto wrath, and serued the Idols, wherof the LORDE sayde vnto them : I Ye shal not do soch a thyngye.

And when the LORDE testified in Israel and Iuda by all the prophetes and Seers, sayenge: * O turne agayne from youre euell wayes, and kepe my commandementes and ordynaunces, accordinge to all y lawe which I gaue vnto youre fathers, and that I sent vnto you by my seruanutes the prophetes: they wolde not herken,  but herden their neckes, accordinge to the hardneck of their fathers, which belene not on the LORDE their God. Yee they despysed his ordynaunces and his covenunt which he made with their fathers, and his testimonys which he witnesed amongethe them, and walked in their awne vanities, and became vayne folowinge the Heythen, which dwelt rounde about them, concernyng whom the LORDE had commaunded them, that they shulde not do as they dyd. Neuertheles they forsoke all the commandementes of the LORDE their God, and made them two molten calues and groues, and worshipped all the boost of heauen, and serued Baal, and causd their sonnes and daughter to go thorow the fyre, and medled with sothsayers and wyches, and gaue them selues ouer to do that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, to prouke him vnto wrath.

Then was the LORDE very wroth at Iserael, and put them awaye fro his presence, so y there remayned nomo but onely y trybe of Iuda. Nether dyd Iuda kepe the commandemente of the LORDE their God, but walked after the customes of Israel, which they dyd. Therfore dyd y LORDE cast awaye all y sede of Israel, and troubled them, and deleyuered them in to the handes of the spoylers, yyll he had cast them out of his presence: for Israel was deuyded from the house of David. And they made the a kyng, one Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat, which turned Israel back from the LORDE, caused the children of Israel to synne so sore. Thus walked the children of Israel in all synnes of Jeroboam, which he had done, departed not from them, vntyll the LORDE put Israel out of his presence, acordinge as he had spoken by all his seruantes y prophetes. So Israel was carried awaye out of their awne londe to Assiria vnto this daye.

The kyng of Assiria caused men to come fro Babylon, from Cutha, fro Aua, from Hemath fro Sepharuaim, caused the to inhabit synes in Samaria in stead of the children of Israel. And they toke possession of Samaria, dwelt in same cities. But wha they begane to dwell there, feared not the LORDE, the LORDE sent lyons amoge the, which slew them. And they caused it be sayde vnto the kyng of Assiria: The Heythen whom thou hast broughte hither, caused them to inhabit the cities of Samaria, knowe not the lawe of the LORDE of the londe. Therefore hath he sent lyons amoge them, beholde, they slaye the, because they knowe not the ordinance of the God of the londe.

The kyng of Assiria commaunded saide: Bringe thither one of your prestes were carried awaye fro thence let him go thither, dwell there, teach the the ordinance of the God of the londe. Then came one of your prestes which were carried awaye from Samaria, dwelt at Bethel, taught them how they shulde feare the LORDE. But every people made their goddes, put the in the houses uppon the hie places, which the Samaritanes had made, everye people i their cities wherein they dwelt. They of Babilo made Sochoth Benoth. They of Chut made Nergel. They of Hemath made Asima. They of Aua made Nibheas Tharthak. They of Sepharuaim burnt their sonnes vnto Adramelech and Anamelch goddes of the of Sepharuaim.

And whyle they feared the LORDE, they made prestes in the hie places of the lowest amongst them. put them in houses of the hie places: thus they feared the LORDE, served their goddes also, acordinge to the custome of every nation, from whence they were broughte. And vnto this daye do they after the olde fashion, so they nether feare the LORDE, ner yet kepe their awne ordi-

The third yeare of Oseas sonne of Ela kyng of Israel, reigned Ezechias sonne of Achas kyng of Juda. And he was fyue and twentie yeare olde when he was made kyng, reigned nyne years twentieth yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Abi the daughter of Zachary. And he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, acordinge vnto all as dyd Daudid his father. He put awaye the hie places, and brake downe the pilers, rooted out the groues, and brake the brasen serpente which Moses had made. For vnto that tyne had the children of Israel bren incense vnto it. And it was called Nehusthan. He put his trust in the LORDE God of Israel, that after him there was not his like amoge all the kynges of Juda nether had bene before him. He cleued vnto the LORDE, and departed not backe from him, and kepte his commaundements, which the LORDE had commaunded Moses. And the LORDE was with him. And whither so euer he wete forth, he behaued him selfe wysely. He resisted the kyng of Assiria, and was not subdued vnto him.
In the fourth yeare of Ezechias kyng of Iuda* (the seventh yeare of Oseas the sonne of Ela kyng of Israel) came Salmanasar the kyng of Assiria vp agaynst Samaria, and layed sege vnto it, and wanne it after three yeares in the sixe yeare of Ezechias, that is in the nyeneth yeare of Oseas kyng of Israel, the was Samaria wonne. And the kyng of Assiria caried Israel awaye vnto Assiria, and set them at Halah and Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Meedes. And all because they herdken not vnto the voyce of the LORDE their God, and had transgressed his couenaunt: And as for all that Moses the seruanant of the LORDE had commaundeth, they had nether herdken vnto any of those, nor done them.

In the fourthe yeare of kyng Ezechias dyd Sennacherib of Assiria come vp agaynst all the strong cities of Iuda, and cought them. Then sent Ezechias the kyng of Iuda to of Assiria vnto Lachis, sayenge: I haue offended, turne backe fro me: loke what thou layest vnto me, I wil beare it. Thé the kyng of Assiria layed vp Ezechias the kyng of Iuda, ethh hundreth talentes of syluer, thrty talentes of golde. So Ezechias gaue all syluer was fonde in house of the LORDE, in the treasures of kynges house. At same tyme brake Ezechias the kyng of Iuda the dores of the týple of LORDE, the plates of golde which he him selfe had caused to laye ouer the, gaue the vnto the kyng of Assiria.

And the kyng of Assiria sent Thartan, and the chefe chamberlaine, the chefe butler from Lachis to kyng Ezechias with a greate power vnto Jerusalem. And they wete vp: and when they came there, they stode styll at the condyte by the ouer pole, which lyeth in the waye vpó the fullers londe, and called vnto the kyng. Thé came there forth vnto them Eliachim the sonne of Helchias the steweare, and Sobna the scrybe, Ioah the sonne of Assaph the Secretary.

And the chefe butler sayde vnto the: Tell kyng Ezechias: Thus sayeth of Assiria: What presumptioon is this Athou trustest vnto? Thinkest thou, Athou hast yet counsell and power to fighte? Where vnto trustest thou then, that thou art fallen of fro me? Beholde, puttest thou thy trust in this broken staffe of rede, in Egipte, which who leathan vpon, it shall go in to his hande, pearse it thorow. Euen so is Pharaoh the kyng of Egipte vnto all them that put their trust in him. But ye wil wole saye vnto me: We put our trust in LORDE oure God. Is not that he, whose hye places and altares Ezechias hath také downe, and sayde vnto Iuda and Jerusalem: Before this altare which is at Jerusalem, shal ye worshippe?

Make a multitude now therfore vnto my lorde the kyng of Assiria, and I wil geue two thousandes horses, let se ye thou be able to man them: how wilt thou then endure before the smalles prynce of my lorde subjectes? And trustest thou vnto Egipte because of the charrettes and horsmen? But thinkest thou that I came vp hither without LORDE to destroye these cities? The LORDE hath commaundeth me: Go vp in to that londe and destroye it.

Then sayde Eliachim the sonne of Helchia of Sobna and Ioah vnto the chefe butler: Speke to thy seruanantes in the Syrias language, for we vnderstonde it, and speake not vnto vs in the Iewes speche before the eares of the people that are vpon the wall. Neuertheless chefe butler sayde vnto the: Hath my lorde then sent me vnto thy lorde, or to the, to speake these wordes? Yee euens vnto the men, which syt vpon the wall, that they maye eate their owne dounge and drynke their owne stalle with you. So the chefe butler stode and cried with loud vowe in the Iewes language, and spake and sayde: Heare the wordes of the greate kyng the kyng of Assiria. Thus sayeth the kyng: Let not Ezechias disceau you, for he is not able to deluyer you fro my hâde: let not Ezechias make you to trust in the LORDE, sayenge: The LORDE shall deluyer vs, and this cite shal not be geuen in to the handes of kyng of Assiria. Folowe not ye Ezechias, for thus sayeth the kyng of Assiria:

Do me this blesseynge, and come forth vnto me, so shall euery man eate of his vyne and of his fygge tre, and drynke of his well, till I come my selfe and fetch you in to a londe, which is like youre awne lode, wherin is corne, wyne, bred, wynyards, oyle trees, oyle and honie, so shal ye lyue, and not dye. Folowe not ye Ezechias, for he disceaueth you, when he sayeth: The LORDE shal delyuer vs.

* Haue the goddes of the Heythen delyuered every one his londe from the hande of the kyng of Assiria? Where are the goddes of Hemath and Arphad? Where are the goddes of Sepharuaim Hena and Iua? Haue they delyuered Samaria fro my hande? Where is there one god amonge the goddes of all londes, which hath delyuered his londe fro my hande? that the LORDE shulde delyuer Ierusalem fro my hande.

As for the people, they helde their peace, and gaue him no answere: for the kyng had commaund and sayde: Answere him no-thinge. Then came Eliachim the sonne of Helchia y\(^{1}\) stewarte, and Sobna the scrye, and Ioah the sonne of Assaph the Secretary vnto Ezechias with rente clothes, and tolde him the wordes of the chefe butler.

The rire. Chapter.

WHAN Ezechias \(\ddot{y}\) kyng herde this, he rente his clothes, \(\ddot{y}\) put on a sackcloth, \(\ddot{y}\) wente in to \(\ddot{y}\) house of the LORDE, \(\ddot{y}\) sent Eliachim the stewarte \(\ddot{y}\) Sobna the Scrybe with the Eldrest preestes, clothed in sack cloth, vnto the prophet Esay \(\ddot{y}\) sonne of Amos, \(\ddot{y}\) they saide vnto hym: Thus sayeth Ezechias: This is a daye of trouble, \(\ddot{y}\) of defaunce \(\ddot{y}\) blasphemy. The childre are come to the byrth, \(\ddot{y}\) there is no strength to be delyuered of them. \(\ddot{y}\) happly the LORDE thy God wil heare all the wordes of \(\ddot{y}\) chefe butler, whom his lorde the kyng of Assiria hath sent, to blasphemie \(\ddot{y}\) lyuyng God, \(\ddot{y}\) to defye hym with soch wordes as the LORDE thy God hath herde, therfore lifte thou vnto thy prayer for the remnaunt, which are yet lefte behinde.

And wha kyng Ezechias seruauntes came to Esay, Esay sayde vnto them: Speake thus vnto youre lorde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Fear not thou the wordes \(\ddot{y}\) thou hast herde, wherwith the kyng of Assirias seruauntes haue blaspheme me. Beholde, I wil put him in another mynde, so \(\ddot{y}\) he shal heare tydinges, \(\ddot{y}\) go agayne in to his owne countr, \(\ddot{y}\) and in his owne londe wil I cause him to fall thorow the swerde.

And when \(\ddot{y}\) chefe butlar came agayne, he founde the kyng of Assiria fightinge agaynst Libna: for he had herde that he was departed from Lachis. And he herde of Taracha the kyng of the Morians: Beholde, he is gone forth to fighte with the. Then turned he back, \(\ddot{y}\) sent messaungers to Ezechias, \(\ddot{y}\) caused to saye vnto hym: Let not thy God disceauethe the, on whom thou trustest \(\ddot{y}\) sayest: Ierusalem shal not be geu\(\ddot{e}\) in to the h\(\ddot{u}\)de of the kyng of Assiria. Beholde, thou hast herde what the kynges of Assiria haue done vnto all londes, \(\ddot{y}\) how they d\(\ddot{a}\)ned them, \(\ddot{y}\) shalt thou be delyuered? Haue \(\ddot{y}\) goddes of \(\ddot{y}\) Heithen delyuered the, whom my father destroyed, as Gosan, Haram, Reseph, \(\ddot{y}\) the childre of Eden which were at Thalassar? Where is \(\ddot{y}\) kyng of Hemath, \(\ddot{y}\) kyng of Arphad, \(\ddot{y}\) \(\ddot{y}\) kinge of \(\ddot{y}\) cite Sepharuaim, Hena \(\ddot{y}\) Iua?

And when Ezechias had receaued the letters of the messaungers and had red them, he wente vp vnto the house of the LORDE, and layed them abrode before the LORDE, \(\ddot{y}\) made his prayer before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, thou that syest vnto the Cherubins, thou onely art God amonge all \(\ddot{y}\) kyngdomes of the earth, thou hast made heauen and earth. Enclayne thine eare O LORDE, and heare: open thine eyes, and beholde, and heare the wordes of Sennacherib, which hath sent hither to blasphem the lyuyng God. It is true (O LORDE) that the kynges of Assiria haue destroyed the Heythen and their londe with the swerde, and haue cast their goddes in the fyre: for they were not Goddes, but \(\ddot{y}\) worke of m\(\ddot{e}\)s hondes, wodd and stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. But now O LORDE helpe thou vs out of his hande, that all the kyngdomes vpon earth maye knowe, that thou LORDE art God alone.

Then sent Esay the sonne of Amos vnto Ezechias, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me concernyng the lyuyng God of Assiria, I haue herde it. This is it that the LORDE hath spoken agaynst hym: He hath despysed \(\ddot{y}\) and mocked the O virgin thou daughtyr Sion: he hath shak\(\ddot{e}\) his head at the O daughtyr Jerusalem. \(\ddot{y}\) Whom hast thou despysed \(\ddot{y}\) blaspheme? Ouer whom hast thou lifte vp thy voyce? Eue agaynst \(\ddot{y}\) holy one in Israel hast thou lifte vp thine eyes: thou hast blasphemed ¥ LORDE by thy messaungeth, and sayde: Thorow the multitude of my charretes haue I gone vp to the toppes of the mountaynes, vp on the sydes of Libanus. I haue hewen downe his lyte Ceders and his chosen Pyne trees, and am come to the vtement habitation of the wod of Carmel that belongeth vnto it. I haue dyddd and drenke vp the strange waters, and with ¥ soles of my fete haue I dyddd vp the See.

But hast thou not herde how that I haue done this longe ago, and haue prepared it from the begynnynge? Now haue I cauased it for to come, that contencious stronge cities mighte fall in to a waist heape of stones, ¥ they that dwell therin, shal be faynte, and fearfull and a shamed, ¥and shal be as the grasse vpon the feld, and as ¥ grene herbe and hay vpon the house toppes, that wythereth afore it be growne vp. ¥ I knowe thy habitation, thy out and ingoynge, and that thou ragest against me. For so moch then as thou ragest against me, and soynge thy presumptions is come vp to myne eares, therefore wyll I put a ryngge in thy nose, and a bridle bytt in thy lippes, and wyll bryngge the agayne, euene the same wythe thou camest.

And let this be a token vnto the O Ezechias. In this yeare eate ¥ which is fallen, in the seconde yeare soch as groweth of it selfe: In ¥ thirde yeare sowe and reape, and plante vnyardes, and eate the frute therof. And the daughter Luda which is escaped ¥ remayneth, shall from hence forth take rote beneth, and beare frute abone. For the remaunnt shall go forth from Jerusalem, ¥ they ¥ are escaped, shall go out fro mount Sion. The gelousy of the LORDE Zebaoth shall bryngge this to passe.

Thenerefor thus sayeth the LORDEcernyng ¥ kynge of the Assyrians: He shall not come in to this cite, and shall shute no arowe therin, nether shall there come eny shylde before it, nether shall he dygge eny bace aboute it, but shal go agayne the waye that he came, and shall not come in to this cite, sayeth the LORDE: and I wyll defende this cite, to helpe it for myne awne sake, and for my seruaunt Dauids sake.

And in the same nighte wente the angell of the LORDE, and smote in the hoost of the Assyrians, an hundreth and fyve and foure score thousande men. And when they gatte them vp in the mornynge, behold, all laye full of deed coares. ¥ So Sennacherib the kinge of Assyria brake vp, and departed, and returned, and abode at Ninieue. And as he worshipped in ¥ house of Nesrach his god, his awne sonnes Adramalech and Sarazer smote him with the swerde, and fled in to ¥ londe of Ararat. And Asarbadon his some was kynge in his steade.

The 74. Chapter.

AT that tyme was Ezechias deedesick. ¥ And the prophet Esay ¥ sonne of Amos, came to him, ¥ sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth ¥ LORDE: Set thine house in ordre for thou shalt dye ¥ not lyue. And he turned, his face to the wall, and prayed vnto ¥ LORDE, and sayde: Remembre (O LORDE) that I haue walked faithfully before the, ¥ with a perfecte hert, and haue done ¥ which is good in thy syghte. And Ezechias wepte sore. But when Esay was not gone out of halfe the cite, ¥ worde of ¥ LORDE came to him, ¥ sayde: Turne back, ¥ tell Ezechias ¥ prynce of my people: Thus sayeth ¥ LORDE God of thy father Dauid: I haue herde thy praier, ¥ considered thy teares. Beholde, I wil heale ¥: on the thirde daye shal thou go in to ¥ house of the LORDE, ¥ fiftene yeares wil I addde vnto thy lyfe, ¥ wil deluyer the ¥ this cite from the kynge of Assyria, ¥ this cite wil I defende for myne awne sake, and for my seruaunt Dauid's sake. And Esay sayde: Bringe hither a quantite of fygges. And when they broughte them, they layed them vpon the sore, and it was healed.

Ezechias sayde vnto Esay: Which is ¥ token, that the LORDE will heale me, and that I shal go vp in to the house of ¥ LORDE on the thirde daye? Esay sayde: This token shal thou haue of the LORDE, that the LORDE shal do acordynge as he hath sayde. Shall the shadowe go ten degrees forwarde, or shal it turne ten degrees backwarde? Ezechias sayde: It is an easy thinge for the shadowe to go ten degrees downewarde, ¥ is not my mynyde: but that it go ten degrees backwarde. Then cryed the prophet Esay vnto the LORDE, ¥ and the shadowe wente backe ten degrees in Achas Dyall, which he was descended afore.

At the same tyme Merodach Baladan the sonne of Baladan kyng of Babilon, sent letters and presentes vnto Ezechias, for he had herde that Ezechias had bene sick. And Ezechias reioyzed with them, and shewed them all the house of rotes, the syluer, golde, spyeses, and the best oyle, and the house of ordaine, and all that was founde in his treasures. There was nothinge in his house and in all his do-myion, but Ezechias shewed it them.

Then came Esay the prophet vnto kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto hym: WHAT haue these men sayde? and whence came they vnto the? Ezechias sayde: They came to me out of a farre countrie, euen from Babilon. He sayde: What haue they sene in thyne house? Ezechias sayde: They haue sene all that is in my house, and there is nothyng in my treasurers but I haue shewed it them. Then sayde Esay vnto Ezechias: Heare the worde of the LORDE: Beholde, *the tyme commeth, that it shall all be caried awaye vnto Babilon, and whatsoever thy fathers haue layed vp vnto this daye, and there shall nothinge be lefte, sayeth the LORDE. *Yee and the children which come of the, whom thou shalt beget, shalbe taken awaye, to be chamberlaynes in the kyngge of Babilons palace. Ezechias sayde vnto Esay: It is good that the LORDE hath spoken. And he sayde morouer: Let there be peace yet and faithfulnesse in my tyme.

What more there is to saye of Ezechias, and all his power, and what he dyd, and of the pole and water condyte, wher by he conveyed water in to the cite, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kyngges of Iuda. *And Ezechias fell on slepe with his fathers, and Manasses his sonne was kyngge in his steade.

The 111. Chapter.

MANASSES was twelve yeare olde, whan he was made kynge, and reigned fyue and fiftie yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hephziba. And he dyd that which was euell in the sight of the LORDE (euen after the abominacon of the Heithen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and waxed frowarde, and builded vp the hye places which his father Ezechias had destroyed, and set vp Baals altares, and made groues (as Achab the kyngge of Israel dyd) and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. And buylded altares in the LORDES house, wherof the LORDE sayde: I wyll set my name at Jerusalem. And in both the courtes of the house of the LORDE buylded he altares vnto all the hoost of heauene. And *cause his sonne to go thorow the fyre, and regarded byrdeseryenge and tokens, and maynteyned soythayers, and expounders of tokens, and so mouch dyd he of this which was euell in the sight of the LORDE, that he prouoked him vnto wrath.

A groue Idol also which he had made, set he in the house, wherof the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid and to Salomon his sonne: In this house, and at Jerusalem (lwhich I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel) wil I set my name for euer, and wyll not cause *fote of Israel to be removed any more from the londe, which I gaue vnto their fathers, yee so that they obserue and do acordyngge vnto all that I haue charged them, and after all the lawe that my seruaut Moses commaunded them. Neuertheles they wolde not herken, but Manasses diseaued them, so they dyd worse then the Heithen, whom the LORDE expelled before *children of Israel.

Then spake the LORDE by his seruants the prophets, and saide: Because that Manasse the kyngge of Iuda hath gone these abominacions, which are worse then all *abominacions that the Amorites haue done which were before them, and hath caused Iuda also to synne agaynst their God, theryfore thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: *Beholde, I wyll brynyge soch a plagge vpon Jerusalem and Iuda, that who so euer heareth it, both his eares shal glowe, and ouer Jerusalem wyll I strech forth the lyne of Samaria, and the weighte of the house of Achab, and wyll wype out Jerusalem, euen as one wypeth a platter, and I wyll ouerthrowe it. And *remnaunt of myne inheritance wil I cast out, *scater them abrode, *wil deluyer them in to the hades of their enemies, to be spoyld and rent of all their enemies: because they haue done *which is euell in my sighte, *haue prouoked me vnto wrath, sence the daye that I broughte their fathers out of Egipte, vnto this daye. Manasses also shed exceedinge moch innocet bloude, so longe tyll Ierusale was full on euery syde, without the synunes.
wherewith he caused Iuda for to synne, so they dyd that which was euell in the sight of the LORDE.

What more there is to saie of Manasses, and all that he dyd, and his synnes which he commytted, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Manasses fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in the garden besyde his house, namely, in the garden of Vsa, and Amon his sonne was kyng in his steade.

"Two and twentye yeare olde was Amon whan he was made kyng, he reigned two yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Mesumeleth, his daughter of Harus of Iatba, and he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done, and walked in all the waye which his father walked, and serued the Idolis which his father had serued, and worshipped them, and forsoke the LORDE, the God of his father, and walked not in the waye of the LORDE.

And his seruauntes conspyred against Amon, he slewe the kyng in his house. But the people of the londe slewe all them he had conspyred against kyng Amon. And the people of the londe made Iosias his sonne kyng in his steade. As for other things that Amon dyd, beholde, they are wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And he was buried in his grave in Vsas gardé. And Iosias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xiii. Chapter.

I OSIAS was eightye yeare olde when he was made kyng, he reigned one and thirtie yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Jedida the daughter of Adaia of Baschath, and he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in all waye of David his father, he turned not asyde, neither to the righte hande ner to the lefte.

And in the eighteenth yeare of kyng Iosias, the kyng sent Saphan his sonne of Asaia the sonne of Mesulam the scrybe, in to the house of the LORDE, and sayde: "Go vp to Helchias the prest prest, that the money that is brought vnto the house of the LORDE (which the tresholde kepers haue gathered of) maye be delyuered vnto them, that they maye geue it to the workmen which are appoynted in the house of the LORDE, to geue it vnto the labourers in the house (they maye repayre the decaye of the house) namely, vnto the carpenters, and buildyers, masons, and to them bye tie timber for the repairinge of the house: but so they there be no accompltes taken of them concernynge the money, that is vnder their hande, but they deale withall vpon credence.

And Helchias the prest sayde: I haue founde the boke of the lawe in the house of the LORDE. And Helchias gaue the boke vnto Saphan, that he might reade it. And Saphan the scrybe bare it vnto the kyng, and brought him wordes agayne, and sayde: Thy seruauntes haue gathered together money was founde in the house, and haue delyuered it vnto the workmen which are appoynted in the house of the LORDE. And Saphan the scrybe tode the kyng and sayde: Helchias the prest hath delyuered me a boke, and Saphan red it before the kyng.

But when the kyng herd the wordes of the boke of lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kyng commaunded Helchias the prest, Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, Achbor the sonne of Michaia, and Saphan the scribe, and sayde: Go your waye and axe councell at the LORDE for me, for the people, and for all Iuda, concerning the wordes of this boke that is founde: for greate is the wrath of the LORDE that is kyndled ouer vs, because oure fathers haue not herkened vnto the wordes of this boke, to do all that is wrytten vnto vs therin.

Then wente Helchias the prest, and Ahicam, Achbor, Saphan and Asaia, and went vnto Hulda the prophetisses wife of Sellú the sonne of Thecua the sonne of Harbam the keper of the clothes, and she dwelt at Jerusalem in the seconde porte, and they spake vnto her. And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man that sent you vnto me, Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I wil bryng euell vpon this place, and the inhabiter therof, even all the wordes of the lawe which the kyng hath caused to be red, because they haue forsaken me, and brent incense vnto other goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath with all the workes of their handes. Therefore is my wrath kindled against this cite, and shall not be quenched.

But tell this vnto the kyng of Iuda, which hath sent you to axe councell at the LORDE: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Because thine hert is not departed fro the wordes which thou hast herde, and hast humbled thyselfe before the LORDE, to heare what I haue spoken agaynst this place and the inhabitants thereof (how that they shall become a very desolacion and curse) y hast rente thy clothes, and wepte before me, I haue herde it, sayeth the LORDE: *therefore wyll I gather the vnto thy fathers, so y thou shalt be put in to thy graue in peace, and thine eyes shall not se all the euell that I wyll brynge vpon this place. And they brought the kynges wordes agayne.

The rixij. Chapter.

AND the kynges sent forth, and *all the Elders in Iuda and Ierusalem resorted vnto him, and the kyng wynte vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda, and all the inhabitants of Ierusalem with him, the prestes and prophete and all the people both small and greate, *and all the wordes of the boke of the covenante that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And the kyng stode vpon a piler, *and made a covenante before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, and to kepe his commanundements, witnesses, and ordinaunces with all their hert and with all their soule, y they shulde set vp the wordes of this covenante, which are wrytten in this boke. And all the people entred in to the covenante.

And the kynges commaundad Helchias the hye prest, and the prestes of the seconde course, and the kepers of the thresholde, y they shulde put out of the temple all the vessels which were made for Baal, and for the groe, and for all the hoost of heauen, y he brent them without Ierusalem in the valley of Cedron, and the dust of them was caried vnto Bethel.

And he put downe the Kemurims, whô the kynges of Iuda had founded, to brende incense vpon the hye places, in the cities of Iuda, and aboute Ierusalem. He put downe also them that brent incense vnto Baal, to the Sonne, and the Mone, and the twelue tokens, and to all y hoost of heauen. And the groe caused he to be caried from the house of the LORDE out of Jerusalem in to y valley of Cedron, and brent it in the valley of Cedron, and made it to dust, and cast the dust vpon the graues of y comen people. And he brake downe the whorekepers houses which were by the house of the LORDE, wherin the wemen made mansions for the groe.

And he caused all the prestes for to come out of the cities of Iuda, and suspendered y hye places, where the prestes brent incense, from Geba vnto Berseba. And brake downe the hye places in the portes, that were at y dore of the gate of Josua y shrene of the cite, at the lefte hande as one goeth to the cite porte. Yet had not the prestes of the hye places offred vpon the altare of the LORDE at Jerusalem, but ate vnleunned bred amongetheir brethren.

He suspendered *Tophet also in the valley of the children of Emion, that no man shulde cause his sonne or his daughter to go thorow y fyre vnto Moloch. And he put downe the horses, which y kynges of Iuda had set vnto the Sonne, at the intringe in to the house of the LORDE, besyde the chest of Netham Melech the chamberlayne which was at Parnarim, and the charettes of the Sonne brent he with fyre, and the altare vpon the rofe of Achabs perler, which the kynges of Iuda had made. And the altare *which Manasses had made in the two courtes of the house of the LORDE, dyd the kyng breke downe. And ranne from thence, and cast the dust of them in to the broke Cedron.

And the hye places that were before Ierusalem on the righte hande of Mount Mashith *which Salomon the kyngge of Israel had buylded vnto Asaroth the abhominacion of Sidon, and to Camos the abhominacion of Moab, and to Malcom the abhominacion of the children of Ammon, those did the kyngge suspende, and brake the pilers, and roeted out the groues, and fylled their places with mens bones.

And the altare at Bethel, and the hye place that Ieroobam the sonne of Nebat made, which caused Israel to synne, the same altare brake he downe, and the hye place, y brent the hye place, and made it to dust, and brent vp the groe. And Iosias turned him aboute, and sawe the graues that were vpô the mount, and caused the bones to be fetched out of the graves, and brench them vpô the altare, and suspeended it, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, * which the man of God cryed out, that tolde this before.

And he sayde: What titell is this, that I se here? And the men of the cite sayde vnto him: It is the graue of the man of God, which came from Iuda, and cried out this that thou hast done agaynst ý altare of Bethel. And he sayde: Let him lye, no man touche his bones. Thus were his bones deluyered with the bones of the prophet that came from Samaria.

He put awaye also all the houses of the hye places in the cities of Samaria (which the kynges of Israel had made to prouoke ý LORDE vnto wrath) and dyd with them acordinge to all as he had done at Bethel. And all ý prestes of the hye places that were there, ofred he vp vpon the altare, and tso brench he mens bones theron, and came agayne to Jerusalem.

*And the kyng commaundede the people, and sayde: Kepe Easter vnto the LORDE youre God, * as it is wrytten in the boke of this covenant. For there was no Easter so kepte as this, sence the tyme of the Judges which judged Israel, and in all the tymes of the kynges of Israel, and of the kynges of Iuda: but in the eighteenth yeare of kynges Iosias, was this Easter kepte vnto the LORDE at Jerusalem.

And Iosias expelled all soothsayers, expounders of tokès, ymage and Idols, and all the abominacions which were sene in the londe of Iuda and at Jerusalem, that he mighte set vp the wordes of the lawe, which were wrytten in the boke, that Helchias ý prest foude in the house of ý LORDE.

His like was no kyng before him, which so couered vnto ý LORDE with all his hert, with all his soule, * with all his strengthe, acordinge to all the lawe of Moses. And after him came there not vp soch another. Yet turned not the LORDE from the indignacion of his greate wrath, wherin he was displeasewe ouer Iuda, because of all the prouoeacion wherewith Manasses had prouoked him. And ý LORDE sayde: * I wil put Iuda out of my presence also, euens as I have put awaye Israel: and this cite which I have chosen, wyl I cast out, namely, Jerusalem, * the house whereof I sayde: My name shalbe there. What more there is to saye of Iosias, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda.

*In his tyme wihte Pharao Necho ý kyng of Egipte vp agaynst the kynges of Assyr by the water Euphrates. But kynges Iosias wente agaynst him, and dyed at Megiddo, whi he had sene him. And his seruauntes caried him deed frô Megiddo, * brought him to Ierusalē, * bouryd him in his graue. And the people of the londe toke if Iahas the sonne of Iosias, and anoynted hym, and made hym kyng in his fathers steade.

Thre * twenty yeare olde was Iahas whi he was made kyng, * reigned thre monethes at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Hamutal * daughter of Ieremia of Libna. And he dyd ý which was euell in ý sight of ý LORDE, euens as his fathers had done. But Pharao Necho toke him presoner of Reblatha in the londe of Hemath, * he shulde not reigne at Ierusalem: * rayed a taxe vp the londe, an hundreth talces of siluer, * one talente of golde.

And Pharao Necho made Eliachim * sonne of Iosias kyng in his father Iosias steade, * turned his name Iaichim. * But Iahas toke he, * brought him in to Egipte where he dyed. And Iaichim gau the siluer * golde vnto Pharao, yet taxed he the londe, * he mighte geue ý siluer acordyng to Pharaos commaundemement. Every one amonge the people in ý londe taxed he after his ableite in siluer golde, to geue it vnto Pharao. Fyue * twenty yeare olde was Iaichim when he was made kyng, * reigned euell yeares at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Sebida * daughter of Pedaia of Ruma, * he dyd euell in the sight of the LORDE, euens as his fathers had done.

The rruuii. Chapter.

In his tyme came vp Nabuchodonosor * kyng of Babilton, * Iaichim was in subieccon vnto him iij. yeares. And he turned back, and rebelled agaynst hym. And ý LORDE sent men of warre vpoun him out of Chaldea, out of Syria, out of Moab, * frô amonge the childr of Ammon, * caused the for to come in to Iuda, to destroie it acordynge to the wordes of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruauntes the prophetes. It fortuned euë so vnto Iuda, acordynge to the wordes of the LORDE, that he wolde put them awaie from his presence, because of the sinnes of Manasses which he dyd, a because of the innocent blonde that he shed. And he fyllèd Jerusalem with innocent blonde, therfore wolde not the LORDE be reconcyled.

What more there is to saye of Ioachim, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Ioachim fell on slepe with his fathers. And

And Ioachim his sole was kyng in his steade. And the kyng of Egipte came nomore out of his londe: for the kyng of Babilon had conquered all that was the kyng of Egiptes, from the ryuer of Egipte vnto the wyde Euphrates. Eightene yeare olde was Ioachim when he was made kyng, and reigned thre monethes at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Nebustha the doughter of Elanathan of Jerusalem. And he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, euen as his father had done.

At the same tyne wente the seruauntes of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon vp to Jerusalem, and came vpon the cyte with ordinance of warre. And when Nabuchodonosor and his seruauntes came to the cyte they layèd sege vnto it. But Ioachim the kyng of Iuda wente forth to the kyng of Babilon with his mother, with his seruauntes, with his rulers and chamberlaynys. And the kyng of Babilon receaued him in the euyte yeare of his reigne.

And he toke forth fro thence all the treasure in the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and brake all the golden vessell Salomon the kyng of Israel had made in the house of the LORDE (acordynge as the LORDE had sayd) and caried awaie all Jerusalem, all the rulers, all the mightie men, euë ten thousand presoners, and all the carpenters, and all the smithes, and lefte none behyne but the poore people of the londe.

And he caried Ioachim vnto Babilon, and the kynges mother, the kynges wyues, and his chamberlaynes: and they mightie men of the londe led he awaie presoners also from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and seven thousand of the best men, and a thousand carpenters and smythe, and all the stronge men of warre.

And the kyng of Babilon made Matania his vnele kyng in his steade, and turned his name Sedechias.

One and twentie yeare olde was Sedechias, when he was made kyng, and reigned euell yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Amithal the doughter of Jeremia of Libna. And he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, euë as Ioachim dyd: for thus fortuned it vnto Jerusalem thorow the wrath of the LORDE, thyll he had cast them out fro his presence. And Sedechias fell awaye fro the kyng of Babilon.

The 17th Chapter.

And it fortuned, that in the nyenth yeare of his reigne, vpon the tenth daye of the tenth moneth, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon came with all his power agaynst Jerusalem. And they laied sege vnto it, and bylyded stronge holdes rounde aboute it. Thus was the cite beseged vnto the eleuyte yeare of kyng Sedechias. But on the nyenth daye of the fourth moneth was the honger so stronge in the cite, that the people of the londe had no thinge to eate. And the cite was broken vp, a all the men of warre fled in the night by the waye of the porte betwene the two walles, which goeth to the kynges gardè. But the Caldees laye aboute the cite. And he fled by the waye to the playne feld. Nenertheles the power of the Caldees folowed after the kyng, and toke him in the playne feld of Jericho: and all the men of warre that were with him, were scatered abrode from him. And they toke the kyng, and led him vnto the kyng of Babilon vnto Reblatha. And he gaue judgmt vpon him. And they slewe Sedechias children before his eyes, and put out Sedechias eies, and bounde him with cheynes, and caried him vnto Babilon.

Vpon the seuenthe daye of the fyfth moneth, that is the ninetenth yeare of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, came Nabusaradan the chefe captayne the kyng of Babilons seruaunt, vnto Jerusalem, and brent the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, a all the houses at Jerusalem, and all the great houses brent he with fyre. And all the power of the Caldees which was with the chefe captayne, brake downe the walles rounde aboute Ierusaleme. As for the other people that yet were lefte in the cite, and were fallé vnto the kyng of Babilon, and the other comen people, Nabusaradan the chefe captayne caried them awaye. And of the poorest people dyd the chefe captaine leaue in y londe to be wynegardeners and plowmen.

But the brasen pilers in the house of the LORDE, and the seates, and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the LORDE, dyd y Caldees brake downe, and caried the metall vnto Babilon. And the pottes, shouels, flesh-okes, spones, a all y brasen vessell that was occupied in the servyce, caried they awaye. And y chefe captayne toke awaye y censors and basens y were of golde and syluer, two pilers, one lauer, and the seates y Salomon had made for y house of the LORDE. The metall of all these ornamentes coulde not be wveyed. *Eightene cubytes hye was one pilere, and y knoppe theron was of brasse also, a thre cubytes hye: a the rope and the pomegranates vpyn the knoppe rounde aboute, were all of brasse. After the same maner was the other pilere also with the rope.

And the chefe captayne toke Serua the prest of the first course, a Sophony the prest of the seconde course, and thre dorekepers, and one chamberlayne out of the cite, which was appoynte over y men of warre: and fyue men that were euer before the kynghe, which were founde in the cite: and Sophar the captayne, which taught the people of y londe to fghte: and thre score men of y people of the londe, that were founde in the cite: these dyd Nabusaradan y chefe captayne take, and broughte them to the kyng of Babilon vnto Reblatha. And the kynghe of Babilon slewe them at Reblatha in y londe of Hamath. Thus was Iuda caried awaye out of his awne londe. *But ouer the remnaunt of the people in the londe of Iuda, whom Nabuchodonosor the kynghe of Babilon lefte behynde, he set Godolias y sonne of Abicam y sonne of Saphan. Now wha all the captaynes of the soudyers, a the men herde, that the kynghe of Babilon had made Godolias gouernoure, they came to Godolias vnto Mispa, namely, Ismael y sonne of Nathianas, a Iohanna y sonne Carea, a Seraia y sonne of Tanhometh the Netophatite, a Iesanias y sonne of Maechati with their men. And Godolias sware vnto them a to their men, a sayde vnto them: y Feare not ye y officers of the Caldees, tary in the londe, a submytte youre selues vnto the kynghe of Babilon, a ye shal prosper. *But in the seueth moneth came Ismael the sonne of Nathianas the sonne of Elisama (of the kynges kyndred) and ten men with him, and slewe Godolias, and the Iewes and Caldees that were with him at Mispa. Then all the people gat them vp, both small and greate, and the captaynes of the hoost, and came in to Egipte, for they were ayard of y Caldees.

Howbeit in the seuen and thirtieth yeare after that Ioachim the kynghe of Iuda was caried awaye on the seuen and twenty daye of the twoluethe moneth, Euilmerodach the kynghe of Babilon in the first yeare of his reigne, lifte vp the heade of Ioachim y kynghe of Iuda out of preson, and speke louingly vnto him, and set his trone aboue y trones of y kynges that were with him at Babilon, and chaunged the clothes of his captiuyte. And he ate allwaye before him as longe as he lyued. And he appoynte him his porcion, which was euer gené him daylye of the kynghe, as longe as he lyued.

And they went forth, that they might come vnto Gedor to the east syde of the valley, to seke pasture for their shepe. And founde fat and good pasture, and a londe large on both the sydes, quyet and riche: for they of Ham dwelt there afore tyme.

And these that are now descrybed by name, came in the tyme of Ezeehias the kynge of Iuda, and smote the tentes and dwellinges of those that were founde there, and dammed them vnto this daye, and dwelt in their steade, for there had they pasture for their shepe.

There wente of them also (of the children of Simeon) fuyre hundred men vnto mount Seir, with their rulers: Platta, Nearia, Rephaia and Vsiel, the children of Ieesi, and smote the remnaunt of the Amalechites (which were escaped) and dwelt there vnto this daye.

The bi. Chapter.

THE children of Ruben the first sonne of Israel: for he was the first sonne, but *because he defyled his fathers bed, therefore was his first byrthrighte geuen vnto the children of Joseph the sonne of Israel, y he was not rekeued to y first byrthrighte: for vnto Iuda which was mightie amongst his brethren, was geuen the pryncipalitie before him, and the first byrthrighte vnto Joseph. The children now of Ruben the first sonne of Israel are these: Hanoch, Pallu, Hebron and Charmi.

The children of Iohel were, Semaia, whose sonne was Gog, whose sonne was Semel, whose sonne was Micha, whose sonne was Reaia, whose sonne was Beera, *whom Teglatphalasser the kyngge of Assiria carried awaye presoner. He was a prynce amongethe Rubenites. But his brethern amongethe his kynreds (whi they were rekned amongethe their generation) had Ieiel and Sacharia to their heads.

And Bela the sonne of Asan the sonne of Sema, the sonne of Ioeil, *dwelt at Aroer, and vntyll Neba * Baal Meon. And dwelt towarde *Easte, as one cōmeth to the wyldernes by *water Euphrates: *for their catell were many in the londe of Gilead.

And in *tyme of Saul they foughte agaynst *Aagarites, which fell thowr their hande, and they dwelt in their tentes towarde all the East parte of Gilead.

But the children of Gad dwelt ouer agaynst them in *countrie of Basan, vntyll Salcha. Ioeil the cheifest, and Sapham the seconde, Ieanaie and Saphath at Basan. And their brethern of the house of their fathers were, Michael, Mesullam, Seba, Iorai, Iaeane, Sia and Eber, these seuen.

These are the children of Abihail the sonne of Huri, the sonne of Iaroha, the sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Michael, the sonne of Iesias, *sonne of Iahdo, the sonne of Bus. Abi the sonne of Abdiel, the sonne of Guni was a ruler in *house of their fathers, and they dwelt at Gilead in Basan, and in *vylages therof, and in all the suburbes of Saron, vntyll the vttmost partes therof. These were rekned in the tyme of Iotham the kyngge of Iuda, and of Ieroboam the kyngge of Israel.

The children of Ruben, the Gaddites *the halfe trybe of Manasses (of soch as were fightinge men, which wayre shylde *swerde, and coulde bende the bowe, and were men of armes) were foure and fortye thousande and seuen hundredeth and thre score, that wente forth to *waare. And when they foughte agaynst *Aagarites, Ietur, Naphes and Nodab helped them, and delyuered *Aagarites in to their handes, and all that was with them: for they cried vnto God in *batayll. And he herde them, because they put their trust in him. And they caried awaie their catell, fyue thousande Camels, two hundreth & fyftie thousande shpe, two thousande Asses, and an hūdredeth thousande soules of men. For there were many wounded, for whi? the battayll was of God. And they dwelt in their steade, vntyll the tyme that they were caried awaye presoners.

The childrē of the halfe trybe of Manasses dwelt in *londe *from Basan forth vntyll Baal Hermone * Seuir, and mount Hermon: for they were many. And these were *heads of the house of their fathers, Ephra, Iesei, Eliel, Asriel, Jeremia, Hodaneia, Iahdiel, mightie valeaunt men, *awcienct heads in the house of their fathers.

*And whi they synned agaynst *God of their fathers, and wente awhourneyng after the goddes of the people of the londe, (whom God had destroyed before them) the God of Israel stered vp the sprete of Phil the kyngge of Assiria, and the sprete of Teglatphalasser the kyngge of Assiria, and led awaye the Rubenites, Gaddites, and *halfe trybe of Manasses, and broughte the vnto Haubah, and Habor, and Harā, and to the water of Gason vnto this daye.

And they of Israel fled before the Philistynes, and they wounded fell vp on mount Gilboa. And the Philistynes followed vp on Saul and his sonnes, and smote Jonathas, Abinadab and Malchisua sonnes of Saul. And the battayll was sore agaynst Saul. And the archers came vp on him, so that he was wounded of the archers. Then sayde Saul vnto his weaponbearer: Drawe out thy swerde, and thrust it thorow me, that these vnccircumcysed come not, and deale shamefully with me. Neuertheles his weaponbearer wold not, for he was sore aRAYed. Then toke Saul his swerde, and fell therin. Whan his weaponbearer sawe that Saul was dead, he fell vp on his swerde also, and dyed.

Thus dyed Saul and his thre sonnes, and all his housholde together. And whan the men of Israel which were in valley, sawe, that Saul and his sonnes were dead, they lefte their cities and fled: and the Philistynes came and dwelt therin.

On the morowe came the Philistynes to spoyle the slayne, and founde Saul, and his sonnes lyenge vpon mount Gelboa, and strypped him out, and toke his heade, and his harness, and sent it aboute in to londe of the Philistynes, and caused it to be shewed before their Idoles and the people. And his weapons layed they in the house of their god, and styckte vp his heade vpon the house of Dagon.

But whan all they of Iabes in Gilead herde of euery thinge, that the Philistynes had done vpnto Saul, they gat them vp (as many as were men of armes) and toke the body of Saul and of his sonnes, and broughte them vnto Iabes, and buryed their bones vnder the Oke at Iabes, and fasted seuen dayes. Thus dyed Saul in his trespace which he commytted against the LORDE, because he kepte not the wordes of the LORDE: because he axed counsell at the sothsayers, and axed not at the LORDE, therfore slewe he him, x turned the kyngdome vnto Daviud.

The iii. Chapter.

AND all Israel resorted to Daviud vnto Hebron, and sayde: Beholde, we are thy bone and thy flesh. And aforesayde whan Saul reigned, thou leddest Israel out and in. So the LORDE thy God hath sayde vnto the: Thou shalt kepe my people of Israel, and thou shalt be the prynce ouer my people of Israel. And all the Elders of Israel came to the kyng vnto Hebron. And Daviud made a covenaunt with them at Hebron before the LORDE. And they anointed Daviud to be kyng ouer Israel x acordynge to the wordes of the LORDE by Samuel.

And Daviud and all Israel wete vnto Jerusalem, that is Iebug: for the Iebusites dwelt in the lode. And the citesyns of Iebus saide vnto Daviud: Thou shalt not come in hither. Howbeit Daviud wane y castell of Siô, which is y cite of Daviud. And Daviud sayde: If who so euer smythyeth y Iebusites first, shall be a pryncye capttayne. Tho Ioab y sonne of Zernia clymmed vp first, a was made capttayne. So Daviud dwelt in y castell, therfore was it called y cite of Daviud. And he byyled y cite roide aboute, fro Millo forth on euery syde. As for y remaunta of y cite, Ioab byyled it, a repayed it. And Daviud wete forth a grewe, a the LORDE Zebaoth was with him.

These are y chefe amoge y mightie me of Daviud, which dealt valeuntly with him in his kyngdome with all Israel, to make him kyng, acordinge to the wordes of y LORDE ouer Israel. And this is y nombre of Daviuds mightie men: Isabael the sonne of Hachmoni the cheifest amõge thirtie. He līfe vp his speare, & smote thre C. at one tyne.

After him was Eleasar the sonne of Dodo the Ahohite, and he was amõge the thre mightie. This man was with Dauid whã they blasphemed, & the Philistines gathered the selues there to ã batayll. And euã ther was there a pece of londe full of barly, & the people fled before the Philistines. And they stode in the myffdes of the londe, and rescued it, and smote the Philistines. And the LORDE gaue a greate health.

"And thre of the cheifest thirtie wrote downe to the rocke vnto Dauid in to the caue of Adullam. But the Philistines howst laye in the valley of Rephaim. As for Dauid, he was in the castell. And the Philistines people were then at Bethleem. And Dauid was desyrous, and sayde: O that some wolde geue me to drynke of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate. The brake those thre in to the Philistines howst, and drue of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate, and caried it, and broughte it vnto Dauid. Nenertheles he wolde not drynke it, but pourde it vnto the LORDE, and sayde: God let this be farre fro me, ã I shulde do it, and drynke the bloude of these men in ã parell of their life: for with the parell of their life hane they broughte it: thherefore wolde he not drynke it. This dyd the thre Worthies.

Abisai the brother of Ioab, he was the cheifest amonge thre. And he līfe vp his speare, and smote thre hundreth. And he was famous amonge thre, and before the thirde, more honorable then the two, yet came he not vnto the thre.

Benaia the sonne of Ioiada the sonne of Ishail of Cabzeel, was a man of greate actes. He smote two lyons of the Moabites. And he wente downe, and smote a lyon in the myffdes of a well in the tyne of snowe. He smote a man of Egypte also, which was fyue cubites greate of stature, and had in his hande a speare like a weuers lome. Yet wente he downe to him with a staffe, and toke the speare out of his hande, and slewe him with his awne speare. This dyd Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and was a famous man amonge thre Worthies, and most awncient amonge thirtie. But vnto the thre came he not. Howbeit Dauid made him of his secrete counsell.

The valeaut Worthyes are these: Asahel the brother of Ioab, Elhanam his Vncles sonne of Bethlehem, Samoth the Harodite, Helez the Pelonite, Ira the sonne of Ekes the Thecoite, Abraser the Anathothite, Sibe-chai the Husathite, Ibai the Ahohite, Matherai the Netophatite, Heled ã sonne of Baena ã Netophatite, Ithai ã sonne of Ribai of Gibeah of the childre of Ben lamin, Benaiia the Pir-gathonite, Hura of the broke of Gaas. Abiel the arbathite, Asmaueth the Baherumite, Eliaha the Saulbonite. The children of Hasem ã Gisonite, Iothanas the sonne of Sage the Hararite, Ahiam the sonne of Sachar the Hararite, Eliphel the sonne of Vr, Hepher the Macherathite, Ahia the Pelonite, Hezro of Carmel, Naeraï the sonne of Aszai, Ioei the brother of Nathan, Mibehar the sonne of Hagri, Zeleg the Ammonite, Naherai the Berothite the wapanbeare of Ioab the sonne of Zeruia, Ira the Iethrite, Gareb the Iethrite, Vrias the Hethite, Sabad the sonne of Ahalai, Adima the sonne of Sisa the Rubenite, a custayne of the Rubenites, and there were thirtie vnder him: Hanam ã sonne of Maecha, Iosaphat the Mathonite, Vsa ã Astharathite, Sama and Iaael, the sonnes of Hotham the Aroerite, Iediac the sonne of Simri, Ioha his brother the Thirzite, Eliel the Mahenite, Ieribai and Iosua the sonnes of Elman, Iethma the Mobiite, Eliel, Obed, Iaesiel of Mizobaia.

The viii. Chapter.

These also came to Dauid vnto Siclag when he was yet kepte asyde because of Saul the sonne of Cis: And they were like wyse amonge the worthies ã helped in the battayll, and coulde handle bowes with both their handes, ã could cast stones, and shote arowes with the bowe.

Of Sauls brethren which were of Ben Iamin: The cheifest Ahieser and Ioas ã children of Sama the Gibeathite. Iesiel and Pelet the children of Asmaueth. Baracha ã Iehu the Anthothite. Iesmaia the Gibeonite, valeaut amonge thirtie and ouer thirtie. Jeremia, Iahasei, Iohanen, Iosabad the Gederathite. Eleusai, Ierimoth, Bealia, Samaria, Saphatia the Harophite, Elkana, Iesiia, Asareel, Isasbeam & Korahyte, Ioela and Sabadia the children of Ieroham of Gedor.

Of the Gaddites resorted there vnto David to the castell in the wylderness, mightie Worthies and men of armes, which hadde speares and swerdes, and had faces like Iōs, and were as swiftie as the Roes vpon ȳ mountaynes. The fyrst Eser, the seconde Obadia, the thyrde Eliab, the foureth Masmanna, the fift Ieremia, the sixte Athai, the seuenth Eliel, the eght Jōhanna, the nyneth Elsabad, the tenth Ieremia, ȳ eleuenth Machbanai. These were of the children of Gad, heades in the hoost, the leest ouer an hundred and ȳ greatest ouer a thousande. These are they which in the fyrst moneth vrente ouer Iordane, whan it was full on both the shores, so that all the valleys were euene both towards the East and towards the West.

There came of the children of Ben Iamin also and of Iuda vnto the castell of David. But David sente forth vnto them, and answered and sayde vnto them: Yf ye come to me in peace, and to helpe me, my hert shal be with you. But yf ye come vpō disceate, and to be mine aduersaries (where as there is yet no vnrighte in me) the God of oure fathers loke vpon it, and rebuke it. Neuertheles the spretē endued Amasai the captayne amongeth thirtie, and he sayde: We are thine O David, and holde with the thou soune of Isai. Peace, peace be with the, peace be with thy helpers, for thy God helpe them. Then David receauned them, and made them captaynes ouer the men of warre.

And of Manasses there fell certaine vnto David, whan he came to the battayll with the Philistynes agaynst Saul, and helped them not, for the prynces of ȳ Philistynes counseled to let him go from them, and sayde: Yf he fell vnto his lorde Saul, it mighte cost vs oure neckes. Now whā he departed vnto Siclag, there fell vnto him of Manasses, Adna, Iosabad, Iedial, Michael, Iosabad, Elihu, Zillhau, heades ouer thousandes in Manasses. And they helped David against the men of warre: for they were all valeaunt Worthies, and were captaynes ouer the hoost. And every daye came there some to David, to helpe him, till there was a greate hoost as an hoost of God.

And this is the nombre of the heads harnessed vnto the warre, which came to David vnto Hebron, for to turne the kyngdome of Saul vnto him, acordynge to the worde of the LORDE.

The childrē of Iuda, which handled speares and swerdes, were sixe thousande, ȳ eight hundredeth ready harnessed vnto ȳ warre. Of the children of Simeon noble men of armes for the battayll, seuen thousande and an h Undreth. Of the children of Leui foure thousande and sixe hundredeth. And Ioiada the prynce amongeth them of Aaron with thre thousande and seuen hundredeth. Sadoc the yonge valeaunt man of armes with his fathers house, two and twentye rulers. Of the children of Ben Iamin Sauls brother, thre thousande: for vnto that time helde many of thē yet with the house of Saul.

Of ȳ children of Ephraim, twenty thousande and eighte hundredeth valeaunt men of armes, and famous in the house of their fathers. Of the halfe trybe of Manasses, eightene thousande, named by name, to come and make David kyngge. Of the children of Issachar (which were men of vnderstondyng, whan nede reueryd to knowe what Israel shulde do) two hundredeth captynes, and all their brethren folowed their worde. Of Sabulon, soch as wente forth in the hoost to ȳ warre, ready with all maner of wepons for the battayll, fyftye thousande, beynge of one mynde to kepē them selues in ordre.

Of Nephtali, a thousande captynes, with them soch as handled shylde and speare, seuen and thystie thousande. Of Dan, ready harnessed to the battayll, eighte and twentye thousande, and sixe hundredeth. Of Asser, soch as wente forth in ȳ hoost, ready harnessed to the battayll, fortye thousande. From beyonde Iordane, of the Rubenites, Gaddites and the halfe trybe of Manasses, with all maner of wepons to the battayll, an hundreth and twentye thousande.

All these men of warre, ready harnessed to the battayll, came with a whole hert vnto Hebron, to make David kyngge ouer all Israel. And all Israel besyde were of one hert, that David shulde be made kyngge. And there were they with David thre dayes, eatynge and drynkynge: for their brethren had prepared for them. And soch neighbours as were aboute them vnyll Issachar, Zabulon and Nephtali, brought bred vpon Asses, Camels, Mules and oxen to eate: meel, fyges, rasens, wyne, oxen, shipe, very many: for there was joye in Israel.

The vij. Chapter.

And Dauid helde a counsell with the captaynes ouer thousands and ouer hundreds, and with all the prynces, and sayde vnto all the congregacion of Israel: Yf it lyke you, and yf it be of the LORDE oure God, let vs sende forth on euer syde to oure other brethren in all the countrees of Israel, and to the prestes and Leuites in the cities where they haue suburbs, y they maye be gathered together vnto vs, and let vs fetch the Arke of oure God agayne vnto vs: for by Sauls tyme we axed after it. The sayde the whole cōggregation, that the same shulde be done, for it pleased all the people well.

So Dauid gathered all Israel together from Sihor of Egipte, yll a man come vnto Hemath, to fetch the Arke of God from Kiriath iarim. And Dauid went vp with all Israel to Kiriath iarim, which lieth in Iuda, to bryngye from thence the Arke of God the LORDE, that sytteth vpō the Cherubins, where the name is named: and they caused the Arke of God to be caried vpō a new cart from the house of Abinadab. Vsa and his brethren droue the cart. As fōr Dauid and all Israel, they played with all their strength before God, with songes, with harpes, with psalteries, with tabrettes, with Cymbales and trompes.

But when they came to the barne floore of Chidon, Vsa stretched out his hande to holde the Arke: for the oxen went out asyde. Then waxed the wrath of the LORDE fierce ouer Vsa, y smote him, because he stretched out his hāde to the Arke, so y he dyed there before God. The was Dauid sory, because y LORDE had made soch a rente vpō Vsa, and called the place Perez Vsa, vnto this daye. And Dauid stode in feare of God the same daye, y sayde: How shal I brynge y Arke of God vnto me? Therfore wolde he not let y Arke of God be broughte vnto him in to y cite of Dauid, but caried it in to y house of Obed Edom the Gathite. So the Arke of God abode with Obed Edom in his house thre monethes. And y LORDE blessed Obed Edoms house and all that he had.

B

The vi. Chapter.

And Hiram y kynge of Tyre sent messaunders vnto Dauid and Cedre tymber, and masons and carpenters, to bulyde him an house. And Dauid perceaued, that the LORDE had confirmed him kynge ouer Israel: for his kyngdome increased for his people of Israel sake. And Dauid toke yet mo wyues at Jerusalem, y begat yet mo sonnes y daughteres. And the names of them y were borne vnto him at Jerusalem, were these: Sammua, Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Iebehar, Elisua, Elipalea, Noga, Nepheg, Iaphia, Elisamma, Baal Iada, Eliphalet.

And whan the Philistynes herde that Dauid was anoynted kynge ouer all Israel, they wente vp all to seke Dauid. Whan Dauid herde that, he wente forth agaynst them. And the Philistynes came, and scattered the selues beneth in y valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed counsell at God, y sayde: Shal I go vp agaynst the Philistynes? and wilt thou deluyer them in to my hande? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Go vp, and I wil deluyer them in to thy hande. And whan they were gone vp to Baal Prasim, Dauid smote them there. And Dauid sayde: God hath dyd y enemyes thorow my hande, euen as the water parteth asunder: therefore called they the place Baal Prasim. And there lefte they their goddes. Then *commannded Dauid to burne them with fyre.

But the Philistynes gat them thither agayne, and scattered them selues beneth in y valley. And Dauid axed counsell at God agayne. And God sayde vnto him: Thou shalt not go vp beynde them, but turne the from them, that thou mayest come vpon the ouer agaynst the Peertrees. So whan thou hearest aboue vpon the Peertrees the noyse of the goyng, go thou forth then to the battayll: for God is gene forth then before the to smyte the hoost of the Philistynes. And Dauid dyd as God commannded him. And they smote the hoost of the Philistynes from Gibea forth vnto Gaser. And Dauids name was noysd out in all loundes. And the LORDE caused y feare of him to come vpō all the Heythen.

The rvi. Chapter.

And he byulded him houses in the cite of Dauid, y made ready a place for y
The sanctify Eliel and Asaia

And David brought the children of Aaron to the Levites together. Of the children of Kahath: Vriel the chefe with his brethren, an C. and twentye. Of the children of Merari: Asiaa the chefe with his brethren, two C. and twentye. Of the children of Gerson: Ioel the chefe with his brethren, an C. and thirtie. Of the children of Elizaphan: Semaia the chefe with his brethren, two hundred. Of the children of Hebron: Eliel the chefe, with his brethren, four score. Of the children of Vsiel: Amminadab the chefe, with his brethren, an hidrée and twolue.

And David called Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes, and the Levites, namely Vriel, Asiaa, Ioel, Semaia, Eliel, Aminadab, and sayde vnto them: Ye are the heads of your fathers amongst the Levites: sanctifie youre selues therefore your brethren, ye maye bryng vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel, to the place I haue prepared for it. For afore whan ye were not there, the LORDE oure God made a rent amonge vs, because we soughte him not, as we shulde haue done. So the Levites halowed the selues, ye they mighte bryng vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel. And the children of Leui bare the Arke of God the LORDE vpon their shulders with the staines thron, as Moses commaunded accordinge to the worde of the LORDE.

And David spake vnto the rulers of the Levites, that they shulde ordeynye some of their brethren to be syngers with psalteries, harpes and lounde instrumentes, and Cymbales, to syng lounde with ioye.

Then the Levites appoynted Heman sonne of Ioeil: and of his brethren Assaph the sone of Barachias: and of the children of Merari their brethren, Ethan the sone of Cusia: and with them their brethren of the seconde course, namely Zacharias, Iaesiell, Semiramototh, Ieiel, Vnui, Eliab, Benaiel, Maeseia, Mathithia, Elipheleia, Mikneia, Obed Edom, Ieiel, the dore kepers. For Heman, Assaph and Ethan were syngers, with brasen belles makyng a lounde noyse: but Zacharias, Iaesiell, Semiramototh, Ieiel, Vnui, Eliab, Maeseia and Benaiel with Phalteryes to Alamoth: Mathithia, Elipheleia, Mikneia, Obed Edom, Ieiel and Asasia with harpes to syng above them on hye. Chenania the ruler of the Levites was the master of Musick to teache them for to syng, for he was a man of vnderstandinge.

And Barachias and Elcana were the dorekeepers of the Arke. But Sachania, Iosaphat, Nathaneel, Amasai, Zacharias, Benaiel, Elieser the prestes, blew the trumpettes before the Arke of God. And Obed Edom and Ieiah were dorekeepers of the Arke.

So David and the Elders of Israel, and the captaynes ouer thousands wente vp to fetch the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE out of the house of Obed Edom with ioye. And when God had helped the Levites bare the Arke of the LORDE couenaunt, there were offered seuen bullockes seuen rimes. And David had a lynë garment vpô him, and so had all the Levites bare the Arke, and ye syngers, and Chenania the master of Musick with the syngers. David had an ouerbody cote of lynen vpon him also.

Thus all Israel brought vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE with myrth, with trumpettes, tabrettes, a lounde Cymbales, with psalteryes and harpes. Now when the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE came in to the cite of David, Michol ye daughter of Saul lokerd out at a wyndowe: wha she sawe kyng David daunsynge a playenge, she despysed hym in hir hert.

The 2dij. Chapter.

And wha they brought in the Arke of God, they set it in the Tabernacle, that David had pitched for it, and offered burnt-offerynges thankofferynges before God. And wha David had ended the burnt-offerynges and thankofferynges, he blessed the people in the name of the LORDE, he distributed vnto every man in Israel (both vnto man and woman) a cake of bred, and a pece of flesh and a meene of potage.

And he appoynted before the Arke of the LORDE certayne Levites to mynister, that... they shulde geue praye, thankes and loaunges vnto the LORDE God of Israel: namely Assaph the first, Zacharias the seconde, Ieiel, Semirimoth, Ichiel, Mathithia, Eliab, Benaia, Obed Edom and Ichiel, with psaltries and harpes. But Assaph with loude Cymbales, Benaia and Ichasiel the prestes with tabrettes, allwaye before the Arke of y covenaunt of God.

At the same tyme ordeyned Davi first of all to geue thākes vnto the LORDE by Assaph and his brethren.

O geue thankes vnto the LORDE, call vpon his name, tell the people what things he hath done.

O let youre songes be of him: prayse him, and let youre talkynge be of all his wonderous worke.

Geue his holy name a good reporte: let y hert of them reioyce, that seke the LORDE. O seke the LORDE and his strength, seke his face euermore.

Remembre his maruelous worke that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgmetes of his mouth.

Ye sede of Israel his seruaunt, ye children of Iacob his chosen.

He is the LORDE oure God, his judgemetes are in all londes.

Be myndful euere of his couenaunt what he hath commaundd in to a thousande generaciones.

*Which he made with Abraham, & his ooth vnto Isaac.

And he v confirmed the same vnto Iacob for a perpetuell lawe, and to Israel for an euerlastinge couenaunt.

And sayde: Vnto the wyl I geue y londe of Canaan, y metelyne of youre inheritance.

Whā they were yet but small & fewe in nōbre, and strangerye in the same londe.

And they wente from one nacion to another, & from one realme to another people.

He suffred no man to hurte them, and reproued euern kynges for their sakes.

* Touch not myne anoynted, & do my prophets no harme.

* O synge vnto y LORDE, let all y earth be tellynge of his saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his holy name amonge the Heythē, & his wonderous worke amonge y people.

For the LORDE is great, and can not worthily be prayed, and more to be had in awe then all goddes.

As for all the goddes of the Heythē, they are but Idols: but it is the LORDE that made the heauen.

Thankesgyngen and worshipe are before him, strength and joye is in his place.

Ascrybe vnto the LORDE ye kynred of nacies: ascrybe vnto the LORDE worshipe and strength.

Ascrybe vnto the LORDE the honoure of his name: brynge presentes, and come before him, and worshipe y LORDE in y bewtye of holyes.

Let the whole earth stōde in awe of him: he hath made the compase of the worlde so fast, that it can not be moved.

Let the heauens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: and let it be tolde amonge the Heythē, that the LORDE reigneuth.

Let the See make a noyse, and the fulnesse thereof: let the felde be joyfull, and all that therin is.

Let all the trees in the wod leape for joye before the LORDE, for he commeth to judge the earth.

O geue thankes vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious: and his merci endureth for euer.

And saye: Helpe vs O God oure Saniuore, and gather vs together, and deliuyer vs from the Heythē, that we maye geue thankes vnto thy holy name, and synge prayses vnto the in thy Psalmes.

Prayed be the LORDE God of Israel from euerlastinge to euerlastinge: and let all people saye, Amen, And: Prayse be vnto the LORDE.

So he lefte Assaph and his brethren there before the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE, to mynister allwaye before the Arke, euery daye his daye worke. But Obed Edom and their brethren, eight and thre score, and Obed Edom the sonne of Jedithun, and Hossa, to be dore kepers. And Sadoc & prest, his brethren the prestes, lefte he before the habitation of the LORDE vpon the hye place at Gibeō, to offre burntsacrifices daylie vnto the LORDE vpon the altare of burnt offerenge in the mornynge & in the euenynge, as it is wrytten in the 4 lawe of the LORDE, which he commaundd vnto Israel. And with them Heman IDEOthun, and y other chosen, which were named by name to geue thankes vnto the LORDE, because his mercy endureth for euer. And with them Heman IDEOthun to stryke vpon the tabrettes and Cymbales, and the musicall instrumentes of God. As for the childre of Ledithun, he made them dorekepers. So all the people departed, euery one to his house: and Dauid returned also to blesse his house.

The rüii. Chapter.

I T fortuned whi Dauid dwelt in his house, a he sayde vnto y prophet Nathan: Be holdde, I dwell in a house of Ceder, and the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE is amonge the curtynes.

Nathan saide vnto Dauid: What so euer is in thine hert, that do: for God is with y. But the same night came y worde of God vnto Nathan, and sayde: Go and speake to Dauid my seruaunt: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou shalt not buylde me an house to be an habitaciō: for I haue dwelt in no house sence the daye that I broughte forth the children of Israel, vnto this daye: But where the Tabernacle and habitacion hath bene, there haue I bene where so euer I haue walked in all Israel. Spake I euer to eny of the Judges in Israel (whom I commaunded to kepe my people) and sayde: Wherfore do ye not buylde me an house of Cedre tumber?

So shalt thou speake now vnto my seruaunt Dauid: Thus sayeth the LORDE Zebaoth: I toke the from the pasturce behynede the shepe, that thou shuldest be the pryncye ouer my people, and have bene with the whiter so euer thou wete, and haue rosted out all thine enemies before the, and haue made the a name, acordinge to the name of the greate men that are vp eare. And for my people of Israel, I wyl appoynte them a place, and wyl plante them, that they maye dwell there, and nomore to be removed. And the childre of wickednes shall oppresse them nomore, like as afore tymε, whan I commaunded the Judges ouer my people of Israel. And I wyl subdue all thine enemies, and do declare vnto the, that the LORDE wyl buylde the an house.

* But whan thy dayes are fulfilled, that thou departest hence with thy fathers, I wyl after the rayse vp thy sede, which shall be euε one of thy sonnes: his kyngdome wyl I stabilishe, he shal buylde me an house, x I wyl make his seate sure for euer. I wyl be his father, and he shal be my sonne. And I wyl not with drawe my mercy from him, as I haue with drawn it frō him that was before the: But I wyl set him in my house, and in my kyng dome for euer, so that his seate shalbe sure for euermore.

And whā Nathan had spoken vnto Dauid according to all these wordeς g all this vision, kyng Dauid came and sat him downe before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God, who am I? and what is my house, ş thou hast broughte me thus farre? And this (O God) hast thou thoughte yet to little, but hast spoken of thy seruauntes house yet longe for to come. And thou LORDE God hast loked downe vpone me from aboue, even as one man loketh vpone another. What more shal Dauid saye vnto the, ş thou brygest thy seruaunt to soch honoure? Thou knowest thy seruaunt O LORDE, for thy seruauntes sake and accordinge to thy hert hast thou done all these greate things, that thou mightest shewe all greate things vnto thy seruaunt. LORDE there is none lyke the, and there is no God but thou, of whom we haue herde with our eares. And ş where is there a people vpon earth as thy people of Israel, where God wente to delyuer him a people, and to make him selfe a name thorow greate g terrible things, to cast out the Heythen before thy people, whom thou hast delyuered out of Εγιπτε? and ţ people of Israel hast thou made thy people for euer, and thou LORDE art become their God.

Now LORDE, let the worde be verified for euer, that thou hast spoken ouer thy seruaunt and ouer his house, g do as thou hast spoken: and let thy name endure and be magnified for euer, that it maye be sayde: The LORDE Zebaoth, the God of Israel is the God in Israel, and that the house of thy seruaunt Dauid maye be stablyszhed before the: for thou LORDE hast opened the eare of thy seruaunt, that thou wilt buylde him an house. Therfore hath thy seruaunt founde (confyndence) to make his prayer before the. Now LORDE, thou art God, and hast promysed soch good vnto thy seruaunt. Begynne now to blesse the house of thy seruaunt, that it maye be euermore before the: for loke what thon blesset (O LORDE) the same is blessed for euere.

The vij. Chapter.

Afte this smote Dauid the Philistynes, and subdued them, "and toke Gath &:
the vyllages therof out of the hande of the Philistynes. He smote the Moabites like-wyse, so that the Moabites were subdued vnto Dauid, and gane him trybutte. He smote Hadad Eser also & kyng of Zoba in Hemath, when he wente to set vp his power by the water Euphrates.

And Dauid toke from him a thousande charrettes, seuen thousande horsmen, and tweltye thousande fote men. And Dauid lamed all the charrettes, and keppe an hundreth charrettes ouer. And the Syrias came from Damascos, to helpe Hadad Eser the kyng of Zoba. Howbeit Dauid smote two & twentye thousande of the same Syrians, and layed men of warre at Damascos in Syria, so that the Syrians were subdued vnto Dauid, and broughte him trybutte. For the LORDE helpe Dauid, whither so euere he wente.

And Dauid toke the shylkdes of golde, & Hadad Esers seruauntes had, & broughte the to Jerusalem. And out of Tibeath & Chun the cities of Hadad Eser, toke Dauid very moch brasse, * wherof Salomon made the brasen lauer, and pilers; and brasen vessels.

& wha Thoug the kyng of Hemath herde, & Dauid had smytten all & power of Hadad Eser, he sent his sonne Hadorâ vnto kyng Dauid, to salute him & to blesse him, because he had foughte with Hadad Eser, & smyttë hi (for Thoug had warre with Hadad Eser) and all the same vessels of golde, sylyer and of brasse, dyd kyng Dauid consecrate vnto the LORDE, with the sylyer and golde that he had taken from the Heythi, namely, from the Edomites, Moabites, Ammonites, Philistynes, and Amalechites.

And Abisaï the sonne of Zeru Ia smote eightene thousande of the Edomites in the Salt valley, and layed me of warre in Edomea, so that all the Edomites were subdued vnto Dauid: for & LORDE helped Dauid, whither so euere he wente.

Thus Dauid reigned ouer all Israel, and exeuted judgment and righteousnes vnto all the people. Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia was captayne ouer the host. Josaphat the sonne of Ahilud was Channeceler. Sadoc the sonne of Achitob, and Ahimelech & sonne of Abiathur, were prestes. Saeusa was Scribe. Be-aâl the sonne of Ioiala was ouer the Chre-thians & Plethiains. & And Danids sonnes were chefe at & kynges hande.

The xi. Chapter.

And after this dyed Nahas & kyng of the childré of Ammon, & his sonne was kyng in his steade. Then sayde Dauid:
I wil do mercy vpon Hanun the sonne of Nahas, for his father dyd mercy vpon me:
and so he sent messaungers to conforte ouer his father. And wha Danids seruauntes came in to the londe of the children of Ammon vnto Hanun to conforte him, the ynyses of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun: Thinkest thou that Dauid honoureth thy father in thy sighte, that he hath sent cõforters vnto the? Yee his seruauntes are come vnto the,
to search and euertothe, and to spye out the londe. Then toke Hanun the seruauntes of Dauid, and shoue them, & cut the halfe of their garnements of, euëc by the loynes, & so let the go. And they wente their waye, & sent men to tell Dauid. Nenertheles he sent to mete them (for & men were put to greate shame) and the kynges sayde: Abye at Iericho, tylly youere beerdes be groune, and then come agayne.

When the childré of Ammon save, that they stynked in & sighte of Dauid, both Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousande talettes of sylyer, to hyre charettes and horsmen out of Mesopotamia, out of Macaeh and out of Zoba: and hyred two and thirtie thousande charrettes, & kyng of Macaeh with his people, which came & pitched their tentes before Medba. And the children of Ammon gathered them selues together out of their cities, and came to the battayll. Whan Dauid herde that, he sent Ioab thither with all the hoost of the men of armes. And the childré of Ammon were gone forth, and prepared them selues to the battayll before the gate of the cite. But the kynges & were come, keppe them asyde in the felde.

Now wha Ioab sawe that the battayll was agaynst him both before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, and prepared him selfe agaynst \( y \) Syrians. As for \( y \) residue of the people, he put them vnder the hande of Abisai his brother, that they shulde prepare them selues agaynst the children of Ammon, and he sayde: \( yf \) \( y \) Syrians be to mightie for me, helpe thon me: but \( yf \) the children of Ammon be to strogge for \( y \), I shall helpe the: take a good corage vnto the, and let vs quyte oure selues manly for oure people and for the citie of oure God: neuer-thesles the LORDE do what pleaseth him. And Joab made him forth with the people that was with him, to fighte agaynst \( y \) Syrians: \( y \) they fled before him. And when the children of Ammon sawe \( y \) the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai his brother, and wente in to the cote. And Joab came to Jerusalem.

But when the Syrians sawe that they were smyt\( \text{te} \) before Israel, they sent messaungers, and broughte forth \( y \) Syrians which were beyonde the water. And Sophia the chefe captayne of Hadad Eser wente before them. Wha this was tolde Dauid, he gathered all Israel together, and wente ouer Iordane. And when he came at them, he set \( y \) battayll in arayye agaynst them. And Dauid prepared him selfe to \( y \) battayll agaynst \( y \) Syrians, \( y \) they foughte with him: but \( y \) Syri\( a \)s fled before Israel. And Dauid and the chefe captayne of the Syrians seuen thousande charrettes, \( y \) fortye thousande fote men. And Sophia the chefe captayne slewe he also. And when Hadad Esers seruauntes sawe that they were smyt\( \text{te} \) before Israel, they made peace with Dauid \( y \) his seruauntes. And the Syrians wolde helpe the childre of Ammon nonore.

The riiij. Chapter.

A ND whan \( y \) yeare came aboute, \( * \) what tyme as \( y \) kynges vse to go forth, Ioab broughte the power of the hoost, \( y \) destroyed the londe of the children of Ammon, and came and layed sege vnto Rabba. But Dauid abode at Jerusalem. \( * \) And Ioab smote Rabba, and brake it downe. And Dauid toke their kynges crowne from his heade, and founde the weight of a talent of golde theron, \( y \) precious stones. And it was set vp\( \text{t} \) Dauid\( s \) heade. And very mouch spoyle caried he out of the cite. As for the people that were therin, he broughte the forth, \( y \) parted them in s tinder with sawes, \( y \) hokes \( y \) betels of yron. Thus dyd Dauid vnto all \( y \) cities of the childre of Ammon. And Dauid departed agayne, with the people vnto Jerusalem.

Afterwaerde arose there warre at Gasar with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai \( y \) Husathite smote Sibai, which was one of the children of Rephaim, and he subdued him. And there arose warre agaynste the Philistynes. The Elhanah \( y \) sonne of Iair smote Lahemi \( y \) brother of Goliath \( y \) Gathite, whose speares staffe was like a weeueres lome. Afterwaerde was there a battayll at Gath, where there was a man of a greate stature, \( y \) had sixe fynyers and sixe toes, which make foure and twentye. And he was borne also of Rapha, and spake despytetfully vnto Israel. But Ionathas the sonne of Simea Dauids brother smote him. These were the childr\( e \) of Rapha at Gath, \( y \) fell thorow \( y \) hande of Dauid, and of his seruauntes.

The riiij. Chapter.

A ND Sathan stode agaynst Israel, \( ^{a} \) \( y \) en\-tyed Dauid to nombre Israel. And Dauid sayde vnto Ioab \( y \) to \( y \) rulers of the people: Go youre waye, nombre Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, and brynge me the nombre of that, that I maye knowe it. Ioab sayde: The LORDE make his people an hundreth tymes mo then they are now. But my lorde \( O \) kyng, are they not all my lordes seruauntes? Why doth my lorde then axe thereafter? Wherefore shal there a trespae come vpon Israel?

Neuertheles the kynges worde preuyled agaynst Ioab. And Ioab wente forth, and walked thorow all Israel, and came to Jeru- salem, and deluyerd vnto Dauid \( y \) nombre of the people that was tolde. And of all Israel there were a thousande tymes a thousande, and an hundreth thousande men, that drue out the swerde: and of Iuda foure hundred thousande and seuentye thousande men, which drue out the swerde. As for Leui and Ben Iamin, he nombre them not amonge these: for the kynges worde was abominable vnto Ioab.

But this displeased God righte sore: for he smote Israel. And Dauid sayde vnto God: I haue symmed greuously, that I haue done this. But now take awaye the trespae of thy

Then dyd the LORDE cause pestilence to come in to Israel, so that there fell of Israel three score and ten thousand men. And God sent the angell to Ierusalem for to destroye it. And euery house in every streete dyed as lorde commanded. And he repented of the euell, and saide vnto the angell destroyer: It is ynowe, holde now thy hande. The angell of the LORDE stode by the barne of Arnan the Jebusite. And Dauid lifte vp his eyes, and saw the angell of the LORDE standinge betwene heauens and earth, and a naked swerde in his hande stretched out ouer Jerusalem. Then Dauid and the Elders beyng dressed with sacke cloth, fell vpon their faces. And Dauid saide vnto God: Am not I he that caused the people to be nombred? I am he that hath synned and done euell: as for these shewe, what haue they done? LORDE my God, let thine hande be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house, and not agaynst thy people to plague them.

And the angell saide vnto Dauid, that he shulde speake vnto Dauid, that Dauid shulde go vp, and set vp an altar in the barne of Arnan the Jebusite. So Dauid wente vp accordinge to the worde of God, which he spake in the name of the LORDE. But when Arnan turned him, and sawe the angell (and his foure sonnes with him) they hyde the selues: for Arnan threwshed wheate.

Now when Dauid came to Arnan, Arnan loked, and was aware of Dauid, and wete forth out of the barne, and worshipped Dauid with his face to the grounde. And Dauid sayde vnto Arnan: Geue me rowme in the barne, to buyle a altar vp the LORDE therin: for full money shal thou geue it me, that the plague maye cease from the people.

But Arnan sayde vnto Dauid: Take it vnto the, and let my lorde the kyngge do as pleaseth him. Beholde, that ox euell I for a burnt-offerynge, and those vessels to the ox, and wheate for the meatofferynge, I geue it all. Nevertheles the kyngge sayde vnto Arnan: Not so: but for full money wyll I bye it: for that which is thine wyll not I take for the LORDE, and offre a burnt-offerynge for naughte.

So Dauid gaue Arnan for rowme, sixe hundredth Sycles of golde in weight. And there buyled Dauid an altar vp to the LORDE, and offred burnt-offerynges to the LORDE, and burnt-offerynges. And when he called vp to the LORDE, he herde him throw the fyre from heaven vpon the altar of the burnt-offerynge. And vnto the LORDE saide vnto the angell, that he shulde put his swerde in to his sheeth.

At the same tyme wha Dauid sawe, that the LORDE had herde him vpon the corne floore of Arnan the Jebusite, he dyd sacrifice there. For thine habitation of the LORDE, which Moses had made in the wyldernes, and the altar of burnt-offerynges, was at that tyme in the hye place at Gibeon. But Dauid coulde not go thither to seke God before it, for he feared the swerde of the LORDES angell. And Dauid sayde: * Here shal be my house of God, and this the altar of burnt-offerynges for Israel.

The 91st. Chapter.

And Dauid commaunded to gather together the strauers that were in the londe of Israel, and appoynted masons to hewe stone for the buylldinge of the house of God. And Dauid prepared much yron for nales in the dores of the portes, and for soch thinges as were to be naled together, and so much brasse, that it was not to be weyed: and Cedre trees innumerable: for they of Zidon y Tyre brought Dauid much Cedre tymbre: for Dauid thoughte, Salome my sone is but a childe and tender: But the house that shal be buyllded vnto the LORDE, shal be greate, that his name prayse maye be exalted in all londes, theryfore wyly I prouyde for him. So Dauid made greate prouysion before his death.

And he called Salomon his sone, & commanded him to buylde the house of the LORDE God of Israel, and sayde vnto hym: My sone, I was minded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, but the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, and sayde: Thou hast shed mouch bloud, and strycken many battayls, theryfore shalt thou not buylde an house vnto my name, for as mouch as thou hast shed so mouch bloud vpon the earth before me. Beholde, the sone which shall be borne vnto the, shal be a quyte man: and I wyly cause hym to be in rest from al his enemies on euery syde, for his name shalbe Salomon: for I wyly geue peace and rest vpon Israel as longe as he lyueth. He shal buylde an house vnto my name. He shal be my sone, and I wyly be his father. And I wyly stablyshe the seate of his kyngdome vpó Israel for euer.

Now my sone, the LORDE shal be wyth the, and thou shalt prosper, that thou mayest buylde an house vnto the LORDE thy God, acordyng as he hath spoken of the. The LORDE also shal geue the wyszdome vnderstandynghe, and shal commyte Israel vnto the, that thou mayest kepe the lawe of the LORDE thy God. But then shal thou prosper, yt thou take hede to do after the ordynaunces and lawes which the LORDE commanded Moses vnto Israel. Be stronge, and take a good corage vnto the, feare not, and be not faynt harted. Beholde, I haue in my pouerte prouyded for the house of the LORDE, an hundreth thousande talentes of golde, and a thousande tymes a thousande talentes of syluer, and brasse and yron without nombre: for there is so muche of it.

And tymbre and stone haue I prepared, thou mayest get more therof. Thou hast mayest workmen also, mesons and carpenters in stone and tymbre, and all maner of men that haue vnderstandinge in all worke off golde, syluer, brasse, and yron without nombre. Yet get the vp, and be doynghe, and the LORDE shal be with the.

And Dauid commanded all the rulers of Israel, to helpe Salomon his sone, and sayde: Is not the LORDE your God with you, and hath geuen you rest on euery syde? for he hath delyuered the inhabiteres of the londe in to youre handes, and the londe is subdued before the LORDE, and before his people. Geue ouere youre hert now therfore and youre soule, to seke the LORDE youre God, and get you vp, and buylde a Sanctuary vnto the LORDE God, that the Arke of the covenauent of the LORDE and the holy vessels of God, maye be brought in to the house, which shalbe buylded vnto the name of the LORDE. So Dauid made Salomon his sone kyngge ouer Israel, whan he himselfe was olde, and had lyued ynoough.

The riii. Chapter.

And Dauid gathered all the rulers in Israel together, and the prestes & Leuites, to nombre the Leuites from thirte yeare olde aboue. And nombre the which (were stroge men) fro heade to heade, was eight and thirte thousande: of whom there were foure & twenty thousande, which dyd their diligence in the worke ouer the house of the LORDE, and sixe thousande officers and Judges, and foure thousande porters, foure thousande that songe prayses vnto the LORDE with instrumentes, which he had made to synge prays with all.

And Dauid made the ordinaunce amonc the children of Leui, namely amõge Gerson, Kahath & Merari. The Gersonites were: Laedan and Simei. The children of Laedan: the first, Iehiel, Sethan, and Joel, these three.

The children of Simei were: Salomith, Hasiel and Haran, these three. These were the chefe amonc the fathers of Laedan. These also were the children of Simei: Iahath, Sina, Ieus and Bria, these foure were Simeis children also. Iahath was the first, Sina the seconde. As for Ieus and Bria, they had not many childr, therfore were they conted but for one fathers house.

† The children of Kahath were: Amram, Iezebar, Hebrot and Vsiel, these foure. The childr of Amram were: Aaron and Moses.

‡ As for Aaron, he was separat, to be sanctified for the Most holy, he g his sones for euer, to burne incense before the LORDE, & to minyster and blesse in name of the LORDE for euermore. And the children of Moses the man of God were named amongst the children of the Leuites. * The children of Moses were Gerson and Elieser.

The children of Gerson, the first was Sebuel. The children of Elieser, the first was Rehavia. Elieser had none other children. But their children of Rehavia were many therouer. The children of Izezhar were: Solomith the first. The children of Hebron were: Ieria the first, Amaria the second, Iahiasel the third and Iakmean the fourth. The children of Vsiel were: Micha the first and Iesia the second.

The children of Merari were: Maheli and Musi. The children of Maheli were: Eleasar and Cis. And Eleasar dyed, and had no sons but daughters. And the children of Cis their brethren take them. The children of Musi were: Maheli, Eder and Ieremoth, these three. These are the children of Leuit amongst their fathers houses, and the chefeost of the fathers, which were counted after the names head by head: which executed the worke of the offices in the house of the LORDE from thirtie yeare olde and aboue. For Daud sayde: The LORDE God of Israel hath genen his people rest, shall dwell at Ierusalem for ever.

Among the children of Leuit also were the children of Levi numbered from thirtie yeare old and aboue: that they needed not to beare the habitacion with all the vessels of their office, but according to the last wordes of Daud, they shulde stonde vnder the hande of the children of Aaron, to minystre in the house of the LORDE in the courte, and to the chesters, and for purifeyenge, and to all manner of sanctifieyen, and to euerie worke of the office in the house of God. And for they shebred, for the lyne floure, for the meatoffyringe, for the unleuended waferes, for the pannes, for the frynge, and for all manner of weight and mesure. And in the moruyenge to stonde for to gene thanks and to praysie the LORDE, and in the euencyenge likewise. And vpon all Sabbathes, Newmoones and feastes to offre all the burntofferynes vnto the LORDE, accordinge to the nombre and ordre, allwaye before the LORDE: to wayte vpon the Tabernacle of witness and of the Sactuary, and vpon their brethre the children of Aaron, to minystre in the house of the LORDE.

The 176. Chapter.

THIS was the ordinance of the children of Aaron. * The children of Aaron were, Nadab, Abihu, Eleasar and Ithamar. But Nadab and Abihu dyed before their fathers, and had no children. And Eleasar and Ithamar were prestes. And Daud ordred them after his maner: Sadoc out of the children of Eleasar, and Ahimelech out of the children of Ithamar, acordinge to their nombre and office. And there were no chefe stronge men founde amongst the children of Eleasar, then the children of Ithamar. And he ordened them after this maner: namely, sixene out of the children of Eleasar to be rulers thorow out their fathers house: eighteene out of the children of Ithamar thorow out their fathers house. Neuertheles he ordeyned them by lot, because that both the pryncipall of the children of Eleasar and of Ithamar were in the Sanctuary, and chefe before God. And the Serebe Semeia the sonne of Nethaneel one of the Leuites, wrote them vp before kyng and before the rulers, and before Sadoc the prest, before Ahimelech the sonne of Abia-thar, before the chefe of the fathers amongst the prestes and the Leuites: namely one fathers house for Eleasar, and the other for Ithamar.

And the first lot fell vpon Iliari, the seconde vpon Iedana, the thirde vpon Harim, the fourth vpon Seorim, the fifth vpon Malchia, the sixte vpon Meiamin, the seuenthe vpon Hakoz, the eighte vpon Abia, the nyenth vpon Iesua, the tenth vpon Sechania, the elenenthe vpon Eliasib, the twolueth vpon Iakim, the thirtene vpon Hupa, the fourtene vpon Iesebeab, the fiftene vpon Bilga, the sixtene vpon Immer, the seuenteneth vpon Hezir, the eighteneth vpon Hapizez, the nyenteneth vpon Pethabia, the twentieth vpon Iezechiel, the one and twentieth vpon Iachin, the two and twentieth vpon Samul, the three and twentieth vpon Dalaia, the foure and twentieth vpon Masia. This is their course after their office, to goe in to the house of the LORDE, acordinge to their maner vnder their father Aaron, as the LORDE God of Israel commanded him.

Of the children of Levi amongst the children of Amram, was Subael. Amonge the children of Subael, was Iohdea. Amonge the children of Rehavia, was t first Iesia. Amonge the Izecharites was Selomoth. Amonge the children of Selomoth was Iahath. The children of Hebron were: Iuria the first, Amaria the second, Iehasiel the third, Iakneam the fourth.

The children of Viel were: Micha. Among the children of Micha was Samir. The brother of Micha was Iesia. Amonge the children of Iesia was Zacharias. The children of Merari were: Maheli and Musi, whose sonne was Iaesia. The children of Merari of his sonne Iaesia were: Soham, Saur and Iibri. Maheli had Elesar: for he had no sonnes. Of Cis, the children of Cis were: Ierahmeel and Musi. The children of Musi were: Maheli, Eder and Ieremoth. These are the children of Ieuelites thorow out Ie house of their fathers. And the lot was cast for them also beside their brethren the children of Aaron, in the presence of kyndge David and Sodoc and Ahimelech, and before the chefe fathers amonge the prestes of Leuites, as well for the leest brother as for the cheifest amonge the fathers.

The 116. Chapter.

A ND David with the chefe captaynes sundered to the offices amonge these children of Assaph, Heman and Iedithun the prophets with harpes, psalteries and Cymbales, and they were nombred vnto the worke acordynge to their office. Amonge the children of Assaph was Sakur, Joseph, Nethania, Asarela, children of Assaph vnder Assaph which prophesied besyde Ie kynde. Of Iedithun: The children of Iedithun were: Gedalia, Zori, Iesia, Hasabia, Mathithia (Simei) these sixe vnder their father Iedithun with harpes, whose prophesie were to gene thanks and to praise the LORDE. Of Heman: The children of Heman were: Bukia, Mathania, Vscil, Suhel, Ierimoth, Hanania, Hanani, Eliatha, Gilthi, Romanthesier, Iaszbaksa, Malloth, Hotir and Mehesioth. All these were the children of Hemah the kynges Seer in the wordes of God to lyfte vp the horne: for God gaue Heman fourtenote sonnes to three daughters.

All these were vnder their fathers Assaph Iedithun and Heman, to synge in the house of the LORDE with Cymbales, Psalteries with harpes, acordynge to the office in the house of God besyde the kynde. And their nombre with their brethren, which were taughte in the songe of the LORDE (every one haungne vnderstanding) was two hundreth eighty and foure score. And they cast the lots over their office, for the leest as for the greatest, for the master as for the scolar.

And the first Lot fell vpon Joseph which was of Assaph: the seconde vpon Gedolia with his brethren and sonnes, of whom there were twolue. The thirde vpon Sacur with his sonnes and brethren, of who there were twolue. The fourth vpon Iesri with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The fyfth vpon Nathania with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The syxte vpon Bukia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The seventh vpon Iesreela with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The eighte vpon Iesia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The nyenthe vpon Mathania with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The tenth vpon Simei with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The eleventh vpon Asraeel with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The twolue vpon Hasabia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The thirtnenthe vpon Subael with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The fourtenth vpon Mathithia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The fiftenth vpon Ieremoth with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The syxte vpon Iesia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The eighte vpon Iesia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The ninth vpon Hanani with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The eleventh vpon Anania with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The twolue vpon Iaszbakasa with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The seconde vpon Hotir with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The one twentieth vpon Gidalthi with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The two and twentieth vpon Mehesioth with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The three and twentieth vpon Mehesiothes with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue.

The 117. Chapter.

O f the ordinances of the dorekeepers.

Amonge the Korahytes was Meselemia of the children of Assaph. The children of Meselemia were these: the firstborn Zacharias, the second Iediael, the third Sebadia, the fourth Iathiel, the fifth Elam, the sixth Iohanan, the seventh Eliomai. The children of Obed Edom were these: the firstborn Semaiia, the second Hosab, the third Iosab, the fourth Zacharias, the fifth Ethaneel, the sixth Ammiel, the seventh Isachar, the eight Pegulthai: for God had blessed him. And unto Semaiia his sonne there were sonnes borne also, which bare rule in the house of their fathers: for they were mightie vallaeant men. The children of Semaiia were, Athni, Reuah, Obed and Elsabad, whose brethren were vallaeant men, Elihu and Semachia: all these were of the children of Obed Edom. Meselemiad had children and brethren which were strong men, euene eightene.

Hossa of the children of Merari had children, Simri the cheifest: for his firstborn was not there, theryfore dyd his father appoynte him to be cheifest, the seconde Helchias, the third Tevalia, the fourth Zacharias. All the children and brethren of Hossa were thirtene.

This is the ordinance of the dorekepers amonge the heads of the vallaeant men in the office besyde their brethren, to mynister in the house of the LORDE. And the lot was cast for the small as for his greate thowre out the house of their fathers at euery dore. The lot toward the East fell vpon Meselemia. And the lot was cast for Zacharias his sonne, which was a man of prudent counsell, and vnto him it fell toward the North: But vnto Obed Edom toward the South, and to his sonnes besyde the house of Esupim. And vnto Supim and Hossa toward the West by the gate of Salechet in the strete of the burntofferinges, where the tabernacles stonde together.

Toward the East were there sixe of the Leviotes. Towarde the north foure on ye daie tyne. Towarde the south foure on the daye season likewise. Besyde Esupim twoe and twoe. By Parbar westwarde were there foure in the strete, and twoe besyde Parbar. These are the ordinance of the dorekepers amonge the children of the Korahites, and the children of Merari. Of the Leviotes, was Abia over the treasures of the house of God, and over the treasures that were sanctified.

Of the children of Laedan, the children of the Gersonites. Of Laedan were these the heads of the fathers, namely Elieelites. The children of the Iehielites were, Sethia and his brother Jocel over the treasures of the house of the LORDE. Amonge the Amranites, Iezeharites, Hebronites and Vzielites, was Sesobail the sonne of Gerson the sonne of Moses, preyne over the treasures. His brother Elieser had a sonne Rehahia, whose sonne was Iezaia, whose sonne was Iorah, whose sonne was Sichri, whose sonne was Selomith: the same Selomith and his brethren were over all the treasures of the thinges that were halowed, which kinge Dauyd halowed, and the pyncipall of the fathers amonge the rulers over thousandes and over hundreds, and rulers in the howst (of warrs and spoyles had they halowed it, to repayre the house of the LORDE) and over all the Samuel the Seer, and Saul the sonne of Cis, Abner the sonne of Ner, and Ioab the sonne of Zera 1a had halowed: what so euere was sanctifie, it was vnder the hande of Selomith and his brethren. Amonge the Iezeharites was Cheniaia with his sonnes for the worke without over Israel, officers and Judges. Amonge the Hebronites was Habsia his brethren, vallaeant men, a thousande and seuen hundred, over the offices of Israel on this syde Iordane westwarde for all maner worke of the LORDE, and to serve the kynge.

But amonge the Hebronites was Ieria the cheifest amonge the Hebronites of his kinred amonge the fathers. And search was made amonge them, and in the foureth yeare of kyng Dauyd there were founde vallaeant men at Iaaser in Gilead, and their brethren mightie men, two thousande and seuen hundred pryncipall fathers, and Dauyd set the over the Rubenites, Gaddites, and over the halfe trybe of Manasses, for all soch busynes as belonged vnto God and the kyng.

The 12th Chapter.

The children of Israel acordinge to their name, were heads of the fathers, and over thousandes and over hundreds, officers waytinge vpon the kyng, to go of them after their course euery moneth one, in all ye monethes of ye yeare. Every course had foure two thousande.

Over the first course of the first moneth, was Iasebeian sonne of Sabdiel, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

Of the children of Phares was the pryncipall amonge all the chefe captayne in the first moneth.

Ouer the course of the seconde moneth was Dodai the Ahohite, and Mikloth was the pryncye ouer his course. And vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The thinde pryncipall captayne of the thirde moneth, was Benaia the sonne of Ioiada \(^\) prest, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande. \(^\)This is \(#\) Benaia the Worthie amonge thirte and aboue thirte. And his course was vnder his sonne Ammi Sabad.

The fourth in \(#\) fourth moneth was Asahel the brother of Ioab, and Sabadia his sonne after him, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The fifth in the fifth moneth was Sameulh the Iesrahite, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The sixte in the sixte moneth, was Ira \(#\) sonne of Ickes the Thecoite, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The seventh in the seventh moneth, was Helez the Pelonite of the children of Ephraim, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The eight in the eighth moneth, was Sibechai the Husathite of \(#\) Sarehites, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The nyenth in the nyenth moneth, was Abieser the Anthothite of the childre of Ie-mi, \(#\) vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The tenth in the tenth moneth, was Mahera the Netophatite of the Serahites, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The eleventh in the eleventh moneth, was Benaia the Pirgathonite of the children of Ephraim, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

The twelveth in the twelveth moneth was Heldai \(#\) Netophatite of Athnien, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande.

Ouer the trybys of Israel were these: Amonge the Rubenites was Prynce Eliiser the sonne of Sichri. Amonge the Simeonites was Sephatia the sonne of Maecha. Amonge the Leuites was Hasabia the sonne of Kemuel. Amonge the Aarontites was Sadoc. Amoge Juda was Elihu one of Davids brethren. Amonge Isachar was Amri the sonne of Michael. Amonge Zabu\(\text{\textlig}l\) was Ismaia the sonne of Obadia. Amonge Nephtali was Jeremoth the sonne of Asriel. Amonge the children of Ephraim was Hosea the sonne of Asasia. Amonge the hale trybe of Manasses was Ioel the sonne of Pedaia. Amonge the hale trybe of Manasses in Gilead was Ieddo the sonne of Zacharias. Amonge Ben Iamin was Iaesiel the sonne of Abner. Amonge Dan was Asareel the sonne of Ieroham. These are the princes of the trybes of Israel.

But Davyd toke not the nombre of them that were twentye yeare olde and there vnder: for the Lorde had promysed to multiplye Israel as the starres of the szkies. \(^*\)Howbeit Ioab the sonne of Zerua had begonne to nombre them, and perfourmed it not: for there came wrath vpon Israel for the same cause, therefor came not the nombre in to \(#\) Chronicles of kyngy Davyd.

Ouer the kynges treasures was Asmaueth the sonne of Adiel. And ouer the treasures in the lode, in the cities, vyllages and castels was Ionathan the sonne of V\(\text{\textlig}a\). Ouer the husbandmen to tyll the londe was Esri the sonne of Chelub. \(^*\)Ouer the vynyards was Simei the Ramathite. Ouer the wyne Cellers and treasures of wyne was Sabdi the Siphinite. Ouer the oyle gardens and Molbery trees in the lowe feldes, was Baal Hanan the Gaderite. Ouer the treasure of the oyle was Ioa. Ouer \(#\) oxe of the pasture at Saro was Sitari the Saronite. Ouer the oxe in the valleys was Saphath the sonne of A\(\text{\textlig}a\).

Ouer the Camels was Obil the Ismaelite. Ouer the asses was Iehethia the Meronothite. Ouer the shepe was Iasis the Hagarite. All these were rulers ouer kyng Davids goodes. Ionathan Davids vnele was of the counceell a wyse man and a scrybe. And Iehiel the sonne of Hachmoni was with the kynges children. \(^*\)Achitophel also was of the kynges counceell. Husai the Arachite was the kynges frende. After Achitophel was Ioiada \(#\) sonne of Benaia and Abiaithar. As for Ioab, he was the kynges chefe captayne of warre.

And Davyd gathered vnto Jerusalem all the rulers of Israel, namely \(#\) prynces of the trybes, the rulers ouer the courses, which wayed vpon the kyng, the captaynes ouer thousands and ouer hundreds, the rulers over the goodes and catell of the kyng and of his sonnes, with the chaberlaines, warryers and valeaunt men. And Dauid the kyng stode vp vpon his fete, and saide: Heare me my brethren and my people: *I was mynyed to buylde an house, where the Arke of the couenaunt of the Lorde shulde rest, and a fote stole for the fete of oure God, and prepared my selfe for to buylde, But God sayde vnto me: *Thou shalt not buylde an house vnto my name, for thou art a man of warre, and hast shed bloude.

† Now hath the LORDE God of Israel chosen me out of all my fathers house, †I shulde be kyng ouer Israel: for ‡Iuda hath he chosen to be the Pryncyse, and in the house of Iuda amonge my fathers children hath he had pleasure vnto me, to make me kyng ouer all Israel: and amonge all my sonnes (for the LORDE hath geuen me many sonnes) he hath chosen Salomon my sonne, to syt vpon the seate of the kyngdome of the LORDE ouer Israel, and hath sayde vnto me: § Salomon thy sonne shall buylde an house and my courtes: for I haue chosen him to be my sonne, †I will be his father, ‡will stablishe his kyngdome for euer, yf he be constant to do after my commandementes and lawes, as it is this daye. Now in the sight of all Israel the congregacion of the LORDE, and in the eares of oure God, se that ye observere and seke all the commandemētes of the LORDE youre God, that ye maye possesse this good londe and that ye and youre children maie haue † inheritance therof for euer.

And thou my sonne Salomō, knowe thou the God of thy father, and serue him with all thy hert, and with the desyre of thy soule: for the LORDE searcheth all hertes, and vnderstondeth all thoughtes †y imaginations. Yf thou seke him, thou shalt fynde him: but yf thou forsake him, he shall refuse the for euer. Take hede now, for the LORDE hath chosen the, to buylde an house to the Sanctuary: be stronge, and make it.

And Dauid gaue Salomon his sonne a patron of the Porche, and of his house, and of the celles and perlers and ymnermer châbers, and of the house of the Mercyseate, †all that he had in his mynde, namely of the courte of the LORDES house, and of all the oratories rounde aboute the treasures in the house of God, and of the treasures of such things as were halowed, of the ordinances of the prestes, and Leuites, and of all †y busynesse of the offyces in the house of the LORDE.

Godle (gane he him) after †y golde weight for all maner of vessels of euery offyce, and all syluer ornamentes after the weight for all maner of vessel of euery offyce: and weight for the golde candistickes and golde lamps, for euery candilstycke and his lamps his weight: likewise for the syluer candistickes gaue he the weight to the candisticke †y his lamps, acordyng as was required for euery candilstycke. He gaue golde also for †y tables of the shewbred, for euery table his weight: and syluer lykewise for the syluer tables. And pure golde for the fleshokes, basens and censors: and for the golde cuppes, vnto euery cuppe his weight: and for the syluer cuppes, vnto euery cuppe his weight: and for the altare of incense his weighte, of the most pure golde.

And a patron of the charrett of the golden Cherubins, that they might sprede out them selues, and couer the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE. All this is geuen me in wrytinge of the hande of the LORDE, to make me vnderstande all the workes of the patron.

And Dauid sayde vnto Salomō his sonne: Be thou manly and stronge, and make it, feare not, and be not fayntharted, the LORDE God my God shall be with the, and shall not withdrawe his hande, ner fayle the, tyll thou haue fyned euery worke for the servyce in the house of the LORDE. Beholde, the courses of the prestes and Leuites to all the offyces in the house of God are with the in euery worke, and are willinge, and haue wisdome to all the offyces: and so haue the prynces and all the people for euery thinge that thou hast to do.

AND kyng Dauid sayde vnto all the congregacion: God hath chosen Salomon one of my sonnes, which yet is yonge and tender. But the worke is greate: for it is not a mans palace, but the LORDE Gods. Yet haue I after all my abilite prepared vnto the house of God, golde for the vessels of golde, syluer for them of syluer, brasse for them of brasse, yron for the of yron, wod for them of wod, Onix stones, set Rubyes, †stones of dyuere colours, †all precious stones, †

ND Salomon the sonne of Dauid was stablyshed in his kyngdome, \(\aleph\) and the LORD his God was with him, \(\aleph\) made him exceedinge greate. And Salomon spake vnto all Israel, to the captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundreds, to the Judges, and to all \(\aleph\) prynce ines in Israel, and to the cheifest fathers, so that they wente (Salomon and the whole congregacion with him) vnto the hye place which was at Gibea: \(\ast\) for there was \(\aleph\) Tabernacle of \(\aleph\) witness of God, \(\dagger\) which Moses the seruaunt of the LORD had made in \(\aleph\) wylderness. \(\dagger\) For Dauid had brought vp the Arke of God from Kiriaith Iarim, whan he had prepared for it: for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem. As for \(\aleph\) brasen altare \($\) which Bezaleel the sonne of Vri the sonne of Hur had made, it was there before the habita- of the LORD: and Salomon and the congregacion soughte God. And Salomon offereth a thousande burntofferynges vpov the brasen altare that stode before the Tabernacle of witness.

In the same nighte appeared God vnto Salomon, and sayde vnto hym: Axe, what shal I geue the? And Salomon sayde vnto God: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father Dauid, and hast made me kyng in his steade. Now LORD God, let thy worde that thou hast promysed vnto my father

\(\ast\) 3 Reg. 3. a. \(\ast\) 1 Par. 22. e. \(\dagger\) Exo. 36. b. \(\dagger\) 2 Re. 6. a. \($\) Exo. 33. a. 54
Because and is for As Cæp. no, for the kynge, kynge, thour thou Dauid, that they came broughte horse Hethites, thre burthens, sixe sendedst for of the house, dwelling of the house, the house, the house, the hous, horse, horses, and horsmen, and and, so that so thou hath not bene before the amõge the kynges, nether shall be after the.

So came Salomon from the hye place (which was at Gibeon) vnfo Ierusulæ from Tabernacle of witnesses, and reigned over Israel. And Salomon gathered him charettes and horsmen, so that he had a thousande and foure hundreth charrettes, twolue thousande horsmen: and those appoynted he to be in the charet cities, and with the kynge at Jerusalem. And the kynge broughte it so to passe, that there was as much syluer æ golde at Ierusulæ as stones: and as many Ceders, as the Moberyes trees, that are in the valleys. And there were horses broughte vnfo Salomon out of Egipte, æ the kynges marchauntes fetched them from Kena for money. And they came vp, and broughte out of Egipte a charret for sixe hridreth syluer peis, and an horse for an hundreth and fiftye. Thus broughte they also vnfo all the kynges of the Hethites, and to the kynges of Syrians.

The ij. Chapter.

AND Salomon thoughte to buylde an house vnfo the name of the LORDE, æ an house for his kyngdome: and tolde out thre score and ten thousande men to beare burthen, and foure score thousande that hewed tymber vpö the mount, and thre thousande and sixe hundreth officers ouer them. And Salomon sent vnfo Hiram the kyng of Tyre, sayenge: As thou dydest with my father, sendedst him Ceder trees, to builde an house for to dwell in (even so do thou with me also.) Beholde, I wyl buylde an house vnfo the name of the LORDE my God, to sanctifie it, for to burne good incense before him, and allwaye to prepare shewbred, and burnt offerings in the mornynge and in the cuenynge, on the Sabbathes New mones, and solemn feastes of LORDE oure God euermore for Israel.

And the house that I wyl buylde, shal be greater: for oure God is greater then all goddes. But who is able to buylde him an house? For heauen æ the heauens of all heauens maye not copehende him. Who am I then, that I shulde buylde him an house? But onely for this intent to burne incense before him?

Sëde me now therfore a wyse mā to worke with golde, syluer, brasse, yron, scarlet, purple, yalow sylker, and socch one as can grane carued worke with the wyse men that are with me in Iewry and Jerusalem, whom my father Dauid ordeyned. And sende me tymbre of Ceder, pyne tre and costly wod from Libanus: for I knowe that thy seruauntes can hewe tymber upon Libanus. And beholde, my seruauntes shalbe with thy seruauntes, to prepare me moche tymber: for the house that I wyl buylde, shalbe greater æ maruelous goodly.

And beholde, I wyl geue vnfo the carpenters thy seruauntes which hewe the tymber, twyte thousande quarters, of beaten wheate, and twentye thousande quarters of barley, and twentye thousande Batthes of wyne, and twentye thousande Batthes of oyle.

Then sayde Hiram the kyng of Tyre by wrytinge, and sent it vnfo Salomon: Because the LORDE loueth his people, therfore hath he made æ to be kyng ouer them. And Hiram sayde morouer: Prayes be LORDE God of Israel, which made heauen æ earth, that he hath geue kyngge Dauid a wyse and prudent sonne, and socch one as hath understandinge to buylde an house vnfo the LORDE, æ an house for his realme. Therfore sende I now a wyse man that hath vnderstandinge, ë sueen Hiram Abi (which is the sonne of a woman of the doughters of Dan, and his father was of Tyre) which can worke in golde, syluer, brasse, yron, stone, tymber, scarlet, yalowe sylke, lynmen, purple and to carue all maner of thinges, and to make what cõynge thinge so euer is geuen him, with thy wyse men, and with the wyse men of my lorde kyngge Dauid thy father. And now let my lorde sende the wheate, barley, oyle and wyne vnfo his seruauntes, acordinge as he hath sayde, and so wyll we hewe y tynber vpon Libanus, as mouch as thou nest, and wyll brynge it by flotes in the See vnto Iapho, from whence thou mayest brynge it vp to Ierusalem.

And Salomon nombred all the straungers in the londe of Israel, acordinge to the nombre when David his father nombred them: and there were founde an hundreth & fiftie thousande, thre thousande and sixe hundreth. And of the same he made thre score and ten thousande bearers of burthen, and foure score thousande hewers vpō y mount, and thre thousande and sixe hundreth ouerseers, which helde y people at their worke.

The iii. Chapter.

A ND Salomon beganne to bylde the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem vpō the mount Moria, *that was shewed vnto David his father, which David had prepared for the rowme, vpō the corne floore of Arman the Iebusite. In the seconde daye of the seconde moneth in the fourth yeare of his reigne begane he to bylde. And so layed Salomon the foundation to bylde the house of God: first the length thre score cubites, the breth twentye cubites: and the Porche before the wydennes of the house, was twentye cubites longe, but the heighth was an hundreth and twentye, and he ouerlayed it on the ynsye with pure golde.

But the grete house syled he with Pynte, and ouerlayed it with the best golde, and made palme trees and throwne worke theron, and ouerlayed the house with precious stones to beautifye it. As for the golde, it was golde of Paraulim. And the balkes and postes aboue, and the walles, and the dores of it ouerlayed he with golde, and caused Cherubins to be carued on the walles.

He made also the house of the Most holy, whose length was twentye cubites acordinge to the wydennes of the house: and the breth of it was twentye cubites likewise, and he ouerlayed it with the best golde by sixe hundreth talentes. And for nales he gane fiftye Sicles of golde in weight, and ouerlayed the chambers with golde. He made also in the house of the most holy, two Cherubins of carued worke, and ouerlayed them with golde: and the length on the wynges of the Cherubins, so that one wyng hadde fyue cubites, and touched the wall of the house: and the other wyng had fyue cubites also, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub.

Euen so had one wyng of the other Cherub fyue cubites likewise, and touched the wall of the house: and his other wyng had fyue cubites also, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub: so that these wynges of the Cherubins were spred out twentye cubites wyde. And they stode vpō their fete, and their face was turned to the house warde.

He made a yvale also of kalow sylke, scarlet, purple and lynenworke, and made Cherubins theron. And before the house he made two pilers fyue and thirtie cubites longe, and the knoppes aboue theron, fyue cubites. And he made throwne worke for the quere, and put it aboue vpō the pilers: and made an hundreth pomgranates, and put them on the wrythren worke. And he set vp the pilers before the temple, the one on the righte honde, and the other on the lefte: and that on the righte honde he called he Iachin, and it on the lefte honde he called he Boos.

The iii. Chapter.

H E made a brasen altare also, twentye cubites longe, and twentye cubites brede, and ten cubites hye. And he made a molten lauer ten cubites wyde frō the one syde to the other rounde aboue, and fyue cubites hye. And a metelyne of thirtie cubites mighte comprehende it aboue. And ymages of Bullockes were vnder it. And aboue the lauer (which was ten cubites wyde) there were two rows of knoppes, y were molten withall.

It stode so vpon the bullockes, that thre were turned warde towards the north, thre towards the west, thre towards the south, and thre towards the east, and the lauer aboue vpon them, and all their hynder partes were on the ynsye. The thickeenesse of it was an hand breth, and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a flourde rose. And it conteyned thre thousande Batthes.

And he made ten kettels, wherof he set fyue on the righte hande and fyue on the lefte, to waszhe in them soch thinges as belonged to the burntofferynge, that they mighte thrust them therin: but y lauer (made he) for the prestes to wash in.

* 1 Par. 22. d.
† 3 Reg. 7. d.
Ten golden candlestickes made he also as they ought to be, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made ten tables, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made an hundredth basens of golde. He made a courte likewise for the prestes, and a greate courte, and dores in the courte, and overlaid \( \delta \) dores with brasse. And the lauer set he on the righte syde toward the south east. And Hiram made cauldrons, shouels and basens.

So Hiram fynished the worke which he made for kyng Salomon in the house of God: namely the two pilers with the roundels and knoppes aboue vpon both the pilers, and both the wrythen ropes to cover both the roundels of \( \gamma \) knoppes aboue vp\( \delta \) the pilers, and the four hundredth pomgranates on both the wryth\( \delta \) ropes, two rows of pomgranates on euery rope, to cover the roundels of the knoppes that were aboue vpon the pilers.

He made the stoles also and \( \gamma \) kettels vpon the stoles, and a lauer, and twelue bullockes there vnder. And pottes, shouels, fleshokes, and all their vessels made Hiram Abif of pure metall for kyng Salomon vnto the house of the LORDE. In the coaste of Iordane dyd the kyng cause them to be molten in thicke earth betwene Suchoth and Zaredatha.

And Salomon made all these vessels which were so many, that the weight of \( \gamma \) metall was not to be sough\( \delta \) out. And Salomon made all the ornamentes for the house of God: namely, the golden altare, the tables and the shewbreds theron, the candlestickes with their lampes of pure golde, to burne before the Quere according to the maner: and the floures and the lampes and the snoffers were of golde, all these were of pure golde.

And the knyues, basens, spones and pottes, were of pure golde. And the inramme and his dores within vnto the Most holy, and the dores of the house of the temple were of golde. Thus was all \( \gamma \) worke fynished, which Salomon made in the house of the LORDE.

The 6. Chaptr

AND Salomon broughte in all \( \gamma \) his father Dauid had sanctified,\( ^* \) namely, syluer and golde, and all maner of ornamentes, and layed them in the treasures of the house of God. \( ^* \) The\( \gamma \) gathered Salomon all the Elders in Israel together, all \( \gamma \) heads of the trybes, prynces of the fathers am\( \delta \)e the childr\( \delta \) of Israel vnto Ierusal\( \delta \), to brynge vp the Arke of the covenant of the LORDE out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vp\( \delta \) the kyng all the men in Israel at the feast, that is in the seventh moneth, and all \( \gamma \) Elders in Israel came.

And \( \gamma \) Leuites toke the Arke, \( g \) broughte it vp with the Tabernacle of witnesse, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tabernacle: and \( \gamma \) prestes and Leuites broughte them vp. As for kyng Salomon and all the c\( \delta \)gregation of Israel that was gathered vnto him before the Arke, they offred shepe and oxen, so many, that no man coulde nombre ner reken them.

Thus the prestes broughte the Arke of \( \gamma \) covenant of the LORDE vnto hir place in to the quere of the house, euyn in to \( \gamma \) Most holy vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, so that the Cherubins spred out their wynges ouer the place of the Arke: and the Cherubins couered the Arke and the staues therof from aboue. And the staues were so longe, \( \gamma \) the knoppes of them were sene from the Arke before the quere, but on the outsyde were they not sene. And it was there vnto this daye. And there was nothinge in the Arke, saue the two tables, which Moses put therin at Horeb, when the LORDE made a covenant with the childr\( \delta \) of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of Egypte.

And when the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary (for all \( \gamma \) prestes that were founde, sanctified them selues, because the courses were not kepe) the Leuites with all those that were vnder Asaph, Heman, Ledithun and their children and brethren, beyng clothed in lynnen, songe with Cymbales, psalters and harpes, and stode toward the east parte of the altare, and an hundredth \( \gamma \) twenty prestes with them, which blewe with trompettes. And it was, as \( \gamma \) one dyd trompet and syngge, as though a voyce had bene herde of praysinge and geuynge thankes vnto the LORDE.

And when the voyce arose from \( \gamma \) trompettes, cymbales and other instrumentes of musick, and from praysinge the LORDE (because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer) the house of the LORDE was fylled on the ynsyde with a cloude, so ṣ the prestes coulde not stonde to mynstir for the cloude: for the glory of the LORDE fylled the house of God.

The 6. Chapter.

THEN sayde Salomon: The LORDE sayde, *that he wolde dwell in a dark cloude: I have buylde an house to be an habitation vnto the: BackColor  a seate, * thou mayest dwell there for euer. And the kynde turned his face, and blessed all the congregation of Israel: for the whole cōgregacion of Israel stode, * he sayde: Prayed be the LORDE God of Israel, which promysed by his mouth vnto my father Dauid, and with his hande hath fulfylled it, whā he sayde: * Sēce the tyme that I broughte my people out of the londe of Egipte, I haue chosen no cite in all * trybes of Israel, to buylde an house for my name to be there, nether haue I chosen eny man to be prynce over my people of Israel. * But Israel haue I chosen, for my name to be there: * Dauid haue I electe, to be prynce over my people of Israel.

And when my father Dauid was mynded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel, the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid my father: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well: howbeit thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sone which shall come out of thy loynes, shal buylde the house vnto my name. \n
Thus hath ṣ LORDE now perfourmed his worde, that he spake: for I am come vp in my father Dauids steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, even as the LORDE sayde, * haue buylde an house vnto the name of ṣ LORDE God of Israel, ṣ in it haue I put ṣ Arke, wherin is the couenaunt of ṣ LORDE, which he made with the childrē of Israel.

And he stode before the altare of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congreagacion of Israel, and spred out his handes: * for Salomon had made a brased pulpit, and set it in the myydes of the courte, fyue cubites longe, and fyue cubites brode, and thre cubites hye: vpon the same stode he, and fell downe vpon his knees in the presence of the whole cōgregacion of Israel, and helde out his handes towards heauen and sayde: * O LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, nether in heauen ner vpon earth, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for thy seruantes, that walke before the with all their hert. Thou hast kepte promes with my father Dauid thy seruante: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfylled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel, make good vnto my father Dauid thy seruante, that which thou hast promysed him, * sayde: Thou shalt not want a man before me, to syt vpon the seate of Israel: * thy children kepe their waye, so * they walke in my lawe, like as thou hast walked before me: Now LORDE God of Israel, let thy worde be verified, which thou hast promysed vnto Dauid thy seruante.

For thinkest thou that God in very dede dwelleth amonge men vpon earth? * Beholde, the heauen and * heauens of all heauens maye not côtēyne the: how shulde then this house do it, which I haue buylde? * But turre the vnto the prayer of thy seruante, and to his supplicacio (O LORDE my God) that thou mayest heare the thankesgeuynge and prayer, which thy seruanta maketh before the, so that thine eyes be open ouer this house daye and night, enen ouer this place (wherin thou saydest thou woldest set thy name) that thou mayest heare the prayer, which thy seruante shall make in this place. * Heare now therfore the intercession of thy seruanta and of thy people of Israel, what so euer they shall desyre in this place: heare thou it from the place of thy habitation, ene from heauen: and when thou hearest it, be mercifull.

* Whan eny mā synmeth agaynst his neghbour, and an ooth be put vpon him which he ought to sware, and the ooth commeth before thine altare in this house, then heare thou from heauen, and se * thy seruanta haue righte, so that thou warde the vngodly, and recōpence him his waye vpon his awne heade, and to justifie the righteous, and to geue him accordance to his righteousnes.

Whan thy people of Israel is smyttē before their enemies (whyle they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they turne vnto the, and knowlege thy name, and make their prayer and intercession before the in this house, then hear thou them from heauen, and be mercifull vnto the syme of thy people of Israel, t brynge them agayne in to the londe, y thou hast geuen them and their fathers.

* Whan the heauen is shut vp, so that it rayne not (for so moch as they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they make their prayer in this place, and knowlege thy name, and turne from their synnes (whan thou hast brought them lowe) heare thou them then in heauen, and be mercifull vnto the syme of thy seruauntes, and of thy people of Israel, that thou mayest teach them the good waye wherin they shulde walke, and let it rayne vpon thy londe which thou hast geuen thy people to possess.

Whan a derth, or pestilence, or drouth, or blastinge, or greshopper or catirpiller, is in the londe: Or whan their enemye layeth sege to their portes in the lode, or when any other plage or disease happeneth, who so euer the maketh his prayer or peticion amongst any maner of men, or amongst all thy people of Israel, yf eny man fele his plage and disease, and spredeth out his handes vnto this house, heare thou then from heauen, euen from thy seate of thy habitation, and be mercifull: and geue every man according to all his wayes, in so much as thou knowest his hert (for thou onely knowest the hert of the children of men) that they maye feare the, and allwaye walke in thy wayes, as longe as they lyue in the londe, which thou hast geuen vntooure fathers.

And whan eny straunger which is not of thy people of Israel, commeth out of a farre countre because of thy greate name, and mightie hande, and out stretched arme, and commeth to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then from heauene, euon from the seate of thy habitation: and do all for y which that straunger calleth vp the, that all the nacies vpon earth maye knowe thy name, and feare the, as thy people of Israel do: and that they maye knowe, how y this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

Whan thy people go forth to y battayl agaynst their enemies, the waye that thou shalt sende them, and shall praye vnto the t towards the wave of this cite which thou hast chosen, and towards the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name, heare thou the their prayer and peticion from heauen, and helpe them to their righte.

Whan they synne agaynst the (if for there is no man that synneth not) and thou be wroth at them, and geue them ouer before their enemyes, so that they cary them awaye captuynge in to a countrie farre or nye, and yf they turne within their hertes in the londe where they are presoners, and so connerte, and make their intercession vnto the in the londe of their captuynge, and saye: We haue synned, and done anysse, and haue bene vngodly: and so turne them selues vnto y with all their hert and with all their soule in the londe of their captuynge, wherin they are presoners: and make their prayer towarde the waye of their owne londe, which thou gauest vnto their fathers, and towards the cite which thou hast chosen, and towards the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name: then heare thou their prayer and supplicacion from heauen, euon from the seate of thy dwellyngye, and helpe them to their righte, and be mercifull vnto thy people that haue synned agaynst the. My God, let thine eyes now be opé, and let thine eares geue hede vnto prayer in this place. ¶ Arise now O LORDE God vnto thy restinge place, thou and the Arke of thy strength. Let thy prestes O LORDE God be clothed with health, and let thy sayentes reioyse ouer this good. LORDE God, turne not awaye the face of thine anoynted: thinke vpon the mercies of thy seruauant Daviud.

The vij. Chapter.

AND wha Salomō had ended his praiers, there fell a fyre from heauen, and co-sumed the burntofferynge and the other offerings. And the glory of the LORDE fyled the house, so that y prestes coulde not go in to the house of the LORDE, while y glory of the LORDE fyled y LORDES house. And all the children of Israel sawe the fyre fall downe, and the glory of the LORDE over the house: and they fell on their knees with their faces to the grounde vpon the pavement, and worshipped, and gave thanks vnto the LORDE, because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer. As for the kyng and all the people, they offered before the LORDE.
For kyng Salomon offred two and twente thousande bullockes, and an hundredth thousande and twentye thousande shepe, so both the kyng and all the people dedicated the house of God.

But the prestes stode in their watches, the Leuites with the musickall instrumentes of the LORDE, which kyng Dauid had caused to make for to geue thankes vnto the LORDE, (because his mercy endureth for euer) with psalms of Dauid thorow their hande. And the prestes blewe trompettes ouer agaynst them, and all Israel stode.

And Salomon halowed the myddelmost courte, which was before the house of the LORDE, for there prepared he the burntofferinges and the fat of the slayne offeringes: for the brasen altar that Salomon made, might not conteyne all the burntofferinges, meattofferinges, and the fat.

*And at the same tyme helde Salomon a feast seuen daies longe, and all Israel with him a very greate congregacion, from Hemath vnto the ryuer of Egipte, and on the eighth daye helde he a convocation. And for the dedicacion of the altare helde they seuen daies, and the feast seuen daies also.

But on the thre and twentyeth daye of the seuenth moneth he let the people go vnto their tentes joyfull and with mery hertes because of all the good, that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid, vnto Salomon, and to his people of Israel.

Thus fyndished Salomó the house of LORDE, and the kings house, and all came in his hert to make in the house of the LORDE, and in his owne house, prosperously. And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon in the nighte season, and sayde vnto hym : I haue herde thy prayer + and chosen this place vnto my selue for an house of sacrifeye.

Beholde, when I shut the heauen so it raine not, or commaunde the greshopper to consume the londe, or cause a pestilence to come amonge my people, to humble my people, which is named after my name : and yf they praye, and seke my face, and turne from their euell wayes, the wyl I heare them from heauen, and wyll forgeue their sinne, and heale their londe. So shal myyne eyes nowe be open, and myne ears shal be attente vnto prayer in this place. Thus haue I nowe chosen this house, and sanctified it, that my name maye be there for euer: and myne eyes and my hert shal allwaye be there.

And yf thou walke before me, as thy father Dauid walked, so that thou do all that I commaunde the, and kepe myne ordinance and lawes, then wyll I stablishe the seate of thy kyngdome, acordynge as I promysed thy father Dauid, and sayde : Thou shalt not wante a man to be lorde ouer Israel. But yf ye turne backe, and forsake myne ordynaunces and commaundementes which I haue layed before you, and so go youre waye, and serue other goddes, and worshippe them, the wyll I rote you out of my londe that I haue geuen you : and this house which I haue sanctified vnto my name, wil I cast awaye out of my presence, and geue it ouer to be a byworde and fabell amōge all naciones. And euery one that goeth by, shall be astonnyed at this hye house, and shall bysse at it, and saye: § Wherfore hath the LORDE deale thys with this londe and with this house? Then shall it be sayde : Euen because they haue forsaken the LORDE God of their fathers (which brought them out of the londe of Egipte) & haue cleued vnto other goddes, worshipped them, and serued the: therfore hath he brought all this euell vpon the.

The viij. Chapter.

And after twente yeares (wherin Salomon buylded the house of the LORDE and his owne house) he buylded the cyties also which Hiram gaue vnto Salomon, and caused the children of Israel to dwell therin. And Salomon wente vnto Hemath Zoba, and made it stronge, and buylded Thadmor in the wyldernes, and all the cornerstones which he buylded in Hemath. He buylded the vpper and lower Bethoron likewyse, so that they were stronge cities with wallses, portes and barres. And Baelath, and all the cornerstones which Salomon had, and all the cyties of the charettes and of the horse men, and all that Salomon had lust to buyld, both at Jerusalem and vpon Libanus, and in all the londe of his dominyon.

All the remnaunt of the people of the Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuites and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, and their children which they had lefte behynde them in the londe, (whom the children of Israel had not utterly destroyed) those dyd Salomon make trybutaries vnto this daye. As for the children of Israel, Salomon made no bondmen of them vnto his worke, but they were men of warre, and chefe captains, and ouer his charettes & horsmen. And the chefe of kynges Salomons officers were two hundreth and fiftie, which ruled the people.

And Salomon caused Pharaohs daughter to be fetched vpon all the hundreth of David, in to the house that he had builted for her: for he sayde: My wyfe shall not dwell in the house of David the kynga of Israel, for it is sanctified, in as much as Arke of the LORDE is come in to it.

Then offred Salomon burntofferynges vnto the LORDE vpon the LORDES altare, which he had builded before the porche, euery one vpon his daye to offre after the commande-mente of Moses, on the Sabbathes, Newmones at the appoynted seasons of the yeare, euon three tymes, namely in feast of vnluened bred, in the feast of weekes, in the feast of Tabermancles.

And he set the prestes in ordre to their ministracion *accodynge as David his father had appoynted, and the Leuites in their officeres, to geue thankes and to mynister in the presence of the prestes, euery one vpon his daye. And the dorekepers in their courses, euery one at his dore, for so had David the mā of God commaundayed.

And they departed not from the kynges commaundement over the prestes and Le-uites in euery matter and in the treasures. Thus was all Salomons busynesse made ready, from the daye that the foundation of the LORDES house was layed, till it was finished, so that the house of the LORDE was all prepared.

Then wente Salomon vnto Ezeon Geber, and vnto Eloth by the See syde in the londe of Edomea. And Hiram sent him shippes by his seruauntes which had knowlege of the See, and they wente with Salomōs seruauntes vnto Ophir, and fetched from thence foure hundreth and fiftie talentes of golde, and broughte it vnto kynga Salomon.

The ix. Chapter.

AND when the quene of rich Arabia herde the fame of Salomon, she came with a very greate tryne to Jerusalem (with Camels that bare spyces and golde, and precious stones) to prope Salomon with darke sentences. And when she eame vnto Salo-\-mōn, she spake vnto him all that she had deuyed in hir mynde. And the kynga tolde her all hir matters, Salomon had nothing in secrete, but he tolde it her.

And when the Quene of rich Arabia sawe the wyszdome of Salomon, and y house that he had builded, the meates of his table, the dwellings of his seruauntes, of his mynisters and their garments, his butlers and their apparell, and his parler where he wente vpon in to the house of the LORDE, she could no longer refrayne. And she sayde vnto the kynga: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behaueoure and of thy wyszdome: howbeit I wolde not beleue thy words, till I cam my selfe, sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe of thy greate wyszdome hath not bene tolde me: there is more in y then the fame that I haue herde. Happye are thy men, and happie are these thy seruauntes, thy awaye stonde before the, and heare thy wyszdome. Preysed be the LORDE thy God, which had soch plea-sure vnto the, that he hath set the vpon his seate to be kynga vnto the LORDE thy God. Because thy God loueth Israel, to set them vpon for ever, therfore hath he ordeyned y to be kynga ouer them, that thou shuldest mayntayne justice and equyte.

And she gaue y kynga an hundreth and twentye talentes of golde, very moch spycse precious stones. There were no mo soch spycses as these that the Quene of rich Arabia gaue vnto kynga Salomō. And Hiram seruauntes and the seruauntes of Salomon, which broughte golde from Ophir, broughte costly tymber also precious stones. And of the same costly tymber dyd Salomon cause to make staves in the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and harpes and psalteries for the Musicians. There was no soch tymber sene before in the londe of Iuda. But kynga Salomon gaue the Quene of riche Arabia all that she deysyed and axed, moch more then she had broughte vnto the kynga. And she returned, and departed in to hir londe with hir seruauntes.

The golde that was broughte vnto Salomon

* 1 Par. 10. d. + 3 Reg. 9. e.
in one yeare, was sixe hundreth and saxe and thre score talentes, besides that he chapmen and marchauntes broughte. And all the kynges of the Arabians, and the lorde in the londe broughte golde and syluer vnto Salomon. Of the which kyng Salomon made two hundreth speares of beaten golde, so saxe hundreth peeces of beaten golde came vp one speare: saxe hundreth shildes of beaten golde, so that three hundreth peeces of beaten golde came to one shylde: and the kyngs put the in the house of the wod of Libans. And the kyng made a greete seate of Yuerie, and overlaied it with pure golde: and the seate had saxe steppes, and a foestole of golde fastened vnto the seate, and it had two leannyng postes vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode beside the leannyng postes, and there stode twolue Lions vpó the syxe steppes on both the sides. In all realmes hath not soch one bene made. And all kynges Salomons drynkkyng vessels were of golde, and all the vessels of the house of the wod of Libanuns, were of pure golde: for syluer was rekened nothinge in Salomons tyme. For the kynges shippes wete vpon the See with the seruauntes of Hiru, came once in thre yeare, and brought golde, syluer, Yuerie, Apes and Pecockes. Thus was kyng Salomon greater then all the kynges vpon earth, in riches and wisdome. And all the kynges of the earth desired to see Salomons face, and to heare his wysdome, which God had geuen him in his hert. And they brought him yearly everie ma his present: Jewels of syluer and golde, raymet, harnesse, spyces, horses and Mules. And Salomon had foure thousande charet-horses, and twolue thousande horsmen, and put them in the charet cities, and with the kyng at Jerusalem. And he was lorde ouer all the kynges from the water vnto the londe of the Philistynes, and to the coaste of Egipte. And the kyng brought it so to passe, that there was as much syluer at Jerusalem as stones: and as many Ceders, as there were Molbery trees in the valleys. And there were horses broughte vnto him out of Egipte, and out of all countreis. What more there is to saye of Salomon, both of his first and of his last, beholde, it is written in the Chronicles of the prophet Nathan, and in the prophecyes of Ahia of Silo, and in the acts of Jeddi the Seer against Ieroboam, sonne of Nebat. And Salomōn reigned at Ierusalém ouer all Israel fouerte yeares. And Salomon fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in the eyte of Davids his father. And Roboāh his sonne was kige of his steade. The 7th. Chapter.

ROBOAM wente vnto Sichem: for all Israel was come vnto Sichem: to make him kyng. And when Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat herde that, which was in Egipte (whither he was fled for kyng Salomon) he came agayne out of Egipte. And they sent for him and called him. And Ieroboam came with all Israel, and spake to Roboam, and sayde: Thy father made oure yoke greuous: make thou lighter now than thy father, and heuy yoke that he layed vpon vs, and we will submytte oure selves vnto the. He sayde vnto them: Come to me agayne ouer three dayes. And people wete their waye. And Roboam the kyng axe councell at the Elders, which had stonde before Salomon his father whyle he lyued, and he sayde: What is youre councell, that I maye gene this people an answere? They spake vnto him, and he sayde: If thou be lyonge vnto this people, and deale gentilly with them, and gene them good wordes, then shal they allwaye be obedient vnto the. Neuertheless he forsoke the councell of the Elders that they had geuen him, and toke councell at the youngen men which were growne vp with him, and stode before him. And he sayde vnto the: What is youre councell, that we maye answere this people, which haue spoken vnto me, and said: Make oure yock lighter, thy father layed vpon vs? The yongemen were growne vp with him, spake vnto him, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the people, that haue talked with the spoken: Thy father made oure yock to heuy, make thou oure yock lighter, Thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My little finger shalbe thicker then my fathers lones. If my father hath layed an heuy yock vpon you, I wyll make youre yock the more. My father chastened you with scourges, but I wyll beate you with scorpions.

Now when Ieroboam and all the people came to Roboam on the thirde daye (acordyng as ye kinde sayde: Come to me againe on the thirde daie) the kyng gaue the an harde answer. And Roboam the kyng forsoke the counsell of the Elders, spake vnto the after yeonge mens counsell, sayde: Ye my father haue made youre yock to heuy, I wil make it yet heuyer. My father chastened you with scourges, but I wyl beate you with scorpions. Thus the kyng folowed not ye people: for so was it determyned of God, ye LORDE might stablysh his wordes, which he spake by Ahia of Silo, vnto Iero- boam "sonne of Nebat. But whan all Israel saw the kyng wolde not consente vnto them, ye people answered the kyng, and sayde: What porcion haue we then in Dauid, or inheritaunce in the sonne of I sai? Let every man of Israel get him to his tent. Loke thow now to thy house Dauid. And all Israel wente vnto their tentes, so that Roboam reigned but over the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Iuda. And Roboam sent forth Adoram the rentgatherer, but the children of Israel stoned him to death. And kyng Roboam strengthed himselfe vpon his charret, to flye vnto Ierusalem. Thus fell Israel awai from the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

The 11. Chapter.

AND whan Roboam came to Ierusalem, he gathered together the house of Iuda and Ben Iamin (euen an hũdredth and foure score thousande chosen men of armes) to fyghte agaynst Israel, that they mighte bryng the kyngdome agayn vnto Roboam. But ye wordes of the LORDE came to Semai a the man of God, and sayde: Speake to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kyng of Iuda, and to all Israel ye are in Iuda and Ben Iamin, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shal not go vp, ner fyght agaynst youre brethren: let every man go home agayn, for this is my dede. They herkened vnto the wordes of ye LORDE, and wete not forth agaynst Ieroboam. As for Roboam, he dwelt at Jerusalem, and buylde vp the stronge cities in Iuda, namely Bethleæ, Etan, Tekoa, Bethzur, Socho, Adullám, Gath, Maera, Siph, Adoraim, Laches, Aseka, Zarega, Aialon, and Hebron (which were the fensed cities in Iuda and Ben Iamin) he made them stronge, and set prynces therin, proyded them of vytayles, oyle and wyne, and in all cities prepared he shildes and speares, and made them very stronge. And Iuda and Ben Iamin were vnder him.

The Prestes and Leuiotes also came vnto him out of Israel and from all the borders thereof. And lefte their suburbs possession, and came to Iuda vnto Ierusalem: for Iero- boam and his sonnes expelled them, that they shulde not execute the office of ye prestone vnto ye LORDE. But for himselfe he foud prestes to ye hye places, to fieldedeuels places, which he causd to make. And after them came there men out of all the trybes of Israel, which gaue ouer their hertes to seke ye LORDE God of Israel, came to Ierusalem for to offer vnto the LORDE God of their fathers. And so strengthed they ye kyngdome of Iuda, and mātayned Roboam the sonne of Salomon thre yeare longe: for they walked in ye waye of Dauid ye Salomon thre yeares.

And Roboam toke Mahelath ye daughter of Jeremoth ye sonne of Dauid to wife, Abihail the daughter of Eliab ye sonne of Isai, which bare him these sonnes: Ieus, Semaria ye Sa- ham. After her toke he Maecha the daughter of Absalom, which bare him Abia, Athai Sisa and Selomith. But Roboam loued Maecha the daughter of Absalom better then all his wyues the concubynes: for he had eightene wyues and thre score cõcubynes, and begat eight thre hundred yeares, and thre score doughters. And Roboam set Abia the sonne of Maecha to be heade and prynce amonse his brethren: for he thoughte to make him kyng: for he was wyse, more mightie then all his sonnes in all the countrees of Iuda ye Ben Iamin, and in all the stronge citie. And he gaued them plenteousnes of fode, and desyred many wyues.

The 111. Chapter.

But wha the kyngdome of Roboam was confirmed and stablyshed, he forsoke the lawe of the LORDE all Israel with him. And in the fifth yeare of Roboam were Sisack the kyng of Egypte vnto agaynst Ierusalem (for they had transgressed against the LORDE) with a thousande and two hundred charretts, and with thre score thousande horsmen, and the people were innumerable that came with him out of Egypte, Libya, Suchim ye out of Ethiopia, and he wanne the strōge cities that were in Iuda, and came to Ierusalem.
Then came Semaia the prophet unto Roboam and to the rulers of Iuda (which were gathered together at Jerusalem for Sisack) and sayeth unto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye haue lefte me, therefore haue I lefte you also in Sisacks hande. Tho the rulers in Israel with the kyng submytted them selues, and sayde: The LORDE is righteous.

But wha the LORDE sawe they hubble them selues, their wordes of the LORDE came to Semaia, and sayde: They have humbled them selues, therefore wyll I not destroye them, but I wyl geue them a little deluyerain, that my indignation fall not vpon Jerusalem by Sisack: for they shall be subdued vnto him, they maye knowe what it is to serue me, to serue the kyngdomes of the world.

Thus wote Sisack the kyng of Egipte vp to Jerusalem, and take the treasures in the house of the LORDE, the treasures in the kynges house, and caried all awaye, and take the shylkes of golde, that Salomon caused to make: in steade wherof kyngo Roboa made shylkes of stele, and commytted the vnto the chefe fotemen, which kepte the dore of the kynges house. And as ofte as the kyng wente in to the house of the LORDE, he fote men came and bere them, and brought them againe in to fote mens chaber. And for so much as he submytted himselfe, his wrath of the LORDE turned fró him, so that all was not destroyed: for there was yet some good in Iuda.

Thus was Roboam the kyng stablished in Jerusalem, and reigned. One and fortye yeare olde was Roboam wha he was made kyngge, and reigned seuentene yeare at Jerusalem in the cite, which the LORDE had chosen out of all the trybes of Israel, to set his name there. His mothers name was Naema an Ammonitisse: and he did euell, and prepared not his herte to seke the LORDE.

These actes of Roboam, both fyrst and last, are wryttyn in the actes of Semain the prophet, of Iddo the Seer, and are noted, as are the warres that Roboam and Ierooboam had togethers as longe as they lyued. And Roboam fell on slepe with his fathers and was buryed in the cite of Daud, Abia his sonne was kyngge in his steade.

The riiij. Chapter.

In the eighteenth yeare of kyng Ierooboam, was Abia kyngge in Iuda, which reigned thre yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Michia the doughter of Sriel of Gibea. And there was warre betwene Abia and Ierooboam. And Abia prepared himselfe to the battayll with foure hundreth thousande stronge chosen men of warre. But Ierooboam made himselfe ready to fight against him with eight hundreth thousande chosen men of strength.

And Abia gatte him vp vpon the hyll Zemaraim, which lyeth vpon mount Ephraim and sayde: Herken vnto me thou Ierooboam and all Israel: Knowe ye not that the LORDE, God of Israel hath geuen Daud the kyngdome of Israel euer, vnto him and his sonnes with a Salt covenant? But Ierooboam the sonne of Nebat, the seruant of Salomon Dauids sonne, gat him vp and fell away from his lorde. And there resorted vnto him vagabounds and children of Belial, and haue strengthened them selues against Roboa the sonne of Salomoe: for Roboa was but yonge and of a fearfull herte, and could not resiste them.

Now thinke ye to set youre selues against the kyngdome of the LORDE amonge the sonnes of Daud, for so much as there is so greate a multitude of you, you haue golden calues: Ierooboam made you for goddes. (hj Haue ye not expelled the prestes of the LORDE the children of Aaron and the Leuites? and haue made you prestes of youre awne, euyn as the people of the londes? Who so euer commeth to fylly his hande with a yonge bullocke and seuen rammes, shal be prest vnto them that are not goddes.

But with vs is the LORDE oure God, who we forsake not: and the prestes that minister vnto the LORDE, the children of Aaron and the Leuites in their busines, and euery mornyng and euery euynyng kyndle they the burnyttorynynges vnto the LORDE, and the svete incense, and prepare the shewbred vpó the pure table, and the golden candistlecke with his lampes, to be kyndled euery euynyng: for we wayte vpó the LORDE oure God.

As for you, ye haue forsaken him. Beholde, God is the captayne ofoure hostes, and with vs are his prestes, and the blowynge trompettes, to trompe agaynst you. Ye children of Israel, fight not agaynst the LORDE God of youre fathers: for ye shall not prosper.
Neuertheles Ieroboam made a preuy watch on euery syde, to come vp on them behynde, so that they were before Iuda, and ye preuy watch behynde. Now whan Iuda turned them, beholde, there was battayll before thee behynde. Then cryed they vnto LORDE, and the prestes tromped with the trompettes, whan euery man in Iuda gaue a shoute, God plagued Ieroboam and Israel before Abia and Iuda. And the children of Israel fled before Iuda, and God gaue them in to their handes, so that Abia his people dyd a greete slaughter vpon them, and there fell wounded of Israel fyue hundreth thousande chosen men.

Thus were the children of Israel subdued at that tyme, but the children of Iuda were comforted, for they put their trust in LORDE God of their fathers. And Abia followed vpon Ieroboam, and wanne cities fro him, Bethel with the vyllages therof, Iesana with hir vyllages, and Ephron with the villages therof, so that Ieroboam came nomore to strength, as longe as Abia lyued. And the LORDE smote him that he dyed.

Now whan Abia was strengthened, he toke fourtene wyues, and begat two and twentye sonnes and sixtene daughteres. What more there is to saye of Abia, and of his wayes and his doynges, it is wrytten in the storie of the prophet Iddo. And Abia fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buryed him in the cite of Dauid: and Asa his sonne was kyng in his stead. In his tyme was the londe in rest ten yeares.

The riiij. Chapter.

AND Asa dyd that which was good in the sighte of the LORDE his God, and put awaye the straunge alaeres, and the hye places, and brake the pilers, and hewed downe the grones, and sayde vnto Iuda, that they shulde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, and to do after the lawe and commandeementes. And the hye places and images put he awaye out of all the cities of Iuda: and the kyngdome had rest before him. And he builde strowe cities in Iuda, whyle the londe was in quietnes, whyle ther was no warre against him in the same yeares: for LORDE gaue him rest.

And he sayde vnto Iuda: Let vs byylde vp these cities, and fense them rounde aboute with walles and towres, with portes and barres, while the londe is yet with vs: for we haue soughte the LORDEoure God, and he hath geuen vs rest on euery syde. So they byylde, and it wente prosperously with the. And Asa had an hoost of men which bare shildes speares, out of Iuda thre C. thousande, and out of Ben Iamin two hundreth and foure score thousande, that bare shylde could smyte with bowes, and all these were mightie stronge men.

But Serah the Morian came out against them with an hoost of a thousande times a thousande, and with thre hundreth charettes, and came vnto Maresa. And Asa wente forth against him. And they prepared them selues to the battayll in the valley Zephata beside Maresa. And Asa called vpon LORDE his God and sayde: it is no differenge with thee, to helpe by fewe or by many. Helpe vs O LORDE our God: for our trust is in thee, in thy name are we come forth against this multitude. LORDE our God, let no man preuayle against the.

And the LORDE smote the Morians before Asa and before Iuda, so that they fled. And Asa with people that was by him, folowed vpon them vnto Gerar. And the Morians fell, so that none of them remained alnye, but were smytten before the LORDE and before his hoost. And they caried excedinge moch spoyle from thence. And he smote all the ctyes aboute Gerar, for a fearfulness of the LORDE came vpon them. And they spoyled all the cities, for there was moch spoyle in them. They smote the tentes of the catell also, and toke many shepe and Camels, and came agayne to Jerusalem.

The rjv. Chapter.

AND the preyte of God came vp O Asarias the sonne of Obed, which wente forth to Asa, and sayde vnto him: Heare me Asa and all Iuda and Ben Iamin: The LORDE is with you, whyle ye are with him: and ye seke him, he wylbe founde of you. But if ye forsoke him, he shall forsoke you also. Neuertheles there shall be many dayes in Israel, that there shalbe no true God, no prest to teach, no lawe. And whan they turne in their trouble vnto the LORDE God of Israel, and seke him, he shallbe founde.
At that tyme shall it not be well with him at goeth out and in: for there shall be great yproures vpon all them y dwell on the earth. For one people shall all to smyte another, one cite another: for God shall vexe them with all manner of trouble. But be ye strong, and let not youre handes be feble: for youre worke hath his warde.

B
When Asa herde these wordes, and the prophecie (of Asarias the sonne) of Obed the prophet, he toke a corage vnto him, and put awaye the abominacions out of all y fonde of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and out of the cities that he had wonne vpon mount Ephraim: and renued the LORDES altare, which stode before the porche of the LORDE. And all Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues together, and the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasses and Simeon: for there fell vnto him out of Israel, whan they sawe that the LORDE his God was with him. And they resorted vnto Jerusalem in the thirde moneth of the fiftenth yeare of the reigne of Asa, and the same daye offered vnto the LORDE of the spoyle that they had broughte, seuen hidereth oxen, and seuen thousande shepe.

C
And they entred in to y couenaunt, that they wolde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, with all their hert and with all their soule. And who so ever wolde not seke y LORDE God of Israel, shulde dye, both small and greate, both man and woman: and they swere vnto the LORDE with loude voyce, with shoutinge, with trompettes and with shawmes. And all Iuda were glad ouer the ooth: for they had sworne with all their hert, and they soughte him with a whole ywll: and he was founde of them, and the LORDE gaued them rest on euery syde.

D
And Asa y kyng put downe his mother from the ministracion, that she had founded in the groue vnto Miplezeth. And Asa roted out hir Miplezeth, and beate it in sunder, and brent it by the broke Cedron. But the hye places were not put downe out of Israel. Yet was the hert of Asa perfecte as longe as he lyued. And loke what his father had halowed, and that he him selfe had halowed, he broughte it in to y house of God, syluer, golde and ornamentes. And there was no warre vnto the fyne and thirtieth yeare of the reigne of Asa.

* 3 Re. 15. e.
* 2 Par. 14. c.

I
In the sixe and thirtieth yeare of y reign of Asa, wente Baesa the kyng of Israel vp agaynst Iuda, and buylded Rama, to let Asa the kyng of Iuda, he shulde not go out and in: But Asa toke forth the treasure in the house of the LORDE, and the syluer and golde in the kynges house, and sent it vnto Benadad y kyng of Syria, which dwelt at Damason, and causd to saye vnto hym: There is a couenaunt betwene me and the, betwene my father and thy father, therfore haue I sent y syluer and golde, that thou mayest breake y couenaunt with Baesa the kyng of Israel, that he maye departe fro me.

Benadad herkened vnto kyng Asa, and sent his hoost agaynst the cities of Israel, which smote Eion, Dan and Abel Mahm, and all the corne cities of Nephtali. Whan Baesa herde that, he lefte of from buyldinge Rama, and ceassed from his worke. But kyng Asa toke all Iuda vnto hym, and caried awaye y stones and tymbre (wherwith Baesa buylded) and he buylded Geba y Mizpa withall.

At the same tyme came Hanani the See to Asa the kyng of Iuda, and sayde vnto hym: Because thou hast trusted vnto the kynges of Syria, and not put thy trust in the LORDE thy God, therfor is the power of the kynges of Syria escaped thy hede. Were not the Moryans and Lybians a greate multitude with exceedinge many charettes and horsmen? Yet gau the LORDE them in to thy hande, whan thou dydest put thy trust in hym: for the eyes of the LORDE loke rounde aboute all londes, to strength them y are in him with all their hert. Thou hast done vnwisely, therfore shalt thou haue warre from hece forth. But Asa was wroth at y See, and put him in preson: for he murmured with him ouer this thinge. And Asa oppressed certayne of the people at y same tyme.

These actes of Asa both first and last, beholde, they are wryten in the boke of y kynges of Iuda y Israel. And Asa was diseased in his fete in the wynge and thirtieth yeare of his reigne, and endured ther ouer. Nether soughte he the LORDE in his sicknesse, but trusted vnto Phisicians. Thus fell Asa on slepe with his fathers, dyed in the one and fortieth yeare of his reigne, was buried in his awne sepulcre which he had caused to be grauen for him selfe in the cite of Dauid. And they layed him vpon his bed, which was fylled with sweete odours & all maner of spycies (made after ye Apotecaries craft) and made a very greate burynyge.

The 1st. Chapter.

A ND Isaphat his sonne was kyng in his steade, & waxed mightie against Israel. And he put men of warre in all the strange cities of Iuda, and set officers in the londe of Iuda, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had wonne. And the LORDE was with Isaphat: for he walked in the olde waves of his father Dauid, & soughte not Baalim, but the God of his father, he walked in his commandementes, not after the workes of Israel: therfore dyd the LORDE stablyshe the kyngdome in his hâде. And all Iuda gaue presents vnto Isaphat, & he had greate riches & worshippe. And when his hert was coraged in the waves of the LORDE, he put downe styye the lyke places and grous out of Iuda.

In the thirde yeare of his reigne sent he his prynces, Benhail, Obadia, Zacharias, Nethaneel & Michia, to teache in the cities of Iuda: with them the Leuites: Sennia, Nethania, Sebadia, Asahel, Semiramoth, Ionathan, Adonia, Tobia & Tob Adonia, with them ye prestes Elisama & Ioram. And they taughte in Iuda, & had the boke of the lawe of LORDE with them, & wente aboute in all ye cities of Iuda, & taughte the people. And the feare of the LORDE came vpon all ye kyngdomes in the countrees that laye aboute Iuda, so þy foughthe not agaynst Isaphat. And the Philistynes broughte presentes and trybute of syluer vnto Isaphat. And the Arabians broughte him seuen thousande and seuen hundredre rammes, and seuen thousande and seuen hundredre he goates. Thus increased Isaphat, & grewe euer greater. And he buylde castels and corne cities in Iuda. And dyd much in the cities of Iuda, and had valesant and mightie men at Jerusalem.

And this was ye ordnaunce thorow the house of their fathers, which were rulers ouer the thousands in Iuda. Adna a captayne, with him were three hundredre thousande mightie men. Nexte vnto him was Iohanan y chefe, and with him were two hundredre and foure score thousande. Nexte him was Amasia the sonne of Sichri the fre wyllinge of LORDE, and with him were two hundredre thousande valeaunt men. Of the children of Ben Iamin was Eilada a mightie man, and with him were two hundredre thousande ready with bowes and shylde. Nexte vnto him was Iosabad, and with him were an hundreth and foure score thousande harnessed men of warre. All these wayted vpon the kyng, besydes those that the kyng had layed in the stræge cities thorow out all Iuda.

The 2nd. Chapter.

A ND Isaphat had greate riches and worshippe, and made freundshippe with Achab. * And after two yeares sente he downe to Ahab vnto Samaria. And Ahab cause many shepe and oxë to be slayne for him and for ye people that were with him. And he councelde him to go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And Ahab the kyng of Israel sayde vnto Isaphat the kyng of Iuda: Go with me vnto Ramoth in Gilead. He sayde vnto him: I am as thou, and my people as thy people, we will go with the vnto the battayll.

But Isaphat sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: Axe counsell (I praye the) this daye at the worde of the LORDE. And the kyng of Israel gathered the prophets togethers, even foure hundreth men, saide vnto them: Shal we go to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, or shal I let it alone? They sayde: Go vp. God shal deluyer it in to the kynges hâde. But Isaphat sayde: Is there not yet one prophet of the LORDE here, that we maye axe at him? The kyng of Israel sayde vnto Isaphat: There is yet one man, at whom we maye axe of LORDE: but I hate him, for he prophesieth me no good, but allwaye euell, namely Micheas the sonne of Iemla. Isaphat sayde: Let not the kyng saye so. And the kyng of Israel calle one of his chamberlaynes, sayde: Brynge hither soone Micheas the sonne of Iemla.

And the kyng of Israel, and Isaphat the kyng of Iuda, sat either of them vpon his seate, arayed in their garmentes. Euen in the place at the dore of the porte of Samaria sat they, and all ye prophets prophesiede before them. And Sedecheias the sonne of Cnaena had made him horns of yron, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: With these shalt thou puszehee at the Syrians, thy thou byngye them to naughte. And all the prophets prophesied likewise, sayde: Go vp vnvo Ramoth in Gilead, and thou shalt prosper, and y LORDES hal delynere it in to the kynges hande.

* 3 Re. 22. a.
And the messenaggere that wente to call Micheas, spake vnto him, and sayde: Beholde, thy wordes of the prophets are with one accorde good before the kyngye: let thy worde (I praye the) be as one of theirs, and speake thou good also. But Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, loke what my God sayeth vnto me, wy I speake. And when he came to the kyngye, the kyngye sayde vnto him: Micheas, shulde we go vpnto Ramoth in Gilead to the battayll, or shulde we let it alone? He sayde: Go vp, and ye shal prosper. It shall be genue you in youre handes.
But thy kyngye sayde vnto him: I charge you yet agayne, that thou tell me nothinge but thy trueth in the name of the LORDE.
Then sayde hee: I sawe all Israel scattered abrode vpon the mountaynes, as the shohe haue no shepheard. And the LORDE sayde: Haue these no lorde? Let euery one turne home agayne in peace. The sayde the kyngye of Israel vnto Iosaphat: Dyd not I tell the, he wolde prophesie me no good, but euell?
And he sayde: Thereforere heare ye the worde of the LORDE: I sawe the LORDE syt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stondinge at his righte hande at his lefte. And the LORDE sayde: Who wyll diseance Achab the kyngye of Israel, that he maye go vp fall at Ramoth in Gilead? And when one sayde thus, another so, there came forth a sprete, and stode before LORDE, and sayde: I wyll diseance him. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherwith? He sayde: I wyll go forth, and be a false sprete in the mouth of all his prophets. And he sayde: Thou shalt diseance him, and shalt be able: go thy waye, and do so. Beholde now, the LORDE hath geuen a false sprete in the mouth of all these prophets, and the LORDE hath spokeneuell agaynst the.
Then stepte forth Sedecia the sonne of Cnæna, and smote Micheas vpon the cheke, and sayde: Which waye is the sprete of LORDE departed fro me, to speake thorow the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt se it, when thou commest in to the most chamber to hyde the. But the kyngye of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let him remayne with Amon the ruler of the cite, and with Iosas the sonne of Melech, and sayde: Thus sayeth the kyngye: Put this man in preson, and fede him, with bred and water of trouble, till I come agaynese in peace. Micheas sayde: If thou commest agaynese in peace, then hath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: Herken to all ye people.
So the kyngye of Israel, and Iosaphat kyngye of Juda wente vpnto Ramoth in Gilead. And the kyngye of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: Chaundge thy clothes, and come to the battayll in thine araye. And the kyngye of Israel chaundged his rayment, and came in to the battayll. But the kyngye of Syria had commaundede the rulers of his charrettes: Ye shall fighte nether agaynst small ner greate, but onely agaynst the kyngye of Israel.
Now when the rulers of the charrettes sawe Iosaphat, they thoughte: It is thy kyngye of Israel, and they wete aboute to fighte agaynst him. But Iosaphat cryed, and the LORDE helped him. And God turned them from him: for when the rulers of the charrettes sawe that it was not thy kyngye of Israel, they turned backe from him. But a certayne man bended his bowe harde, shot the kyngye of Israel betwene the mawe and the longes. The sayde he vnto his charet man: Turne thine hede, and cary me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And the battayll was sore the same daye. And the kyngye of Israel stode vpon his charet agaynst the Syrians vntyll the evenynge, and dyed wha the Sonne wente downe.

The rir. Chapter.

But Iosaphat the kyngye of Iuda came a home agaynese in peace vnto Jerusalem. And Iehu the sonne of Hanani the Seer wete forth to mete him, sayde vnto kyngye Iosap-hat: Shuldest thou so helpe the vngodly, and loue them that hate the LORDE? And for this cause is thy wrath vpon the from the LORDE: neuertheles there is some good founde in the, that thou hast put the greues out of the londe, and hast prepared thine hert to seke God. So Iosaphat abode at Jerusalem.

* 3 Re. 22. d. Esr. 6. a.
† Ezr. 14. b.
And he wente agayn amongst the people, from Berseba vnto mout Ephraim, and brought them agayn to the LORDE God of their fathers. And he set Iudges thorow out the londe, in all the stronge citie of Iuda, and did certaine in euery cite. And sayde vnto the Iudges: Take here what ye do: for ye execute not the judgment of man, but of the LORDE, and he is with you in iudgmet: therefore let the feare of the LORDE be with you, and beware, and do it: for with the LORDE our God there is no vnrighteousnes, ner respecte of persone, ner acceptinge of giftes.

And at Jerusalem dyd Josaphat ordeyne certaine of the Leuites and prestes, and of the awneieth fathers of Israel for iudgment of the LORDE, and ouer the matter of the lawe, and caused them to dwell at Jerusalem, and commanded them, and sayde: Soe that ye do thus in the feare of the LORDE, in faithfulnesse in a perfect hert. In all causes that come vnto you from youre brethren (which dwell in their cities) betwene bloude and bloude, betwene lawe and commaundement, betwene statutes and ordinaunces ye shal enforce them, ye may synne not against the LORDE, and so the wrath to come vpon you and youre brethren. Do thus, and ye shal not offende.

Beholde, Amaria the prest is chefe ouer you in all causes of the LORDE: so is Sabadia the sonne of Israel prynce in the house of Iuda in all the kynges matters: Ye haue officers lykewyse the Leuites before you. Take a good corage vnto you, and be doyng, and the LORDE shalbe with the good.

The 17. Chapter.

AFTER this came the children of Moab, the children of Ammon, and certaine of Amanim with them, to fighte against Josaphat. And they came and tolde Josaphat, and sayde: There cometh a great multitude agaynst the frome bynde the See of Syrie, he beholde, they are at Hazzezon Thamar, that is Engaddi.

And Josaphat was afrayed, set his face to seke the LORDE, caused a fast to be proclamed in all Iuda. And Iuda came together to seke the LORDE. And out of all the cities of Iuda came they to seke the LORDE. And Josaphat stode among the congregation of Iuda and Jerusalem in the house of the LORDE before the newe courte, and sayde:

O LORDE God of oure fathers, art not thou God in heauen, and hast domyned in all the kyngdomes of the Heythen? And in thy hande is strength and power, and there is no man that can withstande the. Hast thou oure God expelled the inhabiteres of this londe before thy people of Israel? And hast geuen vnto the sede of Abraham thy lesser for euer? so that they have dwelt in it, haue byylde the a Sanctuary vnto thy name therin, and sayde: Ye there come any plage, swerde, iudgmet, pestilence, or derth vpon vs, we will stonde before this house euene before the (for thy name is in this house) and will crye vnto the inoure trouble, and thou shalt haue, and shalt saue vs. Beholde now, the children of Ammon, of Moab, they of mount Seir, vpon whom thou wold not suffre the children of Israel to go, when they were oute of the londe of Egipte, but they were fayne to departe from there, and not to destroye them: and beholde, they deale contrarely with vs, and come to thrust vs out of the inheritaunce, that thou hast geuen vs in possession. O oure God, wylt thou not iudge them? For in vns is no strength to withstande this great multitude that commeth agaynst vs. We knowe not what we shulde do, but oure eyes loke vnto the. And all Iuda stode before the LORDE, with their children, wyues and sones.

But vpon Iehasiel the sonne of Zacharias, the sonne of Benaiar, the sonne of Iehiel, the sonne of Mathania the Leuite of the children of Assaph, came the preste of the LORDE in the myddes of the congregation, and sayde: Geue heede all thou Iuda, and ye inhabiteres of Jerusalem, and thou kyng Josaphat: Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto you: Be not ye afrayed, nether feare ye this greate multitude: for it is not ye that fight, but God. Tomorrow shall ye go downe vnto the. And beholde, they go vp by Sis, and ye shall fynde them at the reade see by the broke before the wyldernes of Israel: for ye shall not fighte in this cause. Do ye but steppe forth, and stonde, and se the health of the LORDE that is with you. Fear not O Iuda and Jerusalem, and be not afrayed, tomorrow go ye forth agaynst them, and the LORDE shal be with you.

The Josaphat bowed him selfe with his face to the earth, all Iuda, the inhabiteres of

* Deut. 2. c.
Jerusalem fell before the LORDE, and worshipped the LORDE. And the Leuites of the children of the Kahathites, the children of the Corahites arose to prayse the LORDE God of Israel with loude voyce on hye. And they gat them vp early in the mornyng, and wete forth by the wyldernesse of Thoeka.

And whan they were goynge out, Iosaphat stode, and sayde: Herck into Iuda, ye indwellers of Ierusalem: Put yere trust in the LORDE your God, ye shall be safe, and geue credence vnto his prophete, ye shall prosper. And he gaue counsell vnto ye people, and appoynted the syngers vnto the LORDE, and them that gaue prayse in the bewyte of holynes, to goe before the harnessed mce, to saye: O geue thanks vnto the LORDE, for his mercy endureth for euer. And whan they beganne to geue thankes and prayse, the LORDE caused the hynder watch that was come agaynst Iuda, to come vpon the children of Ammon, Moab them of mount Seir, and they smote them. Then stode the children of Ammon, Moab against them of mount Seir, and they smote them. And whan they had destroyed them of mount Seir, one helped another to destroye them selues also. And whan Iuda came to Mispa vnto the wyldernes, they turned them toward the multitude, and beholde, the deed bodies laye vp the earth, so that none was escaped.

And Iosaphat came with his people to denyde the spoyles of them. And they founde amongst them so much goodes and raynement and precious jewelles (which they toke from them) that they could not beare them. And thre dayes were they deuyndige the spoyle, for it was so much. On the fourth daye came they together in to the valley of blesynge: for there blessed they the LORDE. Therfore is the place called the valley of blesinge vnto this daye.

So every man of Iuda turned back agayne, Iosaphat before them, to go to Ierusalem with ioye: for the LORDE had geuen them gladnesse on their enemies. And they entred in to Ierusalem with psalteries, harpes and trompettes vnto the house of the LORDE. And there came a Feare of God ouer all the kyngdome in the londes, when they herde that the LORDE had foughte agaynst them of Ammon, Moab, Seir, and the children of Ammon, Moab agaynst them, and they smote them. And whan they had destroyed them of Mount Seir, one helped another to destroye them selues also. And whan Iuda came to Mispa vnto the wyldernes, they turned them toward the multitude, and beholde, the deed bodies laye vp the earth, so that none was escaped.

And Iosaphat came with his people to denyde the spoyles of them. And they founde amongst them so much goodes and raynement and precious jewelles (which they toke from them) that they could not beare them. And thre dayes were they deuyndige the spoyle, for it was so much. On the fourth daye came they together in to the valley of blesynge: for there blessed they the LORDE. Therfore is the place called the valley of blesinge vnto this daye.

Aand Iosaphat fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid, Ioram his sonne was kyng in his steade. And he had brether the sonsnes of Iosaphat: Asaria, Iehiel, Zacharias, Asaria, Michael and Sephatia. All these were the children of Iosaphat kyng of Iuda. And their father gaue them many giftes of syluer, golde and jewelles, with stronge cities in Iuda. But the kyngdome gaue he vnto Ioram: for he was the first borne.

But whan Ioram came vp ouer his fathers kyngdome, he had gotten the power of it, he slewe all his brether with the swerde, certayne rulers also in Israel. Two thirtie yeare olde was Ioram when he was made kyng, he reigned eight yeare at Jerusalem, he walked in the wyne of kynges of Israel, euyn as the house of Achab dyd, for Achabs daughter was his wife) he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE.
Neuertheles y LORDE wolde not destroie the house of Daviud, for the conuenantes sake, *which he made with Daviud, and acordinge as he had sayde, y he wolde geue him and his children a lanterne for euermore.

At y same tyme fell y Edomites awaye from Iuda, and made a kyng ouer them selues: for Ioram had gone ouer with his captaynes and all the charretes with him, ṣ had gotten him vp in the night season, and slayne the Edomites on euery syde, and the rulers of the charretes: therefore fell y Edomites awaye from Iuda vnto this daye. At y same tyme fell Lybna awaye from him also: because he forsoke the LORDE God of his fathers. He made lye places also on the mountaynes in Iuda, and caused them of Ierusale to go awhorynge, and diseaue Iuda.

But there came a wytynge vnto hym fro the prophet Elias, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of thy father Daviud: Because thou hast not walked in the wydes of thy father Iosaphat, neither in y wydes of Asa the kyng of Iuda, but walkest in the wyde of the kynges of Israel, and makest Iuda and them of Ierusaleme to go awhorynge after the whordome of the house of Achab, and hast slayne thy brethren also of thy fathers house, which were better the thou. Beholde, the LORDE shal smyte the with a greete plage on thy people, on thy children ṣ wythes, and on all thy substauence. But thou thy selfe shalt haue mouch sickenesse in thy bowelles, tyll thy bowelles go forth from daye to daye for very disease.

So y LORDE rayseyd vp agaynst Ioram, the prete of the Phillistynes, ṣ Arabians, which lye besyde the Morians, and they wente vp in to Iuda, and wastewater it, and caried awaye all the substauence that was founde in the kynges house, ṣ his sonnes, and his wythes, so y there was not one sonne lefte him, save Iothas his ṣest sonne. And after all this dyd y LORDE smyte him in his bowelles, with soch a sickenesse as could not be healed. And whyle that endured from daye to daye, when the tyme of two yeares was expired, his bowelles wente from him with his sickenesse, and he dyed in euell diseases.

And they made not a burninge ouer him, as they dyd vnto his fathers. Two and thirtie yeare olde was he whā he was made kyng, and reigned eight yeare at Ierusale, and walked not well. And they buried him in the cote of Daviud, but not amoge the sepulcres of the kynges.

The 115. Chapter.

And they of Ierusaleme a made Ochosias a his ṣest sonne kyng in his steade: for the men of warre that came with the hoost of the Arabians, had slayne all ṣ first, therefore reigned Ochosias the sonne of Ioram kyng of Iuda. Two and fourte yeare olde was Ochosias whan he was made kyng, and reigned one yeare at Ierusaleme. His mothers name was Athalia the daughter of Amri. And he walked also in y wydes of the house of Achab: for his father entysed him so y he was vnogedly. Therefore dyd he euell in y sighte of the LORDE, even as y house of Achab: for they were his councell geuers after his fathers death, to destroye him, and he walked after their councell.

And he wente with Ioram the sonne of Achab kyng of Israel, to the battayll vnto Ramoth Gilead, agaynst Hasael the kyng of Syria. But the Syrias smote Ioram, so y he turned back to be healed at Iesreel: for he had wounedes that were geuen him at Rama, whan he foughte with Hasael the kyng of Syria. And Asarias the sonne of Ioram kyng of Iuda wete downe to vset Ioram ṣ sonne of Achab at Iesreel, which laye sikke: For it was ordeyned of God vnto Ochosias, that he shulde come to Ioram, ṣ so to go forth with Ioram agaynst Iehu ṣ sonne of Nimsi, ṣ whom the LORDE had anointed to rite out the house of Achab.

Now whan Iehu wolde be auëged of y house of Achab, he founde certayne rulers of Iuda, and childre of Ochosias brethen which serued Ochosias, and he slewe them. § And he soughte Ochosias, and they ouertooke him, whā he had hyd him at Samaria: ṣ he was broughte vnto Iehu, which slewe him, and they buried him, for they sayde: He is the sonne of Iosaphat, which soughte y LORDE with all his hert. And there was no man more of the house of Ochosias that mighte be kyng.

Whan Athalia the mother of Ochosias sawe ṣ hir sonne was dead, she gat hir vp, a destroyed all the kynges sede in the house of Iuda. But Iosabearth \(\gamma\) kynges sister toke Ioas \(\gamma\) sonne of Ochosias, and stale him awaye from amongst the kynges childrë \(\gamma\) were slayne, \(\tau\) put him with his nurse in a chamber. Thus Iosabearth kynges Iorams daughter, the wyfe of Ioiada the prest, hyd him from Athalia, so \(\gamma\) he was not slayne: for she was Ochosias sister. And he was hyd with them in the house of God sixe yeares, for so much as Athalia was quene in the londe.

UT in the seuenthe yeare was Ioiada bolde, and toke the rulers ouer hundreds: namely Asaria \(\gamma\) sonne of Ieraham, Ismael \(\gamma\) sonne of Iohanan, Asaria \(\gamma\) sonne of Obed, Maeseia \(\gamma\) sonne of Adaita, and Elisaphat \(\gamma\) sonne of Sichri with him, in to the couenaunt: and they wente aboute in Iuda, and brought \(\gamma\) Leuites together out of all the cities of Iuda, and the chefe fathers of Israel, to come vnto Jerusalem. And all the cögregacion made a couenaunt with the kynges in the house of God, and he sayde vnto them: Beholde, the kynges sonne shal be kyngye, * euë as the LORDE spake cócernyng the children of Dauid.

This is it theryfore \(\gamma\) ye shal do: The thyrde parte of you that entre on the Sabbath, shalbe amonge the prestes \(\tau\) Leuites, which are dore-keepers at the thresholds: \(\tau\) one thyrde parte in the kynges house, and one thyrde parte at the grounde porte. But all the people shalbe in the courtes of the house of the LORDE, and that no man go in to the house of the LORDE, excepte the prestes and Leuites that mynister there, they shal go in: for they are halowed. And let all \(\gamma\) people wayte vpon the LORDE. And the Leuites shal get them rounde aboute \(\gamma\) kyngye, every one with his weapon in his hande. And who so els goeth in to \(\gamma\) house, let him dye. And they shal be with the kyngye wha he goeth out \(\tau\) in.

And the Leuites \(\tau\) all Iuda dyd as Ioiada \(\gamma\) prest had comanded, and every one toke his men that entred on the Sabbath, with those \(\gamma\) wente of on the Sabbath: for Ioiada \(\gamma\) prest suffired not those two companies to parte asunder. And Ioiada \(\gamma\) prest gave the captaynes ouer hundreds speares \(\gamma\) shylkes, and kyngye Dauids weapons, which were in the house of God, and set all the people euery one with his weapon in his hande, from the righte corner of the house, vnto the lefte corner of the altare, and to the house warde aboute the kyngye. And they broughte forth the kynges sonne, \(\tau\) set the crowne vpon his heade, and gane them the \(\tau\) wytnesse, \(\tau\) made him kyngye. And Ioiada with his sonnes anointed hym, \(\tau\) sayde: God saue the kyngye.

But when Athalia herde the noyse of \(\gamma\) people \(\gamma\) rame together and prayed \(\gamma\) kyngye, she wente forth to the people in to \(\gamma\) house of the LORDE, and loked: and beholde, \(\gamma\) kyngye stode in his place at \(\gamma\) intrance, and the rulers and trompettes aboute \(\gamma\) kyngye: and all the people of the londe were glad, \(\tau\) blew the trompes, and there were syngers \(\gamma\) could playe with all maner of musicall instrumentes. But she rete hir clothes, \(\tau\) sayde: Sedicion, sedicion. Neuertheles Ioiada \(\gamma\) prest gat him forth with the captaynes ouer hundreds and rulers of the hoost, and sayde vnto them: Brynge her forth betwene \(\gamma\) walles, \(\tau\) who so euere foloweth her, shal be slayne with \(\gamma\) swerde: for the prest had commaunded, that she shulde not be slayne in \(\gamma\) house of the LORDE. And they layed handes on her. And whan she came at the intrance of the horsgate of the kynges house, they put her to death there.

And Ioiada made a couenaunt betwene him and all the people, and the kyngye, \(\gamma\) they shulde be the people of the LORDE. Thé wete all the people in to the house of Baal and destroyed it, \(\tau\) brake downe his altare \(\tau\) ymages, \(\tau\) slewe Mathan the prest of Baal before the altare. And Ioiada appoynted \(\gamma\) officers in the house of the LORDE amoge the prestes \(\tau\) Leuites \(\tau\) whom Dauid had ordeyned for \(\gamma\) house of the LORDE, to offre burnt sacrifices vnto \(\gamma\) LORDE, as it is wryttten in the \(\gamma\) lawe of Moses: with ioye \(\tau\) songs made by Dauid. And \(\gamma\) porters set he at \(\gamma\) gates of \(\gamma\) house of \(\gamma\) LORDE, \(\gamma\) none shalde entre, which were defiled with euy maner of thinges.

And he toke the captaynes ouer huddreds and the mightie men and fórdes of \(\gamma\) people, and all the people of the londe, and brought the kynge downe from the house of the LORDE, and broughte him throwe the hye porte of the kynges house, and caused the kynge sat upon the seate royall. And all the people of the lorde were glad, and the cite was at rest. But Athalia was slayne with the swerde.

The rviij. Chapter.

I OAS was seuen yeare olde when he was made kynge, and reigned fortie yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Zibe of Berseba. And Ioa dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada the prest lyued. And Ioiada gane him two wives, τ he begat somme τ daughters. Afterwarde deuyed Ioa to renue the house of the LORDE, α gathered together the prestes and Leuites, ÿ sayde vnto the: Go forth vnto all the cities of Iuda, α gather the money of all Israel, to repayre μ house of God yearly, and do it righte soone: but the Leuites made no haist.

Then the kynge called Ioiada the pryncipall, and sayde vnto him: Why lokest thou not vnto the Leuites, ÿ they bringe in from Iuda and Ierusalem, * the collection which Moses the seruanta of the LORDE appoynted to be gathered amōge Israel for the Tabernacle of witnes? For ÿ vnGodly Athalia α his sonnes hane waisted the house of God: and all that was halowed for the house of the LORDE, haue they bestowed on Baalim.

Then commanded the kynge to make a chest, and to set it without at the in trance of the house of the LORDE: α caused it to be proclaimed in Iuda and Ierusalem, that they shulde bringe in to the LORDE, the colleccion, which Moses the seruanta of God appoynted vnto Israel in ÿ wildernes. Ψ were all τ rulers glad, α so were all τ people, α brought it, and cast it in to the chest, τyll it was full.

And when the tyme was ÿ the Leuites shulde brynge the Arke at ÿ kynge's commandement (when they sawe ÿ there was much money therin) then came the kynge's serybe, α he ÿ was appoynted of the chefe prest, and emptied the chest, and carried it againe in to his place. Thus dyd they euery daye, so that they gathered moche money together. And ÿ kynge and Ioiada gane it vnto ÿ worksmen of the house of the LORDE, and they hirde masons and carpenters to repayre the house of the LORDE, and men that could worke in yron and brasse, to repayre the house of the LORDE.

And the labourers wrought, so that ÿ repairinge in ÿ worke wente forward to thour hande, and they set the house of God in his bewyte, and made it stronge. And whan they had performed this, they brought the resdyue of the money, before the kynge and Ioiada, wherof there were made vessels for the house of the LORDE, vessels for the ministracion and burntofferinge, spomes and ornamentes of golde and siluer. And they offered burntofferynes wayle in the house of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada lyued.

And Ioiada waxed olde, and had lyued longe ynoough, and dyed, α was an hundred and thirtie yeare olde when he dyed: and they burried him in the cite of Dauid, amonst the kynes, because he had done good vnto Israel, and towarde God α his house. And after the death of Ioiada, came the rulers in Iuda, and worshipped the kynge.

Then consented the kynge vnto the. And they forsoke the house of the LORDE God of their fathers, and servedy ÿ groues and ymage. Then came ÿ wrath of the LORDE vpo Iuda and Ierusalem because of this trespas of theirs. Yet sent he prophets vnto the, ÿ they shulde turne vnto the LORDE, α they testified vnto the: but they wolde not heare.

And the sprete of God came vpon τ Zachary the sonne of Ioiada the prest, which stode ouer τ people, α sayde vnto the: Thus sayeth God: Wherfore do ye transgresse the comandementes of the LORDE, which shall not be to youre prosperite: for ye haue forsaken ÿ LORDE, therfore shall he forsake you. Nevertheles they conspyred agaynst him, α stoned him at ÿ kynge's commandement in ÿ courte of the house of the LORDE. And Ioa ÿ kynge thought not on the mercie ÿ Ioiada his father had done for him, but slewe his sonne. Notwithstandinge wha he dyed, he sayde: The LORDE shal loke vpon it, and requyre it.

And whan the yeare was gone aboute, ÿ power of the Syrians wente vp, α came to Iuda α Ierusalem, and destroyed the rulers in the people, and sent all the spoiles of them vnto Damascus. For the power of the Syrians came but with a fewe men, yet gaue ÿ LORDE a very great power in to their hande: because they had forsaken ÿ LORDE God of their fathers. They executted judgment also vpon Ioa. And when they departed fro him, they lefte him in great sicknesses.

Neuertheles he seuautes conspyed against (because of the bloude of the childre of Ioiada the prest) he slewe him vpó his bed, he dyed, and they buried him in the cite of Dauid, but not amonge the sepulcrs of the kynges. They that conspyed against him, were these: Sabad ñ sonne of Simeath the Ammonitisse, and Iosabad the sonne of Simrith the Moabitisse. As for his sonnes, and the summe that was gathered vnder him, and the buyldinge of the house of God, beholde, they are wrytten in the storie in the boke of the kynges. And Amasias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The ryb. Chapter.

FYUE and twentye yeare olde was Amasias when he was made kyng, and reigned nyne and twentye yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Ioadan of Jerusalem. And he dyd ð which was right in the sighte of the LORDE, but not with a whole hert. Now when his kingdome was in streght, he slewe his seruautes which had slayne the kinge his father. But their childre slewe he not, for so is it wrytten in the boke in the lawe of Moses, *where the LORDE commaundeth, and sayeth: The fathers shall not dye for the children, neither shall the children dye for the fathers: but euer one shall die for his awne synne.

And Amasias broughte Iuda together, and set them after the fathers houses, after the rulers ouer thousandes ouer hundreds amoninge all Iuda and Ben Iamin, and nombred them from twentye yeare olde aboue, and founde of the thre hundred thousande chosen men, which were able to go forth to the warre, and caryd speares and shylde. And out of Israel appoynted he an hundred thousande stronge men of warre for an hundredtalentes of siluer.

But there came a man of God vnto hym, and sayde: O kyng, Let not the hoost of Israel come with the: for the LORDE is not with Israel, nether with all the childre of Ephraim. For yf thou commest to shewe thy boldnes in the battaile, God shall make the falle before thine enemies. For God hath power to helpe, and to cause for to falle. Amasias sayde vnto the man of God: What shall be done then with ð hundredth talentes ð I haue geue ý soudyers of Israel? The mā of God sayde:

'The LORDE hath yet more the this to geue the. So Amasias separated out the men of warre which were come to him out of Ephraim, ð they shulde departe vnto their place. Then waxed their wrath very whote against Iuda, and they wente agayne vnto their place in wrothfull displeasure. And Amasias strēghed himselfe, and carried out his people, and wente forth in to the Salt valley, and smote ten thousande of the children of Seir.

And the childre of Iuda toke ten thousande of the ayue, whom they broughte vp to the toppe of a mountayne, and cast the downe headlings from the toppe of the mount, so that they all to barst in sander. But ñ childre of the men of warre whom Amasias had sent awaye agayne (that they shulde not go to the battayll with his people) fell in to the cities of Iuda, from Samaria vnto Beth Horon, and smote three thousande of me, and toke much spoyle.

And when Amasias came agayne from the slaughter of the Edomites, he broughte the goddes of the children of Seir, and made them his goddes, and worshipped before them, a brest incense vnto them. Then was the LORDE very wroth at Amasias, ð sent vnto him a prophet, which sayde vnto hym: Why sekest thou the goddes of the people, which could not deluyer their folke from thy hande? And when he talked with him, the kyng sayde vnto him: Haue they made ð of the kynges councell? Cease, why wilt thou be smytten? Then the prophet ceassed, ð sayde: I perceauce, that the LORDE is mynded to destroye ð, because thou hast done this, and herkenest not vnto my councell.

* And Amasias ñ kyng of Iuda toke coicell, ð sent vnto Ioa the sonne of Ioahas ñ sonne of Iehu, kyng of Israel, sayege: Come, let us se one another. But Ioa the kyng of Israel sent vnto Amasias ñ kyng of Iuda, sayenge: The hawthorne in Libanus sent vnto ð Cedre tre in Libanus, sayege: Gene thy daughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wylde beest in Libanus ranne ouer ð hawthorne, ð trode it downe. Thou thinkest: Beholde, I haue smytten the Edomites, therefore is thine hert proude to boast. Now byde at home: why stryeust thou after myfortune, that thou mayest fall ð Iuda with the?
Fo. recreri. The 11. boke of the Cronicles. Chap. r7vi.

Neuertheles Amasias consented not: for so was it broughte to passe of God, y they might be gueuen in to the handes of the enemies, because they soughte the goddes of Edomites. Then wente Ioas the kyng of Israel vp, & they sawe one another, &c. and Amasias the kyng of Iuda, at Beth Semes which lyeth in Iuda. But Iuda was smytte before Israel, & they fled every one vnto his tent. And Ioas the kyng of Israel tok Amasias kyng of Iuda, the sonne of Ioas kyng of Ioaahs, at Beth Semes, & broughte him to Ierusalem, & brake downe the walles of Ierusalme, from y porte of Ephraime vnto the corner porte, euen foure hundrude cubites longe: & took with him all the golde, & silver, & all the ornaments that were fostide in y house of God with Obed Edom, & in the treasures in the kynges house, & the childre to pledge vnto Samaria. And Amasias the sonne of Ioas kyng of Iuda, liued after the death of Ioas the sonne of Ioaahs kyng of Israel fiftene yeare.

What more there is to saye of Amasias (both the first and last) beholde, it is written in y boke of the kynges of Iuda & Israel. And fro the tyme forth that Amasias departed from the LORDE, they conspyred against him at Ierusalem. But he fled vnto Lachis. The sent they after him vnto Lachis, & slewe him there. And they brought him vp6 horses & buried him beside his fathers in the cite of Iuda.

The 1rvi. Chapter.

THEN all the people of Iuda toke Osias, * which was syxtenye yeare olde, and made him kyng in steade of his father Amasias. He builded Eloth, & broughte it agayne vnto Iuda, after that the kyng was fallen on the slype with his fathers. Sixtene yeare olde was Osias when he was made kyng, & reigned two and fiftie yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Iechal of Ierusalem. And he did right in the sght of the LORDE, as his father Amasias had done, and soughte God as longe as Zacharias lyed, which taughte in the visyons of God: & as longe as he sought the LORDE, God made him to prosperse.

For he wente forth, & foughte agaynst the Philistynes, & brake downe yt walles of Gath, & the walles of Iabne, & the walles of Aszdod, & buylded cities aboute Aszdod, & amonge the Philistynes. For God helped him agaynst the Philistines, against the Arabians, agaynst them of Gur Baal, & agaynst the Meunites. And yt Ammonites gau Osias presentes, & his name came in to Egipte: for he was exceedinge stronge. And Osias buyled towres at Ierusalem vpon the cornerpo, & on the valley gate, & on other corners, & made them stronge. He buylded castels also in the wyldernesse, & dydged many welles: for he had many catell, both in the medowes & in the playnes, huzbandmen also & wynegardeners on the mountaynes & on Carmel: for he delyted in huzbandrye.

And Osias had an hoost of men of warre goyng forth to the bataill, which were no bred vnder the hande of Ieiel the scrybe & of Maesa the offycer, vnder the hade of Hanania of the kynges rulers. And the nombre of the chefe fathers amonge the stronge me of warre, was two thousande & syxe hundrath. And vnder the hande of the hoost thre hundruth thousande, & seuen thousande & fyue hundruth mete for the batailly, in the strength of an armyn to helpe the kyng agaynst the enemes. & Osias prepared for all the hoost, shyldes, speares, helmentes, brestplates, bowes & slyngstones. And at Ierusalme he made ordinaunce coningly, to be vpon the towres & in the pynacles, to shute arowes & greate stones. And the fame of him came farre abrode, because he was specially helped, tyll he became mightie. & And when his power was greate, his hert arose to his awne destruction: for he trespassed agaynst the LORDE his God, & wente in to the temple of the LORDE, to burne incense vpon the altare of incense. But Asarias the prest wente after him, & foure score prestes with him, valaunt men, & withstode kyng Osias, & saide vnto him: *It belongeth not vnto thy office (Osias) to burne incense vnto the LORDE, but vnto the prestes belongeth it, euyn vnto the children of Aaron, which are halowed to burne incense. Go forth out of the Sanctuary: for thou offendest, & it shall be no worshippe vnto the before God the LORDE.

And Osias was wroth, & had a cenoure in his hande. & And whyle he murmured with the prestes, the leprosy spongge out of his foreheade in the presence of the prestes in

CHAS was twenty yeares old when he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeares at Jerusalem, and dyd not that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as did David his father, but walked in the wayes of the kings of Israel, and made molten images vnto Baalim, and brent incense in the valley of the children of Hennon, and burnt his owne sondes in fire, after the abominacions of the Heithen, whö the LORDE expelad before the childræ of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice and brent incense vpon the hye places and vpon the hilles, and amoge all grene trees.

The 18th. Chapter.

IOTHAM was fyue and twentye yeare olde when he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ierusada the daughter of Sadoc: he dyd righte in the sighte of the LORDE as did Osias his father: saynge he wente not in to the temple of the LORDE, and the people yet marred them selues. He buylded the hye porte of the house of LORDE, and on the wall of Ophel buylded he moch, and buylded the cities vpon the mountaynes of Iuda, and in the woddes buylded he castels and towres.

And he fought with the kinge of the childræ of Ammon, and ouercame them, so that the childræ of Ammon gauæ him the same yeare an hundred talentes of siluer, ten thousande quarters of wheate, and ten thousande of barye. So moch dyd the children of Ammon gauæ him also in the seconde thrilde yeare. Thus became Iotham mightye, for he gyded his wayes before the LORDE his God.

What more there is to saye of Iotham, all his warres, and his waiers, beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the kinges of Israel and Iuda. Fyue and twentye yeare olde was he when he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusaleme. And Iotha fell on spele with his fathers, they buryed him in the cite of David, and Achas his sonne was kynge in his steade.
Iohanan, Barachias the sonne of Mesillemoth, Ezechias the sonne of Sallum, Amasa y sonne of Hadlai, agaynst them y came from y battayll, sayde vnto them: Ye shal not comminge the presoners in hither, for youre mynde is but to make vs trespace before the LORDE, to makeoure synnes and offences the greater: for the trespace is to moch all-ready, the wrath is feare over Israel. So the host lefte the presoners the spoyles before rulers and before the whole congrega-gation.

Then stode vp the men (which now were reheard by name) and toke the presoners, and as many as were naked amongst them, clothed they with spoyles, deckte them, and put shues vpon their fete, and gaue the to eate and drynke, and aunyted them, and caried them vpon asses (as many as were feble) and broughte them to Iericho to y Palme cite vnto their brethren, and came agayn to Samaria. * At the same tyme sent kynge Achas vnto the kynges of Assur, y they shulde helpe him. And the Edomites came agayn, and smote Iuda, and caried some awaye captuyne. The Philistynes also fell in to the cities in the playne, towards the parte of Iuda, wanne Beth Semes, Aialon, Gederoth, and Socho with the vyllages therof, Timna with the vyllages therof, Gimso with the vyllages therof, and dwelt therin. For y LORDE subdued Iuda for Achas sake y kyng of Iuda, because he made Iuda naked, and rebelled agaynst the LORDE. And Teglatphinesser the kyng of Assur came agaynst him, and beseged him, he was not myhte ynoogh for him.

For Achas spoyled the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and of the rulers, to gene vnto kyng of Assur, but it helped him not. Moromer kynge Achas trespassed yet more against the LORDE, eu in his trouble, and dyd sacrifeyce vnto the goddes of them of Damaseon, which had smitten him, sayde:
The goddes of the kynges of Syria helpe them, therfore wil I offre vnto them, that they maye helpe me also, where as the same yet were a fall vnto him and to all Israel.

And Achas gathered the vessels of y house of God together, and brake the vessels in y house of God, shut the dores of the house of y LORDE, and made him altares in all corners at Jerusalem, and enery where in the eyties of Iuda made he yye places to burne incense vnto other goddes, and pronounced y LORDE God of his fathers vnto wrath.

What more there is to saye of him and of all his wayes (both first and last) beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And Achas fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buryed him in y cite of Jerusalem: for they broughte him not amon the sepleures of the kynges of Israel. And Ezechias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The 111. Chapter.

Ezechias was hye twenty yeare A ole when he was made kyng, reigned yeare twentye yeares at Jerusalem. His motheres name was Abia daughter of Zachary.
And he dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as did his father Dauid.

He opened the dores of y house of the LORDE in the first moneth of y first yeare of his raigne, made them stronge, brought in the preste and Leuites, and gathered them gether vnto the East streate and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me ye Leuites, sanctify youre selues now, that ye maye halowe the house of the LORDE God of youre fathers, and put yflathines out of the Sanctuary: for youre fathers haue trespassed, and done y which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE our God, and haue forsaken him. For they turned their faces from the habitation of y LORDE our God, turned their backes on it, and shut the dores of the Porche, and put out the lampes, and brente no incense, offered no burntsacrifeyce in the Sanctuary vnto the God of Israel.

Therefore is the wrath of the LORDE come ouer Iuda and Jerusalem, and he hath geuen them ouer to be scatred abrode, desolate and be hyssed at, as ye se with youre eies. For beholde, eu for the same cause fell oure fathers throwe the swerde, oure sonnes doughters and wyues were caried awaye captive. Now am I mynded to make a couenant with the LORDE God of Israel, he maye turne awaye from vs his wrath. Now my sonnes, be not ye negligent: for the LORDE hath chosen you to stode before him, and to be his mynisters and to burne incense vnto him.

And they gathered their brethren together, and were sanctified, and wente in acordinge to the kynges commandement at the worde of the LORDE, to clenshe the house of ¥ LORDE. And the prestes entred within in the house of the LORDE to purifie, and put out all the vnuelennes that was founde in the temple of the LORDE, in the court of the LORDE house: and the prestes toke it vp, and carried it out in to the broke Cedron. The first daye of the first moneth beganne they to sanctifie them selues, and on the eighte daye of the moneth wente they in to the porche of the LORDE, and halowed the house of ¥ LORDE eighte dayes, and finished it on the sixtenth daye of the first moneth.

And they wete in to the kyng Ezechias, and sayde: We have closed all the house of the LORDE, the altar of burntofferynges, and all his vessels, the table of the shewbred and all the apparell thereof: and all the ornamentes that kyng Achaas cast awaye wha he was kyng, what tymes as he transgressed, those haue we prepared and halowed. Beholde, they are before the altar of the LORDE.

The the kyng Ezechias gat him vp early, and gathered together the Elders of the cite, and wete vp vnto the house of the LORDE; and they broughte seuen bullockes, seuen rammes, seuen lambs, and seuen goates to be the synofferynge, for the Sanctuary, for Iuda. And he spake vnto the prestes the children of Aaron, that they shulde offer vp vpon the altar of the LORDE.

So they slew the bullockes, and the prestes toke the bloude, and sprenkled it vpon ¥ altar: and slew the rammes, and sprenkled the bloude vpon the altar: and slew the lîbes, and sprenkled the bloude vpon the altar. And the goates to ¥ a synofferynge brought they before the kyng and the con-gregaciôn, and layed their handes vpon them: and the prestes slewe them, and sprenkled their bloude vpon the altar to make attonemêt for all Israel: for the kyng command to offer burntsacrifice and sinofferinges for all Israel.

And he set the Leuites in the house of the LORDE with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes, * as Dauid had commanded, and Gad the kynges Seer, and the prophet Nathan, for it was the commandement of the LORDE by his prophetes. And the Leuites stode with the musicall instrumentes of Dauid, ¥ the prestes with the trumpettes. And Ezechias commanded them to offer burntsacrifice vpon the altar. And aboute the tymne that the burntsacrifice begane to be offered the songe of the LORDE beganne also, ¥ trumpettes, and dyuerse instrumentes of Dauid the kyng of Israel and all the congregacion gaue praise ¥ thanks: and the songe of the Musicians, ¥ blowynge of the trompettes, endured all tyll the burntofferynge was finisshed.

Now whan the burntofferynge was performed, the kyng and all they that were with him, bowed them selues, and gaue praise and thankes. And Ezechias the kyng with the rulers commanded the Leuites to praysse the LORDE with the songs of Dauid and Assaph the Seer. And they gaue praysse tyll they were joyfull, and they bowed them selues, and worshipped.

And Ezechias answered and saide: Now haue ye yfyled youre hides vnto the LORDE steppe forth, and brynge hither ¥ sacrificyes and thankofferynges vnto the house of the LORDE. And the congregacion broughte sacrificyes and thankofferynges, and every ma of a fre wyllinge hert brought burntofferynges. And the nombre of the burntofferynges that the congregacion broughte, was thre score bullockes and ten, an hundreth rames, and two hundreth lambs, and all these for the burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, and they sanctified sixe hundreth bullockes, and thre thousande shepe.

But the prestes were to fewe, and could not pluck of the skynnes of all the burntofferynges, therfore toke they their brethren the Leuites, tyll the worke was finisshed, and tyll the prestes were halowed (for the Leuites

The 11th Chapter.

AND Ezechias sent in to all Israel and Iuda, and wrote letters vnto Ephraim and Manasses, that they shulde come to the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem, to kepe easter vnto the LORDE God of Israel. And the kyng hele a counsell with his rulers, and all the cögregacion at Jerusalem, *to kepe Passover in the seconde moneth: for at that tyme they could not kepe it, because the prestes were not sanctified ynowh, and the people were not yet come together vnto Jerusalem. And it pleased the kyng well and all the cögregacion. And they appointed it to be proclaimed throw out all Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, that they shulde come to kepe Paschower vnto the LORDE God of Israel; for they were not many to kepe it as it is wrytten.

And the postes wente with the letters from the hannde of the kyng and of his rulers throw out all Israel and Iuda, at y kynges commaundement, and sayde: Ye children of Israel, turne you vnto the LORDE God of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, and he shall turne to y escaped, which are lefte ouer amonoge you from the hannde of the kyng of Assur: and be not ye as yowre fathers and brethren, which rebelled agaynst the LORDE God of their fathers, and he gane the ouer in to desolacion as ye se yowre selues. Be not ye hardnecked now as were yowre fathers, but ofre yowre hâde vnto the LORDE, and come to his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the LORDE youre God, & so shal the indignacion of his wrath turne away from you. For yf ye turne vnto the LORDE, then shal yowre brethren and children haue mercy in the sighte of them which holde them in captiuyte, that they maye come agayne in to this londe: *for the LORDE youre God is gracious and mercifull, and shal not turne awaye his face from you, yf ye enseuerte vnto him.

* Num. 9. b. † Exod. 34. c.

And the postes wente from one cite to another in the londe of Ephraim and Manasses, and vnto Zabulon. But they mocked them and laughed them to scorne. Yet were there some of Asser and Manasses, and of Zabulon, that submytted them selues, and came to Jerusalem. And the hande of God came in to Iuda, so that he gau the one hert to do after the commaundement of the kyngge and the rulers at the worde of the LORDE. And there came together vnto Ierusale a greate people, to kepe the feast of vneuendoed bred in the seconde moneth, a very greate congregacion.

And they gat them vp, and put downe y altare that were at Jerusalem, and all the incense put they awaye, and cast it in to the broke Cedron, and slewe the Paschower on the fourteunte daye of the sec Axe moneth. And y prestes and Leuites were ashamed, and halowed them selues, and broughte the burntofferynges to the house of the LORDE, and stode in their ordainance, as it was acordinge, after the lawe ow the man of God. And the prestes sprenkled the bloude from the hande of the Leuites: for there were many in the cögregacion which were not sanctified, thorefore dyd the Leuites kyll Passeower for them which were not clesned, that they mighte be sanctified vnto the LORDE. There were many people also of Ephraim, Manasses, Isachar and Zabulon, which were not cleane, but aiete the Easter lambe not as it is wrytten: for Ezechias prayed for them, and sayde: The LORDE, which is gracious, shalbe mercifull vnto all them that prepare their hertes vnto God, to seke the LORDE God of their fathers, though they be not clesned after the holy purificacion. And the LORDE herde Ezechias, and healed the people. Thus the children of Israel that were founde at Ierusale, helde y feast of vneuendoed bred seuen dayes with greate ioye. And the Leuites and prestes prayed the LORDE euery daye with the loude instrumentes of the LORDE. And Ezechias speake hertely vnto all y Leuites, which had good vnderstandinge in the LORDE, and they ate the featse seuen dayes, and ofred thakofferynges, and gau thankes vnto y LORDE God of their fathers.

And all the congregacion dewyded to kepe
the feast yet other seven days, and so they held it those seven days also with joy: for Ezechias the king of Juda gave an Heneofferynge for the congregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and seven thousande shewe. But the rulers gave an Heneofferynge for the congregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and ten thousande shepe. And many of the pretes sanctified them selues. And the whole congregacion of Juda rejoysed, the pretes and Leuites, and all the congregacion that came out of Israel, and the straungers that were come out of the londe of Israel, and they that dwelt in Iuda, and great joye was there at Jerusalem: for sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of David the kyng of Israel, was there no sch (joye) at Jerusalem. And the pretes and Leuites stode vp and blessed the people, and their voyce was herde, and their prayer came in to his holy habitacion in heauen.

The xxxi. Chapter.

And wha Ezechias with the rulers wente vp, and sawe the heapes, they prayed the LORDE, and his people of Israel. And Ezechias axed the pretes and Leuites concerning the heapes. And Asaria the prest the chefe in the house of Saboe, sayde vnto him: Sence the tyme that they beganne to brynge the Heneofferynges in to the house of the LORDE, we haue eaten, and are satisfied, and yet is there lefte ouer: for the LORDE hath blessed his people, threfore is this heape lefte ouer. Then commanded the kyng, that they shulde prepare chestes in the house of the LORDE. And they prepared them, and put in the Heneofferynges, and tithes and that which was halowed, faithfully.

And the overseigh of the same had Chanania the Leuite, and Simei his brother the seconde, and Ichiel, Asasia, Naglath, Asahel, Jerimoth, Iosabad, Eliel, Iesmachia, Mahath and Beniaia, ordyned of the hande off Chanania and Simei his brother, accordinge to the commandement of kyng Ezechias. But Asaria was prynce in the house of God. And Core the sonne of Iemna the Leuite the porter of the Eastgate was ouer the frewyllinge gifts of God (which were geuen for Heneofferynges vnto the LORDE) and ouer the Most holy. And vnder his hande were, Eden, Miniamin, Iesua, Semaea, Amaria, and Sachania in the cities of the pretes vpon credence, that they shulde gene vnto their brethren accordinge to their courses, to the leeste as to the greatest.

And vnto them that were counted for men chylde from thre yeare olde and abowe, amonge all the that wete in to the house of the LORDE, every one vpó his daye to their office in their attendances after their courses. And they that were rekened for pretes in the house of their fathers, and the Leuites from twentye yeare and abowe, in their attendances after their courses. And they that were rekened amonge their children, wyues, sonnes and daughters amonge the whole congregacion: for that which was halowed, sanctified they vpon credence. There were men also named by

of the hāde of Sennacherib ו king of Assur, and of all other, and mayntayned the frō all on every syde, so many broughte presents vnto the LORDE to Ierusalem, and Jewels vnto Ezechias the kinge of Iuda. And afterwarde he was exalted in the sighte of all Heythen.

2 At the same tyme was Ezechias deedsicke, and he prayed vnto the LORDE, which made him promes, and gane him a wondertoken. But Ezechias recōpessd not accordinge as was geuen vnto him, for his hert was lifted vp: therfore came the wrath vpon him, and vpon Iuda and Ierusalem. Neuertheles Ezechias humbled him selfe because his hert had beene exalted with them at Jerusalem: therfore came not the wrath of the LORDE vpon them, whyle Ezechias lyued.

And Ezechias had very greate riches and worshippe, and made him treasures of syluer, golde, precious stones, spycys, shylde, and all maner costly vessell, and corne houses for the increas of corne, wyne and oyle, and stalles for all maner catell, and foldes for the shepe, and byuldedy him cities, and had many catell of shepe and oxen: for God gaue him very much good.

It is the same Ezechias that coured the hye water condyte in Gihon, and conveyed it vnder on the west syde of the cite of David: for Ezechias prospered in all his worke. But when the interpreters the chefe of Babilon were sent vnto him, to axe question at him (concernyng the wondertoken that had happened in the londe) God lefte hym to be tempted, that it might be knowne what soever was in his hert.

What more there is to saye of Ezechias, and of his mercifullenes, beholde, it is wryttē in the vision of the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos, and in the boke of the kynge of Iuda and Israel. And Ezechias fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried hym ouer the sepulchres of the children of David, and all Iuda and they of Ierusalē dyd hym worshippe in his death: and Manasses his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xiii. Chapter.

M A NÅSÅSES was twelue yeare olde whē he was made kyng, and reigned fyve and fiftie yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE (even after the abominacions of the Heythen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and turned backe, and byuldedy the hye places, (which his father Ezechias had broken downe) and set vp altares vnto Baalim, and made groues, and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. He byuldedy altares also in the LORDES house, wherof the LORDE had sayde: At Ierusalem shal my name be for euuer. And vnto all the hoost of heauen byuldedy him altares in both the courtes of his house of the LORDE. And in the valley of the sonne of Hennon caused he his awne sonnes to go throw the fyre, and chosed dayes, regarded byrdeseryenge, and witches, and founded soylthesayers and expounders of tokens, and dyd mōch that was euell in the sighte of the LORDE to prouke hym vnto wrath.

Carued yimages also and Idols (which he caused to make) set he vp in Gods house, wherof the LORDE saide vnto David and to Salomon his sonne: In this house at Ierusalem which I haue chased out of all the trybes of Israel, wyl I set my name for euere and wyl nomore let the fote of Israel remoue frō the londe that I appoynted for their fathers, so farre as they observe to do all I haue commaundedy them, in all the lawe, statutes and ordinances by Moses. But Manasses disceaued Iuda and them of Ierusalē, so that they dyd worse then the Heythen, whom the LORDE destroyed before the children of Israel. And the LORDE spake vnto Manasses and his people, and they regarded it not.

Therefore dyd the LORDE cause the rulers of the hoost of the kyng of Assur to come vpō the, which toke Manasses presoner with bōdes, and bounde hym with cheynes, broughte hym vnto Babilon. And when he was in treble, he made intercession before the LORDE his God, and humbled him selfe greatly before the God of his fathers, and prayed and besoughte him. Then herde he his prayere, and broughte him agayne to Ierusalem to his kyngdome. And Manasses kneue that the LORDE is God.

Afterwarde byuldedy he the vttemost wall of the cite of David, on the west syde of Gihon by the broke, and at the intranue of the Neuertheles though the people offred vpō the LORDE their God, yet offred they vpō the yce places.

What more there is to saye of Manasses and of his prayer to his God, and the wordes of the Seers that spake vpō him in the name of the LORDE God of Israel, beholde, they are amonge the actes of the kynges of Israel. Two and twetie yeare olde was Amon wha he was made kyng, and reigned two yeare at Ierusale, and dyd enuell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done. And Amon offred vpō all the Idols that his father Manasses had made and served the. Yet dyd not he humble himselfe before the LORDE, as Manasse his father had submitten himselfe: but Amon trespaced ever more and more. And his seruauntes cõspyred against him, and slewe him in his house. Then smote the people in the londe all them that had cõspyred against kyngye Amon. And the people in the londe made losias his sonne kyng in his steade.

The ֵֵֵ. Chapter.

Losias was eight yeare olde whan he was made kyng, and reigned one and thirtie yeare at Ierusale, and dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the wayes of David his father, and turned not asyde, nether to the righte hande nor to the lefte. For in the eight yeare of his reigne wha he was yet but a childe, he beganne to seke the God of his father David: and in the twelveth yeare begane he to clene Iuda and Ierusale from the yce places and groues, and carued Idols, and molten ymages: and caused the altares of Baalim to be broken downe before him, and the ymages that were theron, hewed he downe. And y groues and carued Idols and molten ymages brake he in peces, and made them to dust, and seared it vpō the granes of them that had offred vpō them. And the bones of the prestes brent he vpō the altares, and so closēd he Iuda q Ierusale, q in q cities of Manasses, Ephraim, Simeon, and vpto Nephtalí in their wyldernesses on every syde. And wha he had broken downe the altares and groues, and smytten the Idols in peces, and hewed downe all the ymages in all the londe of Israel, he came agayne to Ierusale.

In the eightith yeare of his reigne wha he had clensed the londe and the house, he sent Saphan the sonne of Asalia and Maesea the Shrene of the cite, and Ioath the sonne of Iohas the Channcele, to repayre the house of the LORDE his God. And they came to Helchias q yce prest, and there was delyuered vpto them the money that was broughte vpto the house of God, which the Leuites (that kepte the threeshouldes) had gathered, of Manasses, Ephraim, and of all the residue in Israel, and of all Iuda q Ben Iamin, and of them that dwelt at Ierusale, and they delyuered it vpto the hâdes of the worke men in the house of the LORDE, and gaue it vpto those that wrought in the house of the LORDE, where it was in decaye, q they shulde repayre it. And the same gaue it forth vpto the carpenters and byylers, to bye fē stone and hewen tymber for the balkes in the houses, which the kynges had destroyed. And the men laboured faithfully in the worke.

And ouer them were ordeyned, Iahath and Obadía the Leuites of the children of Merari: Zachary and Mesuulum of the children of the Kahathites, to further the worke, and they were all Leuites that coulde playe vpon instrumentes. But ouer them that bare burthens and furthurd all maner of worke in all the offices, there were scribes, officers and dore kepers of the Leuites. And wha they toke out the money that was broughte vpto q house of the LORDE, Helchias the prest founde

the boke of the lawe of the LORDE geuen by Moses. And Helchias answered, and saide vnto Saphan the Serybe: *I haue founde the boke of the lawe in þ house of þ LORDE. And Helchias deluyered the boke vnto Saphan. And Saphan bare it vnto the kyng, and broughte þ kyng words agaynst, and sayde: All that was geuen vnder the handes of thy seruauntes, that make they: and þ money that was founde in þ house of the LORDE, haue they gathered together, and deluyered it vnto þ officers, and to the workmen. And Saphan the Serybe tolde the kyng, and sayde: Helchias the prest hath deluyered me a boke.

And Saphan red therin before the kyng. And whan the kyng herde the wordes of the lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kyng commaunded Helchias and Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, and Abdon the sonne of Micha, and Saphan the Serybe, and Asaia the kynges seruaunt, and sayde: Go youre waye, axe counsell at the LORDE for me and for the remnaunt in Israel, and for Iuda, concernynge these wordes of the boke that is founde. For greate is the indignacion of the LORDE that is gone forth ouer vs, because oure fathers haue not kepte the worde of the LORDE, to do acordinge as it is wrytten in this boke. Then wete Helchias (with the other that were sent from the kyng) vnto the prophetisse Hulda the wife of Salum the Sonne of The- coath the sonne of Hasra the keper of the clothes, which dwelt at Jerusalem in the secõde parte, and they spake this vnto her.

And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man þ sent you vnto me: Thus sayeth þ LORDE: Beholde, I wil brynge plages vpo this place and the inhabitters therof, euë all the curses which are wrytten in the boke, that was red before the kyng of Iuda: because they haue forsakë me, and brêt incëse vnto other goddes, to prouoke me with all the workes of their handes. And my indignacion shal go forth vpon this cite, and shal not be quenched.

And after this maner shal ye saye vnto the kyng of Iuda, that sent you to axe counsell at the LORDE: Thus sayeth þ LORDE God of Israel concernynge the wordes that thou hast herde: Because thine hert is mowed, and because thou hast humbled thy selfe in the sighte of God, when thou herdest his words agaynst this place and the inhabitters thereof, and hast submityed thy selfe before me, and rent thy clothes, and wepte before me, therefore haue I herde the, sayeth þ LORDE. Beholde, I will gather the vnto thy fathers, and thou shalt be layed in thy grave with peace, so þ thine eyes shal not se all the cuell that I wyl brynge ouer this place, and the indwellers thereof. And they broughte the kyng words agaynst.

Then sent þ kyng, *and caused all the Elders in Iuda and Jerusalem to come togethuer. And the kyng wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda and inhabitters of Jerusalem, the prestes, the Leuities, and all the people both small and great: and all the wordes in the boke of the covenauent that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And þ kyng stode in his place, and made a covenauent before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, to kepe his co- maundementes, his testimonies, and his stat- utes with all their hert and with all their soule, to do acordinge vnto all the wordes of the covenauent that are wrytten in this boke.

And there stode all they that were founde at Jerusalem and in Ben Iamin. And þ inhabitters of Jerusalem dyd acordinge to the covenauent of God the God of their fathers. And Josias put awaye all abominaciones out of all the londes that were the children of Israels, and caused all them that were founde in Israel, to serue the LORDE their God.

*As longe as Josias lyued, departed they not from the LORDE the God of their fathers.

AND Josias kepe Passeoun vnto the A LORDE at Jerusalem, and slewe the Passeoun on the fourteenth daye off the first moneth, and set the prestes in their offices, and strengthened them to their mynistration in the house of the LORDE, and sayde vnto the Leuities that taughte in all Israel, and were sanctified vnto þ LORDE: Put the holy Arke in the house that Salomon þ sonne of Daviid kyng of Israel dyd buylde. *Ye shal beare it nomore vpoun youre sholders. Se that ye serue now the LORDE youre God, and his people of Israel, and prepare the house of youre fathers in youre courses, as it was appointed by David the king of Israel, and by Solomon his son: and stonde in the Sanctuary after thy course of the fathers houses amonge youre brethren the children of the people, And after the course of the fathers houses amonge the Levites, and kyll Passeouer, sanctifie and prepare youre brethren, that they maye do accordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

And Josias gaue lambs and yonge kyddes which were males, to the Heueofferynge for the comontye (all to the Passeouer for every one that was founde) in the nombre thirtie thousande, and thre thousande oxen, all of the kynges good. And his prynces of their awne good wyll gaue to the Heueofferynge for the people, & for the prestes and Levites (namely, Helchias, Zachary and Iehiel the prynces in thy house of God amoge the prestes) for the Passeouer, two thousande and sixe hundreth, And thre huldreth oxen. But Chanania, Semiia, Nathanael and his brethren, Gasabia, Ieiel and Josabad the chefe of the Levites gaue the Levites to the Heue offerynge for the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, & fyue hundreth oxen.

Thus was the Gods seruyce prepared, and the prestes stode in their place, and the Levites in their courses accordinge to the kynges commaundement. And they kylded the Passeouer, and the prestes toke it off their handes, and sprenkled it: and the Levites toke the skynnes off them, and removed the burntofferynge there from, to gene it amonsthe porcions of the fathers houses in the multitudes of their conegregation to offre vnto the LORDE, *as it is wrytten in thy boke of Moses, Euen so dyd they with the oxen also. And they dydth the Passeouer at the fyre accordinge to the lawe. And that which was halowed, dyghte they in pottes, kettels, and pannes, and made haist for the comon people. Afterwaerde prepared they for them selues also and for thy prestes: for the prestes the children of Aaron were occupied in the burntofferynges and fat vntyll the nighte. Therfore must the Levites prepare for them selues and for the prestes the children of Aaron.

And the syngers the children of Asaph stode in their place (acordinge to t Dauids commaundement) and Asaph and Heman, and Jedithim the kynges Seer, and the porters at all the gates. And they departed not from their office. For the Levites their brethren prepared for them. Thus was all the Gods seruyce prepared the same daye, that the Passeouer mighte be kepe, and the burnt-sacrifices offred vpon the altere off the LORDE accordinge to the commaundement of kyng Josias.

So the children of Israel that were at hande, helde Passeouer at that tyme, and the feast of vnleuended brede, seven dayes. Sence thy tyme of Samuel the prophet, was no Passeouer kepe in Israel like this: and no kyng of Israel had holden such a Passeouer as Josias dyd, and the prestes, Levites, all Iuda, and soch as were founde of Israel, and the inhabiteres of Jerusalem. In the eighteith yeare of the regne of Josias was this Passeouer kepte.

After this, when Josias had prepared the house, Necho the kyng of Egypte wente vp to fighte agaynst Carcamis besyde Euphrates. And Josias wette forth agaynst him. But he sent messauners vnto him, sayenge: What haue I to do with the O kyng off Iuda? I am not come now agaynst the, but I fighte agaynst another house: and God hath sayde, that I shall make haist. Cease from God which is with me, that he destroye the not. Neuertheles Josias turnd not his face from him, but prepared himselfe to fighte with him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouth of God, & came to fighte with him vpon the playne besyde Mageddo. But the Archers shot at kyng Josias. And the kyng sayde vnto his seruanutes: Cary me awaye, for I am sore wounded. And his seruanutes toke him from the charet, and caried him vpon his seconde charet, and broughte him to Ierusalem. And he dyed, and was buried amonsthe the sepulcreres off his fathers.

And All Iuda and Jerusalem mourned for Josias, and Jeremy bewayled Josias, and all the synginge men and wemen, speake their lamentaciones ouer Josias vnto this daye, and made a custome therof vnto this daye. Beholde, it is wrytten also amonsthe the Lamentaciones. What more there is to saye of Josias, and his mercy accordinge to the scripture in the lawe of the LORDE, and of his actes (both first and last) beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda.

* Leuit. 1. a. † Exo. 12. b. ‡ 1 Pa. 26. 27.
AND the people of the londe *toke Ioaahas the sonne of Isiaias, and made him kyng in his fathers stead at Jerusalem. Thre and twentye yeare olde was Ioaahas when he was made kyng, and reigned thre monethes at Jerusalem. For the kyng of Egipte deposed him at Jerusalem, and condemned the londe in an hundred talents of syluer, and one talent off golde. And the kyng of Egipte made Eliachim his brother kyng ouer Iuda and Ierusale, and turned his name Ioaichim. But Neho toke his brother Ioaahas, and carried him in to Egipte.

Fyue and twentye yeare olde was Ioaichim wha he was made kyng, and reigned eleue yeare at Ierusale, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE his God. *And Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon wente vp agaynst him, and bounde him with cheynes, to carry him vnto Babilon. And Nabuchodonosor broughte certayne vessels of the house of the LORDE vnto Babilon, and put them in his temple at Babilon. What more there is to saye of Ioaichim, and off his abhominacions which he dyd, and that were founde in him, beholde, they are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda. And Ioaichim his sonne was kyng in his steade.

Eight yeare olde was Ioaichim when he was made kyng, and reigned thre monethes and ten dayes at Ierusale, and dyd * which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE. But wha the yeare came aboute, Nabuchodonosor sent thither, and caused him be fetched vnto Babilon with the costly vessels and Jewels of the house of the LORDE, and made Sedecheias his brother kyng ouer Iuda and Jerusalem.

*One and twentye yeare olde was Sedecheias when he was made kyng, * reigned eleue yeare at Jerusalem, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE his God, and subuytted not himselfe before the face of the prophet Iereuny, which spake out of the mouth of the LORDE. He fell awaye also from Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon (which had taken an ooth of him by God) and was styfnecked, and hardened his hert, that he shulde not consuare vnto the LORDE God of Israel. And all * chefe amonge the prestes, and the people, multiplied their synnes, accordinge to all the abhominacions of the Heythen, and dyfyled the house of the LORDE, which he had sanctified at Jerusalem.

†And the LORDE God of their fathers sent vnto them early by his messauengers (for he spared his people and his habitation) but they laughed the messauengers of God to scorne, and despyed his worde, and had his prophetes in derision, so »lege tyll the indignacion of the LORDE increased ouer his people, and there was no remedye of healinge. †For he broughte the kyng of the Caldees vpon them, and caused for to slaye all their yonge men with the swerde in the house of their Sanctuary, and spared nether yonge mā nēr virgin, nether aged ner grand father, but gave them all in to his hande. And all the vessels in the house of God, greate and small, the treasures in the house of the LORDE, and the treasures of the kyng and of his prynces, all this caused he to be caried vnto Babilon. And they brent the house of God, and brake downe the wall of Ierusale, and all the palaces therof brent they with fyre, so that all the costly ornamentes of it were destroyed.

And loke who escaped the swerde, hī carried he awaye vnto Babilon, * they became his seruautes, * the seruauntes of his sonnes, tyll the Persians had the empyre : that * word of the LORDE by the mouth of Ierymy mighte be perfourmed, euen vntyll the londe had enow of hir Sabbathes: for all the tyme of the desolacion was it Sabbath, vntyll the seuenteyne yeares were fullyfled.

*But in the first yeare of Cyrus the kyng of Persia (that the wordes of the LORDE spoken by the mouth of Ierymy mighte be fullyfled) the LORDE raysed vp the sprete of Cyrus the kyng of Persia, that he caused it be proclamed thorow out all his emprire, yee and by wrytinge also, sayenge: Thus sayeth Cyrus the kyng of Persia: The LORDE God of heauen hath geuen me all the kyngdomes in the londe, and hath commaundde me to byuylde him an house at Jerusalem in Iuda. Who soeuer now amonge you is of his people, the LORDE his God be with him, and let him go vp.

The first Chapter.

In the first yeare of Cyrus kyng of Persia (that the worde of the LORDE spoken by the mouth of Jeremy might be fulfilled) the LORDE stered vp the sprete of Cyrus kyng of Persia, y he caused it be proclaimed thorow out all his empyre, yee and by wrytinge also, sayenge: Thus sayeth Cyrus the kyng of Persia: The LORDE God of heauen hath geuen me all the kyngdomes in the londe, and hath commaunded me to buylde him an house at Jerusalem in Iuda.

* 2 Pa. 36. d. 3 Esd. 2. a.

Who soeuer now amonge you is of his people, the LORDE his God be with him, and let him go vp to Jerusalem in Iuda, and buylde the house of the LORDE God of Israel. He is y God that is at Ierusale. And who so euer remayneth yet in eny maner of place (where he is a straunger) let the me of his place helpe him with syluer and golde, with good and catell of a good frewill, for the house of God at Jerusalem.

Then gat vp the pryncipall fathers of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and the prestes and Leuites, and all they whose sprete God had raysed to go vp, and to buylde the house of the LORDE at Ierusale. And all they that were aboute them, strenghted their hande with vessels of syluer and golde, with good and catell, and Jewels, besydes that which they gane of their awne frowill. And kyng Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the LORDES house, *which Nabuchodonosor had takë out of Ierusale, and put in his gods house. But Cyrus y kyng of Persia brought thë forth by Mithredath the treasurer, and nombred thë vnto Seszbazar the prync e of Iuda. And this is the nombre of them: thirty basens of golde, and a thousande basens of syluer, and nyne and twentye knyues, thirtye cuppes of golde, and of other syluer cuppes foure hundreth and ten, and of other vessels a thousande. So that all the vessels both of golde and syluer, were fyue thousande and foure hundreth. Seszbazar broughte them all vp, with them that came vp out of the captiuyte off Babilon vnto Ierusale.

The 2. Chapter.

 THESE are the childrë of the londe that wente vp out of the captiuyte (whë Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon had carried awaye vnto Babilon) and came agayne to Ierusale and in to Iuda, euery one vnto his cite, and came with Zorobabel, Iesua, Nehemias, Seraia, Reeliea, Mardachai, Bil san, Mispar, Beguain, Rehum and Baena. This is now the nombre of the men of the people of Israel: The children of Phares, two thousande, an hundreth, and two and seuentye: the children of Sephatia, thre hundreth and two and seuentye: the children of Arath, seuenthe hundreth and fyue and seuentye: the children of Pahath Moab amonge the children of Iesua Ioab, two thousande, eight hundreth and twolue: the children of Elam, a thousande, two hundreth and foure and fiftye: the children of Sathu, nyne hundreth, and fyue and fowte: the children of Sacai, seue hundredth and thre score: the children of Bani, sixe hundreth and two and fowte: the children of Bebai, sixe hundreth and thre and twentye: the children of Asgad, a thousande two hundreth and two and thre and twentye: the children of Adonicam, sixe hundreth and sixe and sixtye: the children of Bigenai, two thousande and sixe and fiftye: the children of Adin, foure hundreth and foure and fiftye: the children of Ater of Ezechias, eight and nyntye: the children of Bezai, thre hundreth and thre and twentye: the children of Iorath, an hundreth and twolue: the children of Hasum, two hundreth and thre and twentye: the children of Gibbar, fyue and nyntye: the children off Bethlehem, an hundreth and thre and twentye: the men off Netopha sixe and fiftye: the men off Anathot, an hundreth and eight and twentye: the children off Asmaueth, two and fowte: the children off Kiriath Arim, Caphira and Beeroth, seuente hundreth and thre and fowte: the children off Rama and Gaba, sixe hundreth and one and twentye: the men off Michmas, an hundreth and two and twentye: the men of Bethel and Ai, two hundreth and thre and twentye: the childrë of Nebo, two and fyttye: the children of Magbis, an húdredh and sixe and fiftye: the children of the other Elam a thousande, two hundreth and foure and fiftye: the children of Harim, thre hundreth and twentye: the childrë of Lodhadid and One, seue hundrëth and fyue and twentye: the childrë of Iericho, thre hundreth and fyue and fowte: the children of Senaa, thre thousande, sixe hundreth and thirtye.

The prestes. The children of Iedaia of the house of Iesua, nyne hundreth and thre and seuentye: the childrë of Lemmer, a thousande and two and fiftye: the children of Paschur, a thousande and two hundreth, and seuent and fowte: the children of Harim, a thousande and seuentene.

The children of Salomons seruauntes. The children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Pruda, the children of Iaela, the children of Darcon, the children of Giddell, the children of Sephatia, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereeth of Zebaim, the children of Ami. All the Nethinims and the children off Salomons seruauntes were alltogether, three hundredth and two and nyentye.

And these were also, Mithel, Melath, Thel, Harso, Cherub, Addon and Immer. But they could not shewe their fathers house nor their sede, whether they were of Israel. The children of Delaia, the children of Tobias, the children of Necoda, six hundredth and two and fiftye.

And of the children of the prestes. The children of Habaia, the children of Hacom, the children of Barsillai, which toke one of the daughters of Barsillai the Gileadite to wife, and was counted amonge the same names: these sought the register of their byrth, and founde none, threfore were they put from the prestode. And Hathirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shulde not eate of the most holy, tyll there rose vp a prest with the lighte and perfectnesse.

The whole congregacion as one man, was two and fourtye thousande, thre hundreth and thre score: besyde their seruauntes and maydeis, of whom there were seuen thousande, thre hundreth and seuen and thirtie. And they had two hundreth singinge men and women, seuen hundreth and sixe and thirtye horses, two hundreth and fyve and fourtye Mules, foure hundreth and fyve and thirtye Camels, and sixe thousande, seuen hundreth and twentye Asses.

And certayne of the chefe fathers, when they came to the house of the LORDE at Jerusalem, they were well mynded vnto the house of God, that it shulde be set in his place, and gaue after their ableyte vnto the treasure of the worke, one and thre score thousande guldens, and fyue thousande poundes of syluer, and an hundrde prestes garments. So the prestes and the Leuites, and certayne of the people, and the syngers, and the porters, and the Nethinims dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

The ii. Chapter.

And when the seuenthe moneth came, and the children of Israel were now in their cities, the people came together euon as one man, vnto Jerusalem. And there stode vp Iesua the sonne of Iosedec and his brethren the prestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his brethren, and buyled the alte of the God of Israel, to offer burntofferenges theron, as it is wrytnen in the lawe of Moses the man of God, and the alteare set they vpon his sokettes (for there was a fearfulness amonge them because of the naciones and lodes) and offerd burntofferenges theron vnto the LORDE in the mornynge and at euon. And helde the feast of Tabernacles as it is wrytnen, and offerd burntsacrifices daylie after the nombre as acordinge was, every daye his sacrifice. Afterwarde the daylie burntofferengs also, and of the new Mones and of all the feast dayes of the LORDE that were halowed, and allmaner of fre wyllinge offeringes, which they did of their owne fre wyll vnto the LORDE.

§ Vpon the first daye of the seuenthe moneth beganne they to offer burnt sacrifices vnto the LORDE. But the foundation of the temple of the LORDE was not yet layed. Neuertheles they gaue money vnto the masons and carpenters, and meate and drynke and oyle vnto them of Zidon and of Tyre, to bryng the Cedre tymbre from Libanus by See vnto Ioppa, acordinge to the commaundement of Cyrus the kyng of Persia.

In the seconde yeare of their commynge vnto the house of God at Jerusalem in the seconde moneth, beganne Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedef, and the remnaunt of their brethren the prestes and Leuites, and all they that were come out of the captiuyte vnto Jerusalem, and appoynted the Leuites fo twentye yeare olde and aboue, to se that the worke of the house of the LORDE wete forwarde. And Iesua stode with his sons and brethren, and Cadmiel with his sons, and the children of Juda, to further the workmen of the house of God, namely the children of Henadad with their children and their brethren the Levites.

And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the Lord, the princes stode in their array, with trumpettes. And the Levites the children of Asaph with Cimballes, to prayse the Lord with the sylltes of David kynge of Israel. And they sung together, giving thanks to the Lord, for he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer vpon Israel.

And all the people shouted loud in prayinge the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid. Nevertheless many of the old princes and Leuites and avncient fathers, which had sene the house afore in his foundation, and this was now before their eyes, wepte loud. But many shouted with ioye, so that the noyse gane a greate sounde, in so mouch that the people could not knowe the joyfull sounde for the noyse of the wepinge in the people: for the people shouted loud, so that the noyse was herde farre of.

The iii. Chapter.

But when the aduersaries of Juda and Ben Iamin herde, that the children of the captuuyte buylde the temple vnto the Lord God of Israel, they came to Zoroabbel and to the pryncipall fathers, and sayde vnto them: We wyl buylde with you: for we seke the Lord our God like as ye do. And we haue done sacrifice vnto him, tseenge the tyme that Assar Hadon the kynge of Assyrie boughte vs vp hither. But Zoroabbel and Iesua and the other avncient fathers of Israel, answered them: It is not mete for vs and you to buylde the house of oure God, but we wyl buylde alone vnto the Lord God of Israel, as Cury the kynge of Persia had commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the londe hyndered the people of Juda, and made them afrayed to buylde, and hyred counsellors against them and hyndered their deuyce, as longe as Cury the kynge of Persia lyued, vntyll the reigne of Darius kynge of Persia. But when Ahasuerus was kynge, in the begynnynge of his reigne wrote they vnto him a complaynte agaynst them of Juda and Ierusaleme.

And in the tyme of Artaxerses, wrote Bisellam, Mithridath, Tabeele and the other of their counsell vnto Artaxerses the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of the letter was wrytten in the Syravys speach, and was interpreted in the langage of the Syravys. Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsaie the scrybe, wrote this letter against Ierusaleme to Artaxerses the kynge.

We Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsaie the scribe, and other of the counsell of Dina, off Arphasath, off Tarplat, off Persia, off Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Elam, and other of the people whom the greate and noble Assaphar broughte over, and set in the cities of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Canaan. And this is the summe of the letter that they sent vnto kynge Artaxerses:

Thy seruauntes the men on this syde the water and in Canaan. Be it knowe vnto thy kynge, that the Iews which are come vp from the to vs vnto Ierusaleme in to that sedicious cite, buylde the same, and make vp the walles of it, and brynge it out of thy foundation. Be it knowe now therfore vnto thy kynge, if this cite be buylde vp the walles vp agayne, the shal not they give tribute, toll, and yearly custome, and their deuyce shall do harme. But now that we all are therby which destroyed the temple, we wolde no longer se the kynges dishonoure. Therfore sent we out, and caused the kynge to be certified therof: That it maye be soute in thy Chronicles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Chronicles, and perceave, that this cite is sedicious and noysome vnto kynges and londes, and that they cause other also to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was this cite destroyed. Therfore do we certifie the kyng, that if this cite be buylde vp, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt kepe nothinge on this syde the water by the reason of it.

Then sent they an answere vnto Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsaie the Scrybe, and to the other of their counell that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde the water. Peace and salutacion. The letter which ye sent vnto vs, hath bene openly red before me, and I have commanded to make search: and it is found, that this cite of olde hath made insurrecion against kynges, how ye vproure and rebellion hath beene committed therein. There have bene mightie kynges also at Ierusale, which have reigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and toll, tribute and yearly custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commandement, forbide the same men, that the cite be not builted, till I have geue comandement. Take hede now that ye be not negligent here in, lest the kyng have harme there thorow.

Now wha kyng Artaxerses letter was red before Rehum the chauunceler and Simsai the Serybe and their councele, they wente vp in all the haist to Ierusale vnto the Iewes, and forbade them with the arme and auctorite. Then ceased the worke of the house of God at Ierusale, and continued so vnto the seconde yeare of Darius kyng of Persia.

The 5. Chapter.

THE prophetes, Aggheus and Zachary they sonne of Iddo, prophecie vnto they Iewes that were in Iuda and Ierusale, in the name of the God of Israel. *Then gan vp Zoro- babel the sonne of Salathiel, and Issua the sonne of Iosedec, and beganne to buylde the house of God at Ierusale, and with them the prophetes of God which strengthened the. At the same tyme came to the Thathnai the debte on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their counceleers, and sayde thus vnto them: Who hath commanded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? Then tolde we them the names of the men, that made this buyldinge. But the eye of their God came vpon the Elders of the Iewes, that they were not inhibyte, tyll the matter was brought before Darius, and tyll there came a wrytinge therof agayne.

This is the summe of the letter they Thathnai the Debyte on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their counceleers of Aphascher (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kyng Darius. And these are the wordes that they sent vnto him: Vnto Darius the kyng, all peace. Be it knowne vnto the kyng, that we came in to Iewry to the house of they greate God, which is buylded with all maner of stone, and balckes are layed in the walles, and they worke goeth fast forth, and prospereth in their handes. Neuertheles we axed the Elders and sayde vnto them: Who hath comanded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We axed their names also, that we might certifye the, and haue wrytten the names of the men that were their rulers. But they answered vs with these wordes, and sayde: We are the seruaite of the God of heauen and earth, and buylde the house they was buylded many yeares agoo, *which a great kyng of Israel buylded and set vp. Howbeit whan our fathers prouoked the God of heauen vnto wrath, *the gane them ouer in the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon the Caldee, which brake downe this house, *caried they people awaye vnto Babilon. *Neuertheles in the first yeare of Cyrus the kyng of Babilon, they same kyng Cyrus com- manded to buylde this house of God: for the vessels of golde and siluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusale, and broughte the in to the temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kyng take out of the temple at Babilon, and delivered them vnto Seszbazer by name, whom he made Debyte, and sayde vnto him: Take these vessels, go thy waye and brynge them vnto the temple at Ierusale, and let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Seszbazar, and layed they foudacions of the house of God at Ierusale. Sence that tyne hath it bene in buyldinge, and yet is it not finished. Yf it please they kyng now, let there be search made in they kynges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kynges Cyrus commandement, that the house of God at Ierusale shulde be buylded: *sende vs they kynges mynde concernynge the same.

The 6. Chapter.

THEN comanded kinge Darius, that a search shulde be made in they library of they kynges treasure house, which laye at Babilon. So at Egbatanis in a castell that lyeth in the londe of the Meedes, there was founde a boke, *in it was there an acte wrytten after this maner: In the first yeare of kyng Cyrus, comanded the same kyng Cyrus to buylde they house of God at Ierusale, in the place where the sacrifice is made, to laye the foundation to beare thre score cubites heygth, and thre score cubites bredth, and thre wallces of all maner of stones, and one wall of tymbre, the expences shalbe geuen of the kynge house.
And the golde and syluer vessell of the house of God (which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalem, and broughte vnto Babilon) shalbe restored agayne, y they maye be broughte vnto the temple at Ierusalem to their place in to the house of God.

Get you farre from then therefor, thou Thathanai Debyte beyonde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, whose counsellors which are beyonde the water. Let them worke in the house of God, that the Debyte of Iewes and their Elders maye byulde the house of God in his place. I haue comanded also, what shalbe done to the Elders of Iuda for the buyldeinge of the house of God, that there shal diligently be takene of the kynge goods, euene of the rentes beyonde the water, euene to the men, and that they be not hyndered.

And ye they haue nede of calues, lambes, or goates for the burnt offrynge vnto God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the prestes at Ierusalem, there shalbe geuen them dailey as is acordinge: and se that this be not done neglicetly, that they maye offre swete saoures vnto God of heauen, and praye for the kynge lyfe, and for his children. This comanuement haue I geue. And what man so euer he be that altereth these worde, there shall a balke be taken from his house, and set vp, and he shall be hanged theron, and his house shalbe prysed for the deede.

But the God that dwelth in heauen, destroye all kynges and people, that put to their hede to alter and to breake downe the house of God at Ierusalem. I Darius haue comanded, that this be diligently done.

Then Thathanai ye Debyte beyonde ye water, and Sethar of Bosen with their counsellors (to whom kyngge Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And ye Elders of the Iewes buylde, and they prospered thorow the prophecienge of Aggeus the prophet and Zachary the sonne of Iddo: and they buylde, and set vp the worke, acordinge to the comanuement of the God of Israel, and after the comanuement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerses kynges of Persia. And they performed the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was the sixte yeare of the reigne of kyngge Darius.

* And the children of Israel, the prestes, the Leuites, and the other children of the captuie helde the dedicacion of the house of God with joye, and offred at the dedicacion of the house of God, an hundredth calues, two hundredth lambes, foure hundredth goates: and for the synofferynge for all Israel, twelve goates, acordinge to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the prestes in their courses, and ye Leuites in their offices, to mynster vnto God which is at Ierusalem, as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses.

And the children of the captuie helde Passeouer vpon the fourtenth daye of the first moneth: for ye prestes and Leuites had purified them selues, so they were all cleane as one man, and kyld Passeouer for all the children of the captuie, and for their brethren the prestes, and for their selues. And the childe of Israel which were come agayne out of captiviye, and all soch as had separated them selues vnto them from the sylthes of the Heythen in the londe, to seke the LORDE God of Israel, ate ye helde the feast of vlened bred seuen daies with joye: for the LORDE had made them glad, and turned the hert of the kyngge of Assur vnto the, so that their handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, which is ye God of Israel.

The bi. Chapter.

AFTER these acts in the reigne of Artaxerses kyngge of Persia, "there wente vp from Babilon, Ezdras the sonne of Seraia, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Helchias, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne Meraioth, the sonne of Serahia, the sonne of Vsi, the sonne of Buk, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleasar, the sonne of Aaron the chefe prest, which was a quycke scribe in the lawe of Moses, which the LORDE God of Israel dyd geue. And ye kyngge gaue him all that he required, acordinge to the hande of the LORDE his God vpon him.

And there wente vp certayne of the children of Israel, and of the prestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yeare of kyng Artaxerses. And they came to Jerusalem in the fift moneth, that is the seuenth yeare of the kyng. For vpon the first daye of the first moneth, deuyseth he to go vp from Babilon: and on the first daye of the fift moneth came he to Jerusalem, acordinge to the good hande of God vpon him: For Eszdras prepared his hert to seke the lawe of the LORDE, and to do it, and to teach the precepte judgment in Israel.

And this is the summe of the letter, that kyng Artaxerses gaue vnto Eszdras the prest, the scrybe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the LORDE and of his statutes ouer Israel. Vnto Eszdras the prest and scrybe in the lawe of the God of heauen, peace and saluation. I haue comanded, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which are mynded of their awne good wyll to go vp to Jerusalem, that they go with the, bewayse sent of the kyng and of the seuen lorde of the counsell, to vset Iuda and Jerusalem, acordinge to the lawe of God, which is in thy haid: And that thou shuldest take with the, syluer and golde, which the kyng and the lorde of his counsell gene of their awne good wyll vnto the God of Israel (whose habitation is at Jerusalem) and all the syluer and golde that thou canst fynde in all thy countre of Babilon: with it that the people and prestes gene of their awne good wil vnto the house of God at Jerusalem.

Take thou the same, and bye diligently with the same money, calues, lambes, goates, and meateofferynges and drynkofferynges, to be offered vpon the alarte of the house of youre God at Jerusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren to do with the remnaunt of the money, that do after the wyll of youre God. And the vessels that are gvene the for the mynstiration in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Jerusalem.

And what so ever thynge more shal be nedefull for the house of thy God, which is necessary for the to spende, let the same be gue of out of the kynges chamber. I kyng Artaxerses haue comanded all the treasurers beyonde the water, loke what so euer Eszdras the prest and scrybe in the lawe of the God of heauen, requyreth of you, that ye fullyll the same diligently, vntyll an hundreth taletes of syluer, and tyll an hundreth quarters of wheate, and tyll an hundreth Bathes of wyne, and tyll an hundreth Bathes of oyle, and salt without measure. Whatesoever be longeth to the lawe of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauen, that there come no wrath vpon the kynges realme and his children.

And knowne be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctorite to requyre taxinge a custome, and yearly rentes vpon eny of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims and mynisters in thy house of this God. But thou Eszdras (after the wyszdome of thy God that is in thy hande) set thou judges and arbiters, to judge all the people that is beyonde Iordane, euen all soch as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyll not diligently fullyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shall haue his iudgmet for the dede, whether it be vnto death, or to be banished, or to be condemned in good, or to be put in prision.

Praysed be the LORDE God of oure fathers, which so hath inspyred thy kynges hert to garnysh the house of God at Jerusalem: and hath enclyned his mercy vnto me in the presence of the kyng, and his counsellers, and before all the kynges hye estates. And I was comforted (acordinge to the haid of the LORDE my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heads of Israel together, theye theye mighte go vp with me.

The bii. Chapter.

THERESE are the heads of their fathers that were named, which went vp with me from Babilon, what tyne as kyngge Artaxerses reignd. Of the childr of Phineas, Gersom: of the children of Ithamar, Daniel: of the children of Daud, Hattus: of the childr of Pareos, Zachary, and the men childr nomberd with him, an hundreth and fiftie. Of the children of Pahath Moab, Eleoenai the sonne of Serahia, and with him two hundreth males.

Of the children of Sechania, the sonne of Ichasiel, and with him thre hundreth males. Of the children of Adin Ebed, the sonne of Jonanathan, and with him fiftie males. Of the children of Elam, Iesaia the sonne of Athalia, and with him scuentie males. Of the children of Sephatia, Sebadia the sonne of Michael, and with him foure score males.
Of the children of Joab, Obadia the sonne of Iehiel, and with him two hundreth & eightene men children. Of the children of Solumith, the sonne of Iosiphia, and with him an hundreth and three score males.
Of the children of Bebai, Zachary the sonne of Bebai, and with him eight and twentye males. Of the children of Asgad, Iohanian the yongest sonne, and with him an hundreth and ten males. Of the last children of Adonicam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Iciel and Semaia, and with them three score males. Of the children of Bigeuai, Vhaim and Sabud, and with them seue males. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth toward Aheua, & there abode we thre dayes.
And when I loked amongst the people & the prestes, I founde no Leuites there. The sent I Eliesser, Ariel, Semaia, Elnathan, Iarib, Elnathan, Natha, Zachary and Mesullam the rulers, and Iolairib and Elnathan the teachers, and those sent I vnto Iddo a chefest at Casi-phia, that they shulde fetch us mynsters for the house ofoure God, and I tolde them what they shulde saye vnto Iddo and to his brethren the Nethimis at Casipha.
And (acordinge to the good hande ofoure God vpon us) they broughte us a wyseman from amonge the children of Maheli the sonne of Leui the sonne of Israel, euon Serebia with his sonnes and brethren, eighetene. And Hasabia, and with him Iesai of the children of Merari, with his brethren & their sonnes, twentye. And of the Nethimis, whom Daud and the princes gane to mynster vnto the Leuites, two hundreth & twentye, all named by name.
*And euene there at the water besyde Aheua, causeth I a fastinge to be proclaimed, & we myghte humble oure selues before oure God, to seke of him a righte waye for us, & oure children and all oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to require of the kyng, soudyers & horsmen, to helpe us agaynst the enimye in the waye. For we had sayde vnto the kyng:
The hande of oure God is for the best vpon all them that seke him, and his violence and wrath vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and soughte this at oure God, and he heerde us.
And I toke out twolue of the chefe prestes, Serebia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethren with them, and weyed them thee the syluer and golde and vessells for the Heue offeringe vnto the house of oure God, vnto the kyngye, and the lorde of his councell and prynces, and all Israel that were at hande, had geuen to the Heue offerenge: and there weyed I them vnder their hande sixe hundreth and fiftie talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundreth talentes, and in golde an hundreth talentes, twentye cuppes of golde of a thousande guldens, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayde vnto them: Ye are holy vnto the LORDE, therefore are the vessels holy also, and so is the syluer and golde that is geuen of a good wyl vnto the LORDE God of youre fathers:
Watch ye therfore and kepe it, till ye wye it downe before the chefe prestes and Leuites, and avnicient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the chestes of the house of the LORDE.
Then toke the prestes and Leuites that weyed syluer and golde & vessell, to brynge it to Jerusalem vnto & house of oure God.
So we brake vp, from the water of Aheua on the twolue yeares daye of the first moneth, to go vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon us, and deluyered us fro the hande of the enemies and preyte waytynge by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Vrias the prest, and with him Eleasar the sonne of Phineas, and with them Isobad the sonne of Iesua, and Noadia a sonne of Benui the Le-uites, accordinge to the nombre & weight of every one. And the weight was all wyttene vp at the same tyme.
And the children of the captiuyte, which were come out of preson, offered burntofferinges vnto & God of Israel: twolue bullocoks for all Israel, syx and nyntyte rammes, seuen and seuenteyne lambes, and twolue goates for a synofferynge, all to the burnt offeringe of the LORDE. And they deluyered the kynges commissyon vnto the kynges officers, & to the Debytes on this syde the water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.
The r. Chapter.

WHAN all this was perfourned, the rulers came to me, and sayde: The people of Israel, and the prestes, & Leuites are not separated from the nacions in the londes as touchinge their abominaciouns, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pheresites, Ibusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egiptians, and Amorites. * For they haue taken the doughters of the same, & their sonnes, and haue myxte the holy sedy with y nacions in the londes: and the hande of the rulers and lordes of counsell hath bene principall in this trespace.

When I herde this, I rente my clothes and my paynt, and ploute out the heir of my heade and of my beerd, and sat mounynyng.
And there resorted vnto me all soch as feared the worde of the LORDE God of Israel because of the greate transgression. And I sat mounynyng vntyll the euenyng sacrifice.
And aboute the euenyng sacrifice I rose vp from my heuyynes, and rente my clothes and my raiment, and fell vp on my knees, and spred out my handes vnto the LORDE my God, and sayde:

My God, I am ashamed, and darre not lifte vp mine cies vnto the my God: for our wickednesses are gowne ouer our heade, & oure trespasses are waxen greate vnto y heaué.
Seuce the tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in greate trespass vnto this daie, & and because of our wickednesses haue we and oure kynges bene deluyered in to the hande of y kynges of the nacions, in to the swerde, in to captiuyte, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daie.

But now is there a litle and sodane graciousnes come from the LORDE oure God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maie gue vs a nayle in his holy place, that oure God maye lighte oure eyes, and gue vs a litle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bond-men, and oure God hath not forsaké vs though we be bondmen, and hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in the sighte of the kynges of Persia, that they shulde gue vs lyfe, and promote the house of oure God, and to sett vp the desolacion therof, and to gue vs an hedge in Iuda and Jerusalem.

O oure God, what shall we saye now after this? that we haue forsaken thy commaundem-entes, which thou hast commaunded by thy seruauntes the prophetes, and saide: The londe wherin ye shal come to possess it, is an vnclene londe thorow the fylthines of the people of the londes, in their abominaciouns wherewith they haue made it full of vnclenes on every syde. Therfore shal ye not gue youre doughters vnto their sonnes, and their doughters shall ye not take vnto youre sonnes, and seke not their peace and welth for euer, that ye maye be stronge, and enjoye the good in the londe, and y ye and youre children maye haue the inheritance of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs (because of oure euell dedes and greate trespass) thou oure God hath spared oure wickednes, and hast geuen vs a deluyeraunce as it is come to passe.

As for vs, we haue turned backe, a haue let go thy commaundementes, to make con-tracte with the people of these abominaciouns.
Wilt thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be vterly consumed, so that nothynge remayne, and tyll there be no deluyeraunce? O LORDE God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we re-mayne yet escaped, as it is this daie. Beholde, in thy presence are we in oure trespass, for because of it is there no stondinge before the.

The r. Chapter.

ANd when Eszdras prayed after this maner and knowleged, wepte, and laie before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very great congregacion of men and wemen, and children: for the people wepte very sore. And Sachania the sonne of Iehiel one of the children of Elam, answered, and sayde vnto Eszdras: We haue trespeed against the LORDE oure God, in that we haue taken strange wyues of all the people of the londe. Now there is hope yet in Israel cconvininge this, therefore let vs make a couenaint now with oure God, that we shal put awaye all the wyues (and soch as are borne of them) acordynge to the counsell of y LORDE, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, y we maye do acordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be with the, be of good conforte, and do it.

Then rose Eszdras, and toke an oath of the rulers, priests and Leuites, and of all Israel, that they shulde do acordynge to this worde: and they swore. And Esdral stode vp before the house of God, and wente in to the chamber of Iohan an the sonne of Eliasab. And whan he came thither, he ate no bred, and dranke no water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had bene in captiuyte.

And they caused a proclamacion be made thorow out Iuda and Jerusalem, vnto all the children which had bene in captiuyte, y they shulde gather them selues together vnto Jerusalem: And that who sooner came not within three dayes acordinge to the deuoye of the rulers and Elders, all his substaunche shulde be forfett, and he put out from the cōgregacion of the captiue.

Then all the men of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues together vnto Jerusalem in three dayes, y is on the twentith daye of the nyeneth moneth: and all the people sat in the strete before the house of God, and trembled because of the matter, and for the rayne. And Esdral y prest stode vp, and sayde vnto them: *Ye haue transgressed, ye haue taken strang wyues, to make the trespace of Israel yet more: confesse now therfore vnto y LORDE God of youre fathers, τ do his pleasure, and separate youre selues from the people of the londe, τ from y strang wyues. Thē answered all the cōgregacion, τ sayde with loude voyce: Let it be done as thou hast sayde. But the people are many, τ it is a raynye wether, τ they cānot stode here without, nether is this a worke of one daye or two, for we are many y haue offended in this transgression.

Let vs appoynte oure rulers therfore in all the cōgregacion, τ all they which have taken strang wyues in oure cities, maye come at the tymē appoynted, and the Elders of euery cite and their Judges with them, tylle the wrath of oure God because of this matter be turned away from vs.

Then were appoynted Ionathan the sonne of Asahel τ Iehasia the sonne of Thecua ouer this matter. And Mesullam and Sabthai the Leuites helped them. And the children of the captiuyte dyd euon so. And Esdral the prest, and y awncient fathers thorow the house of their fathers, and all that were now re-

The first Chapter.

T HESEx are the actes of Nehemias the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuned in § moneth Chisleu in § twetieth yeare, that I was in the castell at Susan: and Hanani one of my brethren came with certayne people of Iuda, and I axed them how the Iewes dyd that were deluyered and escaped from the captiuyte, how it wente at Ierusalem. And they sayde vnto me: The remnaunt of the captiuyte are there in the londe in greate mysfalke & rebuke. *The walles of Ierusalem are broken downe, and the portes thereof are brent with fyre.

Wha I herde these wordes, I sat me downe & wepte, & mourned two dayes, & fasted & prayed before the God of heauen, & sayde: O LORDE God of heauen, thou great & terrible God, *thou § kepest couenaunt & mercy for them ye loue the x observe thy comandements: let thy eares marke, x let thine eies be open, ey thou mayest heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, which I praye now before ey daye and nighte for the children of Israel thy seruauntes, x knowelege the synnes of the children of Israel, which we haue committed against ye.

And I x my fathers house haue synned also. We haue bene corrupte vnto the, in ey we haue not kepte the comandements, statutes x lawes, which thou comandedst thy seruaunt Moses. Yet call to remembrance ye wordes that thou comandedst thy seruaunt Moses, and saydest: *If ye trisgresse, then wil I scater you abrode among the nacioues. But ye turne vnto me, and kepe my commandements do them: though ye were cast out vnto the vttmost parte of heauen yet wyl I gather you from thence, and wyll brynge you from thence, euene vnto the place, that I haue chosen for my name to dwell there. They are thy seruauntes, and thy people, whom thou hast delyuered thorow thy greate power x mightie hande. O LORDE, let thine eares marke the prayer of thy seruaunt, x the prayer of thy seruauntes, whose desyre is to feare thy name, x let thy seruaunt prospere this daye, x graunte him mercy in the sight of this man: for I was the kynges butlar.

The ix. Chapter.

IN the moneth Nisan of the twentieth yeare of kyng Artaxerxes, wha the wyne stode before hym, I toke vp the wyne, and gaue it vnto ey kynges, and I was heuy in his presence. Then sayde ey kynges vnto me: Why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not ey matter, but thou art heuy harted. Neuertheles I was sore afraied, x sayde vnto the kynges: God saue the kynges life for euer, shulde I not loke sadly? the cite of my fathers buryall-lyth wayest, x the portes therof are consumed with the fyre. Then sayde the kynges vnto me: What is the thy request? Then made I my prayer to the God of heauene, and sayde vnto the kynges: ye it please the kynges, and ye thy seruaunt be fauoured in thy sighte, I beseeke the sende me in to Iuda vnto ey cite of my fathers buryall, that I maye byuyle it.

And ey kynges sayde vnto me, x so dyd the quene ey sat by hym: How lisse shall thy journey cotingue, and wha wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased ey kynges to sende me, and I set him a tyme, x sayde vnto the kynges: Ye if the kynges, let him geue me letters to the Debites beyonde ey water, ey they maye conuene me ouer, tyll I come in to Iuda: x letters vnto Assaph the lorde of the kynges wod, ey he maye geue me wodd for balkes to the gates of the palace, which are harde on the house x harde on the walles of the cite, x for the house that I shal ente in to. And ey kynges geue me accordinge to the good hande of God vpoo me. And when I came to ey Debites beyonde the water, I gaue them ey kynges letters. And the kynges sent captaynes and horsmen with me.

But when Saneballath the Horonite, x Tobias the seruaunt of the Ammonites herde ey, it grened them sore, ey there was come a man which soughte the welth of the children of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalem, x had bene there thre daies, I gat me vp in ey night season, x a fewe men with me: for I tolde no man what God had geue me in my hert to do at Jerusalem: x there was not one beest with me, saue it ey I rode vpone. And I rode by nighte vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well, x to the Dongporte, x consiered ey walles of Jerusalem that were broken downe, x the portes therof consumed with the fyre. And I wente ouer vnto ey Well porte, x to the kynges condyte, x there was no rowme for my beest, ey it coulde go vnder me. Then wete I on in the nighte by the broke syde, x cossidered ey wall, x turned back, x came home agayne to ey valley porte.

And ey rulers knowe not whither I wete, or what I dyd: for hither to had I not tolde the Iewes x the prestes, the councelers x the rulers, x the other ey laboured in the worke, x I saide vnto the: Ye se the myserye ey we are in, how Jerusalem lyeth wayst, ey how ey gates therof are brent with fyre, come, let vs buylde vp ey walles of Jerusalem, ey we be nomore a rebuke. And I tolde the of the good hade of my God which was vpoo me: And ey kynges wordes ey he had spok ey vnto me. And they saide: Then let vs get vp. And we buylded, and their handes were strengthened to good.

But when Saneballath ey Horonite, and Tobias the seruaunt of ey Ammonites, x Gosem the Arabian herde it, they laughed vs to

AND Eliasib the hye prest gat him vp with his brethren the prestes, and buylded the Shepegate. They halowed it, and set vp the dores of it: euuen vnto the tower Mea halowed they it, namely vnto the *tower of Haanecel. Nexte vnto him buylded y men of Jericho. And besyde he buylded Sachur the sonne of Imri. But the Fysshporte dyd the children of Sena buylde, they covered it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres of it. Nexte vnto him buylded Meremoth the sonne of Vria the sonne of Hacoz. Nexte vnto him buylded Messulam y sonne of Barachias y sonne of Mesasabeel. Nexte vnto him buylded Sadoc y sonne of Baena. Nexte vnto him buylded they of Theeoa. But their greate mē put not their neckes to y servuce of their lorde.

The Oldgate buylded Ioxada y sonne of Passeah, τ Mesulam the sonne of Besodia: they covered it, and set on the dores, lockes τ barres of it. Nexte vnto them buylded Melacia of Gibeon, and Iadon of Morono, mē of Gibeon and of Mispa, for the seate of the Debyte on this syde the water. Nexte vnto him buylded Vsiel the sonne of Harbaia the goldsmith. Nexte vnto him buylded Hanania y Apotecarys sonne, τ they repayed Ierusale vnto the brede wall. Nexte vnto him buylde Rephaia the sonne of Hur, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusale. Nexte vnto him buylde Iedaia the sonne of Harumaph, ouer agaynst his house. Nexte vnto him buylde Hattus the sonne of Hasabienia. But Māchiah the sonne of Harim, and Hasub the sonne of Pahath Moab buylded y other pece, and the tower beside the fornace. Nexte vnto him buylded Sallum the sonne of Halohes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusale, and his daughters.

The valley gate buylded Hanum, and the citesins of Sanoah. They buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres therof, and a thousande cubytes on the wall, vnto the Dōgeporte. But the Dongeporte buylded Malechia the sonne of Rechab, the ruler of the fourth parte of the vynyarde: He buylded it, τ set on the dores, lockes τ barres therof. But the Wellgate buylded Sallum y sonne of Chal Hose, the ruler of the fourth parte of Mispa: He buylded it, τ covered it, τ set on τ dores, lockes, τ barres therof, τ the wall vnto the pole of Sybah by the kynges garden, vnto the steppes that go downe from the cite of Dauid. After him buylded Nehemia the sonne of Aszbuk, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethzur, vntyll the other side ouer against the sepulcrers of Dauid, and to the pole Asuia, τ vnto the house of the mightie.

After him buylded the Leuites, Rehum the sonne of Bani. Nexte vnto him buylded Hasabilia τ ruler of the halfe quarter at Regila in his quarter. After him buylded their brethre, Banai the sonne of Henadab, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Segila. After him buylded Eser the sonne of Jesua τ ruler of Mispa, the other pece hard ouer against the Harnesse corner. After him buylded Baruc the sonne of Sahai the other pece worshipfully τ costly, frō the corner vnto τ dore of τ house of Eliasib τ hye prest. After him buylded Meremoth the sonne of Vria the sonne of Hacoz the other pece, frō τ dore of Eliasibs house, vnto the ende of the house of Eliasib. After him buylded Ben Iamin and Hasub ouer against their house. After τ the buylded Asaria the sonne of Maesel the sonne of Anania nexte vnto his house. After him buylded Benui τ sonne of Henadad the other pece from the house of Asaria vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner.

After him buylded Palal the sonne of Vsai, ouer agaynst the corner τ the bye tower, which lieth out ouer frō the kynges house, besyde the courte of the preson. After him Pedaia the sonne of Pareōs (As for γ Nethinims they dwelt in Ophel, vnto τ Watergate, towardε the east where τ tower lieth out). After him buylded they of Theeo τ other pece ouer against τ greate tower, τ lieth outarde, and vnto the wall of τ Ophel.

But from the Horsgate forth buylded τ prestes, every one ouer agaynst his house. After them buylded Sadoc τ sonne of Immer ouer against his house. After him buylded Semaia the sonne of Sachania \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) keeper of the eastgate. After him buylded Hanania the sonne of Selemia, \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) Hanum the sonne of Zalaph \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) sixte, \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) other peace. After him builded Mesulam the sonne of Berechiah ouer against his chest. After him builded Malehia the goldsmythe sonne, vntyl \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) house of the Nethinims, and of the marchauntes ouer agaynst the counell gate, and to the perrler in the corner. And betwene the perler of the corner vnto the Shepegate builded the goldsmythe and the marchauntes.

The iiiij. Chapter.

But when Saneballat herde that we builded \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) wall, he was wroth, \(\alpha\) toke greate indignaci\(\text{\textasciitilde}\) \(\alpha\) mocked \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) Jewes \(\alpha\) saide before his brethren \(\alpha\) the mightie men of Samaria: What do the impotent Jewes shall they be thus suffred? shall they offer? shall they perfourme it in one daie? shall they make \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) stones whole againe, \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) are brought to dust, \(\\alpha\) brench. And Tobias the Ammonite beside him saide: Let thee build on, \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) a foaxe go vp, he shall breake downe his stonye wall. Heare O thou oure God, how we are despysed, turne their shame vpoun their awne heade, \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) thou mayest geue them ouer in to despisinge in the londe of their captiuitie. Coner not their wickednesse, \(\alpha\) put not out their sinne fro\(\text{\textasciitilde}\) thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the wall, \(\alpha\) ioyned it whole together, vnto \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) halfe heigh. And the people were well mynded to labour.

But when Saneballat, \(\alpha\) Tobias, and \(\\alpha\) Arabi\(\text{\textasciitilde}\), \(\alpha\) Ammonites, \(\alpha\) Aszsdodites herde, \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) the wallles of Jerusalem were made vp, and that they had beginne to stoppe vp \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) gappes, they were very wroth, and espysed all together, to come and fight against Jerusalem, \(\\alpha\) to make an hindrance therin. Neuertheles we made oure praier vnto oure God, \(\alpha\) set watchm\(\text{\textasciitilde}\) vp\(\text{\textasciitilde}\) the wall daye \(\\alpha\) night ouer against them. And Iuda saide: The stre\(\text{\textasciitilde}\) of the bearers is to feble, \(\\alpha\) there is to moch dust, we are not able to builde on the wall. Andoure aduersaries thought: They shall not knowe nether se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge the, and slaye them, \(\\alpha\) hynder \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) worke. But when the Jewes that dwelt besyde them, came out of all the places where they dwelt aboute vs, and tolde vs as good as t\(\text{\textasciitilde}\) tymes, then set I the people after their kynered with their swerde, speares \(\alpha\) bowes beneth in the lowe places behynde the wall, \(\alpha\) loked, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chefe men and rulers, \(\alpha\) to the other people: Be not ye afrayed of them, thynke vpon \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) greate LORDE which ought to be feared, \(\alpha\) fighte for youre brethren, sonnes, daughters, wyues, \(\alpha\) houses. Neuertheles when oure enemys herde \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) we had gotten worde of it, God broughte their counellc to naughte, and we turned all againe to the wall, euery one vnto his labour. And from that time forth it came to passe, \(\alpha\) the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the labour, \(\alpha\) the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates, and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Iuda, which buylded on the wall, \(\alpha\) bare burth\(\text{\textasciitilde}\), from those that laded the. With one hande dyd they \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) worke, and with the other helde they the wepens. And euery one \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) buylded, had his swerde girde by his side, \(\alpha\) so buield they. And the trompetters stode beside me.

And I sayde vnto the pryncipall men, \(\alpha\) rulers, and to \(\\alpha\) other people: The worke is greate \(\alpha\) large, \(\alpha\) we are separated vpon the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noise of \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) trompe, resorte ye thiter vnto vs. "Oure God shal flght for vs, \(\\alpha\) we wil be labourge in \(\\text{\textasciitilde}\) worke. And the halfe parte of the helde \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) speares fro \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) morninge springe, till \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) starres came forth. And at \(\alpha\) same tymse sayde I vnto \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) people: Evrey one abyde with his seruaunt at Jerusalani, \(\alpha\) in the night season we maye geue attendance to \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) watch, and to laboure on the daye tymse. As for me and my brethren, \(\alpha\) my seruauntes, and \(\alpha\) men of the watch behynde me, we put neuer of our clothes, so moch as to waše oure selnes.

The b. Chapter.

And there arose a greate complaigne of \(\alpha\) the people, \(\alpha\) of their wyues against their brethren the Jewes. And there were some \(\text{\textasciitilde}\) sayde: Oure sonnes and daughters are to many, let vs take corne for the, \(\alpha\) eate, that we maye lyne. Some saide: Let vs set oure londes, vynnyardes \(\alpha\) houses to pledge, \(\alpha\) take vp corne in the derth. But some saide: Let vs borowe money of the kinge vp\(\text{\textasciitilde}\) vsury for oure londes and vineyards. Now are our brethrens bodies as our children, and their as our children: els shulde we subdue our sonnes and daughters vnto bondage, and some of our doughters are subdued already, and no strength is there in our handes, and other men shal haue our londes and vineyards.

But when I herde their complainye and soch wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduyed so in my mynde, Æ rebuked the counsellers, and the rulers, and sayde vnto them: *Wyl ye reuym sleeve one of another? And I broughte a greate congregacion agaynst them, and sayde vnto them: We (after oure abilitye) haue boughte oure brethren the Iewes, which were solde vnto the Heythen. And wyl ye sell youre brethren, whom we haue boughte vnto vs? Then held they their peace,

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do. Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the Heythen our enemies? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes haue lent them money and corne: but as vsury, let vs leave it. Therfore this same daye se that ye restore the their londes agayne, their vineyards, oyle gardens and houses, and the hundreth parte of the money of the corne, wyne and oyle that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: We wyl restore them agayne, and wyl require nothinge of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, and take an oath of the, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappye, and sayde: God shake out every man after the same maner fro his house and laboure, that maynteyneth not this worde: euën thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all ye congregacion sayde: Amen, and prayes the LORDE. And the people dyd so.

* And from the tymye forth that it was commytted vnto me to be a Debyte in the londe of Iuda, namely from the twentieth yeare vnto the two and thirtieth yeare off kyng Artaxerses (that is twelue yeare) I and my brethren lyued not of soch sustenaunce as was geuen to a Debyte: For the olde Debytes that were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, and had takè of the bred and wyne, and fortye Sycles of syluer: Yee and their seruauntes haed oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no lode. And all my seruauntes came thither together vnto  Ÿ worke. Morover there were at my table an hundreth and fiftie of the Iewes and rulers, which came vnto me, from amonge the Heythen, that are aboute vs. And there was prepared me daylie an oxe, and sixe chosen shepe, and byrdes, and euere once in ten dayes a greate summe of wyne. Yet reuymd not I the lyuynge of a Debyte for  Ÿ bondage was greuous vnto  Ÿ people. Thynde vpô me my God vnto  Ÿ best, accordyng to all that  I haue done for this people.

The vi. Chapter.

AND whan Saneballat, Tobias and Gosem the Arabian, and the other of oure enemies herde, that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no mo gappes ther in (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Saneballat and Gosem sent vnto me, sayenge: Come and let us mete together in the vyllages vpon the playne of the cite Ono. Neuertheles they thoughte to do me euell. Notwithstandyng I sent messauingers vnto them, sayenge: I haue a greate busynes to do, I can not come downe. The worke shulde stonde still, if I were negligent, and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner. And I gaue the same answere.

Then sent Saneballat his seruaunt vnto me in the fift tymye, with an open letter in his hande, wherin was wrytten: It is tolde the Heythen,  Ÿ Gosem hath sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thynke to rebell: for  Ÿ which cause thou buyldest the wall, and wylt be their kyng in these matters, and hast ordeyned the propheteis to preach of the at Ierusalem, and to saye: He is kyng of Iuda.

Now shal this come to the kynges eares: come now thervore, and let us take oure counsell together. Neuertheles I sent vnto hym, sayenge: There is no soch thinge done as thou sayest: thou hast fayned it out of thine owne hert. For they were all mynded to make us afrayed, and thoughte: They shal withdrawe their handes from the worke,  Ÿ they shal not laboure. Howbeit I strænted my hande the more.

And I came vnto  Ÿ house of Semaia  Ÿ
The judge of the house of God, eué vnto My temple, sparre dores of My temple: for they wyl come to slaye yé, yee eué in the night wyl they come to put the to death. But I sayde: Shulde soch a má flye? Shulde soch a má as I am, go in to My temple, to sake his life? I wyl not go in.

For I perceived, that God had not sent him: Yet spake he prophecye vpon me, nevertheless Tobias and Saneballat had hirn him for money. Therfore toke he the money, that I shulde be afrayed, and so to do and synne, that they might have an euell reporte of me, to blaspheme me. My God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Saneballat, acordynge vnto these their workes, and of yé prophet Noadla, and of the other prophets, y wolde hane put me in feare.

And the wall was fysonshed on the fyue thyneth dayes of the moneth Elul, in two and ffty dayes. And when all our enemies herde therof, all the Heithen yé were aboute vs, were afrayed, and their corage failed the: for they perceived, that this worke came of God. And at yé same tyme were there many of yé chefe of Iuda, whose letters wete vnto Tobias, y from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Iuda that were sworn vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sachi-inia the sonne of Arach, and his sonne Johanan had the daughter of Mesullam the sonne of Barachia, and they spake good of him before me, and tolde him my wordes.) And Tobias sent letters, to put me in feare.

And my God gane me in my hert, that I gatherd together the principall men and yé people, to nombre them, and I founde a register of their nombre, *which came vp afore out of the captiuyte (whom Nabuchodonosor yé kynge of Babiló had caryed awaie) and dwelld at Jerusalem and in Iuda, every one vnto his cite, and were come with Zoroabel, Iesua, Nehemias, Asaria, Raania, Naheman, Mardachai, Bilasan, Mispereth, Biguenai, Nehum and Baena.

And the prestes and Leuites, the Porters, the syngers, and the other of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities.

The viij. Chapter.

NOW whan the seuenth moneth drue nye, A and 8 children of Israel were in their cities, all the people gathered them selues together as one man vpon the strete before the Watergate, and sayde vnto Eszdras the scrybe, that he shulde fetch the boke of the lawe of Moses, which the LORDE commanded Israel. *And Eszdras the prest brought 8 lawe before the congregaciô both of men and wemen, and of all that coulde vnderstonde it, vpon the first daye of the seuenth moneth, and red therin in the strete that is before the Watergate, from 8 light mornynge vntyll the noone daye before men.
and women and such as could understand it: and the cares of all the people were inclyned vnto the boke of the lawe. And Eszdras the scrybe stode vpon an hye pulpit of wod, which they had made for the preaching, beside him stode Mathithia, Sema, Anania Vria, Ezechias, and Maessa on his right hand: And on his lefte stode Pedaia, Misael, Malchias, Hasum, Hasbadana, Zachary and Mesulman.

And Eszdras opened the boke before all the people, and he stode above all the people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Eszdras prayed the LORDE the greate God. And all the people answered Amen, Amen, with their handes vp, and bowed the selues, and worshipped the LORDE with their faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Bani, Serbisa, Iamin, Acub, Sabthai, Hodaia, Maesia, Celita, Asaria, Iosabad, Hanam, Plaia, and the Leuites, caused the people to geue hede vnto the lawe, the people stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly and planely, so that men vnderstode the thinge that was red. And Nehemias (which is Hathirsatha) and Eszdras the prest and scrybe, and the Leuites caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: This daye is holy vnto the LORDE youre God: be not ye sory therfore, we pe not. For all ye people wepte, wher they herde the wordes of the lawe.

Therfore sayde he vnto them: Go youre waye, and eate the fat, and drynke the swete, and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared themselues: for this daye is holy vnto our LORDE, be not ye sory therfore: for the joye of the LORDE is youre strength. And the Leuites stylled all the people, and sayde: Hold ye youre peace, for the daye is holy, vxe not ye youre selues. And all the people wente their waye to eate and drinke, and to sende parte vnto other, and to make great myth, for they had vnderstode the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye were gathered together the chefe fathers amonge all the people, and the prestes and Leuites, vnto Eszdras the scrybe, that he shulde teach them wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrote in the lawe, how that the LORDE had commaunded by Moses, that the childe of Israel shulde dwell in bothes in the feast of the seventh moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaimed in all their cities, at Jerusalem, sayenge: Go vp vnto your moneth, and fetch Olyue braunches, Pynebraunches, Myrtraunches, Palmebraunches, braunches of thicketree, to make bothes as it is wrytten.

And the people wente vp, and fetched the, and made them bothes, every one vpon the rofe of his house, and in their courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the Watergate, and in the strete by Ephraims porte. And all the congregation of them that were come agayne out of the captytue, made bothes, and dwelt therin: for sence the tyme of Iosua the sonne of Nû vnto this daye, had not the children of Israel done so, and there was very greate gladnesse.

And euery daye from the first daie vnto the last, red he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen daies helde they the feast, on the eight daye the gatherynge together, acordynge vnto the maner.

In the foure and twentieth daye of this moneth came the children of Israel together with fastinge and sackclothes, and earth vpon them, and separated the sede of Israel from all the straunge children, and stode and knowledged their synnes, and the wyckednesse of their fathers, and stode vp in their place, and red in the boke of the lawe of the LORDE their God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowledged, and worshipped the LORDE their God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hye, namely Iesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sebania, Bani, Serelis, Bani, and Chenani, and eryed loude vnto the LORDE their God. And the Leuites, Iesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Hasabenia, Serebia, Hodia, Sebania, Pethahia, sayde: Stonde vp, prayse the LORDE our God for euer: and let thankes be geue vnto the name of thy glorie, which excelleth all thankesguyenge and prayse. LORDE, thou art alone, thou hast made heaven, and the heauen of all heauens, with all their hoost, the earth and all that therin is, the See and all that is therin: thou geuest life vnto all, and hoost of heauen bowe themselves vnto the. Thou art the LORDE God, that hast chosen Abrâ, and broughte him out of Ver in Chaldea, called him.
Abraham,* and founde his hert faithfull before the, †and madest a couraunt with him, to gue weto his sode the londe of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Iebusites, and Girgosites, and hast made good thy wordes:
for thou art righteoues. †And hast considered the mystery of oure fathers in Egipte, and herde their complainte by the reed See, and shewed tokes and wonders vpō Pharaoh, and on all his seruautes, and on all his people of his londe: for thou knewest  y they were pressumptuous a cruel against them, a so madest thou  the a name as it is this daie. And the reed See partedst thou in sunder before them, so that they wete throw the myddes of the See drye shod: a their persecutors threwest thou in to the depe as a stone, in the mightie waters, and leddest them on the daie tyme in a cloudy pyler, and on the nighte season in a pilere of fyre, to shewe them lighte in the waye  y they wente.

† ‡Thou camest downe also vpō mount Sinai, and spakst vnto them from heauen, and gauest them righte iudgmentes, true lawes, good commandementes and statutes, and declared vnto them thy holy Sabbath, and commanded them preceptes, orduinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruaunt: and  gauest them bred from heauen when they were hongrye, and  broughte forth water for them out of the rock when they were thristye: and promysed them,  that they shuld go in, and take possession of the londe, where uer thou haddest lyfte vp thine hande for to gueene them.

Neuerthelesse oure fathers were proue and hardnecked, so that they folowed not thy comaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not myndefull of the wonders  thou dydest for them: but became obstynate and heady, in so much that they turnede backe to their bondage in their disobediehne. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracion, mercifull, pacient, and of good gresenesse, and forsokest them not. And though they made a molente calfe (and sayde: This is thy God, that broughte the oute of the londe of Egipte) and dyd greate blasphemies, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernes, aordiung to thy greate mercy. †† And  cloudy pilere departed not from them on  daie tyme to rede them the waye, nether the pilere of fyre in the night season, to shewe them lighte in the waye that they wente.

And thou gauest them thy good sprete to defoureigne them,  and witheldest not thy Manna from their mouth,  and gauest the water whā they were thristie. Fortye yeres longe madest thou prouyson for them in the wyldernes, so that they wanted nothinge:
their clothes waxed not olde, and their fete swelled not. And thou gauest the kyngdomes a naciones, a partedst the acordiung to their porciones, so that they possessed  the londe of Sihon kyng of Heszbon, a the londe of Og  kyng of Basan. And their childre multi-pliedest thou as the starrs of heauen, and broughtest the in to the londe wherof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they shulde go in to it, and haue it in possession.

And  children wente in, and possessed the londe,  and thou subduedst before thee the inhabiters of the londe, even the Cananites, a gauest them in to their hande, and their kynges and  people of the londe,  they might do with them what they wolde. And they wanne their stronge cities,  a fat londe, and toke possession of houses  were full of all maner goodes, welles dysgod out, wynyarde, oyl-gardens, a many fruette full trees: and they ate were fylled, a became fat, a lyued in welth thorow thy greate goodnes. Neuerthelesse they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynst the, and cast thy lawe behynde their backes,  and slew thy prophetes (which exhorted them so earnestlie, that they shulde couerete vnto the) and dyd greate blasphemies. Therfore gauest thou them ouer in to the hāde of their enemies that vexed them.

And in  tyme of their troubl they cried vnto the, and thou hardest them from heauen; and thorow thy greate mercy thou gauest them saimours, which helped the oute of the hande of their enemies. But when they came to rest, they turnede back agayyne to do euell before the: therfore leftest thou them in the hande of their enemies, so  they had  dominion ouer them. So they couerete, and cryed vnto the, and thou herdest them from heauen, and many a tyme hast thou delueryed them acordiung to thy greate mercy, and testified

THE boke of Nehemias.

And the other people, the prestes, Leuites, Porters, syngers, Netihimis, that all they that had separated them selues from the people in the lode vnto the lawe of God, with their wyues, sonnes and daughters, as many as could vnderstonde it, and their lorde that had rule of them, receaued it for their brethren.

And they came to swear, and to bynde them selues with an ooth to walke in Gods lawe, which was geuen by Moses the seruanunt of God, that they wolde observe and do accordinge vnto all the commandementes, judgmenettes and statutes of the LORDE oure God:

And that we wolde not geue oure daughters vnto the people in the lode, nether to take their daughters for oure sonnes. And yf people of the lode broughte ware on the Sabbath, and all maner of vytyales to sell, that we wolde not take it of them on the Sabbath and on the holy dayes. And that we wolde let the seuenthe yeare be fre concernyng all maner of charge.

And we layed a statute vpon oure selues, to geue yearly the third parte of a Sycle to the mynistracion in the house of oure God, namely to the shewbred, to the daylie meatofferynge, to the daylie burntofferynge of the Sabbathes, of the new mones and feast dayes, and to the things that were sanctified, and to the synofferynges, to reconcile Israel with all, and to all the busynes in the house of oure God.

And we rest the lot amonge the prestes, Leuites and the people, for offerynge of the wod, to be brought vnto the house of oure God from yeare to yeare, after the houses of oure fathers, that it might be brennt at tymes appointed, vpon the altaire of the LORDE oure God.
And the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem. But the other people cast lots therfore, so that amoge ten one parte wente to Jerusalem in to the holy cite to dwell, and nyne partes in the cities. And ye people thanked all the men that were willinge to dwell at Jerusalem.

These are the heads of the londe that dwelt at Jerusalem. In the cities dwelt Iuda every one in his possession ye was in their cities, namely Israel, the prestes, Leuites, ye Nethinims, and the children of Salomons seruauntes. And at Ierusale dwelt certayne of the children of Iuda ye of Ben Iamin.

The children of Iuda: Athaia the sonne of Vsi, ye sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Sephatia, the sonne of Mahelaleel, of the children of Phares. And Maeselia the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chal Hose, the sonne of Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Ioiairib, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Siloni. All the children of Phares that dwelt at Jerusalem, were foure C. and eight ye three score valeant men.

These are the children of Ben Iamin: Salu the sonne of Messullam, ye sonne of Ioe, the sonne of Pedaia, the sonne of Colaia, ye sonne of Maeselia, the sonne of Ithiel, ye sonne of Iesaia. And after him Sabai, Sallai: nyne hundreth and eight and twentye. And Ioel the sonne of Sichri had the oversight of them: and Iuda ye sonne of Hasnua over the seconde parte of the cite.

Of the prestes there dwelt: Iedaia ye sonne of Ioiairib, Iachin. Seraia the sonne of Helchias ye sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Sadoe, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of Achitob, was prync of in the house of God: ye his brethren that perfourmed the worke in ye house: of whom there were viij. C. and xxij. And Adaia the sonne of Ieroabam, the sonne of Plalia, the sonne of Amzai, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Pashur ye his brethren, chefe amoge the fathers: of whom there were two hundreth and two and fortye. And Amassai the sonne of Asariel the sonne of Ahusai, the sonne of Mesillemoth, the sonne of Immer: and his brethren were valeant men, of whom there were an hundreth and eight and twentye. And their ouerseer was Sabdaiel the sonne of Gedolin.

Of the Leuites: Semai the sonne of Hasub, the sonne of Asrikam, the sonne of Hasabia, the sonne of Bunni: And Sabthai and Iosabad of the chefe of the Leuites, in the outwarde busynes of ye house of God. And Mathania the sonne of Micha, the sonne of Sabdi, the sonne of Assaph, which was the pryncipall to begynne the thankesgeuyng ye vor ye prayer. And Bacbuchia ye seconde amoge his brethren, and Abda the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Iedithun. All the Leuites in the holy cite were two hundreth and foure ye foure score. And ye porters Acub and Talman, and their brethren ye keppe the portes, were an hundreth and two and seuentey. As for the residue of Israel, the prestes and Leuites, they were in all the cities of Iuda, every one in his inheritaunce.

And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Zipha and Gispa belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouerseer of the Leuites at Jerusalem, was Vsi the sonne of Bani, the sonne of Hasabia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.
Of the children of Assaph there were syngers aboute 3 busynes in the house of God: for it was the kynges commandement coeurnyng them, that 3 syngers shulde deale faithfully, euer daye as acordingly was.

And Pethai the sonne of Mesesabeel of the childre of Serah the sonne of Iuda nexte the kyng in all matters concernyng the people. And the children of Iuda that were without in the townes of their londe, dwelt some at Kiriath Arba, and in the vyllages therof; 3 at Dibon, and in the vyllages therof; and at Cabzeel, and in the vyllages therof: and at Iesua, Molada, Bethphaele, Hazarsual, Berseba and in their vyllages: 3 at Sielag and Mochonah, and in their vyllages: And at Enrimmon, Zaraga, Jeremuth, Sanoah, Adul-lam and in their vyllages: At Lachis, and in the feldes therof: At Aseka, and in the vyllages therof: and dwelt from Berseba vnto the valley of Hinnom.

The children of Ben Iamin of Gaba, dwelt at Michmas, Aia, Bethel and in their vyllages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Anania, Hazor, Rama, Githaim, Hadid, Ziboin, Neballat, Lod, Ono 3 in the Carpeters valley. And certayne of the Leuites 3 had portions in Iuda, dwelt in Ben Iamin.

The rii. Chapter.

THESE are 3 preste and Leuites that went vp with Zorobabel 3 sonne of Sathiel and with Iesua: Seraia, Jeremy, Esdras, Amaria, Malluch, Hattus, Sechania, Rehum, Meremoth, Iddo, Ginthoi, Abia, Meiamin, Maadia, Bilga, Semaia, Ioiarib, Iedia, Sallu, Amok, Helchias 3 Iedia. These were the heads amoue the preste and their brethren in the tyne of Iesua. The Leuites were these: Iesua, Benui, Cadmiel, Serebia, Iuda and Mathania, ouer the office of thankeseyenge, they 3 their brethren: Bacbucha 3 Vnioi and their brethren, were aboute them in the watches.

Iesua begat Ioachim. Ioachim begat Elia-sib. Elisas begat Ioiada. Ioiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Iadua. And in the tyne of Ioachim were these the chefe fathers amonge the prestes: namely of Seraia was Meraia, of Jereny was Hanania, of Esr- dras was Mesullam, of Amaria was Iohanan, of Malluch was Jonathan, of Sebania was Joseph, of Harim was Adna, of Meraioth was Heleai, of Iddo was Zachary, of Gintho was Mesullam, of Abia was Sicrli, of Miniamin Moadia was Pilai, of Bilga was Sammua, of Semaia was Iohnan, of Ioiarib was Mathnai, of Iedia was Vs, of Sallai was Callai, of Amok was Eber, of Helchias was Hasabia, of Gedaia, was Nethaneel.

And in the tyne of Elia-sib. Ioan, Iohan and Iaddua, were the chefe fathers amonge the Leuites, and the prestes wrytte vnder the reigne of Darius 3 Persian. The children of Leui the principall fathers were wrytten in the Cronicles, vntyll the tyne of Iohan the sonne of Elia-sib. And these were the chefe amoue the Leuites, Hasabia, Serebia and Iesua the sonne of Cadmiel, 3 their brethren ouer agaynst them, to gene prayse and thankes, acordingly as Davui 3 maa of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynst another. Mathania, Bacbucha, Obadia, Mesullam, Talmon and Acub were porters in the watch at the thresholds of the gates. These were in the tyne of Iioan the sonne of Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and in the tyne of Nehemia the Debyte, and of the prest Esdras the scrybe.

And in the dedicacion of the wall at Jeru-salem, were the Leuites soughte out of all their places, that they mighte be broughte to Jerusalem, to kepe 3 dedicacion in gladnesse, with thankeseynge, with synginge, with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes. And the children of the syngers gathered the selues together from the playne countre aboute Jerusalem, and from the vyllages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Gilgal, 3 out of the feldes of Gibe 3 Asmauth: for 3 syngers had buylded them vyllages aboute Jerusalem. And 3 preste and Leuites purified them selues, and clensed the people, the gates and the wall.

And I caused the prynces to go vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two greate queres of thankeseynge, which were on the righte hande of the wall towarde the Donggrate, and after them were Hosai, and halfe of the prynces of Iuda, 3 Asaria, Esdras, Mesullam, Iuda, Ben Iamin, Semaia and Jereny: and certayne of the prestes childre with trumpettes, namely Zachary 3 sonne of Iohanan, the sonne of Semaia, the sonne of Iohanan, the sonne of Michai, the sonne of Sachur, the
And Esdras's serybe before the Wellgate, and they wente vp ouer agaynst them vpom the steppe of the cite of Dauid at the goynga vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastwarde.

The other queare of thankesgivinge wente ouer against them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpom the wall, towardes to Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll to the brode wall, and to the porctes of Ephraim, and to the Oldgate, and to the Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntill to the Shepe Gate. And in the presongate stode they stylly, and so stode the two queares of thankesgivinge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prestes, namely Eliachim, Maesaia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elionai, Zachary, Hananai, with tropettes, and Maesaia, Semaia, Eleasar, Vsi, Iohanan, Malchiah, Elam and Aser. And the syngers songe loude, and Iesrahia was the ouerser.

And the same daye were there greate sacrifices offered, and they rejoised: for God had gever them great gladnesse, so that both the wyues and children were joyfull, and the myrth of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were there men appointed ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were Heue offerenge, the firstlinges and the tithes) that they shulde gather them out of the felde aboute the cities, to destribute the vnto the prestes and Leuites accordinge to the lawe: for Iuda was glad of the prestes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of their God, and the office of the purificacion. And the syngers & porters stode after the commaudement of Dauid of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and Assaph, were the chefe syngers founded, and the songs of praye and thankesgivinge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel geue porcios vnto the syngers and porters, euery daye his portion, and they gauethe things halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gauethe things that were sanctified, vnto the children of Aaron.

The riij. Chapter.

AND what tyme as the boke of Moses was red in eares of the people, there was founde wrytten therin, the Ammonites and Moabites shulde never come in to the congregacion of God, because they mett not the children of Israel with bred and water, and hyred Balaam against the, that he shulde curse them: neuerthelesse oure God turned they curse in to a blesseynge. Now whan they herde the lawe, they separated from Israel euery one that had myxte him selfe therin. And before this had the prest Eliasib deliuered the chest of house of oure God vnto his kynsman Tobia: for he had made him a great chest, and there had they afore tyme laid the meatofferenges, frankencense, vessell, and the tithes of corne, wyne and oyle (acordinge to the commaundement geuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the Heuofferenges of the prestes.

But in all this was not I at Jerusalem: for in two and thirtieth yeare of Artaxerses kyng of Babilon, came I vnto the kyng, and after certayne dayes optayned I lyeence of the kyng to come to Ierusalem. And I gat knowlege of euell that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made him a chest in the court of the house of God, and it greuete me sore, and I cast forth all the vessels of Tobias house out of the chest, and commandied them to clense the chest. And thither broughte I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the meatofferenge and the incense.

And I perceaued, that the porcyons of Leuites were not geuen them, for the which cause the Leuites and syngers were fled, euery one to his londe for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers, and sayde: Why forsoke we the house of God? But I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Iuda the tithes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer thy treasure, euene Selemia thy prest, and Sadoc the serye, the Leuites Pedaia, and vnder thare hande Hanan the sonne of Sachur the sonne of Mathania: for they were counted fauthfull, and their office was, to destribute vnto their brethren. Thynke vpon me O my God here in, wyte not out.
my mercy, that I haue shewed on y house of my God, & on the offices therof.

At the same tyme sawe I some tredinge wyne presses on the Sabbath, and brynginge in clusters, and asses laden wyth wyne, grapes, fygges, and brynginge all maner of burthens vnto Ierusalem, vpon the Sabbath daye. And I rebuked them earnestly y same daye that they solde y vytyayles. There dwelt me of Tyre also therin, which broughte fysh and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabbath vnto the children of Iuda and Ierusalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Iuda, and saide vnto them: What euell thinge is this that ye do, and breake the Sabbath daye? Dyd not oure fathers euen thus, and oure God broughte all this pla ge vpon vs & vpon this cite? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon Israel, in that ye breake the Sabbath.

And when the portes of Ierusalem were drawn vp before the Sabbath, I commaunded to shutt the gates, and charged that they shulde not be opened tyll after the Sabbath: and some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, y there shulde no burthe be broughte in on the Sabbath daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes once or twycye ouer nighte without Ierusalem with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, & saide vnto them: Why tary ye all nighte aboute the wall? Yf ye do it once agayne, I wil laye handes vpon you. From that tyme forth came they nomore on the Sabbath. And I saide vnto the Leuites which were cleane, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Sabbath daye. Thynke vpone me (O my God) ocenerynge this also, & spare me accordsynge to thy greate mercy.

And at the same tyme sawe I Iewes, that maried wyues of Asod, Ammon and of Moab, and their children spake halfe in the speache of Asod, and could not speake in y Hebrew language, but by y tongue mighte a mā perceau euery people. And I reproued them, and cursed them, & smote certayne men of thee, and plucked them vp, and toke an ooth of them by God: Ye shal not geue youre daughters vnto their sons, nether shal ye take their daughters vnto youre sons, or for youre selues. Dy whole, y kyng of Israel synne ther in? & ye amonge many Heythen was there no kyng like him, & he was deare vnto his God, and God made him kyng ouer all Israel, and the outlandish wemen.

And one of the children of Ionia the sonne of Eliasib y hye prest, had made a cōtract wyth Sanballath the Horonite: but I chaced him fro me. O my God, thynke thou vpon them that are quyte of the presthode, and haue defyled the couenaunt of the presthode and of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them from all such as were outlandish, and appoynted the courses of the prestes and Leuites, euery one to his office, and to offre the wod at tymes appoynted, and the first frutes. Thynke thou vpon me (O my God) for the best.

The first Chapter.

IN the tyme of Ahasuerus, which reigned from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and seuen and twentye londes, what tyme as he sat on his seate roiall in the castell of Susan in the thirde yeare of his regne, he made a feast vnto all his prynce and seruautes, namely vnto the mightie men of Persia and Media, to the Debites and rulers of his countrees, that he mighte shewe the noble riches of his kyngdome, and the glorious worshippe of his greatnesse, many dayes longe, euery an hundreth and four score dayes.

And when these dayes were expyred, the kyng made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto great and small, seuen dayes longe in the courte of the garden by the kynges palace; where there hanged whyte, reed & yalowe clothes, fastened with coardes of lynnens and seuerle in siluer rynges, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of golde and siluer made vpon a pauement of grene, white, yalowe and black Marble. And drinke was carried in vessels of golde, and there was euery chaunge of vessell. And the kings wine was moche acordyng to the power of the kyng. And noman was appoynted what he shulde drinke; for the kyng had commaundde all the officers of his house, that euery one shulde do as it lyked him. And the quene Vasti made a feast also for the wemen in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seventh daye when the kyng was mery of the wine, he co-maundet Meluham, Bishta, Harbona, Big-th, Abagtha, Sethar and Charca, the seuer chamberlaynes (that dyd seruyse in the presence of kyng Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi with the crowne regall, that he might shewe y people and prynces hir fairnesse: for she was bewtiful. But the quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kyng very wroth, and his indignacio kyndled in him.

And the kyng spake to y wyse men that had understandinge in the ordinaunces of the londe (for the kynges matters must be hadled before all soch as haue knowelge of the lawe and judgment: And the nexte vnto him were,
Charsea, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Meres, Marsena and Memuchan, the seuer prynces of the Persia, and Meedes, which sawe the kynges face, and satt aboue in the kyngdome)
What lawe shulde be execute vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not acordyne to the worde of the kyng by his chamberlaynes.
The saide Memuch before the kyng spake to the prynces: The quene Vasthi hath not onely done euell agaynst the kynge but also agaynst all the prynces and all the people in all the londes of kyng Ahasuerus, for this dede of the quene shall come abrode vnto all wemen, so that they shall despysse their husbands before their eyes, and shall saye: The kyng Ahasuers coamaundet Vasthi y quene to come before him, but she wolde not. And so shal the pryncesse in Persia and Media saye lyke wyse vnto all the kynges prynces, when they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shal there arisse despetyfulnes and wrath ynomg.
Yf it please the kyng, let there go a kyngly coamaundement from him, and let it be wrytten acordynge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come nomore before kyng Ahasuerus, and let the kyng geue the kyngdome vnto another that is better then she.

And y this wrytynge of the kyng which shalbe made, be published thorow out all his empyre (which is grete) that all wyues maye holde their husbands in honoure, both amonge grate and smal.

This pleased the kyng and the prynces, and the kyng dyd acordyne to the worde of Memuchan. Then were there letters sent forth in to all the kynges londes, in to evry lond acordyng to the wrytynge therof, and to every people after their langua, y euer man shulde be lorde in his awne house. And this cauased he be spoken after the language of his people.

The ii. Chapter.

AFTER these actes when the displeasure of kyng Ahasuerus was layed, he thoughte vpon Vasthi, what she had done, and what was concluded concernynge her.
Then sayde the kynges seruauntes: Let there be fayre yonge virgins soughte for the kyng, and let the kyng appoynte overseers in all y londes of his empyre, that they maye brynge together all fayre yonge virgins vnto the castel of Susan to the Wemens buyldinge, vnder the hande of Hegai the kynges chamberlayne, that kepeth the wemen, and let him geue them their apparell. And loke which damsell pleaseth the kyng, let her be quene in Vas-this steade. This pleased the kyng, and he dyd so.

In the castell of Susan there was a Iewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the sonne of Iair, the sonne of Simei, the sonne of Cit, the sonne of Iemini, which was caried awaye from Ierusalem, * when Iechonias the kynges of Iuda was led awaye, (whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon caried awaye) and he norished Hadassa (that is Hester) his vnclcs daughter: for she had nether father nor mother, and she was a fayre and beutyfull damsell. And when hir father and mother dyed, Mardocheus receaved her as his awne daughter.

Now when y kynges coamaundement and comyssion was published, y many dasels were broughte together vnto the castell of Susan vnder y hande of Hegai, Hester, was takalso vnto y kynges house vnder y hande of Hegai y keper of y wemen, y the damsell pleased him, y she founde grace in his sighte.
And he put her with hir maydes in y best place of y Womcs buildinge. And Hester shewed it not vnto hir people y hir kynd:
f for Mardocheus had charged her, y she shulde car not tell it. And Mardocheus walked evedaye before y courte of y Womcs buylinge, y he might knowe how Hester dyd, and what shulde become of her.
And when the appoynted tyme of everie damsell came that she shulde come to \*kynge Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twolue monethes in the deckyng of the wemen (for their deckyng must hane so moch tyme, namely sixe monethes with Balme & Myrrre, \*sixe monethes with good spyces, so were the wemen beutified) then wente there one damsell vnto \*kynge, and what so euer she required, \*must be geuen her to go with her out of the Womens buyldinge vnto \*kynges palace. And when one came in the euenyng, \*same wete fro him on \*morow in to \*seconde house of wemen, vnder the hande of Saasgas the kynges chamberlayne, which kepte \*con-cubines. And she must come vnto the kynges nomore, excepte it pleased the kyng, and that he caused her to be called by name.

Now when the tyme came of Hester the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncl (whom he had receuaued as his awne daughter) \*she shulde come to the kyng, she desyred nothinge but what Hegai the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen sayde.

And Hester founde fauoure in the sighte of all them that loked vpon her. And Hester was taken vnto kynges Ahasuerus in to the house royall, in the tenth moneth which is called Tebeth, in the seventhe yeare of his reigne.

And the kynges loued Hester aboue all the wemen, and she founde grace and mercy in his sighte before all the virgines: and he set the queenes croune vpon hir heade, and made her queene in stead of Vasthi. And the kynges made a greate feast vnto all his prynces and seruauntes (which feast was because of Hester) and let the londes be in quyettue, & gaue royall giftes.

And whan the virgines were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yeet had not Hester shewed hir kynred and hir people, acordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Hester dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, like as whan he was hir tutoire. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes, Bigthan and \(\text{Them} \) which kepte the dore, were wroth, and sought to lave their handes on the kynges Ahasuerus: Wherof Mardocheus gat knowl-\(\text{lege}, \) and tolde it vnto quene Hester, and Hester certified the kyng therof in Mardo-

The iii. Chapter.

AFTER these acts dyd the kyng promote Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agagite, and set him hye, & set his seate above all \*prynces that were with him. And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and dyd reverence vnto Aman: for the kyng had so commaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes which were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: Why transgressest thou the kynges commandement? And whan they spake this daylie vnto him, and he folowed them not, they tolde Aman, that they mighte se whether Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had tolde them, \(\text{y} \) he was a Jewe. And wha Aman sawe, that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, ner worshipped him, he was full of indignacion \(\text{g} \) despyte, that he shulde laye hondes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him \(\text{y} \) people of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroye the people of Mardocheus, and all the people that were in the whole empyre of Ahasuerus.

In the first moneth that is the moneth Nissan, in \(\text{y} \) twelth yeare of kynges Ahas-uerus, was there occasion and opportunyte sought by Aman, from one daye to another, and from the same moneth vnto the twelveth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Am\(\text{a} \) sayde vnto kyng Ahasuerus: There is a people scattered abrode and dispersed amongst all people in all the londes of thine empire, and their lawe is contrary vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it the kynges profit to suffre the after this maner. \(\text{Yf} \) it please the kyng, let him wryte, that they maye be destroyed, \(\text{g} \) so wil I weye downe ten thousands talents of siluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought in to the kynges chamber. Then toke the kynges rynge from his hande, and gaue it vnto Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agagite the Iewes enemie. And the kynges sayde vnto Aman: Let the siluer be geuen the, and that people also, to do withall what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scrybes called on the thirteenth daye of the first moneth. There was wrytten (acordynge as Aman commanded) to the kynges prynces, and to the Debites euery where in the londes, and to the captaynes of euery people in the countrees euery syde, acordynge to the wyrtinge of euery nacion, and after their language in the name of kyng Ahasuerus, and sealed with the kynges rynges. And the wrytynges were sent by postes in to all the kynges lodes, to rote out, to kyll, and to destroye all Iewe, both yonge and olde, childre and wemen in one daye (namely vpon the thirteenth daye of the twolufe moneth, which is the moneth Adar) and to spoyle their goodes.

This was the summe of the wrytinge, that ther shulde be a commaundement geuen in all londes, to be published vnto all people, that they shulde be ready agaynst the same daye. And the postes wente in all the hast acordyne to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was the commaundement deuyse. And the kyng \( \tau \) Aman sat \( \tau \) dranke. But \( \gamma \) cite of Susan was disquieted.

The iiiij. Chapter.

WHAN Mardocheus perceaued all that was done, he rerte his cloth, and put on a sack cloth, \( \alpha \) aszshes, \( \alpha \) wente out in to the myddes of the cite, and cried loude and lamentably, and came before the kynges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gate, that had a sack cloth on. And in all lodes \( \alpha \) places, as farre as the kynges worde and commaundement extended, there was greate lamentacion amonge the Ieues, and many fasted, wepte, mourned, \( \alpha \) laye in sack cloth \( \alpha \) in aszshes. So Hesters dasels, and hir chamberlaines, came and tolde it her. Then was the quene exceedingly astonnyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put them on, and laye the sackclote from him. But Mardocheus wolde not take them. The called Hester Hathac one of the kinges chamberlaines (which stode before her) and gane him a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, that he might knowe what it were, and wherfore he dyd so. So Hathac wente forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cite, which was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all \( \gamma \) had happened vnto him, and of the summe of siluer that Amah had promysed to weie downe in the kynges chamber because of \( \gamma \) Ieue for to destroye them, and he gae him the copye of the commaundement, that was deuyse at Susan to destroye them, that he mighte shewe it vnto Hester, and to speake to her and charge her, \( \gamma \) she shulde go in to the kyng, and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto him for hir people.

And wha Hatha came in, and tolde Hester the wordes of Mardocheus, Hester spake vnto Hathat, and commaundid him to saye vnto Mardocheus: All the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the londes of the kyng knowe, that who so euer commeth within the courte vnto \( \gamma \) kyng, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commaundement is that the same shall dye immediately, excepte the kyng holde out the goldel cepter vnto him, that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kyng now this thirtie dayes.

And wha Mardocheus was certified of Hesters wordes, Mardocheus bad saie againe vnto Hester: Thynke not to saue thine awne life, whyle thou art in \( \gamma \) kynges house before all Iewe: for \( \gamma \) thou holdest thy peace at this tyme, then shal the Ieues haue helpe and deluyerance out of another place, \( \tau \) thou \( \tau \) thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngedome, for this tymes sake? Hester bad gene Mardocheus this aswere: Go thou thy waye then, \( \alpha \) gather together all \( \gamma \) Ieues \( \gamma \) are founde at Susan, \( \alpha \) fast ye for me, \( \gamma \) ye eate not \( \alpha \) drynke not in thre dayes, nether daye nor nighte. I \( \alpha \) my damselis wil fast likewyse, \( \alpha \) so wyl I go in to the kynges courtary to the commaundement: \( \gamma \) I perisse, I perische. So Mardocheus wente his waye, \( \alpha \) dyd all \( \gamma \) Hester had commaundid him.

The vi. Chapter.

And on the thirde daye put Hester on a hir royall apparell, and stode in the courte of \( \gamma \) kinges palace within ouer agaynst the kynges house. And \( \gamma \) kyng sat vp in his royall seate in \( \gamma \) kynges palace ouer agaynst \( \gamma \) dore of the house. And whan the kynges sawe Hester the queene stodinge in the courte, she founde grace in his sighte. And \( \gamma \) kyng helde out the goldel cepter in his hande towards Hester. So Hester stepte forth, and touched the toppe of y cepter. Then sayde y kyngue vnto her: What wilt thou quene Hester? & what requeryest thou? axe euë the halfe of y empyre, æ it shall be geuë the. Hester sayde: Yf it please y kyngue, let y kyngue æ Aman come this daye vnto y banket Æ I haue prepared. The kyngue sayde: Cause Aman to make haist, Æ he maye do as Hester hath saide.

Now whan the kyngue æ Aman came to y banket Æ Hester had prepared, the kyngue sayde vnto Hester when he had dronken wyne: Hester, what is thy peticon? it shall be geuë the. And what requeryest thou? euën the halfe of the empyre, it shall be done.

Then answered Hester and sayde: My peticon and desire is, yf I haue founde grace in y sight of the kyngue, æ yf it please the kyngue to geue me my peticon, and to fulfill my request, then let the kyngue æ Aman come to the bancket Æ I shall prepare for the, and so wil I do tomarow as the kyngue hath sayde.

Then wente Aman forth the same daye joyfull and mery in his mynde. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kyngues gate, Æ he stode not vp and kneeled before him, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheless he refrained himselfe: and whan he came home, he sent, and called for his frendes, and Seres his wyfe, and tolde them of the glory of his riches, and the multitude of his children, all together how the kyngue had promted him so greatly, and how that he was taken aboue the prynces and seruauntes of the kyngue. Aman sayde morouer: Yee and Hester the quene let no man come with the kyngue vnto the bancket that she had prepared, excepte me, and tomarow am I bidden vnto her also with the kyngue. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe syttinge in y kynges gate. Then sayde Seres his wife and all his frendes vnto him: Let the make a galawe of fiftie cubites hie, æ tomarow speake thou vnto the kyngue, that Mardocheus maye be hanged theron, yf thou counest meraley with the kyngue vnto the bancket. Aman was well content withall, and caused a galowe to be prepared.

The b. Chapter.

The same night couldë not the kyngue slepe, and he commaunded to brynge y Cronicles and stories: which wha they were red before y kyngue, they happened on the place where it was wrytë, how Mardocheus had tolde, that the kyngues two châberlaynes (which kepë y tresholdes) sought to laie hondes on kynges Ahasuerus. And the kyngue saide: What worshippe and good haue we done to Mardocheus thersore? Then sayde the kyngues seruauntes that mynstred vnto him. There is nothinge done for him. And the kyngue sayde: Who is in y courte? (for Aman was gone in to y courte without before y kynges house, Æ he might speake vnto y kyngue to hange Mardocheus on y tre, Æ he had prepared for him.) And the kynges seruauntes saide vnto him: Beholde, Ama stödeth in the courte. The kyngue saide: Let him come in. And wha Ama came in, Æ kyngue saide vnto him: What shal be done vnto y ma, whom the kyngue wolde fayne brynge vnto worshippe? Æ But Hamã thought in his hert: Whom shulde the kyngue els be glad to brynge vnto worshippe, but me? And Aman sayde vnto the kyngue: Let the man vnto whom the kyngue wolde be glad to do worshippe, be broughte hither, that he maye be ariëd with the royall garmentes which the kyngue vseth to weere: and the horse that the kyngue rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye be set vp his heade. And let this rayment and horse be deluyered vnder the hande of one of the kynges prynces, that he maye araye the man withall (whom the kyngue wolde fayne honoure) and Cary him vpon the horse thorow the strete of the cite, and cause it to be proclaimed before him: Thus shal it be done to euery man, whom the kyngue wolde fayne honoure.

The kyngue saide: Make haist, and take (as thou hast sayde) the rayment and the horse, and do euë so with Mardocheus Æ Jewe that sitteth before the kynges gate, and let nothinge fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Aman the rayment and the horse, and arayed him, and broughte him on horszbcke thorow the strete of the cite, and proclaimed before him: Euen thus shal it be done vnto euery man whom the kyngue is disposed to honoure. And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynges gate, but Aman gat him home in all the haist, mornynge with bare heade, and tolde Seres his wyfe and all his frendes, euery thyngue that had happened him. Then sayde his wise men and Seres his wyfe vnto him: Yf it be Mardocheus of the sede of the Jewes, before whë thou hast begun to fall, thou canst do nothing unto him, but shalt fall before him. Whyle they were yet talkynge with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Aman to make hauing to come vnto the bancket that Hester had prepared.

The viij. Chapter.

And when the kyng and Aman came to the bancket that quene Hester had prepared, the kyng sayde vnto Hester on the seconde daye whan he had droken wyne: What is thy petition quene Hester, that it maye be gueuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yee axe euene halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. Hester spake and sayde: If I have grace in thy sighte (O kyng) and if it please the kyng, then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre and my people for my peticions sake: for we are solde to be destroyed, to be slayn, and to perishe. And wolde God we were solde to be bondmen and bondwemen, then wolde I holde my tongue, so shulde not the enmye be so hye to the kynges harme. The kyng Asaherus spake and saide vnto quene Hester: What is he that? Or where is he that darre presume in his mynde to do soch a thinge after that maner? Hester sayde: The enmye and adversary is this wicked Aman.

As for Ama, he was exceedingely afraid before They kyng and They quene. And the kyng arose fro the bancket fro wyne in his displeasure, and went in to the palace garden. And Aman stode vp, and besought quene Hester for his life: for he sawe that there was a mischaunce prepared for him of the kynges alreadie. And when the kyng came agayne out of the palace garden in to his parle where they had eaten, Aman had layed hym vpon the bed that Hester sat vpon. Then saide the kyng: Wyll he forse the quene also beside me in the house? As soone as that wordes wente out of the kynges mouth, they covered Amans face. And Harbona one of the chamberlaynes that stode before the kyng, sayde: Beholde, there stondeth a galowe in Amass hause fiftie cubytes hye, which he haued made for Mardocheus, that spake good for Thy kyng. The kyng spake: Hange him thron. So they hanged Aman on the galowe that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath styled.

And it was wrytten (as Mardocheus commande) vnto the Iewes and to the prynces, to the Debies and captaynes in the londes from India vntyll Ethiopia, namely, an hundrith and seuen and twentye londes, vnto every one accordinge to the wrytinge therof, vnto every people after their speche, and to the Iewes accordinge to their wrytinge and language.

And it was written in the kyng Asasurues name, and sealed with the kynges ryng. And by postes that rode vpon sywte yonge Mules, sent he the wrytinges, wher in the kynge granted the Iewes (in what cities so euer they were) to gather them selues together, and to stonde for their lyfe, and for to rote out, to slaye, and to destroye all the power of the people and londe that wolde trouble them, with children and wemen, and to spoyle their good vpone one daye in all the londes of kyenge Ahasuerus, namely vpone the thirieth daye of the twoluethe moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

Thus the Iewes smote all their enemies with a sore slaughter, and slewe and destroyed, y dyd after their wyll vpnto such as were their aduersaries. And at y castell of Susan slewe the Iewes and destroyed fyue huydred men: y slewe Parsandatha, Dalphon, Aspatha, Poratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Parmastha, Aristai, Aridai, Vaiserath, the ten sones of Aman y sone of Amadath y enemie of the Iewes: but on his goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the kyenge certified of the nombre of those that were slaine at the castell of Susan. And the kyenge sayde vpnto quene Hester: The Iewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue huydred men at y castell of Susan, and the ten sones of Aman: What shal they do in the other londes of y kyenge? What is thy petition, that it maye be geuen the? y what requirest thou more to be done? Hester sayde: Yf it please the kyenge, let him suffre the Iewes todaye also to do acordinge vpnto this dayes commandement, that they maye hange Amans ten sones vpó y tre. And the kyenge charged to do so, and the commandement was deuyseyd at Susan, y Amans ten sones were hanged. And the Iewes gathered the selues together at Susan, vpone the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slewe thre hundredth men at Susan, but on their goodes they laied no hides.

As for the other Iewes in the kynges lodes, they came together, y stode for their lyues, y gatt rest fro their enemies: and slewe of their enemies fyue and seuentye thousande, howbeit they layed no hones on their goodes. This was done on the thirtieth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth daye of the same moneth rested they, which (dayes) they ordeyned to be a daye of feastinge and gladnesse. But the Iewes at Susan were come together both on the thirtieth daye and on the fourtenth, and on the fiftieth daye they rested, and the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastinge y gladnes. Therefor the Iewes that dwelt in the vylages and vn-walled townes, ordeyned y fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, to be a daye of feastinge and gladnes, and one sent giftes vpnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and sent the writeinges vpnto all the Iewes y were in all y londes of kyenge Ahasuerus, both nye and farre, that they shulde yearly receaue and holde the fourtenth and fiftieth daye of the...

And the kynge Ahasuerus layed tribute vpon the londe, and vpon the Iles of the See. As for all the worke of his power and auctoryte, and the greate worshippe of Mardocheus, which the kynge gaue him, beholde, it is wryten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Media and Persia, For Mardocheus the Iewe was the seconde neste vnto kyng Ahasuerus, and greate amongethe Iews, and accepted amonge the multitude of his brethren, as one seketh the welth of his people, and speaketh the best for all his sede.

Chap. xxxi. The first Chapter.

A As the lode of Hus there was a man called lob: an innocent and vertuous man, soch one as feared God, and eschued euell. This man had viij. sonnes, and iij. doughters. His substaunce was viij. M. shepe, iij. M. camels, v. C. yock of oxen, v. C. she asses, and a very greate housholde: so y he was one of the most principall men amoge all them of the east countrie. His sonnes now wente on euery man, and made banckettes: one daye in one house, another daye in another, and sent for their iij. sisters, to eate and drinke with them. So when they had passede over the tyme of their banckettinge rounde aboute, lob sent for them, and clenched them agayne, stode vp early, and offred for euery one a bretofferinge. For lob thought thus: peradventure my sonnes haue done some offence, and haue bene vn-thankfull to God in their hertes. And thus dyd lob euery daye.

B Now vpon a tyme, when the seruauantes of God came and stode before the LORDE, Sathan came also amonge them. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: From whence commest thou? Sathan answered the LORDE, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lode, and walked thorow it.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Sathan: hast thou not considered my seruaunt lob, how that he is an innocet and vertuous man: soch one as feareth God, and eschuet euell, and that there is none like him in the londe? Sathan answered, and sayde vnto the LORDE: Doth lob feare God for naught? hast thou not preserved him, his house, and all his substaunce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his hondes? Is not his possession encreaced in the londe? But laye theine honde vp o a little, touch once all that he hath, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: lo all that he hath, be in thy power: only vpon him self se that thou laye not thine honde. Then wente Sathan forth from the LORDE.

Now vpon a certayne daye when his sonnes and daughters were eatinge, and drynkinge wyne in their eldest brothers house, there came a messaunger vnto Iob, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowinge, and the Asses goinge in the pasture besyde them: the Sabees came in violecly, and toke them all awaye: yee they have slayne the seruauntes with the swarde, and I only ranne my waye, to tell the.

And whye he was yet speakyng, there came another, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heaven, it hath consumed & brest vp all the shepe and seruauntes: and I only ranne my waye, to tell the. In the meane season whye he was yet speakinge, there came another, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armies, and fell in vpon the camels, which they have caried awaye, yee and slayne the seruauntes with the swarde: and I only am gotté awaye, to tell the. Whyle he was speakinge, there came yet another, & sayde: Thy sonses and daughters were eatinge ad drynkinge wyne in their eldest brothers house, ad sodenly there came a mightie greate wynde out of the South, and smote the iiij. corners of the house: which fell vpon thy children, so that they are deed: and I am gotten awaye alone, to tell the.

Then Iob stode vp, and rente his clothes shaued his heade, fell downe vpon the grounde, worshipped, and sayde: "Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I turne thither agayne. "The LORDE gaue, and the LORDE hath taken awaye (the LORDE hath done his pleasure) now bessed be thy name off the LORDE. In all these things dyd Iob not offende, ner murmured foolishly agaynst God.

The ii. Chapter.

T happened also apon a tym, that when the seruauntes of God came a stode before the LORDE, Sathan came also amonge them, and stode before him. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: From whence commest thou? Sathan answered and sayde: "I haue gone aboute the lode, and walked thorow it.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Sathan: Hast thou not considered my seruaunt Iob, bow that he is an innocent & vertuous man soch one as feareth God, and eschueth euell, and that there is none like him in the londe? But thou mouestest me agaynst him, to punysh him: yet is it in vayne, for he contynueth still in his godlynesse.

Sathan answered the LORDE, and sayde: Skynnne for skynnne? yee a man will geue all y euer he hath, for his life. But laye thine honde vpon him, touch him once vpon the bone and flesh, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the LORDE vnto Sathan: lo, there hast thou him in thy power, but spare his life.

So wente Sathan forth from the LORDE, and smote Iob with maruelous sore byles, from the sole off the fote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon the grounde in the asshes, and scraped of the etter off his sores with a potsherde.

Then sayde his wife vnto him: A Dost thou yet cōynme in thy perfecteness? curse God, & dye. But Iob sayde vnto her: Thou speakest like a foolish woma. Seinge we have receaued prosperite at the honde of God, wherfore shulde we not be content with aduersite also? In all these things, dyd not Iob synne with his lippes.

Now when Iobs frendes herde of all yt trouble, that happened vnto him, there came thre off them, every one from his owne place: namely, Eliphas the Theemanite, Baldad the Sulhite, and Sophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come, to shewe their compassion vpon him, and to comforte him. So when they lifte vp their eyes a farre off, they knewe him not.

Then they cried, and wepte: then euer one off them rente his clothes, and sprynckled dust vpon their heads in the ayre. They sat them downe by him also vpon the grounde, viij. dayes and viij. nights. Nether was there eny of them that spake one worde vnto him, for they sawe that his payne was very greate.

The iii. Chapter.

AFTER this opened Iob his mouth, and cursed his daye, and sayde: A lost be that daye, wherin I was borne: and the night, in the which it was sayde: there is a manchilde conceaued. The same daye be turned to darknesse, and not regarded of God from aboue, nether be shyned vp with light: but be covered with darcknesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the damme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be lapped in with sorowe. Let the darckstorme overcomé v night, let it not be reckoned amongst the dayes off the yeare, nor counted in the monethes. Despyse be that night, and recommended: let them that curse the daye, gene it their curse also, even those that be ready to rayse vp Leuiathan. Let the starres be damme thorow darcknesse of it. Let it loke for light, but let it se none, nether the rysynge vp of the fayre mornynge: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, nvr hyd these sorowes fro myne eyes.

B Alas, why dyed I not in  thoyngh? Why dyd not I peryshe, as soone as I came out of my mothers wóbe? Why set they me vpó  sir knees? Why gaue they me suck with their brestes? Then shulde I now haue lynen still, I shulde haue sleepte, and bene at rest: like as the kynges ad lorde of  earth, which buylde them selues speciall places: As the prynces that haue greate substauncie of golde,  their houses full of syluer. O that I vterly had no beynge, or were as a thigne borne out of tymne (that is put asyde) ether as yonge children, which neuer sawe the light. There must the wicked cease from their tyrannie, there soch as are overlaboured, be at rest: there are those letten out fre, which haue bene in preson, so that they heare nomore the voyce of the oppressoure: There are small and greate: the bonde man, and he that is fre fró his master.

Wherfore is the light geuen, to him that is in mysery? and life vnto them, that haue heuy hertes? (Which longe for death, and it commeth not: for yf they might fynde their graue, they wolde be maruelous glad, as those that dygyge vp treasure) To the man whose waye is hyd, which God kepeth backe from him. This is the cause, that I syghge before I eate, and my roaringes fall out like a water floudes. For the thyenge that I feared, is come vpon me: and the thyenge that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happy? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in rest? And now commeth soch mysery vpon me.

The  Chapter.

A THEN answered Eliphas of Theman and sayde vnto him: Yf we begynne to comon with the, peradventure thou wilt be mys-content, but who can witholde himself from speakin? Beholde, thou hast bene a teacher of many, and hast comforted the weery hondes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refresshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, thou shrekest awaye: now that it hath touched thyself, thou art faint harted. Where is now thy fear of God, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacience, and the perfectnesse of thy life? Considre (I praye the) who euer peryshed, beynge an innocent? Or, when were the godly destroyed? As for those that plowe wickednesse (as I have sene myself) and sowe myschefe, they reape  same. For whé God bloweth vpon them, they perysz, and are destroyed thorow the blast of his wrath. The roaringe of the lyon, the croyenge off the lyonnesse,  lyés whelpes are brokè. The greate lyon perysheth, because he ca get no pray and the lyons whelpes are seared abrode.

There is spoken vnto me a thyenge in counsell, which hath geuen a terrible sounde in myne eare, with a vision in the night, when men are fallen a slepe. Soch feare and drede came vpó me, that all my bones shoke. And when the wynyde passed outer by me, the hayres of my flesh stode vp.

Then stode there one before me, whose face I knewe not: an ymage there was, and the wether was still, so that I herde this voyce: Maye a man be justyfied before God? Maye there eny man be judged to be clene, by reason of his owne workes? Beholde, he hath founde vnfaithfulnessse amonge his owne seruauntes, and proude disobedience amonghis angels.

How much more theá shall they (that dwell in houses of claye, whose foundacion is but earth) be moth eaten? They shalbe destroyed from the mornynge vnto the evenynge: yee they shall perish, or euer they be awarre: and be taken awaye so clene, that none of the shall remayne, but be deed, or euer they be awarre off it.

The  Chapter.

NAME me one els, yf thou canst fynde eny: yee loke aboute the, vpon eny of the holy men. As for the foolish man displeasure kylleth him, and anger slayeth th ignoraunt. "I haue sene my self, when the foolish was depe roted, that his bewty was sodayly destroyed: that his children were without prosperite or health: that they were slayyne in the dore, and no ma to deluyer them: "that his haruest was eaten vp off the hungrie: that the weapaned man had spoyled it, and that the thurstie had droncke vp his riches. It is not the earth that bryngeth forth trauayle, nether commeth sorow out of the groude: but it is man, that is borne vnto mysery, like as the byrde for to sle.

But now will I speake of the Lorde, and talke of God: which doth thinges, that are vnseeable, and marueles without nobre: Which geueth rayne vp on the earth, and poureth water vpon all thinges: which setteth vp them of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in beuynesse: Which destroyceth the deuyces of the sotyll, so that they are not able to perfourme the thynges that they take in hode: which commasteth wyse in their owne craftynesse, and ouer-troweth the counsell of the wicked: 'In so mouch that they runne in to daarknesse by fayre daye, and grope aboute them at the noone daye, like as in the night.

And so he deluyereth the poore from the swearde, from their mouth, and from the hode of the cruell: that the poore maye haue hope, that the mouth of the oppressoure maye be stopped.

Behold, happie is the man, whom God punyseth: therfore, despys not thou of chast-tenyng of the Allmighty. For though he make a wondre, he geueth a medycyne agayne: though he smyte, his honde maketh whole agayne.

He deluyereth the out of sixe troubles, so that in the seventh there can no harme touch the. In the myldes of honger he saueth from death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swearde.

He shal kepe the from the perlous tonge so that when trouble commeth, thou shalt not nede to feare. In destruccon and derth thou shalt be mery, and shalt not be afrayed for the beastes of the earth: But the castels in the londe shal be confederate with the, the beastes of the felde shal geue the peace:

Yee thou shalt se, that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest: thou shalt beholde thy substance, and be nomore punyshed for synne. Thou shalt se also, that thy sede shall encrease, and that thy posterite shalbe as the grass vpon the earth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a faire age, like as y corne sheeues are brought in to the barne in due season. Lo, this is the matter, as we oure selues haue proued by experience. Therfore now that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy self.

The vi. Chapter.

I OB answered, and sayde: O that my misery were wedy, and my punished layed in the balauences: for then shulde it be huyeuer, then the sondre of the see. This is the cause, that my wordes are so soroufull.

For the allmighty hath shott at me with his arowes, whose indignacion hath droncke vp my spryte, and y terrible feares of God fight agaynst me. Doth the wilde asse roare when he hath graue? 'Or crieth the ox, of he hath foder enough? Maye a thyng be eaten vnseasoned, or without salt? What taist hath y whyte within the yoke an egg? The thynges that some tyme I might not awaye withall, are now my meate for very sorow. O that I might haue my desyre: O y God wolde graunte me the thynges, that I longe for: That he wolde begynne and smyte me: that he wolde let his honde go, and hew me downe. Thè shulde I haue some coftorte: yee I wolde desyre him in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I will not be agaynst y wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or what is myne ende, that my soule might be pacièt? Is my strengthe the strengthe of stones? Or, is my flesh made of brasse? Am I able to helpe my self? Is not my strengthe gone fro me, like as yf one withdrew a good dede from his frende, and forsoke the feare of God? Myne owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water-broke, that hastily runneth thorow y valleys.

But they that feare the horefrost, the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When their tymé cometh, they shalbe destroyed and perishe: and when they be set on fyre, they shalbe remoued out of their place, for the pathes they go in, are croked: they haist after vayne thinges, and shal perish. Considr the pathes off Theman, a the wayes off Saba, wherin they haue put their trust. Confounded are they, that put eny confidence in them: For whe they came to opteyne the thinges that they loked for, they were brought to confusion.

C Eu'e so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my mystery, ye are afraied. Dyd I desire you, to come hyther? Or, to geue me eny off youre substauce? To delyuer me from the enemies honde, or to saue me from the power off the mightie? Teach me and I will holde my tonge: and yf I do erre, shewe me wherin.

Wherfore blame ye then the wordes, that are well and truly spoken? which of you can reprove them? Saynuye only that ye are sotyll to check mens sayenges, and can speake many wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse, 3d go aboute to overthowe youre owne frende. Wherfore looke not only vpon me, but vpon youre selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne in to youre owne selues (I praye you) be indifferent judges, and consider myne vngyltinesse: whether there be eny vruightousnesse in my tonge, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

The bij. Chapter.

A Is not the life off ma vpon earth a very batayll? Are not his dayes, like the dayes of an hyred seruaunte? For like as a bonde seruaunt desyreth the shadowe, and as an hyrelinge wolde fayne haue an ende of his worke: Euen so haue I laboured whole monethes longe (but in vayne) and many a carefull night haue I tolde. When I layed me downe to slepe, I sayde: "O when shall I rye? Agayne, I longed sore for the night. Thus am I full off sorowe, till it be darcke. My flesh is clothed with wormes, fylthinesse and dust: my skynne is wethered, and crumpled together: my dayes passe ouer more spedly, the a weuer can weewe out his weebbe, and are strange, or I am aware. O remembre, that my life is but a wynde, ad that myne eye shall nomore se the pleasures therof, yee and that none other mans eye shall se me eny more. For yf thou fasten thine eyes vpon me, I come to naught. like as a cloude is consumed and vanished awaye, eu'en so he that goeth downe to hell, commeth no-more vp, nor turneth agayne in to his house, nether shall his place knowe him eny more.

Therfore I will not spare my mouth, but will speake in the trouble of my sprete, in bytternesse of my mynde will I talke. Am I a see or a whalfish, that thou kepest me so in preson? When I thynde: my bedd shall conforte me, I shall haue some refresshinge by talkyngye with myself vpon my couche: "Thee troublest thou me with dreams, ad makest me so afraied thorow visions, that my soul wyssheth rather to be hanged, and my bones to be deed.

I can se no remedy, I shall lyue nomore: O spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne. What is man, that thou hast him in soch reputacion, and settest so much by him? Thou takest diligent care for him, and sodely doest thou trye him.

Why goest thou not fro me, ner lettest me alone, so longe till I swallow downe my spetel? I haue offended, what shal I do vnto y, O thou preseruer off men? Why hast thou made me to stonde in thy wyve, and am so heuy a burden vnto my self? Why doest thou not forgue me my syne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wickednesse? Beholde, now must I slepe in the dust: and yf thou sekest me tomorow in the mornyng, I shalbe gone.

The bij. Chapter.

THEN answered Baldad the Subite, and sayde: How longe wilt thou talke of soch thinges? how longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Doth God peruerse the thinges that is laulfull? Or, doth the Allmightie destroye the thynge that is right? Wh thy sonnes synned against him, dyd not he punysh the for their wickednesse? Yff thou woldest now resorte vnto God by tymes, and make thine humble prayer to his Allmightie: yf thou woldest lyue a pure and a godly life: shulde he not wake vp vnto the immediatly, geue the the bewtie of rightuousnesse agayne? In so much, that where i so euer thou haddest little afore, thou shuldest now haue greate abundance. Enquire of them that haue bene before the, search diligently amonge thy forefathers: Namely, y we are but of yesterdaye, and considre not, that oure dayes vpon earth are buth a very shadow. *They shall shewe the, they shall tell the, yee they will gladly confesse the same.

Maye a resshe be grene without moystnesse? maye the grasse growe without water? No: but (or euer it be shot forth, and or euer it be gathered) it wythereth, before eny other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all them, that forget God: and euen thus also shall the yppcrystes hope come to naught. His confidence shalbe destroyed, for he trusteth in a spiders webbe.

He leeneth vp his house, but he shal not stonde: he holdeth him fast by it, yet shal he not endure. Oft tymes a thinge doth flourish, and men thinke that it maye abyde the Sonneshyne: it shuteth forth the branche in his garden, it taketh many rotes, in so much that it is like an house off stones. But yf it be taken out off his place, euery man denyeth it, sayenge: I knowe the not. Lo, thus is it with him, that rejoyseth in his owne doinges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth.

Beholde, God will not cast awaye a vertuous man, nether wil he helpe the vngodly. Thy mouth shall be fyll with laughyng, ad thy lyppes with gladnesse. Thate that hate the, shalbe confounded, y dwellings of y vngodly shal come to naught.

The ir. Chapter.

IOB answered, and sayde: *As for I knowe it is so of a treuh, y a man compared vnto God, can not be justified. Yf he wil argue with him, he shall not be able to answere him vnto one amonge a thousande. He is wyse of hert, and mightie in strength. Who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynst him? He translacteth the moueynes, or euer they be awarrre, ouerthroweth them in his wrath. He remoueth the earth out of his place, that hir pilers shake withall. He commandeth the Soene, y ryseth not: he closeth vp the starrs, as it were vnder a signet. He himself alone spredezeth y heauen, and goeth vp vpon the wavses of the see. He maketh the wavses of heauen, the Orions, the starrs and the secrete places of the south. He doth greate thinges, such as are unsearchable, yee and wonderes without nombre.

Yf he came by me, I might not loke vpó him: yf he wente his waye, I shulde not perceauie it. Yf he be haisty to take eny thinge awaye, who wil make him restore it agayne? Who wil saye vnto him: what doest thou? *He is God, whose wrath no man maye withstode: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder him. How shulde I then answere him? or, what wordes shulde I fynde out agaynst him? Yee though I be righteous, yet will I not geue him one worde agayne, but mekely subynyte my self to my judge. All be it that I call vpoun him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure, y he hath herde my voyce: he troubleth me so with the tempest, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He will not let my sprete be in rest, but fylleth me with byternesse.

Yf men will speake of strength, he is the strogest of all: yf me will speake of rightousnes, who darre be my recorde? yf I will justifie my self, myne owne mouth shall condemen me: yf I wil put forth my self for a perfecte man, he shal prowe me a wicked doer: For that I shulde be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not, yee I my self am weery of my life.

This one thighe wil I saye: *He destroyeth both the rightous and vngodly. And though he slaye sodenly with the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishement of the innocent. As for the worlde, he geueth it ouer in to the power of the wicked, soch as the rulers be, whereof all loundes are full. Is it not so? where is there euy, but he is soch one?

My dayes haue bene more swifte, then a runner: they are gone sodenly, and haue sene no good thinges. They are passed awaye, as the shippes that be good vnder sale, and as the Aegle that haisteth to the pray. When I am purposed to forget my complaunynge to chaunge my countenaunce, and to coforte my self: then am I afraied of all my workes, for I knowe, thou fauoureast not an euell doer. Yf I be then a wicked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Though I washed my self with snowe water, and made myne hondes neuer so clene, yet shuldest thou dyppe me in y myre, my owne clothes shulde defyle me. For he y I must geue answere vnto, and with whom I go to lawe, is not a man as

* Psal. 143. a.
8 Amos 3. a.
I am. Nether is there eny dayes man to reprooue both the partes, or to laye his hode betwixte vs. Let him take his rod awaye fro me, yee let him make me nomore arayed of him, and then shal I answere him without eny feare. For as longe as I am in soch fearfulnesse, I can make no answere: And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

The vi. Chapter.

NEWERTHELESSE, now will I put forth my wordes: I wil speake out of the very heynynesse off my soule, and will saye vnto God: Ó do not condemne me, but shewe me the cause, wherfore thou judgest me on this maner. Thinkest thou it well done, to oppresse me, to cast me of (beinge a worke of thy honde) and to manteyne the councell of the vngodly? Hast thou flessshys eyes then, or doest thou loke as man loketh? Are thy dayes as the dayes of man, and thy yeares as mans yeares? that thou makest soch inquiry for my wickednesse, and searchest out my synne? where as (notwithstandinge) thou knowest that I am no wicked person, ò that there is no man able to delyuer me out of thine honde. ò Thy hondes haue made me, ò fashioned me altogether rounde aboute, wilt thou then destroye me sodely? O remembre (I beske the) how that thou madest me of the mould of the earth, and shalt brynge me to earth agayne.

Hast thou not milked me, as it were mylck: and turned me to cruddes like chese? Thou hast coumered me with skynne and flesh, and joyned me together with bones ò synowes. Thou hast graunted me life, and done me good: and the diligent hedle that thou tokest vpon me, hath preserved my sprete.

Though thou hydest these things in thine hert, yet am I sure, that thou remembrest the all. Wherfore didest thou kepe me, when I synned, and hast not clenched me fro myne offence? Óf I do wickedly, wo is me therefore: Òf I be righteous, yet darre I not lift vp my heade: so full am I of confusion, and se myne owne misery.

Thou huntest me out (byenge in heynynesse) as it were a Lyon, and troublest me out of measure. Thou bringest fresh witnesses agaynst me, thy wrath increasest thou vpon me, very many are the plagues that I am in. Wherfore hast thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? Ó that I had perished, ò that no eye had sene me. Óf they had caried me to my graue, as soone as I was borne, then shulde I be now, as though I had nuer bene.

Shall not my short life come soone to an ende? O holde the fro me, let me alone, that I maye ease myself a little: afore I go thyther, from whence I shal not turne agayne: Namely, to that londe of dareknesse ò shadowe of death: yee in to that darek cloudye londe ò deadly shadowe, where as is no ordre, but terrible feare as in the dareknesse.

The vi. Chapter.

THEN answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: Shulde not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shulde he that bableth moch, be commended therin? Shulde men gune care vnto the only? Thou wilt laugh other men to scorne, ò shal no body mocke the agayne? Wilt thou saye vnto God: The thinges that I take in honde, is perfecte, ò I am cleene in thy sight? Ó that God wolde speake, and open his lippes agaynst the, that he might shewe the (out of his secrete wysedome) how manyfolde his lawe is: then shuldest thou knowe, that God had forgotten the, because of thy synnes.

Wilt thou tynde out God with thy sekyng? wilt thou attayme to the perfectnesse of the Allmightie? He is hyer thè heauë, what wilt thou do? Deper thè hell, how wilt thou then knowe him? His length exceadeth the length of the earth, and his breth ò breth of the see. Though he turne all things vp syde downe, close them in, or thrust thè together, who darre checke him therafore?

For it is he, that knoweth the vanite of men: ò he seyth their wickednesse also, shulde he not then considere it? A vayne body exalteth him self, and the sonne of man is like a wylde asses foale. Óf thou haddest now a right herte, ò liftest vp thine hondes towarde him: òf thou woldest put awaye the wickednesse, which thou hast in honde, so that no vngodlynesse dwelld in thy house: Then mightest thou lift vp thy face without shame, the shuldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy misery, and thynke nomore vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shulde thy life be as cleare as the noone daye, and spryng forth as the morninge. Then mightest thou haue comforth, in the hope that thou hast: ye slope quetyly, when thou art buried. Then shuldest thou take thy rest, and no ma to make the afrayed, yee many one shulde set monch by the. The rij. Chapter.

A So Job answered, and sayde: Then (no doubt) ye are the men alone, and wyzsdome shal perish with you. But I have vnderstodinge as well as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yee who knoweth not these things? Thus he that calleth vpô God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of his neibighoure: the godly q innocent man is laughed to scorne. Godlynesse is a light despayed in v hertes of the rich, q is set for them to stamble vpon.

The houses of robbers are in wealth and prosperitie, q they that maliciously medle against God, dwel without care: yee God geneth all thynge richly with his honde.

B Axe the catell, q they shal enfourme the: the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell y: Speake to the earth, and it shall shewe the: Or to the fyshes of the see, and they shall certifie the. What is he, but he knoweth, that y hode of the LORDE made all these?

In whose honde is the soule of euery lyuynge thinge, and the breth of all men. Haue not the eares pleasure in hearinge, and the mouth in tastinge the thynge that it eateth? Amonge olde personnes there is wyzsdome, and amonge the aged is vnderstodinge. Yee with God is wyzsdome and strength, it is he that hath counsell q foreknowledge.

Yf he breake downe a thynge, who can set it vp agayne? Yf he shut a thynge, who wil open it? Beholde, yf he wilholde the waters, they drye vp: Yf he let the go, they destroye the earth. With him is strength and wyzsdome: he knoweth both the disseauer, and him that is disseaced.

C He carieth awaye the wyse men, as it were a spoyle, and byngeth the iudges out of their wyttes. He lowseth the gyrdle of kynges, and gyrdeth their loynes with a bonde, he ledeth awaye the prestes in to captiuyte, and turneth the mightie vp syde downe. He taketh the vervite from out of the mouth, q disapoynteth y aged of their wyzsdome. He poureth out confusion vpon prynces, and cforroweth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke 'what lyeth hyd in darckenesse, he declared it opely: and the very shadowe of death bringeth he to light. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth them: He maketh them to multiplie, and dryueth them awaye. He chaungeth the herte of the prynces and kynges of the earth, and disapoynteth them: so that they go wâdringe out of the waye, and grope in the darcke without light, stackeringe to and fro like droncken men.

The riiij. Chapter.

Lo, all this haue I sene with myne eye, a herde with myne eare, q vnderstonde it. Loke what ye knowe, that same do I knowe also, nether am I inferior vnto you. Neuertheless I am purposed to talkie with the Allmightie, and my desire is to comon with God. As for you, ye are workmasters of lyes: and vnprofitable Phisicians alltogether. Wolde God ye kepe youre tonge, that ye mighte be taken for wyse men? Therfore heare my wordes, and pondre the sentence of my lippes. Will ye make answere for God with lyes, and mateyne him with disecate? Wil ye accepte y persone of God, and intreate for him? Shal that helpe you, when he calleth you to rekenynge? Thyne ye to begyle him, as a man is begyled? Punysh ye shall he and reprouue you, yf ye do secretly accepte eny personne. Shall he not make you afrayed, when he sheweth himself? Shal not his terrible feare fall vpô you? youre remembranue shalbe like the dust, q youre pryde shalbe turned to claye.

Holde youre tongues now, and let me speake, for there is some thynge come in to my mynde. Wherfore do I bare my flesh in my teeth, and my soule in myne hondes? Lo, there is nether corte ne hope for me, yf he wil slaye me. But yf I shew and reprouue myne owne wayes in his sight, he is even the same, that maketh me whole: and why? there maye no Ypocritye come before him, Heare my wordes, and pondre my sayenges with youre eares. Beholde, though sentence were geuen vpon me, I am sure to be knowen for vulgility. What is he, that will go to lawe with me? For yf I holde my touge, I shal dye. Neuerthelesse graunte me ij. thinges, and then will I not hyde my self from the.

Withdrawe thine honde fro me, & let not the fearfull drede of the make me afrayed. And then sende for me to the lawe, y I maye answere for my self: or els, let me speake, and gene thou the answere. How great are my myszydede synnes? Let me knowe my trasgressions & offences. Wherefore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemye? Wilt thou be so cruelly extremo unto a flyenge leaf, and folowe vpon drye stubble? that thou layest so sharply to my charge, and wilt ytterly vnfoo me, for y synnes of thyough? Thou hast put my fote in the stockes: thou lokest narrowly vnto all my pathes, & markest the steppes of my fete: where as I (notwithstandinge) must consume like as a foule carion, and as a cloth that is moth eaten.

The riiiij. Chapter.

A MAN that is borne of a woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is full of dyuerse miseries. He cometh vp, and fallith awaye like a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Thinkest thou it now well done, to open thine eyes vpon soch one, and to bryngye me before the in judgument? Who can make it cleane, that commeth of an vnclene thinge? No body. The dayes of man are shorte, y nombre of his monethes are knowne only vnto the. Thou hast apoynted him his boundes, he can not go beyonde them. Go from him, that he maye rest a litlle: vntill his daye come, which he loketh for, like as an hyrelinge doth.

Yf a tre be cutt downe, there is some hope yet, that it will sproutte and shute forth the braunches againe: For though a rote be waxen olde and deed in the grounde, yet wher the stocke getteth the sent of water, it will budde, and bryngye forth bowes, like as when it was first planted. But as for man, when he is deed, perished and consume awaye, what becommeth of him? The floudes when they be dryed vp, the ryuers when they be emptie, are fyllen agayne thorow the flowinge waters of the see: but when man slepeth, he ryseth not agayne, vntill the heauen perish: he shal not wake vp ner ryse out of his slepe. O that thou woldest kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntill thy wrath were stilled: a to appoynte me a tyme, wherein thou mightest remembre me. Maye a deed man lyue agayyne? All the dayes of this my pilgrimage am I lokynge, when my chaunginge shal come. Yf thou woldest but call me, I shulde obeite the: only despys ye not the worke of thine owne hondes.

For thou hast nombred all my goynges, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my synnes. Thou hast seald vpon myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be mercifull vnto my wickednesse. The mountaynes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters pearse thorow the very stones by litle and litle, the floudes waszshe awaye the grauell a earth: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man in like maner. Thou praynest agaynst him, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungeth his estate, and puttest him from the. Whether his children come to worshipe or no, he can not tell: And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. Whyle he luyeth, his fleshe must haue trauyyle: and whyle the soule is in him, he must be in sorowe.

The riiij. Chapter.

THEN answered Eliphas the Themanie, and sayde: Shulde a wyse man geue soch an answere (as it were one that spake in the wynde) and fyll his stomache with anger? Thou reprouwest with wordes, that are nothing wroth: and speakest the thinges, which can do no good. As for shame, thou hast set it asyde, els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wickednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftie tonge. Thine owne mouth condemmeth the, and not I: yee thine owne lippes shappe the answere. Art thou the first man, that euer was borne? Or, wast thou made before the hyles? hast thou herd the secrete counsell of God, that all wyszdome is to little for y? What knowest thou, y we knowe not? What vnderstondest thou, but we can the same? With vs are olde and aged men, yee soch as haue lyued longer then thy forefathers.

What is man, that he shulde be vneclean? what hath he (which is borne of a woman) wherby he might be knowne to be righteous? Behold, he hath founde vnaughtfulness amóre his owne sancetes: yee the very heauens are vneclene in his sight. How much more then an abominable and yyle ma, which drymcketh wickednesse like water? I will tell the, heare me: I will shewe the a thinge, that I knowe: which wyse men haue tolde, q hath not bene hyd from their fathers: vnto whom only the londe was geten, that no straunger shulde come amonge them.

The vngodly despayrth all the daies of his life, s the nombre of a tyrant Budapest thes is vnkowne. A fearfull sounde is euer in his eares, q when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction: He beleueth noter to be delyuered out of darknesse, the swearde is allwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lyninge, he thinketh planely, that the daie of darknesse is at honde. Sorow and carefullnesse make him auyrayed, c cómpasse him ronnde aboute, like as it were a kinge with his host redy to the battayll. For he hath stretched out his honde agaynst God, q armed himself agaynst Allmightie. He runmeth proudly vpon him, q with a stiff necke sighteth he agaynst him: where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and maketh his body well lykyng. Therfore shall his dwelllyng be in desolate ciies, q in houses which no mā inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be rich, nother shall his substaunce continue, ner encrese vpon earth. He shal neuer come out of darknesse, the flame shal drye vp his branchoes, with y blast of the mouth of God shal he be takē awaie. He wil nether applye himself to faithfulnes ner treuth, so sore is he diseauned with vanite.

He shall perish, afor his tymbe be worne out, and his honde shal not be grene. He shal be pluckle of as an vtynymale grape from y vyne, and shal let his flour fall, as the olyue doth. For the congregate of Ypocrates is vnfruitful, q the fyre shal consume the houses of soch, as are gredy to receiue gifts. c He conceaueith travaile, he beareth mychefe, q his body bryngeth forth discate.

a Job 4. b. 2 Pet. 2. d. 2 Gen. 4. b.

JOB answered, and sayde: I haue oft tymes a horde soch thinges. Miserable geners of comforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not thy vayne worordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou et eny more to saye? I coude speake, as ye do also. But wolde God, that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shulde I heape vp worordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shulde comforte you with my mouth, and release youre payne with y talkinge of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my worordes, my sorrow wil not cease: and though I holde my tōge, yet wil it not departe frō me. And now that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed (wherof my wryncles beare wytnesse) there stōdeth vp a dyssembler to make me answere with lyes to my face. He is angrie at me, he hateth me, and gnasseth vpon me with his teth. Myne enemy skouleth vpon me with his eyes. They have opened their mouths wyde vpon me, 2 and smyttēn me vpon the chke despitely, they haue eased the selues thorow myne aduersite. God hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly, and delyuered me in to the hones of y wicked. I was somtyme in wealth, but sodenly hath he brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the neck, he hath rente me, and set me, as it were a marck for him to shute at. He hath compassed me round aboute with his darters, he hath wounded my loynes, q not spared. My bowels hath he pōrēd vpon the grounde. He hath geuē me one wounde vpon another, and is fallē vpon me like a giaunte. I haue sowe a sack cloth vpon my skynne, and lye with my strength in the dust.

My face is swolē with wepeinge, q myne eyes are waxen dymme. Howbeit there is no wickednesse in my hones, and my prayer is clene. O earth, couer not my bloude, and let my e rienge fynde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heyth. My frendes laugh me to scorne, but myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. Though a body might pleate with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares are come, q I must go the waye, from whence I shal not turne agayne.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayde: when wil ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marecke well, and considre, we wil speake also. Wherfore are we counted as beastes, γ reputed so vyle in youre sight? Why destroyest thou selve with anger? Shal γ earth be forsaken, or the stones remoued out of their place because of γ? Shal not the light of the vngodly be put out? yee the flame of his fyre shal not burne. The light shalbe darcke in his dwellinge, γ his candle shalbe put out with him. His presumptuous goinges shal be kepte in, and his owne counseell shal cast him downe. For his fete shalbe taken in the nett, and he shal walke in the snaire. His fote shalbe holden in the gilder, and the thurstie shal catch him. The snare is layed for him in the grounde, and a pyfall in the waye.

Fearfulness shal make him afrayed on every syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Honeg shalbe his substante, and his fortune shal hange vp on him. He shall cate his owne skynne, yee his owne armes shal be deouere, beyng a firstborne of death. All his comforte and hope shal be roted out of his dwellynge, very fearfulness shal bryngy him to the kyngge. Other men shall dwel in his house (which now is none of his) and brymstone shalbe seatered vp on his habitation. His rotes shalbe dryed vp beneth, γ aboue shall his haruest be cut downe. His remembrance shall perish from the earth, γ his name shall not be prayed in the streites: he shalbe dryuen from the light in to darknesse, and be cast cleane out of the worlde. He shall nether haue children ner kynzsfolkes amonge his people, no ner eny posterite in his countre: yonge γ olde shalbe astonished at his death. Soch are now the dwellynges of the wicked, and this is γ place of him that knoweth not God.

Iob answered, γ sayde: How loge wil ye vexe my mynde, γ trouble me with wordes? Lo, ten tytimes haue ye reprouéd me: are ye not ashamed, for to laughe me so to scorne? yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my self. But yf ye wil enhauence youre selues agaynst me, γ accuse me to be a wicked personne because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, γ it is God, which hath handled me so violently, γ hath compassed me aboute with his scourges. Myne owne kyngs folkes haue forsaken me, and my fremes haue me out of remembrance. The seruaunte and maydens of myne owne house take me for a strainger, and I am become as an aleaunt in their sight.

When I call vpon my seruaunt, he geneth me no answere: no though I praie him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth, I am fayne to speake fayre vnto the children of myne owne body. Yee the very desereth foules despys me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euell upon me. All soch as were my most familliers, abhorre me: and they whom I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and the flesh is awaye, only there is left me the skynne aboute my teth. Haue pite vpon me, haue pite vpon me (o ye my frendes) for the hande of the LORDE hath touched me. Seynge God persecuteth me, wil ye vexe me also? Haue ye not yet ynoth of the trouble of my flesh?

The fouthe chapter of the boke of Job.

From his youth his bones are ful of yvee, which shall lie downe with him in y earth. Whiche wickednesse is sweate in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fanoureth, that wyll he not forsake, but kepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth, shalbe turned to the payson of serpentes within his body. The riches he demoureth, shall he perbreake agayne, for God shall drawe them out of his boly. The serpentes head shall sucke him, and the adders tonge shall slaye him: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers and brokes of hony and butter: But laboure shal he, & yet haue nothinge to eate. Greate travayle shal he make for riches, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and not buylded them. His boly could neuer be fylld, theryfore shall he perish in his couetousnesse. He demoured so greedly, he left nothinge behynd, theryfore his goodes shall not prosper. Though he had pleinteousnesse of every thinge, yet was he poore, & theryfore he is but a wretch on every syde.

For though ye wicked haue neuer so much to fyll his bely, yet God shal sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his battayll to rayne over him: so that ye he fle the yron weapons, he shall be shott with the stele bowe. The arrowe shal be taken forth, goe out at his bace, and a glisteringe swarde thorow y gall of him, feare shall come vpone him. There shall no darcnes be able to hyde him. The 39. Chapter.

I OB answered, and sayde: O hearre my wordes, and amende youre selues. Suffre me a little, that I maye speake also, and the laugh my wordes to scorne, ye ye will. Is it with a man, that I make this disputacion? Which ye it were so, shulde not my sprete be the in sore trouble? Marek me well, be absazshed, and laye youre hade ypon youre mouth. For whe I pondre I considre this, I am afraied, and my fleshe is smytten with feare. Wherfore do wicked me lyue in health and prosperite, come to their olde age, increase in riches? Their children children lyue in their sight, their generacion before their eyes. Their houses are safe from all feare, for the rodd of God doth not smyte the. Their bullocke gendreth, and that not out of tym: their cow calueth, and is not vnfruitefull.

They sende forth their children by flockes, and their sonnes lede the daunce. They beare with them tabrettes and harpese, and have instrumentes of musick at their pleasure. They spende their days in welsynthese: but sodenly they goe downe to hell. They saye vnto God: go from vs, we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. What maner of felowe is the Allmightie, that we shulde serue him? What profit shulde we haue, to submitte oure seluys vnto him? Lo, there is vterly no goodness in them, therefore will not I haue to do with the counell of the vngodly. How oft shal the candle of ye wicked be put out? how oft commeth their destrucion vpon them? O what sorowe shall God geue them for their parte in his wrath? Yee they shal be euen as chaffe before the wynde, and as dust that the storme cariehat awaye.

And though God saue their childe from soch sorowe, yet wil he so rewarde the seluys, that they shal knowe it. Their owne destruccion and misery shal they se with their eyes, and drynke of the fearfull wrath of the Allmightie. For whath careth he, what become of his housholde after his death? whose monethes passe awaye swifter then an arowe.

In as mouch the as God hath ye hyest power of all, who can teach him eny knowlege? One dyeth now when he is mightie a at his best, rich and in prosperite: euene when his bowles are at the fattest, and his bones full of mary. Another dyeth in sorrowe and heynesse, and neuer had good daies. Now slepe they both a like in the earth, the worms couer them. But I knowe what ye thinke, ye and what ye ymagin against me vnrighteously. For ye saye: where is the prynees palace? where is the dwellynge of the vngodly: Axe eny man that goeth by the waye, and (ye ye will not regarde their tokens) he shal tell you, that the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruccion, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth in the daye of wrath. Who darre reprove him for his wyays to his face? who rewardeth him for the vngraciousnesse that he doth? Yet shal he be brought to his graue, and watch amonghe the heape of the deed. The shal he be faune to be buried amoge the stones by the broke syde. All men must folowe him, there are innumerable gone before him. O how vayne is the comforte ye ye geue me? Are not youre answeres cleane contrary to right and treuth?

The 39. Chapter.

S O Eliphas the Themanae gaue answere, and sayde: Maye a man be copared vnto God in wyszdome, though he seme to him self, for to be like him? What pleasure hath God in ye thou art righteous? Or what doth it profite him, thy waies are perfecte? Is he afraied to reprove the, to steppe forth with the in to judgment? Cemeth not this for thy grete wickednesse, for thine vngracious dedes which are innumerable? Thou hast taketh the pledge from thy brethren for naught, robbe the naked of their clothinge: 'To soch as were weery, hast thou gene no water to drinke, thou hast withdraue bred fro the hungrie: Shulde soch one the as vseth violente, wringe oppression (doinge all thinges of parcialyte, haunge respecte of persones) dwell in the lode? That I might knowe, what answere he wolde gene me: that I might vnderstone, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wil he plaeate agaynst me with his grete power & strength, or wyll he leane him selfe utterly vpon me? Noo, let him not do so with me. But let hym gene me like power to go to lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before, I fynde him not: yf I come behynde, I ca get no knowleage of hym: Yf I go on the right syde to pondre his workes, I can not atteyne vnto them: Agayne, ye fy go on the right syde, he hydeth himself, yf I can not se him. But as for my wae, he knoweth it: he trieth me as y golde in y fyre.

Neertheles my fete kepe his path, his hye strete haue I holden, and not gone out of it. I haue not forsaken the cōmanndemēt of his lippes, but loke what he charged me with his mouth, that haue I shutt vp in my herte. It is he himselfe alone, who will turne him back? He doth as him listeth, and bryngeth to passe what he wil. He rewardeth me in to my bosome, with many other things mo doth he, as he maye by his power. This is y cause, that I shrenke at his presence, so that when I considire him, I am afrayed of hym. For in so muche as he is God, he maketh my herte soft; and seynge that he is Allmightie, he puttheth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darknesse, the cloude hath so covered my face.

The riiij. Chapter.

CONSIDERINGE then that there is no tymede hyd from the Allmightie, how happeneth it, that they which knowe him, wil not regarde his dayes? For some me there be, that remoue other mee londe marke: that robbe them of their catell, and kepe the same for their owne: that dryewe awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that takē wyddowes oxe for a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the waye, oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Beholde, the wilde assēs in y deserte go by tymes (as their maner is) to spoyle: Yee the very wilCREASE ministrēth foode for their children. They reape the cornē feldē that is not their owne: and gather the grapes out of his vynyardē, whom they haue oppresse by violence. They are the cause y so many men are naked and bare, hanynghe no clothes.
to couer them and kepe them from colde:
So that when the showers in the mountaynes hau rayned vpon them, they be all wet, they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amone the rocks.
They spoyle the suckinge fatherlesse children, and put the poore in preson: In so much that they let them go naked without clothinge, and yet the hungrie beare the sheeues. The poore areayne to laboure in their oyle myles, yee and to treade in their wyne presses, and yet to suffre thyrst. *The whole cite crieth vnto the LORDE with sighinge, the soules of the slayne make their complainyte: But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they (not with stódinge) are rebellious and disobedient enemies: which seke not his light and waye, ner turne agayne in to his path.
*Tymely in the morninge do they arysse, to murthur the symple and poore, in the night they go a stealing.
The eye of the vnGodly is like the adouer-ter, that wayeth for the darknesse, and sayeth thus in him self: Tush, there shal no mâ se me, sô he dysgyseth his face. In the night season they search the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wil not knowe
y light. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of death commeth vpô them, and they goe in horrible darknesse.
The vnGodly is very swyft: O ô his porciô also vpô earth were swyfter then y runnynge water, which suffreth not y shipmâ to beholde
the fayre pleasaût vniardes. O
y they (for the wickednesse which they haue done) were drawn to the hell, sooner thê snowe melteh at the heate. O
y all copasion vpon thô were forgotô:
y their daintyes were womes:
that they were clene put out of remembrance,
ô vterly bewe downe like an vnfrutefull tre.
For they manteyne the baren, och maketh them
ô they can not beare, ô vnto wyllydowes they do no good. They plucke downe the mightie with their power,
ô when they them selues are gotten vpô, they are never without feare, as longe as they lye. And though they might be safe, yet they wil not receaue it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a litle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerette, ô take out of the waye: yee
ô vterly plute of as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wil the reproue me as a lvar, y saye
y my wordes are nothinge worth?

Then answered Baldad the Subite, ô A sayde: Power
ô feare is with hym aboue, that maketh peace (sittinge) in his hynessse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose light arysteth ouer all.
ô But how maye
a man copared vnto God, be iustified?
ô Or,
how can he be clene, that is borne of a woman?
Beholde, the Moone shyneth no thinge in comparison to hym,
ô the starres are vuelyne in his sight. How much more thê, mâ, that is but corrupcion:
and the sonne of man, which is but a worme?

OB answered, and sayde: O how helpest ô thou the weake? what comforte geuest thou vnto hym that hath no streth?
ô Where is ô cotuck
ô thou shuldest geue hym, which hath no wyszdome?
ô Wilt thou so shewe thine excellent righteouynes?
ô Before whom hast thou spoken those wordes?
ô Who made the breth to come out of thy mouth?
ô The giayntes
ô worthies
ô are slayne, ô ly e vnder
ô worlde with their ô copampions: yee ô all they which dwell beneth in the hell are not hyd ô fro him,
ô the very destruccion it self câ not be kepte out of his sight. He stretcheth out
ô north ouer the emptie, ô hâgeth
ô earth
vpo nothinge. He byndeth ô water in his cloudes, that they fall not downe together.
He
holdeth back his stole, that it câ not be sene, and spreadeth his cloudes before it.
Ô He hath copased the waters with certayne boundes, vntill the daye ô night come to an ende. The very piler of ô heauë ô treble
ô quake at his reprofe.
Ô He stilleth the see with his power, ô thorow his wyszdome hath he set forth
ô worlde. With his sprete hath he garnished the heauës, ô with his hande hath he wounded the rebellious serpeô.
This is now a shorte summe of his doynges. But who is able sufficiently to rehearse his workes?
ô Who can perceiver and vnderstande ô thondre of his power?

OB also proceeded and wete forth in his communicacion, sayêge: As truly as God
The boke of Job.
